

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche
Series.

CIHM/ICMH
Collection de
microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1982

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- ☐ Coloured covers/Couverture de couleur
- ☐ Covers damaged/Couverture endommagée
- ☐ Covers restored and/or laminated/Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- ☒ Cover title missing/Le titre de couverture manque
- ☐ Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- ☐ Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/ Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- ☐ Coloured plates and/or illustrations/Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- ☐ Bound with other material/Relié avec d'autres documents
- ☐ Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure
- ☐ Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.
- ☐ Additional comments:/ Commentaires supplémentaires:

- ☐ Coloured pages/Pages de couleur
- ☐ Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- ☐ Pages restored and/or laminated/Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- ☒ Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- ☐ Pages detached/Pages détachées
- ☐ Showthrough/
Transparence
- ☐ Quality of print varies/Qualité inégale de l'impression
- ☐ Includes supplementary material/Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
- ☐ Only edition available/Seule édition disponible
- ☐ Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of Congress
Photoduplication Service

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol ➡ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Library of Congress
Photoduplication Service

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole ➡ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

Mr. & Mrs. J. S. Lee.

HISTORY
OF
NORTH AMERICA.

SAMUEL SHAW,

Respectfully informs his Friends and the Public, That he carries on the BOOK-BINDING BUSINESS, in its various branches, at his Shop in the Main-street, Where he has constantly for Sale,

BIBLES, Testaments, Prayer Books, Psalm Books, Hymn Books, Singing Books, Dictionaries, Geographies, Arithmetics, Grammars, Spelling Books, and a variety of other Books, small Histories, Picture Books, &c. &c. also, Blank Books of various kinds, Writing and Letter Paper, Quills, Wafers, Sealing Wax, Ink Powder, Ink Stands, &c. &c.

Lansingburgh, February 1, 1805.

Charles R. and George Webster,

Have for sale, at their Bookstore, in Albany,

THE Revised and Session Laws of this State; Tidd's Practice and Practical Forms; Clerk's Magazine, containing the most useful and necessary forms of writing which commonly occur between man and man; Gordon's Generalia; Blackstone's Commentaries; Gordon's and Winterbotham's History of America; Hume's England; Brown's, Mackenzie's and Barrow's Travels; Volney's and Dalton's Egypt; Newton's Works; Davies' Blair's and Strong's Sermons; Volney's View of the United States; Encyclopedia; Domestic Encyclopedia; Minor Encyclopedia; Witherapoon's Works; ALSO, Bibles, Prayer Books, Jenks' Devotion, Poor Man's Help and Young Man's Guide, Dutch Church Psalms, Watts' Psalms and Hymns, David's Psalms, Smith and Oecum's Hymns, Olney Hymns, Bible Stories, Montfort's Catholic and Episcopal Catechisms, Heidelburgh and Hellenbrook Catechisms, Shorter Catechism, with Scripture Proofs. A large supply of Paper and Blank Books.

AW,
riends and the n the BOOK.
in its various
he Main-street,
y for Sale,
Prayer Books,
Books, Singing
raphies, Arith-
g Books, and a small Histories,
o, Blank Books
nd Letter Paper,
ax, Ink Powder,

1805.

ge Webster,
tore, in Albany,
e of this State; Tidd's ns; Clerk's Magazine, necessary forms of writ-en-man and man; Con-Commentaries; Gorry of America; Hume's and Barrows' Travels; ewton's Works; Davies' Volney's View of the Domestic Encyclopedia;
poon's Works; ALSO,
otion, Poor Man's Help Church Psalms, Watts' lms, Smith and Oecum's ries, Monitors, Catholic eidelberg and Hellenechism, with Scripture per and Blank Books,

THE HISTORY
OF
NORTH AMERICA;

CONTAINING

A REVIEW

OF THE CUSTOMS AND MANNERS OF THE ORIGINAL INHABITANTS; THE FIRST SETTLEMENT OF THE BRITISH COLONIES;

AND THEIR

RISE AND PROGRESS,

FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE TIME OF THEIR BECOMING

UNITED, FREE AND

Independent States.

By the REVEREND MR. COOPER.

TO WHICH IS NOW ADDED,

AN APPENDIX,

Containing

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, AND THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

PRINTED

FOR SAMUEL SHAW, Bookbinder, Lancasterburgh, BY CHARLES A. & GEORGE WESTER, Albany.

E 188
C 165
88099 LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS.

Kingsbury Richard Taylor	Wm. Wilcox, jun. Gardner Clark	Brandon Timothy Beckland
David Osborne, jun.	Georgia (Ver.) Orange Wells	Concord (N. H.) Benjamin Paine
Samuel Andrews	Whitchell Landing Dr. John Langdon	Bennington Ebehr. Walbridge
Hartford John Wood	Hebron Dennison Darrow	Uriah Edgerton
David Putman	Fair Haven Salmon Norton	Stephen Dewey
Waterford Charles Cushman	Rutland Z. Whitmore	John Locke Levi Maxwell	East Rutland Oral Cook	Andrew Selden, esq
Jarvis Brewster	Isaac Gage	Martin Norton
S. Stewart	Stephen Hodgman	Thos. A. Thomson
John P. Van Ness	Louis Toulisat	Saml. B. Young, esq
Daniel Powers	Clarendon (Ver.) Gideon H. Otis	Isaac Choate
Reuben Rynders	William Smillie	James Charles
Isaac Boser	Waltham Reuben Fosby	John Phelps
Daniel G. Ganssey	Wallingford Mosely Hall	Thomas Belden
Greenville Eliel Tracy	Derby Eliha Southwick	Thomas Crofoot, jun Argyle George Cooper	Samuel Dow	Nathan Reals
Salem Daniel McNeal	Bradford Barnes	Benajah Story
Ira C. Church	Caleb Bassum	John Love
John Blosson	Guy Woodworth	Peter A. Story
Joshua Streeter	Charles Wells	Salvatus Ruttingbar
William Robertson	Mount-Tabor Peleg Smith	Zelotes Sanders
Samuel Archibald	Thomas Gainer	Brattleborough Nathaniel Chandler
Levi Brown	Dorset John Blackmon	Hosack Russel Chase
Walter Geer	Manchester Eliakim Deming	Rapin Andrews
B. Doty	Wm. Underhill	Moses Warren
Abner Stone	Martin Roberts	Asa Pemberton
Williamstown Charles C. Carver	Benjamin Swift	Samuel Mathews
John Bridges	Edward Perkins	Jacob Laming
Milton (Ver.) Lewis Lyon	Robert Pempant	Ebenezer Cross
Eliha Ashley	Eliphalet Wells	Gideon Slead
Asel Learned	Frederic W. Wack	Pittstown Timothy Tracy
Timothy F. Cook	Eli Purdy	Joseph Randall
Joseph Coon	Samuel Wilcox	David Randall
Heman Allen	Gilbert Wilson	Benjamin Stevens
Asariah Lee	Arhington OziBaker	Zerubbabel Kemp
Thomas Dewey	Caleb Hyde, Esq.	Eli Fisk
Rhodes Latgdon		Hiram Dean
Mordecai Leper		Phineas Wright
William Parish		Robert Eddy
Heber Allen		Schaghticoke John Coats Lisle (Tioga)

IBERS.

Brandon
 Timothy Buckland
 Concord (N. H.)
 Benjamin Paine Bennington
 Ebenezer Walbridge
 Uriah Edgerton
 Stephen Dewey
 John Locke
 Andrew Selden, esq.
 Martin Norton
 Tho. A. Thomson
 Saml. B. Young, esq.
 Isaac Choate
 James Charles
 John Phelps
 Thomas Belden
 Thomas Crofoot, jun.
 Nathan Beals
 Benajah Story
 John Love
 Peter A. Story
 Salvanus Ratingbar
 Zelotes Sanders
Brattleborough
 Nathaniel Chandler
Brook
 Russel Chase
 Rapin Andrews
 Moses Warren
 Asa Pemberton
 Samuel Mathews
 Jacob Lansing
 Ebenezer Cross
 Gideon Stead
Pittsford
 Timothy Tracy
 Joseph Randall
 David Randall
 Benjamin Stevens
 Zerubbabel Kamp
 Eli Flak
 Hiram Dean
 Phineas Wright
 Jack Robert Eddy
Schaghticoke
 John Coats
Lisle (Tioga)
 aker Caleb Hyde, Esq.

Hebron.

Henry Price
 John Thompson
 Robert Boyd
 Robert Craig
 William McClellan
 William Brewster
 Alexander Webster
 Robert Qus, jun.

Salem.

Daniel M'Nitt
 David Thompson
 Ebenezer Place
 William Hoyg
 George W. McCracken
 Abner Stone, jun.
 Joseph McCracken jun.
 David Stewart, jun.
 Jonas Sloan Josiah Wilson
 Andrew Chamberlain

Westfield.

Ebenezer Northam
 Zepheniah Kingsey

Granville.

Jonathan Steel
 Joseph Brown

Kingsbury.

Alpheus Doty

Schenectady.

Nathan D. Wright

Greenbush.

William Gibson

Argyle.

Reubin Whallop

Hartford.

Lewis Gates

John P. Webb

Cambridge.

Robert Armstrong
 Joseph Stewart

Greenwich.

James Paddock

Botton.

John B. Brown
 David Pierce
 James Woodworth
 John Holman
 Robert Edgcombe

Schaghticoke.

Peter Vanderburgh

Stillwater.

John Patrick.
 Deliverance Andrews
 David Braivell
 Reuben Smith
 Samuel Hunter
 Nicholas Depaw
 David Rhodes
 Cyprian Watson, jun.
 Asa Lane
 Thomas Hoskins
 Amos Gage
 Luther Stone
 Charles Garges
 Royal N. Bowman
 Navel Miller
 Herman Judon
 Gilbert Hooker
 Frederick Stewart
 Amos Mulliken
 Lemuel Rowel
 Asa Green
 Walter Broughton
 Moses Hunter
 John Hunter
 Samuel Gleason
 Oliver Sackrides
 Gardner Consklin
 James Palmer
 Samuel Wood
 Reuben Woodworth

Warren Smith
Lansingburgh.
 James Dougrey
 Charles Brewster
 Joseph Alexander
 Eli Judson
 Joseph S. Mabbett
 Samuel Bontecou
 Ebenezer W. Walbridge
 Daniel Young
 John Walcott
 Stephen Rose
 William Walcott
 David Smith
 Francis Choate
 Robert Graham
 James Purdie
 Francis Adancourt
 Isaac Hasbrook
 William Thompson
 John Rutherford
 Abraham C. Lansing
 Joshua Burnham
 Samuel Parr
 Seth Hubbard
 Stephen Clark
 Joseph Fox
 William Hedges
 David M. Murry
 Matthew Gillespie
 Judson Webb
 James Getty
 Edward A. Cook
 Moses Carbit
 Samuel Frost
 Renben King
 Seth Seelye
 Caleb Allen

Taylor Fordham
 Joshua Griffin
 John Winchell
 John Willson
 Daniel Seymour
 Stephen W. Johnson
 Allan M. Lean
 John M. Gillvra
 Luther Whitney
 James Daniels
 Thomas H. Phelps
 Noah Dibble
 Joseph Choate
 Fitch Skinner
 Lewis Putnam
 George Gill
 Immanuel Joseph Souza
 Samuel Comstock
 Stephen Payne
 William Spafford
 James Maullin
 George Hotaman
 Russell Armington
 David Dale
 Joseph Ballard
Ira [Vermont.]
 Jonathan Beebe
Newhaven (Verm.)
 Christopher Beebe
Cashleton [Verm.]
 Joel Drake
 Benjamin Brawnson
Orwell [Verm.]
 Luther Brown
 Isaac Tenny
Lisbon (Verm.)
 John Turner.

Fordham
 Griffin
 Mitchell
 Willson
 Seymour
 W. Johnson
 M. Lean
 M. Gill
 Whitney
 Daniels
 H. Phelps
 Dibble
 Choate
 Skinner
 Putnam
 E. Gill
 M. Joseph Souza
 M. Comstock
 M. Payne
 M. Spafford
 M. Mallin
 M. Hobbs
 M. Armington
 M. Dale
 M. Ballard
 M. [Vermont.]
 M. Beebe
 M. (Verm.)
 M. Beebe
 M. [Verm.]
 M. Drake
 M. Brawnson
 M. [Verm.]
 M. Brown
 M. Tenny
 M. (Verm.)
 M. Turner.

Preface.

FUTURE generations will perhaps view the late Revolution in North America, as the most singular phenomenon that ever appeared in the political hemisphere of any nation.

To point out the gradual steps by which America finally obtained her independence, to describe those terrible scenes of rapine, blood and slaughter, which accompanied those struggles, so fatal to thousands of brave officers and men on both sides, and so ruinous to the finances of the mother country, are principally the objects of this epitome.

In the execution of this business, we have endeavored to divest ourselves of every spark of national prejudice, and have therefore contented ourselves with barely relating facts, without presuming to give our opinion thereon, wishing to leave our readers the sole power of judging for themselves.

Besides the detail of these important events, we have given an account of the customs and manners of the original inhabitants of North America, and such as they nearly are at this day. We have also shown at what time, and by what causes, the British colonies in North America were first settled, and have marked their rise from their original insignificance, till they became Thirteen United and Independent States.

the original inha-
a, and such as they We have also shown at causes, the Bri-America were first
ed their rise from ance, till they be-and Independent

Contents.

CHAP. I.

DESCRIPTION of the persons, manners, and customs of the original inhabitants of North America.—Their dress, education and employments.—Their hospitality and resentments.—Liberty the darling passion of the original natives.— Feasts, on what occasions appointed.— Method of atoning for murder.—Mourning for their dead.—The feast of souls.— Method of preparing for war.—Miserable state of their prisoners. Page 13.

CHAP. II.

Account of the first settlers of North America.—Settlement at New Plymouth.—The Puritans purchase and settle the Massachusetts Bay.—Connecticut and New-Haven colonies settled.—Providence and Rhode-Island.—New-Hampshire and the Main.—New-York—New-Jersey—Virginia.—Maryland—Carolina—Pennsylvania and Delaware.—Georgia. 32

CHAP. III.

Expedition against Louisburg—Gen. Braddock defeated—Massachusetts assembly declare against parliamentary taxes.—The stamp act.—Riots at Boston on account of that act. The stamp act repealed. Mr. Charles Townsend's bill for taxing the colonies afresh. Troops ordered to Boston. Soldiers at Boston fire on the inhabitants. East-India company empowered to export their own teas. Tea thrown into the sea at Boston. Measures pursued relative to the Boston port bill. Massachusetts people prepare to defend their rights by arms. Gage fortifies the entrance into Boston. Proceedings in the British houses of Parliament. Gen. Gage sends troops to Salem. He sends troops to Concord and Lexington, who are defeated. The restraining bills. Howe, Clinton, and Burgoyne sail for Boston. 47

C H A P. IV.

The expedition against Ticonderoga. George Washington, Esq. elected commander in chief of the continental forces. The battle at Breed's hill, commonly called Bunker's hill. Georgia accedes to the Union. The Thirteen United Colonies. The Asia man-of-war fires upon New-York. Colonel Arnold's expedition into Canada. Falmouth destroyed, and on what account. Colonel Allen, an American officer, taken prisoner.

F S.

ton on account
act repealed.
bill for taxing
ops ordered to ston fire on the company em-own teas. Tea Boston. Mea-
the Boston port
ople prepare to
ns. Gage forti-ston. Proceeds of Parliament.
s to Salem. He and Lexington, restraining bills.
Burgoyne sail for 47

IV.

st Ticonderoga.
Esq. elected com-
continental forces.
s hill, commonly Georgia accedes Thirteen United
man of war fires olonel Arnold's ex-Falmouth de-account. Colonel Esqr, taken prison-

CONTENTS. ix

er, and put in irons. General Montgomery appears before Quebec and is killed in storming the city. 66

CHAP. V.

Gen. Howe evacuates Boston. Norfolk in Virginia burnt. Sir Peter Parker and Earl Cornwallis sail for America. The blockade of Quebec continued. The Americans retreat from before it. A number of Highlanders and Col. Campbell taken at Boston. Declaration of American Independence. Gen. Howe lands the royal army on Long-Island. 85

CHAP. VI.

Wretched state of the American armies under Washington and Gates. New-York taken by the English. The battle of the White Plains. A body of Hessians defeated at Trenton. Gen. Howe removes his army from Staten Island. Gen. Burgoyne proceeds to Crown Point. Ticonderoga and Fort Independence evacuated by the Americans. Description of the flag of the United States. Battle at the Brandywine. Philadelphia taken by the royal forces. Account of Miss M'Rea's cruel death by the Indians. Americans engage the British under Gen. Burgoyne.

CONTENTS.

Distress and calamity of the royal army.
Gen. Burgoyne baffled in all his designs, and reduced to the last extremity. He signs the convention. . . . . 104

C H A P. VII.

Count Donop repulsed in the attack upon Red Bank. Mud Island reduced by the British. Congress receive the treaties concluded between France and the United States. The Randolph, an American frigate, blown up. Sir Henry Clinton succeeds Gen. Howe in America. The Marquis de la Fayette, with 2500 men, narrowly escapes being cut off by the British forces. The treaties between France and the United States signed. Lord North's conciliatory propositions. Mess. Franklin, Deane, and Lee, have a public audience at the French court. The British army evacuates Philadelphia. Skirmishes between the British and Americans. The British arrive at Sandy Hook.
Count d'Estaing's fleet anchors within the Hook. Gov. Johnstone attempts to corrupt certain members of congress.
Dr. Franklin appointed minister at the court of France. . . . . 123

C H A P. VIII.

The British operations against Georgia.

T S.
the royal army.
all his designs,
extremity. He 104

VII.
the attack upon
d reduced by the eive the treaties nce and the Unilph, an American
enry Clinton suc-
merica. The Mar-
h 2500 men, nart off by the British etween France and
ed. Lord North's
ons. Mess. Frank-ave a public audiourt. The British iladelphia. Skir-British and Ameri-
ive at Sandy Hook.
lect anchors within nstone attempts to nbers of congress.
nted minister at the 123

VIII.
ns against Georgia.

CONTENTS. xi

The affairs of the United States in a deplorable condition. Gen. Lincoln sent to South Carolina. Gen. Ashe surprised and defeated. Sir Henry Clinton takes Stoney Point. Count d'Estaing sails from the West-Indies for the American coast. The French and Americans repulsed at Savannah. Distress of Washington's army, for want of bread. Charleston taken by the British forces. Tarleton defeats Col. Buford. A French fleet with troops arrive at Newport. Treaty signed between Holland and America. Earl Cornwallis defeats Gen. Gates. Major Andre taken and executed as a spy. Gen. Arnold takes refuge on board the Vulture sloop of war. 139

CHAP. IX.

Sir Henry Clinton sends 3000 troops to the Bay of Chesapeak. The French and Spanish fleets form a junction in the West-Indies. Mr. Laurens taken on his passage to Holland. Sir Joseph Yorke leaves the Hague. Lieut. Col. Tarleton detached after Gen. Morgan, by whom Tarleton is defeated. Cornwallis attacks Greene, and defeats him. Sir George Rodney and Gen. Vaughan take St. Eustatia, St. Martins, and Saba. The French troops join the Americans under Washington.

Sir Samuel Hood and Count de Grasse engage. Lord Cornwallis repairs to York Town and Gloucester. Is besieged by the allied army. A capitulation settled, and Cornwallis surrenders the posts of York Town and Gloucester. The British fleet and army, destined for the relief of Lord Cornwallis, arrive off the Chesapeake after his surrender, and learning his fate return to New-York. De Grasse sails for the West-Indies. 161

CHAP. X.

Mr. Laurens discharged from his confinement in the tower of London. Sir George Rodney comes up with Count de Grasse in the West-Indies. They engage. De-Grasse is defeated and taken. The necessity of peace for the United States of America. Savannah evacuated by the British forces. Charleston also evacuated. Provisional articles of peace signed between the British and American commissioners. The definitive treaty of peace signed between the English, French, Spanish and Americans. 175

APPENDIX.

Constitution of the United States. Declaration of Independence. 176

N T S.

Count de Grasse.
wallis repairs to ucester. Is be-
y. A capitulation
s surrenders the Gloucester. The destined for the llis, arrive off the surrender, and n to New-York.
West-Indies. 161

X.

from his confinendon. Sir George n Count de Grasse
They engage. Del taken. The nee United States of evacuated by the leston also evacu-
cles of peace sign-ish and American
e definitive treaty
ween the English, Americans. 175

D I X.

ted States. Decla-ce. 176

THE HISTORY
OF
NORTH AMERICA.

---

CHAP. I.

BEFORE we proceed to describe what America is at present, or by what means she became independent of the mother country, it cannot be disagreeable to our readers, to be informed of the persons, customs and manners, of the original inhabitants of North America.

The native American Indians are tall and strait in their limbs beyond the proportion of most nations. Their bodies are strong, but more fitted to endure much hardship, than to continue long at any servile work, which they cannot support.
Their bodies and heads are flattish; their features are even and regular, but their countenances fierce; their hair long, black, lank and very strong, but without beards. The colour of their skin is a redish brown, which most of them admire, and take proper methods to improve.

B

The Europeans, on their first arrival in America, found the Indians quite naked, except those parts, which it is common for the most uncivilized people to conceal. Since that time, they have generally a coarse blanket to cover them, which they buy from their neighbors. The whole tenor of their lives is of a piece: they are hardy, poor and squalid; and their education, from their infancy, is solely directed to fit their bodies for the mode of life they pursue, and to form their minds to inflict and endure the greatest evils. Their only occupations are hunting and war, for agriculture is left to their women.

As soon as their hunting season is over, which they go through with much patience, and in which they exert great ingenuity, they pass the rest of their lives in entire indolence. They sleep half the day in their huts, and observe no bounds of decency in their eating and drinking. Before the Europeans discovered them, they had no spirituous liquors; but now, the regular, but their hair long, black, without beards. The skin is a redish brown, and take pre-their first arrival in the Indians quite naked, which it is common for the people to conceal. They have generally a great deal of them, which they call warriors. The whole of a piece: they are proud; and their education, is solely directed to the mode of life, and to form their minds to the greatest evils. The Indians are hunting and is left to their work.

 hunting season is over, with much patience, exert great ingenuity, their lives in entire sleep half the day in have no bounds of drinking. Be- discovered them, they quors: but now, the acquirement of these is the principal object of their pursuit.

The Indians are grave, even to sadness, in their deportment upon any serious occasion—observant of those in company, respectful to the old, and of a temper cool and deliberate. They are never in haste to speak before they have thought well of the matter, and are sure the person, who spoke before them, has finished all he has to say. They have, therefore, the greatest contempt for the vivacity of the Europeans, who interrupt each other, and frequently speak all together. In their public councils and assemblies, every man speaks in his turn, according as his years, his wisdom, or his services to his country, have ranked him. Not a word, not a whisper, not a murmur is heard from the rest while he speaks; no indecent condemnation, no ill-timed applause. The younger class attend for their instruction, and here they learn the history of their nation; here they are inflamed with the songs of those who celebrate the warlike actions of their ancestors; and here they are taught what are the interests of their country, and how to pursue them.

Though the American Indian is naturally humane and hospitable; yet, to the enemies of his country, or to those who have privately offended him; he is implacable. He conceals his resentments, he appears reconciled, till, by some treachery or surprise, he has an opportunity of executing an horrible revenge. No length of time is sufficient to allay his resentment, no distance of place great enough to protect the object; he crosses the steepest mountains, he pierces the most impervious forests, and traverses the most hideous bogs and deserts for some hundreds of miles, bearing the inclemency of the seasons, the fatigue of the expedition, the extremes of hunger and thirst, with patience and cheerfulness, in hopes of surprising his enemy, on whom he exercises the most shocking barbarities.

