WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER VI.

The Fortune-Teller's Warning. Bartley Bradstone was about to send them about their business with the nearest approach to an oath he dared to utter in the presence of the ladies, when Mary Penstone, with a laugh, said:

"Oh, don't send them away, Mr. Bradstone. I should like to have my fortune told, I should indeed."

"It's all nonsense," he said, with ill-concealed impatience.

"But is it?" demanded Annie, eying the dark-hued gypsy woman, wistfully. "Oh, yes, of course it is, I know; but let her stay, Mr. Bradstone, just for a minute. Mary, lend me a shilling. I'll be the first."

Mary did not possess the coin; but Olivia found one, and Mary, with manifold giggles, gave it to the gypsy.

The woman crossed the soft palm with it.

"Your fortune is easy to tell, miss," she said. "You'll marry the man of your choice and live happy."

Annie snatched her hand away with a disappointed pout of her full lips.

"I don't think that's worth a shilling," she said. "It's a swindle. I ought to have fallen in love with the wrong man and died of consumption. Now, Mary."

But Mary declined, positively. "Well, you, then, squire," said Annie, tugging at his arm.

"My fortune's made or marred long ago," he said, shaking his head as he tossed half a crown to the woman. "Well, then, it's Olivia's turn," said Annie. "Now, Olivia, you must, you must have your fortune told."

Olivia smiled, and held out her hand promptly.

"Don't prophesy anything very dreadful, please," she said. The woman crossed her long, shapely hand and peered at it; then she slowly let the hand drop.

"Is there any other gentleman or lady would like their fortune told?" she said.

"Oh, but that isn't fair!" exclaimed Annie Penstone. "You must tell this lady's, you know."

The woman glanced at her, then at Olivia.

"Am I to tell it, miss?" she said. Olivia smiled. "Of course," she said. "Why not?"

The woman took her hand, and looked into her eyes, just as a short-sighted person might have done; then she glanced behind her at the spot where the man stood in an attitude of perfect repose and self-possession, his dark eyes fixed upon Bartley Bradstone.

"Shall I tell this pretty lady her fortune, Seth—"

The man nodded, and the woman in a low voice said:

"There are lines of much sorrow, miss, and much doubt. You will mate with a man you do not love, and love a man you do not mate. But in the end—"

She stopped short, and, dropping Olivia's hand, bent over one of the children.

Olivia smiled her calm, sweet smile.

"It is your turn now," she said to Bertie; but Bertie, with affected horror and awe, shook his head.

"Your experience is enough for me," he said.

"That will do," said Bartley Bradstone, and he flung a coin toward the group. "Clear off, now."

The woman darted at the coin, but as her hand closed over it she said:

"Let me tell this gentleman his fortune."

"Oh, do! oh, come, Mr. Bradstone!" exclaimed the two Penstone girls, in chorus. "In common fairness—"

"Oh, I'm quite ready," said Mr. Bartley Bradstone, but with anything but alacrity; and, leaning on his elbow, he extended his right hand reluctantly.

"The left, if you please, gentleman," said the woman.

"You are mighty particular," he said, with an uneasy laugh, and he shifted his position, and gave her the left hand.

As he did so the man took a step forward, and whispered something in the woman's ear.

Her face did not change from its impassibility, but she bent lower over Bartley Bradstone's hand, and amidst the almost solemn silence she said in the dreamy voice she had adopted in the former cases:

"It is a fair hand, a clever hand; but there are lines that trouble the poor gypsy. Lines of the past, and the coming future. Beware of the woman with the black eyes and the cut lip."

Bartley Bradstone changed color, and snatched his hand away.

"That will do," he said. "Don't bother us with any more, but take yourselves off. And look here; I don't allow gypsies to settle or squat, or whatever you call it, upon my land."

The woman tied the coins she had received in the corner of her apron with deliberate composure, then, dropping a curtsy, followed the man, who had already struck into the thick undergrowth.

"How delightful!" exclaimed Annie Penstone. "Mr. Bradstone, I believe you had them brought here on purpose, just to make your picnic complete."

"No, I didn't," he said, abruptly. "I hate them. They are the worst thieves—"

He stopped. "Bring some more wine," he called to the butler.

"Beware of the woman with the cut lip and the black eyes, Mr. Bradstone!" exclaimed Annie, laughingly.

The butler filled their glasses, and in the midst of the general laughing and talking Bartley Bradstone was recovering his composure, and feeling pretty comfortable again, when he heard the sound of horse's hoofs, and, looking up, saw a man on horseback riding into the glade.

The horse was a hunter of good character, and his rider was evidently so lost in thought that he had thrown the reins almost on the animal's neck, and was perfectly indifferent to the course it was taking.

All the picnic party stared at him, and Mary Penstone had just time to whisper to Olivia "What a handsome man!" when Bartley Bradstone sprang to his feet, and seized the horse's loose rein.

It was bad enough to have his grand picnic interrupted by ill-conditioned gypsies, but that an unknown rider should dare to intrude was simply intolerable.

Shattered NERVES

How utterly weak and helpless one becomes when the nerves give way. Sleepless, nervous, irritable and despondent, life becomes a burden.

But there is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to rebuild your exhausted nervous system, restore the action of your bodily organs and change gloom and despondency into new hope and courage. Try it to-day. 50 cts. a box, at all dealers.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

"Here, you, sir!" he exclaimed, angrily. "do you know you are trespassing?"

The gentleman pulled up, and looked on the angry face below him at the rest of the party with a half-awakened expression.

Then he drew the rein from Bartley Bradstone's grasp, and, looking at him calmly, said:

"I beg your pardon. I did not know I was trespassing."

"But you are!" insisted the giver of the feast. "This is private land, and you ought to know it! Confound it, sir, you've no right to ride over private property like this!"

The stranger's face flushed; but before he could speak Bertie sprang to his feet, and approached the two men.

"Mr. Bradstone," he said, "this gentleman is a friend of mine, and I can assure you that he had no desire to trespass—"

Bartley Bradstone looked on one to the other with his characteristic expression of moody suspicion.

"A friend of yours! Of course that makes a difference. I suppose it's all right."

Olivia had risen, and came slowly toward them. The rest kept their seats.

"Yes; this is a friend of mine—Mr. Faradeane," said Bertie; and he laid his hand upon the bridle of the stranger's horse.

He looked from Bertie to Bartley Bradstone, and then at Olivia, and on her face his eyes seemed fixed.

"Although a friend of Lord Granville, I am still a trespasser," he said, "and I beg your pardon;" and he turned and rode off.

Both Bartley Bradstone and Olivia turned upon Bertie.

"Is he a friend of yours, Lord Granville?" demanded Bartley Bradstone.

Olivia said nothing, though her eyes were eloquent enough. The color rose to poor Bertie's face.

