UNIONISTS SAY THE KING IS WITH THEM

Claim That King George Has Represented to the Liberal Ministers the Undesirability of Forcing Home Rule.

WANTS ASQUITH TO HAVE GENERAL ELECTION FIRST.

The Leading Liberals Have Taken Umbrage at the King's Interference in Active Politics and Warn Him Off.

London, Mar. 14.—King George's name again has been brought into play in politics over Ulster in a fashion which many Englishmen consider is calculated to weaken the prestige of the monarch who is removed constitutionally from the arena of party politics.

Believes Ulster in Earnest.

The Unionists are saying openly that His Majesty is convinced that Ulster means to fight, and that he has made serious representations to his ministers as to the undesirability of a policy which may lead to rebellion in his Irish dominion.

The story, indeed, goes so far as to insist that Premier Asquith's hand has been practically forced by the King, who is said to have expressed a strong wish for a general election, following the passage of the Home Rule Bill and even to have accompanied it by an indication that if the Liberal Government refused to hold an election the exercise of the royal prerogative of dissolution might be the alternative.

Some Truth In It.

The King's strict recognition of his constitutional limitations since he came to the throne dispenses with the necessity of giving full credit to the whole story as to His Majesty's intentions, but there is good reason to believe that in so far as his apprehensions of trouble with Ulster are concerned, gossip is correct. In fact some Liberals have taken serious umbrage at the attitude of the King and a paper like The Daily News has delivered a veiled warning to His Majesty.

Mutineers Kill Their Own General

Officer in Charge of a Thousand Mexican Troops is Seized and Killed by His Own Soldiers.—Mutiny Put Down.

Mexico City, Mar. 15.—General Alstrico, commanding a thousand men at Joyalta, was killed yesterday by his own men, who mutinied. The uprising was led by four lieutenants.

Tourist Trips To The Arctic

Being Organised in London for Next Summer—The Charge is Only One Thousand Dollars per Head.

London, Mar. 14.—A trip to the Arctic in search of gold and sport, is being planned here for the summer. The promoters offer to take passengers for four months at $1,000 each, including meals, with the right to shoot one polar bear, one seal, one walrus, two muskox, one wolf and two white foxes. The main object of the expedition is to seek gold in Baffin Land, where nuggets, it is reported, are waiting to be picked up. The ship will be fitted luxuriously with arc lights, private cabins with baths, etc. The provisions include fine wines and spirits, cigars, etc.

Invade Kitchen For Hat Styles

Women's Newest Fashions in "Lids" Modelled After Modest Culinary Utensils—Worn in Rakish Manner.

New York, March 13.—If you see a young woman with what appears to be a gigantic cymbal or an inverted skillet hanging perilously to the side of her head, don't laugh. Investigation will likely prove that she is wearing one of the real swagger hats being exhibited here.

The skillet hat sits as far on one side of the head as the law of gravity will permit, the long 'handle' shooting skyward and tipped by something of other which milliners probably have a name for.

Then the cymbal hat. It's a regular lid—a vast flat plain with a little round knob, a la cymbal, in the centre, which serves as a crown.

The general effect of having opened a huge oyster and put one of the half shells on either side of the head was presented in another hat. The 'shells' are prevented from closing up on the head of the wearer by dainty chin straps, which would prevent any great movement either way.

Going back to the kitchen, someone hit on the lid of a roasting pan as a good pattern for a hat, and it was exhibited with others. The lid goes on the head just as it would go on the pan. Still another was built along the general lines of an old man's skull cap, with a weather-vane attachment of two wings, extending fore and aft.

Most of the higher officers of his command escaped massacre and went to the neighboring villages, where they mobilized a force to return to Alstrico.

Meanwhile followers of the Rebel Zapata joined the mutineers, but, despite reinforcement, the mutineers were whipped by the loyal force.

The War Department says that the majority of the mutineers were captured and executed.

DEPORTATION ACT "MAY PROVE A NAIL IN THE COFFIN OF OUR GREAT EMPIRE."

The Case of the Nine Labor Leaders, Arbitrarily Exiled From South Africa, Arousing Great Interest in England.

DEPORTEES FIGURE IN MANY BIG DEMONSTRATIONS.

United British Labor Organisations Decide to Help the Men Fight Their Case Through the Courts.

London, Mar. 14.—Although many of the leading newspapers are openly sneering at the nine labor leaders deported from South Africa on the Ungein, the fact remains that the action of the Botha Government has created a grave situation within the Empire.

There is something very real about the demand of English workers for changed conditions. This sentiment has led to the opposition of the government candidates by labor nominees at the recent bye-elections, a fact that explains the defeats therein sustained by the government.

For the Laborites are rapidly coming to the conclusion that they have very little practical in the way of reforms to look for from the Asquith government.

And the treatment by the Liberal members of the South African incident will finally result either in confirming this impression or in creating a wide breach between the Liberals and the Laborites.

Need Their Support.

That the Asquith government can but ill afford to lose the support of the Labor element in the British House of Commons is apparent from the fact that the government have lost eighteen bye-elections since the general elections of 1910 and the defection of the Labor members would take a voting strength from the Liberals of forty more. Should the Labor members in such an event join hands with the Unionists, the Asquith majority, with the co-operation of the Nationalists, would be reduced to a bare thirty.

The standing in the British House of Commons at present is: Liberals, 256; Unionists, 290; Nationalists, 84; Laborites, 40.

The deportees have been well treated since their arrival in England. They have been guests of honor at monster demonstrations and the United Labor Organisations of Great Britain have decided to back the men up in fighting their case through the courts.

At first the Labor members in Parliament were not over-enthusiastic in their support of the deportees, but their hands have, in a way, been forced by the general opinion of the working classes. Generally, it is conceded that the fundamental principle at issue is that which declares that a man must be given a fair open trial before he is condemned on any charge.

Many Sympathisers.

It is certain that the cause of the deported labor leaders has the sympathy of not only the Unionists, but of many Liberals as well, although both are entirely hostile to the general Labor programme.