The Americans have scarce any temples; for, as they live by hunting, inhabit mean cottages, and are given to change their habitation, they are seldom very religious. Some appear to have little ideas of God; others entertain better notions, and hold the existence of the Supreme Being, eternal and uncorruptible, who has power over all. Satisfied with owning this, which is traditionary among them, they pay him no sort of worship.

The darling passion of the Americans is liberty, and that in its fullest extent; to liberty the native Indians sacrifice every

thin
cert
and mar
the
ner acce
rare
The
rica pow
and fean
no p trib wh
enti
of t tion
com som ific
me in t V
to wh
Th
gen bu lar

Y OF

him; he is implacable in his resentments, he avenges some treachery by some treachery. No length of time can diminish his resentment, and he is not content enough to prosecute the steepest and most impervious path, but he goes through the most hideous bogs and swamps, hundreds of miles, of the seasons, the elements, the extremes of patience and cheerfulness, surprising his enemy, and the most shocking and scarce any temperance by hunting, inhabitants are given to change and are seldom very religious, to have little ideas of a better notions, and of the Supreme Being, terrible, who has power without owning this, which they pay him in the most ample manner of the Americans in its fullest extent; to the Indians sacrifice every thing. This is what makes a life of uncertainty and want supportable to them, and their education is directed in such a manner as to cherish this disposition to the utmost. They are indulged in all manner of liberty; they are never, upon any account, chastised with blows, and very rarely even chidden.

Though some tribes are found in America with a king at their head, yet his power is rather persuasive than coercive, and he is revered as a father, more than feared as a monarch. He has no guards, no prisons, no officers of justice. In some tribes, there are a kind of nobility, who, when they come to years of discretion, are entitled to a place and vote in the councils of the nation. But among the Five Nations, or Iroquois, the most celebrated commonwealth of North America, and in some other nations, there is no other qualification absolutely necessary for the headmen, but age, with ability and experience in their affairs.

Whenever any affair of consequence is to be transacted, they appoint a feast, of which almost the whole nation partakes. There are smaller feasts on matters of less general concern, to which none are invited but those who are engaged in that particular business. At these feasts it is against all rule to leave any thing; so that, if they cannot eat all, what remains is thrown into the fire. They look upon fire as a thing sacred, and in all probability their feasts were anciently sacrifices. Before the entertainment is ready, the principal person begins a song, the subject of which is the fabulous or real history of their nation, the remarkable events which have happened, and whatever matters may conduce to their honor or instruction. The others sing in their turn, they have dances too, with which they accompany their songs, chiefly of a martial kind; and no solemnity or public business is carried on without such songs and dances.

The charge of the internal peace and order is likewise committed to the same council of the elders, which regulates whatever regards the external policy of the state. Their suits are few and quickly decided, having neither property nor art enough to render them perplexed or tedious.

The loss of any of their people, whether by war or a natural death, is lamented by the whole town he belongs to. In such circumstances no business is taken in hand, however important, nor any rejoicings permitted however interesting the occasion, until all the pious ceremonies due

Y OF
; so that, if they nains is thrown k upon fire as a probability their crifices. Before ly, the principal subject of which story of their naents which have matters may construction. The they have dances accompany their al kind; and no ness is carried on dances.

internal peace and itted to the same which regulates external policy of
are few and quicker property nor art a perplexed or te-

their people, whe-
l death, is lament-he belongs to. In business is taken in ant, nor any rejoic-interesting the oc-
us ceremonies due to the dead are performed, which are always discharged with the greatest solemnity. The dead body is washed, anointed and painted, so as in some measure to abate the horrors of death. Then the women lament the loss with the most bitter cries, and the most hideous howlings, intermixed with songs, which celebrate the great actions of the deceased, and those of his ancestors. The men mourn in a less extravagant manner. The whole village attends the body to the grave, which is then interred, habited in the most sumptuous ornaments. With the body of the deceased are placed his bow and arrows, with what he valued most in his life, and provisions for the long journey he is to take. Feasting attends this, as it does every solemnity.

No instances of regard to their deceased friends are so striking as what they call the Feast of the Dead, or the Feast of Souls. The day of this ceremony is appointed in the council of their chiefs, who give orders for every thing that may enable them to celebrate it with pomp and magnificence. The neighboring people are invited to partake of the feast, and to be witnesses of the solemnity. At this time, all who have died since the last solemn feast of that kind, are taken out of their graves; those who have been interred at the greatest distance from the villages are diligently sought after, and brought to this great rendezvous of sepulchral relics.

The opening of these tombs displays one of the most striking scenes that can be conceived. This humiliating portrait of human misery, exhibited in so many images of death, wherein a thousand various shapes of horror are depicted, according to the different ravages that time has made; forms altogether a scene too indelicate to be here described. I know not which ought to affect us most, the horror of so striking a sight, or the tender piety and affection of those poor people towards their departed friends.

This strange festival is the most magnificent and solemn of any they have, not only on account of the great concourse of natives and strangers, and of the pompous re-interment they give to the dead, whom they dress in the finest skins they can get, after having exposed them some time in this pomp, but for the games of all kinds which they celebrate upon the occasion, in the spirit of those, which the ancient Greeks and Romans celebrated upon similar occasions. In this manner do they endeavor to sooth the calamities of this life, by the honors they pay to the dead. Though the greatest distance illegently sought af-

great rendezvous

tombs displays one nes that can be con-ting portrait of hu-
in so many images and various shapes
l, according to the time has made ;
ne too indelicate to ow not which ought horror of so striking society and affection of wards their departed

al is the most mag-f any they have, not e great concourse of and of the pompous
e to the dead, whom st skins they can get, them some time in e games of all kinds upon the occasion, in which the ancient celebrated upon simi-is manner do they en-calamities of this life, y to the dead. Though among these savage nations this custom is impressed with strong marks of the ferocity of their nature ; yet an honor to the dead, a tender feeling of their absence, and a revival of their memory, are some of the most excellent means of softening our rugged nature into humanity.

Though the women in America have generally the laborious part of economy upon themselves, yet they are far from being the slaves they appear, and are not at all subject to the great subordination, in which they are placed in countries where they seem to be more respected. On the contrary, they hold their councils, and have their share in all deliberations that concern the state ; nor are they found inferior to the part they act. Polygamy is practised by some nations, but it is not general. In most places, they content themselves with one wife ; but a divorce is admitted, and for the same causes that it was allowed among the Jews, Greeks and Romans. No nation of the Americans is without a regular marriage, in which there are many ceremonies. Incontinent before marriage, after wedlock the chastity of their women is remarkable. The punishment of the adulteress, as well as that of the adulterer, is in the hands of the husband himself, and it is often severe, being inflicted by him who is at once the party and the judge. Their marriages are not fruitful, seldom producing above two or three children; and from hence we may derive the principal cause of the depopulation of America.

The manner of their preparing for war, and their mode of carrying it on, seem peculiar to themselves. Almost the sole occupation of the American Indian is war, or such an exercise as qualifies him for it. His whole glory consists in this, and no man is at all considered until he has increased the strength of his country with a captive, or adorned his hat with the scalp of one of his enemies. When the ancients resolve upon war, they do not always declare what nation it is they are determined to attack, that the enemy, upon whom they really intend to fall, may be off their guard; and they sometimes even let whole years pass over without committing any act of hostility, that the vigilance of all may be unbent by the long continuance of the watch, and the uncertainty of the danger.

In the mean time, they are not idle at home. The principal captain summonses the youths of the town to which he belongs, the war kettle is set on the fire, the war songs and dances commence, the

hatch
the howl day
coun
those they death supp
Th
ed to embr
tain
dog's recei
gage other
None
they look
death
assen
charc
of ve rid a
in an kind
In
to th gins
ed fo

t once the party marriages are not g above two or n hence we may e of the depopu-

reparing for war,
g it on, seem pe-
most the sole oc-
an Indian is war,
alifies him for it.
s in this, and no
until he has en-his country with a hat with the scalp When the ancients
do not always de-
they are determin-emy, upon whom l, may be off their mes even let whole
t committing any he vigilance of all long continuance uncertainty of the

they are not idle at captain summonses
n to which he bes set on the fire, the es commence, the hatchet is sent to the villages and allies of the same nation, and the most hideous howlings continue, without intermission, day and night, over the whole tract of country. The women add their cries to those of the men, lamenting those whom they have either lost in war or by natural death, and demanding their places to be supplied by their enemies.

The fury of the nation being thus raised to the greatest height, and all longing to embrace their hands in blood, the war captain prepares the feast, which consists of dog's flesh. All that partake of this feast receive little billets, which are so many engagements they take to be faithful to each other, and obedient to their commander. None are forced to the war; but, when they have accepted this billet, they are looked upon as enlisted, and it is then death to recede. All the warriors in this assembly have their faces blackened with charcoal, intermixed with ashes and streaks of vermilion, which give them a most horrid appearance. Their hair is dressed up in an odd manner, with feathers of various kinds.

In this assembly, which is preparatory to their military expedition, the chief begins the war song; which having continued for some time, he raises his voice to the highest pitch, and turning off suddenly in a sort of prayer, he addresses himself to the God of war, whom they call Areskoni. "I invoke thee (says he) to be favorable to my enterprise! I invoke thy care of me and my family! I invoke ye likewise, all ye spirits and dæmons good and evil! all ye that are in the skies, or on the earth, or under the earth, to pour destruction on our enemies, and to return me and my companions safely to my country!" All the warriors join him in his prayer with shouts and acclamations. The captain renews his song, strikes his club against the stakes of the cottage, and begins the war dance, accompanied with the shouts of all his companions, which continue as long as he dances.

On the day appointed for their departure they take leave of their friends, and change their clothes, or what moveables they have, in token of friendship. Their wives and female relations go out before them, and attend at some distance from the town. The warriors march out all dressed in their finest apparel and most showy ornaments, regularly one after another, for they never march in rank. Their chief walks slowly on before them, singing the death song, while the rest preserve the most profound silence. When they come up to the wo-

turning off suddenly
addresses himself to they call Areskoni.
he) to be favorable
invoke thy care of me
oke ye likewise, all ns good and evil! all es, or on the earth, or our destruction on our rn me and my compauntry!" All the war-is prayer with shouts

The captain renews club against the stakes begins the war dance, the shouts of all his continue as long as he inted for their departure their friends, and change at moveables they have, ship. Their wives and o out before them, and istance from the town.

ch out all dressed in their most showy ornaments, er another, for they never Their chief walks slowly singing the death song, eserve the most profound they come up to the women, they deliver to them all their finery, put on their worst clothes, and then proceed as their commander directs.

The Indians seldom engage in a war upon motives common to Europe: they have no other end but the glory of victory, or the benefit of their slaves, which it enables them to add to their nation, or sacrifice to their brutal fury; and it is very seldom, that they take any pains to give their wars even the colour of justice. They fall sometimes on one nation and sometimes on another, and surprise some of their hunters, whom they scalp and bring home as prisoners. Their senators wink at this or rather encourage it, as it tends to keep up the martial spirit of the people, enures them to watchfulness and hardships, and gives them an early taste for blood. The qualities of an Indian war are vigilance and attention, and to give and avoid a surprise; and patience and strength to endure the intolerable fatigues and hardships which always attend it.

They often enter a village, while the strength of the nation is employed in hunting, and massacre all the helpless old men, women and children, or make prisoners of as many as they can manage, or have strength enough to be useful to their nation. They often cut off small parties of men in their huntings; but when they discover an army of their enemies, their way is to throw themselves flat on their faces among the withered leaves, the colour of which their bodies are painted exactly to resemble. They generally let a part pass unmolested, and then, rising a little, they take aim, being excellent marksmen, and setting up a tremendous shout, which they call the war-cry, they pour a stream of musket bullets on the enemy, having long since laid aside the use of arrows. The party attacked returns the same cry. Every man in haste retires behind a tree, returns the fire of the adverse party, as soon as they arise from the ground to give the second discharge.

Having fought some time in this manner, the party which thinks it has the advantage rushes out of its cover, with small axes in their hands, which they dart with great address and dexterity. They redouble their cry, intimidate their enemies with menaces, and encourage each other with a boastful display of their own brave actions. Thus, being come hand to hand, the contest is soon decided, and the conquerors satiate their savage fury with the most shocking insults and barbarities to the dead, biting their flesh, tearing their scalps from their heads, and wallowing in their forest.

The miserable journey but with the allies, them, ment t treatm their an nerally cruel a

The umph head m a circu lar of t enemy This l the wh to the they la the pu ly con deep a strang ed to a discipl for re when they dis-

mies, their way
on their faces
s, the colour of inted exactly to y let a part pass ing a little, they marksmen, and out, which they a stream of mus-having long since
rs. The party at-
ry. Every man in e, returns the fir-
soon as they arise the second dis-ime in this man-
inks it has the ad-cover, with small ch they dart with
ity. They redou-
their enemies with e each other with eir own brave ac-
ome hand to hand,
ided, and the con-
vage fury with the
and barbarities to flesh, tearing their
; and wallowing in their blood, like the wild beasts of the forest.

The fate of their prisoners is indeed miserable. During the greater part of their journey homewards they suffer no injury; but when they arrive at the territories of the conquering state, or at those of their allies, the people from every village meet them, and think they shew their attachment to their friends by the barbarous treatment of the unhappy victims; who on their arrival at their destined station, generally bring with them marks of the most cruel and merciless treatment.

The conquerors enter the town in triumph; the war captain waits upon the head men, and in a low voice gives them a circumstantial account of every particular of the expedition, of the damages the enemy have suffered and his own loss in it. This being done the public orator relates the whole to the people. Before they yield to the joy which the victory occasions, they lament the friends they have lost in the pursuit of it. The parties most nearly concerned are apparently afflicted with a deep and real sorrow; but, by one of those strange turns of the human mind, fashioned to any thing by custom, as if they were disciplined in their grief, upon the signal for rejoicing, in a moment the tears are wiped from their eyes, and they rush into an extravagance and phrenzy of joy for their victory. All this time the fate of the prisoners remains undecided, until the old men meet and determine concerning their distribution.

It is usual to offer a slave to each house that has lost a friend, giving the preference according to the greatness of the loss. The person who has taken the captive attends him to the door of the party's cottage, where he delivers him, and with him gives a belt of wampum, to shew that he has fulfilled the purpose of the expedition, in supplying the loss of a citizen. They for some time view the present that is made them, and according as they think him or her, for the sex matters not, proper, or improper for the business of the family, or as they take a capricious liking or displeasure to the countenance of the victim, or in proportion to their natural barbarity, or their resentment for their losses, they decide whether they will receive him into the family, or sentence him to death. If they be received into the family, happy is their lot, as they are then accepted into the place of the father, son or husband that is lost; and they have no other mark of their captivity, but that of not being suffered to return to their own country,

dear
the indi
pow
is a ty,
to t son of c On
to t
that chic
I
our mar
last or end
Th
thin
by
(
the sel
act
thin
of
ing
tio

and they rush into azy of joy for their fate of the prison-until the old men concerning their dis-
 have to each house ring the preference tness of the loss.
 ken the captive at-
 of the party's cot-
 him, and with him
 a, to shew that he e of the expedition, f a citizen. They present that is made as they think him or ers not, proper, or iness of the family, icious liking or dis-
 enance of the victim, eir natural barbarity.
 for their losses, they will receive him intence him to death.
 into the family, hap-ey are then accepted
 e father, son or hus-
 and they have no other ity, but that of not bern to their own country, to attempt which would be certain death. On the contrary, if they dislike the captive, they throw away the belt with indignation. Then it is no longer in the power of any one to save him, the nation is assembled as upon some great solemnity, a scaffold is raised, and the prisoner tied to the stake. He instantly begins his death song, and prepares for the ensuing scene of cruelty with most undaunted courage.— On the other side, they prepare to put it to the utmost proof, with every torment that the mind of man ingenious in mischief can devise.

It would be too shocking for the ear of our youthful reader to be told what inhuman tortures are inflicted on him, till at last, one of the chiefs, out of compassion, or weary with cruelty, generally puts an end to his life with a club or a dagger. The body is then put into the kettle, and this barbarous employment is succeeded by a feast equally inhuman.

On this occasion, the women, forgetting the female nature, and transferring themselves into something worse than furies, act their parts, and even outdo the men in this scene of horror. The principal persons of the country set round the stake smoking, and looking on without the least emotion. What is most extraordinary, the sufferer himself, in the little intervals of his torments, smokes also, appears unconcerned, and converses with his torturers about indifferent matters. Indeed, during the whole time of his execution there seems a contest between him and them, which shall exceed, they in inflicting the most horrid pains, or he in enduring them with a firmness and constancy almost above human. Not a groan, not a sigh, not a distortion of countenance, escapes him; he possesses his mind entirely in the midst of his torments; he recounts his own exploits, informs them what cruelties he had inflicted upon their countrymen, and threatens them with revenge that will attend his death; and though his reproaches exasperate them to a perfect state of madness, rage and fury, he continues his reproaches even of their ignorance in the act of tormenting, pointing out himself more exquisite methods, and more sensible parts of the body to be afflicted.

We do not dwell upon these circumstances of cruelty, which so much degrade human nature, out of choice; but as all, who mention the customs of this people, have very particularly insisted upon their behavior in this respect, and as it seems necessary, in order to give a true idea of their character, we do not choose wholly little intervals of appears uncon-

 with his torturers Indeed, during execution there
 n him and them,
 y in inflicting the
 in enduring them
 ancy almost above
 not a sigh, not a ce, escapes him ;
 ntirely in the midst
 counts his own ex-
 at cruelties he had countrymen, and venge that will atough his reproaches perfect state of made continues his regnorance in the act
 g out himself more more sensible parta-
 ted.
 upon these circum-
 ch so much degrade
 choice ; but as all,
 oms of this people,
 insisted upon their ct, and as it seems o give a true idea of o not choose wholly to omit it. It serves to shew, in the strongest light, to what an inconceivable degree of barbarity the passions of men let loose will carry them. It will point out to us the advantages of a religion that teaches a compassion to our enemies, which is neither known nor practised in other religions ; and it will make us more sensible, than some appear to be, of the value of commerce, the benefits of a civilized life, and the lights derived from literature, which if they have abated the force of some of the natural virtues by the luxuries which attend them, have taken out likewise the sting of our national vices, and softened the ferocity of the human race, without enervating their courage. On the other hand the constancy of the sufferers in this trying scene, shows the wonderful powers of an early institution, and a ferocious thirst of glory, which makes men imitate and exceed what philosophy, and even religion, do not produce.

Having thus taken a cursory review of the customs and manners of the original natives of North America, we shall now proceed to give an account of the first settlement of the British colonies, and shew from what small beginnings time has raised them to an immense republic, under the title of the United and Independent States.

of America. In order to accomplish this matter, we have given a general history of the late war, which ended in the loss of thirteen British American colonies. The different sieges and battles that took place during that period, we shall describe as copiously as our narrow limits will permit us.

CHAP. II.

SEVERAL of the most zealous and eminent protestants in the reign of Edward VI. opposed the popish ceremonies and habits, though otherwise united to their brethren in religious tenets. Hundreds of them fled into foreign parts to avoid persecutions, where they connected themselves with protestants of other nations, who were equally arduous for a reformation.

Upon the accession of Queen Elizabeth, in 1558, the refugees returned to England, loaded with experience and learning, but in the utmost distress and poverty. Those of the clergy who could comply with the Queen's establishment, were quickly preferred; but the rest, after being permitted to preach a while, were suspended, and reduced to their former indigence.

TORY OF

er to accomplish this in a general history of ended in the loss of rican colonies. The battles that took place we shall describe as row limits will permit

A P. II.

most zealous and ems in the reign of Ed-
the popish ceremonies otherwise united to religious tenets. Hun-into foreign parts to where they connected protestants of other nationally arduous for a re-on of Queen Elizabeth, gees returned to Eng-
experience and learning, distress and poverty,
gy who could comply
s establishment, were
; but the rest, after be-reach a while, were susced to their former indi-

The clergy and laity, who wished for greater ecclesiastical purity, struggled hard for the abolishment of popish ceremonies and habits, or at least, leaving the use of them indifferent in divine service, by which they obtained nothing but the honorable nickname of PURITANS. Queen Elizabeth had enough of the blood of Henry the Eighth, to make her impatient of any opposition to her will, especially in matters of religion, in which she had a high opinion of her own knowledge; and during her whole reign, she kept down the puritans with an uniform and inflexible severity. The merits, however, of their sufferings, the affected plainness of their dress, the gravity of their deportment, and the use of scripture phrases on the most ordinary occasions, and even their names, which had in them something striking and venerable, as being borrowed from the Old Testament, gained them a general esteem among sober people of ordinary understandings.

When King James came to the throne, he had a very fair opportunity of pacifying matters, or, at least, he might have left them in the condition he found them. On the contrary, he suffered them to be persecuted, but not destroyed; they were exasperated, and yet left powerful; and the then ministry, like those who lately lost us our colonies, exposed their own weakness, ignorance, and baseness, by an ill-timed severity.

In this state matters remained, until the accession of Charles the First, when they were far from being mended. This prince, endowed with some virtues, had very few amiable qualities. As grave as the puritans themselves, he could never engage the licentious part of the world in his favor; and that gravity being turned against the puritans, made him more odious to them. He gave himself up entirely to the church and churchmen, and he finished his ill conduct, in this respect, by conferring the first ecclesiastical dignity of the kingdom, and a great sway in temporal affairs, upon Dr. Laud, who, hardly fit to direct a college, was entrusted with the government of an empire.

The puritans considered the most dreary realms, and the most unfrequented regions, where they could enjoy liberty of conscience, as superior to the most splendid palaces, where they were to be governed by Laud. In consequence of these disaffections, a little colony sailed from England, and established itself at a place called New-Plymouth, on the continent of America. This happened in 1620.

THE
lande
only was cour wool fresh voya infar ed b ty of
ed,
with dure
then
the
of th able tole fort thei
T clea
the i ger fam
the veri
ry Ma
Ply

They were but few in number, they landed in a bad season and were supplied only from their private funds. The winter was premature, and extremely cold. The country was every where covered with wood, and afforded very little for the refreshment of persons sickly with such a voyage, or even for the sustenance of an infant people. Nearly half of them perished by the scurvy, by want, and the severity of the climate; but those who survived, not dispirited with their losses, nor with the hardships they were still to endure; supported by the vigor which was then the character of Englishmen, and by the satisfaction of finding themselves out of the reach of the spiritual arm, were enabled to procure in this savage country, a tolerable livelihood, and by degrees a comfortable subsistence for themselves and their families.

The people of New-Plymouth, having cleared the way for other sufferers to settle in America, with less difficulty and danger than what they had experienced; the fame of their plantation spreading through the western part of England, and the government in church and state growing every day more oppressive, the territory of the Massachusetts Bay was purchased of the Plymouth council, in 1628, and a company soon formed, who consulted on settling a plantation, to which non-conforming puritans might emigrate, in order to enjoy their own principles in full security.

In 1630, a large company arrived at Salem, consisting of more than fifteen hundred persons, from different counties in England. From the beginning of the colony, until the emigration ceased, in 1640, through a change of affairs in England, there arrived in 298 vessels, about 21,200 settlers, men, women and children, or four thousand families.

They did not however, all confine themselves to this colony: several families removed to Connecticut River, by mutual agreement with their fellow emigrants, who remained behind. Plantations were formed at Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield. The inhabitants being soon after fully satisfied, that they were out of the Massachusetts' limits, and of course its jurisdiction, entered into a combination among themselves, became a body politic, without restraining the freedom of their civil government to the membership of their churches, and proceeded to the choice of magistrates and representatives.