"It is Mr. Faradeane, of The Dell," he stammered—fancy the Cherub stammering!—"I made his acquaintance the day his dog ran loose, Olivia. That's all."

CHAPTER VII. A Simple Bit of Charity.

It was the morning after Mr. Bradstone's elaborate picnic, and the clock was striking twelve as Olivia, with her hat and jacket on, knocked at the door of the squire's den, as the room in which he kept his guns and fishing-rods, and in which he transacted his business as justice of the peace, was called.

She knocked twice, then, having received no answer, opened the door and entered.

To her surprise she saw her father seated in his well-worn leather chair, bending over the table, his head leaning on his hand. Before him was a goodly—or evil—array of papers, and his face, as he raised it, wore that anxious and troubled expression which Olivia had seen upon it so often of late.

"Why don't you arrange to have two or three couples at your home some evening of to go on an outdoor excursion and invite this particular young man to go along? You really ought to make some advances so that he will know that you did not refuse his invitation merely to cut the friendship," helped her aunt.

"There is a young man whom I admire a great deal. He has called me up several times to make an engagement but each time I had a previous date, how can I entertain him at my home," asked Anna.

"Why don't you arrange to have two or three couples at your home some evening of to go on an outdoor excursion and invite this particular young man to go along? "I beg your pardon, papa," she said. "I did not want to disturb you, but I knocked twice, and, thinking you were out, ventured in. I want a book for Bessie."

The squire was an inveterate novel reader, and there was always a goodly stock of popular fiction lying about the den.

"A novel. Yes, my dear," and he made an attempt at rising; but Olivia went to him quickly and put her hand upon his shoulder.

"No, you shan't trouble, dear. I can find it. You are busy, I can see."

"Busy?" he said, in a dull way. "Oh, yes, I am, rather," and he sighed.

"Is it anything very troublesome, anything I can help you with?" she inquired, as she turned over the pile of yellow-covered volumes. "I can sometimes, you know."

He shook his head with a mirthless smile.

"I am afraid not, my dear," he said, cheerlessly. "This is a matter which—" He stopped and gazed at her with a sad, vacant expression.

"Have you found a book for Bessie? By the way, speaking of her reminds me. I called upon that strange Mr. Faradeane this morning."

Olivia bent over the heap of dusty books, and, after a moment's silence, said:

"Yes, papa; I am glad of that."

"Are you? Why? Well, there's not much to be glad of, for he was not at home."

"He was out riding, perhaps," she said, with the faintest tinge of disappointment in her voice.

"No, he was in," said the squire, dryly. "He was in the house, for I saw him at the window as I went up the path."

Olivia looked round thoughtfully. "You saw him—"

"At the window. Yes; and he told his servant to say that he was not at home. I must say I was much annoyed. I am not used to rebuffs of that kind, especially from strangers. I was so irritated that I felt inclined to tell the man that I had seen his master, but I thought better of it, and left a card. I think this young fellow is acting in a very extraordinary fashion."

Olivia seemed to ponder for a moment. "Why, dear?" she asked, in a low voice.

"Why?" repeated the squire, with the nearest approach to impatience he ever permitted himself toward his darling. "Well, first by buying 'The Dell in the strange way he did, and then shunning all intercourse with his neighbors in the mysterious fashion he adopts. I hate mysteries! In my opinion, there is always something shady and shameful at the bottom of them."

"Mr. Faradeane does not look as if he had anything to be ashamed of," she said, in the same low, thoughtful voice.

A WONDERFUL PRIVILEGE—

the Right to Use the Investment Knowledge and Machinery of the Canada Life Assurance Company

WIDOW AND HER FRIENDS. No. 1—Her brother would like to borrow a few thousand dollars, to be paid back any time she needed it.

No. 2—She is strongly advised to buy land.

No. 3—Her father is greatly worried over his business, which needs capital.

No. 4—Her husband's most intimate friend warns her against making a bad investment, but will not take the responsibility of advising her what to do.

NO distressing financial problem faces the beneficiary under a Canada Life Policy. We invest the money for her, allowing the average rate of interest earned, less only a very moderate charge for investment expenses. This applies to all our profit-sharing policies, no matter when they were issued.

As in life insurance calculations it is safe to rely on average "Lives" and unsafe to rely on one life, so it is safe for an inexperienced woman to rely on the average result of a life insurance company's investments, but unsafe to rely on an investment or two selected by herself, an executor, or a friend.

Knowing this to be true, the Canada Life has for many years issued a regular income policy to safeguard beneficiaries. As a further extension of this idea, you may now secure for your beneficiary a definite monthly income payable for the whole of life, payments for twenty years being guaranteed to the beneficiary or estate in any event—thus making absolutely sure of a substantial income.

How our Monthly Income Plan is being used

Mr. B., a successful business man, has a son who is causing him much anxiety. He had decided to leave him $10,000, and recognize no further responsibility if he threw that away. Upon hearing of the Canada Life Monthly Income Plan, he realized it to be the best solution for his problem, and he is now contented to know that no matter how reckless his son may become, he will receive at least $50 a month, under this plan, as long as he lives.

Mr. S., a prominent banker, has a daughter with a speculating husband; a situation which promised short work of any lump sum that he might leave her. He took a Monthly Income Policy for $100 a month, thus removing all opportunity for speculation.

Mr. G., with a growing family, felt it to be his duty to assist an unmarried sister. He could not easily, in justice to his wife and children, make provision for her from his estate. A Monthly Income relieved his mind in this direction.

Mr. A., a rising young lawyer, has a wife and child for whom he wanted some definite and safe provision for their protection. He found the Monthly Income Contract to be exactly what he wanted, since only a moderate yearly premium is required instead of a large initial investment, and any fluctuation or depreciation in value that affects other securities is impossible with this plan. Moreover, he realized that, in event of the early death of both his wife and himself, the income, guaranteed for twenty years in any case, would protect the child until it had at least reached maturity.

Mr. R. took a Monthly Income Policy for his little daughter, aged 6, of whom he was very proud. He has arranged that the monthly cheques shall arrive on her birthday each year when he is not here to provide for her. Although the amount is not large, he knows that it will be continued as long as she lives, and will mean more to her than many times the sum from other sources.

Mr. W., a manufacturer with a large business, felt it advisable to leave his property as a going concern to his son, but there was danger that the profits might not be sufficient to also support his wife and two daughters. Monthly Income Policies covering each of these beneficiaries removed all difficulty in arranging his estate, and made absolutely sure provision for his wife and daughters, free from all hazards as to the continued success of the business.

No. 6—Her uncle has worked out a plan for taking her into partnership in his business.

No. 7—An "old friend of her husband" offers an investment in oil shares paying 20% dividend.

No. 8—Not being familiar with the road before her, she longs for the advice of her husband.

