Throbbing, Neuralgic Headache Cured
Head-Splitting Distress Vanishes Instantly

This Wonderful Curative Liniment
Never Fails.
RUB ON NERVILINE.

Neuralgia quickly cured is twice, nay, ten times cured. Little neuralgia pains grow into big ones, but "Nerviline" in ten minutes relieves even the worst ones. Even a single application will remove the nerve congestion that causes the pain.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the sore tissue, reaches the source of inflammation, drives it out root and branch. Every drop of Nerviline is potent in pain-subduing power, and its strongest charm lies in the fact that it rubs right in, even to the very last drop. Nerviline is not greasy, and its pain-removing power is at least five times greater in strength than ordinary remedies.

We guarantee Nerviline will cure neuralgia—not only relieve it, but actually and permanently cure it. Just in the same way will it cure lumbago, sciatica, stiffness and rheumatism.

To conquer all muscular and nerve pain, use Nerviline. A large bottle in the home keeps the doctor's bill small. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; it is more economical than the 25c. trial size. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

CHAPTER X.

And then again she dreamt that she was lying in his arms, as she had been when he carried her, his face so near to her that she could feel his breath upon her cheek; and at this dream her lips parted with a sigh of content and peace.

But lo! in the morning she was all the tom-boy again, and no one would have recognized in her the girl who had crept through the wood and watched over her sleeping friend.

He had overstepped himself, and she taunted him with it in the morning in the charming little way women have when they want to hide their feelings.

"Talk of wasting time!" she remarked. "I've been waiting for several hours for the milk. There will be no pudding to-day, that's one thing! And I thought you were going after some wood pigeons?"

"So I was, and am," he said, almost meekly. "Yes, I did overstep myself for the first time in my life. I am sorry; there's so much to do. The winter will be here presently, and I want to get together the supplies. Have you got over your fright?"

"What fright?" she demanded, looking at him sharply.

He was rather taken aback by this cool rebuff.

"Why, I fancied that you were rather frightened when I tumbled down the cliff yesterday," he said.

"Oh, then?" she responded, indifferently. "Yes, I fancy I was a little, but I had a fright before then."

"A bear who was as much alarmed as you were?" he said, with a smile.

"Oh, no, it wasn't!" she retorted. "I've a great mind not to tell you. It was something I saw when I was coming up the hill after I'd got the lilies. No, I won't tell you what it was; I'll show it to you."

"I'd better take my gun and shoot it, or it will frighten you again," he said.

"It won't care for your gun, Rath," she said, gravely.

When they had got through the necessary work of the morning, they set out, and Stella was unusually quiet; so quiet—for generally she talked all the time—that Rath, as he strode beside her with his gun over his shoulder, glanced at her curiously and thoughtfully.

They made their way along the valley, and as they were ascending the hill by the kind of narrow path or clearing, Stella stopped and laid her hand on his arm.

"Be prepared, Rath," she said, rather solemnly.

"I always am," he replied, shifting his gun over his arm.

She shook her head, and her face grew pale as they reached the pick. "That!" he said, with grave surprise and good-tempered scorn. "That is only a pick-axe! But how did it come here?" he added, quickly. "See, the handle's rotten, just a mass of dry rot; but the iron pick is all right, and will be useful. I wanted one badly. How did it come here?"

"I'll show you, Rath," she said in a low voice; and she led him to the skeleton, but drew back behind him as she pointed to it.

He started, and leaning on his gun gazed at it in silence for a moment.

"It's a man," he said. "Poor fellow!"

"How did it come here—who was it, and what was he doing? And why did he die out here in the open, Rath?"

He shook his head. "Who knows? He must have been here and died a long time ago. I never knew that anyone had been here before us. A bear may have come upon him suddenly, or he fell sick, or a snake may have bitten him. Who can tell?"

"But what was he doing here with that pick-axe, Rath? Oh, I know! Coal!"

Rath smiled at the idea. "Why should anyone dig for coal when he has all this wood to use?" and he swept his hand towards the thick pine woods. "No, it wasn't coal. I must dig a grave and bury him, poor fellow. Stella!"

"Well!" she asked.

He was silent a moment; then he said, quietly:

"That is how I should have died—and been, if you had not come; how I shall die, with no one to bury me, when you go."

She shuddered, and her lips quivered.

"Don't, Rath! What are you looking for? Let us go. I don't like this place."

"Wait a moment," he said. He went up higher and began to push the undergrowth aside with his feet, and presently he found a place where the bush was thinner, as if it had started growth at a much later period than the rest, and here the ground had been broken. "It was here he was working. I wonder if this was what he was digging for?" he said, picking up a rough piece of rock. "It's an odd-looking stone, isn't it? See how the yellow in it sparkles in the sun, Stella?"

Stella, who had kept quite close to him, took the stone in her hands and examined it, then she uttered a low cry of amazement and awe.

"Rath! don't you know what it is?" she whispered. "It's gold!"

He glanced at it, and then at her suddenly pale face.

"Is it?" he said, calmly. "Yes, I suppose it is."

Stella's heart beat fast, and her eyes seemed fascinated by the piece of dully shining rock. Young as she was she was not too young to appreciate something of the tremendous importance of this discovery.

"Yes, it's gold; I'm certain of it!"

she said. "See how soft this yellow stuff is. It's gold, gold, Rath! And, oh! see if there is any more of it."