Two large ships arrived at Massachusetts' Bay, in 1637, with passengers from London. Great pains were taken to prevail upon

they distan eral g
then t in Co
the la
River
a flou
en wa
Have
many Conn dress profes
to his ter ;
been nego
succe tamed
ever
Mr churc
Mass
gious count panio
India
after betw

Y OF
consulted on set-ch non-conform-
rate, in order to s in full security.
pany arrived at e than fifteen hunerent counties in beginning of the ration ceased, in of affairs in Eng-98 vessels, about men and children,
all confine them-
several families re-River, by mutual fellow emigrants, Plantations were indsor and Wea-
tants being such they were out of its, and of course
into a combination
me a body politic, freedom of their membership of ceded to the choice
esentatives.
ived at Massachu-
h passengers from ere taken to prevail

upon them to remain in the colony; but they hoped, by moving to a considerable distance, to be out of the reach of a general governor, with whom the country was then threatened. They sent to their friends in Connecticut to purchase of the natives the lands lying between them and Hudson's River. They then laid the foundation of a flourishing colony, of which New Haven was the capital. Connecticut and New Haven continued two distinct colonies for many years. At length the general court of Connecticut determined to prefer an address and petition to Charles the Second, professing their subjection and loyalty to his majesty, and soliciting a royal charter; and John Winthrop, Esq. who had been chosen governor, was appointed to negotiate the affair with the king. He succeeded, and a royal charter was obtained, constituting the two colonies for ever one body corporate and politic.

Mr. Roger Williams, a pastor of the church of Salem, being banished from Massachusetts, on account of some religious disputes, went to the Narraganset country, accompanied with twelve companions, and had land given him by the Indian Sachem Canonicus; of whom he afterwards purchased the large tract, lying between Pawtucket and Pawturat rivers,

(the great falls and the little falls, as the Indian name signifies) and stiled it Providence, from a sense of God's merciful providence to him in his distress.

The authority and power of Miantonimy, another Sachem, and his uncle Canonicus, awed all the Indians round to assist him and his few associates. When the determinations of the Massachusetts general court, occasioned by what they called antinomian disputes, banished many, and induced others to leave the colony, the heads of the party were entertained in a friendly manner by Mr. Williams, who advised them to seek a settlement on Rhode-Island, in the year 1638, and was very instrumental in procuring it of the Indian sachems.

New-Hampshire and the Maine were settled about the same time with the Massachusetts, by different proprietors, who had obtained patents, and whose views were to enrich themselves by the fishing trade at sea, and the beaver trade ashore.

The colony of New-York demands our next attention. The Dutch had settled it, and named it the New Netherlands.—Charles the Second resolved upon its conquest in 1664; and in March granted to his brother the Duke of York, the region extending from the western banks of the Connecticut to the eastern shore of the

Delaw
ferrin ers of with f diers
gover
the M Engli
other Dute
tered deput
the p At
sey,
who any o Ame
the I
of it
Cart
the
certa
well cons
V
the clair Eliz
gran
men

little falls, as the and stiled it Provi-
 ed's merciful pro-
 stress. wer of Miantono-
 his uncle Canonns round to assist
 es. When the dessachusetts general hat they called an-shed many, and ine colony, the heads
 tained in a friendly ams, who advised at on Rhode-Island, as very instrumen-
 e Indian sachems.
 he Maine were set-ne with the Massaroprietors, who had whose views were by the fishing trade
 trade ashore.
 .York demands our Dutch had settled it, ew Netherlands.—
 solved upon its conn March granted to e of York, the re-
 he western banks of e eastern shore of the Delaware, together with Long-Island, conferring on him the civil and military powers of government. Col. Nichols was sent with four frigates and three hundred soldiers to effect the business. The Dutch governor being unable to make resistance, the New Netherlands submitted to the English crown, in September, without any other change than of rulers. Few of the Dutch removed, and Nichols instantly entered upon the exercise of his power, as deputy-governor for the Duke of York, the proprietary.

About the same time, 1664, New-Jersey, which was also taken from the Dutch, who were considered as having no right to any of their settlements in these parts of America, were included in the grant to the Duke of York. The Duke disposed of it to Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret, who being sole proprietors, for the better settlement of it, agreed upon certain constitutions of government, so well liked, that the eastern parts were soon considerably peopled.

Virginia was the original name of all the English North American continental claims, given in honor to the Virgin Queen Elizabeth. King James, being applied to, granted letters patent to a body of gentlemen, on the 6th of April, 1606, with powers to divide themselves into two distinct companies, the one consisting of London adventurers, called the first, or southern colony of Virginia; the second, or northern colony composed of merchants, belonging to Bristol, Plymouth and Exeter. The territory granted to the first, or southern colony was generally called Virginia, without any distinguishing epithet, and retained that name after the second or northern colony obtained the name of New-England in 1614.

We come next to speak of Maryland. The first emigration to this part of America consisted of two hundred gentlemen of considerable fortune and rank, with their adherents, chiefly Roman Catholics, who hoped to enjoy liberty of conscience under a proprietary of their own profession. They sailed from England in November, and landed in Maryland the beginning of 1633. Governor Calvert, brother to Lord Baltimore, very wisely and justly purchased, by presents of various goods, the rights of the Indians, and with their free consent took possession of their town, which he called St. Mary's. The country was settled with so much ease, and furnished with so many conveniencies, that emigrants repaired thither in such numbers as soon to render the colony populous and flourishing.

into two distinct consisting of London
the first, or southern second, or northern merchants, belonging and Exeter. The
the first, or southern called Virginia, withepithet, and retain-second or northern
name of New-Eng.

speak of Maryland.
this part of Ameri-
hundred gentlemen of
and rank, with their man Catholics, who
y of conscience un-
their own profession.
gland in November,
and the beginning of vert, brother to Lord and justly purchasous goods, the rights with their free consent their town, which he
The country was set-ce, and furnished with es, that emigrants rea numbers as soon to ulous and flourishing.

Carolina follows Maryland in the order of existence. A few adventurers emigrated from the Massachusetts, and settled round Cape Fear, about the time of the Restoration. They considered mere occupancy, with a transfer from the natives, without any grant from the king, as a good title upon the lands they possessed. They deemed themselves entitled to the same civil privileges as those of the country from whence they had emigrated. For years they experienced the complicated miseries of want. They solicited the aid of their countrymen, and the general court of Massachusetts, with an attention and humanity which did it the greatest honor, ordered an extensive contribution for their relief.

The final settlement of the province was effected equally through the rapacity of the courtiers of Charles the Second, and his own facility in rewarding those, to whom he was greatly indebted, with a liberality that cost him little. The pretence, which had been used on former occasions, of a pious zeal for the propagation of the gospel among the Indians, was successively employed to procure a grant of the immense region, lying between the 36th degree of north latitude, and the river of St. Mathew, under the thirty-first degree. In March, 1663, this territory was erected into a province by the name of Carolina, and conferred on Lord Clarendon, the Duke of Albemarle, Lord Craven, Lord Berkeley, Lord Ashley, Sir George Carteret, Sir John Colleton, and Sir William Berkeley, as absolute lord proprietaries, for ever, saving the allegiance due to the crown.

Pennsylvania and the Delaware counties next demand our attention. Mr. William Penn one of the joint purchasers of the western part of the Jerseys, having received the most exact information of the country to the westward of the Delaware, while engaged in the administration of the joint purchase, became desirous of acquiring a separate estate.

He presented a petition to Charles the Second in June, 1680; stating not only his relationship to the late admiral, but that he was deprived of a debt due from the crown, when the Exchequer was shut. He prayed for a grant of lands, lying to the northward of Maryland, and westward of the Delaware; and added that by his interest, he should be able to settle a province, which might, in time, repay his claims. Having a prospect of success, he copied from the charter of Maryland the sketch of a patent, which in November was laid before the attorney general for his opinion.

itory was erected
name of Carolina,
l Clarendon, the ord Craven, Lord
Sir George Cara, and Sir William rd proprietaries, for ce due to the crown.

Delaware counties.
tion. Mr. William purchasers of the seys, having receiv-
rmation of the coun-the Delaware, while istration of the joint irous of acquiring a petition to Charles the ), stating not only his ate admiral, but that a debt due from the Exchequer was shut.

ant of lands, lying to aryland, and westward and added that by his be able to settle a pro-t, in time, repay his prospect of success, he arter of Maryland the t, which in November
e attorney general for

Penn had the same object in view as Lord Baltimore had, the guarding against the exertions of prerogative, which experience had taught both were very inconvenient. The attorney general declared the clause of exemption from taxation illegal; and chief justice North being of the same opinion, and observing its tendency, added the saving of the authority of the English parliament; so that it was stipulated by the king, for himself and his successors, that "no custom or other contribution shall be laid on the inhabitants or their estates, unless by the consent of the proprietary, or governor and assembly, or by act of parliament in England."

The next year, 1681, the patent was granted, in consideration of "the merits of the father, and the good purposes of the son, in order to extend the English empire, and to promote useful commerce." It was provided by fit clauses, that the sovereignty of the king should be preserved, and that acts of parliament, concerning trade, navigation, and the customs, be duly observed. Penn was empowered to assemble the freemen, or their delegates, in such form as he shall think proper for raising money for the use of the colony, and for making useful laws, not contrary to those of England, or the rights of the king.

dom. A duplicate of the acts of the assembly was to be transmitted, within five years, to the king in council, and the acts might be declared void within six months if not approved....It now remains only to give a concise account of the settlement of Georgia.

In 1732, a number of gentlemen considering the vast benefit that might arise from the tract of land, lying between the Savannah and the river Alatomaha, petitioned the king for a charter, which was accordingly granted in June. They meant that the country should be made a bulwark for the southern colonies against the Spaniards; and should give employment to numbers of people, who were burthensome at home to their friends and parishes.

Towards the end of August, Sir Gilbert Heathcote recommended, in the strongest terms, to the directors of the bank, the interest of the colony. His speech had the desired effect, and the members of the court, after his example, contributed largely towards the undertaking. So did great numbers of the nobility, gentry, clergy and others: and the parliament granted 10,000*l*. By the beginning of November, about one hundred and sixteen colonists presented themselves, most of them laboring people, and were furnished

stores

Mr. gener
grants good rolini dred twenty them
boats,
the Sa miles a town
the fir

Mr.
a num Creek
treaty, town
with h
Before
emigra
were c at their

In C
their o
ance,
a week
comme persons

acts of the as-ted, within five
cil, and the acts within six months
remains only to the settlement of gentlemen con-

that might arise
ing between the Alatamaha, peti-arter, which was
une. They meant
e made a bulwark against the Span-employment to num-
re burthensome at d parishes.

August, Sir Gilnmended, in the e directors of the the colony. His fect, and the mem-
his example, con-
is the undertaking.
f the nobility, gen-
and the parliament
the beginning of hundred and six-
d themselves, most ple, and were furnished with working tools of all kinds, stores and small arms.

Mr. Oglethorpe, one of the trustees, generously attended the first set of emigrants to Carolina, where they arrived in good health in January, 1733. The Carolinians made them a present of one hundred breeding cattle, besides hogs, and twenty barrels of rice; and furnished them with a party of horse, and with scout boats, by the help of which they reached the Savannah, where Mr. Oglethorpe, ten miles up the river, pitched upon a spot for a town, and in February the building of the first house commenced.

Mr. Oglethorpe was waited upon by a numerous deputation from the lower Creek nation, with whom he concluded a treaty, and soon after set out for Charleatown on his return to England, bringing with him several chiefs and a war captain.
Before the end of March, 1734, more emigrants, to the amount of six hundred, were either sent over by charity, or went at their own expense.

In October, the Indians embarked for their own country, having had an allowance, while in London, of twenty pounds a week, of which they spent little, as they commonly eat and drank at the table of persons of the highest distinction. They embarked at Gravesend, in a ship which carried over a number of Saltz burghers, being German protestants, who, with others of their countrymen that followed, settled on the Savannah, a town they called Ebenezer, and which, by their habits of industry and sobriety soon became considerable.

The Georgians made a surprising progress in clearing their lands, and building their houses, and as an encouragement, the British parliament granted them a supply of 26,000l. which, with very great private donations, were expended upon strengthening the southern part of Georgia.

Thus have we given a succinct account of the first establishment of the British colonies in North America. By what unhappy means they at last became separated from the mother country, will be clearly shown in the subsequent part of this history.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno

- 1606 First settlement made at Virginia.
- 1620 Settlement at New Plymouth.
- 1628 New-Hampshire and the Maine settled,
- 1628 Puritans purchase and settle Massachusetts Bay.

1633 1635 1637 1638 1662 1664 1681 1733

TH
enter conce
found there inclina shall events
New
setts
and Sp made ces for Tov
1745, the W and tw ed by Canso

l, in a ship which of Saltz burghers,
tants, who, with men that followed,
a town they callch, by their habits soon became cone a surprising pro-

lands, and building encouragement, the nted them a supply
h very great private ded upon strength-
rt of Georgia.
n a succinct account ent of the British co-rica. By what unt last became sepa-
er country, will be subsequent part of

orded in this chapter.

at made at Virginia.
New Plymouth.
re and the Maine setnase and settle Massa-ay.

NORTH AMERICA.

47

- 1633 Settlement at Maryland.
- 1635 Connecticut and Providence.
- 1637 New-Haven settled.
- 1638 Settlement of Rhode-Island.
- 1663 Carolina settled.
- 1664 New-York and New-Jersey.
- 1681 Pennsylvania & Delaware counties.
- 1733 Georgia settled.

C H A P. III.

THE narrow limits prescribed to us in this epitome, will not permit us to enter into a copious detail of all the minute concerns of the colonies, which may be found in more voluminous works, and there read by those, who have leisure and inclination to pursue so dry a study. We shall therefore proceed to describe only events of some consequence.

News being received in the Massachusetts of war being declared against France and Spain, the general court, then sitting, made immediate provision for raising forces for Annapolis in Nova Scotia.

Towards the end of the month of April, 1745, Commodore Warren arrived from the West-Indies, with a sixty gun ship, and two of forty. He was soon after joined by another of forty, which had reached Canso a short time before. The men of war sailed immediately to cruise before Louisbourg. The forces soon followed, and landed at Chapeaurouge Bay the last day of April. The transports were discovered from the town early in the morning, which gave the inhabitants the first knowledge of the design.

The second day after landing, four hundred men marched round, behind the hills, to the northeast harbor, where they got about midnight, and set fire to all the dwellings and storehouses, till they came within a mile of the grand battery. The clouds of thick smoke proceeding from the pitch, tar, and other combustibles, prevented the garrison's discovering the enemy, though they were but at a short distance.

They expected the body of the army upon them, and therefore deserted the fort, having thrown their powder into a well; but the cannon and shot were left, which proved of great service to the besiegers. The army had near two miles to transport their cannon, mortars, &c. through a morass, which required great labor to accomplish. The men were yoked together, and during the night made great advances.

While the forces were busily employed on shore, the men of war, and other vessels were cruising off the harbor, as often as the weather would permit. On the 18th ely to cruise before prces soon followed, aurouge Bay the last transports were disown early in the morn-e inhabitants the first sign.

fter landing, four hun-
quad, behind the hills, rbor, where they got nd set fire to all the houses, till they came grand battery. The
be proceeding from the combustibles, prevent-discovering the enemy,
out at a short distance:
the body of the army up-efore deserted the fort;
eir powder into a well;
nd shot were left, which ervice to the besiegers. ur two miles to transport tars, &c. through a mo-red great labor to accomwere yoked together, and made great advances.
es were busily employed n of war, and other ves-g off the harbor, as often ould permit. On the 18th of May, they captured a French 44 gun ship, having 560 men on board, and stores of all sorts for the garrison.

It was given out, that an attack would be made by sea with the ships, on the 18th, while the army did the like by land. Whether a general storm was really intended or not, the French appeared to expect it, from the preparations making on board the men of war, and seemed not inclined to attempt to withstand it.

On the fifteenth, a flag of truce was sent to the general, desiring a cessation of hostilities, that they might consider of articles for a capitulation. Time was allowed, but their articles were rejected by the general and commodore, and others offered, which were accepted by the French, and hostages given on both sides. The town was in consequence delivered up on the seventeenth.
As this was a time when vessels were expected from all parts at Louisburg, the French flag was kept flying as a decoy. Two East-Indiamen, and one south-sea ship, of the value of 600,000<sup>l</sup>. sterling, were taken by the squadron, at the mouth of the harbor, into which they sailed as usual, not knowing that the place had been taken by the English.

The French having been very troublesome in the back settlements of our colonies, it was concluded to take effectual methods to drive them from the Ohio. The reduction of Niagara, Crown Point, and their forts in Nova Scotia, was also resolved on. General Braddock was accordingly sent from Ireland to Virginia, with two regiments of foot; and on his arrival, when joined by the rest of the forces destined for that service, he found himself at the head of 2200 men. He had bravery, but wanted other qualifications to render him fit for the service to which he was appointed. The severity of his discipline made him unpopular among the regulars, and his haughtiness deprived him of the esteem of the Americans. His pride disgusted the Indians, and led him to dispise the country militia, and to slight the advice of the Virginian officers.

Colonel Washington earnestly begged of him, when the army was marching for fort Du Quesne, to admit of his going before, and scouring the woods with his rangers, which was contemptuously refused. The general had been cautioned by the Duke of Cumberland to guard against a surprise, and yet he pushed on heedlessly with the first division, consisting of 1400 men, till he fell into an ambuscade of 400, chiefly Indians, by whom he was defeated and mortally wounded, on the 9th of July, 1755.

The regulars were put into the greatest panic, and fled in the utmost confusion; but the fighting general the rear broken, as a mo ed the re ed their Previe views of chusetts which w Lieuten the Fre ments w

The e trusted through

Sir W appointe delays, s tion, pre their troe time the ces from down to them; bu men, be Dieskau The ne great arm but Lor

RY OF

on the Ohio. The Crown Point, and was also resolved
was accordingly
inia, with two re-
his arrival, when the forces destined and himself at the e had bravery, but ons to render him ch he was appoint-
is discipline made
the regulars, and d him of the esteem is pride disgusted
him to dispise the slight the advice of earnestly begged of s marching for fort
of his going before,
s with his rangers,
usly refused. The oned by the Duke of gainst a surprise, and lessly with the first 1400 men, till he fell 400, chiefly Indians, feated and mortally
of July, 1755. put into the greatest e utmost confusion ;

but the militia had been used to Indian fighting, and were not so terrified. The general had disdainfully turned them into the rear, where they continued in a body unbroken, and served under Col. Washington as a most useful rear guard, which covered the retreat of the regulars, and prevented their being entirely cut to pieces.

Previous to this, and agreeable to the views of the British ministry, the Massachusetts assembly raised a body of troops, which were sent to Nova Scotia, to assist Lieutenant-Governor Lawrence in driving the French from their several encroachments within that province.

The expedition against Niagara was entrusted to Governor Shirley, but failed through various causes.

Sir William, then Colonel Johnson, was appointed to go against Crown Point. The delays, slowness, and deficiency of preparation, prevented the several colonies joining their troops till about August. In the mean time the active enemy had transported forces from France to Canada, marched them down to meet the provincials, and attacked them ; but, meeting with a repulse, lost 600 men, besides having their general Baron Dieskau wounded and made prisoner.

The next year the Massachusetts raised a great armament to go against Crown Point ; but Lord Loudon, on his arrival, did not think it proper that the forces should proceed, owing to a temporary misunderstanding between his Lordship and the general court.

In the year 1758, happily for the British nation, the great Mr. Pitt was placed at the head of the ministry, when the face of affairs was soon changed, the war was prosecuted with unexampled success, and the enemy was at length driven out of America.

Mr. Israel Mauduit, the Massachusetts agent, in 1763, gave early notice of the ministerial intentions to tax the colonies; but the general court not being called together till the latter end of the year, instructions to the agent, though solicited by him, could not be sent in proper time.

The next year however, 1764, the house of representatives came to the following resolutions: "That the sole right of giving and granting the money of the people of that province, was vested in them as their legal representatives; and that the imposition of duties and taxes by the parliament of Great Britain, upon a people who are not represented in the House of Commons is absolutely irreconcilable with their rights." "That no man can justly take the property of another without his consent; upon which original principle, the right of representation in the same body, which exercises the power of making laws for forces should probably misunderstand-

ship and the general

pity for the British att was placed at the when the face of af-
the war was prose-
success, and the en-
men out of America.
the Massachusetts
early notice of the
to tax the colonies;
not being called to-
end of the year, in-though solicited by t in proper time.

ever, 1764, the house
e to the following re-sole right of giving y of the people of that in them as their legal that the imposition of the parliament of Great le who are not repre-
of Commons is abso-
with their rights."
stly take the property his consent; upon e principle, the right of re-same body, which ex-of making laws for

levying taxes, one of the main pillars of the British constitution, is evidently founded."

These resolutions were occasioned by intelligence of what had been done in the British House of Commons. It had been there debated in March, whether they had a right to tax the Americans, they not being represented, and determined unanimously in the affirmative. Not a single person present ventured to controvert the right.

After various propositions for taxing the colonies, Mr. Grenville's intended stamp act was communicated to the American agents. Many of them did not oppose it, half their number being placemen or dependents on the ministry. Mr. Joseph Sherwood, an honest Quaker, agent for Rhode-Island, refused his consent to America's being taxed by a British parliament.
Mr. Mauduit, the Massachusetts agent, favored the raising of the wanted money by a stamp duty, as it would occasion less expense of officers, and would include the West-India islands. The scheme, however was postponed, and the agents authorised to inform the American assemblies, that they were at liberty to suggest any other ways of raising monies, and that Mr.
Grenville was ready to receive proposals for any other tax, that might be equivalent in its produce to the stamp tax. The colonies seemed to consider it as an affront, rather than as a compliment. The minister would not be content with any thing short of a certain specific sum, and proper funds for the payment of it. Had not the sums been answerable to his wishes, he would have rejected them; and he would scarcely have been satisfied with less than 300,000*l.* per annum, which was judged absolutely necessary to defray the whole expense of the army proposed for the defence of America.

No satisfactory proposals being made on the side of the Americans, Mr. Grenville adhered to his purpose of bringing forward the stamp bill, though repeatedly pressed by some of his friends to desist. Richard Jackson, Esq. had been chosen agent for the Massachusetts, who, with Mr. Franklin, and others, lately come from Philadelphia, waited on Mr. Grenville, in February, 1765, to remonstrate against the stamp bill, and to propose, that in case any tax must be laid upon America, the several colonies might be permitted to lay the tax themselves. Mr. Grenville, however, adhered to his own opinions, and said he had pledged his word for offering the stamp bill to the house, and that the house would hear their objections.

The bill was accordingly brought in, and in March, the same year, received the royal assent. The framers of the stamp act flat-cent. The minister with any thing sum, and proper it. Had not the to his wishes, he m; and he would fied with less than which was judged to defray the whole proposed for the deals being made on ans, Mr. Grenville of bringing forward repeatedly pressed to desist. Richard en chosen agent for o, with Mr. Frank- come from Philadel- Grenville, in Februa- ate against the stamp that in case any tax erica, the several co- mitted to lay the tax Grenville, however, opinions, and said word for offering the se, and that the house ections.

lingly brought in, and ear, received the royal s of the stamp act flattered themselves, that the confusion which would arise from the disuse of writings, would compel the colonies to use stamp paper, and therefore to pay the taxes imposed. Thus they were led to pronounce it to be a law which would execute itself.

Mr. Grenville, however, was not without his apprehensions that it might occasion disorders; to prevent or suppress which he projected another bill, which was brought in the same sessions, whereby it was made lawful for military officers in the colonies to quarter their soldiers in private houses. This seemed intended to awe the people into a compliance with the other act. Great opposition being made to it, as under such a power in the army, no one could look on his house as his own; that part of the bill was dropt; but there still remained a clause when it passed into a law, to oblige the several assemblies to provide quarters for the soldiers, and to furnish them with firing, bedding, candles, small beer, rum, and sundry other articles, at the expense of the several provinces. This clause continued in force after the stamp act was repealed.

These proceedings of the mother country gave rise to great disturbances in America. Some persons of consequence at Boston, to manifest their abhorrence and detestation of a party in England, who they supposed were endeavoring to subvert the British constitution, to enslave the colonics, and to alienate the affections of his majesty's most faithful subjects in America, early in the morning of the 14th of August hung upon the limb of a large dead elm, near the entrance of Boston, in one of the most public streets, two effigies. One of them as appeared by the labels affixed thereto, was intended to represent the stamp officer; the other was a jack-boot, with a head and horns peeping out of the top.