We advise the Monthly Income Plan, because—

Financial problems should not be thrust upon a woman at a critical time. The hands of unscrupulous men are always outstretched for money held by the unwary. Ninety per cent. of money paid beneficiaries is lost or spent within seven years.

Large sums of money on hand invite extravagance or unwise expenditure. A weekly or monthly income is the natural thing for most people. A woman can keep a family together on even a small income, provided it is REGULAR.

There is danger of a man leaving large property interests and too little income. Property must be producing income in order to be of any benefit to a bereaved family.

Out of sixteen legatees under the will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, only four—men of experience and ability—received outright legacies. The other twelve, women and men of less experience, received "incomes."

Economy in the handling of funds is assured by an organization such as the Canada Life, with large funds to invest and properly equipped to handle investments. Assuming enough left in cash to pay the immediate obligations of an estate, even a $15.00 monthly income will pay the rent if necessary, leaving a woman's mind free on that score, at least. (The Canada Life bases its rates on even a $10.00 monthly income, and welcomes applications for that amount.) "An income that never fails" is the MONTHLY income of the Canada Life.

Our "Private Inventory Form" is free for the asking. It enables you to test your progress and aids you in building up and arranging your estate.

The author adopts the view contained in the famous book "J'Accuse" but declines to hide his identity. He demands from the German Government answers to the following questions:—

- Why the bullying tone of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia?
- Why the brutal refusal of Austria to the demand for delay made by the Triple Entente?
- Why was the Serbian reply which surprised Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, nevertheless rejected?

- Why was the Austrian ultimatum approved at Berlin, when it was obvious its despatch meant a European war?
- Why has the German Government suppressed all reference to the Tsar's proposition to the Kaiser that the whole question in dispute should be submitted to a court of arbitration at The Hague?

Copies of this new "J'Accuse" have been seized by the police in various German cities.

$1,000.00 Reward Forfeited It Remedy Fails

We hope this notice will reach the eyes of people who are troubled with constipation and bowel trouble. Dr. Hamilton's Pills have been guaranteed to cure any case within three days, and the above reward will be paid for any case resisting this greatest of all remedies.

No prescription ever written could surpass Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. For years they have been curing the most obstinate cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches and sour stomach. Here is your chance to test Dr. Hamilton's Pills. If they fail—your money back for the asking. Be sure you get the yellow box, and insist on being supplied with only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c. at all dealers.

Household Notes.

- Sweet potatoes can be made into soup exactly as white ones are.
- Crinolin, rubbed on velvet, will take out every particle of dust.
- Almost any cold vegetable can be utilized to make a delicious salad.
- An apple put in the tin box with the cake will keep the cake moist.
- Japanese toweling makes pretty cushions for window seats and chairs.
- Boil a cracked dish for forty-five minutes in enough sweet milk to cover it.
- The amount of hot work saved by the salad habit is something astonishing.
- If soup is to be the chief dish for luncheon, make it bean or cream soup.
- A white background is always best where there is much mahogany furniture.
- Iced tea is a great resource in hot weather, but it should not be made too strong.
- The rough ends of the roast beef can be ground up and made into hamburger steak.

"Of Shoes and Ships and Sealing Wax of Cabbages & Kings."
THE BOARD OF TRADE.

The Board of Trade is a place where men put down money and guess how far No. 1 wheat will jump inside thirty days. If the jump fails to shatter any of the existing records several embittered operators drop off the board in a noiseless manner and apply arnica bandages to their wounds.

It costs a great deal of money to get on the board of trade, and sometimes it costs several times as much to get off. Every year some new, brash member from the far west is admitted to membership by paying $50,000 and repeating one of Jesse James' favorite passages of Scripture, and a few months later retires by the rear door with a vast amount of helpful experience and a check book shot full of holes as a coffee strainer. Nobody ever joined the Board of Trade with the pious idea of showing up the old members without breaking down in the middle of the third verse and backing off the stage with a wan, pinched look.

Bucking the Board of Trade continues to be the favorite pastime of sanguine citizens who have access to other people's money and who always know that mess pork is due for a phenomenal ascension by September 1. Many a trusted Sunday-school treasurer has dumped the proceeds of the mite-box into the wheat pit, while the other brethren were learning the golden text, only to have the market slump downward with a hollow groan and leave him stripped of both religion and collateral. Every once in a while some rural merchant imbibes the idea that he can invest a $10 bill in the Board of Trade and have it come back in the form of an eight-cylinder touring car, and after keeping this up for a reasonable length of time he decides that it is cheaper to play draw poker with total strangers who carry a striped deck.

The number of people who make any real money by playing the Board of Trade with a shoestring is about as numerous as those who locate the little pea at the circus. The real wise men of any community are those who play the savings department of a solvent bank every Saturday night. Four per cent. interest may look small to the man who wants to double his money between supper and breakfast, but it is better than having to protect the original investment with a lien on the household furniture. The man who gets this solemn fact hammered into his system while young will never have to be cared for by the county when he is old.

THE LIFE WE LIVE.

The life, my friends, is just the thing; one day we weep, the next we sing; to-day we whoop, to-morrow we a. i. l., which keeps us from all going stale. And as our days and years advance, we never know what will change. To-morrow's mysteries are hid, and what she has in her old chest can never be by mortal guessed. And that is why this life's sublime, and why we have so great a time. If we could in the future tread, if we could see, a year ahead, and know just what the gods will send, the spice of life would have an end. The unexpected is the stuff that makes this planet good enough. At morn you rise, depressed, and say, "I fear I'll be a toilsome day, with none to brush away my tears, or the song 'spells on my ears." And while you take a mournful din, your aunt and seven kids how in, with baggage stacked in trunk and crate, to stay six months, or maybe eight. 'Tis then that you, with buoyant mirth rear up and bless your native earth.

Our Clear Obligation

We are entirely in accord with the views expressed by our contemporaries on the subject of our returned soldiers and sailors and the imperative duty that is laid upon the country of providing for their present and future; with some of the practical suggestions that have been made we may not agree so fully, but this is a minor matter, and once the problem is taken energetically in hand it will easily solve itself. But there will be a problem, different only in degree from that which is presented to other parts of the Empire.

In attacking it, we shall only be following the lead of England and the other colonies. Fortunately, we have not to face the same perplexing difficulties that arise there, and in particular in Great Britain. Our men have been drawn from all sources,—professions, trades, industries and so on—but these have not been dislocated and revolutionized as they have been in the old country. The amazing results that have followed the introduction and extension of female labour in Great Britain themselves constitute a social revolution, which will in the end undoubtedly effect an enormous economic improvement, but must at first offer practical problems of the greatest difficulty. Women have shown their equality with men in many industrial pursuits and their superiority to them in many more; they cannot be expected lightly to leave these profitable avenues of employment to which they are better fitted than men, and it would be a pity if they had to. One obvious and happy solution of a great part of the problem has been found, and is being applied, in the revival of agriculture and the settling of men everywhere upon the land where they can with profit be settled. The same thing is being done systematically and under State supervision in Australia, in New Zealand and in Canada. The Government not merely allows the land to the men but gives them financial assistance on generous terms.