"The event," says The Nation, "is one of the gravest in our constitution."

THROUGH WITH CONCESSIONS

Irish Party Leaders Will Not Assent to Any More Conciliatory Changes in the Home Rule Bill—Regard Them as Useless.

New York, Mar. 15.—A cable from London says that the Irish party leaders are determined that the Home Rule Bill shall go through without further concessions to Ulster, whatever happens.

T. P. O'Connor sends the following message to the New York American: "All is over but the shouting. There will still be a good deal of shouting, but this will not matter. The Government has said its last word. The Tories may take it or leave it. I think they will take it."

Devlin in a spirited letter in a local newspaper says:

"The Carsonites will not be conciliated at any cost. The Home Rule Bill will be carried as it stands, and the Government must take responsibility for enforcing the law against the aristocrats who are plotting rebellion."

"Devlin is now regarded as the most powerful influence in the Irish party, and great weight is attached to his manifesto.

Principle at Stake is the Right of an Accused Man to Trial Before Condemnation on any Charge.

BOTHA'S ACTION OUTRAGES ALL BRITISH PRINCIPLES

Deported Men Declare That They Will Return to South Africa Again and Brave Possible Re-arrest.

al history. It may well prove a nail in the coffin of our Empire. It happens also to be specially dangerous to Liberalism. There is a time for jesting, but not when the house is on fire."

The nine South African labor leaders have issued a statement describing the events in South Africa up to the declaration of martial law, and charging that the Burgher Force called out was used "for the purpose of terrorising the British workers who had come out on strike. In the Germiston district these men behaved like veritable Bashi-Bazouks, riding down defenceless people, arresting indiscriminately private persons, entering private houses, arresting inmates, and throwing them into gaol for no crime whatever—about 1,000 men, mostly belonging to the different trades unions in the South African Labor Party being placed under arrest."

Kept in the Dark.

They then describe the deportation proceedings and state that until they were placed on the Ungein, they were under the impression that they were merely being transferred from Johannesburg to Pretoria. And it was not until they were met in the saloon of the steamer by officials of the Government that they learned they were to be deported to England. The men then made a protest against, what they characterised as, the illegal action of the South African authorities.

"What we are contending for," concludes the statement, "is the right that every British citizen and artisan in South Africa, being charged with any offence against the laws of the country, shall be entitled to be duly tried to appear before any recognised court of the country."

"We now appeal to the people of Great Britain and to the workers of the world to help us in our attempt to prevent the present Government from usurping the judicial power of the courts of South Africa, and from their evident intent to make of South Africa a Boer Colony instead of a British settlement, which, under some enlightened and just Government, will yet become the home of many thousands of British men and women. It is in that we are content to await the issue as between the ignorant reaction of the Union Government and the sense of justice of the British people."

Awarded Damages Of 34,000 Dollars

Young Lady Passenger Wins Case Against the Cunard Steamship Company—Sued for $145,000.

New York, Mar. 13.—Miss Catherine O'Rourke, who brought an action against the Cunard Steamship Company and Dr. Robert Bruce, one of the Company's physicians, claiming $145,000 damages, has been awarded $34,000 by the Supreme Court at Minneola, Long Island.

Miss O'Rourke alleged that she was publicly charged with being the mother of a child born in the steerage of the Campania during a voyage to New York last April, and that she was abusively treated until the child's mother was found.

Counsel appearing for the Cunard Company moved that the verdict be set aside as it was against the weight of evidence, but the application was refused. An appeal is certain to be lodged.

TURNED TABLES ON POLICEMAN

Arrested Crackman Whipped Out Two Revolvers, Took Officer to Secure Woods and Missed Him and a Chaffeur Up to a Tree.

March 14.—A $30,000 burglary was committed recently in Newark, N.J., and the exploit has been laid to the account of a certain English crackman who came near being arrested. The police officer who tracked him down and made plans for his expeditions removal in custody did not, however, make sufficient allowance for the coolness and daring of his man.

Thought He Had Him.

The policeman informed the burglar of his arrest, and an automobile ordered to take captor and captured to the police station arrived, but when the officer requested his charge to enter the car the burglar whipped out a revolver and "held him up." At the revolver point the officer was forced to get into the automobile, and the burglar drawing a second revolver, held it at the ribs of the chaffeur, with the remark, "Do as I tell you, nigger."

Took To The Woods.

The result was an hour's drive into the depths of wooded country. Eventually the chaffeur and the policeman were both told to get out, and their captor, smoking cigarettes, bound each to a tree, and then broke off his smoke to indulge in some light-hearted badinage.

"You have forced some little inconvenience upon yourself, I'm afraid," he observed, "but anyway, I'm glad old haps, that I didn't have to blow your bally heads off." When in the flow of talk the speaker allowed his cigarettes to go out, he requested the policeman to oblige him with a light, pointing his revolver at him. Finally he bade adieu to his victims, vanishing in the woods, and has not yet been re-discovered.

SETTLEMENT STILL FAR OFF ON HOME RULE

In Spite of Asquith's Concessions the Unionists are as Immovably Opposed to it as Ever.

EXTREMISTS WANT ALL ULSTER EXCLUDED.

Believed Asquith is Personally Favorably Disposed to This and Will Eventually Defy the Nationalists.

London, Mar. 16.—A settlement of the Irish Home Rule difficulty apparently has been little advanced by the British Government's great concessions to the Ulsterites and, taking the assertions of both political parties at their face value, the deadlock to-day remains as immovable as before Asquith's conciliatory offer was made in the Commons on March 9th.

Won't Recede.

Signers of the Ulster Covenant declare strongly that nothing less than the permanent exclusion of the Protestant counties of Ulster from the Irish Government at Dublin, instead of the proposed six year option, will be considered by them. The more radical Countymen demand not only the exclusion of the four counties of Antrim, Armagh, Londonderry and Down, in which Protestants are in the majority, but that the whole of it be excluded. Anything else they say would be a desertion of their comrades in the counties where Protestants are in the minority and would be treason to their Covenant.