He stirred the ground with his feet and picked up several nuggets of pure metal; then he went and got the pick, cleared some of the bush away, and dragged down the soil of the hill above the loose stones. It clattered down, breaking the silence in which the dead man had lain for so many years, and as Rath worked the gold shone amidst the rubble and sand.

Stella fell on her knees and collected some of the larger lumps and put them in her handkerchief.

"Yes, it's gold," she said in a whisper, and looking round as if she feared someone would hear them; but there was only the dead man behind them, and he had been long past hearing or caring for this discovery of his discovery. "There must be a fortune here—a fortune! Think of it, Rath! Is—there any more, do you think?"

"Oh, yes," he answered, as calmly as before. "This is the bed of one of the streams that run down the hill; but the water got diverted by that big boulder up there falling in its path—do you see? I should say that there is gold where the stream ran, perhaps all over the hill."

"Oh, Rath! it's—it's like a dream! I've read about finding gold and gold digging, but I never thought that I—Oh! look there—under the heap of stones you have brought down! There is a monster—a nugget they call it!"

He turned it over with his foot carefully.

"You seem very delighted," he remarked, in his grave fashion. "What is the good of it?"

She stared up at him, her eyes shining with her pleasure in their mutual discovery, with that delight in gold which even an innocent girl must feel.

"What is the good of it?" she laughed. "Why, Rath, gold is money; and with money you can buy—oh, what can't you buy?" What, indeed, Stella? "You can buy anything! Why, half a quarter of this would make us rich; and if there is more of it—as much as you think—we should be millionaires; we should have money more than we could count or spend!"

He shrugged his shoulders, still unimpressed.

"Gold is of no use here," he said. "You can't spend it. All the heap you have gathered, all that you could dig from the hill-side, would not be so useful as this pick."

"But you could exchange it with the Indians for anything you wanted. That would be the same as spending it. Don't you see?" she said, shrewdly.

"Yes; I suppose you could," he admitted. "Well, I'll take some of it, and try when next they come."

"No, no;" she said, quickly. "You mustn't do that, Rath; for then they'd know you'd found it, and the white men in the towns the Indians visit would know, and they would be sure to come here in search of it—come here in thousands! Oh! you don't know how mad people are to get gold! There is nothing they will not do for it."

"Really?"

"Yes, yes! I've read in books how a place that was as solitary and unknown as this is has in a few days been covered by men like—like ants."

He frowned, and looked impressed at last.

"Let us hide it," he said, gravely. "This island is mine—ours, and I should not like to have it overrun with men, as you say. Indeed, I don't want anyone else but ourselves."

He began to collect the pieces of quartz, and to cover with bracken and bush the spot he had cleared with the pick.

Stella had sunk on to a rock, and sat with her chin in her hands, her nuggets lying in her handkerchief on her lap. Her brows were drawn straight, and met. She looked the personification of meditation.

"Rath, I suppose someone else besides ourselves knows of this—this gold?" she said in a whisper.

He considered for a moment or two.

"If what you say is true—that men will flock where the gold is—then who can know of it?" he said; "or

Mother! the Child Is Costive, Billious.

Don't Hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste.

When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grownups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

they would be here, digging for it. The man whose bones are there must have been alone. Oh, yes! I see what happened! He was living here alone, just as my father and I were, or he came here from one of the towns—from Victoria, perhaps—hunting or fishing, and when he found the gold he remained, and the winter came upon him suddenly, and he was short of food and hadn't any proper clothing. He was too much afraid of other men coming to disturb him and share the gold, and so he perished of cold and hunger, and died here at his work. Men must be fond of this stuff to die for it!" he wound up, with scornful wonder.

Stella looked up.

"Men die for it every day; they will steal for it, commit any crime—even murder, Rath. If you have not money—gold—in England—and in the rest of the world, the towns and cities, you know, where people are—you are poor. And poverty is dreadful. I know. My mother and I were poor; and we were afraid of being poorer. It is wicked to be poor in England, and everybody avoids you as if—as if you were sick with an infectious disease. But if you are rich, everybody is glad and pleased and thinks much of you; for, don't you see, you have so much to give them! You live in a great house with plenty of servants, and you can give your friends good dinners, and have them stay with you; and you have horses and carriages for them to ride and drive in. Oh! it is hard to explain to you, who have never been anywhere, never seen anything!"

"Yes, it must be," he assented, quietly; "but I think I understand. Well, the gold is yours."

"Mine? Not mine, but yours, Rath!" she said, reproachfully.

"No," he said; "you found it, not I. Besides, it is of no use to me. I can't barter it with the Indians, for I don't want any other men here; and I can't make anything useful out of it. No; it is yours, and when a ship comes, and you go away, you can take the gold with you—there is a great quantity of it; and there must be that which the man got hidden away somewhere near. And when you get back to England you will have enough to buy great houses and to keep horses and carriages, and you will be happy."

The following are received from the French Press:
(1) dated Monday—St. Julien was captured by the British. The general situation of the front was unchanged. The forced French retreat had extended west beyond St. Julien was thus temporary and after gallant resistance the Canadians against St. Julien was captured.

