CREDENCE GIVEN CANCER DISCOVERY

Local Doctors Believe Prof Bell Has Positive Grounds for Announcement.

That a man so high in his profes sion would not announce such revolutionary discovery in the treatment of cancer, unless he had positive grounds for doing so, seems to be the opinion of most London doctors in regards to the announcement of Prof. W. Blair Bell of Liverpool, regarding the treatment of that disease by the chemical agent, lead Prof. Bell made his startling statements at the Toronto Academy of Medicine this week. Of 200 cases subjected to the new treatment 50 had been completely cured, he claimed. Most of the cases treated were classed in the hopeless stage.

'The idea of the lead treatment is lutely new to me," said Dr. F. W Hughes, London surgeon. It will ews to the profession that lead will act in that way. Its chief recom-mendation is that it is announced by such an authority in cancer research of Prof. Blair Bell. He is a man of too much integrity of character to too much integrity of character to make an announcement unless he had a real knowledge of his subject." The discovery heralds a pew era in the treatment of cancer, according to Dr. W. J. Stevenson, one of the most noted cancer surgeons in the dominion. "The work has been going on in England for some time, par-ticularly in Manchester and they seem to have achieved wonderful results. His ratio of 25 per cent cure to cases treated is magnificent. The treatment has not been used in Canada, but there is no reason why Canadian hospitals cannot now start to treat the disease in the manner suggested." said Dr. Stevenson.

Prof. Bell has been working along different lines to Dr. W. T. Galbraith of this city. Dr. Galbraith has been experimenting with a serum derived from cancer subjects, which he believes not only cures the disease but will render one immune from it. The experiments of Pro. Bell follow more his associates in London, England.

Ottawa, Nov. 12 .- An attempt to detach from allegiance to the King government and ally with the Conservative party, some of the so-called "Progressive Liberals" of Quebec is understood to be in contemplation in Montreal.

This is the meaning attached here to a lengthy, but vague, editorial argument in the Montreal Star of resterday to the effect that "the majority should rule." The majority that is meant is clearly an eastern majority opposed to the ambitions of

Although Mr. Meighen and his party failed to achieve power last month, they accomplished one thing for themselves, namely, independence of Montreal dominance. The present leaders of the party do not now propose to be dictated to by the men who conceived and carried out the futile Patenaude plan.
The Montreal interests having accomplished nothing for the party, and there is a growing suspicion that ed to depose Mr. Meighen and dominate the party, there is now no in-clination on the part of the Conservatives who were successful at the polls to place further dependence on St. James street proposals.

Mr. Meighen, although he isn't premier, is at least firmly established in the leadership of his party and he is not likely to court new danger by inviting further intervention from the fathers of the Patenaude fiasco. Canadian Press Despatch. Windsor, Nov. 11.-In a report submitted to the special bridge committee at a meeting held at the offices of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., today, Col. C. N. Windsor and Detroit. The committee decided to sen copies of the report to the various which municipal councils of Essex county with a recommendation that a plebiscite be taken at the approaching municipal elections. The municipalities will also be asked to approach the Ontario legislature for its guarantee of the bonds, and for special legislation providing for a county bridge commission to manage the project. The fate of the bridge now depends on the attitude taken by county municipalities and by the Ontario legislature. It was intended at first to seek guarantee of the bonds at Ottawa, but as negotiations proeeded, it became apparent that it was a matter for provincial authorities to deal with. Practical stress to investigate the possibilities of better transportation facilities between Windsor and Detroit began a few weeks ago, when a business-

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Buying Public of London

Several of the leading Retail Grocers in London have for some time been considering the advisability of letting the buying public of London know what they could do for them in the way of improved service, and also what saving could be made to them on many lines of goods.

At a meeting held last week it was found that this was possible if it was done collectively, and also by making buying arrange= ments with the largest purchaser of foodstuffs in Canada. The result of this was that the grocers listed below inaugurated the idea. It is their intention to advertise each week, setting forth their policy and also making offerings to their patrons of lines of merchandise at very close prices, always, of course, endeavor= ing to keep up the reputation of the Grocery Stores of London which, they believe, hold a very enviable position in the province.

