NO SETTLEMENT YET WITH SHIPPING MEN

More Strikebreakers Arrived From Montreal Today and Four Refused to Work--Arrival of Alcides--Spirited Meeting on McLeod Wharf--Italians Welcomed at Labor Hall--Donaldson People Will Bring Outside Men Here Tomorrow.

The prospect of a settlement between the longshoremen and the shipping people seems as remote as ever. Twenty men laborers arrived at Sand Point at noon from Montreal, but only sixteen could be induced to board the steamer. The other four, learning that a strike was on "the coop" as soon as they got off the train. The addition of these men will give the Allan line a force of 42 men to do their work.

THE ALCIDES ARRIVES

The Donaldson line steamer Alcides arrived at Partridge Island last night, and docked this morning at the McLeod wharf, where the longshoremen, who had been waiting for the steamer, met her. The steamer was met by a crowd of men, and a spirited meeting was held on the wharf.

THE LABOR TROUBLE

As navigation on the St. Lawrence does not close until the end of this week, and there are still several steamers loading in that port, there is still plenty of work for longshoremen. But after this week the Montreal wharves will be deserted, and a great number of men will be out of employment. An officer of the Longshoremen's Association there has declared that they will support the St. John men in their demand for higher wages, but it may well be doubted if hundreds upon hundreds of men in Montreal, with the prospect of an idle winter, will refuse an attractive offer to come to St. John. This statement is not made in the interest of any party to the dispute here, but is given as an obvious truth that must be considered by St. John men, no matter how much they may dislike it. It is not a question of opinion or opinion one way or the other that we have to do with, but plain facts. Can the St. John men enforce their views upon the steamship owners? If they cannot, and if they continue their present attitude what will be the result to their own interests and their own families? Last year, with a great deal less work, they accepted a certain rate of wages. This year, with a very busy season in prospect, they wait until the first steamer is due, and then demand a higher rate, at the same time that the city calls upon the steamship people to pay what advertisements abroad as the following from a Montreal paper:—

"At Messrs. Bedford & Co. the officials evidently intend upon killing the longshoremen want an increase." We in St. John say of course discount the statements of steamship people who are interested in getting everything as cheap as possible, but we cannot prevent the impression going abroad that this is a troublesome and expensive port. Neither the longshoremen nor the citizens in general can afford to have the reputation of the port injured by injudicious action. It should have been made known weeks ago what counter the longshoremen intended to pursue. Had that been done their demands would have been accorded to or other arrangements made so that traffic would not be impeded. For the great necessity in the interests of the city of St. John is that the traffic shall not be impeded. The man who impedes it is not placing his hand on the throat of an individual or a union, but on the throat of a community, which hopes to have a great winter trade. This is the fact upon which the Times has steadily sought to rivet public attention—the traffic must not be stopped—the goods must be forwarded. In the interests of all the people this must be insisted on, and this policy pursued.

The statement is made that so many men are sometimes needed and so few at other times that the average rate of weekly wages is small. Why did not the longshoremen lay all the facts and figures before the people of St. John months ago, when the general public of the justice of their cause—if it be just—may public opinion on their side, and have the whole question threshed out before the winter traffic began? As this paper pointed out last Monday, there are hundreds of men working at Sand Point in winter who are not longshoremen in summer, but who presumably have steady work and good pay at other occupations during the season. Is it fair to appeal to public sympathy on their behalf as unemployed longshoremen?

With regard to arbitration, Mr. Allan manifestly could not settle the matter for the whole Montreal Shipping Federation, nor could he in justice be asked to submit this matter to arbitration any more than the city should be asked to submit to arbitration the question of the pay of the men who work for the street department. If such a rule were adopted every man who works for another could demand more pay and appeal to arbitration. There is only one way for this thing to work itself out. Men have a right to refuse to work and employers have a right to get other men if they can. The present outlook appears to be that the other men will be got, and that this strike will end by being injurious to the men and their cause, and to the reputation of the port. There is a heavy responsibility on the shoulders of somebody. We shall presently learn who it is. The Times has been charged with fighting against organized labor. On the contrary, it has been arguing in favor of organized wisdom in the interests of this Canadian winter port. A sane, reasonable, broad view of the situation is the right one, and the result will show it.