East of Ypres our forces have borne the brunt of repeated attacks in an entirely new direction. Attacks were repulsed on Sunday by the British. The British salient. The asphyxiating gases, however, was repulsed and German troops captured.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, April 27.
To the Governor, Newfoundland:
The following are reports from General French:

(1) dated Monday—Severe fighting to the northeast of Ypres continues. The general situation is unchanged. The forced French retirement compelled our left flank to face north and extend west beyond St. Julien. Our line was thus temporarily weakened, and after gallant resistance by the Canadians against superior numbers, St. Julien was captured by the enemy.

East of Ypres our troops have borne the brunt of repeated heavy attacks in an entirely unexpected situation. Attacks were also delivered on Sunday by the enemy, east of Ypres salient. The enemy used asphyxiating gases, but the attack was repulsed and German officers and men captured.

During the last three days very heavy casualties have been inflicted on the enemy; our losses also are heavy.

German wireless report that four English heavy guns had been captured in untruce.

(2) dated Tuesday—Yesterday all German attacks northeast of Ypres were repulsed. In the afternoon our troops took the offensive, progressing near St. Julien, and west therefrom. The French co-operated and further north retook Hetsas during yesterday. Our artillery several times inflicted severe casualties upon the enemy.

Our airmen have bombed successfully stations and junctions at Courcelles, Tourcoing, Roubaix, Roulers, etc.

The French Government report German attacks on the heights of the Meuse completely defeated. The whole position of Les Esparges remains in French hands, and the slopes are covered with German corpses.

The Russian Government reports bombardment of the Bosphorus forts by the Black Sea fleet. Great explosions were caused in one fort.

GREAT BATTLE RAGING WITH UNDIMINISHED FURY.

LONDON, April 27.
Troops of the Allies, defending Ypres, are being attacked by Germans from three directions, North, Northeast and Northwest. The great battle, which began a week ago 125 miles from London, is raging with undiminished fury. Despite their heavy losses, estimated at more than 25,000, in some despatches received here to-day, the Germans are maintaining their terrific offensive. Emperor William is reported to have reached the Flanders front late yesterday afternoon. While the Germans are continuing their attack upon Ypres, the keystone of the Allies' position in Flanders is extending its front. It has reached Bossinghe about three miles from north of Ypres and is about two miles south-east of Lizerne, the first town stormed by the Germans on the west bank of the canal. Bossinghe has been completely destroyed, says a despatch from Amsterdam. The ruins are burning, but stubborn fighting continues among the wreckage. The collapse of a church steeple buried German and French soldiers as they were fighting in the shadow of the edifice. Lizerne is in possession of the Germans, who have held their own, despite repeated attacks by the French and Belgian troops. For a short time on Sunday the Allies gained the upper hand, driving the Germans from Lizerne back to the canal, but German reinforcements arrived in time to recapture the town. The correspondent, who sent this despatch states that the Germans themselves declare that had it not been for the Canadian troops, the Allies would be in retreat along the entire Flanders front. The Canadians upset all the German calculations, the correspondent continues. The Kaiser's troops expected their coup to result in the quick fall of Ypres and the capture of all important points along the Canal. Their expectations would have been fulfilled if the Canadians had not smashed into their advancing line, throwing eleven entire regiments into confusion.

ALLIES GAIN CONSIDERABLE GROUND.

LONDON, April 27.
The Kaiser's third drive for Calais has been stopped and stopped short. German attacks on Ypres have been repulsed, and the Allies have been permitted to regain considerable ground lost in the first furious attacks of the German army.

TAKEN AND RE-TAKEN.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, April 27.
Height of Hartmanskerkopp, which had been taken from us yesterday morning, has been re-taken by us during the night. We have made prisoners.

Later—There is nothing to add to last night's communique apart from the consolidation and continuation of our progress as well north of Ypres as on the heights of the Meuse.

A PARIS REPORT.

PARIS, April 27.—(Official.)
To the north of Ypres our progress continues, as well as that of the British Army. We have taken a number of prisoners, and have captured a quantity of material, including bomb-throwers and machine guns. On the front of Les Esparges, St. Remy and Colonne, German attacks have been completely repulsed. At one point of the front alone an officer estimates the killed at nearly a thousand. We have taken the offensive and have made and are making progress.

At Hartmanskerkopp, after having retaken the summit, we are advanced for a distance of two hundred metres down the eastern slope.

ENGLAND MASSING TRANSPORT SHIPS AND WAR VESSELS.

NEW YORK, April 27.
A Washington special to the Times says: From Dutch sources based upon what were said to be the latest advices from that country, as well as the fact that England had absolutely stopped all Channel and North Sea shipping, came the report last night that England had been massing transport ships and large war vessels which can bombard the Belgian coast while remaining out of reach of the German coast batteries, and will probably try to land a new expeditionary force somewhere between Heyst and Blankenberg or elsewhere, north of Ostend, for the purpose of attacking the right flank of the German forces now attacking along the Yser Canal. It is possible that 250,000 troops may be aboard the transports, which are supposed to be assembling off the Flanders coast, with the idea of landing as soon as the British warships have reduced the German batteries ashore.

BRITISH PRISONERS MALTREATED BY THEIR CAPTORS.

LONDON, April 27.
Lord Kitchener told the Lords to-day that British prisoners had been insulted, maltreated and even shot down by their German captors. He said: "I have been forced with reluctance to accept as indisputably true the maltreatment by the German army of British prisoners. The Hague Convention has been flagrantly disregarded by German officers. Prisoners have been stripped and maltreated in various ways, and in some cases evidence goes to prove they have been shot in cold blood. Our officers, even when wounded, have been wantonly insulted and frequently struck."