Carson's Message.

Sir Edward Carson sent a message to Belfast, saying, "So far as our present position is concerned."

MONTHLY MEETING HOLY NAME SOCIETY

Met at the Cathedral Yesterday Morning and Afternoon—Big Number Attended the Inspiring Services.

The above society held its monthly meeting yesterday. At 8 p.m. the body in large numbers met at the Cathedral to be present at the Holy Sacrifice and to receive Holy Communion. Rev. Dr. Green officiated. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock they again assembled at the Cathedral, where Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was imparted by the Society's Spiritual Director, Rev. Fr. Sheehan. The singing of appropriate hymns in unison by the five hundred members was indeed inspiring.

Sister Josephine, of the Presentation Convent, with her usual ability, presided at the grand organ, after which the society filed out of the Cathedral in processional order, and repaired to the Aula Maxima, where the Rev. Spiritual Director gave a short, but a most instructive lecture on the liturgy of the church, minutely explaining the ceremonies practiced, especially during Holy Week. The Rev. gentleman henceforth will give short lectures every month. Regular business was then proceeded with.

Delivers Interesting Lecture to a Big Audience on "Men Who Have Succeeded."

At yesterday's meeting of the A. B. C., Mr. H. E. Cowan delivered an interesting address, taking as his subject, "Men Who Have Succeeded." Speaking to an audience composed mostly of young men, he held up lofty ideals and emphasized the necessity of educational attainment and moral worth. He referred to the striking example which we have in the world to-day of men who have risen from obscure and unfavorable surroundings to take the highest places in every department of life. A vote of thanks proposed by Mr. C. J. Laughlin and seconded by Mr. Alex. Knight was warmly accorded the speaker. Mr. Stanley Green rendered in a very pleasing manner a solo "One sweetly solemn thought."

Miss B. Bartlett, who was visiting friends in the city, returned to Topsail this morning.

TO THE EDITOR.

SUNDAY CONCERTS

(Editor The Daily Mail)
Sir.—I do not admire the inconsistent position taken by the Methodist Ministers of this city, with respect to Mr. Allen's sacred concert.

They object to Mr. Allen charging a price for admission on a Sunday, because it is making a commercial transaction of sacred things.

They, however, do not object to hiring the Methodist College Hall for meetings and concerts, and do not object to putting the money to the credit of the hall. They do not object to have a concert after service in the Methodist churches and taking up a silver collection to defray expenses of light, heat, janitor, etc., or to help pay the debts incurred by the congregation. I have attended these services of song, which have been made attractive to the public by the singing of sacred hymns to negro melodies and popular secular tunes—why? Merely to attract the filthy lucre from the pockets of those that attend.

The Methodist Ministers do not object to having a collection, every Sunday, in Church, of money to pay the expenses of maintaining it. Is this not a commercial transaction? Would it be not more in keeping with the attitude of the Methodist Ministers, if all money matters and all worldly business, such as raising funds for church work, payment of church officers, etc., were considered on week days?

Before throwing stones at Mr. Allen the Methodist Ministers of St. John's should closely examine their own records, and see whether they are free from the charges they prefer against others.

AUNT SARAH ON TAXATION

(Editor The Daily Mail)

Dear Sir,—I received a severe shock a few days ago. My dear husband Josiah came back from the telegraph office where he had gone to send a message to our boys, Logan and Paulinus, who are now fishing at Rose Blanche, and he looked and acted like one mentally unbalanced.

During the whole of the thirty-five years of our married life, and a very happy life at that, I never heard my Josiah swear what one would call a real downright oath before that very evening. And Mr. Editor, you might guess my wonder and astonishment when I tell you that cuss-words came out of my Josiah's mouth that evening in circles, just as if they were strung on loops of hat wire.

But as soon as I had recovered sufficiently to speak in an audible voice, I say, says I, "Josiah, my husband, my co-partner for the last blessed thirty-five years that have run through many calendars, speak to the devoted wife of your bosom," says I, "and tell her the true cause of your great mental perturbation," says I in a kind of soothing way.

"Oh, Sarah Ann," cried he, "I am stunned, something has struck me, I have received a blow, where am I? Am I awake?"

And then, Mr. Editor, he, Josiah, my erstwhile saintly husband, started in to assail the Government. He abused them collectively, he abused them severally and he abused them singly. He began at the top and left off at the bottom, or I should say, he began at the Reid Co. and left off at LeFevre.

I shall never tell what he said, as I am afraid of the contaminating effect his violent words would produce. After that dear man had to stop his violent harangue for sheer want of breath, I again addressed him and said, "My dear Josiah, calm yourself a little and tell me what has gone wrong?"

"Wrong," says he, "wrong wrong, wrong? Why, Sarah Ann, 'tis all wrong. We are all going to starve, we are all going to starve to death, for I say 'tis impossible for us old folk to live and cope with the now unreachably high cost of living. The Government has added on another ten per cent," says he, "and that will surely break the camel's back." "The bone and sinew," says he, "will have to leave the country, and the old and the very young will be left to starve," says he, gasping for breath.

Philosophic Advice. "Wait and see, dear Josiah," says I. "Wait and see and calm yourself meanwhile," says I. "What is the good," says I, "of making a fuss over

"The Government may starve our bodies," says I, "but they cannot tax our souls to death," says I. "But," says I, "Josiah, your ungovernable temper this evening, I am afraid, may endanger your soul just as much as a ten per cent. tax would if the People's leech Government had the power to levy thereon," says I. "Be good dear," says I, "and let whoever will be rascals," says I. "There is one, Josiah," says I, "that will never be cheated out of his due," says I, "and that is the Devil," says I. "And the last laugh, my dear partner," says I, "will be the loudest and longest," says I.

