Adjourned Meeting Town Council

Petition From Bridgetown Ratepayers Re Streets— Action Taken Re Collecting Default Taxes— Campbell Street Extension Considered

Town Council met in adjourned session Friday evening, 26th instant. His Worship Mayor Fish in the chair. Aldermen present: Hayward, Mackay, McGrath, Miller, Scribner, Stables and Stuart. Absent—Ald. Kingstun.

Minutes of previous meetings of May 18th and 19th were read and confirmed.

Ald. Miller asked if Mr. Simon O'Donnell had tendered his resignation as policeman.

Ald. Hayward said he had been put on as a special constable and had quit.

The following petition from the residents of the upper end of the town was read:

Newcastle, N. B., May 25, 1916
To His Worship, the Mayor, and members of the Council of the Town of Newcastle.

Gentlemen—We, the undersigned ratepayers of the upper end of the town, wish to call your attention to the disgraceful condition of the Highway leading from the North West Bridge into the town.

It is, we presume, unnecessary to describe the condition of this road to you, as you are all, no doubt, familiar with its state, at times it is almost impassable in places and it is apparently the only portion of the town in which it is not thought advisable to make much expenditure of money, as it has been going from bad to worse for his last number of years, except for the free labor and materials which some of us have spent on it.

As the result of a big turn over in the vote in the parish of Moncton, Hon. P. G. Mahoney was defeated in Tuesday's contest by a majority of 67. As is already known the election was brought about by Mr. Mahoney resigning his seat to accept the portfolio of Commissioner of Public Works in the Provincial Administration. The campaign while being short has, perhaps, been the most bitter that has ever been experienced in Westmorland.

By the defeat of Hon. Mr. Mahoney the portfolio of Commissioner of Public Works will go to another country. It was impossible last night to obtain the complete returns from all the parishes, but the figures available will be found below:

On reviewing your tax list you will see that a large portion of your revenue is derived from this part of the town, which if not done a sufficient reason for more attention to this road, you as business men know that a large part of your merchants' country trade comes into town over it; hence, it is important to you as well that it should be attended to.

The depositing of a few cartloads of earth here and there along this road has been proved to be of no use, but an actual waste of money, and what it requires is a thorough repaving so that this condition will not be of annual occurrence.

Trusting that this petition will receive favorable consideration from you, we are

Yours sincerely,

CANADIAN CASUALTIES

Ottawa, May 20—The Canadian casualties to date number 23,110. This includes 3,464 killed in action, 1,432 died of wounds, 346 died of sickness and 14,768 wounded.

The increasing of the number of Canadian troops on the firing line and their being given the difficult positions near St. Etienne, have resulted in a considerable increase in casualties. They are no higher in proportion, however, than the British troops have had.

BULGARIANS OCCUPY GREEK TOWNS

On the 26th instant, the Bulgarians troops occupied the Greek forts of Rupel, Grogotin and Spatovo, and were advancing from Demir-Hisar towards Kavala. Athens newspapers say that the deputation of German and Bulgarian officers, in demanding the surrender of Fort Rupel, explained that its occupation was necessary to secure the Bulgarian left wing against an eventual Entente Allied attack.

Reception in Honor Of Bishop Barry

Entertainment and Banquet at Ho- tel Dieu, Chatham, in Honor of His Approaching Gol- den Jubilee

A reception and dinner were given His Lordship Bishop Barry on Victoria Day in the assembly hall of St. Michael's Academy, Chatham, by the sisters and pupils of the Hotel Dieu in anticipation of the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of Bishop Barry to the priesthood. His Lordship will be fifty years in orders on August 5th, but as that will be vacation time the earlier date had to be chosen. The reception was in the form of a musical cantata, composed by one of the local clergymen and set to music by one of the sisters, the rendition of which was pronounced by Bishop O'Leary of Charlottetown, one of the guests, as the finest amateur performance he had witnessed.

"FOOLING FATHER" A GRAND SUCCESS

Local Amateur Performance Drew Crowded House and Large Audience Were Well Pleased with Entertainment

The musical comedy, "Fooling Father," staged in the Opera House, by local talent, under the direction of A. H. Cole, last Friday night, was a decided success, making a great hit with a well filled house.

The acting was of a high order and was much appreciated.

Miss Bessie Crocker, as the old maid, who, after courting several years, finally landed Toddy Lane, acted her part with great acceptance. Miss Jean Robinson, as Priscilla, the runaway wife of Rev. Mr. Meekham, showed great adaptability for the stage.

Misses Annie Armstrong and Mary Lawlor carried their parts in an easy and graceful manner.

D. A. Jackson as the old merchant, got into many scrapes but got out of them with his usual ability.

D. S. and J. A. Craighan, in difficult roles, maintained the high reputation they had been previously accorded by Newcastle audiences.

Mr. Bailey was a success as a clergyman, and Jas. McMurray distinguished himself in Toddy the role of an Irishman.

The solos, duets and choruses were of the high standard, the audience expected.

The scenes were as follows:

ACT I
Mr. Graham, a retired merchant of a sportive disposition, goes to Bagdad on a business trip. Returning, he tells his family that he has promised the hand of his daughter to Weller the King of Bagdad. The boys, discovering that his trip was to San Francisco, decide to play a joke on him.

ACT II
Mr. Graham becomes a little mixed when along comes Priscilla. Mr. Meekham gets on the trail of his long lost Priscilla, and Jerusha gets on the trail of her new found Toddy, while poor Mr. Graham gets into all kinds of new troubles.

ACT III
Toddy is landed, Mr. Meekham finds who the King is and everything is all fixed up.

The New Brunswick Prohibition Act

The Strictest Ever Passed—Anybody Intoxicated Can Be Imprisoned Until He Tells Where He Got The Liquor

(By the Executive of Dominion Alliance, Fredericton.)

On December 10th, 1915, the representatives of the Alliance waited upon the Government, asking for the passing of a Prohibition Law for the whole province and to come into effect after a referendum vote.

The Government agreed to the request of the Alliance to enact a Prohibition Law and to take the Alliance into its confidence in the preparation of the same.

A Committee of seven members of the Alliance were appointed to confer with the counsel appointed by the Government to draft the bill.

On a number of occasions the committee met to consider the different sections of the bill, and gave to it lengthened and careful consideration.

With the exception of a few sections the bill met with the hearty approval of the committee.

We are of the opinion that the Act passed by the Legislature is one of the best Anti-Liquor Laws known to your committee and we believe it properly worked will accomplish the purpose in view.

The members of the Government from the beginning of the negotiations have in a generous and straightforward way met most of the wishes of the committee and carried out the promises made in regard to the bill.

The consultations with the Council appointed to draft the bill and also with members of the Govern-

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-fives"

St. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.
"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by 'Fruit-a-fives.' I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of 'Fruit-a-fives' and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-fives.'

