LAURIER HAS CHARACTER SKETCH

Distinctive Personality in Parliament Since 1891.

A CHARACTER SKETCH

Brilliant Speaker, Statesman and Always a Kindly Gentleman.

BY FRED LANDON.

Who for some years past as a correspondent in the Press Gallery at Ottawa, and came into close contact with Sir Wilfrid as statesman and parliamentary personality.

To those who at any time were thrown into personal contact with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the ways remain the feeling that to know him was to have known a man whose place in our country's history would be large. During ten years of newspaper experience, it was my own privilege to hear him speak and to watch his course on the platform and in the House of Commons during two of those sessions of the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa which were possible to watch every play of expression to follow his every movement, and I think that for all of us his was a subject of never-fading interest.

There will be few to question the statement that from 1891 on he was the most distinctive personality in Parliament. His public service in the Commons gave him a unique prestige, for he was the one link in the chain of the Ottawa wave back to 1874. He was the one link in the chain of the Ottawa wave back to 1874. He was the one link in the chain of the Ottawa wave back to 1874.

Since Sir John died there has never been any rival for Sir Wilfrid in the interest of visitors. Strangers coming into the gallery for the first time always looked for Laurier, and I think that he knew it and rather enjoyed the House just a moment before opening his mouth to speak down the corridors of Parliament on the way to his office to the chamber it was frequently thought that Sir Wilfrid would pass along straight as a guard, serene, dignified and quite unmoved.

In the chamber he was much given to "visiting" his seat in the front row, immediately opposite his parliamentary opponent, Sir Robert Borden. He would sit there and his more humble supporters and spend his hours in earnest conversation with those who knew him and who spoke as none but Sir John Macdonald ever knew a following. Laurier had un-derneath his serene exterior a great rival, there were little man-ners and tricks of speech and gesture which were always ready to be declared he got only from Sir John.

Listening to him in a parliamentary debate session after session I think it is correct to say that he was not at his best as an orator in highly con-troversial discussion. He was not al-ways a great speaker, but he was some-times at fault, many theories of George Foster or Hon. Arthur Meighen could be broken down by his argu-ments and break down his conclusions. But in non-controversial utterance he was superb. It was his custom to "have" Tupper when the veteran Con-servative leader died, and it was a neatly quoted remark of Sir John Macdonald had been free to contribute that was ever paid to the first premier. On other occasions, when he needed to be light, raptier-like equal Laurier. Probably he had learned much of this from the late Sir John.

Newspapermen at the capital came into contact with him in what might be called the "business" part of his occa-sionally, for he would never give inter-views on any subject whatever. Probably the only time he gave an interview was that one in 1896 to Charles Macell, who af-terwards entered Parliament and became speaker of the Ontario Legislative As-sembly. He would have the whole news-paper fraternity in his office for a little while, but he would not give an inter-views on any subject whatever. Probably the only time he gave an interview was that one in 1896 to Charles Macell, who af-terwards entered Parliament and became speaker of the Ontario Legislative As-sembly. He would have the whole news-paper fraternity in his office for a little while, but he would not give an inter-views on any subject whatever.

The "Next Best Gift." Sir Wilfrid smiled and said, referring to the prospective appointee: "Except you, my dear friend, I think you are the best gift in Canada, and I will consider that your request is given every word of it." The appointment was made a few days later, and in line with the newspaperman's request, the Alex-ander Johnston to whom it referred was "the best gift."

He did love to use that word "Gift," especially in rural readings, where he knew its effect on old-time voters. I think he knew it, and he used it in al-ways characterizing his political op-ponents as "Tories," rather than as "Conservatives" or "Liberal-Conserva-tives." He knew that in the minds of some of his hearers the use of the word "Tory" would bring to mind a class privilege and opposition to democ-ratic ideas and movements. It was surprising, too, that he would use that word in his own utterances to his audience. It might be the same speech he had given elsewhere the day before, but I think that his au-dience would differ, and little touches were added here and there that gave individuality to his political re-sponsive chords in his hearers. When speaking of the country in an election campaign, he was always simple, the historical quotations and the more subtle quotations were reserved for Parliament.

A Touch of Character. The summer after the election of 1911, when he had suffered, among other places, at Woodstock. He had a story there of an Irish friend of a con-ductor on the Montreal-Quebec train, for whom he brought a ticket from Ireland in 1877. He had the con-ductor friend's name put on it, and when they next met presented him with the ticket.

"He was precise in his thanks," said Sir Wilfrid, "and he wound up by say-ing, 'May heaven be your bed, but may you be kept long out of it.'"

"Now, I hope that some day heaven may be my bed," added the Liberal chief, "but I don't think I'm ripe for it yet. I hope heaven won't be my bed until I have one more tussle at least with the Tories."

There were two Tory rural members in the House of Commons for whom Sir Wilfrid always had tender spots in his heart. One of these was the late Mr. Peter Elson, member for East Middlesex. The Liberal leader would fre-quently cross over the floor of the House for a chat. The other I recall was Mr. W. H. Ross, member for North Essex, who since passed away.

Mr. Wilcox had a rollicking gait in his parliamentary debating that would at times convulse the whole House, and those who were there in those days will long recall the expression which he would point a finger at the Liberal leader, re-fer to him always as "honorable friend," the leader of the Liberal "Oppo-sition," and endeavor to convince Sir Wilfrid that he was a hopeless political humorist. If a year or so of parliamen-tary humor were ever compiled, Oliver Wilcox's addresses would be a fine speci-men to be left out. Sometimes, after one of these encounters, he would be seen outside in the corridor and walk away arm-in-arm.

Reminiscence of 1902. During the election campaign of 1902 Sir Wilfrid spoke at half a dozen places in Western Ontario, his opening being at Tilbury, where an out-door audience estimated at as high as 15,000 heard him. Coming back London that night he invited the news-papers to enjoy the comfort of his private car on Sunday afternoon, in-dividually all the way. He would spend a few minutes with one man, then with another, and so on, until he had seen all. Afterward I jotted down a few notes of the conversation I had to the events of 1877, and I remember that Sir Wilfrid always had a "top" in his pocket, which he would use to treat the events of 1877, and I remember that Sir Wilfrid always had a "top" in his pocket, which he would use to treat the events of 1877.