"But 'tis no surprise to me at all, this increasing of the duty," says I. "I knew from the first," says I, "that the spendthrift government could not follow on its reckless course very long without running slambang on fails, and fail it must," says I, "then kept skimming just clear of the breakers (the ship of state, I mean)," says I, "by extra taxation wrung from the poor already overtaxed toilers," says I. "And when that sort of help fails, and fail it must," says I, "then the good ship will be a wreck. Probably Canada will then get her off, tow her in and have her fitted up to serve her as a rough lighter or coal barge," says I.

Still At It.

But the worst of it is that they are still borrowing and spending. They don't seem to see the danger or they don't seem to care," says Josiah. Says he, "the Reid Co. are amassing their millions, and thousands of others are growing rich on the heart's blood of their dying country." "Oh! my country," says he, "is there no cure for thy many ills?"

"Yes, Josiah," says I, "but the cause must be treated rather than the effects. Reduction in expenditure should be the first treatment," says I, "and that would make the patient feel better from the first dose," says I.

"Whereas," says I, "if extra taxes were resorted to as primary treatment the patient would feel worse and become despondent, general organic inaction would result," says I, "and the arteries become weak and congested," says I, "and finally," says I, "one would burst on the brain, and then," says I, "her powers would all be suspended and she would never be able to walk again. She would then go to Canada, and would probably die under treatment there," says I.

Lucky Defeat.

And Josiah says again, says he, "Sarah Ann, had the Liberal-Union Party secured the Government and clapped on the ten per cent. as the Reid-Morris party has now done, I can fancy the furor of the Opposition re the matter. How they would stamp their feet on the floors of the Assembly over the cruel and unrighteous action," says he. "And," says he, "the notorious P. T. and Ananias R. would stay up all night turning out extras, invoking the furies of the gods on the cruel tyrants," says I, "and at the same time satanically pointing out what might have been in glowing colors if the 'ignorant, illiterate and 'cullage' electors had returned to power once more the one and only true People's Party this country ever knew," says he. "And no doubt," says he, "they would have declared that if they were forced to make a change, it would not have been by increasing taxation but by reduction of expenditure."

"I agree with you, Josiah," says I. "But I see one hope," says I, "and that is if Coaker and his faithful followers can manage," says I, "to stem the mighty adverse torrents that will be set against them during the next four years," says I.

"The furies of hell have been let loose on that man," says I, "and nought but heaven could frustrate their wicked designs," says I.

"Well," says Josiah, "if Heaven has raised up Coaker, Coaker will stay up, and don't you forget it."

LIGHTHOUSE EXPENDITURE.

(Editor The Daily Mail.)

Dear Sir,—The enclosed are a few items culled from the public accounts for the year ending June 30th, 1913, under the heading of Lighthouse Maintenance. I should like to call attention to the difference in the cost of coal supplied to the different stations. Where a station has only one dwelling the quantity of coal consumed yearly is about ten to twelve tons that is the quality supposed to be supplied.

Some of the stations offer better facilities for landing freight and that should be taken into account, but I notice that Cabbage Head and Upper Black Island cost more for coal than Baccalieu North despite the fact that those first mentioned stations are situated in Exploits Bay where an easy landing can be made at almost any time during the season when they are lighted which is from first May to last December.

Another item worthy of notice is the cost of stoves and fittings supplied by W. G. Pippy to Cabbage Head station. It would certainly pay the Department to patronize other stove dealers whose prices would assuredly not reach such an exorbitant figure. The usual stove supplied to light-houses is the Victoria costing, without fittings a few years back, from $12 to $14; fittings were of course cooking utensils.

Cabbage Head should be well supplied with these articles. One name figures very largely in the freight item, that of S. Parsons, he gets the sum of $800 for freight landed at different stations.

The items of freight are not mentioned in the public accounts but they usually consist of the yearly supply of oil, consisting of from twenty to forty boxes containing eight gallons each, and a few small packages of ordinary supplies, in all possibly little more one load for the ship's boat.

Readers may draw their own conclusions.

My reason for showing these items to the daylight is that if extortionate charges are being made along the lines mentioned it may be exposed and that sane business methods may be introduced in conducting our public affairs.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F.L.D., MARCH 16, 1914.

OUR POINT OF VIEW.

NOT NECESSARY!

The Honorable P. T. McGrath states in The Herald that the "Upper House" refused to pass the Coaker Logging Bill "because there was no proof shown as to the need of it."

That, by the way, is not the reason he advanced a few days ago when he gave us to understand that the Bill was not passed because there was no one to father it in the Legislative Council.

Now then we have it from The Herald that as far as the Honorable P. T. McGrath is concerned at any rate, the Bill got its quietus because there was no need of it.

In the first place that Bill was drawn up by Mr. Coaker after numerous representations as to necessary reforms had been made to him by men who had experienced conditions as they exist at logging camps.

It had been read and approved by representatives of a large number of our logging companies.

It passed through its various stages in the House of Assembly, was fully debated and sent on to the Legislative Council without a single dissenting vote being cast against it.

The loggers then thought there was need of such a Bill; the companies were of the same mind; the House of Assembly assented to its principle and its form.

But the Honorable P. T. McGrath cries "no need."

The arm-chair critic of The Herald regards it as an unnecessary measure.

Doesn't see the need of assuring good food, comfortable quarters and advantages to the loggers.

What if a man does sleep on the floor of a camp and contract a cold leading to some complication and to death?

What if men do have to go out in the woods and cut down green, frozen boughs to sleep on at night?

What if they wake of a frosty morning and find their clothes frozen to the side of the camp?

The Logging Bill, which aimed at a change from these conditions was thrown out—so says the Honorable P. T. McGrath—"because there was no proof shown as to the need of it."

"Lowliness is young Ambition's ladder, Where to the climber upward turns his face; But when he once attains the utmost bound, He then unto the ladder turns his back. Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did ascend."

HARD HEARTED

Where's the sense in the Government being so hard-hearted in its treatment of poor Dr. Keegan?

What's he done that he should be denied a few cabbage leaves and "tat's at the public expense?"