Lessening Drink Evil in Britain

Figures Show Striking Success of Central Board of Control

London, May 22.—The astonishing success of the central board in reducing the drink evil in England, Scotland and Wales since the board's inauguration in June 1915, is strikingly shown in the second report made by its chairman Lord Abernethy. The report shows that the efforts of the board have resulted in a reduction of the average weekly number of convictions for drunkenness in England and Wales from 2,024 in 1914 to an average of 940 for last March, the latest month for which figures are available. In Scotland, the average has been reduced from 1,424 in 1914 to 794 for March. The figures for London, where a "no treating" order went into effect on October 11, 1915, are of particular interest. The weekly average of convictions for the metropolitan district in 1914, was 1,301. This was reduced to 1,008 for the four weeks prior to October 11, and in the succeeding month dropped to 718. Reductions on a similar scale were shown in the great industrial centres of Liverpool, Birmingham and Manchester.

France Bans Luxuries

Importation of Many Articles That Can be Done Without is Forbidden

In accordance with a recent law the government has just prohibited the importation of a long list of articles, many of which come from the United States and England. Among the importations prohibited in the degree are automobile chassis, with or without motor or body, automobile each work and other automobile parts, parts of photographic apparatus; fresh and preserved fruits, perfumery and soap or other perfumed articles, porcelain, glass crystal wares, crockery, cotton hosiery, gloves, undressed skins, imitation jewelry and musical instruments. A detailed list of the prohibited articles covers two pages in the Official Journal.

MIGHTY BEACONS FOR AIR SHIPS

One difficulty in air ship is to secure safe landing. No amount of skill on the part of the aviator can make a safe landing where the character of the country is perfectly barren of fair sized open or clear spaces. Even with an abundance of such spaces, it takes considerable skill to make a safe landing in broad daylight, but what about landing safely in the black of night? Here, again, this war has proved necessity the mother of invention, and a way has been devised for making a safe landing from any height in the blackest night. The aviators all know the exact locations of the various large open stretches or "parks" where the aeroplanes are kept. For night landing, each of these fields is provided with a great number of powerful lights placed in holes in the ground and having strong reflectors to direct the light straight into the air. These lights are all arranged according to a given chart and all aviators are provided with these charts. So, when an aviator comes above one of these fields at night he can simply steer his course by the lights to a safe landing, just as the navigating officer of a ship steers his boat by the buoy and light houses. This is another valuable invention resulting from the war and of great use in time of peace.

$8,000,000,000 Wasted Each Year Buying Unnecessary Articles

(Buffalo Express)
American extravagance has grown to such an extent that the American Bankers' Association has decided to make a nation-wide campaign for thrift. The executive committee has estimated that needless expenditures in the United States have reached a yearly total of $8,000,000,000. The Bankers' Association purposes to awaken Americans to a realization of the value of money. It is a gigantic task, but the bankers are best qualified to undertake it. Those who cry out against enormous budgets of European nations should study the figures prepared by the Bankers' Association. These show that extravagant expenditures in the United States annually reach an aggregate of about twice as much as the combined budgets (in normal times) of Great Britain and Germany.

Lieut. R. K. Shives Displayed Great Courage and Skill

Lieut. R. K. Shives, of Campbellton, who has been with the aviation corps in France and was wounded, as before reported, showed great pluck and skill in the affair in which he was injured. He had gone twelve miles over the German lines when the enemy "got" him with a shot and he was compelled to retreat. This he did successfully, taking his machine back to the aerodrome, a distance of twenty-five miles. At last accounts Lieut. Shives was in hospital in England and while he is recovering it was expected he would not be able to return to the front for two months.

BREED MORE CATTLE

A very competent authority estimates that, having reference to last year's trade, average prices current for beef on the Smithfield market in London, England, for 1915, show an increase of 40%, since the outbreak of the war. The last English produce report to hand quotes Irish beef at 19 to 20c per lb. for sides wholesale and English at 20 to 21c per lb. as against a price of 15½ to 16½c for Irish and 15½ to 16½c for English, during the last week in December 1915. It further quotes South American chilled fore-quarters at 16½c and hind quarters at 15c, as against 12½ and 16c respectively for fore-quarters and hind-quarters in December. "Supplies of frozen beef are practically exhausted, only a few small odd lots of bull beef being obtainable. These, in view of the strong demand ruling for all classes, realize high prices. The absence of frozen supplies has again forced buyers on to the chilled article, with the result that values have advanced sharply."

One warning should be given. We must emphasize quality before quantity. On the British market, Canadian beef does not equal in quality the beef exported from United States or from the Argentine. Unless we can improve our cattle, both as regards quality and as regards finish, we need not expect to be able to effect sales at Smithfield but shall be obliged to seek a market in France or Italy. Even our best grass fed cattle, when offered on the Chicago market last year, yielded disappointing returns. In Canada there is any number of good beef cows but we can never develop a beef trade by breeding these to dairy bulls, to grade bulls, or even to pure bred bulls of inferior type. A really good pure bred sire is an asset to any community. He should have the patronage of all the farmers in the neighborhood. The maintenance or use of a scrub bull under the present circumstances, should be deemed an unprofitable act.

One other non-progressive practice should be eliminated, or, at least, superseded by a better one. Reference is to the sale and purchase of stocker and feeder cattle, whether for finishing in the stable or on grass. In the case of the farmer who sells this practice, unless in exceptional circumstances, is a mistaken one. He should meet and finish his own stock. On the part of the farmer who buys, a speculative and non-productive enterprise is continued and encouraged, which has neither an economic nor a practical argument in its favour. He should grow his own feeders, or a part of them at least. Trading of this nature has done as much as any other one factor to destroy the beef cattle industry in many parts of Canada. It can only be built up by a change of system. A good herd of milking beef cows will bring in a return as regular as the change of the seasons. If labour is not available to milk all of them, two calves may be put on a single cow, possibly followed by a third, and better calves reared than if fed by hand. The feeding of these calves until fit for market, whether as baby beef or as butcher or export stock, will insure a steadier income than can possibly be obtained by the continuance of the old methods. No practice will so tend to conserve female stock nor so speedily and steadily add to our available supply of beef.

How a Canadian Won the D. C. M. Nine soldiers returned from the war, landed in St. John last week. They were:—Sgt. Major Lamb, St. John; Sgt. Rigby, St. Andrews; and Privates Cobert and Dugay, Campbellton, Greenwood, Longville, O'Keefe, Macadam, Simmonds, Fredericton; McDougall, Pictou; and J. W. Roberts, Chipman. The latter won the D. C. M. On Nov. 15th, 1915 he volunteered to find a German sniper. He climbed over the parapet and crawled under the barbed wire entanglements into "No Man's Land," and just 12 feet from him was the German. Both fired at the same time. Pte. Robert's bullet went through the German's heart, while the latter's bullet passed through Robert's left hand and right arm. He managed to crawl back into the trenches although suffering intense pain, and Major Belyea, who has since been killed, ordered two men to help him back to the clearing station. Private Roberts also picked off a bomb thrower not more than thirteen feet from the trench of the 26th Battalion, and saved the lives of at least fifty men. All the returned heroes were given reception.