The report of this novelty drew great numbers from every part of the town and the neighboring country. This affair was left to take its own course, so that an enthusiastic spirit diffused itself into the minds of the spectators. In the evening, the figures were cut down, and carried in funeral procession, the populace shouting, Liberty and property for ever! No stamps, &c.

They then went to a new building, erected by Mr. Oliver, which they pulled down, falsely supposing it to be designed for the stamp office. As soon as they approached Mr. Oliver's house they beheaded the effigy, at the same time breaking all his windows, and demolishing his gardens, fences, barns, and every thing else that came in their way.

The next day, Mr. Oliver, fearful of what might happen, declared that he had written to England and resigned. The mob assembled again at night; and after some expres-

Y OF

onics, and to ali-
is majesty's most rica, early in the August hung upon elm, near the en-
e of the most pub-

One of them as fixed thereto, was stamp officer; the
with a head and e top.

ity drew great num-
f the town and the
This affair was left

so that an enthusi-
self into the minds of evening, the figures
rried in funeral proouting, Liberty and stamps, &c.

ew building, erected
they pulled down,
be designed for the n as they approached
y beheaded the effigy,
king all his windows,
ardens, fences, barns,
at came in their way.
Oliver, fearful of what ed that he had written ned. The mob assemnd after some expressions of joy for the resignation, proceeded to the lieutenant governor's, Mr. Hutchin-son's house, which they besieged for an hour, but in vain; insisting repeatedly upon knowing, whether he had not written in favor of the stamp act.

These disorders grew every day more enormous and alarming. Mobs once raised soon become ungovernable by new and large accessions, and extend their intentions far beyond those of the original instigators. Crafty men may intermix with them, when they are much heated, and direct their operations very differently from what was at first designed.

People in England were differently affected by the disturbances in the colonies.
Some were for supporting the authority of parliament at all events, and for enforcing the stamp act, if needful, with the point of the sword; while others were for quieting the colonies by the repeal of it. Happily for them, Mr. Grenville and his party were thrown out of place, and were succeeded by the Marquis of Rockingham, when, on the 22d of February, 1766, this obnoxious act was repealed.

In May, 1767, Mr. Charles Townsend, then chancellor of the Exchequer, moved the House of Commons for leave to bring in bills for granting a duty upon paper, glass, painters colours, &c. in the British

American colonies; for settling salaries on the governors, judges, &c. in North America; and for taking off the duties on teas exported to America, and granting a duty of three pence a pound on the importation in America. Two bills were at length framed, and in June received the royal assent.

These acts occasioned fresh disturbances in America, where matters were carried to a much greater height than before. In consequence of this, Lord Hillsborough wrote to general Gage, in June, 1768, to send troops to Boston, in order to preserve the peace of that town.

The introduction of troops into Boston was attended with very serious consequences. The inhabitants became exceedingly riotous, and some of the rabble pushed their ill conduct so far, as to oblige the soldiers to fire on them, in their own defence. This happened on the 5th of March, 1770, when three persons were killed, five dangerously wounded, and a few slightly.

This was far from removing the evil, and only tended to widen the breach. Under the notion of zeal for liberty, the rabble ran into the most extensive licentiousness, and were every where guilty of the most lawless, unjust, and tyrannical proceedings, pulling down houses, destroying the property of every one that had fallen under their displeasure and deliver-

ing
was
supp
the
him time anti had
T
effe
the
in th repe
rica
with in th
com
nity oral
Ann
ing
on e ed
wei par
but tro
per
int
duc

settling salaries on
 cc. in North Ame-
 the duties on teas
 and granting a duty on the importation
 ere at length fram-
 the royal assent.
 d fresh disturban-
 matters were carried at than before. In Lord Hillsborough
 in June, 1768, to in order to preserve troops into Boston serious consequen-
 became exceedingly the rabble pushed
 r, as to oblige the m, in their own de-
 on the 5th of March, ons were killed, five
 and a few slightly.
 moving the evil, and the breach. Under liberty, the rabble xtensive licentious-
 where guilty of the and tyrannical prown houses, destroy every one that had pleasure and deliver ing prisoners out of the hands of justice.

Let us now turn our attention to see what was doing, in the mean time at home. The supporting the authority of parliament, was the only cause assigned by the minister himself for retaining the tea duty at the very time when he acknowledged it to be as anti-commercial a tax, as any of those that had been repealed upon that principle.

The East-India Company, feeling the bad effects of the colonial smuggling trade in the large quantities of tea, which remained in their ware-houses unsold, requested the repeal of the three pence per pound in America, and offered, that on its being complied with, government should retain six pence in the pound on the exportation. Thus the company presented the happiest opportunity that could have been offered for honorably removing the cause of difference with America. This afforded an opening for doing justice, without infringing the claims on either side. The minister was requested and intreated, by a gentleman of great weight in the company, and a member of parliament, to embrace the opportunity; but it was obstinately rejected.

New contrivances were set on foot to introduce the tea, attended with the three-penny duty, into all the colonies. Various intrigues and solicitations were used to induce the East-India company to undertake this rash and foolish business. It was protested against as contrary to the principle of the company's monopoly; but the power of the ministry prevailed, and the insignificant three-penny duty on tea was doomed to be the fatal bone of contention between Great Britain and her colonies. The company at last adopted the system, and became their own factors. They sent 600 chests of tea to Philadelphia, the like quantity to New-York and Boston, besides what was consigned to other places. Several ships were also freighted for different colonies, and agents appointed for the disposal of the commodity.

In the mean time the colonists, who well knew what had passed in the mother country, were concerting measures to counteract the views of the British ministry. Soon after the arrival of the tea ships at Boston, a number of persons, chiefly masters of vessels, and ship builders from the north end of the town, about seventeen in number, dressed as Indians, went on board the ships, and in about two hours hoisted out of them and broke open 342 chests of tea the contents of which they emptied into the sea. They were not in the least molested; for the multitude of spectators on the wharf served as a covering party. The whole business was conducted with very little tumult, and no damage was done to the ves-

acled
ness
ely
The
the E try to the i cern Bost
disch
ware
in th 177
O
parli tend Bost
tory
from of b dang paid stra
The
was cept of a law peo
and det
rep

business. It was pro-try to the principle only; but the pow-
 illed; and the insig-y on tea was doom-
 of contention be-her colonies. The
 ed the system, and
 ors. They sent 600
 adelphia, the like and Boston, besides other places. Seve-eighted for different appointed for the dis-
 y. e colonists, who well
 l in the mother counmeasures to counterritish ministry. Soon tea ships at Boston, a hiefly masters of vess from the north end ewenteen in number,
 ent on board the ships, rs hoisted out of them chests of tea the con-
 emptied into the sea.
 e least molested; for ectators on the wharf party. The whole bu-ed with very little tu-ge was done to the veszels or any other property. When the business was finished, the people returned quietly to their own towns and habitations.

These and other decisive proceedings of the Bostonians, induced the British ministry to bring in a bill into parliament, "for the immediate removal of the officers concerned in the collection of the customs at Boston, and to discontinue the landing and discharging, lading and shipping of goods, wares and merchandizes at Boston, or within the harbor thereof." On the 31st of March 1774, the bill received the royal assent.

Other bills were passed by the British parliament, brought in by Lord North, all tending to punish the Americans, and the Bostonians in particular for their refractory behavior. Petitions were sent over from America, and several of the members of both houses reprobated these severe and dangerous proceedings; but no regard was paid either to the petitions or to the remonstrances of the minority in both houses.
 The then ministry, at the head of which was Lord North, were determined to accept from the Americans of nothing short of absolute and implicit obedience to the laws of taxation. On the other hand, the people of Massachusetts Bay, supported and spurred on by the other colonies, were determined not to submit, and prepared to repel force by force. They collected all the arms they could, and spent much of their time in the exercise of them.

These proceedings of the people, and their manifest disposition to resistance, alarmed the general, who thought it necessary, for the safety of the troops, as well as to secure the important post of Boston, to fortify the entrance at the neck, which afforded the only communication, except by water, between the town and the continent.

In England, petitions were presented from the merchants of London, and almost all the trading towns in the kingdom; and Mr. Bolla, Dr. Franklin, and Mr. Lee, also presented petitions from the American congress; but government treated them with indifference and contempt.

Lord Chatham persevered in the prosecution of his conciliatory scheme with America, and accordingly brought into the house of lords the outlines of a bill, which he hoped would answer that salutary purpose; but the ministry rejected it. At the same time, Lord North gave a sketch of the measures he intended to pursue, which were to send a greater force to America, and to bring in a temporary act, to put a stop to all the foreign trade of the different colonies of New-England, particularly their fishery on the banks of Newfoundland, till they returned to their duty.

While matters were thus going on at

ORY OF

and spent much of ise of them.
of the people, and
ition to resistance, ho thought it neces-
he troops, as well as it post of Boston, to the neck, which af-unication, except by yn and the continent.
ons were presented London, and almost n the kingdom; and klyn, and Mr. Lee,
ns from the Ameri-
government treated
e and contempt.
vered in the prosecu-
y scheme with Ame-
brought into the house s of a bill, which he hat salutary purpose;
cted it. At the same
ve a sketch of the mea-pursue, which were ce to America, and to y act, to put a stop to of the different colond, particularly their
of Newfoundland, till eir duty.
ere thus going on at home, General Gage, at Boston, received intelligence that cannon and carriages were deposited in the neighborhood of Salem. He accordingly sent a body of troops from the castle to seize them, but the Americans found time to get them away, and the troops returned without effecting any thing.

A skirmish having happened at Lexington, between the king's troops and a party of the militia, General Gage no sooner received this intelligence than he detached Lord Piercy to Concord, with sixteen companies of foot, and a number of marines, 900 men in the whole, and two pieces of cannon, to support Col. Smith.

The junction of the brigade under Lord Piercy, with the detachment under Colonel Smith, gave the last a breathing time, especially as they now had cannon, which awed the provincials from pressing upon the rear in a direct line; but the whole force did not venture to halt long, as the minute men and militia were every where collecting, in order to cut off their retreat to Boston. They soon renewed their march, constant skirmishing succeeded, and a continual fire, though often irregular and scattering on their side, as well as on the part of the provincials. The close firing from behind the walls, by good marksmen, for such were almost all the provincials, put the troops into no small confusion, and made it so dangerous for the officers, that they were more attentive to their safety than common. The regulars, when near Cambridge, were upon the point of taking a wrong road, which would have led them into the most imminent danger; but were prevented by the direction of a young gentleman residing at the college. They made good their retreat a little after sun-set, over Charlestown neck to Bunker's hill, but spent and worn down by the excessive fatigues they had undergone, having marched that day between thirty and forty miles. Here they remained secure till the next day, when they crossed at Charlestown ferry, and returned to Boston. In this skirmish, the regulars had 65 killed, 180 wounded, and 28 made prisoners. The provincials had 50 men killed, 34 wounded, and four missing.

Let us now return to the mother country, where the restraining and fishery bill met with great opposition in both houses of parliament. The fishery bill had scarcely cleared the House of Commons, when Lord North brought in another to restrain the trade and commerce of the colonies of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and South Carolina, to Great Britain, Ireland, and the British islands in the West Indies, under certain conditions and limitations.

the officers, that
ve to their safety gulars, when near he point of taking ould have led them
danger; but were
on of a young gen-leage. They made
ttle after sun-set,
to Bunker's hill,
n by the excessive
ndergone, having een thirty and forty ined secure till the crossed at Charles-ed to Boston. In ulars had 65 killed, 8 made prisoners.
50 men killed, 34
ssing.
o the mother coun-
ning and fishery bill tition in both houses hery bill had scarce-
of Commons, when n another to restrain ce of the colonies of ylvania, Maryland, Carolina, to Great
the British islands in der certain conditions

The British ministry did not confine themselves to the making of laws; but they also sent out against the Americans the Generals Howe, Clinton and Burgoyne, who left England on the 28th of May, and in about a week afterwards transports laden with troops sailed from Cork, to reinforce Gen. Gage.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

1745 Expedition against Louisbourg.

1755 General Braddock defeated.

1764 Massachusetts assembly declare against parliamentary taxes.

1765 The stamp act passed—Riots at Boston on account of that act.

1766 The stamp act repealed.

1767 Mr. Charles Townsend taxes the colonies again.

1768 Troops ordered to Boston.

1770 Soldiers at Boston fire on the inhabitants.

1773 The East India company empowered to export their own teas. The tea thrown into the sea at Boston.

1774 The Massachusetts people prepare to defend their rights by arms. General Gage fortifies the entrance into Boston.

1775 General Gage sends troops to Salem.
Skirmishes at Concord and Lexington—The restraining bills passed in England—The Gen'ls. Howe, Clinton and Burgoyne, sail for Boston.

CHAP. IV.

THE necessity of securing Ticonderoga was early attended to by many in New-England. Gen. Gage had set the example of attempting to seize upon military stores, and by so doing had commenced hostilities, so that retaliation appeared warrantable.

Col. Allen was at Castleton, with about 270 men, 230 of whom were Green Mountain Boys, so called from their residing within the limits of the Green Mountains, the Hampshire Grants being so denominated from the range of green mountains that run through them. Sentinels were placed immediately on all the roads to prevent any intelligence being carried to Ticonderoga.

Col. Arnold, who now joined Col. Allen, reported, that there were at Ticonderoga, 80 pieces of heavy cannon, 20 of brass, from four to eighteen pounders, ten or a dozen mortars, a number of small arms, and considerable stores; that the fort was in a ruinous condition, and, as he supposed, garrisoned by about forty men. It was then settled, that Col. Allen should have the supreme command, and Col. Arnold was to be his assistant.

Col. Allen with his 230 Green Mountain Boys, arrived at Lake Champlain, opposite to Ticonderoga, on the ninth of May, at night. Boats were with difficulty

Y OF

IV.

ring Ticonderoga
by many in New-
d set the example
on military stores;
nenced hostilities,
ed warrantable.
tleton, with about
were Green Moun-
their residing with-n Mountains, the
g so denominated
mountains that run ls were placed im-
ads to prevent any ed to Ticonderoga.
joined Col. Allen,
re at Ticonderoga,
nnon, 20 of brass, ounders, ten or a ber of small arms,
; that the fort was
and, as he suppos-t forty men. It was Allen should have
J, and Col. Arnold
230 Green Moun- t Lake Champlain,
oga, on the ninth of
were with difficulty procured, when he and Colonel Arnold crossed over with 83 men, and landed near the garrison. The two colonels advanced along side of each other, and entered the port, leading to the fort, in the grey of the morning. A sentry snapped his fusee at Col. Allen, and then retreated thro the covered way to the parade. The main body of Americans then followed, and drew up. Capt. de la Place, the commander, was surprised in bed. Thus was the place taken without any bloodshed.

On the 15th June, 1775, the congress proceeded to choose by ballot a general to command all the continental forces, and George Washington, Esq. was unanimously elected.

The next day, orders were issued by the Americans, for a detachment of a thousand men, to march at evening, and entrench upon Bunker's hill. By some mistake, Breed's hill, high and large like the other, but situated on the furthest part of the peninsula, next to Boston, was marked out for the entrenchment instead of Bunker's. The provincials proceeded therefore to Breed's hill; but were prevented going to work till near 12 o'clock at night, when they pursued their business with the utmost diligence and alacrity; so that by the dawn of the day, they had thrown up a small redoubt, about eight rods square. Such was the extraorordinary silence that reigned among them, that they were not heard by the British on board their vessels in the neighboring waters. The sight of the works was the first notice that the Lively man of war had of them, when the captain began firing upon them about four in the morning.

The guns called the town of Boston, the camp, and the fleet, to behold a novelty, which was little expected. The prospect obliged the British generals to alter the plan they intended to have pursued the next day. They grew weary of being cooped up in Boston, and had resolved upon making themselves masters of Dorchester heights; but the present provincial movement prevented the expedition. They were now called to attempt possessing themselves of Breed's hill, on which the provincials continued working, notwithstanding a heavy fire from the enemy's ships, a number of floating batteries, and a fortification upon Cop's hill, in Boston, directly opposite to the little American redoubt. An incessant shower of shot and bombs was poured by the batteries upon the American work, and yet but one man was killed. The Americans continued laboring indefatigably till they had thrown up a small breast-work, extending from the east side of the redoubt to the bottom of that hill; but they were prevented completing it from the ned among them, by the British on e neighboring wa-

Y. OF

works was the first man of war had of began firing upon morning.

own of Boston, the beheld a novelty,
ed. The prospect
nerals to alter the ve pursued the next
ry of being cooped
olved upon makers of Dorchester
nt provincial move-edition. They were possessing them-
on which the pro-
king, notwithstand-
he enemy's ships, a teries, and a fortifi-in Boston, directly American redoubt.
of shot and bombs
eries upon the Ame-
t one man was killed.
ntinued laboring in-ad thrown up a small ng from the east side ottom of that hill; but completing it from the intolerable fire of the enemy. By some unaccountable error, the detachment, which had been working for hours, was neither relieved, nor supplied with refreshments, but were left to engage under these disadvantages.

Between twelve and one o'clock, and the day exceedingly hot, a number of boats and barges, filled with regular troops from Boston approached Charlestown, when the men were landed at Moreton's Point. They consisted of four battalions, two companies of grenadiers, and ten of light infantry, with a proportion of field artillery; but, by some oversight, their spare cartridges were much too big for them: so that, when the Americans were at length forced from their lines, there was not a round of artillery cartridges remaining.

Major Gen. Howe and Brigadier Gen. Pigot had the command. The troops formed, and remained in that position, till joined by a second detachment of light infantry and grenadier companies, a battalion of the land forces, and a battalion of marines, amounting in the whole to about 3000 men. The Generals Clinton and Burgoyne took their stand upon Cop's hill, to observe and contemplate the bloody and destructive operations that were now commencing. The regulars formed in two lines, and advanced deliberately, frequently halting to give time for the artillery to fire, which was not well served. The light infantry were directed to force the left point of the breast-work, and to take the American line in flank. The grenadiers advanced to attack in front, supported by two battalions, while the left, under Gen. Pigot, inclined to the right of the American line. One or two of the continental regiments had been posted in Charlestown, but afterwards removed to prevent their being cut off by a sudden attack; so that the British were not in the least hurt by the musquetry from thence.

Gen. Gage had for some time resolved upon burning the town, whenever any works were raised by the Americans upon the hills belonging to it; and while the British were advancing nearer to the attack, orders came to Cop's hill for executing the resolution. Soon after a carcass was discharged, which set fire to an old house near the ferry way; the fire instantly spread, and most of the place was soon in flames; while the houses at the eastern end of Charlestown were set on fire by men who landed from the boats.

The regulars derived no advantage from the smoke of the conflagration, for the wind suddenly shifting, carried it another way so that it could not cover them in their approach. The provincials had not a rifleman among them, not one being yet arrived

from
other even onets
mark
of on numb
the re
neare
and t point
there
the w sach ple o
T tack gave ing s
their or tw
disc regu vand cans
tion
and plac effor
with Am
reg
the

which was not well
y were directed to e breast-work, and ine in flank. The ttack in front, sup-while the left, unto the right of the wo of the continen-posted in Charles-removed to prevent sudden attack; so ot in the least hurt thence.

ome time resolved wn, whenever any he Americans upon it; and while the
g nearer to the at-pp's hill for execut-
oon after a carcass set fire to an old ay; the fire instant-
the place was soon ouses at the eastern re set on fire by men
boats.

d no advantage from gration, for the wind ied it another way so er them in their ap-als had not a rifeman e being yet arrived from the southward; nor had they any other guns than common muskets, and even those were not furnished with bayonets. However, they were almost all marksmen, being accustomed to sporting of one kind or other from their youth. A number of Massachusetts people were in the redoubt, and the part of the breast-work nearest it. The left of the breast-work, and the open ground stretching beyond its point to the water-side, through which there was not an opportunity of carrying the work, was occupied partly by the Massachusetts forces, and partly by the people of Connecticut.

The British moved on slowly to the attack, instead of using a quick step; which gave the provincials the advantage of taking surer and cooler aim. These reserved their fire, till the regulars came within ten or twelve rods, when they began a furious discharge of small arms, which stopped the regulars, who kept up the firing without advancing. The discharge from the Americans was so incessant, and did such execution, that the regulars retreated in disorder, and with great precipitation towards the place of landing. Their officers used every effort to make them return to the charge, with which they at length complied; but the Americans again reserved their fire till the regulars came within five or six rods, when the enemy was a second time put to flight.

General Howe and the officers redoubled their exertions ; and General Clinton, perceiving how the army was staggered, passed over, without waiting for orders, and joined them in time to be of service. The Americans being in want of powder, sent for a supply but could procure none ; for there was but a barrel and a half in the magazine. This deficiency disabled them from making the same defence as before ; while the British reaped a further advantage by bringing some cannon to bear, so as to rake the inside of the breast-work from end to end. The regular army now made a decisive push, and the fire from the ships and batteries was redoubled. The provincials were of necessity ordered to retreat.

It was feared by the Americans, that the British troops would push the advantage they had gained, and march immediately to the head quarters at Cambridge, about two miles distant, and in no state of defence. But they advanced no farther than to Bunker's hill, where they threw up works for their own security. The provincials did the same upon Prospect-hill, in front of them, about half way to Cambridge.

The loss of the British according to General Gage, amounted to 1054, of whom 226 were killed ; of these 19 were commissioned officers, including a lieutenant colonel, two majors, and seven captains. Seventy

other
those tenan Pitca

The
woun

In

was c

ing a

nate

ces h ous s coun

the p

part

the fl

he m

my,

with

wou

the

Had

mus

hill,

and

eral

that

arm

the

I

from fort

RY OF

officers redoubled General Clinton, pers staggered, pass-
g for orders, and e of service. The at of powder, sent procure none; for ad a half in the ma-
disabled them from e as before; while urther advantage by o bear, so as to rake
-work from end to y now made a deci-
from the ships and The provincials
red to retreat.

Americans, that the push the advantage
arch immediately to Cambridge, about two no state of defence.
farther than to Bun-
threw up works for The provincials did
pect-hill, in front of to Cambridge.

ish according to Gen-
to 1054, of whom 226 19 were commission-
a lieutenant colonel, n captains. Seventy other officers were wounded. Among those more generally regretted, were Lieutenant Colonel Abercromby and Major Pitcairn.

The provincials had 139 killed, 278 wounded and 36 were missing, in all 453.

In the opinion of many, General Howe was chargeable with a capital error in landing and attacking as he did. It might originate from too great a confidence in the forces he commanded, and in too contemptuous an opinion of the enemy he had to encounter. He certainly might have entrapped the provincials, by landing on the narrowest part of Charlestown neck, under the fire of the floating batteries and ships of war. Here he might have stationed and fortified his army, and kept up an open communication with Boston by a water carriage, which he would have commanded through the aid of the navy, on each side of the peninsula.
Had he made this manœuvre, the provincials must have made a rapid retreat from Breed's hill, to escape having his troops in their rear, and being enclosed. It was said that General Clinton proposed it. The rejection of that proposal greatly weakened the British army, and probably prevented the ruin of the Americans.

In July, the congress received a letter from the convention of Georgia, setting forth, that the colony had acceded to the general association, and appointed delegates to attend the congress.

G

The accession of Georgia to the colonies occasioned their being afterwards called the Thirteen United Colonies. The first hostilities that happened in this part between the opposite parties, commenced about the middle of November, when a number of royalists attacked the Americans, and obliged them, after three days, to surrender a fort they had taken possession of, in which they expected to make an effectual resistance.