THE NORTH END LIGHTS

The Times prints today the reply of the street railway officials to Mr. Macneil's criticism of their former statement regarding the cost of North End lights under city ownership and management. It will not do any harm to have this matter discussed. If the city has managed badly the people should know it. If not, the city officials have the opportunity to show that they have been faithful stewards. But in any case there is no danger that the Street Railway Company will be permitted to extend its monopoly. The city made a grave mistake when it refused to purchase the west side plant and franchises, as the future will show. It will hold on to the North End plant, and, if these have been bungling and mismanagement the methods must be changed.

A NOTABLE CONVERT

The editors of the Globe appear to have got mixed up on the question of prize fighting. On Monday the Globe discussed the recent fatal bout and the apparent doubt about the law, and said:—"In the meantime it is somewhat difficult for the ordinary citizen, between the conflicting statements and the differing opinion of judges to know just what is right and what is legal." Last evening the Globe reproduced an editorial which it published a year ago, setting forth the law on the question, and added this comment:—"The ordinary reader on account of a late occurrence will, in all probability, think it regrettable that the view herein expressed did not prevail." It may be added that the ordinary reader will in all probability think it regrettable that the view herein expressed did not prevail in the Globe office last Monday. However, having converted itself the Globe may now be able to convert the chief of police, police magistrate, county court judges and the public at large.

THE BY-ELECTIONS

Although the government won two out of three bye-elections in Ontario yesterday, it was in each case with a reduced majority, while the Conservatives are much elated over their victory in Wentworth. The Sun this morning styles the general result a rebuke for the government. It is certainly not as favorable a result as the government would expect in bye-elections. The Conservatives in Ontario are evidently cheerful and well organized. Hon. Mr. Aylesworth has on this second attempt got safely into parliament, and is given the opportunity to show what he can do as the successor to Sir William Mulock. The general impression is that he is not so strong a man, and less likely to impress his own views upon his colleagues; but he has at least his opportunity. So far as the result of these elections may be taken as an index, one would infer that the salary and pension grab are not very heartily endorsed in Ontario. There is some surprise that the Liberal majority was reduced so much in Anti-Gomish. It had been generally believed that the government was stronger in the Nova Scotia constituency than in Ontario. The result there should be particularly pleasing to Mr. Borden, the opposition leader, since the Halifax Conservative organ has not been very friendly in his utterances regarding his course as leader of the party. The general effect of the four bye-elections yesterday will be to encourage the opposition without seriously alarming the government.

THE SUFFERING JEWS

(Montreal Witness.) Almost any amount of bitterness against Christians on the part of Jews is warranted by the heinous behavior of Christianity towards Jews. So long as the fanatical attitude of persecution continues to show itself in any part of the world those Jews must be forgiven who think of Christianity as a spirit of hatred towards them. On behalf of Christianity of late years it is no doubt to be said that this animosity has in it an element of fear and self-defence. The Jewish people is certainly the miracle of the ages. Fortitude and superstitious and many beliefs once considered essential parts of religion have in our day melted noticeably away before enlightenment and science. But this great portent of the Jewish race stands out today more palpably than ever. Through its historic record is for the most part a record of oppression and the most adverse conditions, the little tribe of shepherds and vine-dressers of the Judean hills has maintained its separateness and increased until it is in the way of becoming a dominant factor in every city and nation on earth. In Hebrew speech, the sons of Israel are rapidly coming to possess the gates of their enemies, and the fear of them is upon all nations. How far this is due to the charming influence of their religion we do not know, but they multiplied and became dangerous in Egypt so they multiply everywhere the more they are trodden upon.

THE NURSE FOUND AT LAST Geary Died, Located by Boston Police—Important Witness in Dress Suit Case Mystery.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 22.—After a diligent search that lasted several weeks, the police yesterday succeeded in locating Miss Sarah Elizabeth Griffiths, the young professional nurse who attended Susanna A. Geary, victim of the "suicide case tragedy," and in whose arms the unfortunate chorus girl died before dawn on Sept. 10, at the home of Mrs. Mary S. Dean, 68 Winthrop street, Roxbury. The authorities are elated over finding Miss Griffiths, for her presence materially strengthens the government's case against Mrs. Dean, Dr. McLeod and Hunt and Crawford, whose joint trial will begin next Monday before Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court.