Stinging Neuralgia The Trouble Due to Nerves Starved for Lack of Good Blood An eminent medical writer has said that "neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for better blood." The one great symptom of this trouble is pain, fierce, stabbing pain, that almost drives the sufferer frantic. The one cause is poor blood; the only cure is to enrich the blood. Heat applied to the inflamed nerves will give relief, but does not cure. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills furnish the blood all the needed elements, and the blood conveys them to the nerves. The only way of getting food of medicine to the nerves is through the blood, and the only way to enrich the blood is through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In this way neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve disorders are promptly cured, and the whole system benefited and strengthened. Mrs. M. Glessou, R. R. No. 1, Uxbridge, Ont., who was a great sufferer from neuralgia, says: "I suffered intensely from neuralgia for four years. My blood was thin and I was completely run down. I suffered intense pain all the time. At different times I consulted three doctors, but their treatment did no more than give me temporary relief. Then I tried different medicines, but the result was the same—they seemed no good in my case. I was growing steadily worse, and finally could not leave the house nor do a bit of work. The last doctor I consulted could do nothing for me but give me morphine tablets to ease the pain, and by this time I had about resigned myself to a life of pain. Then one of Dr. Williams' almanacs came to our house and I read of similar cases cured through the use of Pink Pills. I got three boxes and before they were all gone the pain began to decrease, and I began to have an appetite. By the time I had taken six boxes I was again a well woman and my neighbors could hardly realize that such a change could be made in so short a time. Later I was bothered with eczema and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me. I have found these Pills worth their weight in gold and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are ailing." You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Baseball on the 24th The Soldiers of D. Co. 132nd, Bathurst and the Wireless team played afternoon and evening games on the 24th. Bathurst won the afternoon game 7-5, after a very close fight. The two batteries were: Bathurst—Carleton, Woodford and DeGrace; Wireless—Doak and Aravis. The evening game ended in the first half of the third inning, the two teams falling out. One of the Wireless players, who had been hit for the third time in the two games, with a pitched ball, threw his hat at the Bathurst pitcher. As a result of the altercation, the Bathurst team left the field and refused to play the remainder of the game. Doak and Woodford were the opposing pitchers.

Brakeman Met With a Painful Accident Nelson Rushton, a brakeman on the Government Railway, was quite badly injured at the Ford motor works in St. John, Tuesday evening, last week. Rushton was at work between a platform and a car at the Ford siding when the cars were shunted. He was caught between the platform and a flat car and his legs were badly jammed. County Policeman Saunders notified Dr. Dunlop who made a very quick response to the call. On examination it was found that although quite badly injured no bones were broken. After being attended to by Dr. Dunlop the injured man placed in his automobile and conveyed him to the General Hospital. A report from the hospital was to the effect that Rushton was progressing favorably and it is expected will be about again in a short time. Mr. Rushton once lived in Newcastle. He now belongs to Moncton.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty home wedding took place this morning at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McLeod, Rupert St., when their eldest daughter, Helen, was united in marriage to Lieut. R. G. McKay, formerly connected with the Amherst Foundry Company but lately attached to the 193rd Battalion. Rev. E. H. Ramsay, pastor of St. Stephen's church, of which the bride is an active member, performed the ceremony in the presence of a limited number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was unattended and was becomingly gowned in a travelling suit of midnight blue with hat to match. The wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss Christiania McLeod, cousin of the bride. The rooms were beautifully decorated with ferns and carnations and after the ceremony they were accompanied by the 193rd Band to the Maritime express, where E. Company of the 193rd was lined up at the station and gave a very cheering salute to Lieut. McKay and his charming bride. A large number were at the train to witness their departure. The bride was one of our most popular brides and has been on the Bank of Nova Scotia staff for some years. Among the out-of-town guests that were present at the wedding were, the grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bell of Newcastle; A. B. Copp, M. P. and Mrs. Copp of Sackville; Everett McKay, brother of the groom, St. John; also Miss Christiania McLeod and Miss Marjorie Matheson of Port Elgin, cousins of the bride.—Amherst News.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana.—"My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. Wm. GREEN, 322 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana. There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy. If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

DAYLIGHT SAVING GAINS FRIENDS

Rome, May 29—The daylight saving scheme has been adopted in Rome. An official decree just published, orders that the clocks be advanced one hour, beginning at midnight on June 3.

If the Minister is coming to dinner on Sunday you'll want everything you bake to be particularly good. This is your opportunity to prove the quality of "Beaver" Flour. This famous blended flour never varies in strength, quality and flavor—it is the same today, next week, next month, next year—because the wheats, from which it is ground, are always blended in exactly the same proportions. Try it—your grocer should have it. DEALERS—Write us for prices on Feed, 178 Course Grains and Cereals. The T. H. Taylor Co. Limited, Chatham, Ont.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

The decision of the British Government not to institute any reprisals on German prisoners in return for the brutal treatment of the British prisoners receiving in Germany, is perhaps the wisest that could have been come to under the circumstances, and will be generally approved.

There can be no doubt that if the British were to ill-treat their prisoners, the Germans would only increase the ill-treatment of the prisoners they have. This is shown pretty conclusively by the fact that they promptly placed a number of British officers in solitary confinement in a public goal, when the British government showed a disposition to treat with more severity, submarine commanders caught sinking or attempting to sink unarmed passenger liners.

The argument that the British should adopt a policy of reprisals because the Germans would do so, may appeal to some people, but it is not well founded. The Allies are fighting for an ideal, and they cannot afford to besmirch their cause with methods which are against the laws of humanity. To accept that argument would be to stultify the whole cause for which the Allied Nations are fighting so magnificently.

AMERICAN MAILS

The protest by President Wilson against the action of the British and French governments in holding up the American mails need not, and in all probability will not, cause any perturbation in those governments. It will be recognized that the President had to take some such course, if only to save his face with his own people.

While the sympathies of the vast majority of the American people are strongly pro-Ally, it must not be forgotten that there are over three millions of Germans in the country who are straining their every nerve to injure and defeat the Allied cause.

the President appealing to precedent, for so many precedents in international law have been disregarded in the present war, particularly by Germany, that an entirely new set will be needed when the war is over.

Town Council

Ald. McGrath thought it would not be wise to risk making some other street crooked by making this one straight. Ald. Stables said that the committee had that matter under consideration.

Ald. Miller thought that the property owner should shoulder at least part of the expense. The change would increase the value of Thompson's property. If necessary, let the Council pay it all, but Mr. Thompson should pay part.

Ald. Stables said that Mr. Thompson would have a corner lot anyway, and did not care whether his house was moved or not. The prospective street back of the jail under consideration, and nothing definite would be done until next council.