In the month of November, the New-York convention having resolved upon the removal of the cannon from the battery of the city, Captain Sears was appointed to the business. Captain Vandeput, of the Asia man of war, was privately informed of the design, and prepared to oppose its execution. Learning when it was to be attempted, he appointed a boat to watch the motion of the people assembled for the purpose about the dead of night. The sailors in the boat giving the signal, with a flash of powder, of what was going forward, the persons on shore mistook it for an attempt to fire a musket at them, and immediately aimed a volley of shot at the boat, by which a man was killed. Captain Vandeput soon after commenced a firing from the Asia with grape and swivel shot, 18 and 24 pounders, without killing a single person, and wounded

RY OF

appointed deleess.

gia to the colonies
terwards called the

The first hostili-
s part between the ced about the mid-
a number of royal-icans, and obliged to surrender a fort on of, in which they ectual resistance.

venber, the Newg resolved upon the
from the battery of
was appointed to the ndeput, of the Asia
y informed of the deppose its execution.
to be attempted, he ch the motion of the e purpose about the llers in the boat giv-

ash of powder, of ard, the persons on attempted fire a mus-diately aimed a volley by which a man was eput soon after com-the Asia with grape
d 24 pounders, with erson, and wounded

only three, two slightly, the other lost the calf of the leg. He then ceased for a considerable time, supposing that the people had desisted from their purpose, while they were only changing their mode of operation.

Capt. Sears provided a deceiving party, intended to draw the Asia's fire from the line of the working party. He sent the former behind a breast-work, by which they were secured by dodging down upon observing the flash of the Asia's guns. When all was in readiness, they huzzaed, and sung out their notes as though tugging in unison, and fired from the walls; while the working party silently got off twenty-one eighteen pounders, with carriages, empty cartridges, rammers, &c.

Upon hearing the noise and seeing the fire of the musketry the captain ordered the Asia to fire a whole broadside towards that part of the fort, where the deceiving party had secured themselves, without intending any particular injury to the city. However some of the shot flew into the city, and did damage.

This affair happened at a very late hour, between twelve and two, and threw the citizens into the utmost consternation. The distress of the New-Yorkers was very much increased by a painful apprehension, that Capt. Vandeput would renew his firing upon the city. A removal of men, women, children, and goods instantly commenced, and continued for some time. Matters were however so far adjusted, as to quiet the apprehensions of the people, in reference to their suffering further from the fire of the Asia. To prevent it the convention permitted Abraham Lott, Esq. to supply his majesty's ships, stationed at New-York, with all necessaries, as well fresh as salted, for the use of those ships.

In the month of November, the general assembly of Rhode-Island passed an act for the capital punishment of persons, who should be found guilty of holding a traitorous correspondence with the ministry of Great-Britain, or any of their officers or agents, or of supplying the ministerial army or navy, employed against the United Colonies, with provisions, arms, &c. or of acting as pilots on board any of their vessels. They also passed an act for sequestering the estates of several persons, whom they considered as avowed enemies to the liberties of America.

On the night of the 26th of August, about 2000 American troops entrenched themselves on Plowed hill, within point blank shot of Bunker's hill; and notwithstanding a continual fire on them all the day following, they had only two killed and two wounded. The British finding that their fire did not answer, relaxed, and after a while desisted entirely, and the Americans remained quiet in their new post.

In the beginning of September, General Washington received a very acceptable remittance of 7000 pounds weight of powder, which had been very scarce in the American army.

Gen. Washington, having received pleasing accounts from Canada, being assured that neither Indians nor Canadians could be prevailed upon to act against the Americans, concerted the plan of detaching a body of troops from the head quarters, across the country to Quebec. He communicated the same to Gen. Schuyler, who approved it, and all things were got in readiness. They set out on the expedition on the 13th September, under the command of Col. Arnold, assisted by the colonels Greene and Enos, and majors Meigs and Bigelow, the whole force amounting to about eleven hundred men.

On the 18th of October, Capt. Mowat destroyed 139 houses, 278 stores and other buildings, the far greater and better part of the town of Falmouth, in the northern part of Massachusetts. The inhabitants in compliance with a resolve of the provincial congress, to prevent tories carrying out their effects, gave some violent obstruction to the loading of a mast ship, which drew upon them the indignation of the British admiral.

In the mean time, General Montgomery was sent forward to Ticonderoga, with a body of troops; and being arrived at the Isle aux Noix, he drew up a declaration, which he sent among the Canadians, by Col. Allen and Major Brown, assuring them that the army was designed only against the English garrisons, and not against the country, their liberties or religion. He lays siege to St. Johns, on the 17th of September.

Col. Allen and Major Brown being on their return, after executing the commission, with which the general had entrusted them, the latter advised Col. Allen to halt, and proposed that the colonel should return to Longueuil, procure canoes and cross the river St. Lawrence, a little north of Montreal, while he, the major, crossed a little to the south of the town, with near 200 men; as he had boats sufficient. The plan was approved, and Col. Allen passed the river in the night. The major, by some means, failed on his part, and Col. Allen found himself the next morning, in a critical situation, but concluded on defending himself. Gen. Carleton, learning how weak Col. Allen was, marched out against him with about forty regulars, together with Canadians, English and Indians, amounting to some hundreds. The colonel defended himself with much bravery; but being deserted by several, chiefly Canadians, and having had fifteen

General Montgomery
deroga, with a bo-arrived at the Isle declaration, which ans, by Col. Allen
ing them that the
against the English
the country, their lays siege to St.
tember.

Brown being on ting the commis-
eral had entrusted
Col. Allen to halt, onnel should return
noes and cross the e north of Montre-
crossed a little to with near 200 men;
The plan was ap-
passed the river in y some means, fail-Allen found himself
critical situation,
ding himself. Gen.
weak Col. Allen was, im with about forty Canadians, English
g to some hundreds.
himself with much
deserted by several,
d having had fifteen of his men killed, was under the necessity of surrendering with thirty-one effectives and seven wounded. He was directly put in irons.

On the 4th of October, a party of Canadians, who had joined the besiegers, before St. Johns, entrenched themselves on the east side of the lake, on which the enemy sent an armed sloop with troops to drive them away; but the Canadians attacked the sloop with vigor, killed a number of the men, and obliged her to return to St. Johns in a shattered condition.

On the 7th, the main body of the army decamped from the south, and marched to the north side of the fort. In the evening, they began to throw up a breast-work, in order to erect a battery of cannon and mortars. The continental troops brot such a spirit of liberty into the field, and shot so freely for themselves, that they would not bear either subordination or discipline. The generals could not, in truth, direct their operations, and would not have stayed an hour at their head, had they not feared that the example would be too generally followed, and so have injured the public service. There was a great want of powder, which with the disorderly behavior of the troops, was a damp to the hope of terminating the siege successfully. The prospect, however, soon brightened, for the Americans planned an attack upon Chamblee, and in batteaus carried down the artillery, past the fort of St. Johns. After a short demur, Chamblee surrendered to the majors Brown and Livingston. The greatest acquisition was about six tons of powder, which gave great encouragement to the provincials.

On the 3d of November, the garrison of St. Johns, consisting of 500 regulars and 100 Canadians, after a siege of 46 days, surrendered by capitulation.

On the 12th of November, Gen. Montgomery pressed on to Montreal, which not being capable of making any defence, Gov. Carleton quitted it one day, and the American general entered it the next.

Notwithstanding the advanced season of the year, Gen. Montgomery marched on for the capital, and on the 5th of December appeared before Quebec. The garrison consisted of about fifteen hundred, while the besiegers were said to consist of little more than half that number. Upon his appearing before the city, he sent forward a flag of truce, which was fired upon by order of Sir Guy Carleton. At this Gen. Montgomery was so provoked, that the next day he wrote to Sir Guy, and in his letter, departed from the common mode of conveying his sentiments; he made use of threats and language which in his cooler moments he would have declined.

In spite of the inclemency of the season, he set about erecting works. His batteries were composed of snow and water, which soon became solid ice. He planted on them five pieces of ordnance, twelve and nine pounders, with one howitzer; but the artillery was inadequate, and made no impression.

In the evening, a council was held by all the commanding officers of Col. Arnold's detachment, and a large majority were for storming the garrison, as soon as the men were provided with bayonets, spears, hatchets and hand grenades. The plan of storming the garrison was wholly the work of Gen. Montgomery, who, in the council of war held on the occasion, shewed the necessity, practicability, and importance of it, in such a clear and convincing manner, that they unanimously agreed to the measure. The attempt had the appearance of rashness; but the general was persuaded that men, who had behaved so bravely, would follow him, and that Sir Guy Carleton's forces would not fight, when actual service commenced.

On the 31st of December, the troops assembled at the hour appointed. They were to make the attack by the way of Cape Diamond, at the general's quarters on the heights of Abraham, and were headed by the Gen. himself. Col. Arnold was made to attack through the suburbs of St. Roc. Col. Livingston and Maj. Brown were to make a false attack upon the walls, to the southward of St. John's gate, and in the mean time to set fire to the gate with the combustibles prepared for that purpose. The colonel was also to give the signals for the combination of the attacks, which were to begin exactly at five o'clock. It is said that Capt. Fraser, of the regulars, who was then on piquet, going his rounds, saw the rockets fired off as signals, and, forming a conjecture of what was going forward, beat to arms without orders, and so prepared the garrison for defence.

The different routes, the assailants had to make, the depth of the snow, and other obstacles, prevented the execution of Livingston's command. The general moved with his division, attended by a number of carpenters, to the piquets at Cape Diamond. These were soon cut with the saws, and the general pulled them down himself. He then entered, attended by the carpenters and some of his officers.

On their entrance, their guides forsook them, which alarmed the general and other officers, who were unacquainted with the pass and situation of the enemy's artillery. However, they pressed on, and the general, observing that the troops did not follow with spirit, called out, "Fie, for shame! will the New-York troops desert the cause in this critical moment? Will you not follow when your general leads? Push on, brave boys,

Quebe
tion, a when shot f arms aid-de
The f
the er
portu forwa
ter-m
of co
a ret
ed w
The
ly un
woun
and v men
when were of w upw gom
and nex
and
The
ed,
He
the
in

Y OF
 , to the southward
 the mean time to combustibles pre-
 The colonel was al-
 the combination of
 to begin exactly at at Capt. Fraser, of on piquet, going
 ets fired off as sig-ecture of what was ms without orders,
 son for defence.
 the assailants had he snow, and other execution of Liv-
 he general moved
 led by a number of s at Cape Diamond.
 th the saws, and the n himself. He then the carpenters and their guides forsook
 e general and other.
 acquainted with the e enemy's artillery.
 on, and the general, s did not follow with
 , for shame! will the ert the cause in this you not follow when
 ush on, brave boys,

Quebec is ours." A few acted with resolution, advanced and attacked the guard house, when the enemy gave a discharge of grape shot from their cannon, and also of small arms which proved fatal to the general, his aid-de-camp, Capt. Cheeseman, and others.
 The firing from the guardhouse ceased, by the enemy's quitting their post, and the opportunity offered for the assailants to push forward with success; but the deputy quarter-master general, Campbell, with the rank of colonel, assumed the command, ordered a retreat, which took place, and the wounded were carried off to the camp.

The divison under Col. Arnold was equally unsuccessful. The colonel received a wound in one of his legs from a musket ball, and was carried to the general hospital. His men maintained their ground till ten o'clock, when, all hopes of relief being over, they were obliged at last to surrender prisoners of war. In this attack the provincials lost upwards of an hundred men. Gen. Montgomery was shot through both his thighs and his head. His body was taken up the next day, an elegant coffin was prepared, and he was soon after decently interred.
 The general was tall and slender, well limbed, of easy, graceful, and manly address.
 He had the love, esteem, and confidence of the whole army; he was of a good family in Ireland, and had served with reputation in the late war with France. His excellent qualities and disposition procured him an uncommon share of private affection, and his abilities of public esteem. His death was considered as a greater loss to the American cause, than all the others with which it was accompanied.

When the continental troops had collected after the unsuccessful attack on Quebec, there arose a dispute who should command, and whether it was advisable to raise the siege, or wait till a reinforcement should arrive. A council of war agreed, that Col. Arnold should command, and should continue the siege, or rather the blockade, which was accordingly done, apparently at no small risk, as they had not more than four hundred men fit for duty; but they retired about three miles from the city, and posted themselves advantageously.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter. An. 1773.

The expedition against Ticonderoga.

Geo. Washington, Esq. elected commander in chief of the continental forces.

The battle of Bunker's hill.

Georgia accedes to the Union.

The thirteen Colonies united.

The Asia man of war fires upon New-York.

Col. Arnold's expedition into Canada.

Falmouth destroyed, and on what account.

Col. Allen taken prisoner, and put in irons.

Gen. Montgomery appears before Quebec, and falls in an attack upon it.

C H A P. V.

LET us now return to Boston and its environs, and see what was transacting there. On the 15th of February, 1776, the strength of the ice having been tried in one place, and the frost continuing, Gen. Washington was desirous of embracing the season for passing over it, from Cambridge side into Boston. He laid before the council of war the following question: "A stroke well aimed at this critical juncture may put a final period to the war, and restore peace and tranquility so much to be wished for; and therefore, whether part of Cambridge and Roxbury bays being frozen over, a general assault should not be made on Boston?"

General Ward opposed the idea, saying, "The attack must be made with a view of bringing on an engagement, or of driving the enemy out of Boston, and either end will be answered much better by possessing Dorchester heights." When the votes were called for, the majority were against the attack. It was however determined to possess themselves of Dorchester heights, which was accordingly afterwards accomplished.

On the 5th of March, the British admiral informed Gen. Howe, that if the Americans possessed those heights, he could not keep one of his majesty's ships in the harbor.— Every design of General Howe to force the American works on the hill being frustrated, a council of war was called, when it was agreed to evacuate the town as soon as possible. The time that had been gained by the Americans for strengthening their works, took away all hopes of any successful attempts to be made on them by the British forces. The Americans had provided a great number of barrels, filled with stones, gravel and sand, which were placed round the works, ready to be rolled down, with a view to break the lines of any hostile advancing troops, when ascending the hills.

H

On the 7th of March, there was a general hurry and confusion in Boston, every one in the royal interest, being busy in preparing to quit the town, and to carry off every thing that was valuable. A flag was sent out from the select men, acquainting Gen. Washington with the intention of the troops, and that Gen. Howe was disposed to leave the town standing, provided he could retire uninterrupted. Gen. Washington bound himself under no obligation, but expressed himself in words, which admitted of a favorable construction; and intimated his good wishes for the preservation of Boston. At four o'clock, in the morning, of the 17th, the embarkation was completed, and before ten the whole fleet was under sail, and the pro-

vinci
town
Le
in V Live
Gre
a fla
ed w
be s
The
ship noy buil
it w troy
P
mer mig tran
o'cl
ade
and mo ma
nex
of t cov
fir
six
mo
lik
dis

s in the harbor.—
Howe to force the all being frustrated, alled, when it was
own as soon as pos-
been gained by the
ning their works,
any successful at-them by the British as had provided a
, filled with stones,
were placed round rolled down, with a
of any hostile ad-
scending the hills.
, there was a genen Boston, every one g busy in preparing carry off every thing
g was sent out from ting Gen. Washing-of the troops, and disposed to leave the d he could retire unhington bound him-
, but expressed himmitted of a favorable
nated his good wish-of Boston. At four ng, of the 17th, the pleted, and before ten der sail, and the provincials soon after took possession of the town.

Let us now take a view of what was doing in Virginia. Towards the close of 1775 the Liverpool frigate arrived at Norfolk from Great Britain. Soon after the captain sent a flag of truce, and demanded to be informed whether his majesty's ship of war would be supplied from the shore with provisions. The reply was in the negative; and the ships in the harbor being continually annoyed by the riflemen from behind the buildings and ware-houses on the wharfs, it was determined to dislodge them by destroying the town.

Previous notice was given, that the women, children, and other innocent persons, might remove from the danger. The entrance of the new year was signalized at four o'clock in the morning, by a violent cannonade from the Liverpool, two sloops of war, and the governor's armed ship the Dunmore, seconded by parties of sailors and marines, who landed and fired the houses next the water. Where buildings, instead of being covered with tile, slate, or lead, are covered with shingles, (thin light pieces of fir or cedar, half a yard in length, and about six inches broad) let the wind be ever so moderate, they will, upon being fired, be likely to communicate the conflagration to a distance, should the weather be dry, by the burning shingles being driven by the force of the flames to the tops of other houses.

Thus the whole town was reduced to ashes, that the Americans might have no shelter, should they be inclined to establish a post on the spot. A few men were killed and wounded at the burning of Norfolk, the most populous and considerable town for commerce of any in Virginia. It contained about 6000 inhabitants, and many in affluent circumstances. The whole loss was estimated at more than three hundred thousand pounds sterling. However urgent the necessity, it was an odious sight to see the governor, Lord Dunmore, a principal actor in burning and destroying the best town in his government. The horrid distress brought upon numbers of innocent persons, by these operations, must wound the feelings of all who are not hardened by a party spirit.

While matters were thus transacting in America, the ministry at home gave into great expenses, to supply the army at Boston with fresh provisions and other articles. Sir Peter Parker and Earl Cornwallis, with the Acteon and Thunder bomb sailed from Portsmouth for Corke, to convoy the troops and transports there to America; but, owing to some delays, the fleet did not sail before the 13th of February. It consisted of forty-three sail, and about 2500 troops.

ARY OF

driven by the force of other houses.
was reduced to ash.
might have no shel-
lined to establish a ew men were killed
ning of Norfolk, the siderable town for rginia. It contained and many in affluent whole loss was estie hundred thousand ever urgent the ne-
sight to see the go-
, a principal actor in g the best town in his rrid distress brought ent persons, by these nd the feelings of all
by a party spirit.
s thus transacting in y at home gave into pply the army at Bos-
ons and other articles.
Earl Cornwallis, with der bomb sailed from
, to convoy the troops o America; but, owhe fleet did not sail be-uary. It consisted of about 2500 troops.

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche
Series.

CIHM/ICMH
Collection de
microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1982

wa
a c su
pa th
G sic N
su re
T
w v
H tu
in
b a
c
t
i
t
i
t
t

On the 14th of March, a fresh attempt was made in the house of lords, to prevent a continuance of hostilities, which so far succeeded, that in the May following, letters patent, by his majesty's orders, passed under the great seal, constituting Lord Howe and Gen. Howe, to be his majesty's commissioners for restoring peace to the colonies in North America, and for granting pardon to such of his majesty's subjects there, then in rebellion, as should deserve the royal mercy. The same month Commodore Hotham, with all the transports, having the first division of Hessians on board, sailed from St. Helen's for North America. But let us return to Canada, and attend to what was going forward in that quarter.

The blockade of Quebec was continued; but the fears of the Americans were great, as they had no more than 400 men to do duty, while there were upwards of three times the number in the city; they were in daily expectation that the besieged would sally out upon them. At length a small reinforcement arrived, which enabled them to take a little more rest, though the army was again soon reduced by the small-pox that broke out among them.

Towards the end of May, several regiments arrived from England, and the British forces in Canada were estimated at about 13,000 men. The general rendezvous was appointed to be at Three Rivers, half way between Quebec and Montreal. The Americans now formed a plan to surprise the British troops, and for that purpose marched under cover of the night, on the 8th of June, in order to attack them a little before day-break. Gen. Thompson, who commanded in this expedition, had procured a Canadian guide, who was either ignorant or unfaithful; for, a little before sun rise, he found his forces were out of the proper road. They returned, but losing their way by the side of the river, they were soon in view of some of the enemy's boats, between which and the flanking party several balls were exchanged. They then quickened their pace, and continued advancing in sight of the shipping, with drums beating and fifes playing, as they knew they were discovered. The general, judging there was no possibility of passing the ships, without being exposed to all their fire, and yet determining to persist in the expedition, filed off at a right angle from the river. He meant to take a circuitous route, and enter the town on the backside. A bad morass interposed, the troops entered it, and the men were almost mired. About nine o'clock, they came to a cleared spot, formed, and got into some order about ten. They advanced, but before the rear had got off the place of formation, the front received a heavy fire from the enemy, which struck them with

Rivers, half way treat. The Ame-to surprise the Bripurpose marched on the 8th of June,
little before day-
, who commanded ocured a Canadian ignorant or unfaithsun rise, he found proper road. They ir way by the side
on in view of some ween which and the ills were exchanged.
their pace, and con-
ht of the shipping,
d fies playing, as scovered. The ge-as no possibility of out being exposed to etermining to persist l off at a right angle it to take a circuitous n on the backside. A
the troops entered it, et mired. About nine
leared spot, formed,
r about ten. They ad-
e rear had got off the front received a heavy hich struck them with terror. The fire was instantly repeated, and though the balls flew over the heads of the troops without doing any material execution, they gave way, and crowded back, in the utmost confusion, which left them without a leader, so that every one did as he pleased. They turned their faces up the river and hastened through the swamp as fast as possible. About eleven they began to collect, and soon learned from the Canadians, that the enemy had sent a detachment, with several field-pieces by land, to cut off their retreat, and a party by water to seize their boats. About four they were told, that the enemy had secured the bridge before them, which it was supposed they must pass. They were also convinced that a large body were closely in their rear. Col. Maxwell ordered all who had collected together to halt, called the officers to him, and said, "What shall we do? Shall we fight those in the front or in the rear? Shall we tamely submit? or shall we turn off into the woods, and each man shift for himself?" The last proposal was preferred, but the enemy was so near, that the rear of the Americans was exposed to another tremendous fire, while going down the hill into the woods, but the balls flew over them without injuring any. The person, who was intrusted with the care of the boats, had removed them in time to a secure place; so that the loss of the Americans, which must otherwise have been much greater, amounted only to about 200 prisoners.

The troops that escaped began to collect about ten the next day, and by noon were considerably numerous. They got along by degrees, and by sun set the day following arrived opposite Sorel. Gen. Thompson and Col. Irwin, the second in command, with some other officers were taken. The killed and wounded of the king's troops were trifling.

The king's forces having joined at Three Rivers, proceeded by land and water to Sorel, off which the fleet arrived in the evening a few hours after the rear of the Americans had left it. A considerable body was landed, and the command of the column given to Gen. Burgoyne, with instructions to pursue the continental army up the river to St. Johns, but without hazarding any thing till another column on his right should be able to co-operate with him. Sir Guy Carleton's extraordinary precaution to put nothing to hazard, when not absolutely necessary, gave the Americans the opportunity of escaping. Had Burgoyne been instructed to press on with the utmost expedition, great numbers of the provincials must have been made prisoners, and but few would have crossed Lake Champlain. Thus ended the expedition against Quebec.

Y OF

otherwise have been only to about 200. I began to collect and by noon were. They got along by the day following arrived. Thompson and in command, with taken. The killing's troops were joined at Three and water to So. arrived in the evening rear of the American considerable body was of the column giving with instructions to army up the river to hazzarding any thing his right should be him. Sir Guy Carleton caution to put not absolutely necessary the opportunity goyne been instructed utmost expedition, provincials must have and but few would amplain. Thus ended against Quebec.

To return to Boston. The British Commodore, Banks, omitting to leave cruisers in the bay, afforded an opportunity to the American privateers of taking a number of Highlanders. Three days after his quitting it, the George and Annabella transports entered, after a passage of seven weeks from Scotland, during the course of which they had not an opportunity of speaking with a single vessel that could give them the smallest information of the British troops having evacuated Boston. They were attacked in the morning by four privateers, with whom they engaged till the evening, when the privateers bore away, and the transports pushed for Boston harbor, not doubting, but they should there receive protection, either from a fort or ship of force stationed for the security of British vessels. They stood up for Nantasket road, when an American battery opened upon them, which was the first serious proof they had of the situation of affairs at the port to which they were destined. They were too far embayed to retreat, as the wind had died away, and the tide was half expended. The privateers, with which they had been engaged, joined by two others, made towards them. They prepared for action; but, by some misfortune, the Annabella got aground so far astern of the George, that the latter expected but a feeble support from her musketry.