Miss Griffiths was found yesterday morning at 627 Tremont street, where she has lodged two years. Without delay she was escorted to the office of District Attorney Suggs, where she had a conference with Mr. Suggs and Capt. Dugas. Then she was taken before Judge Stevens in court, as soon as court opened, was given $200 bonds to appear as a single witness, and was sent to the branch home of the North End Mission at 31 Waterman square, where she will be kept under surveillance until her testimony is required.

Miss Griffiths knows what had performed the first bungling operation on the dancing girl in that cheerless chamber of the Winthrop street house, knows just what part Mrs. McLeod and Pease played in the subsequent desperate but futile attempts to avert the worst; still has vivid recollections of the agony of the dying girl, of her heart-rending appeals to send for her mother and a clergyman. Miss Griffiths can describe, too, the terrors of that scene, the feverish excitement, the indescribable dread of detection, the unendurable fear of the doctor, the indignities of the hospital, the packing of the parts in the bags and the removal of the gruesome pockets from the house.

Miss Griffiths, besides, all this, can tell many more things the authorities, think she chooses. That is why they are so jubilant over finding her. She undoubtedly tell who it was who suggested mutilating the body and getting rid of it. The authorities were pleased to procure Miss Coulter, the domestic, but she is not well versed in the case, as the young nurse, they think. Crawford and Hunt, alias Howard, have talked with impudence from their confessions made in New York and since, but the authorities place far more reliance in Miss Griffiths than in either of them or any one else as to what actually occurred at 68 Winthrop street. They feel that she is less biased and prejudiced, not being a defendant, that she will not be so apt to be actuated by any desire to shift the blame and responsibility to some one else.

Miss Griffiths has frankly told the authorities all she knows. She returned to no little display of emotion to the death scene of Miss Geary, which was so tragic that it touched even herself and the doctors, who are called upon by long contact with fatal cases of illness. "I pitied the poor child with all my heart," said Miss Griffiths. "When she cried for her mother and a priest I wanted to send for both, but they refused. I have seen many people die, but that poor girl's last appeals touched me more than anything I can recall. I am not a Catholic, but I wanted to have them send for a priest at any rate. My intention was of course of no avail, though. They were afraid it would expose everything. What could I do?"

Miss Griffiths was said to be a native of England. She is 30 years of age, tall and slender and of medium complexion. She came to this country many years ago, and the members of her immediate family live at Littleton (N. H.) Seven or eight years ago she entered the City Hospital to be a nurse, but was taken sick before her course was completed, and was not taken back again owing to the fact that she was so well versed in anatomy for the work. Later she went to Philadelphia and received a diploma from the City Hospital after a course of less than a year. That was about 1901, and she has been located in this city ever since. She has been acquainted with Dr. McLeod for four or five years and has been retained by him to nurse a great many of his cases. No. 627 Tremont street, where she lodged, is rented by a physician and his wife, who do not wish to have their names figure in the affair.

Even so early in the season a snowing fatally nearly took place as the result of a bad breaking through the ice in the Fairville school, yesterday, accompanied by a number of her scholars, left for a skate on the pond. The ice, in most places, although not thick, was very hard, and there was little danger. A lad named Compton, however, skated over a spot which had not been frozen sufficiently, and he went through into the icy water. Miss DeWolfe was fortunately nearby, and with great presence of mind he rescued him, and would have ice and caught hold of young Compton, who was about exhausted, and would have gone under a minute later. Two or three of the larger boys caught hold of Miss DeWolfe's feet, and succeeded in pulling her back far enough to get the boy out of the water. Miss DeWolfe's deed was certainly an heroic one, as the ice on which she stretched herself was equally frail, and at any minute might have broken. At the Fairville school this morning Miss DeWolfe was congratulated by many upon her plucky rescue of young Compton. The lad received a severe shock, but beyond that he is none the worse for his ducking.

HE WANDERED IN MANY LANDS

"Mr. Jones From Norway, Me." Has Been Up Against It in Every Quarter of the Globe—Has Had Experiences From Palace to Prison—Did Many Brave Deeds and Wears Medals.