The same measures exactly are neither suitable nor necessary with us. In the great majority of cases, we think we may safely say that those of our lads who left positions to don the khaki will find them available, if they wish to reoccupy them, on their return. But they may not, for perfectly justifiable reasons, wish to reoccupy them, nor—and this is most important—may they be capable of doing so. This the Daily News has well and forcibly pointed out. Many men may return wounded and unfit to engage in the manual work in which they were formerly employed. They may find it difficult or impossible to find other work to which they are fitted. If so, the work must be found for them. There can be no two opinions on this point.

We think everyone will recognize the truth and force of this. But it is not enough to recognize it: action and, above all, organization are necessary. The suggestion, again, of the Daily News is the best that can be made. We should have some sort of Employment Registration Bureau, where there should be recorded, first, the names, ages, physical conditions, former employments and other pertinent and available details of all returning men; and, second, every position of every sort that is vacant throughout the Island. Employers, by giving all the information they can, will be benefiting both these men and themselves. In this way alone—and it is a very simple one after all—the greater part of the whole problem will be solved. If it prove to be a smaller problem than we anticipate, so much the better. But there will certainly still be left a good deal to be done; there will be men, handicapped either by want of training, educational deficiencies or honourable physical disabilities, who will be unable to fill any of the positions available. It will be our everlasting disgrace if they are left to themselves to seek others. If they need financial assistance it should, and must, be given them. The country will demand, if necessary, to be taxed in order to give it. If they need educational training, it should be given them. The splendid efforts of some of our women in this direction have shown, not merely how great the need is in this direction, but how much can be accomplished by a little effort and intelligent co-operation.

It is impossible here to do more than indicate generally the need, but that is all that ought to be necessary. If it is really recognized by everyone, and if the suggestion of the Daily News is adopted, in a literal or modified form, we can feel confident of the result. It must be remembered, too, that these men who come home to us are not the men that went out. They will have had, it may be, a hard experience, but it may be a very valuable one as well. They will have had an education in the best of all schools. They will return with a wider horizon and deepened sympathies, possessed of a knowledge and ability they did not have before. They will bring all this to Newfoundland, and Newfoundland will be the gainer by it. In welcoming them home and in throwing wide open to them every door to advancement and honour, we shall be repaying a debt of gratitude which will be added to with interest in future years.

DEED.

Killed in action, July 1st, in France, Herman J., beloved son of J. C. and Mrs. Noseworthy. He was in A. H. Murray's office for three years and sailed with the 1st Contingent. Left Harwick, for the Dardanelles and landed safely under shell fire; went through the Gallipoli campaign; taken ill of dysentery in the trenches, put on board hospital ship, arriving in Malta, in October, and then transferred on active service December, 1914, to France where he laid down his life for his King and Country. When his first term of service was up he decided to follow on to the end, come what may. He consoled his parents many times by saying he could not be a coward.

Died of wounds, July 23rd, 1916, at No. 10 Casualty Clearing Station, Somewhere in France, Joshua, youngest son of the late Joshua and Eliza Coombs, of Upper Island Cove, leaving four brothers and three sisters. He was in the Canadian Force, and attached to the 24th Brigade.

"DESTINY" IS SEEN BY MANY AT NICKEL

The programme presented at the Nickel Theatre yesterday attracted very large audiences especially at night when the theatre was crowded. The pictures were all that could be desired. "The Strange Case of Mary Page" was continued. The chapter was entitled "The Accusing Eye" and it was beautifully interesting. The three act drama "Destiny" was one of the best pictures ever shown in St.

John's. It is a delightful story which all lovers of the Nickel should make an effort to see. The programme will be repeated this evening. To-morrow Edwin Arden appears in "The Eagle's Nest."

MAGNIFICENT AND INVALUABLE HEROISM.

PARIS, To-day.

A despatch to La Liberté, dated from North France says the Germans yesterday furiously counter attacked the positions taken the day before by the British north of Pozieres. An order had been issued to the units of the Pozieres sector to re-take from the British at any cost Hill 160, as shown by an order of the day issued by Gen. Von Buelow and read to the troops yesterday. The order said, "We must at any price regain possession of the Pozieres plateau, which if left in the hands of the English would give them a precious advantage. The attacks will be led by successive waves separated by a distance of 80 metres. The troops which have first gained a footing on the plateau must remain there and await the necessary reinforcements whatever loss there may be. Any officer or man who fails to resist even unto death on the conquered ground will be summarily executed before a court martial." A number of copies of this document were taken from the prisoners of two divisions, which participated in the heavy attacks. The Australians again covered themselves with glory. One regiment which occupied advanced trenches to the left of the Bapaume Road on the edge of the plateau gave proof of magnificent heroism, resisting the assaults of three Bavarian and Saxon regiments, and holding out strongly under a deluge of shot and shell and yielding not an inch of ground. The regiment sustained appreciable losses but its courageous resistance enabled the English Commander to make the necessary dispositions and to check the German counter offensive. All the enemy attacks against Hill 160 and Pozieres Mill were repulsed, the enemy sustaining a serious loss. The Germans sent forward three strong columns of one battalion each. The British artillery immediately began a harassing fire of remarkable precision, which cut down the assailants' ranks, forcing a precipitate retreat.

First Mail From the Last Contingent.

Mr. A. W. Martin of the G.P.O. received a letter from his son, Lt.-Col. Wm. H. Martin, now at Ayr, describing the trip across on the S.S. Sicilian, in which he says:—"On Sunday after leaving home the men of the respective denominations attended Divine service. Rev. Capt. Nangle officiated for the Roman Catholics; Lieut. N. Outerbridge conducted service for the Church of England; and Lieut. Holloway for the Methodists. Several hymns were sung and all through the Service was thoroughly enjoyed. On approaching the coast of Ireland they were met by two British warships who accompanied them for a day and a night, dashing in all directions, sometimes making circles around the Sicilian, and directing that ship on her course, which to the surprise of the passengers was made across the North of Ireland, thence across the Irish Sea to Liverpool. While crossing the latter stretch of water battleships and cruisers of all descriptions would loom up in the distance, and as if by magic would suddenly disappear. The trip across was all that could be desired, and all enjoyed themselves. This is the first mail from the contingent that left here last.

German Government Goes After One of its Former Supporters.

LONDON, August 3. — The Berliner Tageblatt has been suspended by the military authorities, according to a despatch from Copenhagen.

This is the second time since the outbreak of the war that the Berliner Tageblatt has been suspended, the first suspension having occurred two months ago. The Tageblatt, formerly one of the staunchest journalistic supporters of the Government, joined the opposition early this year, when the newspaper agitation against Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg began.