About eleven at night, the privateers anchored close by, and hailed them to strike the British flag. The mate of the George, and every sailor on board, the captain excepted, refused to fight any longer; but the officers and privates of the 71st regiment stood to their quarters till all their ammunition was expended, when they were forced to yield. They had eight privates and a major killed besides 17 wounded. The number of Highlanders taken were 267 privates, 48 officers, besides Lieut. Col. Campbell.

On the 25th of June, Gen. Howe arrived at Sandy Hook in the Greyhound frigate. He soon received from Gov. Tryon a full account of the state and disposition of the province, as well as of the strength of the Americans. Gen. Washington's army was small, rather below 9000 fit for duty. Of this little army it was said, at least 2000 were wholly destitute of arms, and nearly as many with arms in such condition as to be rather calculated to discourage than animate the user. On the 2d of July, Gen. Howe's troops took possession of Staten Island.

On the first of July, congress resolved itself into a committee of the whole upon the subject of independence; but neither colonies nor members being unanimous, it was postponed till the next day. On the fourth, they had it under further consideration, when the declaration of independence was agreed to and adopted. The title of it was.

"A declaration by the Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled."

The preamble follows in these words.—

"When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station, to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal—that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed—that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall

ORY OF

the privateers an-ailed them to strike
nate of the George;
rd, the captain ex-
any longer; but the
the 71st regiment
till all their ammuhen they were forceight privates and a wounded. The num-
n were 267 privates,
t. Col. Campbell.

Gen. Howe arrived
Greyhound frigate.
n Gov. Tryon a full
d disposition of the f the strength of the hington's army was 00 fit for duty. Of said, at least 2000
f arms, and nearly as h condition as to be ourage than animate
f July, Gen. Howe's of Staten Island.

, congress resolved
e of the whole upon adence; but neither
being unanimous; it e next day. On the er further consideration of independence

seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate, that governments long established, should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies, and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government."

The declaration proceeds to give a history of repeated injuries and usurpation, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over those states.

On the 8th of July, at twelve o'clock the declaration of independence was proclaimed at the state house in Philadelphia, amidst the greatest acclamations. The next day, in consequence of general orders, it was read at the head of each brigade of the continental army at New-York, and every where received with loud huzzas, and the utmost demonstrations of joy. The same evening, the equestrian statue of the king et their safety and indeed, will dictate, established, should

and transient causes;
experience hath shown,
disposed to suffer,
than to right them-
forms to which they when a long train of pursuing invariably es a design to reduce despotism, it is their
to throw off such govide new guards for Such has been the pa-se colonies, and such which constrains them to ems of government."
ceeds to give a histoes and usurpation, all et the establishment of ver those states.
, at twelve o'clock the endence was proclaim-in Philadelphia, amidst ations. The next day, general orders, it was
f each brigade of the New-York, and every
th loud huzzas, and the ions of joy. The same trian statue of the king was laid prostrate on the ground, and the lead of which it was made was doomed to be run into bullets.

On the 14th of August, Lord Dunmore quitted Virginia, and joined the British forces. He arrived with Lord Campbell and Sir Peter Parker off Staten-Island. His lordship continued on the coasts, and in the rivers of Virginia, till the closeness and filth of the small vessels, in which the fugitives were crowded, together with the heat of the weather, the badness and scarcity of water and provisions, produced a pestilential fever which made great havoc, especially among the negroes, many of whom were swept away.
When at length every place was shut against him, and neither water nor provisions were to be obtained, but at the expense of blood, it was found necessary to burn several of the smaller and least valuable vessels, to prevent their falling into the hands of the Americans, and to send the remainder, with the exiled friends of government, to seek shelter in Florida, Bermuda, and the West-Indies.
Lord Howe arrived off Halifax towards the end of June, and from thence proceeded to New-York, and reached Staten-Island by the 12th of July. From thence he sent on shore by a flag to Amboy, a circular letter, together with a declaration to several of the late governors of the colonies, acquainting them with his powers, and desiring them to publish the same as generally as possible, for the information of the people. But it was now too late to bring them back to the obedience of the mother country, since the declaration of independence had been every where solemnly read.

In the month of August, Gen. Howe finding himself sufficiently strong to attempt something, resolved on making a descent on Long-Island. The necessary measures being taken by the fleet for covering the descent, the army was landed, without opposition, between two small towns, Utretcht and Gravesend, not far from the Narrows, on the nearest shore to Staten-Island.

On this island are several passes through the mountains or hills, which are easily defensible, being very narrow, and the lands high and mountainous on each side. These were the only roads that could be passed from the south side of the hills to the American lines, except a road leading round the easterly end of the hills to Jamaica. An early attention had been given to the importance of these passes. To the second of them, the small American parties, patrolling on the coasts, retired upon the approach of the British boats with the troops. Lord Cornwallis pushed on immediately with the reserve and some other forces; but finding the Americans in possession of the pass, in compliance with orders he risked no attack.

rally as possible,
e people. But it
them back to the country, since the ce had been every

, Gen. Howe find-strong to attempt
making a descent,
necessary measures
or covering the deed, without oppo-
all towns, Utrecht
from the Narrows, taten-Island.

eral passes through which are easily de-row, and the lands n each side. These at could be passed
e hills to the Ame-
d leading round the o Jamaica. An early to the importance
second of them, the
, patrolling on the approach of the Bri-
s. Lord Cornwallis with the reserve and finding the Ameri-
he pass, in complied no attack.

The Americans had on each of the three passes or roads a guard of 800 men; and to the east of them in the wood, Col. Miles was placed with his battalion to guard the road from the south of the hills to Jamaica, and to watch the motion of the enemy on that side, with orders to keep a party constantly reconnoitring to and across the Jamaica road. The sentinels were so placed as to keep a continual communication between the three guards on the three roads.

On the 26th of August, Gen. Howe, having fully settled a plan of surprise, Gen. de Heister, with his Hessians, took post at Flatbush in the evening, and composed the centre. About nine o'clock the same night, the principal army, containing much the greater part of the British forces, under the commands of Gen. Clinton, Earl Percy, and Lord Cornwallis, marched in order to gain the road leading round the easterly end of the hills to Jamaica, and so to turn the left of the Americans. Col. Miles whose duty it was to guard this road, suffered the British to march not less than six miles, till they were near two miles in the rear of the guards, before he discovered and gave notice of their approach.

The next day, before day-break, Gen. Clinton arrived within half a mile of the road, when he halted, and settled his disposition for the attack. One of his patrols fell in with a patrol of American officers on horseback who were trepanned and made prisoners. Gen. Sullivan, though in expectation that they would bring him intelligence neglected sending out a fresh patrol on finding himself disappointed. Clinton, learning from the captured officers, that the Americans had not occupied the road, detached a battalion of light infantry to secure it, and advancing with his troops upon the first appearance of day, possessed himself of the heights that commanded the road.

About midnight, the guard, consisting all of New-Yorkers and Pennsylvanians, perceiving that there was danger at hand, fled without firing a gun, and carried to Gen. Parsons, who commanded them, the account of the enemy's advancing in great numbers by that road. Gen. Grant's movements were to divert the attention of the Americans from the left, where the main attack was to be made by Gen. Clinton. By day-light, Gen. Parsons perceived, that the British were got through the wood, and were descending on the north side. He took twenty of his fugitive guard, being all he could collect, and posted them on a height in front of the British, about half a mile distant, which halted their column, and gave time for Lord Sterling to come up with his forces, amounting to about 1500, who possessed himself of a hill about two miles from the camp.

The engagement began soon after day-break, by the Hessians from Flatbush under Gen. Heister, and by Gen. Grant on the coast; and a warm cannonade, with a brisk fire of small arms, were eagerly supported on both sides for some considerable time. The Americans opposing Gen. Heister were the first who were apprised of the march of the British troops under General Clinton. They accordingly retreated in large bodies, and in tolerable order, to recover their camp; but they were soon interrupted by the right wing under Gen. Clinton, who, having halted and refreshed his forces after passing the heights, continued his march and getting into the rear of the left of the Americans, about half past eight o'clock, attacked them with his light infantry and light dragoons, while quitting the heights to return to their lines. They were driven back, and again met the Hessians, and thus were they alternately chased and intercepted. In these desperate circumstances, some of their regiments, overpowered and outnumbered as they were, forced their way to the camps through all the dangers with which they were pressed.

The Americans under Lord Stirling, who were engaged with Gen. Grant, behaved with great bravery and resolution; but were so late in their knowledge of what passed elsewhere, that their retreat was intercepted by some of the British troops, who, besides turning the hills and the American left, had traversed the whole extent of country in their rear. Several broke through the enemy's lines and got into the woods. Gen. Parsons, with a small party, escaped by doing the same; numbers threw themselves in the marsh at Gorvan's Cove, some were drowned, and others perished in the mud. However a considerable body escaped to the lines. The nature of the country, and the variety of the ground, occasioned a continuance and extension of small engagements, pursuits and slaughter, which lasted for many hours before the scene closed.

The British troops displayed great valor and activity on this occasion. So impetuous was their ardor, that it was with difficulty they could be restrained, by Gen. Howe's orders, from attacking the American lines. They would probably have entered them, had not the works been completed the night before the action, by closing an opening on the right, and placing an abattis before it. The Americans were most completely surprised and effectually entrapped. Col. Smallwood's Maryland regiment suffered extremely, and was almost cut to pieces, losing 259 men. The loss was much regretted, on account of their being young men of the best of what passed at was intercepted ops, who, besides American left, had ent of country in e through the en-

the woods. Gen.
ty, escaped by do-
threw themselves
s Cove, some were
rished in the mud.
body escaped to the ne country, and the ccasioned a contin-
small engagements,
, which lasted for
scene closed.
isplayed great val-casion. So impetu-
at it was with difficulned, by Gen. Howe's the American lines.
have entered them,
a completed the night closing an opening on an abbatis before it.
most completely surentraped. Col. Small-giment suffered exost cut to pieces, losing as much regretted, on young men of the best families in the country. All who were engaged in the actions of this day did not display the same courage; nor was it to be expected from such raw troops. Many escaped from the want of discipline; for they broke at the sight of danger and saved themselves by flight, whereas otherwise they must have been killed or taken. Large bodies however were captured. Gen. Sullivan, Lord Stirling, and Gen. Udell, besides three colonels, four lieutenant-colonels, three majors, eighteen captains, forty-three lieutenants, eleven ensigns, an adjutant, three surgeons, and two volunteers, were made prisoners, together with 1006 privates, in all 1097. As among the prisoners the wounded were included, an allowance of between four and five hundred for killed, drowned, perished in the woods, the mud and the like, may be reckoned about the mark; the loss of the British, in killed and wounded, did not exceed three hundred and eighteen, of whom only sixty-one were killed. After the battle, the Americans retreated to New-York, to which place they crossed over under the favor of a fog, taking with them all their military stores, and leaving nothing behind them but a few pieces of cannon and some trifling matters.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.
Anno 1776.

Gen. Howe evacuates Boston.

Norfolk in Virginia burnt.

Sir Peter Parker and Earl Cornwallis sail for America.

The blockade of Quebec continued.

The Americans raise the blockade and retreat.

A number of Highlanders taken in Boston bay.

Declaration of American independence.

Gen. Howe lands the royal army on Long-Island, and drives the Americans off it.

CHAP. VI.

AFTER the affair of Long-Island, endeavors were used by the Americans to keep up the spirits of the people, by publishing accounts of the extraordinary bravery of their troops, and the destruction they made of the enemy. But that matters were not very promising appears from a letter of General Mercer, who commanded the flying camp, dated September 4th, wherein he writes : " General Washington has not, so far as I have seen, five thousand men to be depended on for the service of a campaign; and I have not one thousand. Both ed in this chapter.

76. oston.
nt.
arl Cornwallis sail
c continued.
e blockade and re-
ers taken in Boston
an independence.
oyal army on Long-
e Americans off it.

*****

VI.

of Long-Island, end by the Americans
f the people, by pufextraordinary bravery
he destruction they ut that matters were ears from a letter of ommanded the flying er 4th, wherein he Vashington has not,
five thousand men
the service of a cam-one thousand. Both our armies are composed of raw militia, perpetually fluctuating between the camp and their farms; poorly armed, and still worse disciplined. These are not a match for, were their numbers equal to, veteran troops, well fitted and urged on by able officers. Numbers and discipline must at last prevail. Giving soldiers, or even the lower orders of mankind, the choice of officers will for ever mar the discipline of armies."

Gen. Howe, having fully prepared for a descent on New-York Island, embarked a strong division of the army under the command of Gen. Clinton and others, in boats, at the head of Newtown inlet, and at another place higher up, where they could not be observed by the Americans, who expected the attack would be made on the side next to the East-river, and had therefore thrown up lines and works to defend themselves.

On the 15th of September, about eleven o'clock, Gen. Howe's troops landed, under the cover of five ships of war, in two divisions, the Hessians in one place, and the British in another. As soon as Gen. Washington heard the firing of the men of war, he rode with all dispatch towards the lines; but to his great mortification, found the troops posted in them retreating with the utmost precipitation; and those ordered to support them, Parsons's and Fellows' Brigade, flying in every direction, and in the greatest confusion. His attempts to stop them were fruitless, though he drew his sword, threatened to run them through, and cocked and snapped his pistols.

On the appearance of a small party of the enemy, not more than sixty or seventy, their disorder was increased, and they ran off without firing a single shot, leaving the general in a hazardous situation, so that his attendants to extricate him out of it, caught the bridle of his horse, and gave him a different direction.

Three large ships were stationed in the North-river, opposite to those on the East-river, and both kept up a constant cannonading with grape-shot and langrage quite across the island. The Hessians, upon their landing, seized and secured, in a neighboring building, as enemies, some persons who had been placed there to serve as guides, which for a while subjected them to a difficulty.

When the regulars were completely landed, they advanced towards the Kingsbridge road. The American brigades, which had fled on the enemy's approaching the lines, did not stop till they were met by Col. Glover's and five other brigades, who were hastening down to them. As soon as they joined the whole marched forward; and took post on some heights, when suddenly 8000 of the enemy appeared on the next height, and

halted
that give ation
not h
the fl
numb
retire
the E

Gen
from ful to make Ches
side marc right cann
but t sider

On
move
they
the 2
cont
not a with susta
lines

On being made

RY OF

to stop them were by his sword, threa-gh, and cocked and a small party of the ty or seventy, their

, and they ran off
not, leaving the ge-nation, so that his im out of it, caught and gave him a dif-

ere stationed in the o those on the East-
a constant cannon-
and language quite the Hessians, upon secured, in a neighemies, some persons
there to serve as while subjected them were completely landards the Kingsbridge brigades, which had approaching the lines, were met by Col. Glogades, who were has-

As soon as they joined forward; and took post n suddenly 8000 of the
the next height, and halted. Gen. Washington at first consented that his troops should march forward, and give them battle; but, on a second consideration, he gave counter orders, as he could not have any dependence on the militia and the flying camp, which composed half the number then present. When the Americans retired and no prospect of action remained, the English took possession of New-York.

Gen. Washington, while moving the army from New-York, into the country, was careful to march and form the troops, so as to make a front towards the enemy, from East Chester almost to White Plains, on the east side of the highway, thereby to secure the march of those who were behind on their right and to defend the removal of the sick, cannon and other matters of consequence; but the want of many necessary articles considerably retarded their march.

On the 25th of October, the royal army moved in two columns, and took a position they thought the most advantageous. On the 28th, an action took place between the contending forces, at White Plains, and tho not a general engagement, both parties met with considerable loss. The Americans sustained the various attacks made on their lines with becoming firmness.

On the last day of October, Gen. Howe, being joined by the troops from Lord Percy, made dispositions for attacking the American lines early the next morning; but an extreme wet night and morning prevented the execution at the time appointed, and it was not attempted afterwards, though the day proved fair. Gen. Washington gained intelligence of his danger from a deserter, when he drew off most of his troops at night, totally evacuated his camp early in the morning of the first of November, and took higher ground towards the North Castle district; leaving a strong rear guard on the heights and in the woods of White Plains. Orders were given by Gen. Howe to attack this corps; but the execution of it was prevented by a violent rain.

Though the affair at White Plains made so much noise at the time in which it happened, the Americans soon after retreated, leaving the English in possession of New-York and the Jerseys. Gen. Lee is taken prisoner, and carried to New-York.

December 26, General Washington, made a descent on Jersey, and at Trenton surprised and took prisoners 23 Hessian officers, and 886 men. In the evening he re-passed the Delaware, with his prisoners.

From this period to the month of June, 1777, nothing passed in Jersey but one continued scene of blood and slaughter among detached parties, without any decisive advantages being gained by either side. On the 30th of June, at ten o'clock in the morning, morning; but an morning prevented

e appointed, and it
wards, though the Washington gained
er from a deserter,
his troops at night,
p early in the morn-ber; and took high-North Castle, dis-rear guard on the ls of White Plains.
Gen. Howe to attack xecution of it was rain.

White Plains made ime in which it hap-
soon after retreated, a possession of New-

Gen. Lee is taken
o New York.

eneral Washington,
rsey, and at Trenton soners 23 Hessian of-
In the evening he re-
with his prisoners.

o the month of June,
in Jersey but one con-
l and slaughter among hout any decisive add by either side. On the 'clock in the morning, the English troops began to cross over to Staten-Island, and the rear guard passed at two in the afternoon, without the least appearance of an enemy. Thus they evacuated the Jerseys, to enter upon new conquests, in hopes of reducing the United States, to unconditional submission.

Let us now turn to the British operations in the North, which were taken out of the hands of Sir Guy Carleton, and committed to the charge of Gen. Burgoyne. The forces allotted to them, consisting of British and German troops, amounted to more than 7000 men, exclusive of the artillery corps. A powerful train of brass artillery was furnished, probably the finest, and the most excellently supplied, as to officers and private men, that had ever been destined to second the operations of an army not exceeding the present number. The army was, in every respect, in the best condition, the troops were in the highest spirits, admirably disciplined, and uncommonly healthy.

The main body under Gen. Burgoyne, proceeded up Lake Champlain, landed and encamped at no great distance from Crown Point, where he met the Indians in congress, and afterwards, in compliance with their customs, gave them a war feast. He made a speech to them, calculated to excite their ardor in the common cause and at the same time to repress their barbarity. He conjured them to kill those only who opposed them in arms ; that old men, women, children, and prisoners, should be held sacred from the knife or hatchet, even in the heat of actual conflict ; that they should scalp those only whom they had slain in fair opposition ; but that under no pretence should they scalp the wounded, or even dying, much less kill persons in that condition : they were promised a compensation for prisoners, but informed, that they should be called to account for scalps.

On the near approach of the right wing of the royal army on the Ticonderoga side, the Americans abandoned their works towards Lake George, and left Gen. Phillips to possess the advantageous post of Mount Hope, without making any resistance, which would have been ineffectual, and could have answered no good purpose. That apparent supineness and want of vigor, with which they were chargeable, was not occasioned by cowardice, but actual imbecility.

Gen. Burgoyne's troops proceeded with much expedition, in the construction of their works, the bringing up of artillery, stores, and provisions ; but what gave the greatest alarm, was, the rapid progress they made in clearing a road, and getting artillery on Sugar Hill. When once they had erected a battery on this height, only a few hours

RY OF

only who oppos-
old men, women, should be held sa-
atchet, even in the
that they should they had slain in fair under no pretence
ounded, or even dy-
sons in that condi-
sed a compensation
ed, that they should r scalps.

of the right wing of iconderoga side, the their works towards Gen. Phillips to pos-post of Mount Hope, resistance, which ctual, and could have pose. That apparent of vigor, with which
, was not occasioned
tual imbecility.
troops proceeded with the construction of their up of artillery, stores, what gave the greatest progress they made in getting artillery on Su-nce they had erected a ght, only a few hours

more would have been required to have invested the Americans on all sides.

Gen. St. Clair, having received intelligence by spies, that in twenty-four hours the investure would be completed, when he should be cut off from all possibility of succor, Gen. Schuyler not having force sufficient at Fort Edward to relieve him he determined to evacuate his posts, though he knew it would produce such astonishment as had not happened since the commencement of the war. He plainly perceived, that if he continued there, he should lose the army, but save his character; whereas, by abandoning the place, he should save the army, and lose his character. A council of war was called, and it was unanimously concluded upon to evacuate as soon as possible.

At two o'clock in the morning of July the 6th, Gen. St. Clair left Ticonderoga. About three the troops were put in motion for the evacuation of the Mount; but Fer-moy having set fire to his house, contrary to positive orders, the whole Mount was enlightened by it, so that the enemy had an opportunity of seeing every thing that passed, which damped the spirits of the Americans, and induced them to push off in a disorderly manner.

In the morning, Gen. Frazer, perceiving the evacuation, and that the Americans were retiring, commenced a pursuit with his brigade, consisting of the light troops, grenadiers, and some other corps. Gen. Reidesel, with most of the Brunswickers, was ordered by Gen. Burgoyne to join in the pursuit either to support Frazer, or to act separately. The latter continued the pursuit through the day, and receiving intelligence, that St. Clair's rear was at no great distance, he ordered his troops to lie that night on their arms. In the morning he came up with the Americans, commanded by Col. Warner, who had, besides his own, the regiments of colonels Francis and Hale. The British advanced boldly, and the two bodies formed within about 60 yards of each other. Frazer began the attack about seven o'clock, expecting every moment to be joined by Reidesel, and apprehending, that if he delayed, the enemy would escape. Hale being apprised of the danger, never brought his regiment to the charge, but fled; so that Warner could bring into action no more than about 700 men. The conflict was bloody: Francis fell fighting with great bravery; and Warner, his officers and soldiers, behaved with much resolution and gallantry; so that the British broke and gave way, but soon formed again, and running on the Americans with their bayonets, the latter were put into no small confusion, which was increased by the critical arrival of Gen. Reidesel with the foremost of his column, consisting of the ight troops, grena-

RY OF
 ps. Gen. Reidesel, ickers, was order-
 join in the pursuit or to act separate-he pursuit through ntelligence, that St.
 eat distance, he orhat night on their
 ne came up with the d by Col. Warner, wn, the regiments of
 ale. The British ade two bodies formed f each other. Frazer
 t seven o'clock, ex-to be joined by Rei-ng, that if he delayed, ape. Hale being ap-
 never brought his rebut fled; so that War-action no more than e conflict was bloody:
 with great bravery, and and soldiers, behavior and gallantry; so that and gave way, but soon unning on the Ameri-
 nets, the latter were put on, which was encreased al of Gen. Reidesel with olumn, consisting of the chasseur company, and eighty grenadiers and light infantry, who were immediately led into action. The Americans now fled on all sides. Gen. St. Clair heard when the firing began, and would have supported Warner, but the troops that were nearest, two militia regiments, would not obey orders, and the others were at too great a distance. Hale, who had attempted to get off by flight, fell in with an inconsiderable party of British, and surrendered himself and a number of his men prisoners. The Americans lost 324 in killed, wounded and prisoners, and among the last were 12 officers. The royal troops, including British and German, had not less than 183 killed and wounded.

The evacuation of Ticonderoga and Mount Independence surprised Gen. Washington, and spread astonishment and terror through the New-England states. The general was led to believe that the garrison was much stronger. The Massachusetts' general court were faulty, in not having seasonably forwarded their quota of troops agreeable to the requisition of congress.

Let us now return to see what was doing by Gen. Howe. The British fleet and army which lay at Sandy Hook, were destined for the reduction of Philadelphia, in pursuance of a plan which had been settled between Sir William Howe and Lord George Germain, but did not sail till the 23d of July. The land forces consisted of thirty-six British and Hessian battalions, including the light infantry and grenadiers, with a powerful artillery, a New-York corps, called Queen's Rangers, and a regiment of light horse, estimated all together at about 16,000 men. The fleet consisted of 267 sail. Gen. Howe's thus abandoning Burgoyne, equally excited the astonishment of friends and enemies.

On the 14th of June the Congress resolved that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.