Ald. Miller thought the matter of the county having closed in a public street to the north of the jail, should be considered by the Public Works Committee.

The Mayor agreed that this was a good suggestion. Ald. Hayward's motion was carried. Ald. McGrath brought up the matter of appointing a Tax Collector.

He read the application of John MacAllister for the position. This and the application of Clement Ryan and John H. Ashford had been before the Finance Committee, and he had been authorized by the Committee to recommend that John H. Ashford be appointed, and that the salary of the Collector be $30 a month and 5 per cent. of all the default taxes collected.

AMAZON ROOFING

HERE is a ready and easy-to-lay roofing that withstands all the elements and wears indefinitely. No better "rubber roofing" could be made. It consists of a strong, fibrous, all-wool felt thoroughly saturated with non-volatile compounds. It is the high quality of this felt and the skill of saturation that make our roofings supreme. They never dry out or run. You will see this if you try Amazon Roofing.

Real Roofing Insurance Amazon on your steep-roofed buildings means real roofing insurance. It means, first and last, the best protection against wind and weather, that you can get. Wherever you have steep roofs, use Amazon. It will pay you. Made in three different weights to meet all roofing requirements. We carry them all and can fill your order promptly. Do not neglect your roof. Fix them once for all with Amazon. Carriage-Paterson Mfg. Co., Limited, Halifax, N. S., John, N. S., Sydney, N. S.

A Busy Maritime Industry

One of the very busiest industries in the Maritime Provinces at the present time is the Carritte-Paterson Mfg. Co., which has factories at Halifax and Sydney. Their principal product is roofing material, such as Two and Three Ply Roofing, Mineral Surface Roofing, Rubber Roofing, and Tar & Gravel Roofing. They also specialize on coal tar products and make the well known "Parvia" for street paving. One of the Carritte-Paterson by products is Coal Tar Creosote Oil, the highest class wood preservative known. And in connection with this article it is interesting to learn that in the United States its sale for preserving timber is larger, measured by gallons, at the present time than the sale of gasoline for motive power which is being so much discussed by the press and public owing to the increase in cost. The use of Coal Tar Creosote Oil in Canada is becoming larger each year. This oil is used as a base in the manufacture of the Velux Shingle Stains now so popular in all parts of this country. Other products of the Carritte-Paterson factories are Carbonol, a disinfectant; Creonold, a cow spray; and Everjet carbon paint for wood and metal protection. These products are sold by the hardware and general store trade throughout the provinces and special literature regarding them will be sent on application to the Carritte-Paterson Mfg. Co., Ltd., St. John, Halifax and Sydney.

Forty-Second Quarterly Meeting

Kent-Northumberland Sons of Temperance Hold a Successful Convention at Harcourt--A Membership of 723 Reported

The 42nd quarterly session of Kent-Northumberland District Division, Sons of Temperance, organized September, 1915, met in Harcourt Temperance Hall, May 24th. Following officers and delegates were present: Harcourt Division—Rev. R. H. Stavert, (Norton), D.W.P.; Hagen Wylie, Cond.; L. J. Wathen, Miss Una Baxter.

Gangerville—H. W. B. Smith, District Treasurer; Mrs. H. W. B. Smith, Mrs. J. S. Jones and Misses Augusta MacArthur and Dorothy Smith.

Mundeville—Isaac N. Atkinson, D. O. S.; Earl Glenross, and Misses Gladys Lawson and Mary Carruthers. Newcastle—Ald. H. H. Stuart, District Scribe.

Douglasville—H. C. Stothart, D. W. A.; R. H. Jessiman, and Miss Lillian Atkinson.

Whitneyville—Misses Roberta Adams and Millie Forsythe. Redbank—Misses A. V. Johnston and George H. Tozer.

Burnt Church—Mrs. L. A. Murray, and Misses Frances M. Anderson, Helen Loggie and Rachael Loggie.

R. H. Jessiman was appointed chaplain pro tem.

Among the visitors were: Grangerville—Havelock J. Smith, Raymond Smith.

Harcourt—Miss Jean Livingstone and others.

Rev. R. H. Stavert presided. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

D. W. P.'s Report

The D.W.P. reported the temperance cause moving on satisfactorily or the whole. Still the British Empire as compared with Russia and France, had cause to be ashamed. Britain had not awakened as she should or as she would have to win the war. In America there was great progress. A number of states had lately gone dry, and the prospects of a saloonless U. S. A. were good. New Brunswick had one of the best prohibition acts to be found in Canada. In license counties it will not be effective until May next, but in Scott Act counties it comes into effect as soon as the Scott Act is repealed. Kings county is preparing to move for repeal at once. On the whole, temperance workers have no cause to feel discouraged. Prohibition was now one of the most popular questions of the day. Our country was waking up as never before, and he hoped soon to see it saloonless.

The D. W. P.'s report was received and adopted.

Net gain of 29 during quarter. The Divisions at Chatham, New Jersey and Centre Napan continue dormant, and that of Millerton has not reported.

The enforcement of the C. T. A. in Newcastle under Inspector W. H. Finley continues to improve. Since our last district division, several very large seizures of liquor have been made, and most of the convictions appealed to the supreme court have been decided in the Temperance people's favor, and the rest are under consideration by the Judges, none having been lost. The Newcastle town elections last month, which went by acclamation, again resulted in favor of strict enforcement of all laws against the liquor traffic, and the prospects of the illegal liquor seller in Newcastle are daily proving darker.

The Newcastle Town Improvement League, a strong temperance organization, in the founding of which the

FOR HEADACHES, BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION

Nearly all our minor ailments, and many of the serious ones, too, are traceable to some disorder of the stomach, liver, and bowels. If you wish to avoid the miseries of indigestion, acidity, heartburn, flatulence, headaches, constipation, and a host of other distressing ailments, you must see to it that your stomach, liver and bowels are equal to the work they have to do. It is a simple matter to take 30 drops of Mother Seigel's Syrup daily, after meals, yet thousands of former sufferers have banished indigestion, biliousness, constipation, and all their distressing consequences in just this simple way. Profit by their experience. As a digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seigel's Syrup is unsurpassed.

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP.

The District Division very feelingly expressed their sympathy with Rev. R. H. Stavert and George N. Clarke in the recent death of the former's sister and the latter's wife. After discussion of various routine matters the meeting adjourned to re-assemble at Burnt Church on Wednesday afternoon, July 19th next.

A well attended public meeting was held in the evening. Good music was provided. The program was as follows:

Chorus—Rescue the Perishing

Remarks by Chairman—Rev. R. H. Stavert

Address of Welcome—L. J. Wathen, J. P.