Where's the sense of this "progressive" agricultural policy; what's the use of trumpet-blowing about its crop-increasing effects if it can't be made possible by the Superintendent of the General Hospital with vegetable grub, free gratis and for nothing?

Contemplate, gentle reader, the multitude of family grants scattered abroad by the Government; meditate upon these "specials" for this, that and the other thing; think of all these increases in salary provided for in the recent budget; sum up in your mind the pickings from dredge supplies and other little "hand-outs" too numerous to mention, and then turn to this other picture—Dr. Keegan sitting in his free chimney-corner, basking in his free electric light and warming himself up by his free fire and yet refused his free meat, milk and vegetables!

And why, oh, tell us why, did the Government refuse in this instance to relieve the doctor altogether of the necessity of bothering with any of the tradesmen except those who do adorn the person of a man?

Truly a favor but half performed were better never undertaken at all

SHY!

Why this streak of shyness so unaccountably developed by the Honorable P. T. McGrath and J. A. Robinson the last few days?

What is there about these alleged appointments to make the chief pen-pushers of The Herald and The News so chary of an out-and-out announcement?

"Rumor says," and "report says," is the indefinite language used by the Editor of The Herald, while the ambiguous announcement in the editorial columns of The News fairly bristles with such obscure terms as "it is stated," "it is generally expected," "according to reliable authority."

Who should know better than the Honorable journalistic and Legislative twins whether or not "rumor" be correct?

If what is "stated" and "generally expected" be founded on fact why should not our Government trumpet-blowers out with it in unequivocal fashion?

Are they just a couple of political innocents abroad or do they so "size up" the general public?

Maybe they are only feeling the pulse of public opinion.

Perhaps they recognize that the nemesis of public anger is hard on their track.

Or, maybe, they are troubled in conscience over this "expected" out-raging of popular opinion and are thoroughly ashamed of themselves for siding with a government so utterly indifferent to its responsibilities to the people.

Now, then, brethren, speak up like little men. Tell us definitely that the party led by Sir Edward Morris judged it to be neither wise nor expedient to tempt the providence that presides over political affairs by contesting bye-elections while the tide of popular indignation is at the flood.

Of course, that's an open secret. No necessity of obscuring that fact with "ifs" and "an's" and "but's."

The city knows it, the most hide-bound supporter of the present Government admits it. And, if "rumor" be correct as to these appointments, the whole Government from the Premier down is of the same opinion.

Nasty medicine to swallow—but the dose has to be taken.

Some men there be who are men of peace at any price; from their actions we are regretfully led to believe that the present Government have adopted as their motto "Power at any price."

Well, the price to be paid is a high one—most self-conceited mortals would hesitate long before footing the bill.

There's scorn for the men who accept place and pay at the beck and call of a party and in defiance of the mandate of the people.

There's also absolute contempt for those who hang on to the reins of power despite the fact that they are afraid to test popular opinion at the polls.

But, there, wasn't it Shakespeare who remarked that occasionally "policy sits above conscience?"

A PATHETIC CASE

We publish herewith a pathetic appeal that has reached us from one of the outports. For obvious reasons we suppress the name of the writer and her dwelling place, but any who are charitably disposed can get this information from this office, and doubtless those who are well or fairly well fixed in this world's goods will help us send practical cheer to this struggling widow.

Mothers with bright, comfortable homes, with kind husbands to provide for your wants and these of your little ones, think of the hard lot of this woman bereft of her bread-winner and protector, and struggling to make both ends meet.

Think of this widow's position in a small outport with four young children to feed and clothe; with the thousand and one necessities of a house to find through her own exertions.

Fellow men, can you think of anything more, tragically pathetic than the story told by this brief note?—"My husband," she says, "died and left me with nothing and nowhere to go for anything."

"I have four children and not one big enough to work."

"The only help I get is $6.00 per quarter from the Government. 'I am crippled myself.'"

Do you want to help out this poor struggling widow in practical fashion? Do you want to co-operate with us in lending her a hand? We believe that hundreds of our readers will respond to the promptings of humanity.

Lets get together on this matter and form a Relief Society. The Daily

Mail will gladly receive and acknowledge all contributions of money or goods sent in to this office. If you have some children's clothing you can spare, make it up in a bundle and hand it in to us and we will forward at once. If you can spare a few cents or a dollar or so, let us have it, and we will see that it is forwarded promptly. Mark your envelopes "Widow."

ONE OF MANY SUCH.

Dear Sir,—I am a widow. My husband died last year. He left me, you might say, with nothing and nowhere to get anything. I have four children and myself makes five. No one big enough to work.

The only help I get is the $6.00 from the Government, and that is not much to get wood, food and clothing, besides I am crippled myself. So I thought if I would let you know, you would try and help me, let it be little or much.

CHASING THE DOLLARS

So, according to The Herald, Sir Edward Morris has left "for England to make arrangements for the raising of the loan for railway extension!"

Another dollar-chasing expedition in which this country is bound to come off a poor second.

Two little jaunts of the same nature and for the same purpose have already taken place.

Speaking on the Morris branch railroad policy in the House of Assembly on Feb. 10, 1910, Sir Edward said: "I will put the estimate at two hundred and fifty miles. This, at $15,000 per mile, will cost $3,900,000, or in round figures, $4,000,000."

So our administrators hid themselves abroad, invaded the money markets and returned with the cash that, according to the Premier, was to see the branch railroad undertaking through.

But it didn't. In 1912 Two Million Dollars more were brought home by a Morris jaunter.

So the original estimate of Four Million Dollars grew in two years to Six Million Dollars.

But while this Colony's credit was pledged for the security of Six Million Dollars that amount of hard cash wasn't brought home. Not much.

It took little presents totalling almost half a million dollars, to brokers and to money-lenders to persuade them to do us honor of owing them Six Million Dollars.

So, we owe Six Million Dollars; we pay interest on Six Million Dollars, we have had the spending of only about Five Million Six Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Half a million dollars was absolutely lost to us on expenses of brokers who negotiated the loans and by the ill-advised action of selling our bonds in the market at a time when money was difficult to obtain, even on gilt-edged security, and when we could get only about 94 cents for every dollar's worth of bonds we sold.