(Bangor News.) A most interesting story is going the rounds regarding a "soldier of fortune" who hails from Norway, this state. He has tested life in all parts of the globe, has had narrow escapes and made a thrilling rescue during the Russo-Japanese war. He has a medal given him by the late beloved Queen Victoria and one from the Kaiser. A United States deputy marshal told the story, but refused to divulge the name of the man. "Never mind his name," said the deputy, in telling the story. "His name doesn't count and he is probably living a fairly decent life now. Anyway the crime for which he was arrested was not serious and he had so many things in his favor, was so cleverly moving toward the west, ways that it would be a shame to call attention at this time to a misdeed for which he has repaid humanity many times. "I was given the warrant for his arrest and found him in Lewiston. He was charged with using the mails to defraud. He had obtained a few dollars on one of those schemes which are always bound to catch someone and which, in the end, deserve their loss, yet he was violating the United States postal laws and had to be brought up with a round turn. "I will call him Jones for convenience. Well Jones was playing in the theatre orchestra at Lewiston and I found him at rehearsal the theatre when I arrested him. At first he seemed broken up, but after a while he broadened and took it philosophically. As the hotel, waiting for the train, and on the ride to Portland, he interested me with chapters from his varied career and his career had been varied. He had learned my name and while sitting in the smoker I heard someone call me by the name of calling me. I looked and looked, but could see no one I knew or anyone who naturally knew me. "In a minute or so I heard my name called again by a voice that was in no way familiar to me. "Why don't you leave that man and come down here," said the mysterious voice. "He won't run away," I was puzzled, but made no effort to leave my seat. Jones, who was sitting at the next table, saw my expression on his face and he remarked, "Pretty good, wasn't it? That was your humble servant. I traveled with Herman five years and learned many of his tricks. "Arriving in Portland he was immediately arraigned before the commissioner and bound over to the next term of court. He did not get bail and was locked up. I had spoken to the marshal about him and he said: "I'd put the irons on that fellow. He is a pretty smooth article. I didn't believe that he would attempt to get away, but nevertheless, I asked him to hold out his hands. "Better put them on behind," said the marshal, and Jones said, "It makes no difference to me." "His hands were fastened behind his back and the irons were put on his right. His overcoat was thrown over his shoulders to conceal the irons on the walk from the court room to the jail. We went to Market street and just before reaching Federal street, I asked him if the irons were uncomfortable. "Not at all," he replied, taking a hand from behind and showing it to me without the iron. He then brought the other hand out, holding the iron in his hand. "They don't bother me much. Now I will carry them this way," and Jones said, "It makes no difference to me." "The devil," I replied, "if you can do that every time the hands are no use. Let me carry them," and I carried them in my pocket the rest of the way to the jail. "At the next session of court he pleaded guilty and when Judge Webb asked him if he had anything to say before sentence was passed on him, he replied that he had a few things which he believed the court ought to know, and in clear and excellent English he told the court a brief story of his life. I wish I could remember the whole of it, because it was interesting, but I don't. Anyway he told the judge that he had not done much harm in his life to anyone except himself. He had obtained a few dollars in the mail scheme for which he was under arrest, but he gave the people part of it. While he had not been guilty of many things against other people, he had done in his life a few good things. He begged that as if he did not want to continue. "First he was modest and the recital was embarrassing him. "Go on," said Judge Webb, who was interested. "Well, your honor," he continued, reaching into an inside pocket and taking a small case therefrom, "there is a gold medal that was presented to me by Queen Victoria for saving three sailors in the English channel." "They got overboard in a gale of wind and high seas and could not reach the life boats thrown to them. Jones, who was a sailor on one of Her Majesty's battleships at the time, sprang into the water and kept them afloat until a boat reached them. "And here," he continued, taking an-

THE FUTURE OF LLOYDMINSTER Main Line of C. N. R. Runs Close to the Town and Feeling of Isolation is Removed.