Reply—H. H. Stuart

Address and Reading—R. H. Jessiman

Solo—Scots Wha Hae—Rev. J. W. McKay

Address—H. W. B. Smith

Reading—My Courting Experience—Miss Millie Forsythe

Chorus—Keep the Home Fires Burning

Reading—How Old Mose Counted the Eggs—H. C. Stothart

Solo—Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight—Rev. R. H. Stavert

Reading—For King and Country—Miss Dorothy Smith

Duet—I've Been to the Barroom, Eddie—Misses Greta Barnes and Hilda Baxter.

Address—Rev. R. H. Stavert

Collection—$5.00.

God Save the King.

The District Division was one of the best ever held.

The people of Harcourt were warmly thanked for the cordial way in which they entertained the visiting delegates.

MAY SHUT OUT FOOD FOR POLES

The Hague, May 26—It is declared here on information from authoritative German sources that there is not the slightest chance that Germany will accept the British stipulations regarding the plan to feed the civilian population of Poland through an American commission.

It is therefore not considered likely that any relief for the Polish people will be accomplished this year, as further negotiations would result in the loss of so much time that no food could reach the country before October, when the harvest will become available.

KILLED IN A MILL

G. CAVERTI, an Italian employed at the wood room of the Bathurst Lumber Co's pulp mill, was fatally hurt last Wednesday when a board with which he was endeavoring to change a moving belt, broke, and one piece of the board was vung violently, striking him and causing death. He leaves a widow and small family in Italy.

THE LATEST IN ALFALFA TO KILL FLIES IN HOUSES

The old joke is a classic, that the man fed silage to everything on the place, including the hired girl. But silage has to take a place back in the farthest corner of the back fifty when alfalfa comes along.

Alfalfa boosters are read enthusiasts; they have fed it as hay, and they have fed it ground up as a meal—but the hired girl could not get in on it at all; it was only for the stock. Now we are to have the chance of eating alfalfa, it seems, just the same as bosey does. An alfalfa flour has been produced in Colorado, and, blended with what flour is used in cooking.

Food classes in the Colorado Agricultural College have been working with the xdr and have had very satisfactory results, substituting alfalfa for wheat flour in muffins, biscuits, bread and cake. There is a slight characteristic flavor that is objectionable to some people, but in most cases it is a very satisfactory substitute.

London, May 29—(The amending bill to the British North America Act, which extends the life of the Canadian parliament for a year, and which passed the House of Commons almost unnoticed, as a inconspicuous measure, will come before the House of Lords on Tuesday.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When bowels, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 60-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

"SANFORD QUEST, CRIMINOLOGIST."

The young man from the West had arrived in New York only that afternoon, and his cousin, town born and bred, had already embarked upon the task of showing him the great city. They occupied a table in a somewhat insignificant corner of one of New York's most famous roof garden restaurants. The place was crowded with diners. There were many notable faces to be noted out. The town young man was very busy.

"Tell me," the country cousin inquired, "who is the man at a table by himself? The waiters speak to him as though he were a little god. Is he a millionaire, a judge, or what?"

"You're in luck, Alfred," the New Yorker declared. "That's the most interesting man in New York—one of the most interesting in the world. That's Sanford Quest."

"Who is he?"

"Sanford Quest is the greatest master in criminology the world has ever known. He is a magician, a scientist, the Pierpont Morgan of his profession."

"Say, do you mean that he is a detective?"

"Yes," he said simply, "you can call him that—just in the same way that you could call Napoleon a soldier or Lincoln a statesman. He is a detective, if you like to call him that, the master detective in the world."

When Sanford Quest entered his house an hour later he glanced into two of the rooms on the ground floor in which telegraph and telephone operators sat at their instruments. Then, by means of a small lift, he ascended to the top story and entered a large apartment wrapped in gloom until, as he crossed the threshold, he touched the switches of the electric lights. One realized then that this was a man of taste. Quest drew up an easy chair to the wide-fung window, touching a bell as he crossed the room. In a few moments the door was opened and closed noiselessly. A young woman entered with a bundle of papers.

The criminologist glanced through the papers quickly. "No further inquiries, Laura."

She left the room almost noiselessly.

"THE TENEMENT HOUSE MYSTERY."

CHAPTER I.

"This habit of becoming late for breakfast," Lady Ashleigh remarked, as she sat down the coffee pot, "is growing upon your father. Any news, dear?"

Ella glanced up from a pile of correspondence through which she had been looking a little negligently.

"None at all, mother. My correspondence is about the usual sort of rubbish—invitations and gossip. Such a lot of invitations, by the way."

"At your age," Lady Ashleigh declared, "that is the sort of correspondence which you should find interesting."

"You know I am not like that, mother," she protested. "My music is really the only part of life which absolutely appeals to me. Oh, why doesn't Darcy make up his mind and let father know, as he promised? . . . Here comes daddy."

Lord Ashleigh loitered for a moment to raise the covers from the dishes upon a side table. Afterwards he seated himself at the table.

"I heard this morning," he said, "from your friend Delaney. He went into the matter very fully. The substance of it is that for the first year of your musical training he advises New York."

"I have not finished yet. This cablegram," he went on, drawing a little slip of blue paper from his pocket, "was brought to me this morning."

He smoothed it out before him and read:

To Lord Ashleigh, Hamble House, Dorset, England: I find a magnificent program arranged for at Metropolitan Opera house this year. Have taken box for your daughter, engaged the best professor in the world, and secured an apartment at the Leland, our most select and comfortable residential hotel. Understand your brother is still in South America, returning early spring, but will do our best to make your daughter's year of study as pleasant as possible. Advise her sail on Saturday by Muretanka.

"On Saturday?" Ella almost screamed.

"I shall now," Lord Ashleigh said, "leave you to talk over and discuss this matter for the rest of the day. At dinner time tonight you can tell me your decision, or rather we will discuss it together."

CHAPTER II.

"I am to take it, I believe," Lord Ashleigh began after dinner that evening, "that you have finally decided, Ella, to embrace our friend Delaney's suggestion and to leave us Saturday?"

"If you please," Ella murmured, with glowing eyes.

"You will take your own maid with you, of course," Lord Ashleigh continued. "Lenora is a good girl and I am sure she will look after you quite well, but I have decided to supplement Lenora's surveillance over your comfort by sending with you, also, a sort of courier and general attendant—whom do you think? Well, Macdougall. He has lived in New York for some years, and you will doubtless find this a great advantage, Ella."

Ella glanced over her shoulder at the two servants who were standing discreetly in the background. Her eyes rested upon the pale, expressionless face of the man who during the last few years had enjoyed her father's confidence.

For a moment a queer sense of apprehension troubled her. Was it true, she wondered, that she did not like the man? She banished the thought almost as soon as it was conceived.

"You are spilling tea, daddy," Ella sighed.

"If you think so now," he remarked, "I do not know what you will say to me presently."

He laid upon the table a very familiar morocco case, stamped with a coronet.

"Our diamonds!" Ella exclaimed. "The Ashleigh diamonds!"

The necklace lay exposed to view, the wonderful stones flashing in the subdued light.