CHURCHILL AND GERMAN SUBMARINES.

LONDON, April 27.
First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill, explained Britain's policy in the matter of the treatment of German sailors captured on board submarines, in the Commons, to-day. Answering a question on the subject, he said: We cannot admit that the reprisals which Germany have taken against numbers of our officers can be allowed to deflect us from a policy which we regard as humane and just in itself. With reference to Germany's answer to this matter, he said: It is necessary to publicly brand this form of warfare and prevent it taking its place among the methods open to belligerent nations. No special conditions had been applied to the crews of German submarines, because they are such, but only to those engaged in wantonly killing non-combatants, neutrals and women on the high seas. Incidents like the sinking of the Orizole at night, without warning (she was lost early in February with a crew of twenty men) the sinking of the Falaba with a loss of over one hundred lives, and the blowing up of fishing vessels, decided the Government, he declared, to place all submarine prisoners taken after February 18th, and so long as this system of warfare continued, in a distinct category. He pointed out that the conditions under which these prisoners were confined were in every way humane. We have offered to allow a representative of the United States to visit these prisoners, he said, and to make a report, provided reciprocal facilities are accorded to us.

IN GERMAN S. W. AFRICA.

CAPE TOWN, April 27.
General MacKenzie reports that mounted troops have reached Aretitis 75 miles north of Keetmanshoop, in German South West Africa, and are still pursuing the enemy northward. General Van Devoeter has captured a large stock of waggons and light carts in the vicinity of Bersaba.

Nfld. Fisherman Drowned From Dory.

Gloucester Schooner Reports Loss of Lewis Dix, of Placentia.

Schr. Manomet, Captain William Price, shore fishing, returned to port yesterday, reporting the loss of Lewis Dix, 23 years, one of the crew who was lost on Cashes, Sunday.

Dix went out in his dory early Sunday morning to haul his trawls. When all the dories had returned and Dix was not accounted for, Captain Price became anxious and commenced to cruise about to find him. About ten o'clock they found the overturned dory which told the tale. It is believed that Dix overloaded his dory and was swamped by a sea.

The unfortunate man was single and a native of Placentia, Newfoundland. He was a good fisherman and well liked by his shipmates.—Gloucester Times.

Mass 350,000 Turks to Hold Dardanelles.

SEA OF MARMORA HAS BEEN SOWN WITH HUNDREDS OF MINES.—MORE GUNS RANGED ALONG THE STRAIT.

London, April 22.—The Morning Post publishes from a resident of Constantinople a letter, dated March 27th, which shows the military preparations in the Turkish capital and neighborhood and the state of mind of the military party there. It asserts that 350,000 men have been massed in the Gallipoli Peninsula, to meet any land attacks by the Allies, and that there are 200,000 more in and around Constantinople. The letter reads:

"At Nagara Point there is a sand-bank which has been dug out to take six torpedo tubes at diving length.

"The Goeben is in worse condition than when I last wrote. It appears that she touched a mine at Gonne-goullak and was damaged. Under the how the plates were backed on in cement and bolted through to supporting irons, but the moment she picked up speed the whole affair was torn away. The Goeben is a beast for vibration. It now appears that the necessary plates have been sent for from Germany, but I fail to see how they can be fixed, as there is no graving or floating dock to take the ship.

"Enver Bey's new Caucasian army was sent to Gallipoli Peninsula. At least 250,000 men are there now. Two hundred thousand men are at Adnanople.

"Our troops are in poor condition, underfed and badly clothed. I should think that we could deal with them easily with a full chance of making good.

"The Turk does not like bayonet or shrapnel fire. Rifle fire does not worry him so much, but bursting shrapnel is noisy and the bayonet makes him exert his energies.

"From Mamora Island to the mainland there is a mine field with at least 700 mines. There may be more.

"San Stephano Beach and cliffs are now fortified. The orders at present are to defend the town, but I do not think they will ever be carried out. Tachenicla barracks and Kisla barracks, have fortifications on the grounds surrounding them. Leander Tower is said to hold a gun and a torpedo tube below, but of this I am not certain.

"The fire in this town and around about 200,000 men, about 60,000 being lodged in houses in the capital. Have no fear of a massacre. The first gun the Turks hear will make them quake and they will be far too busy to have time to think of the few Britishers, French and Maltese. If any one is massacred it will be the Germans and Austrians.

"I have had occasion to speak to many officers in the Turkish Army some of whom I have known for three years and urging the Balkan war. The army is far from content or satisfied, and a military breakdown would not astonish me.

"There is bread again, but of very poor stuff. Milk is rare, and of poor quality. Petrol is scarce and only used for illuminating purposes, charcoal being used for cooking. They are all sick of it, excepting the military party and a few fools.

"The Goeben is at Staria, and the Breslau and others are in the Golden Horn behind two bridges, so that an aeroplane would have a fine harvest. A part of the Turkish fleet is waiting round Bos-Burau corner for the allied fleet when it finishes with Gallipoli.

"Chanak has been reinforced with guns, and a big fort constructed at Demedjikeg. There is a new wireless installation at Pirgos.

"The Tchajala lines have been reinforced and partly regimined.

"Since writing the foregoing the Goeben has had a fearful explosion aboard. The shock was felt and heard five miles and more. I think it was the magazine but have no time yet to ascertain. One killed is admitted. The Goeben can be but a floating fortress in the future."