His Command of English. Speaking of Sir Wilfrid's own reading recalls his manner of reading over during the election campaign of 1902. There were hours when he had to re-mind his mind of the English language, emergency hours that were tedious and have been tedious, but for his little custom of sending in his mem-oirs to the printer, and the English dic-tionary. The House used to smile when the page would come in with the name of the author, and Sir Wilfrid would look over it at a certain page, and then begin to run down the columns carefully and slowly, adding to his store of English words.

JUNK LICENSES ARE NOT COMING DOWN DESPITE LOCAL JUNKMEN'S KICK

Two "junks" in the persons of Joseph Drucker and Harry Bull, appeared in police court this morning charged with not taking out junk licenses.

"This year we want them cheaper," stated Mr. Drucker to the court. "It costs $12 for the city and $20 in the county now."

"They won't make it cheaper," in-terposed the magistrate. "It's like water. They're not coming down."

The magistrate's tones were appreciative when the junk men prom-ised to take out the licenses next year. It was hard to convince William West-er, who was charged with not taking out a license, that he had to do so. He had tried to get away on a bicycle, and then tried to get away on a bicycle, and then tried to get away on a bicycle.

Morris Whyte declared that he had sold $10 worth of junk on one day, and therefore wasn't going 44 m. an hour on the Wortley road as re-ported by Constable Ed. Proctor's stop-watch.

"They remarked how carefully I drove," said Mr. Whyte. "I've had my license for some time, and I know my business. I'm not a beginner."

"You know the road, I'll leave it to you," declared Whyte. However, Mr. Whyte was "left" for the court fine of $5. Wilson also paid $5 each for speeding.

HIS LIFE OF SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S PUBLIC CAREER IS A REVEALING STORY OF HIS PUBLIC AFFAIRS IN CANADA SINCE COLLEGE

Keynote of His Life Found in Valedictory Address at McGill --Always Canadian, Favored British Preference--A Firm Exponent of Provincial Autonomy at Many Critical Periods.

Eight Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the first Canadian prime minister, was born on the 20th of October, 1855, in the village of St. Pierre, Quebec, Canada. He was the son of a French-Canadian farmer and a Scotch-Canadian mother. His father, a land surveyor, was a man of high character and a firm exponent of provincial autonomy. His mother, a Scotch-Canadian, was a woman of high character and a firm exponent of provincial autonomy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was educated at the University of McGill, where he was a member of the law faculty. He was a member of the law faculty at McGill University, where he was a member of the law faculty. He was a member of the law faculty at McGill University, where he was a member of the law faculty.

Sir Wilfrid, as the Parliamentarian of His Earlier Years

As a member of the Mackenzie Ministry, 1878. As thirty, as a lawyer and journalist. As leader of the Liberal Party, 1891.

His speech received the high approval of both Sir John A. Macdonald, leader of the Opposition, and Premier Mackenzie, who welcomed him as an addition to the debating strength of the Canadian House of Parliament.

Debate on Louis Riel Shows Belief in British Fair Play

There followed now one of the main incidents in Laurier's early career, that associated with the first rebellion of Louis Riel and the settlers in the Hudson's Bay Company territory in the Northwest. Laurier was a member of the law faculty at McGill University, where he was a member of the law faculty. He was a member of the law faculty at McGill University, where he was a member of the law faculty.

Deprived of Youth's Gaiety By a Delicate Constitution

Laurier is described at this period as a young man of delicate constitution, who was deprived of youth's gaiety by a delicate constitution. He was a member of the law faculty at McGill University, where he was a member of the law faculty.

Leadership Forced Upon Him by His Admiring Colleagues

It was on the resignation of Mr. Blake in 1887 that Wilfrid Laurier was chosen as the leader of the party in the House. He refused to accept place over Sir Richard Cartwright, but was prevailed upon to lead the Opposition provisionally until the end of that session. He conducted the Liberal side with such success and dignity, however, that the party leaders would not hear of his refusal to accept the recognized leadership. Among those most insistent was Sir Richard Cartwright himself, who nominated him as leader at the Liberal caucus June 7, 1887, and the nomination was unanimously ratified.

Canadian constitution and was accorded a sympathetic hearing. The Dominion Government did not interfere with Quebec's action.

Laurier Adapts Reciprocity

In 1891 Laurier moved an amendment to supply extending the offer of unrestricted reciprocity in trade to the United States. This move was significant, disclosing as it did a policy which was to be consistently adhered to throughout the Liberal leader's long career. Not always was there any clerical sentiment distinguishable in the United States, and there arose a time when Sir Wilfrid, embittered by the loss of the Liberal leadership, turned to a more liberal policy in trade with Canada, and in 1891 he made a trip to Washington.

Reciprocity with the United States

Reciprocity with the United States dropped from sight in the Liberal platform for some years, but it became Laurier had lost faith in the Liberal principles that had animated him all his life, but because there cannot be reciprocity on one side alone. Both Sir Wilfrid and Sir Richard Cartwright were active exponents of the reciprocity principle. It was this issue which carried again in 1911 to defeat Sir Wilfrid and the Liberal party after fifteen years of the most progressive administration the Dominion had enjoyed since Confederation.

"N. P." Election of 1891

In 1891, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was elected to the House of Commons on the question of Reciprocity and Continentalism against the protectionist "National" party. He was elected to the House of Commons on the question of Reciprocity and Continentalism against the protectionist "National" party.

The Second Riel Rebellion

The second Riel rebellion formed another noteworthy chapter in Laurier's career. On March 23, 1885, he was elected president of the "Provisional Government" of the Northwest, a position which he held until the arrival of the British troops. He was elected president of the "Provisional Government" of the Northwest, a position which he held until the arrival of the British troops.