"In New York," Lord Ashleigh continued, "it is the custom to wear jewelry in public more, even, than in this country. Allow me!"

He leaned forward. With long, capable fingers he fastened the necklace around his daughter's neck.

"It is our farewell present to you," Lord Ashleigh declared.

Ella, impelled by some curious impulse which she could not quite understand, glanced quickly around to where the manservant was standing. For once she saw something besides

There seemed to be nothing at all original in the method pursued by the great criminologist when confronted with this tableau of death and robbery. His remarks to the inspector were few and perfunctory. He asked only a few languid questions of Macdougall and Lenora, who were summoned to his presence now.

Macdougall then turned to leave the room. Lenora was about to follow, but Quest signed to her to remain.

"I should like to have a little conversation with you about your mission," he said to her pleasantly. "If you don't mind, I will ask you to accompany me in my car. I will send the man back with you."

They descended in the lift together and Quest handed the girl into his car. They drove quickly through the silent streets.

In a few minutes Lenora was installed in an easy chair in Quest's sitting-room.

"Lean back and make yourself comfortable," Quest invited, as he took a chair opposite to her. "I must just look through the papers for a moment. The girl did as she was told. She opened her coat. The room was delightfully warm, almost overheated. A sense of rest crept over her. She was conscious that Quest had laid down the letters which he had been pretending to read. His eyes were fixed upon her. There was a queer new feeling creeping through her veins.

Quest's voice broke an unnatural silence.

"You are anxious to telephone someone," he said. "You looked at both the booths as we came through the hotel. Then you remembered, I think, that he would not be there yet. Telephone now. The telephone is in my right hand. You are going to my number." She obeyed almost at once.

"Number 700, New York city."

"You will ask," Quest continued, "whether he is all right whether the jewels are safe."

There was a brief silence then the girl's voice came from the other booth. "Are you there, James? . . . Yes, I am Lenora. Are you safe? Have you the jewels? . . . Where? . . . You are sure that you are safe? . . . No, nothing fresh has happened."

"You are at the hotel," Quest said softly. "You are going to his mirror."

"I cannot sleep," she continued. "I am coming to you."

She set down the receiver. Quest leaned a little more closely over her.

"You know where the jewels are hidden," he said to her. "The jewels are in the box which the chauffeur brought here. Behind her came maid, Lenora, and Macdougall, who had been riding on the box with the chauffeur. He paused for a moment to wipe the snow from his clothes as Ella crossed the hall to the left. Lenora turned toward him. He whispered something in her ear. For a moment she shook. Then she turned away and followed her mistress upstairs.

Arrived in her apartment, Ella threw herself with a little sigh of content into a big easy-chair before the fire and gave herself up for a few moments to reverie.

A log stirred upon the fire. She leaned forward lazily to replace it when she stopped short. Exactly opposite to her was a door which opened on to a back hall. It was used only by the servants. Just as she was in the act of leaning forward Ella became conscious of a curious hallucination.

"Lenora, come here at once."

The maid hurried in from the next room. Ella pointed to the door.

"Lenora, look outside. See if anyone is on that landing. I fancied that the door opened."

Lenora crossed the room and tried the handle. Then she turned towards her mistress in triumph.

"It is locked, my lady," she reported.

"Go down and ask Macdougall to come up. I am going to have this thing explained."

Something of her mistress' agitation seemed to have become communicated to Lenora.

She walked quickly to the back part of the hotel and ascended to the wing in which the servants' quarters were situated. Here she made her way along a corridor until she reached Macdougall's room. She knocked, and Macdougall opened the door. She was startled again. There was no answer. She tried the door and found it was locked. Then she returned to the lift and descended once more to the floor upon which her mistress' apartments were situated. She opened the door of the suite without knocking. She turned at once to the sitting room, and found it empty. A door in the background opened. A the perfect automaton. His eyes, instead of being fixed at the back of his mistress' chair, were simply riveted upon the stoness. A queer little feeling of uneasiness distinguished Ella for the moment. It passed, however, as in slicing away her attention was once more attracted by the sparkle of the jewels upon her bosom.

CHAPTER III.

The streets of New York were covered with a thin, powdery snow as the very luxurious car of Mrs. Delaney drew up outside the front of the Leland hotel, a little after midnight. Ella leaned over and kissed her hostess.

"Thank you, dear, ever so much, for your delightful dinner," she exclaimed, "and for bringing me home. As for the music, well, I can't talk about it. I am just going upstairs into my room to sit and think."

The car rolled off. Ella, a large umbrella held over her head by the doorkeeper, stepped up the little strip of steps which led into the softly warmed hall of the Leland. Behind her came maid, Lenora, and Macdougall, who had been riding on the box with the chauffeur. He paused for a moment to wipe the snow from his clothes as Ella crossed the hall to the left. Lenora turned toward him. He whispered something in her ear. For a moment she shook. Then she turned away and followed her mistress upstairs.

They together carried the sleeping girl out of the room into a larger apartment. A single electric light was burning on the top of a square mirror fixed upon an easel. Towards this they carried the girl and laid her in an easy chair almost opposite to it.

"The battery is just on the left," Laura whispered.

Quest nodded.

"Give me the band."

She turned away for a moment and disappeared in the shadows. When she returned, she carried a curved band of flexible steel. Quest took it from her, attached it by means of a coil of wire to the battery, and with firm, soft fingers slipped it on to Lenora's forehead. Then he stepped back.

"She's a subject, Laura—I'm sure of it! Now for our great experiment!"

They watched Lenora intently.

"Lenora," Quest said, slowly and firmly, "your mind is full of one subject. You see your mistress in her chair by the fireside. She is toying with her diamonds. Look again. She lies there dead! Who is it entered the room? Lenora! Look! Look! Gaze into that mirror. What do you see there?"

The girl's eyes had opened. They were fixed now upon the mirror—dilated, full of unholy things.

"By order, Lenora," he muttered, "let your own breath labor. It is there in your brain! Look!"

For a single second the smooth surface of the mirror was obscured. A room crept dimly like a picture into being, a fire upon the hearth, a girl leaning back in her chair. A door in the background opened. A alone out. He crept nearer to the girl—his eyes fixed upon the diamonds, a thin, silken cord twisted round his wrist. Suddenly she saw him—too late! His hand was upon her lips, his face seemed to start almost from the mirror—then blackness!

Lenora was her knees by her mistress' side. Ella was still lying in the easy-chair in which she had been seated, but her head was thrown back in an unnatural fashion. There was a red mark just across her throat.

Lenora shrieked. "She's fainted!"

And the diamonds—the diamonds have gone!

A doctor, hurriedly summoned, had just completed a hasty examination when a police inspector, followed by a detective, entered.

"This is your affair, gentlemen, not mine," the doctor said gravely. "The young lady is dead. She has been cruelly strangled within the last five or ten minutes."

The inspector made a careful examination of the room.

"Tell me," he inquired, "is this the young lady who owned the wonderful Ashleigh diamonds?"