It was not till the third of September that the royal army began to move forwards. On its advancing near to the Americans, these abandoned their ground, perceiving that it would not answer their first expectation. They crossed Brandywine at Chad's ford, and took possession of the heights on the east side of it, with an evident intention of disputing the passage of the river; but the superior numbers of the regular forces at last obliged them to retire.

A little after sunrise on the 11th of September, a warm engagement commenced, which lasted till the approach of night. On this occasion, the Americans shewed great resolution and courage; but a few hours more of day light might have so animated the conquerors, notwithstanding their fatigue

whic
ruin
said this pris
dred
on t dred
cans
how
T
regu
the M' ther
load inhe
cor
pub
of
on ma
wit
mo
the bul Ge
nu
ing
pa

thirty-six British including the light with a powerful arm, called Queen's of light horse, about 16,000 men. sail. Gen. Howe's ne, equally excited ds and enemies. e Congress resolv- teen United States mate red and white : en stars, white in a a new constellation. d of September that move forwards. On e Americans, these d, perceiving that it ir first expectation. vine at Chad's ford, the heights on the evident intention of of the river ; but the he regular forces at tire. e on the 11th of Sep- gement commenced, pproach of night. On ericans shewed great ge ; but a few hours ight have so animated withstanding their fatigue, as to have occasioned those exertions, which would have produced a total and ruinous defeat to the Americans. It was said by the Americans themselves, that in this action, their loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, was about twelve or thirteen hundred ; and that the royal army did not suffer on their part, short of seven or eight hundred in killed and wounded. The Americans also lost ten small field pieces, and a howitzer, of which all but one were brass.

The evening after the battle, a party of regulars was sent to Wilmington, who took the governor of the Delaware state, Mr. M'Kinley, out of his bed, and possessed themselves of a shallop lying in the creek, loaded with the rich effects of some of the inhabitants, together with the public records of the county, and a large quantity of public and private money, besides articles of plate, and other things.

After various motions of the royal army, on the 26th of September, General Howe made his triumphal entry into Philadelphia, with a small part of his army, where he was most cordially received by the generality of the Quakers, and a few other royalists. The bulk of his troops were left in and about Germantown, a village forming one continued street for near two miles. Gen. Washington's army was encamped near Ship-pach-creek, about eighteen miles from thence. The congress on the loss of Philadelphia removed to Yorktown.

To return to the northern army, under the command of Gen. Burgoyne. Several actions took place, between the Americans and regulars, in the intended march of the British towards Albany. In these different skirmishes, the regulars suffered very considerably, as well as the Indians in their interest. The principal action happened at Bennington, in which the Americans took from the English four brass field pieces, twelve drums, 250 dragoon swords, four ammunition waggons, and about 700 prisoners, among whom was Lieut. Col. Baum.

On the 30th of August, the English commander had occasion to write to Gen. Gates, and in his letter complained of inhumanity exercised towards the provincial soldiers in the king's service, after the affair of Bennington, and then hinted at retaliation. Gen. Gates, in his answer of Sept. the 2d, invalidated the charge, and then retorted the Indian cruelties, which he imputed to Burgoyne, saying, "Miss M<sup>r</sup>Rea, a young lady, lovely to the sight, of virtuous character and amiable disposition, engaged to an officer in your army, was with other women and children, taken out of a house near Fort Edward, carried into the woods, and there murdered and mangled in a most shocking manner. Two parents, with their six children,

same
their
The
ticul
to re
met
ward
child ruffia
paid
in hi vind
Mis
bart
chan foun
T
the elti
roy
that aid whi
Ga
sev
tak
to l
C
go sio
thi

on the loss of Phil-
 arktown.
 hern army, under Burgoyne. Several een the Americans
 ended march of the
 In these different suffered very conne Indians in their action happened at he Americans took brass field pieces,
 agoon swords, four and about 700 pri-
 as Lieut. Col. Baumist, the English com-write to Gen. Gates, lained of inhumanity provincial soldiers in ter the affair of Ben-ed at retaliation. Gen.
 of Sept. the 2d, invad then retorted the In-he imputed to Bur-ss M'Rea, a young la-of virtuous character ion, engaged to an offiwith other women and of a house near Fort o the woods, and there led in a most shocking nts, with their six children, were all scalped and treated with the same inhumanity, while quietly residing in their once happy and peaceful dwellings.

 The miserable fate of Miss M'Rea was particularly aggravated, by her being dressed to receive her promised husband, when she met her murderer employed by you. Upwards of one hundred men, women and children, have perished by the hands of the ruffians, to whom, it is asserted, you have paid the price of blood." Gen. Burgoyne, in his reply of the 6th of the same month, vindicated his own character; shewed that Miss M'Rea's death was no premeditated barbarity, and declared, that every other charge exhibited by Gen. Gates, was ill-founded and erroneous.

The murder of Miss M'Rea exasperated the Americans, and from that and other cruelties occasion was taken to blacken the royal party and army. The people detested that army which accepted of such Indian aid, and loudly reprobated that government which could call in such auxiliaries. Gen.
 Gates was not deficient in aggravating, by several publications, the excesses that had taken place, and with no small advantage to his own military operations.

On the 18th of September, Gen. Burgoyne, having been very short of provisions, at length received a supply for about thirty days, together with other necessary stores. He then resolved upon passing the Hudson's river with the army, which having executed, he encamped on the heights and on the plains of Saratoga. The Americans, observing the motions of the royal army, marched out 3000 strong, in order to attack him, but found that to be prudentially impracticable. However, they drew up in full view of him, and there remained till dark.

The next day some of the American scouting parties fell in with those of the British, and with great boldness began the attack about one o'clock at noon. The firing was no sooner heard by Gen. Phillips, than he made his way with a part of the artillery, through the woods, and rendered essential services. Each commander supported, reinforced, and ordered different regiments to engage. The battle was hot and obstinate on both sides, till about half past two o'clock, when it ceased for half an hour. The American and British lines being fully formed, the action was renewed, and became general at three. Both armies appeared determined to conquer or die, and there was one continual blaze of fire for three hours without intermission; the report of the muskets resembled an incessant roll-beating on a number of drums.—The Americans and British alternately drove and were driven by each other. Three British regiments, the 20th, the 21st,

d upon passing the army, which hav-
ped on the heights
itoga. The Ameri-
tions of the royal 00 strong, in order
t that to be prudenowever, they drew
and there remained he American scout-hose of the British,

s began the attack on. The firing was
n. Phillips, than he art of the artillery;
d rendered essential
nder supported, refferent regiments to hot and obstinate on elf past two o'clock, in hour. The Ameri-
ing fully formed, the d became general at eared determined to re was one continual urs without intermis-e muskets resembled
ing on a number of ans and British alter-
driven by each other,
ts, the 20th, the 21st, and the 62d, were in a constant and close fire for near four hours. All suffered considerable loss: the 62d, which was 500 strong when it left Canada, was now reduced to less than 60 men, and to four or five officers.

Few actions have been characterised, by more obstinacy in attack or defence, than was the present. Both parties claimed the victory, tho neither had much advantage to boast of.

From this time till near the middle of October, battles and skirmishes continually took place between the two armies and the British were sadly reduced and weakened.
On the 13th Gen. Burgoyne, finding that the troops had only three days provisions in store on short allowance, and no apparent means of retreat remaining, called into council all the generals, field officers, and captains commanding troops. There was not a spot of ground in the whole camp for holding the council of war, but what was exposed to cannon or rifle shot; and while the council was deliberating, an eighteen pound ball crossed the table. By the unanimous advice of the council, the general was induced to open a treaty with Gen. Gates. The first proposals of the latter were rejected, and the sixth article with disdain, wherein it was required that the British army should lay down their arms in their entrenchments. Burgoyne's counter-proposals were unanimously approved, and being sent to Gates were agreed to, on the 15th, without any material alteration.

Gen. Gates being fearful of the consequences that might follow, should Gen. Vaughan with his troops come up in time to Burgoyne's assistance, determined upon bringing the matter to an immediate issue. On the morning of the 17th, he got every thing in readiness for attacking the royal army. This done he took out his watch, the time agreed for signing being come. He then sent Col. Greaton on horseback to Burgoyne with a message, requiring the general to sign, and allowed him no more than ten minutes to go and return. He was back in time, the treaty was signed, all hostile appearances ceased, and the Americans marched into the British lines to the tune of Yankee doodle. They were kept there until the royal army had marched out of their lines, and deposited their arms at the place appointed by the treaty.

The delicacy with which this business was conducted reflects the highest honor upon the American general. It intimated that he was sensible of the mortification attending a reverse of fortune, and that he was unwilling to aggravate the painful feelings of the royal troops, by admitting the American soldiers to be eye witnesses to the degrading spectacle of piling their arms. When the arms were deposited agreeable to treaty, the

ORY OF

without any materi-
fearful of the conse-follow, should Gen-ps come up in time
ce, determined upon an immediate issue.
17th, he got every attacking the royal ok out his watch, the ng being come. He on horseback to Bur-requiring the general
ini no more than ten
urn. He was back in signed, all hostile and the Americans ish lines to the tune of y were kept there until marched out of their their arms at the place ty, which this business was ne highest honor upon
d. It intimated that he ortification attending a and that he was unwik-e painful feelings of the mitting the American tnesses to the degrading their arms. When the agrecable to treaty, the royal troops were served with bread by the Americans, as they had not any left, nor flour to make it. They had only one day's salt meat remaining.

The treaty was styled, "A convention between Lieut. Gen. Burgoyne and Major Gen. Gates." Among other articles it was stipulated, "That the troops under Lieut. Gen. Burgoyne shall march out of their camp with the honors of war, and the artillery of the entrenchments, to the verge of the river, where the arms and artillery are to be left.—The arms to be piled by word of command from their own officers. A free passage to be granted to the royal army to Great Britain, upon condition of not serving again in North America during the present contest; and the port of Boston to be assigned for the entry of transports to receive the troops, whenever Gen. Howe shall so order.—The officers baggage not to be molested or searched.—During the stay of the troops in the Massachusetts Bay, the officers are to be admitted on parole, and to be allowed to wear their side-arms."

The return signed by Gen. Burgoyne, at the time of the convention, made the British army, including Germans, amount to 5791, which was very short of the number they had on setting out from Canada. The train of brass artillery, consisting of 42 pieces, was a fine acquisition to the Americans. There were also 4647 muskets, 6000 dozen of cartridges, besides shot, carcasses, shells, &c.

L

Had Clinton advanced in time, Burgoyne would have been saved; but the troops he dispatched under General Vaughan amused themselves with burning Esopus, a fine village on the North river below Catskill. General Vaughan, with a flood tide, might have reached Albany, in four hours, as there was no force to hinder him. Had he proceeded thither, and burnt the stores, Gates, as he himself afterwards declared, must have retreated into New-England.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno 1776.

Wretched state of the armies under the Generals Washington and Gates.
New-York taken by the royal forces.
The battle of the White Plains.
A body of Hessians defeated at Trenton.

Anno 1777.

General Howe embarks his army from Staten-Island.
Gen. Burgoyne proceeds to Crown Point.
Ticonderoga and Mount Independence evacuated.
Flag of the United States described.
Battle at the Brandywine.

Account of Miss M'Rea's death.
 Americans engage the British under Gen.
 Burgoyne.
 Distress and calamity of the royal army.
 Gen. Burgoyne baffled in all his designs.
 Signs a convention for the surrender of his army.
 Esopus burnt by the troops under General Vaughan.

C H A P. VII.

TOWARDS the end of October, 1777, the royal army, under the command of Sir William Howe, removed to Philadelphia. Measures being concerted between the general and admiral for clearing the Delaware of its obstructions, the former ordered batteries to be erected on the western or Pennsylvania shore, to assist in dislodging the Americans from Mud-Island. He also detached a strong body of Hessians across the river, who were to reduce the fort at Red-bank, while the ships and batteries on the other side were to attack Mud-Island.
 Count Donop, in the service of the English, was intrusted with the expedition against Red-bank, but he failed in the attempt. He was mortally wounded and taken prisoner; several of his best officers were killed or disabled, and the Hessians, after a desparate engagement, were repulsed. The second in command being also dangerously wounded, the detachment was brought off by Lieut. Col. Linsing. It is said that the royal detachment lost, on this occasion, between four and five hundred men.

The expedition against Mud-Island met with better success, the Americans being driven from thence, and forced to retire to Red-bank.

On the night of the 18th of November, Lord Cornwallis marched with a considerable force, and the next day crossed the Delaware, in his way to Red-bank, which the Americans abandoned, leaving behind them the artillery and a considerable quantity of cannon ball. The English generals confessed, that the long and unexpected opposition they received from Red-bank and Mud-Island, broke in upon their plans for the remainder of the campaign.

Sunday May 2d, 1778, Mr. Simeon Deane brother to Silas Deane, arrived express from France, with very important dispatches. — The congress was immediately convened, and the dispatches opened and read, among which, to their inexpressible joy, were a treaty of commerce and a treaty of alliance, concluded between his most Christian Majesty the King of France and the United States of America. The treaties the next day were duly weighed and considered sepe-repulsed. The se-also dangerously

it was brought off
It is said that the this occasion, bered men.

t Mud-Island met Americans being forced to retire to 8th of November, ed with a consider-

day crossed the Ded-bank, which the aving behind them
derable quantity of lish generals con-
unexpected oppoom Red-bank and upon their plans for npaign.

Mr. Simeon Deane
rived express from ortant dispatches.—
mediately convened,
ed and read, among essible joy, were a
a treaty of alliance,
most Christian Mance and the United
he treaties the next and considered sepe-

ately and upon each it was unanimously resolved, "That the same be, and is hereby ratified." The next resolution was "That this congress entertain the highest sense of the magnanimity and wisdom of his most Christian majesty, so strongly exemplified in the treaty of amity and commerce, and the treaty of alliance; and the commissioners representing these states, at the court of France, are directed to present the grateful acknowledgments of this congress to his most Christian majesty, for his truly magnanimous conduct respecting these states, in the said generous and disinterested treaties, and to assure his majesty, on the part of this congress, it is sincerely wished, that the friendship, so happily commenced between France and these United States may be perpetual."

The congress, after receiving the treaties, had a stronger feeling of their own importance than before, and resolved, "That the commissioners appointed for the courts of Spain, Tuscany, Vienna, and Berlin, should live in such stile and manner at their respective courts, as they may find suitable and necessary to support the dignity of their public character."

On the fifth of May, they agreed to a draught of "An address to the inhabitants of the United States of America." In this publication, when they come to the French treaty, they say, "You have still to expect one severe conflict. Your foreign alliances though they secure your independence, cannot secure your country from desolation; your inhabitants from plunder, your wives from insult or violation, nor your children from butchery. Foiled in the principal design, you must expect to feel the rage of disappointed ambition. Arise then! to your tents, and gird you for battle! It is time to turn the headlong current of vengeance upon the head of the destroyer. They have filled up the measure of their abominations, and like ripe fruit must soon drop from the tree. Although much is done, yet much remains to do. Expect not peace, while any corner of America is in the possession of your foes. You must drive them away from this land of Promise, a land flowing indeed with milk and honey. Your brethren at the extremities of the continent already implore your friendship and protection. It is your duty to grant their request. They hunger and thirst after liberty. Be it yours to dispense to them the heavenly gift. And what is there now to prevent it?"

In the month of May the American frigate, Randolph of 36 guns, and 305 men, sailed on a cruise from Charlestown. The Yarmouth, of 64 guns, discovered her and five other vessels, and came up with her in the evening. Capt. Vincent hailed the Randolph to hoist colours, or he would fire into foreign alliances dependence, can-

Y OF

from desolation;
nder, your wives
nor your children
the principal de-
feel the rage of dis-ise then! to your ttle! It is time to
of vengeance upon

They have filled
abominations, and
drop from the tree.
yet much remains
e, while any corner
ession of your foes.
ay from this land of indeed with milk
ren at the extremi-
ready implore your
on. It is your duty They hunger and e it yours to dis-nly gift. And what it?"

y the American fri-
guns, and 305 men, Charlestown. The
discovered her and came up with her in ncent hailed the Ranor he would fire into her; on which she hoisted American, and immediately gave the Yarmouth her broad-side, which was returned, and in about a quarter of an hour she blew up. Four men saved themselves upon a piece of her wreck, and subsisted for five days upon nothing more than rain water which they sucked from a piece of blanket they had picked up. On the fifth, the Yarmouth being in chase of a ship, happily discovered them waving. The captain humanely suspended the chase, hauled up to the wreck, got a boat out and brought them on board.

On the 7th of May, the second battalion of British light infantry, in flat boats, attended by three galleys and other armed boats, proceeded up the Delaware, in order to destroy all the American ships and vessels lying in the river between Philadelphia and Trenton. They landed the next morning, advanced towards Bordentown, drove the Americans that opposed them, entered the town, and burnt four store houses containing provisions, tobacco, some military stores, and camp equipage. The country being alarmed, and a strong body collected, the battalion crossed to the Pennsylvania shore. The next day they resumed their operations, and at sunset embarked and returned to Philadelphia. While upon the expedition, they burnt two frigates, one of 32, the other of 38 guns; nine large ships, three privateer sloops of 16 guns each, three of ten guns, twenty-three brigs, with a number of sloops and schooners. Two of the ships were loaded with tobacco, rum, and military stores.

Gen. Howe was succeeded in the command of the army by Sir Henry Clinton, who arrived at Philadelphia on the eighth of May.

On the sixth of February the treaties between France and the United States were signed. The alliance between these two powers was known to the British ministry soon after they were signed. Mr. Fox, in a debate in the house of commons five days afterwards, asserted, that the number of men lost to the army, in killed, disabled, deserted, and from various other causes, from the commencement of hostilities with America to that period, amounted to above twenty thousand.

On the 17th Lord North introduced his conciliatory propositions. His plan was to enable the crown to appoint commissioners to treat with the colonies concerning the means of putting an end to those unhappy contests; for which five persons were invested with ample powers. His lordship said in his speech, that Gen. Howe had, in the late actions, and in the whole course of the campaign, not only in goodness of troops, and in all manner of supplies, but also in point of numbers been much superior to the American army that opposed him in the field; that Gen. Burgoyne had, until the affair at Bennington, been in numbers, nearly twice as strong as the army of the enemy; that he promised a great army should be sent out, and that a great army had accordingly been sent out, to the amount of 60,000 men and upwards.

The speech was long, able and eloquent, and kept him up two full hours. It was heard with profound attention, but without a single mark of approbation. A dull melancholy silence for some time succeeded. Astonishment, dejection and fear, overclouded the whole assembly. It was conjectured that some powerful motive had induced ministry to adopt such an alteration of measures. This idea was confirmed by the positive assertion of Mr. Fox, that a treaty had been signed at Paris between the colonies and France, by which she recognized their independence.

On the 13th of March, the French ambassador delivered a rescript to Lord Weymouth, in which he informed the court of London, that the king had signed a treaty of friendship and commerce with the United States of America. The knowledge of this transaction was communicated under the parade of cultivating the good understanding between France and Great Britain.

On the 21st of March, a public audience and reception were given to the American commissioners, Messrs. Franklin, Deane and Lee, by the French monarch. They were introduced by Mons. Vergennes, and received by the king with the usual formalities and ceremonies. This striking acknowledgment of the plenipotentiaries from the United States, mortified the ministry and crown of Great Britain, and may be pronounced the political phenomenon of Europe. The day before it was exhibited, the French ambassador, in consequence of orders to quit London, set out for Paris.

From this time, the courts of London and Versailles were busied in fitting out their fleets, which met each other in the month of July. The English fleet was commanded by the Admirals Keppel, Palliser and Harland. But, as the action of that day is amply related in our history of England; we shall not introduce in these annals of America, an account of so foul a tarnish to the British flag.

In the beginning of June, the Trident British man of war arrived in the Delaware; with the Earl of Carlisle, Mr. Eden and Gov. Johnstone, three of the commissioners for restoring peace between Great Britain and America.

On the 18th of June, at three o'clock in the morning, the British evacuated Philadel-a public audience to the American Franklin, Deane monarch. They Vergennes, and th the usual for- This striking ac- ipotentiaries from ified the ministry itain, and may be l phenomenon of e it was exhibited, in consequence of et out for Paris. urts of London and in fitting out their other, in the month fleet was command- eppel, Palliser and action of that day is istory of England; in these annals of so foul a tarnish to June, the Trident ed in the Delaware; isle, Mr. Eden and of the commission- between Great Bri- e, at three o'clock in evacuated Philadel phia, Mr. Eden having brought with him secret instructions from England for that purpose. They proceeded to Gloucester point, three miles down the river, and before ten the whole had passed in safety across the Delaware into New-Jersey.

When intelligence of Sir Henry Clinton's having evacuated Philadelphia reached the American head-quarters, Gen. Washington took his measures accordingly. Several skirmishes happened between the Americans and the regulars with various success, till on the 30th of June the royal army arrived in the neighborhood of Sandy Hook. During the course of the march from Philadelphia, the royal army was much reduced, upwards of 800 having deserted, a great number of whom were Hessians.

On the 5th of July, the army passed over a bridge of boats across a narrow channel to Sandy Hook and were afterwards carried up to New-York. On the 7th Lord Howe received advice, that the squadron from Toulon was arrived at Virginia. Count d'Estaing anchored on the 8th at night at the entrance of the Delaware. The next morning he weighed and sailed towards the Hook, and on the evening of the 11th anchored without it. Had not bad weather and unexpected impediments prevented, the Count must have surprised Howe's fleet in the Delaware, as the latter would not have had time to escape after being apprised of his danger. The destruction of the fleet must have been the consequence of such a surprisal, and that must have occasioned the inevitable loss of the royal army, which would have been so enclosed by the French squadron on the one side and the American forces on the other, that the Saratoga catastrophe must have been repeated. Lord Howe's fleet consisted only of six sixty-four gun ships, three of fifty, and two of forty, with some frigates and sloops. Count d'Estaing had twelve ships of the line, some of which were of great force and weight.

On the 22d of July, the count sailed from Sandy Hook, when about twenty sail of vessels bound to New-York fell into his possession. They were chiefly prizes taken from the Americans; but had he stayed a few days longer, Admiral Byron's fleet must have fallen a defenceless prey into their hands. That squadron had met with unusual bad weather, and being separated in different storms, and lingering through a tedious passage, arrived scattered, broken, sickly, dismasted or otherwise damaged in various degrees of distress, upon different and remote parts of the American coast. Between the departure of d'Estaing and the 30th of July, the Renown of 50 guns from the West-Indies, the Raisonable and Centurion of 64, and the Cornwall of 74 guns, all arrived

RY OF
 s danger. The de-have been the conrisal, and that must evitable loss of the d have been so en-quadron on the one
 forces on the other,
 strophe must have owe's fleet consisted gun ships, three of
 with some frigates
 'Estaing had twelve
 e of which were of the count sailed from ut twenty sail of vesk fell into his posses-fly prizes taken from d he stayed a few days on's fleet must have rey into their hands.
 met with unusual bad
 separated in different through a tedious pas-d, broken, sickly, dis-damaged in various den different and remote n coast. Between the g and the 30th of July, ns from the West-Inand Centurion of 64, of 74 guns, all arrived singly at Sandy Hook. By d'Estaing's speedy departure a number of provision ships from Cork escaped also, together with their convoy. They went up the Delaware within fifty miles of Philadelphia after Lord Howe had quitted the river, not having obtained any information of what had happened. The British ministry had neglected countermanding their destination, though orders for the evacuation of Philadelphia had been sent off so early, as to have admitted of their receiving, before sailing, fresh instructions where to have steered. Great rejoicings were made at New-York upon their safe arrival, especially as provisions were much wanted both by the fleet and army.