Question of Disabled Soldiers—Re-modelling and Reorganisation After the War.

Sir Edward P. Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, in the course of an interview in London with a representative of the Salvation Army, referred to the two battalions Newfoundland has sent to the Allies, with a third in training. One of the objects of his visit to England was, he said, to inspect these fine fellows at their training depot; also to cheer the Newfoundland men who are in hospital. The province also, Sir Edward explained, had some two thousand men in training for the navy. For half a century Naval training had been one of its special cares, the British Government having presented the province with a ship, in which the men make their home, under the supervision of British Officers.

One result of the North Sea fight, said Sir Edward, was to give Naval recruiting in the provinces a stimulus. That is a typical British characteristic. Asked whether Newfoundland will offer any facilities for the settlement of families who have suffered by the war, and for whose benefit the Salvation Army has a carefully laid scheme of emigration, regulated in regard to its finances, by the Public Trustee, Premier Morris said he was sure the province would make a sympathetic contribution towards the execution of any emigration Scheme for widows, orphans, or disabled soldiers. "Any Newfoundland Government would be friendly towards any Scheme proposed by the responsible British bodies that deal with this matter, and reasonable concession would be granted in respect to settlement."

Change Island Notes.

The patriotic meeting held in the L.O.A. Hall on July 24th for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions and appointing collectors for the Cot Fund, proved a great success. Speeches were made by Rev. Wilkinson, S. Roberts, Esq., J.P., Mr. F. C. Earle and Mr. W. J. Torrance. Mrs. Wilkinson gave a recitation and a solo was rendered by Miss Lizzie Earle. At the end a collection was taken up and the fine sum of two hundred dollars realized. Private subscriptions since have brought the collection up to three hundred. Change Islands aims to provide two cots and with such a good beginning the prospects of obtaining the necessary sum are bright.

Messrs. Earle, Scammell, Roberts and Hyde spent a day at Palme's Hr. last week frothing.

Miss Mabel Earle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Earle, returned last week from Toronto, where she has been residing the past four years. She is returning to Toronto in October.

Miss Winnie Harris, of Musgrave-town, and Miss Reilly, of Western Canada, are spending their vacation here, the guests of Miss Mary Roberts.

Mr. Arthur Earle, Mr. A. J. Goodland and Miss Annie Hyde, of Fogo, spent the week end here with friends. A number of young ladies and gentlemen held an enjoyable outing to Deep Cove on the 28th.

Miss Lizzie Earle went to Fogo by the Prospero on Friday.

Mr. F. R. Earle and Mr. J. W. Scammell left for St. John's by the Prospero.

Mr. W. H. Earle is leaving shortly on a visit to Grand Falls, business and pleasure combined.

Miss Dorrie Hyde, of Fogo, is the guest of her brother Mr. Louis Hyde, Mr. A. Findlater and Mr. J. Davey, of St. John's, were the guests of Mr. F. C. Earle on Thursday evening.

Rev. J. and Mrs. Prescott returned by Prospero from St. John's, where they have been attending Synod.

Rev. J. T. Richards, Rural Dean of the Straits of Belle Isle, was the preacher at St. Margaret's on Sunday at Matins and Evensong.

Mrs. F. R. Earle, who has been undergoing treatment at the Consumption Camp, is returning by the Prospero. —C.J.C.

Tabasco Here From Liver

The Furness Liner Tabasco, 9 days from Liverpool, reached this port at 7.30 this morning. Strong westerly winds were encountered during the passage. Dense fog was met on reaching this coast. The ship brought 29 bags and 9 baskets of mail and 500 tons of general cargo. Owing to the Durango occupying the Furness pier, the Tabasco had to berth at Shea & Co's wharf where she is now discharging.

A Famous Submarine.

In its Day Le Diable Marin Was Considered a Marvel.

Le Diable Marin (the Sea Devil) was one of the most famous of the nineteenth century submarines. It was the invention of Wilhelm Bauer, who launched it in 1856.

This vessel was built of iron. She was fifty-two feet long, twelve feet wide and eleven feet deep and shaped somewhat like a dolphin. Her sides were six-tenths of an inch thick and could resist the pressure of a 150 foot column of water.

The motive power was provided by a screw, which was operated by a treadmill, and the up or down motion was achieved by shifting water in longitudinal tanks by means of pistons.

At the bow was a bomb or torpedo containing fifty pounds of powder, and near it were two heavy india rubber gloves, by means of which a man inside the vessel could reach out and fasten the bomb to the bottom or side of a ship. To purify the air Bauer arranged long pipes, which were quite effective in revivifying the stale air for a short time.

The Russian government supplied him with a crew of eighteen men, who were to make a trial trip with him, but on his first descent they were so alarmed as to be useless, and when the Diable Marin rose again to the surface they cried "Praise God!"

When his men were more accustomed to the work Bauer executed many wonderful manoeuvres, and on one occasion stayed under water while he wrote letters to his mother, King Maximilian of Bavaria and the Grand Duke of Constantinople.

WALKING FOR BEAUTY.

There is nothing better than walking to enhance beauty and suppleness of the body. If one's walk has been always directed over smooth and level paths, walking would not be so arduous for the exertion would only call into action such muscles that are brought into play in the ordinary movement of the body.

But stairs must be climbed indoors and hills surmounted in one's rambles, so muscles that control such movements of the legs must be considered. Running up either stairs or hills is not only bad for the health, but it is also ungraceful and undignified. To climb either should not be fatiguing, if properly executed.

For instance, instead of bending the trunk far forward, as many do, it should be held erect and the chest not be allowed to droop. Holding this posture one foot is raised and placed flat on the stair, then steadily raise the body. One should not pause between steps; to do so is to lose momentum, and this requires additional energy to advance the next step. In climbing hills, so far as possible the same rule should be applied.

Fatigue or weak back muscles has caused many a woman to forego the pleasure of an outing, for she knew that her physical condition would not allow her to keep pace with the company. Weak muscles usually result from lack of exercise; to strengthen them practice this movement.

Lying face down, on the floor, hands resting on hips, feet held firmly by an attendant or placed under heavy furniture for support, begin exercise by raising the head; the head should be slowly raised and lowered from four to six times.

The above exercise not only strengthens the back, but acts strongly and favorably on the muscles of the chest and abdomen.

Memories and Wastebaskets!

RUTH CAMERON.

What a strange and wonderful thing is the power of association! It can clothe some simple object with deep significance, it can create for you a mood of depression or exaltation out of some simple sight or sound or fragrance.

I have a letter on my desk which brought me very pleasant news. I have not the heart to throw it away. I keep it there and now and then when I chance to see it I get a reflection of the thrill it gave me when I first received it.

"You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will But the scent of the roses will cling round it still."