Country's Prosperity Follows Accession to Premiership

In 1896 the South African war broke out. Here, again, Sir Wilfrid's opponents as to Liberal premier's attitude on the subject of the war were divided. All his life he had been a student of the English Constitution and the growth of the democratic system of self-government. Admitting that the Canadian people were intensely loyal to Great Britain and as one with her on all questions of foreign policy, it would nevertheless be thought to engage the attention of the people of Canada in an Imperial war in which the world was so generally engaged. The question of the declaration of war or control over the Dominion of Canada is provided that the militia of Canada is organized by the Dominion of Canada. Sir Wilfrid, in the House of Commons, pointed out that the militia of Canada is organized by the Dominion of Canada.

LONDONERS PAY TRIBUTE TO SACRIFICE SIR WILFRID MADE FOR BETTERMENT OF CANADA

Old Friends and Leading Citizens Express Deep Regret Over His Death—Are Agreed That His Passing Is Most Inopportune For the Dominion.

"All the ability he possessed he laid as a sacrifice for the betterment of Canadian ideals," declared Mayor Somerville, speaking of the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The eulogy of London's chief magistrate is the keynote of many other Londoners' tributes. Likewise they share the view that the Dominion has suffered a severe blow in his passing, as F. G. Mitchell says: "I am sure the country at large will feel the heavy loss at this very important time."

Postmaster Peter Macdonald, an old associate of the late leader in the House, says Sir Wilfrid was a pure, upright, conscientious, noble man, while Dr. C. L. Campbell says his life record will stand for ages as a lesson for all Canadians. Col. Hobbs strikes a bright note when he gives what he believes would be Sir Wilfrid's wish "to carry the cross of Liberalism in the spirit which he carried it, willing to meet defeat and certain of the ultimate victory of true Liberalism."

J. M. McEvoy eloquently tells of Sir Wilfrid's life battle to weld together all Canadians that they might better serve their country and empire. As W. N. Manning says, "He lived long enough to demonstrate to the Canadian people that he had high ideals, endeavored personally to live up to them, and at the same time lead the people with whom he came in contact to these same ideals."

Londoners' tributes follow:

HISTORY WILL RECORD HIS GREAT SERVICES.

GEORGE S. GIBBONS, PRESIDENT WESTERN ONTARIO LIBERAL ASSOCIATION.—The death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the passing of a very brave and gallant gentleman. In victory he was ever modest; in defeat he was ever unbroken, and his courage serene. History will record his great services to the nation, but today his followers can only think of the loss of the leader whom they loved.

DOMINION HAS LOST ITS MOST DISTINGUISHED MAN.

ED. E. REID, LONDON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.—All true friends and loyal supporters of Sir Wilfrid will feel that the public life of Canada has lost in his death its most distinguished figure. Through all the vicissitudes of a long political life his purpose to form a united Canada has stood fast to the day of victory and in the day of defeat, and in the days to come he will undoubtedly be proclaimed Canada's greatest statesman—widest in vision, clearest in insight and widest in sympathy to the principles of a free press.

His service to his country is written large in his record of statesmanlike promotion and his private life of spotless purity will ever serve as an inspiration to the best citizens of the country to take up their share of the burdens of public life. Amid all the vicissitudes of a long political life his purpose to form a united Canada has stood fast to the day of victory and in the day of defeat, and in the days to come he will undoubtedly be proclaimed Canada's greatest statesman—widest in vision, clearest in insight and widest in sympathy to the principles of a free press.

SPLendid LEADER, SAYS ONE OF OLD FOLLOWERS.

DR. PETER MACDONALD, EX-M.P., NOW POSTMASTER OF LONDON.—I had known Sir Wilfrid Laurier since 1880. He was a man of great ability, a great leader in the House of Commons 21 sessions as one of the followers of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, and eight supporting the Government. There were 21 sessions in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier was a pure, upright, conscientious, noble man. He was a man of great ability, a great leader in the House of Commons 21 sessions as one of the followers of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, and eight supporting the Government. There were 21 sessions in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier was a pure, upright, conscientious, noble man.

CANADA'S GREAT UNIFIER, ONE PASTOR'S TRIBUTE.

REV. DR. R. G. PEEVER.—I look upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the greatest statesman, admired by both his followers and those who differed from him in politics. He did not die the way one else to bring about the unification of Canada in sentiment and feeling. He was a very worthy leader and representative of the great French-Canadian element of his party his place will be very difficult to fill.

PARTY AND NATION HAVE SUFFERED A GREAT LOSS.

GEORGE M. REID, lifelong friend of Sir Wilfrid.—The sudden taking out of Canada's greatest statesman is a great shock to all those who had any personal acquaintance with him. I feel that one more of my best friends has gone to the Great Beyond, since 1880 I have been more or less in personal touch with Sir Wilfrid, and during all that time I have had nothing but the kindest and most pleasant recollections of our intercourse. He was always most sympathetic and kind to every subject, and should be remembered to you would do me great interest and unwavering adherence to all that he felt was for the benefit of the country was a question. His loss will not only be felt by the party, but the country as a whole. Friends and a great statesman.

ALWAYS MET LONDONERS IN GRACIOUS MANNER.

EX-MAYOR SAMUEL STEVENS.—I have the most sincere regret that I have heard of the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Having been associated with him for the past 25 years, especially when he was the guest of our friend the Hon. C. S. Hyman, I have become deeply attached to him. It was my great fortune when Mayor

HIGH IDEALS SHOULD BE INSPIRING TO CANADA.

LIEUT.-COL. A. A. CAMPBELL.—A statesman, not a politician. A great Canadian, who ever had an abiding faith in Canada and her people, and whose high ideals of a sovereign Canadian democracy must ever remain an inspiration to the people of Canada he loved so well.

MAJOR CRONYN, M.P., PAYS TRIBUTE TO SIR WILFRID.