So we lost almost half a million dollars. That's gone, absolutely and irretrievably.

But our liability for this amount still remains and we have to go on, year after year, paying $17,000 per annum for money we never had the handling of.

Beautiful bargain, isn't it. Something worthy of an "ideal statesman."

The annual interest we have to pay on the money lost through the bungling of the Morris Government would provide three hundred and forty old fishermen every year with pensions of Fifty Dollars each.

Of course, the general public will admit that, in the words of a Morris election pamphlet, "it is not too much to say that the record of the Morris Government, for the four years it has been in power, was never approached since the granting of Responsible Government to the Colony."

No, indeed, that is not at all too much to say. In fact a great deal more might be said about the "record of the Morris Government." Much stronger language than that is being used all over the country.

Their name is legion who are quite emphatic that for bungling, for incompetency for mismanagement—and worse—"the record of the Morris Government was never approached, not to say equalled."

"And now Sir Edward is awa' for the third railway loan negotiated since 1910.

That makes Eight Million Dollars borrowed for railroad construction purposes within four years.

Eight million dollars is just double the amount Sir Edward Morris stated in the House of Assembly on Feb.

GEO. KNOWLING

East and West End Stores Only.

10, 1910, would complete the five branches. Most likely he'll make some sort of a deal for the money. But, unfortunately, all the money market signs indicate the likelihood of another big loss to the country. Even the most optimistic figure that we'll likely be out close on Two Hundred Thousand Dollars on this new deal. But the end is not yet. Sir Edward Morris would not give the Opposition a definite assurance that his new loan would see the railroad construction undertaking through. He would hardly have been so reticent had he been sure of this in his own mind. It is, therefore, by no means improbable, in view of the work still to be done, that a fourth loan of at least Two Million Dollars more will be needed "in the sweet bye-and-bye." So we may as well try to look pleasant and contented over an assured expenditure of Eight Million Dollars—with the probability of its leaping to Ten Million Dollars—on an undertaking that the Premier assured the country could be financed for Four Million Dollars. Just a little mistake of Six Million dollars in this estimate. Nothing much to speak of—in fact, a mere "flea bite." A THOUGHT FOR TO-DAY. A Dash Into the Wilds of Labrador to Erect Tomb to a Hero

Dillon Wallace

Native Camp at Hopedale

Leonard Hubbard's Labrador Tomb

Dillon Wallace, Braving Death and Untold Hardships, Returns to Land Where Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., His Comrade On a Previous Trip of Adventure, Sacrificed His Life to Cause of Science.

DILLON WALLACE, of Mattapan, N. Y., has made an enviable record as a scientist, explorer and author, choosing for his subjects his experiences in wild and uncharted countries where man is scarce seen. Few there were to suspect that he possesses another trait of character by which he might be distinguished—a sentimentalist, yet this is true. For if it was not sentimentality that led him to a comrade who had given his life to science that prompted his most recent trip into Labrador, then none can guess his motive.

Mr. Wallace had just recovered his "see-egs" when the writer, who had traced him from the steamship, which bore him to New York from Halifax, to his modest little home in Mattapan, but a mile or so from the gates of the big asylum through which Harry Thaw made his sensational and, so far, successful dash for liberty. The scores of photographs which Mr. Wallace took while in Labrador bore ample and mute testimony to the perils of the trip and, furthermore, one in particular, shows how the spot where Hubbard died has been marked, a hard boulder standing as a silent sentinel on the very spot where the scientist breathed his last while Wallace, his comrade, lay, many yards away, buried beneath a blanket of snow from which he was rescued at the eleventh hour by almost miraculous chance. Yet Mr. Wallace was sufficiently resuscitated to lay the plans and aid in bearing the frozen body of his chum from these wilds over many miles of trackless waste until it could be placed in a canoe and brought back to civilization for decent burial.

Nine years ago Hubbard died his tragic death. Since then Mr. Wallace has longed for the time when he could return and once more visit that spot which was so indelibly stamped upon his memory. Judge William M. Malone, of Bristol, Ct., also a noted traveler and a warm friend of Wallace, had heard so much of the rugged beauty of this country that he consented to accompany Wallace on the expedition. When all preparations were complete, including the fashioning of a bronze tablet fittingly inscribed, which they were to transport to Labrador, the little expedition left New York for St. John's, Newfoundland, on June 21 last. The remainder of the trip and what transpired is best told in Mr. Wallace's own words:

Expedition Under Way.

"After spending six days in St. John's collecting supplies, etc., we embarked aboard the Labrador mail steamerhip Ivermore and landed at Indian Harbor at the mouth of the Hamilton Inlet on July 2nd. There we tarried two days, picking up additional supplies and our camping outfit. We started forth in a little sail boat for a trip of 110 miles to the head of the Inlet. Here we found Gilbert and Harry Blake, our half-breed guides who were to accompany us the rest of the way. Incidentally our progress from then on was to be made by canoe and our work was cut out for us.

"The major portion of our supplies and the bronze tablet for Hubbard's tomb were loaded into one of the canoes, which the guides paddled. The rest of the supplies were in the canoe which Judge Malone and I propelled. Naturally the bronze tablet was our most cherished possession, and this we guarded with our very lives. We had the necessary tools, chisels, drills and the like with which we intended to mortise it into the rock.

"We had a fifty-five mile trip up the Northwest River, our guides blazing the way. Our goal was the head of a lake we wanted to enter, and from it turn into the Beaver River. We exerted almost superhuman effort to accomplish this, for the current was swift and more than half the time we encountered ripples, rapids and falls that made it necessary to take to land and carry our canoes for a considerable distance. Every stream we navigated, it seems, flowed through towering gorges, banks rising sheer to a height, sometimes, of two thousand feet. Often we would have to climb these ridges, or mountains, and sometimes a succession of them, before we could make headway toward a point where we could take the water again.