They have, especially further south, a far longer grass season than we have and consequently not so much barn feeding to do. Yet the Canadians captured the most coveted prize, the state herd prize, also two championships and other prizes.

Owing to some difficulty over registration, Quebec was unable to send a herd, but it is almost certain that if she had Canada would have had not only first place, but second place as

Canada's Record of Prizes. Last year Canada sent two herds of Ayrshire dairy cows and they captured first and second. Two years ago Canadian farmers won the premier awards for Jerseys, Ayrshires and Holsteins, making five times that Canada has carried off the grand championship for her dairy cattle. When we consider that the Cana-

Primarily the predictions are based on a study of ocean surface temperatures as determined by the amount of sun's heat reaching the earth. Scientific temperance and the need for educating the young people were stressed by Miss McCorkindale, organizer of the Y. W. C. T. U. in Australia, in an interesting address before the Wright union of the W. C. T. U. yesterday afternoon.

There was a need in Canada, New Zealand and Australia, she said, for workers such as Mary Hunt in the United States. The countries were facing a critical moment, and leaders were necessary if the battle for temperance was to be victorious.

She mentioned Mr. Chappelle's books on "Temperance" and "Self-Control" as ideal reading matter.

She took Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" as a splendid portrayal of the effects of liquor. She also stated that liquor was a more deadly enemy than those the empire had during the great war,

"What are we, as Christians, going to do about the prohibition ques-tion?" she flung at her audience as a challenge in closing. "Britain and the Union Jack stand for freedom and against the slave traffic, and they should also stand against drink. Lloyd George is to be commended on his recent stand for prohibition. The eyes of other countries are on Ontails and it is a matter of winning tario, and it is a matter of winning that other countries will be encour-aged. We cannot discourage them."

Peter's Curiosity Gets Best of Him and He Is Chased By a Strange Dog

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

It wasn't a great distance from the strawstack in Farmer Brown's barnyard to the barn itself. It wouldn't have seemed far to you. But to little folks like Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse it seemed a great distance be-cause there was little or nothing under which to hide. You see, when they lived on the Great Meadows al-ways they were more or less hidden by the grass. But here they must run across open spaces which seemed very terrible. They had the feeling that a thousand eyes were watching

As a matter of fact, sharp eyes did keep watch around Farmer Brown's barnyard much of the time. Spooky the Screech Owl learned long ago that now and then he could pick up a young Rat around Farmer Brown's barnyard, or a venturesome Mouse running across from the barn to the house. Black Pussy the Cat delighted to hunt in that barnyard. Jimmy Skunk, Reddy Fox, even Old Man Coyote occasionally visited there in the night. All this Danny Meadow Mouse knew. But Danny knew also that if they once reached that barn he and Nanny would be quite safe, for there were many hiding places there into which no one bigger than themselves could possibly get. The thief thing was to reach that barn. Now it happened that Farmer Brown's boy had been at work in the barnyard one afternoon and he had thrown an old coat down by the strawstack. It lay there all the af-ternoon. Danny Meadow Mouse, ooking his nose out from underneath the straw, discovered the coat. It was just like the old coat in which he and Nanny had once made their home when it was used on a scare-crow. Danny crept into a pocket. There were some crumbs in that pocket. He had smelled them before he had crept in there. He squeaked shrill little squeak for Nanny. Nanny heard him and came hurrying to see what Danny had found. She, too, crept into the pocket. That was a nice pocket. It was so nice there that they were in no hurry to leave. They curled up there and went to strawstack.

old coat. Then they were afraid to come out. Farmer floor than out ran Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. Farmer Brown's Boy didn't see them, but Black Pussy did. She happened to be there in the barn. She always went over to the barn just before milking time because always she had some nice fresh milk then. So it was that she saw Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse run from the old coat. My, you should have seen Black Pussy bound after those Meadow Mice! But she was just too late. Yes sir she too late. In the very nick of time Danny and Nanny found a hole just big enough for them to slip

Danny drew a long breath. "My!" "Black Pussy almost got us that time. But here we are in the big barn, and here we are going to spend a comfortable winter. will be plenty of grass seed and there will be corn and oats and wheat and sweet hay. It won't matter how cold it gets. It won't matter how much there is. Nothing that can happen will matter. All we have to do is to watch out for Robber the Rat and Black Pussy. There is no one else to be afraid of. Aren't you glad you are here, Nanny Meadow

"Indeed I am!" cried Nanny, "Now let old Jack Frost come whenever he gets ready."