Ravages of Rust.

One large railway firm suffers a loss of more than eighteen tons of metal daily, due solely to the effect of rust. Thus far, the only known preventive is to keep the metal surface always covered with a suitable paint. Some idea of the costliness of this remedy, however, may be gained from the fact that it requires about $5,000 annually to paint one large railway bridge alone. A typical case of this kind is the Forth Bridge, upon which a corps of painters are constantly employed, as the weather makes repainting of one end of this large structure necessary before the workers have reached the other. Although experiments have demonstrated that pure iron surrounded by oxygen does not rust, and that some acid, especially carbonic acid, is necessary for the production of rust, the secret of manufacturing rustless steel and iron remains to be discovered.

The Products Company

This afternoon the discussion on the Contract of the Newfoundland Products Company and the Resolutions to confirm it will be taken up in the House of Assembly, and considerable discussion must be given to it to elicit all information which has a bearing on it to bring out its full meaning. One principle should guide the discussion and that is to foster a large industry in Carbides and allied industries at Bay of Islands and every consideration should be extended to reasonable concessions to bring such an industry into being, but there must be ample provisions to safeguard the interests of the Colony from excessive concessions and to insure that if five million dollars in cash is not expended at Bay of Islands on Power plants, electric furnaces, carbide works, fertilizing plants and the like at Bay of Islands then not only should the concessions in regard to free countries fail, but the leases of water-powers, the proposed concessions as to Muskrat Falls, and the grant of mining rights at Bay of Islands should be rescinded absolutely. In regard to this cash expenditure at Bay of Islands on construction work there should not be a shadow of a doubt, and it should be set down in the provisions made by the Legislature in black and white in language which is plain and clear. The concessions of rights in regard to water-powers in the Island of Newfoundland outside of the Humber drainage are highly objectionable and should be strenuously opposed. Further, while it is reasonable that material for construction should be exempted from taxation, it was unreasonable that the Company should be free from every sort of taxation, except that on coal. It would be fair to give them a term of absolute freedom, which should be liberal in duration, but when the Company was well established and paying good dividends, it should aid in the general upkeep of the Revenue. Such other safeguards in respect to the use of the waters by loggers, fishermen and sportsmen should be made, as were made in the Harmsworth Contract.

KITCHENER ON GERMAN INHUMANITY.
 LONDON, To-day.

The British Parliament occupied itself today with discussions on the treatment of British prisoners of war in Germany. In both the House of Lords and the Commons gratitude was expressed for the efforts which had been made by the United States to ameliorate the conditions of prisoners. Kitchener's speech in the House of Lords in which he said he was convinced, was humanity toward British soldiers, was the most notable expression of the day. There were, however, equally striking notes in both Houses notably by Lord Lansdowne, Leader of the Opposition, and Lord Cromer, who expressed regret in the Lords that the British Admiralty had seen fit to segregate captured German submarine crews, and by Premier Asquith in the Commons who declared that at the end of the war the British people would exact reparation. No definite course of action concerning treatment of prisoners was agreed on by either House. Earl Kitchener said that as a soldier he had always held officers of the German army in respect, but constant testimony that has come in not only from our own escaped prisoners, but from French, Russian, Belgian and American sources has brought it home to all who have sifted the evidence that the inhumanity displayed by German authorities, toward British prisoners especially, is beyond doubt. The Secretary of State, quoted articles from the Convention adopted at the Hague, relating to the treatment of prisoners of war and asserted that German hospitals should be expected from any charges of deliberate inhumanity. There have been indications of lamentable lack of medical skill and individual cases of neglect and indifference and suffering on the part of hospital orderlies. On the other hand there are statements from prisoners who have been released as incapacitated that their experience in the hospitals did not form any ground for complaint. The treatment of prisoners in detention camps in Germany varies considerably, according to the locality. Our men in most cases suffered from want of food and have received differential treatment, as compared with their French and Russian comrades, and many acts of violence have been complained of. However, there does appear to be slight improvement in some respects due perhaps to visits of inspection made from time to time through the American Ambassador. Germany has for many years posed before the civilized world as a great military nation. She has abundantly proved her military skill and courage but surely it was also for her to set up a standard of military honor and conduct which would gain the respect of not the friendship of nations. Instead she has stooped to acts which will surely stain her military history which would vie with barbarous savagery of Dervishes of Soudan. I do not think there can be a soldier of any nationality, even amongst the Germans themselves, who is not heartily ashamed of the slur which has been thus brought upon the profession of arms. Usages of war have not only been outraged by infliction of cruelties on British prisoners but by contrivances which must have arrested your Lordship's attention. The Germans have last week introduced the method of placing their opponents hors de combat by the use of asphyxiating and deleterious gases. They employ these poisonous methods and prevail when their attack, according to the rules of war, might otherwise have failed. In the Commons, speaking in the debate on the treatment of British prisoners in Germany, Premier Asquith said, "It is a horrible story from every view point. One of the blackest spots on even the German methods of war. My object in rising is to say with all emphasis and all deliberation that we shall not forget if we ought not to forget the horrible record of calculated cruelty and crime. We shall at the end of this war hold it to be our duty to exact such reparation against those who are proved to be guilty agents in this matter as it may be possible for us to inflict. I do not think we would be doing our duty either to these brave and unfortunate men, or the honor of our country or to plain dictates of humanity if we should be content with anything less. The British War Office in a statement to-night, supplementing its previous charges of the Germans in their fighting using noxious gases says, the medical evidence shows that the Canadian soldiers have lost their lives in the recent fighting not from wounds but from poisoning from gases employed by the enemy."