Association clings to some objects like a fragrance. I suppose that is why we love to bring back souvenirs from our voyages and why we keep books of memorabilia.

They Will Show Them To You. Personally, I have never liked such collections, partly because people who keep them insist upon showing them to other people in whom, of course, they arouse no stirrings of memory; partly because their very formality seems to take away from their potency. You must run across an object to get the proper thrill from it. Associations are like shadows, pursue them and they elude you, elude them and they pursue. I could never get the rush of memories from a carefully-preserved book of school mementoes that came to me when I chanced across an old school picture in the garret, recently.

Drowning a Submarine Very Gruesome Work.

Traps Laid by the British Navy to Catch the German Undersea Boats—Removing Bodies After Days Elopse—The Most Disagreeable Business of the Great War—Makes Strong men Weak.

Men of the British Navy have taken many submarines of the enemies out of their traps, says the Worcester Telegram. That they make these undersea boats over and send them out as English submarines to torpedo other craft of the enemies is taken for granted, though it is not admitted in the official reports. Worcester men may have made some of the wire in the traps which have captured the German and Austrian submarines, and there may be some satisfaction in that part of the work. Englishmen whose duty it is to take in the trapped diving boats do not like the work. It is the most gruesome of all the ghoulish business of the great war in Europe, they claim.

Raise Crew When Dead.
An English doctor who has been with the "rescue" crews tells the story, but he admits there is no sense of rescue about it, for nothing is done to raise the submarine from the trap until all on board are dead, and it is the most horrible of deaths of war, the doctor claims. When a submarine strikes one of the thousands of wire nets set all around the British Isles, there is no known means of escape. Every move of the boat means more mixing up with the enmeshed wires. And the wires also telegraph the capture to a naval station automatically. Then a destroyer boat hurries to the trap like a hunter who discovers that game has been caught in his deadfall. The destroyer takes a position above the submerged boat.

Wait for the Bubbles.
And the doctor is still more graphic in further description. "Then there is nothing to do but wait, sometimes for hours, sometimes for days. Officers and men of the waiting vessel know what's going on down in the green depths. They know that in time bubbles will come to the surface and oil will spread over the sea. The destroyer waits for the bubbles, 'death bubbles' they call them, for they tell of death struggles going on in the submarine." That may seem simple to people who never tried it, and of course an Englishman should not bother about how much an enemy of his country suffers in war time.

Still men are more or less human in their thoughts, if not in their acts, and the doctor says it is frightful there over an expiring corpse of men who are experts in the worst kind of warfare practiced. They suffer until the horrible end, and in some cases it appears that the waiting men safe above them suffers more and longer until the death bubbles rise to the top and show through the oil, and then the hoisting crane comes and lifts up the submarine and the net and the disentanglement takes place.

Make Strong Men Weak.
And you may expect to read what the English naval men find in the German submarine. On that point the doctor says: "Seamen who fought through the maelstrom of Skagerrak will tell you their story, but no sailor speaks of the sights seen in a recovered submarine. Those sights make strong men weak and drive sensible men delirious with horror." Then there is something about the war which is not allowed even to get as far as the censors. It is too horrible for the observers to talk about. And sailors are not as a rule squeamish. For that reason and some others, it is probably not true that for months, as the cable reports have it, the German people have been urging the Imperial Government to turn the submarines loose to do their worst with the peaceful shipping of all nations.

Grateful Acknowledgement.
We, the Clergy, representing the various denominations of Grand Falls, hereby desire jointly to tender our sincere and heartfelt thanks to the President and Directors of the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, Limited, for their generous donation of One Thousand Dollars to each of the religious denominations of Grand Falls.

This munificent expression of the benevolence and magnanimity of the Company is all the more deeply appreciated in view of the kindly interest and charity that the Company and its officials have always manifested towards the Churches of Grand Falls, and is a further unmistakable evidence of their genuine regard for the moral as well as the material welfare of his country.

There is no doubt that the residents of Grand Falls cannot, all, considering such repeated marks of assiduous good-will, to regard the donors as benefactors to whom are due their unswerving loyalty and co-operation.

"HIPRESS" Rubber Footwear

Brown—with the "RED-LINE"

The rubber in these boots is Goodrich Auto Tire Stock—so tough it will actually outwear steel.

These boots are made by a new process—cut by hand, the old style black boots—had vulcanized under tremendous pressure—very heavy, short and air-bubble saturated out—they can't crack, leak, peel or pull apart. And they're comfortable—fit snug. Write for the booklet showing all styles.

No. 945—Private Peter Barron, 38 Duckworth Street. Missing June 28. (Unofficially) Prisoner of War.

No. 747—Private Thomas Coombs, Spaniard's Bay. Missing June 28. (Unofficially) Prisoner of War.

(Authority for the above—Letter sent by 9151 Sergt. Major Thomson, 3rd Battalion Canadians, from Gies-sen, Hesse, Germany, dated July 10th, to Canadian Red Cross Society, London.)

No. 991—Private Cyril Richards, South River, C. B. Wounded dangerously—seriously ill (Typhoid). Admitted Wandsworth; gunshot wound, fractured skull.

NOTE—In forwarding this telegram His Excellency the Governor observes that the information respecting the men now reported as Prisoners of War is not official, but as it comes through the Canadian Red Cross Society it can be relied upon. These two men are Prisoners of War in the Hessian Camp, a Camp well reported on by the American Embassy, and as the Hessians are connected with the English Royal Family, and have always been more or less friendly to England, the men will no doubt be better treated than if they were in the Prussian Camps.

Prominent Citizen of Harbor Grace Passes Away.

On Saturday at midnight, one of the most highly respected and prominent citizens of Harbor Grace passed away, in the person of Charles L. Kennedy, Sr. The late Mr. Kennedy was an American citizen, but the greater part of his life was spent in this country. His affection for his native land remained strong to the end; it was only equalled by his love for his adopted land and the home of his wife and children. He came to Newfoundland in 1858 as engineer of the tug "Dauntless," a side paddle steamer owned by C. F. Bennett & Co., the first of its class to come to the country. In 1869 he went to reside in Harbor Grace and in a short time started in business as a tinsmith, brass and copper worker, adding also hardware. He conducted a very successful business until the crash of 1894, when adverse commercial conditions compelled him to limit his undertakings.

He married a daughter of a famous fish-killer of Harbor Grace, the late Captain Patrick Kelly, who survives him. There are also seven children surviving, viz: Miss Lizzie, a Graduate Nurse; Charles, now conducting the business; William, Assistant Post-Master, and Ronald, Principal of the R. C. Academy, all at Harbor Grace; Michael, Mgr. and shareholder in Joyce Bros., & Co. of Boston, Mass, and Mrs. Thomas Keefe and Mrs. Harry Strapp of the same city.