Fall is the glad time and the ime, and to some it is also the dread ful time. You see, it is the season when the hunters with terrible guns are seek-ing some of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows Peter Rabbit long ago learned that is wisest to stick to the dear Old Brid Patch during the daytime at this seaso of the year. To be sure, no hunter were allowed on Farmer Brown's farm There were signs warning them that ; hunting was allowed there. less, the little people there had to lways on the watch. You see, son times hunters, knowing that Farme Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy wer not at home, would hunt there in spite

But at night Peter felt quite safe om the hunters with the terrible guns: then he could go where he pleased, with no need of watching out for anyone except Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl and Yowler the Bob Cat. He was so used to watching out for these that they really didn't worry lives of many little people to be continually watching out for four-footed and feathered enemies. So Peter didn't worry about them.

One night he had just reached the edge of the Green Forest when he saw strange lights moving across the Green

you should have seen Black bound after those Meadow

Meadows toward the Green Forest, and he heard the voices of men. "This is queer," thought Peter. "What can those two-legged creatures be doing over here at night? I think I'll sit around a while and watch."

But Peter didn't sit very long. A dog surprised him where he was sitting. It was a strange dog. It was a dog Peter never had seen before. Of course Peter took to his heels. He darted away right under the very nose of that dog. Away went the dog after him! And how tha dog did bark! Peter dodged as only Peter can. The dog kept after him for quite a distance, and then gave up the chase. You see, he heard his master calling him. You should have seen that dog as he crept up to his master's feet His tail was between his legs and his head hung low. You see, he knew that his master would scold him. He wasn't supposed to hunt Rabbits. He was out to hunt Bobby Coon. He wouldn't have thought of chasing Peter had not Peter happened to jump out from under his This was more than he

So, after he had been thoroughly scolded, this dog was sent on by his master, and at once he began to run about the Green Forest with his nose sleep. Yes, sir, Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse went to sleep in the pocket of Farmer Brown's Boy's old tooat lying on the ground by the as not very much to be feared that they didn't hear Farmer Brown's and Peter's curiositiy led him to turn boy when he arrived. They knew didn't know who those hunters were nothing until he had picked up that after. He didn't know it was Bobb

Coon. So he was full of curiosity t Coon. So he was full of curiosity to see what was going to happen.

What did happen was that once again he jumped out from under the very nose to do. He tossed the coat down on to do. He tossed the coat down on the floor. No sooner did it touch the have Peter right under his very nose that way. This time when the dog re turned to his master he was punished Then once more he was sent to look for Bobby Coon's trail, and again all he could find was Peter Rabbit's. Peter seemed to be taking great delight in unning races with that dog. The truth he was enjoying it. He was sure in his own mind that there was no real danger from that dog, and he knew that that dog's voice would keep away other enemies. So Peter was having a perfectly good time. He probably would have enjoyed it still more had he known just what he was doing. You see, the truth is he was spoiling a hunting party. That party was after Bobby Coon, and because Peter kept getting in the way of that dog and leading him away, Bobby Coon couldn't be found. Hε was doing Bobby Coon a good turn, a very good turn indeed, but he didn't know it. You know, all of us often help others without ever knowing it. After Peter had led the dog off for the fourth or fifth time, the hunting party gave up the search of Bobby Coon that gight. They were very much upset and put out as they tramped away with the dog at their heels, and they blamed it all on the poor dog (Copyright, 1925, by T. W. Burgess.)