LLOYDMINSTER, Sask., Nov. 20.—The main line of the C. N. R. that is now being built to Edmonton passes quite close to the new town of Lloydminster, and the feeling of isolation which has prevailed since the prairie from Saskatoon three years ago and made their stake in a section near the new railway terminus, are delighted to find that the latest railway development has caught up and put them on the front street. To have a great transcontinental railway run by one's door is undoubtedly a great piece of luck; the founders of the colony in their most sanguine moments could scarcely have promised with any degree of certainty that within such a short period, the isolation from which they suffered by being away back should soon be removed. Construction trains are now running and giving a fairly good service, which the settlers appear to appreciate. The advent of the railway has put fresh heart into the settlers. One can see the effects in the remarkable amount of building going on at Lloydminster. A great deal of brick is being used in the new structures, giving a more solid and permanent aspect to the town. Lloydminster stands on debatable ground, the fourth meridian, the line that divides the two provinces passes down the main street. One moves from the one province into the other without having any sense of a jar. One leaves the hotel in Saskatchewan for the station, which is in Alberta, and the time consumed in doing so need not exceed three minutes. No doubt but in time questions respecting provincial jurisdiction will arise, already steps are being taken to remove the reproach of "drought" from the Alberta division of the town. A hotel is being built, and a license is to be applied for and the owner expects to have his request granted because of his house being in another province and under different licensing control. The owner is taking big chances and will be lucky if his project does not meet with defeat. The new railway station is a fine commodious building and could not be more convenient. There can be no possible doubt about the future of Lloydminster, situated as it is in the centre of an exceptionally fine farming country. The soil is a rich friable loam, with a clay sub-soil, just an ideal country for mixed farming. Wheat, oats and barley do splendidly; this year the crops were immense; numerous small fruits also do very well. As for stock, when one sees the cattle grazed deep in the rich, succulent grasses and the most of them came out green; mostly city men, having everything to learn. Few of them knew how to harness horses, nor had they the most rudimentary knowledge

CANADA PAYS HOMAGE TO THE MEMORY OF A HERO

Handsomen Monument Unveiled in Ottawa to H. A. Harper Who Gave His Life Trying to Save Miss Bessie Blair From Drowning in Ottawa River--Both Died Together.

OTTAWA, Nov. 2.—The unveiling of the memorial to the late Mr. Henry A. Harper on Saturday commemorates an act of bravery which has been commended from one end of Canada to the other. At the head of Mercier street stands the monument. The bronze veiling which covered it from view all week was lifted this afternoon by His Excellency the Governor-General.

It is nearly four years since Henry A. Harper performed the deed of heroism which has made his name famous. Probably never even cast a greater glow over the capital of Canada, or more proudly stirred the feelings of all classes in the city. Among the young people of Ottawa there were few, if any, who were not generally esteemed, respected and loved, both because of their splendid characters and fine personalities, than Miss Blair and Mr. Harper. Though comparatively young in years, Mr. Harper had already distinguished himself as a journalist and a member of the Civil Service. He had, for a time, been respected till some time after the accident had occurred. On the day of the funeral a public meeting of the citizens of Ottawa was called by Ernest W. Keyser, a native of Ottawa, in memory of Henry Albert Harper, who lost his life in trying to save the life of another.

Within a few weeks after it had been decided to erect a memorial monument, sum amounting to between two and three thousand dollars was subscribed. The following resolutions, determining the nature and form of the monument, were adopted by the committee appointed for the purpose. They were passed at a meeting held at Ottawa to the late Mr. Harper shall be a permanent monument of stone or bronze in the open air.

The memorial to be erected shall take the form of a figure symbolic of the hero's character, and shall be placed at the head of Mercier street, near the intersection of the same with the Ottawa river. The figure shall be of the same height as the hero, and shall be of the same material as the monument. The figure shall be of the same height as the hero, and shall be of the same material as the monument.

MRS. TEMPLE'S TELEGRAM The Harkins Company presented Dark Russia at the Opera House last night to a delighted audience. The acting of the different characters was perfect, and the ladies and gentlemen of the company well deserved the applause they received. Tonight the company will appear in the latest farcical comedy, Mrs. Temple's Telegram, produced by those who have to be before the public. It was the only success of the season last year in New York, and is being given at the Madison Square Theatre. Tom Wise, the old St. John favorite, was in the cast, and played the part of the butler. Mrs. Temple's Telegram will be the last play of the season, and on Saturday, for the first time in St. John, will be presented the beautiful English play Brother Officers. There will be the usual popular night matinee Saturday afternoon at 2.30.