HUME CRONYN, M.P. FOR LONDON.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will stand out as one of the noted figures in Canadian political history. His charm of manner and speech won the admiration of all who knew him, whether in the House of Commons or abroad. Like the late Sir John A. Macdonald, he won from his followers an affectionate regard, in itself a great tribute to his character and worth. He led in many bitter contests he refrained from personal attacks, and he was prepared to grant to his opponents the same freedom of opinion and expression which he himself desired for himself.

WILL ALWAYS LIVE IN THE HEARTS OF COUNTRYMEN.

T. H. PURDOM, K.C.—If "to love you is not to die," Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not die for many and many a year. As a man and as a leader of the Liberal party he "wore the white flower," his profession in the Liberal leadership, the Hon. Alexander Macdonald and the Hon. Edward Blake, each did the same. Sir Wilfrid was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

SIR WILFRID'S DEATH IS LOSS TO NATION.

ANDREW ROBSON, PRESIDENT LONDON LIBERAL CLUB.—As president of the Liberal Club of London and in my personal capacity, I regret the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It was always a pleasure to follow him in the House of Commons. He was always conscious of his being a leader for the betterment of the country. In 1911, was one of many striking incidents in his career. On this question, notwithstanding many of his followers were of the opinion that the Liberal party was the policy in the best interests of Canada, and what he went down to show that he was not a politician, but a patriot and an ardent democrat.

A TRUE PATRIOT, AN ARDENT DEMOCRAT.

REV. D. C. MACGREGOR.—In the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier Canada loses one of her most gifted sons. No one could deny that Sir Wilfrid was without feeling the charm of his personality. He had remarkable qualities of a great leader, whose life will be a study for the devotion and loyalty of his followers. In public life his character was marked by his high sense of duty, his patriotism and an ardent democrat. He truly interpreted the Canadian spirit and the spirit of the British Empire. Under his leadership Canada attained a new status within the Empire. The nation will honor his memory as a true Canadian.

LIFE'S AIM WAS HARMONY IN CANADA.

W. N. MANNING.—The passing of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will surely be regretted by all who loved him. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

NEAREST TO BEING THE NATION'S IDEAL LEADER.

W. T. STRONG.—I wish to pay a tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

PERSONALITY HAD STRONG AND INSPIRING EFFECT.

U. A. BUCHNER.—In the person of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canada had one of the most advanced and progressive statesmen produced by the nineteenth century. His work at the colonial conference in London, his work at the conference in London, his work at the conference in London, his work at the conference in London.

WAS GREATEST LIVING CANADIAN.

LIEUT.-COL. T. S. HOBBS, EX-M.P.—Every year of my acquaintance with Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been a year of admiration for him, and when he was last in the city I saw him in the greatest Canadian. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

HIS RECORD IS LESSON FOR ALL.

DR. CL. T. CAMPBELL.—The death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a national loss. A great statesman in the opinion of all Canadians—the greatest since the opinion of many—there is now a blank in our public life which cannot be filled. He will stand for ages as a lesson for all Canadians. His character will be a study for all Canadians. His character will be a study for all Canadians. His character will be a study for all Canadians.

A RECONCILER OF RACES, SAYS BISHOP OF HURON.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP DAVID WILLIAMS.—With the passing of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the last conspicuous link with the Father of Confederation has vanished from our public life. As a young man he was old enough to know the pre-Confederation perils of British North America, and had vision enough to see that the one thing which would save the country was a united Dominion with the French and English, and as he himself so often said, he had devoted his life to the furtherance of these ends.

WILL BE MISSED FROM COUNCILS OF CANADIANS.

F. E. LEONARD.—I exceedingly regret the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

Bourassa and Reciprocity Place Him in Opposition

In 1911 President Taft, foreseeing the demand for a lower tariff in the United States as a result of the increasing cost of commodities, extended to Canada an offer of unreserved reciprocity in raw materials, combined with a small reduction in certain lines of manufactured goods, including farm machinery. This was unexpected and was completely by surprise. At first the offer seemed to be a boon to the Canadian people. Gradually opposition developed, however, until suddenly it became a matter of national importance. The Laurier policy was to build a railway to the west. Naturally a man of delicate physique Sir Wilfrid Laurier was able to carry on a very early date in his public career that he would have to cultivate his own energy and stamina when often during the reciprocity debate he would go on for hours without a moment's rest. After 20 minutes or so he would go back to the chamber for a refreshment. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man of high character and high ability.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Ablest of Canada's Sons, Leaves Country Better For Having Lived

The life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who in these many long years had come to be the fixed star of Canadian Liberalism, passed out with the suddenness of a comet's flash. And with all his problems solved by the sudden transition from an earthly course to a radiant pathway in some other world, the rapid climax of his career seems to give emphasis to the fact that a great light has passed from the firmament, leaving the fields of his loved Canada the darker for his going, yet casting into the skies a glow that makes those skies brighter than before he came.

Canada is a better country because Sir Wilfrid Laurier lived and served his people with all the nobility of his nature and all the power of his intellect. Canada will be a better country because Laurier had a soul for service, a character above reproach and a love for humanity. Britain is a greater empire because Laurier lived, and as the British Empire is greater, so is the world a little closer to the realization of happiness and prosperity. He carried resolution, based on principle and conviction, to the point of sacrificing all that might have tempted a selfish man. He stood above them all, above deceit, above expedient, a little child of politics, perhaps, in the methods of his power-first-principle-after enemies who destroyed his policies, but never touched the man or his ethical attitude. If he had any single characteristic of unfitness for public life, it lay in his extreme contempt for meeting the methods of his opponents with vehement counter-attack or spurious appeals to prejudices.