Westervelts vs. Falcons.
The second encounter also provided good hockey, the blue and gold of the Westervelt school carrying the play into the Falcon territory most of the time, but finding a real stone wall in Pierce, the Ridout street net guardian. As a result of this much-bundled-up boy's workk, the students were held to a 1 to 1 tie and as the time was passing the overtime was called off.

Westervelts drew first blood in the first period, when Wong, the speedy little wing, sneaked the rubber away from a mix-up in front of the Falcon goal and scored over the sprawling Pierce. Wong's work along with that of Jaques provided the features of the game. The students have been well trained and showed the effect of the per-essaon coaching with neat combinations that worked well in behind the Falcon defence the majority of times they were pulled off.

In the second period, Mason, the Falcon center, got away on a rush down the boards at 5 minutes and threw the Westervelt defence into a mix-up while he banged the disc into the nets. Then the pen-pushers went at it with a vengeance, and Pierce was called upon to the procession of the Soo to the International return of the Soo to the International

O. H. A. Meets. Good ice artistry was kept up in the third and final battle, which was won by St. Marys 1 to 0, when Falkner and Howard got away on one of their many sallies for a counter, that in the end really meant victory.

The squads didn't get warmed up in the initial period, and as a result there was a rather scrawly exhibition. Bert Howard got away on some nice rushes and beat everybody but Gordon, the Hawks' goalie. Foxworthy also turned in some nice work, and pulled off some great stick-handling. In the second period, the Hawks, following the lead of Wilcox, their center, sifted through the St. Marys defence on speedy attacks, and Flitzgerald was forced to put in some fast play. He made great stops, Falkner got in behind the Hawks' defence twice, but Gordon was also there.

In the third period, the St. Marys crew went on the offensive, and Foxworthy oosed through for a great try, but Goran was awake and kept the shot in the corner. Then at 10 minutes Falkner lofted the rubber over the kneeling Gordon after the losers' net guardian had stopped Howard's hot shot from well inside.

The final period found neither side counting, both being weakened by penalties that Referee Legg was throwing around quite freely. As a last stability is before the bell, Wong and Jaques combined for a great effort, but Bennett, sub goalie, was in the way.

The teams:

The principal considerations are the principal considerations are the return of the Soo to the International league with a big railway jump which would destroy the compactness of the loop as it was on receipt of the invitation after Soo and Pittsburg had been reported as out of it, and assurances from Winnipeg that two strong teams would be entered from that city with Port Arthur, Fort William and Kenora of the Thunder Bay league, in the Manitoba A. H. A.

Players also had to consider their future in the possibility of its effect on their amateur status in view of the likelihood of drastic action by Canadian authorities. One can imagine the foreign players saying, "I'll declare my king," and being hushed into silence. "Kings" and "queens" would doubtless be turned into "comisars."

The more common pieces of the boards would be "comrades." But, as a matter of fact, the Soviet is financing the congress, and has not insisted on the terms of the royal game being changed. Even the bishops are safe. Again the veteran Dr. Lasker, winner of the St. Petersburg tournament, as of the New York contest last year, will try his strength against the world champion, Capablanca, and his other familiar foeman, Rubenstein. The American champion, Marshall, and the brilliant young Mexican, Torre, are among the formidable entries. The important absentee is the Russian Alekhine, who in exile has no overpowering craving for Soviet hospitality.

This may be the last engagement of Lasker and Capablanca, foremost of the modern masters, for the German player is along in years. Lasker's play in the New York tournament, however, gave no evidence of failing powers; the only game he lost was to Capablanca, whom he excelled in the total point. Although he lost the world championship to the Cuban in their Havana duel, he has outrivaled his younger opponent as an international tournament player.

Whether either of these masters could play on even terms with Paul Morphy is a favorite speculation. Labourdonnais, the great French player, said of that astounding chess genius: "It is of no use playing him; it is simply uncertainty struggling against certainty." In supreme confidence, at any rate, Capablanca is peerless. It is characteristic of his assurance that he thinks he could improve the game of chess, as Walter Duranty reports him in the Times, by enlarging the board to 100 squares, creating new pieces as powerful as knight and bishop and as rook and bishop combined, putting new premiums on resourcefulness and inventive strategy. His scheme would, of course, scrap all the "books." Capablanca's idea is to make the mere memorizers of the books think out new strategy for themselves.