GERMAN DESIGN FAILED.
 LONDON, To-day.

The German design to turn the left of the British position at Ypres and drive the Allies out of Belgium has failed, according to the Times correspondent in the north of France. He says that while the battle is still raging furiously, the German advance has been definitely checked.

St. Pierre Bulletin.

ALLIES PROGRESS.
 Midnight Official, April 25.

North of Ypres our progress and that of the British Army continues, and the evidence that the inhumanity displayed by German authorities, toward British prisoners especially, is beyond doubt. The Secretary of State, quoted articles from the Convention adopted at the Hague, relating to the treatment of prisoners of war and asserted that German hospitals should be expected from any charges of deliberate inhumanity. There have been indications of lamentable lack of medical skill and individual cases of neglect and indifference and suffering on the part of hospital orderlies. However, there does appear to be slight improvement in some respects due perhaps to visits of inspection made from time to time through the American Ambassador. Germany has for many years posed before the civilized world as a great military nation. She has abundantly proved her military skill and courage but surely it was also for her to set up a standard of military honor and conduct which would gain the respect of not the friendship of nations. Instead she has stooped to acts which will surely stain her military history which would vie with barbarous savagery of Dervishes of Soudan. I do not think there can be a soldier of any nationality, even amongst the Germans themselves, who is not

HEADACHES
 Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other than those which are occasional, and which are usually cured by rest, and a few drops of regular intervals. The best Doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as if nothing had happened. It is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take Anti-kamnia Tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Always use cold water for stains of syrup, sugar and meat juice. Hot water for vegetables and various fruit stains. Wash mud stains in cold water.

The tired housekeeper will find that a hot foot bath at night, and rubbing the feet afterward with carbolated vaseline, will add greatly to her comfort.

To wash velvet, make a lather of soap and warm water and soak the fabric in it—squeezing, but not rubbing. Rinse with clear water and dry without wringing.

Heroism of Aviator Described.

Paris, April 22.—A story telling of the heroism of an aviator described as "de M" whose father was killed in one of the first engagements of the war has been sent to the Petit Journal, by a correspondent with the Northern army.

"De M" was sent with a sergeant, to bombard a corner of the Belgian coast, where the Germans had been showing exceptional activity. They had to pass over a region where Roland Garros accomplished his most sensational exploits and where the Germans had installed a hundred anti-aircraft guns.

The aeroplane was piloted safely through a storm of shells, while the sergeant dropped bombs, according to instructions, and then turned towards the French lines, rising to a height of 9,000 feet, to avoid the hail of shrapnel.

Suddenly a German shell smashed the front wheels and hurled through the machine, severing the aviator's left foot. The aeroplane began to plunge downward but "de M" gritted his teeth, and righted the machine, keeping it headed toward camp. The sergeant, who thought they were done for, supported the pilot with his left arm, while with his right he started to pencil a farewell letter to his mother. They still had fifteen miles to fly, to reach a place of safety. "Shall I take the helm," asked the sergeant.

"No, no, you trust to me, we'll get back to France all right" was "de M's" reply.

The sergeant then abandoned his letter writing and supported the pilot with both arms. "De M" stuck to his task, and took the machine safely back to the starting place and crawled out unaided through the hole made by the German projectile. Not until he reached the hospital, at Zuydcoote, did he faint.

Misinforming Children!

By RUTH CAMEBON.

One of my little nieces has a queer delusion. She thinks people "grow down," as well as up. The other day she told her mother, casually, "By and by you will grow down and have a dolly, too." I know another youngster, a chap of four, who believes that firemen go around setting fire to people's houses. It may be that both of these children have worked these solutions out for themselves. I think them far more likely the result of the practice of passing down misinformation to children who ask questions. So Many Mysteries! The normal child cannot but be inquisitive. As his mind develops there are so many mysteries! What makes it get dark at night? There are so many things too, which present personal problems. Why have bread and butter forced upon oneself and then refused cake or candy? Why not get one's feet wet? What makes a cold? Everything is so new and so wonderful to a child. His mind is as impressionable as wax. He carves information. Yet so often he gets in answer to his eager questioning, nothing but ridiculous misinformation. I sometimes wonder how much of this misinformation leaves its imprint through the years. I know of a grown man who confessed to me that he thought for years raisins made people crazy because his mother told him so in order to keep him from taking them from the pantry. A great mass of misinformation is, of course, removed from the mind by later experiences, but some of it, dealing with intangible things must leave some impression.

Children's Questions Often Eye Openers.

The pity is that the opportunity for constructional training presented by a child's questioning should be so abused. Of course a child's questions are sometimes hard to answer even though they deal with simple every day things, but that might perhaps serve for a text of a talk for grown-ups. To discover that to put some fact of which we have a fair conception in definite simple language is hard ought to open our eyes to the slovenliness and incompleteness of our own knowledge.

It may be pleasanter to save one's self from such an eye opener by making up some silly untruth and then laughing at one's own wit, but I call it downright mean to trade on a child's credulity so.

If a child ask you for bread should you give him a stone?