Many people have read and learned by rote the "inside" history of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's life, but beyond these are a great host of people who knew the man only as he appeared in the parliamentary arena. Those who studied his earlier struggles knew how much he suffered at the hands of his own coreligionists and compatriots, rather than swerve from the clear course marked out on the chart. He held to that course, and did not compromise up to the time of his last fight. He was made the subject of as bitter attack in his native province as in the English-speaking provinces, but he faced the rocks of political extinction and held the helm in a grip of steel rather than seek the snug harbors that equivocation offered.

Down through his history is a silver thread of consistency. One may grasp its end in a little village of Quebec where the young advocate aspired to journalism and "ran foul" of a certain wing of his own church. He fought on to the death of the little party. Again the shining strand runs into the hot young life of "the bleu" and "the rouge" when Anticlericalism and Ultramontanism fought a battle. Laurier sought to drive through the middle way of moderation, with his banner set against the domination of church in politics, yet proclaiming that the church must not be rooted up, but given the same rights as other citizenship, and no more. Laurier met defeat, then won and carried his banner along.

This magic thread brought him into federal politics, and quickly found him a place in the seats of the mighty. More than forty years ago he won his spurs, flashing not as a wild-eyed enthusiast across the sky, but as the debater with the brilliant emotions never overmastering the logical sense. He found no royal road to leadership, however, for he met the buffets of strenuous fighting in opposition long before he attained prominence and power. Yet his destiny rode high, and when he became premier of Canada he again gave a demonstration of unswerving Canadianism that endeared him to all fair-minded fellow countrymen who rallied to the cause of Manitoba.

Who was this new young French-Canadian premier who defied his own race to do justice to an English-speaking province? Was it a play to the gallery? It proved to be statesmanship in the highest sense of that much-misappropriated word. He proclaimed his love for fair play in an action that has few parallels in Canadian history.

He had chosen a pathway that was clearly marked. To him there was only right and wrong in political life. The two could not be mixed in the nature of this man. A target of the venomous attacks that always centred on race and religion, he dauntlessly marched his way. He was a man, he was a Canadian, he proclaimed himself a man adherent of British principles and he proved it to the hilt on many a vital issue, though he had to fight his way through barriers that would have been insurmountable to most men. He became more than a Canadian in the parochial sense; he would have considered himself less a Canadian had he held his Canadianism a thing to be merged into a narrower and more law-bound identity. He stood rigidly by the British motherland in the South African war; he adopted British preference. But as he opposed those of his mother church when he believed them in the wrong, so he opposed those of his motherland when they sought to appropriate, to make over, the invisible chains that held so loosely, yet so firmly the far-off overseas dominions.

He stood firm for a preference to the goods of Britain, but when it was proposed at a conference that he should become a party for centralization which gave the British-marked minority of representation a portion of the common table in the proclaimed and won with the declaration expressed by Kipling in these living lines:

"Daughter am I in my mother's house,
But mistress in my own."
While Laurier stood for the old system which had held the British colonies since the American revolution, a new figure of colonial statesmanship stood by. It was Louis Botha, recently come to England from a conquered race. British principles and methods of government as expressed in Laurier won Botha and South Africa as a link in the chain of nations binding an empire.

And when Canadian independence was invited to express itself on the naval question Sir Wilfrid produced a policy which brought forth the "unanimous resolution" of 1907. That was the principle he stood by in Canadian public life, and in the broader field of empire public life. Laurier interpreted the fine sentiment of interdependence rather than a system of statutory codes and treaties. He was not the man to compromise, yet he believed in the spirit of the gift. He believed we owed much to the motherland; he sought the expression of this in building a stronger Canada for the maintenance of British traditions. The spirit of the British race counted more than the letter of the lawmakers.

Laurier threw wide the doors of this country to the British people and wanted them to share our heritage. He saw Canada with the vision of a dreamer whose dreams may be poetic, but not beyond achievement. He saw that railways must be flung across the land, and one day we shall see his name praised for this foresight.

Laurier served Canada in a spirit of good will and mutual helpfulness, building to benefit the large mass of Canadian people, when he met his first defeat after fifteen years of leadership. He faced the issue, and in the small games of politics he "drew poor cards." Bunglers or tricksters on both sides the border mixed or fixed the cards. And Laurier was defeated according to figures. His principle could not be fouled, however, and today it stands in large degree upon the statute books of Canada.

When it comes to judging Laurier's attitude on the war, there is the point where he comes close to clashing with the logic he had always previously shown. But he does not clash. Men saw another duty than he saw on the question of enforced service. They voted against him. Other men fled to the loaves and fishes. Laurier had given his pledge against conscription. His chief opponent had also done so, and before announcing a reversal of policy this chief opponent did not consult Laurier. He announced the change of heart first and invited Laurier to assist him afterward. Sir Wilfrid held fast to that silver thread of consistency. He believed that the people of Canada would give the required number of troops by one method. The Government held out the only other alternative as a bitter pill, refused a referendum, but at the same time made the very issue of the contest a referendum. The Government prepared its machinery. Laurier stood almost a lone figure. He never asked any man to stand with him who saw his duty lying in another direction. But he plunged into the contest on a principle, and although deserted by almost all his old leaders and by his newspaper press, he secured a large proportion of the vote, while everyone knows by what means his opponents secured the vast share of the balance.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier regarded the processes of the last election as wicked. He was ashamed of his opponents, rather than glad because they resorted to shameful methods. Yet he would not have it said that he desired to live only to expose them. His was a service of positive honesty, and he would have based his future, had he lived, in what lay before, rather than in what lay behind. He was the living embodiment of Cavour's statement: "The rule in politics is to be as moderate in language as you are resolute in act." That was Laurier. He stood firm. He wished to be just to all men. He was a staunch Britisher. He was a noble man. He was a devoted husband and one cannot close without a feeling of overwhelming sympathy for the companion who has been with him in all his days of ringing victory and dark defeat. Yet he would take leave of her and of his countrymen with good cheer, with a persistiveness of kindly wit, with a wave of the hand, and a heartfelt of good-will toward all those who opposed him and to his tried and true followers. May Sir Wilfrid rest in peace!