"We encountered one point on the Beaver River where the rapids extended for forty miles, and there wasn't an inch of this distance that the waters did not surge and swirl about the huge boulders that jutted from the river's bed to impede progress and imperil the lives of those who attempted to steer a safe course through them. One of the worst and roughest points in these continuous rapids was christened 'Hell and Twenty,' by one of our guides. I rather thought it should have been 'Hell and Plenty.'

Tablet For Tomb Is Lost.

"It was in these rapids that the most serious mishap of the entire expedition trip overcame us. As I said, we were guarding the bronze tablet with every care possible. The canoe in which it was stored was caught by a furious eddy and before we knew it all hands were tossed into the water, the canoe with the tablet completely turning turtle. We made desperate attempts to right it and recover the tablet and supplies, for at a glance we knew that the tablet, once reposed on the bottom of that tempestuous stream, would be dashed to pieces unless it was recovered at once. Evidently it was whirled away before it settled to the bottom, for, 'despite every effort, we could get no trace of it. Our search lasted for several hours, but it all went for naught, and strewed about just as they had been tossed in his death struggle. Death by starvation, such as he met with, is horrible to contemplate at any time, but in a land so desolate, wild and rugged, and so far from civilization, somehow seems even more appalling.

At Death Spot Of Comrade.

"Mute evidence greeted me on every hand of the last moments this splendid fellow had spent on earth. His camp outfit, while weather beaten and tattered, was still in evidence. Even the spot where he breathed last was just as I had left it. And not a great distance away I could see the hollow where I had fallen under a weight of snow and so nearly perished. It was here one of the guides found me and, staggering with me in his arms, got me back to camp, where I was revived.

"Deeply chagrined by the loss of the tablet, we determined that we would at least make some effort to perpetuate the memory of Hubbard at this place. While neither Judge Malone nor myself had ever had any experience as sculptors, we set to work with hammer and chisel to engrave the face of the huge, moss-covered rock with the same inscription that had adorned the ill-fated tablet. Our tools were primitive to say the least, and this, coupled with our gross inexperience, added to our arduous task.

"When the last letter of the inscription had been fashioned, we were not satisfied with our handiwork inasmuch as the letters, we figured, would soon become weather stained and filled with moss and become obliterated from view. A happy thought came to me then. We had some white lead packed in our kit with which we had expected to caulk our canoes in the event of their springing a leak. We had no paint brush and again ingenuity had to be relied upon to help us out of our dilemma. Gilbert Blake, one of the guides, had a luxuriant growth of hair, wavy and as straight as a ramrod. We proposed that Gilbert sacrifice a portion of his hair, which he cheerfully agreed to. I volunteered as barber and, after cropping off as many locks as I needed, we fashioned a paint brush and with the white lead mixture filled in the letters until they stood boldly forth, proclaiming the tragic spot where Hubbard's brave spirit fled.

Larder Gets Low.

"We spent three days in the neighborhood of the tomb. We went over every square inch of the ground that Hubbard and I had traversed together and saw the places where I had struggled against the storm which cost Hubbard his life and where I came so near to cashing in. After hunting some, for our larder was getting low, we prepared for the return trip. We had the same hard overland trip that we had encountered on the way up and then once more got to the point where we could take to water. The worst damaged of the canoes we packed with light provisions and other camping materials and intended to permit it to drift along at our side, towing it when necessary. But this canoe, as well as the one we were in, was caught in whirlpool at 'Hell and Twenty' rapids, and both were crushed as easily as though they had been constructed of egg shells. Not only were we without means of transportation, but the better part of our stores were lost, too. This made it necessary for us to tramp forty miles afoot to Grand Lake, where Judge Malone determined to leave me and push on to the nearest point where he could take steamship for home. I continued on, turning north on Grand Lake as there were several points along its shores I wanted to explore at closer range.

"This lake is at least 1,000 feet deep. We repeatedly tried to sound its depths, but no line or succession of them we threw overboard touched bottom. Five rivers empty into this lake, which is fifty miles long. These are the Nascaup, the Crooked, the Susan, the Beaver and the Cape Carvo rivers. I enjoyed every moment of my canoe trip over this lake and especially the sight of the thousands upon thousands of wild geese which we saw at Davis Land.

Mr. Wallace said the remainder of his trip, while beautiful and hugely enjoyable, was without undue incident, and he arrived back in New York but slightly behind scheduled time.

After getting a long and much needed rest he will complete a book of travel he is engaged in writing, after which he will make arrangements for an expedition he is to head into the wild and unexplored interior of Patagonia, from which he anticipates many thrills and many novel and entertaining experiences.

Buy "THE COAKER" Kerosene Motor Engine!

A Motor Engine made for The Union Trading Co.

by one of the Largest Motor Engine Manufacturers in America is now available to the Fishermen.

"THE COAKER ENGINE."

"THE COAKER" is a 6 H.P. 4 Cycle Engine, and can be operated on half the oil consumed by a 6 H.P. 2 Cycle Engine. This Engine's power is equal to the power of some 9 H.P. 2 Cycle Engines. It is made for Fishermen's use and expressly for Trap Skiffs and the large size fishing buoies. It is sold to Union's members at wholesale prices. All commission and middlemen's profits being cut out. We have contracted for the manufacture of 1000 of those engines. The engines will be carried in stock by us here and can be delivered by April 1st. We will carry parts and fittings in stock. We will arrange reasonable terms of payment to meet the requirements of men unable to purchase for cash. WE GUARANTEE THE ENGINE. An expert has been engaged to attend to the installation of our Engines. Write for particulars and terms. See Circular Letter sent to all Councils concerning this engine. We confidently recommend the engine as being of the very best make and material; of being exactly what is needed for the Fishermen's use and GUARANTEED TO GIVE SATISFACTION. It is above all durable, simple and capable of doing heavy work; it is not a toy engine. The spark plug is attached to the side and not the top. The engine starts on gasolene.