Senor Capablanca is likely to find it somewhat difficult to revolutionize chess out of hand. The latest innovation, that of castling, dates back to the sixteenth century. If he were determined to alter the game materially he should have started his campaign about the time of the siege of Troy.

THAT JOY OF BATTLE.

W. O. McGeehan, favorably commenting upon George D. Owen, Jun's, frank but surprising statement that, although a star, he never 'iked football, and neither did many of the players with whom he played, apparently ponders how much real adulterated joy there is in battle. He writes:

"It may seem all out of order to compare George Owen, Jun., of Harvard, with Battling Nelson, of the stockyards, but there is something in this post-graduate declaration of Mr. Owen that is very much like a post-pugilism statement of Battling Nelson. "While waiting for the Willard-Dempsey bout at Toledo, Battling Nelson joined a group of sport writers congregated on the steps of the Hotel Secor. Nelson's face was covered with scars upon which a beauty doctor had failed to make any impression. Mr. Nelson was hit about the head and face more than any gladiator who ever entered the ring. "'Now, there was Nelson,' said one of the newspaper felt any of those punches.'

'Wait a minute,' said Nelson. 'Do you think that I am goofy? I felt every one of those punches and never liked one of them. Only a goofy guy would enjoy being soaked."

Shag Claims But Set of Four Or So Formations Are Needed.

Canadian Press Despatch Montreal, Nov. 11.-Frank Shaughnessy has come out in defence of his conference plays, following criticism of the "huddle" system used by McGill, as expressed by Toronto rugby critics. A Toronto paper this morning charand that both Varsity and Queens, who use the ordinary method of calling signals, have been penalized for infringing on the 20-second rule.

It is further pointed out by the McGill coach that aside from a certain amount of deception which can be provided this way, the conference play has the advantage of relieving the players of the task of learning an involved system of signals. All they are required to learn under the "huddle" system is four or five formations, and from the conference they are told plainly where conference they are told plainly where the ball is to go.

to learn under the 'nuddle' system is four or five formations, and from the conference they are told plainly where the ball is to go.

Outside of lessening the task for the players, it has, he claims, this aivantage, which is rigidly important at McGill—it relegates football to what is taught on the field. There is no long blackboard session necessary for signal purposes, and seaves the players free in the evening to pursue their studies, football being confined to the two hourseach afternoon that the men put in on the field.

With the instructions of the judge offering no alternative verdict and providing only for a life sentence in the case of a verdict of guilty, or acquittal, the jury filed to their quarters above the courtroom.

An admission that Dr. Haroid Blazer killed his 34-year-old "child woman" daughter Hazel, was made tonight by Lewis Mowry, chief defence attornel, in his final arguments in the late afternoon, following instructions of the jury by District Judge Samuel Johnson. Under the Colorado statutes the jury is instructed prior to the closing arguments.

"Yes, we admit that he slew the girl," Mowry said. "But we do not admit that he killed her with malice aforethought, as the state must prove to secure conviction. Neither do we admit that he was sant when he committed the homicide, as the state contends." Further, we contend that neither of the latter charges has been sustained by evidence here."

Luxor, Nov. 11.—More than a nillion days ago priests of Thebes placed Pharoah Tutankhmen in his coffin, where he lay undisturbed even by the furore caused by the invasion of his tomb two years ago, until today, when Howard Carter lifted the mummy out of the innermost of three corded cases inside the sandstone sarcapogus and propped it up against a wall.

Dr. Derry, profeshor of anatomy at Cairo university, then submitted Tutankhem to the X-rays, which flocking there by increasing thouwhen developed will, Carter expects, reveal whether the cause of Tutankfrom the expression of his face in more finely worked portrait statues, or whether violence ended the reign of the youthful monarch.