Hindenburg a Danger Point Which Allies Must Consider

If the present German Government is not intriguing for a military "comeback," it should promptly suppress von Hindenburg; if it is planning a defiance of the Allies, Foch will presently have the task of suppressing the German chief of staff. When the German imperial regnes succumbed to their present refuge, Ludendorff, Mackensen and the other war chiefs promptly disappeared. Hindenburg, skillfully assuming the role of Germany's saviour from the forces of monarchy, remained on the job. His belligerence towards the Allies, however, has been as active within the limits of the armistice agreement since the cessation of fighting as before. He has openly hampered the carrying out of the conditions of the pact, and from the confusion of the Hun's downfall has developed a powerful and well-disciplined fighting force of a million and a half men. Now he is out with an appeal to all Germans to back him up in an attempt to save the Hohenzollerns from punishment and restore them to German citizenship. "Citizenship" in this case, of course, can mean nothing less than placing the ex-kaiser back at Potsdam. Hindenburg is working in close association with Prince Henry of Prussia, who desires a return of the old regime with all its glory and power.

Where does the German Republican Government figure in the situation? President Ebert has been issuing threats to the Allies that would seem to identify him with the Hindenburg moves. The dangerous feature is that the old marshal, heading the only organized force in Germany, may be cracking that whip over the Ebert Government's head. At the present time Hindenburg seems to be the danger point from the Allied point of view. His sticking while everybody else ran has given him a new lease of the popularity he lost in defeat, and he appears to be utilizing it to good effect for the Hohenzollerns. Fortunately, the alert, sagacious Foch is well over the Rhine and strongly established. Should it be necessary he can be depended upon to administer a rebuke that will end mischief-making by members of the old Potsdam gang.

DEATH!

By Father Ryan.
Out of the shadows of sadness,
Into the sunshine of gladness,
Into the light of the bliss,
Out of a land very dreary,
Out of a world very weary,
Into the rapture of rest.
Out of today's sin and sorrow,
Into a blissful tomorrow,
Into a day without gloom,
Out of a land filled with sighing,
Land of the dead and the dying,
Into a land without tomb.
Out of a life of communion,
Tempest swept off as the ocean,
Dark with the wrecks drifting o'er:
Into a land calm and quiet,
Never a storm cometh nigh it,
Never a wreck on its shore.
Out of a land in whose bowers
Perish and fade all the flowers:
Out of the land of decay,
Into the Eden whereof the first
Of flowerets, and sweetest and rarest,
Never shall wither away.
Out of the world of the waiting,
Thro' the world that anguish and ailing:
Out of the world of the sad,
Into the world that rejoices—
World of bright visions and voices—
Into the world of the glad.
Out of a life ever mournful,
Out of a land very mournful,
Where in bleak exile we roam,
Into a joy-land above us,
Where there's a Father to love us—
Into our home—"Sweet Home."

BIG SENSATION IN KINGSTON.
[Brookville Recorder and Times.]
Great excitement in Kingston—a burglar found $39 in a merchant's till.

WE PASS.
[Brookville Recorder.]
Has any person yet heard of an appointment under the Ontario civil service act?

ALMOST SPEECHLESS.
[Regina Post.]
Money talks, but it is pretty hoarse at present from arguing with the butcher and grocer.

YOU MAY HAVE OUR SHARE.
[Kingston Standard.]
The question of continuing the manufacture of explosives is to be considered by the Dominion Parliament. For our part, we believe that it should be continued permanently.

CAN'T BE DONE.
[Toronto Star.]
Houses cannot be built at cheap and reasonable prices on that line with expensive materials. The causes that make houses scarce have to be removed or nullified.

SNOBBY SPOOKVILLE.
[Montreal Free Press.]
Councillor Peter Wright tells the people of Great Britain that caste prejudice in Canada is as strong as in India, and that he was only in Canada about a month, and most of that time in Peterboro, it took him a long time to find it out, but he did, as everybody else does that stops too long in Spookville.

THE SCHOOL'S FIRST AIM.
[Montreal Free Press.]
It must be the aim of the school to instill into the minds of the young the feelings of reverence for and loyalty to the law, and to insist upon the practice of honesty, industry and all other virtues, to the end that the manhood of the next generation may be even more worthy than that of the present. The education of those on board from London district is as follows: Officers 3, cadets 3, other ranks 192.

SOME NICE SARCASTIC.
[Thorburn Review-Herald.]
Some person on a recent date, either thoughtlessly or with intent, left open the door of the town hall for nearly five minutes. There are reasons why this should not be repeated. There is a great risk of fresh air getting in, and further, a possibility and probability of the air within, sacred through years of confinement, escaping, while the public may be damaged, it is not necessary to say more; a word to the wise is sufficient.

MUST CURB THE HUN.
[New York Evening Sun.]
In the immediate critical condition, the urgent thing seems to be to curb the growing insolence of the Hun, to convince her that she is defeated, that she is a convicted criminal, and that punishment is inevitable and that the sword and control to extend until she shows signs of consciousness of her guilt and contrition. If real peace, immediate or future, is to be secured, it must be by convincing Germany that she is not to be allowed to pay any more than did actual bloodguilt. This result will never be secured by meddling with the German people and feeding them with pap.

SUBMARINES.
[Philadelphia Record.]
England, which has the largest navy, desires to have the submarine outlawed, while France, which has a much smaller navy, desires to have it legalized for naval or defensive purposes. It will be found rather difficult to suppress any weapon that is really so useful as the submarine. But the submarine might be confined to attacks upon fighting vessels, and submarine attacks on merchant vessels, whether carrying passengers or cargo, are condemned as piracy. Merchant vessels would not have been attacked in this war if they had not been attacked by submarines. The old rule of search before seizure should be enforced in the case of all non-fighting craft. For defence against non-fighting craft, there is something to be said for submarines and mines, as there is for other deadly weapons.