"They've gone!" Lenora shrieked. "They've been stolen! She was wearing them when I left the room!"

The inspector turned to the telephone.

"Mr. Marshall," he said, "I am afraid this will be a difficult affair. I am going to take the liberty of calling in an expert. That you, exchange? I want number seven, New York city—Mr. Sanford Quest."

CHAPTER VI.

Sanford Quest and Lenora stood side by side upon the steps of the courthouse, waiting for the automobile, which had become momentarily entangled in a string of vehicles. A little crowd of people were elbowing their way out on to the sidewalk. The faces of most of them were still shadowed by the three hours of tense drama from which they had just emerged. Quest, who had lit a cigar, watched them curiously.

"No need to go into court," he remarked. "I could have told you, from the look of these people, that Macdougall had escaped the death sentence. They have paid their money—or rather their time, and they have been cheated of the one supreme thrill."

"Imprisonment for life seems terrible enough," Lenora whispered, shuddering towards him.

"Can't see the sense of keeping such a man alive myself," Quest declared, with purposeful brutality. "It was a cruel murder, fiendishly committed."

They were on the point of crossing the pavement toward the automobile when Quest felt a touch upon his shoulder. He turned and found Lord Ashleigh standing by his side. Quest glanced towards Lenora.

"Run and get in the car," he whispered. "I will be there in a moment."

"I would not have stopped you just now, Mr. Quest," said Lord Ashleigh, "but my brother is very anxious to renew his acquaintance with you. I think you met years ago."

Sanford Quest held out his hand to the man who had been standing a little in the background. Lord Ashleigh turned towards him.

"This is Mr. Quest, Edgar. You may remember my brother—Professor Ashleigh—as a man of science, Quest? He has just returned from South America."

The two shook hands, curiously diverse in type, in expression, in all the appurtenances of manhood.

"I am very proud to make your acquaintance again, professor," Quest said. "Glad to know, too, that you hadn't forgotten me."

"My dear sir," the professor declared, as he released the other's hand with seeming reluctance, "I have thought about you many times. Your doings have always been of interest to me."

"I am sorry," Quest remarked, "that our first meeting here should be under such distressing circumstances!"

The professor nodded gravely.

"If you'll excuse me, professor," said Quest, "I think I must be getting along. We shall meet again, I trust."

"One moment," the professor begged, eagerly. "Tell me, Mr. Quest—I want your honest opinion. What do you think of my ape?"

"Of your what?" Quest inquired dubiously.

"Of my anthropoid ape which I have just sent to the museum. You know my claim? But perhaps you would prefer to postpone your final decision until after you have examined the skeleton itself."

A light broke in upon the criminologist.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "For the moment, professor, I couldn't follow you. You are talking about the skeleton of the ape which you brought home from South America, and which you have presented to the museum here?"

"Naturally," the professor assented, with mild surprise. "To what else? I am stating my case, Mr. Quest, in the North American Review next month; I may tell you, however, as a fellow scientist, the great and absolute truth. My claim is incontrovertible. My skeleton will prove to the world, without a doubt, the absolute truth of Darwin's great theory."

"That so?"

"You must go and see it," the professor insisted. "You shall be permitted a special examination."

"Very kind of you," Quest murmured.

"We shall meet again soon, I hope," the professor concluded cordially.

"Good-morning, Mr. Quest!"

The two men shook hands and Quest took his seat by Lenora's side in the automobile. The professor rejoined his brother.

They entered the taxicab and were driven almost in silence to the professor's home—a large, rambling old house, situated in somewhat out-of-the-way grounds on the outskirts of New York. The Englishman glanced around him, as they passed up the drive, with an expression of disapproval.

"A more untidy looking place than yours, Edgar, I never saw," he declared. "Your grounds have become a jungle. Don't you keep any gardeners?"

"I keep other things," he said serenely. "There is something in my garden which would terrify your nice Scotch gardeners into fits if they found their way here to do a little tidying up. Come into the library and I'll give you one of my choice cigars. Here's Craig waiting to let us in. Any news, Craig?"

"Nothing has happened, sir," he replied. "The telephone is ringing in the study now, though."

"I will answer it myself," the professor declared, bustling off.

The professor took up the receiver from the telephone. His "Hello!" was mild and inquiring. He had no doubt that the call was from some admiring disciple. The change in his face as he listened, however, was amazing. "George," he gasped, "the greatest tragedy in the world has happened! My ape is stolen!"

His brother looked at him blankly.

"Your ape is stolen?" he repeated.

"The skeleton of my anthropoid ape," the professor continued, his voice growing alac in sadness and firmness. "It is the curator of the museum who is speaking. They have just opened

"My fault!" he exclaimed. "We are slow. Good-morning, Miss Lenora!"

She came straight to the table. She laid a little packet upon the table. Quest opened it coolly. The Ashleigh diamonds flashed up at him. He led Lenora to a chair and rang a bell.

"Prepare a bedroom upstairs," he ordered. "Ask Miss Roche to come here. . . . Laura," he added, as his secretary entered, "will you look after this young lady?"

A few minutes later Inspector French was announced. Quest nodded in a friendly manner.

"Some coffee, inspector?"

"I'd rather have those diamonds!" Quest threw them lightly across the table.

The inspector whistled.

"And now, French, will you be here, please, at midnight, with three men, armed?"

"Here!" the inspector repeated. Quest nodded.

"Our friend," he said, "is going to be mad enough to walk into hell, even when he finds out what he thinks has happened."

"It wasn't any of Jimmy's lot?"

Sanford Quest shook his head.

"French," he said, "keep mum, but do the elderly family retainer, Macdougall. I felt restless about him. He has lost the girl—he was married to her, by the by—and the jewels. No fear of his slipping away. I shall

CHAPTER VII.

Sanford Quest was naturally a person unaffected by presentations or nervous fears of any sort, yet, having you don't mind, I will ask you to accompany me in my car. I will send the man back with you."

They descended in the lift together and Quest handed the girl into his car. They drove quickly through the silent streets.

In a few minutes Lenora was installed in an easy chair in Quest's sitting-room.

"Lean back and make yourself comfortable," Quest invited, as he took a chair opposite to her. "I must just look through the papers for a moment. The girl did as she was told. She opened her coat. The room was delightfully warm, almost overheated. A sense of rest crept over her. She was conscious that Quest had laid down the letters which he had been pretending to read. His eyes were fixed upon her. There was a queer new feeling creeping through her veins.

Quest's voice broke an unnatural silence.

"You are anxious to telephone someone," he said. "You looked at both the booths as we came through the hotel. Then you remembered, I think, that he would not be there yet. Telephone now. The telephone is in my right hand. You are going to my number."

She obeyed almost at once.

"Number 700, New York city."

"You will ask," Quest continued, "whether he is all right whether the jewels are safe."