The late Mr. Kennedy was an exemplary citizen in every way, ever ready for any public service. In his early years and in middle life no movement in his adopted city was complete without his co-operation. His advice was sought on all occasions. He was a man of strong opinions, fearless and outspoken in his expression of them, but withal the pink of courtesy and chivalry; he was a devout Catholic, a life-long (or nearly so) total abstainer, charitable to a fault; in fact his life was a shining example of all the domestic virtues.

His funeral took place yesterday (Monday) afternoon. It was very largely attended. The burial service was conducted by the Rev. Thomas O'Neill, in the absence of Bishop March, who is in St. John's attending the Retreat. Mr. Kennedy had reached the ripe age of eighty years at his death.—R.L.P.

The EASTERN TRUST COMPANY

WE GO ON FOREVER.

Just two reasons why the Eastern Trust Company can administer an Estate better than a personal executor or administrator.

1.—It has nearly twenty-four years' experience, and its existence is perpetual, neither does it cost any more to employ the Company than an individual. The Company affords the Estate absolute security. It has a paid-up capital of $1,000,000.00 and a reserve of $250,000.00. The Estates held in trust to December 31st, 1915, amount to $15,036,683.85.

2.—In the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, your Estate must look around for a substitute. The new administrator is unfamiliar with the business and confusion is often the result. The death of any officer of this Company does not break the continuity of the policy of administration.

While the Company administers over Fifteen Million Dollars worth of Estates, it also does a very large business in executing Trusts of all kinds and acting as Financial Agents of all descriptions. We can give fullest satisfaction in the collection of rents, interests, mortgages, dividends, etc.

Gains Quit! Back-Soreness Goes,

Torturous Lumbago Cured by "Nerviline."

This Wonderful Curative Linctament Has Almost Magical Powers.

Not an ache or a pain anywhere that it cannot reach. No soreness or strain that it has not the power to relieve.

You can compare a congestive pain to a little fire. When congestion smoulders, pain comes and goes. Congestion grows into inflammation, but pain, now intense, grows excruciating and stays, too. There is an absolute antidote of pain—it is Nerviline.

Nerviline is the only remedy in the world sold under guarantee—if it does not relieve you, you get your money back. Proof enough that Nerviline is a remedy that will fulfill absolutely every requirement of a pain-reliever, both for internal and external use.

New, to you, perhaps is Nerviline, but known well in many lands as the most penetrating and pain-subduing pain remedy ever discovered. Not oily or ill-smelling, but pleasant—it rubs on. Not temporary action, but permanent in the control of pain.

Backache it cures like magic. For rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, stiffness, sprains or strains, it is the only thing. Large bottle, 50 cents; trial size, 25 cents; at druggists.

LONDON, Aug. 7.
Australian, Kent, Surrey and Sussex troops during the week advanced west and north of Pozieres on a 3,000 yards front, capturing the enemy's main second line system, and several hundred prisoners.

In Verdun sector the French captured and hold Thiaumont work and the greater part of the village of Fleury. Many counter attacks here and in the Somme region were repulsed with heavy losses.

Turks estimated at 14,000 strong attacked our positions near the Suez Canal and were defeated with very heavy loss. They were pursued 18 miles. Over 3,100 unarmoured prisoners were captured. The General highly commends the conduct of the Australian, New Zealand and Territorial troops.

South of Brody the Russians have occupied the right bank of the Sereth River, capturing over 5,500 prisoners and numerous machine guns. Heavy fighting continues on the River Stokhod.

In Asia Minor the Russian advance continues. General Smuts reports further progress.

GERMANS ENTER BRITISH LINES.
LONDON, Aug. 7.
Determined attacks on British lines north and northeast of Pozieres this morning were repulsed, according to a British official statement, issued to-night. The Germans succeeded in entering the British lines at one or two places but were driven out.

THROUGH GERMAN EAST AFRICA.
LONDON, Aug. 7.
Rapid progress in the southward drive of the British through German East Africa is reported in an official statement, issued to-day. The Germans have been driven from the line of the Central Railway at Kilimatinde and other points, says the report from General Smuts.

PROGRESS OF THE FRONT.
PARIS, Aug. 7.
Late to-day French troops captured a line of German trenches between Hemwood and the Somme, according to an official statement issued by the War Office to-night. They also made some progress south of Thiaumont works.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.
PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.
Further successes for the Russians along the Sereth and Striborka Rivers in the north of Galicia and south of Brody were announced by the War Office to-day. The Russians captured strongly fortified positions.

AUSTRIANS REPORTED RETIRING.
LONDON, Aug. 7.
A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says irregular successes to the south of Brody bring the Russians within 14 miles of the Tarnopol-Lemberg railway. It is reported that Austrian forces at Tarnopol are already retiring in the direction of Zlochoff.

ITALIAN TROOPS CAPTURE AUSTRIAN POSITIONS.
ROME, Aug. 7.
Italian troops have captured strong Austrian positions commanding the communication between Travenanzes Valley and Sare Torrent in Gader Valley, Tofana region, says an official communication issued to-day by the War Office.

CIVILIANS AND COURT MARTIAL.
LONDON, Aug. 7.
David Lloyd George, Secretary of War, in the Commons to-day moved the second reading of a bill giving civilians the right to appear before military tribunals as witnesses, also providing that in cases where civilians are implicated, the court might be composed of civilians as well as officers. The Secretary explained that civilian members of the courts will be members of parliament. He said the bill was due to the late Sir Arthur Basil Markham, member of parliament who had brought certain matters to his notice. This is the bill which had given rise to rumors of the coming trial of a high official of the War Office. Lloyd George mentioned no names. He said all officers concerned courted the fullest inquiry, and desired whatever court was set up should proceed with the investigation

The British authorities here declare that the German submarine Deutschland has not as yet actually gone to sea. This claim is based on the fact that the sounding apparatus on British warships have not detected the submarine passing. It is declared these "Listeners" would have recorded the presence of the submarine had she been within ten miles of a warship. There is a report here that the Deutschland is hiding in the Bay after having made an effort to start out to sea.

STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Aug. 7.
Lloyd's Shipping Agency announces the Italian sailing vessel Eugenie, and the Norwegian steamer Aransa sunk. The report that the British steamer Spral is sunk, says the agency, is unconfirmed.

AMERICAN SHIPBUILDING.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.
The first ship of the Norwegian merchant marine built in the great lakes, 3,000 tons, the Nordal, sailed from Montreal to-night. The first voyage will be on a mission of mercy. She is chartered by the Rockefeller foundation to take a cargo of corn from Montreal to Rotterdam for the relief of Belgian war sufferers. The Nordal is one of 30 steamers built for Norwegian firms in American shipyards.

Large Part Being Played By Japan in the Big War

The Country's Ambassador to the Court of St. James, at Present in Toronto, Says Japan will not Give Kiau Chow Back to Germany.—Japanese Munitions Helping the Russians Drive Back the Enemy.