WHAT PROHIBITION MEANS.
[Philadelphia North American.]
It means a conservation of national wealth which within ten years will equal the colossal costs of the war. By ending a wasted expenditure of $2,000,000,000 a year it will divert that sum to the 600 a year to be spent on the necessities and comforts of life, creating incomparably the greatest new market for legislation that could open to American industry. It would multiply the man power of the nation, and enhance the skill of its workers, giving America a substantial advantage over those alcoholic burdened countries that carry on their backs the waste of other nations. It will conserve vast stores of foodstuffs and other materials, and a tremendous waste of fuel, and release scores of thousands of men from the unemployment. It will relieve industry and labor of a heavy load due to inefficiency, costly accidents and lost working time. These are but suggestions of the economic benefits of the social aspect of the change. It will immensurably reduce the evils of vice, crime, illiteracy, insanity, preventable disease and poverty.

LOOK FOR THE BEST.
[The World.]
The world is not a talk happiness. No path is wholly without its woes. No path is wholly rough. Look for the places that are smooth. And speak to those to rest the weary too. Yours,

607 Richmond street.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.
To the Editor of The Advertiser:
For four and a half years we have existed under the free and easy restrictions of the King's Regulations and Orders governing the soldiers of his Britannic Majesty. But the time is fast approaching when the regular routine of civilian life will again be a looked-for reality.
Naturally we shall be governed by a new set of rules and regulations, and we are trying to adjust our minds to conditions as they were before August, 1914. In trying to recall some of those civilian pro-war rules and regulations, the first one that flashes to our mind is the Rule of the Game. Taking it by and large, that rule is fairly well observed, although we have occasionally heard fellows who were sitting in on a game of poker make unchristian remarks about the rule of the game—under their breath, as it were.
Next come the rules of the road. In Canada and France the rule is simple. If you keep to the right you are all right. But over in Merry England, it is one devilish mix-up. If you keep to the left you are right, but if you keep to the right you are wrong. If you have to elucidate matters in one of the numerous police courts. We were badly bailed up on the matters until one of King George's law enforcers explained to us that the average cockney caddy was so cussedly contrary that the law had to make the rules of the road contrary, in order to cope with the situation.
And speaking of England reminds us of the rule of three that was the bane of our school life. But our troubles were as nothing compared to the school days of the present generation. We feel that the rule of three is savagely taxed when a school kiddie strikes this proposition: "If a man goes to bed at 9 p.m. in a country village, what time would he have to get up in the morning in order to catch the 5 a.m. train, providing the daylight saving scheme was in operation?" Thank goodness, there was no daylight saving scheme in the halcyon days of our youth.
Last, but not least, comes the golden rule. But we understand that the golden rule has been put out of vogue by political orders-in-council at Ottawa, so we shall have to reserve our comments on that, until we return to civilian life and find out for ourselves if the ordinary rules and regulations that used to govern private life have all been merged into one great political pool and labelled "ORDERED YOUNG."

Mothers! Read the Signs!

If you will learn to give Cascarets, the candy cathartic, to your children, instead of castor oil, calomel and pills, you will save money, and avoid lots of worry, coaxing and sickness. Truly!

When one of the kiddies has a white tongue, a tainted breath, sour stomach or a cold; when bilious, constipated, feverish, remember, a sweet candy Cascaret should always be the first treatment given. Children really love to take candy Cascarets and they never gripe the tender bowels, never injure, and never disappoint the worried mother. Give Cascarets to children one year old and upwards. Each cent box contains full directions for children and adults.

GROWING! GROWING! GROWING!
What is $4.00 today? It is a question of purchasing power. What will $4.00 buy at present prices? Just over one third of a barrel of flour. Before the war flour was selling at $5.00 a barrel.

No one can say just how much more the purchasing power of the dollar will be in 1924, but you can see that the four dollars you put into War-Savings Stamps now, will grow, not only in number, but in value.

Your investment in War-Savings Stamps is like the snowball rolling down a slope. You give it a start and it grows by itself!

Your four dollars becomes five, and every dollar will be worth more. Whether you buy one W-S.S. each day, or each week, or each month, or only two or three in a year, your money is growing, growing, GROWING all the time.

Those who cannot invest $4.00 at a time, can buy Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each. Sixteen of these on a Thrift Card will be accepted as $4.00 in exchange for a W-S.S.

LIGHTEN YOUR WASHDAY LABOR

EDDY'S INDURATED FIBREWARE
Wash Tubs and Washboards are labor lighteners. They save time and strength. Incidentally they cost no more.
Eddy's Fibre wash-tubs are easy to lift and easy to carry. They keep the water hot a long time because they do not radiate heat as galvanized iron or tin will do. They cannot leak, because they are made in one piece, without joint or seam. And the cost is actually less because they will outlast several of the old-fashioned kinds of wash-tubs.
Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboards save time by the special crimp which loosens the dirt easily. A washing surface on each side gives them double the efficiency of the ordinary washboard.

Dear Miss Grey—Here I am again but under a different pen name. I hope you will excuse me for changing my name. I have already proved myself a great joy to the soldier boys. And now the rest of us can do something. The photograph needs records—oh, dozens of them, for those that are his are nearly worn out with being worked overtime. Wouldn't it be fine for all the Red Cross workers to give us a record for 10 cents or a dollar, so no one need miss this chance. The girls that are in the hospital, and the boys when it is time to stop sending a record to the front. A record card is a record card. Any flat record card is a record card. Any flat record card is a record card.

Darning a Bugbear.
Dear Miss Grey—Have you been going to write the book of the willow-ware plate? I have many correspondents from here? What do you think of my writing? JUNIE MACHRELE.

HELEN L. THOM.
ANS.—You may indeed sign yourself that, but I forgot to tell you that I have your real name! Shall I hold the stamps until a postal card bears the necessary information.

Who Speaks First?
Dear Miss Grey—To settle a dispute please tell me which should speak when meeting, speak first, I mean, lady or gentleman? Thanking you,
ANS.—In the case of acquaintances the man waits for the woman to make the first acknowledgment when meeting. With old friends, either may speak first.