Questions and Answers.

Question.—What do you think of people who take out a dozen records from a music store supposedly on approval, but with no real intention of buying, wanting them only to entertain week end guests?

Answer.—That they deserve to lose the privilege of taking records on approval, as they undoubtedly will. Unfortunately the innocent suffer with the guilty, as usual.

I present my thanks to the many letter friends who write me that they liked the talk on bundles. I was especially glad because it came straight out of my heart and I so hoped it would find a place in yours. Anent the subject one letter friend writes: "Did you ever read 'Just

Knocking Booze.

"I'll gladly hit the water cooler," says George Great Britain's worthy ruler, "and cut the bug-juice out, as an example to the ladies who blow the shillings of their daddies for porter, beer and stout. By foreign foe we are endangered, and Booze, like some fierce dog emmangered, is raising hob at home; it toils not, and keeps men from toiling, and keeps them hot with useless broiling, as they blow off the foam. We're running short of ammunition because our workmen's condition recalls the old D. T.; the provocation now seems ample, and so I'll set a good example—no long cold drinks for me." 'Tis thus with all the warring nations; they're finding out that liquid rations are fruitful of despair, far more than all the swords that slaughter, the submarines down under water, the airships in the air. In Russia now no vodka's going to tap the helpful well; and France, the volatile and merry, prohibited the old "green fairy" that sent her sons to hell. The German soldiers heard the Kaiser informing them it would be wiser, to give the pump a show; this all the rulers are deciding that Barleycorn, the long abiding, means trouble, strife and woe.

A Wonderful Contest

FRIDAY NIGHT.

On Friday night there will be some big contest, the names are coming in fast now and this week there are several very fine amateurs. The whole affair is conducted in first class style, no whistling or stamping of feet allowed; some of our best people are taking part, not for the prizes alone but out of good will.

The great Egyptian sketch with Mr. and Mrs. Ballard Brown is charming full houses. Last night the large theatre was filled to the doors; the magnificent stage setting, the Oriental costumes and wonderful Salome dances. The great Egyptian sketch, Aysha, has caused a big sensation because the singing voices of those artists simply electrify the audience; there is no question about their popularity, they are the best ever here, and the continual good houses prove it.

Seniority in order named. A. MONTGOMERIE, Captain and Adjutant.

A practical way to encourage a child in the composition of "thank you" notes is to talk, beforehand, about what he wants to say to this or that person. Childish phraseology is an elusive thing, more often caught on the lips than the finger tips, and talking a note over in advance makes the actual writing of it a comparatively easy matter.

The possession of a little writing desk, with attractive furnishings, and a low, comfortable chair, is a healthy incentive to letter writing and will work wonders toward interesting the average child.

A box of miniature correspondence cards, decorated with nursery designs, is a help for the child who seems discouraged at the sight of even a small sheet of letter paper. It takes such a few words to appear to good advantage on such a card that several "thank" notes can be disposed of without unduly tiring the juvenile correspondence.

Last Night's Concert.

The patriotic concert held at St. Mary's Hall, South Side, last night, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The programme was under the direction of Misses Muriel and Gladys Nurse and Miss B. Snow, and consisted of vocal and instrumental selections, recitations and an amusing dialogue entitled "Mixed Pickles." The following ladies and gentlemen took part:—Mrs. Strang; Misses Myrtle Williams, B. Snow, A. Lyward, Eileen Nurse, Irene Harris, K. Myler, Muriel Nurse, Eidel (2), Gladys Nurse, Daisy Skinner; Messrs. W. T. Gaulton, H. Chaplin, H. Evans, M. Colton, B. Colton, C. Maunders, Herschell, Fox, Mackintosh, Kerr and Rev. H. Uphill. All the items were particularly well rendered, especially the singing of "LaMarseillaise" by the Misses Eidel, daughters of Mr. E. Eidel, of St. Pierre. The sweet voices of these young ladies charmed the audience and they had to respond to several encores. After the National Anthem had been sung, dancing was indulged in until 3 o'clock this morning. The proceeds amounted to $120 which will be donated to the fund in Aid of our Sick and Wounded Soldiers.

To the Misses Nurses and Miss Snow, the promoters of the affair, much congratulation is due for the success which crowned their efforts in such a worthy cause. We understand that by special request the concert will be repeated at an early date.

England Has New Navy.

London, April 21.—If the censor ridden British public were privately informed that the British fleet was being augmented by something like a submarine every three days, a destroyer every week, and a battleship, cruiser or dreadnought every month, it would laugh the statement to scorn. And yet that is a fact.

If Britain's present overwhelming fleet were to meet defeat at the hands of the German navy and be totally destroyed, there would be a residue of such dimensions that the balance of sea power would still remain with Great Britain.

By May 1st this country will not only be supreme on a naval standpoint, but it will have a perfectly trained and equipped army of 1,500,000 men. By the end of the war England will have the biggest navy that the world has ever seen, and it will also possess the largest army in the world.

Of course it is not contended that Great Britain is building a submarine every three days. That would be, humanly speaking, an impossibility. But there are other ways of obtaining these little craft. Numbers of these deadly submarine vessels are being rushed from Canada and elsewhere in parts and put together on this side.

Every day that the German fleet remains cooped up in Kiel the odds are increased enormously against Germany.