This engine is sold $75 cheaper by us than by the regular agents selling a similar engine. No agents will be employed to sell these engines. We will do our work through the Councils of the F.P.U., therefore one dollar on every three will be saved by buying these engines from the Trading Company. We are prepared to dispose of 2000 of these engines during the year 1914. The Union would have done better and arranged longer terms of payment had the Liberal-Union Party been returned to power, as we believe public monies should be available to aid Fishermen to carry on their work and assist every industrious man to become independent. The Southern-Districts being coddled by the catch-cries of Grab-allism have debarred the Fishermen from receiving loans from public funds in order to secure those desired improvements, but the Trading Company will endeavor to do what is possible to aid Union members, and in spite of Grab-allism thousands will possess motor boats in two years who are to-day without them. News of the City and the Outports

MR. A. B. MORINE BACK FROM TRIP ABROAD

Visited the United States on Professional Business and Also Made a Trip to Toronto, Canada.—T. S. Weather Conditions.

Mr. A. B. Morine, who has been visiting Canada and the States, returned Saturday. A month was spent in New York where Mr. Morine had been called in connection with the Job Brothers-McMartin case, involving $100,000.00, which has been set for hearing in our Supreme Court on April 13th.

While in New York Mr. Morine was the guest of his youngest daughter, who resides at Staten Island. The winter has been a very severe one, there being several heavy falls of snow which tied up surface traffic. The city spent $3,000,000 this winter raising the snow blockade.

Leaving New York Mr. and Mrs. Morine proceeded to Toronto to visit their elder daughter, and Mrs. Morine will remain with her a few weeks.

PICNICS BEGIN EARLY

Sir Edward Morris left by Saturday's express on his annual winter picnic. Those who haven't had a holiday for years—the firemen, for instance, who are obliged to exist on a pittance—will wish Sir Edward a pleasant voyage.

They hope he will not return for a long while, or he may increase the price of something else.

Why pay $100.00 a season for gasoline when $20.00 will run the famous FRASER engine on kerosene, with better results than on gasoline. FRANKLIN'S AGENCIES, LTD.—31

PERSONAL.

Mr. R. Moulton left by Saturday's express for Halifax.

Mr. A. Balfour, of the St. John's Meat Co., who has not been well of late, returns home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reid left by this morning's train for Carbonear, where they will spend a few days with friends.

Messrs. Reg. Harvey and A. Gosling, who have been touring Southern Europe and England on their motor bikes, are expected by the Digby tomorrow.

Mr. W. Ramsay, who spent several years in Western Canada, and has been visiting relatives in St. John's since Christmas, leaves on Wednesday for Winnipeg to resume work.

Miss Maud Wilcox, formerly of Brigus, who has been living at Sydney for the last couple of years, has been spending the winter with relatives in her native town, is at present visiting St. John's. She returns to Brigus Wednesday and by Thursday's express leaves for Sydney.

Mr. W. Oliver, of S. Milley's, who was accidentally shot New Year's Day, was at work this morning, the first time since the accident. Yesterday Dr. Cowperthwaite took a shot from his foot, and there are still half a dozen in the flesh. Mr. Rideout, who was accidentally shot at the time, is still far from well.

Mr. W. A. Rolfe, of Holmwood and Holmwood, London, of which Messrs. Crosbie & Co. are agents, who has been residing in St. John's the last six months, leaves for the old country by the Digby. Mr. Rolfe, during his residence here, has made many friends who are sorry that he is leaving. The best evidence of their esteem for him is their hope he will return.

Rev. C. V. Camplin Cogan, formerly Rector of St. Mary's Church of this city, with the Rev. Dr. Collisson, waited upon King Manuel and his Consort at Fulwell Park last month to present to them a miniature in ivory of Queen Amelie of Portugal, the gift of the parishioners of All Saints, Twickenham, on the occasion of their recent marriage.

King Manuel and Rev. Cogan are next door neighbours and they have become great friends.

Mrs. R. G. Rendell leaves by the Digby this week en route to the Old Country where she undergoes treatment. She has been ill all the winter and now her physicians advise her to go to England for a special course of treatment which it is hoped will prove satisfactory. Mrs. Rendell is a lady who is very well known in St. John's in every good work, and her many friends regret her illness. We trust that she will shortly return home fully restored to health. Miss Rendell accompanies her mother.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY AT THE CASINO THEATRE

Special arrangements have been made for the celebration of St. Patrick's Day at the Casino Theatre, and the management assure patrons a pleasant time. The feature film is the three-reel Irish love story "Colleen Bawn." Every one is familiar with the story, but it is new on canvas. No one should miss it. There is also another charming Irish drama entitled "The Butter Cup." This will be presented tomorrow also.

Saturday a cablegram was received from Mr. Kieley that he had secured the great story by the Kalem players, entitled "From the Manger to the Cross." This film is in demand all over Canada and the States, especially for the Lenten season. Mr. Kieley was particularly fortunate in securing it for St. John's. It will be put on at the Casino. There are five reels, and it is said to be a marvellous piece of work.

BISHOP JONES PREACHES AT ST. THOMAS' CHURCH

Subject of His Discourse was the Eternal Combat Between Good and Evil.—An Eloquent and Instructive Sermon.

His Lordship Bishop Jones was the preacher at St. Thomas' Church at Matins yesterday. His text was "When a strong man, armed, keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace. But when a stronger than he shall come upon him and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth the spoils."—XI Luke, 21, 22.

His Lordship delivered a brilliant discourse which made a lasting impression on the large congregation. In scholarly language the Bishop dwelt upon the combat between good and evil which goes on in every breast, and explained the text in such a manner as the majority of those present never heard before.

HOW ABOUT THIS!

The brighter side of a fire disaster is the self respect enjoyed by the man that is insured. Is he not glad of this fund in his hour of distress? Are you, my friend, thus protected? If not, Mr. Percie Johnson can insure you for so little that you won't feel it, and you are always sure of your claim being promptly paid.