Vaseline on Cotton.
Dear Miss Grey—Glad to see the Page is coming back to life. Could you please tell me how to wash a white cotton stain out of white cotton? Also could you send a stocking-foot pattern? I have a pair of stockings that I want to send to the Belgian relief work in London.
ANS.—I. Any good soap and warm soft water ought to remove the stains. Yes, 2. The dollar has been handed. Mrs. A. T. Edwards, treasurer of the Belgian relief work in London.

The Willow-Ware Legend.
Dear Miss Grey—Will you please print the story of the willow-ware plate? I have many correspondents from here? What do you think of my writing? JUNIE MACHRELE.

HELEN L. THOM.
ANS.—The willow-ware pattern on china had its origin with Chinese decorators, and is familiar to most people. To the right is a lovely mandarin's country seat, two stories high, to show the rank and wealth of the possessor. In the background is an orange tree, and in the foreground a pavilion, to the right of which is a peach tree in full blossom. The whole scene is set in an elegant wooden fence. At one end of the bridge is the "famous willow tree." The bridge is a stone bridge, one story high, and so humble that the grounds are wholly unexciting. Daily Bible Question Club
SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS FOR THE UNIFORM LESSON FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 23, 1919.
ONE GOLDEN TEXT SUGGESTION.
By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D., Moses Praying for Israel, they have used with missionary appliances.—Ezodus xxxi: 1-xxvii: 9.
QUESTIONS FOR TODAY.
5. Which costs the more money for God, to wear gold rings in their ears, or to melt them up into images to represent God?
6. When a pastor sees that the influential majority of his church is bent upon card-playing, dancing, tipping, smoking and other worldly or sensuous things that do not make for spirituality, what should he do?
7. Which costs the more money for God, to serve God with all our hearts, or to follow a fashionable religion with the gratification of our sensuous nature?
Golden Text.—The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working. James v: 16.
GOD RESTS UPON OPINIONS OF THE RIGHTEOUS.
In the beginning God consulted man concerning the most suitable names to be given to all the living creatures which He had created, and Adam gave names to all, cats, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field. From that time forth man has had much to do, not only in naming what God has made, but in the improvement of the cattle, and in developing new breeds of animals, and new varieties of fruit and grain. Many of the things man have done through their own God-given power, but they have done none through prayer; as a result of which God has modified and readjusted his laws to protect the things prayed for. As a matter of fact God has placed the world in charge of man and has instructed him to pray for divine help in carrying on his God-given work.

London Intermediates Defeat Glencoe Team

Local Team Secured Four-Goal Lead in First Game of Home-and-Home Series in Semi-Finals of Intermediate O.H.A.—Record Crowd Turned Out to See Forest City Boys Perform.

London Intermediates secured a four-goal lead in the first game of a home-and-home series for the semi-finals of the Ontario Hockey Association when they defeated Glencoe by the score of 5 to 3 in a poor exhibition of hockey at the Jubilee rink last evening.

NOTES ON THE GAME

The London Intermediates will journey to Glencoe with a four-goal lead. This is encouraging, and the Forest City boys should roll up a nice score.

SEATTLE OUTPLAYED BY FAST VANCOUVER SIX

Vancouver, Feb. 18.—Vancouver and Seattle staged another big ice battle at the local rink last night, and though from a scoring standpoint the visitors sustained their worst beating of the season, the final score being 6-1, the game during fifty of its sixty minutes' duration was an even 1, and the largest crowd of the season was satisfied both with the result and with the splendid exhibition put up by the opposing athletes.

The first period, and was carried off the ice. He was replaced by Luckham, Pearson, who watched the nets for the visitors, received a crack on the nose, but rebounded on the ice.

Art Gillies played first-class hockey for the Intermediates last night. We must remember that this had played junior hockey this year.

Sutter had a busy night in goal. The Glencoe boys didn't give him much of a rest. The goal tender came out several times and stopped the visitors from scoring.

The London boys did not decorate the boards. Elliott was the only one sent off. Three Glencoe players were sent to the penalty box by Mr. Referee.

Pearson of Glencoe is a valuable goaltender. He stopped a number of fast shots which looked like sure goals.

Was it the puck or a stick that hit Pearson on the nose? The crowd claimed it was the puck, but Pearson thought it was a stick.

Manager Ferguson and his crew of players will go to Glencoe confident of winning the game and the series. The London boys will be glad to see the Hamilton-Seaford series.

Considering that the visitors did not have many heavy players, they put up a good fight. Every man on the Glencoe line-up was on the job, and did not let a player get away unless it was really necessary.

Payne, who covered right wing for the losers, received a bad fall in the first period, and was carried off the ice.

The Glencoe boys look like real hockey players. We must remember that the star London center player comes from Glencoe.

NEW IRON TONIC.
One of the latest discoveries in the drug world is Tonal Iron Capsules. This formula is put up in French gelatin and is really the finest iron tonic in the world today. Practically all the nerve foods are put up in pills, but scientists have discovered that pills instead of dissolving in the stomach rest on the lining, causing small ulcers, and very frequently being evacuated whole.

You May Now Have Your Daily Bread Wrapped
Now that the regulations forbidding the wrapping of bread are cancelled, you may have the pleasure of buying your bread inclosed in a sealed, waxed wrapper—known to be the most scientific form of protection against dust and dirt, germs, soiled hands and any other source of contamination.

NEAL'S ALOAFA BREAD is wrapped and sealed by electricity in our modern bread factory.
All its oven freshness and goodness are retained. Its tender, snow-white crumb remains soft and moist, tempting to the last slice. Its inviting nut-brown crust retains its crispness and its oven-flavor indefinitely.
The small extra charge which most folks are willing to pay for the extra service of wrapping is more than justified by the retention of the freshness and flavor of our loaf and the hygienic protection afforded. Phone your grocer for a loaf, or our factory for a wagon.