MUST PAY WATER TAX Montreal, Nov. 22.—(Special)—One hundred and fifty lawyers of Montreal will be summoned to appear in the recorder's court because they have not paid their city water tax. Some of them are said to be three years in arrears. The list includes many who are well known. The first batch of summonses was sent out today, and others will follow in due course of time. This proceeding is the result of City Treasurer Robit's determination to reduce the huge amount of unpaid water taxes.

GATHERING THEIR FORCES ATHENS, Nov. 22.—The warships of the powers, which propose to make a demagogy against Turkey, arrived at Piræus today, and exchanged salutes and official visits. The commanders of the vessels are awaiting instructions.

ST. JOHN RAILWAY COMPANY STANDS BY ITS STATEMENT

Repeats Charge That Figures of North End Electric Light Plant Show That the City's Quotations Do Not Reveal Real Conditions.

The Times recently published a state- ment prepared by the St. John Railway Company, which, if correct, showed that the lights provided by the North End light- ing plant were costing the city consider- ably more than the city accounts showed.

"As regards the city's statement that interest should only be charged on $14,000, we find in the chamberlain's report of 1904 that the total amount expended for electric light station and plant amounted to $17,369.00, made up as follows: Electric light station, building and coal, plant and appliances, $16, 627.67; one new dynamo, $992.00.

"We would, therefore, claim that inter- est should be charged on the full value of the plant.

"Again Mr. Macrae says the land on which the city's electric plant in the North End is built is crown land and is therefore exempt from taxation. This has nothing whatever to do with the mat- ter, as should the city have had to pur- chase land, as any company would have to do, it would increase the cost of the plant by the value of the land.

"As to Mr. Macrae's contention that there should be no charge made for water supply, this is a mistaken idea, as should any company operate the north end plant they would have to pay for water for hundreds of gallons for water. Electric light plants in this city do not receive manufacturers' rates, that is one-half cent per 100 gallons. Therefore, the city loses in revenue whatever quantity of water the north end plant consumes, which would be greatly in excess of the figures stated, $190.

"Against Mr. Macrae's statement that all repairs and renewals have been charged to operating expenses, all electric light companies, both in the United States and Canada, figure their deprecia- tion charges on the cost of the equip- ment on plant at 10 per cent. on the total amount expended for the plant, that is, operating is of course a necessity if they intend to operate the plant. The alder- men surely will not call attention to the fact that the city's electric plant and coal plant and cheap construction, is now worth the 17,000 odd dollars which the city claims to have paid for it.

"With regard to Mr. Wasey's state- ment in the Sun of the 18th, relative to his report on the interest on the city's debt, we would call attention to the fact that he included the interest, we find, on reference to page 114 of the total amount charged against the north end lamp department as operating ex- penses is $33,838, which does not in- clude the interest on the city's debt over- draft in the Bank of New Brunswick on this account, let alone the interest on the investment.

"Regarding Mr. Macrae's statement that the city doesn't pay five per cent. for their money, we would call attention to the statement of the chamberlain that the bonds issued in payment of the Portland light loan are five per cent. under Act 48, Y. C. C. C.

The company again call attention to the fact that no proportion of superin- tendent's salary is charged to the operat- ing or any proportion of office ex- penses or general expenses of any kind, therefore they claim that the figures are very low, as stated in the Times of Nov. 19th.

KENNEBECASIS BAY

This morning our Plymouth rocks and white leghorns were skimming around in the frothy sea, presumably looking for new friends, just as some November busi- ness whose June friends have vanished in the silence, skinned around looking for new friends, who stand in both instances in- fante. To the old there is something abnor- mal in the odd, your grey hair, watery eyes, and your feet are not as firm as they were once. Then there is little sym- pathy between the young and their fathers or grandfathers do or ever do.

White leghorns are very diligent and they are not so silly, my eyes are not as watery as yours, and your feet are not as firm as mine, therefore you will vanish all too soon to ever give me any trouble. Hang on to them as you may, they will vanish all too soon to ever give me any trouble.

The white leghorns are less appreciative of the pro- tective care of their owners than the Plymouth rocks are very diligent and they are not so silly, my eyes are not as watery as yours, and your feet are not as firm as mine, therefore you will vanish all too soon to ever give me any trouble.