Toronto, August 3.—Marquis Inoye, Japanese Ambassador to the Court of St. James, arrived in Toronto last night, on his way from London to Japan, and is staying at the Queen Hotel. Sir John and Lady Hendry returned yesterday from Niagara-on-the-Lake, to receive His Excellency, who is accompanied by the Marchioness and suite. They will be entertained at Government House to-day. It is expected the Ambassador will be able to attend the commemorative service on Friday, on the second anniversary of the declaration of war. "Will you give Kiau Chow back to Germany after the war?" the Marquis was asked.

"We will give it back to China, to whom it belongs."

"Japan is playing a large part in the war," said the marquis. "All our government arsenals and our private industries are mobilized against Germany. We are doing everything possible to help Russia. We are sending munitions to the eastern front via Vladivostok. I might safely say that Japan has supplied the major part of the munitions being used by the Russians in their offensive and in that we have contributed a great deal toward the Russian success."

Beecher Knew His Germany.

One of the leading policies of the mighty but unscrupulous Bismarck was to represent his case to the world that the world might believe that Germany's foes were always the aggressors. He did this in the case of Austria, but his most signal triumph in this respect was that of 1870, when although engaged in a deliberate plot to drive unprepared France into war, he made it seem universally self-evident that Napoleon was provoking the struggle. And Napoleon did not have intelligence enough to perceive or prevent the scheme. The dwarf was pitted against the Titan and did not see the disparity. This German attitude of "he-was-picking-on-me" did not deceive anybody, however. The great Cardinal Manning clearly saw through it and the keen intellect of Henry Ward Beecher was in no-wise deceived. In 1875, he thus sarcastically referred to the same:

"It is wonderful what bad neighbors poor Germany seems to have. There is that great hectoring Belgium trying to pick a quarrel with her. There is France, recovering from her great defeat with a rapidity, which shows very little consideration for Germany's feelings. Austria, too, retains her sovereignty over twelve million subjects of German race, which, of course, is exasperating to the great Empire. And don't Holland and Denmark persist in holding on to their nice bits of seacoast with an obstinacy as annoying as Naboth's of old? And isn't there the Pope, who, as every one knows, has countless armies at his back ready to march to Berlin? It really looks as if poor Germany might feel obliged to go to war with somebody, just to keep peace! And to make her case harder, the unsympathizing persist in thinking that there is a war in Europe at present, it will probably be because Germany—or the group of soldiers who rule Germany—chooses it."

The great Preacher knew his Germany all right. The whining hypocrite playing martyr is invariably the most brutal of bullies and barbarians when his opportunity arrives.—Halifax Review.

Bait Scarce; Prospects Poor.

The latest reports received by the Board of Trade are:—

Aug. 5th. From W. White, English Harbor to Spaniard's Cove.—Owing to the strong tide running many traps have been damaged and taken in. The abundance of cod which struck in here for a few days in July has almost completely disappeared and little is being done now. The total catch is 12,300 qtls. and for last week 100. Thirty traps and 40 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are poor and squid have made their appearance in only small quantities yet.

Aug. 5th. From J. Bishop, Safe Hr. to Cape Freels.—Forty boats are fishing but no traps and only a few dories and skiffs. The catch is 5,000 qtls. with 50 for last week. There was Obituary.

MICHAEL T. KNIGHT.

The news of the passing of Mr. Michael T. Knight yesterday, while it could not have been altogether unexpected, was heard with sorrow by very many, particularly the older residents of the city. The venerable citizen had attained the age of 84, and died full of years and honor. He belonged to an earlier generation, and for some years had lived in the quiet seclusion of his home, content to let the bustling world roll on without; but he always remained the same kindly and genial friend to all that knew him and, in knowing, loved and respected him.

There was no more loyal native of St. John's than Michael Knight. He was born on January 29th, 1832. This, we might remind our readers, was the year the Reform Bill was passed in England; the year that saw the death of Goethe and of Sir Walter Scott; Wellington was still living. Educated first under Joseph Bacon and later at Castle Rennie under Messrs. Newman and Nugent—ancient and honored names they are now!—Mr. Knight entered business as a clerk in the employ of P. Rogerson & Co. His first connection with the public life of the Colony began in 1865, from which time until 1876 he held the position of Collector of Customs on the Labrador. He resigned to become Secretary of the Board of Works. In 1882 he stood for the District of Bay de Verde, but was unsuccessful. Three years later he was returned member for Twillingate and for four years was Financial Secretary. Another unsuccessful candidature followed in 1889, but he was elected in 1893 and became Surveyor General the next year. This was the last time he sat in the Legislature, but he soon afterwards was appointed Deputy Minister of Public Works, retiring a few years ago on a pension.

No man was more faithful to his country, his city and his friendships than Mr. Knight. He is remembered as one who brought to the vocation of politics no feeling of animosity whatever. His enemies were such in a political sense alone. He never resented criticism, which consequently was never directed bitterly against him; he was the first to appreciate a jest against himself. His memory is enshrined in the hearts of many in our city and island as that of a true, honorable and kindly gentleman. His wife, a sister of Mr. Stephen March, died a few years ago. He leaves a brother, Mr. J. R. Knight, of Military Road, and a sister, Mrs. Heyfield, widow of the late Rev. Jesse Heyfield, to whom the Telegram offers its sympathy in their bereavement. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon, from his late residence on Circular Road.

Enjoy your meals by taking a teaspoonful of Stafford's Prescription "A" before eating. Price 25c. and 50c. Postage 5 and 10c. extra.—jly22,tf

McMurdo's Store News

TUESDAY, Aug. 8th, 1916.

The Iris Alcohol Store enables you to get hot water in a few seconds and boiling water in a few minutes.

If you want a cup of tea, coffee or cocoa, in a hurry, or a boiled egg, or hot water for washing, shaving, or for any other purpose, without trouble or soot, this will get it for you. The Iris apparatus is the completest thing of the kind we have seen at any way near the price, and so simple. The outfit consists of a stand, a metal saucepan with handle and cover complete, and a package of "lined heat" which only needs a match to set it going, and which can be put out instantly by replacing the cover.

You can get the Iris at either of our stores. Price 50c.; Refills 15c.

Harold Bell Wright's Latest Novel,

"WHEN A MAN'S A MAN,"

is a fine big wholesome Novel of simple sweetness and virile strength, while the pages are crowded with the thrilling incidents that belong to the adventurous life of the unfenced land depicted, one feels, always, beneath the surface of the stirring scenes, the great primitive and enduring life forces that men and women of the story portray. In the Dean, Philip Acton, Patches, Little Billy, Curly Elson, Kitty Reid and Helen Manning, the author has created real living, breathing men and women, and we are made to feel and understand that there come to everyone those times when in spite of all, above all, and at any cost, a man must be a man.