Some day perhaps the government will take the nation into its confidence. On the other hand it may be that a government which reckons on the inertia of the multitude knows what it is about. Maybe the whole truth of the present situation will never be made public—on this side.

FEET IN THE SPRINGTIME.

In the Spring milady's pedal extremities lightly turn to aches and pains. With the approach of warm weather you begin to pay with interest for the indiscretions of the winter months.

In warm weather you should wash your feet twice a day. You will understand how necessary cleanliness really is when you realize that the largest blood vessels of the body are situated in the legs. Consequently the feet perspire, and this perspiration causes a vast amount of the foot discomfort from which folks suffer, including soft corns between the toes. The odor of perspiration is an unpardonable offense, not alone because of the pain it causes you yourself, but of the discomfort to those with whom you are associated.

There is absolutely no excuse for this annoyance. To keep your feet absolutely clean and sweet requires not more than ten minutes' effort a day and the use of an inexpensive powder if your trouble is serious enough to require it.

Mild cases of perspiration are benefited by bathing the feet in water as hot as can be borne to which a teaspoon of common baking soda has been added. Another good wash is one or two drams of alum dissolved in a pint of alcohol and added to your foot bath in the same proportion—a teaspoonful to a basin of water.

In cases of excessive perspiration bathe your feet in hot salt water dry them carefully and apply the following lotion: One grain of permanganate of potash, and one ounce of distilled water. Apply this lotion with a piece of soft gauze. Then dust your feet with talcum powder. Change your stockings at least once a day and if you are troubled with excessive perspiration change them twice a day until a remedy has been entirely effected.

Furness Liners Reach Port.

London, April 21.—If the censor ridden British public were privately informed that the British fleet was being augmented by something like a submarine every three days, a destroyer every week, and a battleship, cruiser or dreadnought every month, it would laugh the statement to scorn. And yet that is a fact.

If Britain's present overwhelming fleet were to meet defeat at the hands of the German navy and be totally destroyed, there would be a residue of such dimensions that the balance of sea power would still remain with Great Britain.

By May 1st this country will not only be supreme on a naval standpoint, but it will have a perfectly trained and equipped army of 1,500,000 men. By the end of the war England will have the biggest navy that the world has ever seen, and it will also possess the largest army in the world.

Of course it is not contended that Great Britain is building a submarine every three days. That would be, humanly speaking, an impossibility. But there are other ways of obtaining these little craft. Numbers of these deadly submarine vessels are being rushed from Canada and elsewhere in parts and put together on this side.

Every day that the German fleet remains cooped up in Kiel the odds are increased enormously against Germany.

Some day perhaps the government will take the nation into its confidence. On the other hand it may be that a government which reckons on the inertia of the multitude knows what it is about. Maybe the whole truth of the present situation will never be made public—on this side.

New Boiler Tubes for Kron Prinz.

Newport News, April 22.—The German converted Kron Prinz Wilhelm was floated from dry dock at the shipyard here to-day, after her hull had been painted and repaired. She was towed to an anchorage in the harbor, and to-night the grand old ship from Monroë returned to its post.

New boiler tubes for the Wilhelm arrived to-day and will be installed by shipyard mechanics.

The Naval Board which surveyed the ship has made its report to Washington, with a recommendation to the time to be allowed for repairs. As in the case of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, the time within which the Wilhelm must leave American waters, or intern for the war, will be kept secret.

Britain Gives Up Football Matches.

London, April 22.—"There will be no association football cup ties or league matches next season," said F. J. Wall, secretary of the Football Association. This decision was not unexpected because of a continuous outcry that has been going on since the beginning of the war that it was scandalous for the pick of Great Britain's athletes to play football instead of joining the army.

Amateur football practically stopped when the war began, but professionals, who number nearly five thousand, continued as usual.

LARGE FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late William Veeley took place yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. Amongst the mourners were a representation of horse owners, a deputation from the Truckmen's Union, of which deceased was a prominent member, acting as a guard of honor. The remains were enclosed in a handsome casket, profusely covered with floral wreaths. Interment was at the C. of E. Cemetery and Rev. W. E. Cracknell officiated at the graveside.

A GERMAN VIEW OF KITCHENER.

The Cologne Gazette prints a short article on Lord Kitchener, in which that journal remarks that the man who is commanding the British armies against Germany deserves all the more attention because nothing much is known about his personality. British generals, the journal says, are not in the habit of enlightening the world with all sorts of details about themselves.

"Kitchener," the journal continues, "is taciturn even for an Englishman. Moreover, he does not pay over-frequent visits to the British troops in France, but prefers to remain in Whitehall at the War Office, when he controls the enormous war machine which he is hurling against us from all corners of the globe and which he has, in the first place, to piece together. It is the historic experience in all British wars that their organization is never ready at the beginning of the operations and that the real preparations have always to be begun after the outbreak of hostilities."

"Field Marshal Horatio Herbert Kitchener is the embodiment of British will power, British toughness, and British concentration. We do not know whether he has accepted the task of fighting the German nation in arms with pleasure. He is in no way equal to the undertaking, because he lacks the first quality of the great general, namely, the psychological sense. Kitchener does not possess the slightest understanding of the souls of the people he is fighting or controlling. He is the personification of the soulless British imperial machine which wages war by means of bargains and intrigues. It is for that very reason that his compatriots believe in him."

Flowers in compact arrangement are used liberally on the more elaborate types of hats and to a moderate extent on tailored hats.