There was a brief silence then the girl's voice came from the other booth. "Are you there, James? . . . Yes, I am Lenora. Are you safe? Have you the jewels? . . . Where? . . . You are sure that you are safe? . . . No, nothing fresh has happened."

"You are at the hotel," Quest said softly. "You are going to his mirror."

"I cannot sleep," she continued. "I am coming to you."

She set down the receiver. Quest leaned a little more closely over her.

"You know where the jewels are hidden," he said to her. "The jewels are in the box which the chauffeur brought here. Behind her came maid, Lenora, and Macdougall, who had been riding on the box with the chauffeur. He paused for a moment to wipe the snow from his clothes as Ella crossed the hall to the left. Lenora turned toward him. He whispered something in her ear. For a moment she shook. Then she turned away and followed her mistress upstairs.

Arrived in her apartment, Ella threw herself with a little sigh of content into a big easy-chair before the fire and gave herself up for a few moments to reverie.

A log stirred upon the fire. She leaned forward lazily to replace it when she stopped short. Exactly opposite to her was a door which opened on to a back hall. It was used only by the servants. Just as she was in the act of leaning forward Ella became conscious of a curious hallucination.

"Lenora, come here at once."

The maid hurried in from the next room. Ella pointed to the door.

"Lenora, look outside. See if anyone is on that landing. I fancied that the door opened."

Lenora crossed the room and tried the handle. Then she turned towards her mistress in triumph.

"It is locked, my lady," she reported.

"Go down and ask Macdougall to come up. I am going to have this thing explained."

Something of her mistress' agitation seemed to have become communicated to Lenora.

She walked quickly to the back part of the hotel and ascended to the wing in which the servants' quarters were situated. Here she made her way along a corridor until she reached Macdougall's room. She knocked, and Macdougall opened the door. She was startled again. There was no answer. She tried the door and found it was locked. Then she returned to the lift and descended once more to the floor upon which her mistress' apartments were situated. She opened the door of the suite without knocking. She turned at once to the sitting room, and found it empty. A door in the background opened. A

Patriotism at the School For the Blind Wednesday morning, when according to a time honored custom, the band of the school began its early morning concert, it was the occasion of a somewhat unique display of patriotism. First, at about seven o'clock Halifax time a short program was given at the entrance to the girls' residence. Then Bandmaster Williston decided to go round and serenade the little ones at the South end of the building. They were awake at the first note of the national anthem and they proved that they had the spirit of true soldiers. They are not allowed to get up until the rising bell rings and they did not. But the matrons found each little child standing in his cot while the band played God Save the King. [Bandmaster Williston, referred to above is Prof. J. Clifford Williston, a Newcastle boy, who is instructor of music in the above school and one of the leading musicians of the Garrison city.]

Emmy Wehlen in Metro Production of the Happy Hour in "Tables Turned," in which Emmy Wehlen, the charming and versatile young actress is seen in the stellar role, the Roelife Photo Plays Inc. offers through the Metro program, another masterpiece of screen production. This picture, which is in five parts, will be seen here at the Happy Hour Thursday. The story is intensely human, carrying a wide appeal and offers the dainty star ample opportunity to display her remarkable versatility. Miss Wehlen is supported by a superb cast of recognized stage and screen artists, headed by H. Cooper Cliffe. Miss Wehlen first came into stage prominence through her capital work in musical comedy. For three years she was the leading woman at the Gaiety in London, and was starred in "The Merry Widow," "The Dollar Princess," and other big musical productions. She appeared in the leading singing role last season in "To-Night's the Night," a big London production brought to this country by the Shuberts.

Mrs. W. S. Loggie Hears From Son Mrs. W. S. Loggie has received the following letter from her son who was reported wounded recently. His many friends will be glad to hear that he is not any more seriously wounded.

In Hospital, 29th April, 1916. Dear Mother—Am writing this from the hospital in France and in bed. Was wounded on the evening of the 27th by a rifle bullet which hit me in the right shoulder and passed out of my right side. The doctor says the bullet touched the lung but he does not think it is serious. My temperature is good and I feel all right except of course that my right side is very stiff and it is hard for me to move. I am going to write Harrington & White of London today and ask them to cable father that I am wounded but not likely seriously.

With lots of love, Your affectionate son, K. LOGGIE.

"The Iron Claw" at The Happy Hour

Opening Episodes of Pathe Serial Promise a Story of the First Quality—Thrills Aplenty and a Few Laughs

Practice has made the Pathe company notably proficient in the production of serial photoplays. Through long experience, beginning with the renowned "Perils of Pauline," directors and scenario writers connected with Pathe have learned the difficult art of telling a story in installments so that each section is complete in itself, yet an essential part of an extended plot.

Seemingly, they have found it wise to make each reel interesting, quite as if it were expected to stand on its own merits. Protracted expositions are avoided, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that the necessary exposition—the introduction of the characters and a clear outline of their relationship—is incorporated in the dramatic action. Such, at least, is the impression left by the first two episodes of "The Iron Claw" that bids fair to become the most popular serial made by Pathe.

If past performances are a safe token of the future, we should say that a winning combination is engaged in producing this story of mystery and thrills. The author, Arthur Stringer, is blessed with an astonishingly fertile imagination. For many years he has been contributing weird stories to American magazines, and he may be counted upon for just the quality of ingenuity required in a photoplay of this character. George Brackett Seitz, who is putting the stories into scenario form, has revealed his competency on previous occasions. Edward Jose is one of the most artistic directors making pictures in America, and the screen has brought forth no more daring heroine than Pearl White.

"The Vengeance of Legar," in two reels, opens the serial at a rapid pace. It is here that we notice the expertness with which interest is aroused in the story of the girl, Margery Golden, who is kidnapped when a child and reared by the vengeful Jules Legar—"The Iron Claw." In scenes of the most vivid kind, we see enough of the past of the characters to comprehend their motives. The plot is original in conception and the action, while entirely free from padding, is complete enough to escape appearing fragmentary. It will be an unresponsive audience, indeed, that does not respond to the horror of Legar's punishment when his arm is crushed and his face is branded with a hot iron. More thrilling still are the flood scenes, the inundation of an entire island and the escape of Margery Golden. See ad. on page 8.

A Letter From Perley Johnston

An Overseas Hero Writes From "Somewhere in Belgium"

Somewhere in Belgium April 27, 1916 Dear Aunt Margaret, I received your letter the other day and was glad to hear that you were all well, as it leaves me at present. We had a lot of rain here this spring, but it is fine and warm today.

Well, Aunt, we have lost Sammie Regan. He was killed in action. I suppose you heard about it before this time.

Well, Auntie, I think that I shall be home by next Christmas, if the old Kaiser don't get us. I don't think he will.

Well, I will have to bring my letter to a close. Write soon and let me know all the news.

Bye-bye, from your loving nephew, PERLEY JOHNSTON.

Dublin, May 27—Martial law will be continued in Ireland wherever disaffection and unrest still prevail.