Let us now quit the military operations for the present and take a view of the pending negotiations. Gov. Johnstone, meaning to avail himself of former connexions, endeavored to commence or renew a private correspondence with several members of congress, and other persons of consideration. In his letters to them he used a freedom with the authority under which he acted, not customary with those entrusted with delegated power, and afforded such a degree of approbation to the Americans in the past resistance they had made, as is seldom granted by negociators to their opponents. In a letter to Joseph Reed, Esq. of April 11th, he said, "The man, who can be instrumental in bringing us all to act once more in harmony, and to unite together the various powers which their contest has brought forth, will deserve more from the king and people, from patriotism, humanity, and all the tender ties that are affected by the quarrel and reconciliation, than ever was yet bestowed on human kind."

M

On the 16th of June, he wrote to Robert Morris, Esq. "I believe the men, who have conducted the affairs of America, incapable of being influenced by improper motives; but in all such transactions there is risk, and I think that whoever ventures should be secured; at the same time that honor and emolument should naturally follow the fortune of those, who have steered the vessel in the storm, and brought her safely to port. I think that Washington and the president have a right to every favor that a grateful nation can bestow, if they could once more unite our interest, and spare the miseries and the devastations of war."

On Sunday the 21st of June, Mr. Reed received a written message from Mrs. Ferguson, expressing a desire to see him on business, which could not be committed to writing. On his attending in the evening, agreeable to her appointment, after some previous conversation, she enlarged upon the great talents and amiable qualities of Gov. Johnstone, and added, that in several conver-

RY OF

ce more in harmo-er the various pow-
has brought forth,
the king and peo-
humanity, and all the ected by the quarrel n ever was yet be-

, he wrote to Robert ve the men, who have f America, incapable
y improper motives ;
ions there is risk, and ventures should be se-time that honor and turally follow the for-ave steered the vessel ught her safely to port.
gton and the president
y favor that a grateful f they could once more and spare the miseries of war."

st of June, Mr. Reed message from Mrs. Fera desire to see him on uld not be committed to tending in the evening, ointment, after some pre-she enlarged upon the miable qualities of Gov.
ed, that in several conversations with her, he had expressed the most favorable sentiments of Mr. Reed ; that it was particularly wished to engage his interest to promote the object of the British commissioners, viz. a re-union of the two countries, if consistent with his principles and judgment; and that in such case it could not be deemed unbecoming or improper in the British government to take a favorable notice of such conduct ; and that, in this instance, Mr. Reed might have ten thousand pounds sterling, and any office in the colonies in his majesty's gift.

Mr. Reed, finding an answer was expected, replied, " I am not worth purchasing ; but such as I am, the king of Great Britain is not rich enough to do it." However right the principles might be, on which this insinuating scheme of conciliation was adopted, its effects were inimical.

On the 9th of July, congress ordered, " That all letters received by members of congress from any of the British commissioners, or their agents, or from any subject of the king of Great Britain, of a public nature, be laid before congress." The preceding letters being communicated, and Mr.
Reed making a declaration of what had passed within his knowledge, congress resolved.
" That the same cannot be considered but as direct attempts to corrupt and bribe the congress ; that as congress feel, so they ought to demonstrate, the highest and most pointed indignation against such daring and atrocious attempts to corrupt their integrity ; and that it is incompatible with the honor of congress to hold any manner of correspondence or intercourse with the said George Johnstone, Esq. especially to negotiate with him upon affairs, in which the cause of liberty is concerned."

The proceedings in this business were expressed in the form of a declaration, a copy of which was ordered to be signed by the president, and sent by a flag to the commissioners at New-York.

These proceedings produced a very angry and violent declaration from Gov. Johnstone, in which the immediate operations of passion and disappointment were too conspicuous. The language of his publication but poorly agreed with the high and flattering compliments he had so lately lavished on the Americans in those very letters, which were the subject of the present contest. It was dated the 26th of August, and transmitted to congress ; together with the declaration of the same date from Lord Carlisle, Sir Henry Clinton, and Mr. Eden, which went to a solemn and total disavowal, so far as related to the present subject, of their having had any knowledge, directly or indirectly, of those matters specified by congress.

Thus were all hopes of further negotiation with Congress at an end. Had Lord North, and the rest of the ministry then in being, adopted these corrupting measures in the more early part of the American disputes, it is possible he might have succeeded; but to attempt it at a time, when the spirits of the Americans were raised to the highest pitch by their new alliance with France, was surely little short of folly and madness.

On the 6th of August, the Hon. Sieur Gerard was introduced to the Congress, in quality of minister plenipotentiary, who produced a letter from his master the king of France to his very dear great friends and allies; and the compliments Mons. Gerard received on this occasion, were very different from those sentiments the Americans lately entertained of their now faithful allies!

On the 14th of September, Congress proceeded to the election of a minister plenipotentiary to the court of France, when Dr. Benjamin Franklin was elected by ballot. His instructions were dated the 26th of October, and by them he was directed to obtain, if possible, the French king's consent to expunge two of the articles of the treaty of commerce. The doctor was to inculcate the certainty of ruining the British fishery on the banks of Newfoundland, and consequently the British marine, by reducing Halifax and Quebec.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno 1777.

Count Donop repulsed in the attack upon Red Bank.
Mud Island reduced.

Anno 1778.

The Randolph American frigate blown up.
Sir Henry Clinton succeeds Gen. Howe in America.

The treaties between France and the United States signed.

Lord North's conciliatory propositions.

Messrs. Franklin, Deane, and Lee, have a public audience at the French court.

Congress receive the treaties concluded between France and the United States, which they unanimously ratify.

The British army evacuates Philadelphia.
Skirmishes between the English and Americans.

The British forces arrive at Sandy Hook.

Gov. Johnstone attempts to corrupt certain members of the congress.

Dr. Franklin appointed minister plenipo-tentiary at the court of France.

C H A P. VIII.

THE campaign in the northern states having produced nothing advantageous to the British, and the winter being the proper season for southern expeditions, Sir Henry Clinton concluded upon turning his arms against Georgia. He might propose to himself the reduction of all the southern states, and he strongly inclined to it, by reason that these states produced the most valuable articles of commerce for the European market, and carried on a considerable export trade, which appeared no otherwise affected by the war, than as it suffered from the British cruisers. The ice was devoted to the service of its enemies, while it was wanted for the support of the royal fleet and army in America. A plan of operations was concerted with Gen. Prevost, who commanded in East-Florida; and it was intended, that Georgia should be invaded both on the north and south sides at the same time.

This expedition was committed to Col. Campbell, and the forces appointed to act under him amounted to full 2500, which sailed from Sandy Hook, on the 27th of November, being escorted by a small squadron under Commodore Hyde Parker. The fleet arrived at the isle of Tibee, near the mouth of the Savannah, and on the 29th of December the troops effected a landing. They were no sooner landed, than they were led to attack the fort, which the British persisted in with so much spirit and rapidity, that the Americans retreated with precipitation and disorder. No victory was ever more complete : thirty-eight officers, and 415 non-commissioned and privates, 48 pieces of cannon, 23 mortars, the fort with its ammunition, and stores, the shipping in the river, a large quantity of provisions, with the capital of Georgia were all within the space of a few hours, in the possession of the British troops.

The 30th of December was appointed as a thanksgiving-day, by order of congress. The affairs of the United States were at this period in a most distressed, deplorable, and ruinous condition. Idleness, dissipation, and extravagance, seemed to have engrossed the attention of the generality of the American sons of liberty ; and self-interest, speculation, and an insatiable thirst for riches appeared to have got the better of every other consideration, and almost of every order of men. Party disputes and personal quarrels were too much the general object, while the momentous concerns of the empire, a vast accumulated debt, ruined finances, depreciated money, and want of credit, which naturally brings on the want of every thing, were but secondary considerations, and postponed ected a landing.

ed, than they were hich the British spirit and rapidi-
treated with pre-

No victory was ty-eight officers,
ed and privates,
mortars, the fort
stores, the ship-
quantity of pro-Georgia were all hours, in the pos-
ops.

was appointed as
rder of congress.
States were at this
l, deplorable, and
ness, dissipation,
to have engrossed
lity of the Ameri-
lf-interest, specuirst for riches aptter of every other
of every order of l personal quarrels
l object, while the
the empire, a vast finances, depreci-
redit, which natu-
every thing, were ons, and postponed

by congress from time to time, as if their affairs were in the most flourishing situation.
The paper currency in Philadelphia was daily sinking, and at length even so low as fifty per cent, yet an assembly, a concert, a dinner, or supper, which cost two or three hundred pounds, did not only take men off from acting, but even from thinking of what ought to have been nearest their hearts.
Some of the most disinterested and patriotic Americans felt more distress from this review of things, than they had done at any other time, from the disappointments and losses in the course of the war.

In the mean time, Mons. Gerard, the French ambassador, manifested a desire, that the war might not be prolonged by too high and unreasonable demands, and that the United States would reduce their ultimatum as low as possible. He strongly recommended moderation, as the fate of war was uncertain; and he hinted, that a decisive naval engagement in favor of the British, might give a great turn to their affairs.

The South-Carolina delegates, rather with a view to conquest, than from any special apprehension of danger to their own or neighboring states, from the troops under Gen. Clinton, requested the congress to appoint Gen. Lincoln, on whose character they justly reposed great confidence, to the command of all the forces to the southward. Aq-cordingly they made the appointment on the 25th of September, and ordered him immediately to repair to Charleston.

On the 2d of March, the American officer of the day, at the post at Briar-creek, in Georgia, reported, that reconnoitring parties of the enemy's horse and foot had been seen within their piquet the night preceding. Gen. Ashe, who had crossed the Savannah, with about 1200 troops, besides 200 light horse, returned on the evening of the same day to his camp. He made no preparations to impede the march of the British, and, soon after their appearance, he and his troops fled with precipitation, without firing a gun.

In the month of May Sir Henry Clinton dispatched Sir George Collier and Gen. Matthews, with about 2000 soldiers and 500 marines, to make a descent upon Virginia. They sailed for Portsmouth in that province, and upon their arrival landed their troops and took immediate possession of the town, which was defenceless. The remains of Norfolk, on the opposite side of the river, fell of course into their hands. On the approach of the fleet and army, the Americans burnt some of their vessels, several however fell into the hands of the British. The guards were pushed forward eighteen miles by night to Suffolk, where they arrived by day light and proceeded to appointment on the ordered him immerleston.

the American offi-
ost at Briar-creek, that reconnoitring
horse and foot had biquet the night pre-
who had crossed the 200 troops, besides
ed on the evening of amp. He made no
e the march of the er their appearance,
with precipitation,

y Sir Henry Clinton Collier and Gen. Mat-00 soldiers and 500
scent upon Virginia.
smouth in that pro-
r arrival landed their mediate possession of defenceless. The rethe opposite side of rse into their hands.
the fleet and army, the e of their vessels, sento the hands of the s were pushed forward ight to Suffolk, where light and proceeded to destroy a magazine of provisions, together with the vessels and naval stores found there. A similar destruction was carried on at other places in that quarter, nor were the frigates and armed vessels less active or successful in their service.

Within the fortnight that the fleet and army continued upon the coast, the loss of the Americans was prodigious. Above 130 vessels of all sorts, including some priva-teers, and ships of force, were destroyed or taken by them; seventeen prizes were brought away, besides 3000 hogsheads of tobacco, which fell into their possession at Portsmouth. Except the house of a widow and the church, they burnt every house in Suffolk, and all the principal houses of gentlemen in their route shared the same fate.

On the 30th of May, these troops were joined to others going up the North river to attack the posts of Stoney Point and Ver-plank, where the Americans had begun to construct strong works, for keeping the lower communication open between the eastern and southern states. Gen. Vaughan landed with the greater part on the east side, while the remainder, accompanied by Sir Henry Clinton, advanced further up, landed on the west side, and took possession of Stoney Point without opposition. Directly opposite, the Americans had completely finished a strong fort, which was defended by four pieces of artillery, and a garrison of about seventy men. But it was commanded by Stoney Point ; to the summit of which cannon and mortars were dragged up during the night. By five in the morning, a battery was opened, which poured a storm of fire on the fort, while Vaughan with his division, made a long circuit by the sides of the hills, arrived and closely invested it by land. The garrison, finding themselves totally overpowered, surrendered themselves prisoners of war. By the loss of these posts, the Jersey people were obliged to make a circuit of about ninety miles under the mountains, to communicate with the states east of Hudson's river.

After the French had taken Grenada, and Count d'Estaing was lying with his fleet at Cape Francois, he received letters from Gov. Rutledge, Gen. Lincoln, the French consul at Charleston, and others, urging him to visit the American coast, and proposing an attack upon Savannah. The general engaged to join him with a thousand men certain, and promised that every exertion should be made to increase the number. The application coinciding with the king's instructions, to act in concert with the forces of the United States, whenever an occasion presented itself, he sailed for the American continent within a few days after it was received.

, and a garrison of it was commanded
the summit of which were dragged up
five in the morning, which poured a storm
e Vaughan with his ircuit by the sides of closely invested it by adding themselves to-rendered themselves
the loss of these posts, e obliged to make a ty miles under the
nicate with the states

d taken Grenada, and lying with his fleet at received letters from Lincoln, the French and others, urging merican coast, and proa Savannah. The ge-him with a thousand
nised that every exer-
to increase the num-coinciding with the o act in concert with ted States, whenever
d itself, he sailed for ent within a few days

On the 1st of September, Count d'Estaing arrived with a fleet of twenty sail of the line, two of fifty guns, and eleven frigates. The appearance of the French fleet on the coasts of South Carolina and Georgia was so unexpected by the British that the Experiment man of war, of fifty guns, Sir James Wallace commander, and three frigates were captured. No sooner was it known at Charleston, that the count was on the coast, than Lincoln marched with all expedition for Savannah, with the troops under his command; and orders were also given for the South Carolina and Georgia militia to rendezvous immediately near the same place. — The British were equally diligent in preparing for their defence.

The French and Americans after having spent some time in making regular approaches at last determined to take the place by storm. Accordingly the morning of the 9th of October was fixed for the attack, and neither the French nor the Americans had the least doubt of success.

Two feints were made with the country militia, and a real attack a little before daylight, on the Spring-hill battery, with 3500 French troops, 600 continentals, and 350 of the Charleston militia, headed by Count d'Estaing and Gen. Lincoln. They marched up to the lines with great boldness; but a heavy and well directed fire from the batte-rics, and a cross fire from the galleys threw the front of the column into confusion. Two standards, however, one an American, were planted on the British redoubts. Count Pulaski at the head of 200 horsemen, was in full gallop, riding into town between the redoubts, with an intent of charging in the rear, when he received a mortal wound. A general retreat of the assailants took place, after they had stood the enemy's fire for fifty-five minutes. D'Estaing received two slight wounds; 637 of his troops, and 234 of the continentals were killed or wounded. Of the 350 Charleston militia, who were in the hottest of the fire, only six were wounded, and a captain killed. Gen. Prevost and Major Moncrief deservedly acquired great reputation by their successful defence. There were not ten guns mounted on the lines when the enemy first appeared, and in a few days the number exceeded eighty. The garrison was between two and three thousand, including 150 militia. The damage it sustained was trifling as the men fired under cover, and few of the assailants fired at all.

Let us now see what the northern army was doing. In the middle of December, a part of Gen. Washington's army was without bread; and for the rest he had not, either on the spot or within reach, a supply sufficient for four days. Both officers and men in the galleys threw to confusion. Two an American, were doubts. Count Puhorsemen, was in own between the re-

RY OF

of charging in the a mortal wound. A assailants took place, enemy's fire for fifty-received two slight ops, and 234 of the l or wounded. Of militia, who were in ly six were wound-
Gen. Prevost and
edly acquired great successful defence.
ons mounted on the first appeared, and er exceeded eighty.
ween two and three 0 militia. The damfing as the men fired of the assailants fired at the northern army iddle of December, a on's army was with-rest he had not, either reach, a supply suffi-Both officers and men were almost perishing thro want for a fortnight. The deficiency proceeded from the absolute emptiness of the American magazines in every place, and the total want of money and credit to replenish them. So that the general was obliged to call upon the magistrates of the Jersey state, to express his situation to them, and to declare in plain terms, that he and his army were reduced to the alternative of disbanding or catering for themselves, unless the inhabitants would afford them aid. He allotted to each county a certain proportion of flour or grain, and a certain number of cattle to be delivered on certain days. To the honor of the magistrates, and the good dispositions of the people, be it added, that these requisitions were punctually complied with, and in many counties exceeded.

But to return to the southern armies. On the 20th of March, 1780, Admiral Arbuthnot, with a small fleet crossed the bar, in front of rebellion road, and anchored in Five Fathom Hole. The American fleet retreated to Charleston, and the crews and guns of all the vessels, except the Ranger, were put on shore to reinforce the batteries. Before the Americans had taken this step, they should have considered, whether the ships were able to defend the bar, and should have sent them off, when they found it impracticable.

On the 12th of April, the British opened their batteries against Charleston, and a constant fire was kept up between both parties until the 20th. On the 18th of April, Sir Henry Clinton received a reinforcement of 3000 men from New-York; and on the 12th of May, Gen. Lincoln, after having made the most vigorous defence he was capable of, was obliged to capitulate. It was stipulated, that the continental troops and sailors should remain prisoners of war until exchanged, and be provided with good and wholesome provisions, in such quantities as were served out to the British troops. The militia were to return home as prisoners on parole, which as long as they observed, was to secure them from being molested in their property by the British troops. The officers of the army and navy were to keep their swords, pistols, and baggage, which last was not to be searched; but their horses were not to go out of town, but might be disposed of by a person left for the purpose. The garrison, at an hour appointed, was to march out of the town to the ground between the works of the place and the canal, where they were to deposit their arms. The drums were not to beat a British march, nor the colours to be uncased. All civil officers and citizens, who had borne arms during the siege, were to be prisoners on parole; and with respect to their property in the city, they were to , the British open-st Charleston, and a p between both par-n the 18th of April, ived a reinforcement

v-York; and on the incoln, after having s defence he was ca-o capitulate. It was ntinental troops and prisoners of war until vided with good and
, in such quantities as British troops. The home as prisoners on as they observed, was eing molested in their h troops. The officers
y were to keep their uggage, which last was but their horses were but might be disposed the purpose. The gar-pointed, was to march ne ground between the d the canal, where they arms. The drums were march, nor the colours vil officers and citizens, during the siege, were parole; and with respect the city, they were to have the same terms as the militia; and all other persons in the town, not described in any article, were notwithstanding to be prisoners upon parole.

The capital having surrendered, the next object of the British was to secure the general submission of the inhabitants. With this view they posted garrisons in different parts of the country, and marched a large body of troops over the Santee, towards the extremity of the state, which borders on the most populous part of North Carolina. This occasioned the retreat of some American parties, who had advanced into the upper part of South Carolina, in expectation of relieving Charleston. Among the corps which had come forward with that view, there was one consisting of about 300 continentals, the rear of the Virginia line, commanded by Col. Buford. Tarleton with about 700 horse and foot, was sent in quest of this party. Having mounted his infantry, he marched 105 miles in fifteen hours, came up with them at the Waxhaws, and demanded their surrender on terms similar to those granted to the continentals at Charleston.—While the flags were passing and repassing on this business, Tarleton kept his men in motion, and, when the truce was ended, had nearly surrounded his adversaries. An action instantly ensued, when the continental party having partaken of the general consternation occasioned by the British successes, made but a feeble resistance, and begged for quarters. A few however continued to fire. The British cavalry advanced, but were not opposed by the main body of the continentals, who conceived themselves precluded by their submission. The accidental firing of the few was an argument, however, for directing the British legion to charge those who had laid down their arms. In consequence of this order, the unresisting Americans, praying for quarters, were cut in pieces. By Tarleton's official account of this bloody scene, 113 were killed, 50 badly wounded, unable to travel, and left on parole; and 53 made prisoners, while they made such ineffectual opposition as only to kill seven and wound twelve of the British. Lord Cornwallis bestowed on Tarleton the highest encomiums for this enterprize, and recommended him in a special manner to royal favor and patronage.

The expected succors at length arrived from France, on the evening of the 10th of July, at Rhode-Island. The Chevalier de Ternay commanded the fleet, which consisted of two ships of eighty guns, one of 74, four of 64, a bomb vessel, and 32 transports. The land forces consisted of four old regiments, besides the legion de Lauzun, and a battalion of artillery, amounting to about

British successes, and begged for continued to fire. unced, but were not dy of the continen- mselves precluded he accidental firing nt, however, for di- on to charge those r arms. In conse- unresisting Ameri- rs, were cut in pic- cial account of this re killed, 50 badly vel, and left on pa- soners, while they pposition as only to velve of the British. ved on Tarleton the this enterprize, and a special manner to age. rs at length arrived ening of the 10th of The Chevalier de e fleet, which consist- ty guns, one of 74, el, and 32 transports. ted of four old regi- on de Lauzun, and a amounting to about 6000 men, under the command of Lieut. Gen. Count de Rochambeau. About the time that Charleston surrendered, Sir H. Clinton, received intelligence, that a large number of forces and a French fleet, commanded by Mons. Ternay, might soon be expected on the American coast. This induced him to reembark for New-York, leaving Lord Cornwallis with about 4000 men, which were deemed fully sufficient for his purposes. On the 4th of September was signed the plan of a treaty of commerce between the states of Holland and the United States of America. Mons. de Neufville, being properly authorized by the regency of Amsterdam, engaged, that as long as America should not act contrary to the interest of the states of Holland, the city of Amsterdam would never adopt any measure that might tend to oppose the interests of America; but would, on the contrary, use all its influence upon the states of the seven United Provinces of Holland, to effect the desired connexion. This business was conducted by Mr. John Adams on the part of America. Lord Cornwallis went on successfully in South Carolina. On the 16th of August he engaged the forces under Gen. Gates, and completely routed them after a long and obstinate contest. Gen. Gates was borne off the field by a torrent of dismayed militia.

They constituted so great a part of his army, that when he saw them break and run with such precipitation, he lost every hope of victory; and his only care was, if possible, to rally a sufficient number to cover the retreat of the other troops. He retired with Gen. Caswell to Clermont, in hope of halting them in their late encampment; but the further they fled, the more they dispersed, and the generals giving up all as lost, retired with a few attendants to Charlotte.

The Americans lost eight field pieces, the whole of their artillery, with all their ammunition waggons, besides 150 others, and a considerable quantity of military stores, and the greatest part of their baggage. The numbers slain cannot be precisely ascertained, no returns of the militia being made after the action: but it is supposed, that the Americans lost about 700 on this occasion. Though Cornwallis's victory was complete, yet, from the account the British gave of the action, it may be inferred, that it was dearly bought, upwards of 500 of their own troops being killed or wounded.

A minute representation of the retreat of the Americans from Charlotte to Salisbury, would be the image of complicated wretchedness. Care, anxiety, pain, humiliation, and dejection, poverty, hurry and confusion, promiscuously marked the shocking scene. Painful objects presented themselves to a part of his army, break and run with out every hope of there was, if possible, er to cover the re- He retired with out, in hope of halt-ampment; but there they dispersed, up all as lost, re-nts to Charlotte. eight field pieces, lery, with all their esides 150 others, antity of military art of their baggage, not be precisely as of the militia be- n: but it is suppos- s lost about 700 on Cornwallis's victory the account the Bri- it may be inferred, ght, upwards of 500 g killed or wounded. tion of the retreat of arlotte to Salisbury, complicated wretch- y, pain, humiliation, hurry and confusion, d the shocking scene. nted themselves to view, several men without an arm some with but one, and many standing in need of the most kind and powerful assistance.

Lord Cornwallis, notwithstanding his victory, was restrained for some time from pursuing his conquests, by the loss he had sustained in the battle, the extreme heat of the weather, sickness of the season, and the want of necessary supplies: he therefore remained at Camden.

In the month of September, a discovery of the utmost importance was made, which was a scheme for delivering West Point into the hands of Sir Henry Clinton. Gen. Arnold, who had the command of that post, was brave but mercenary, fond of parade, and extremely desirous of acquiring money to defray the expenses of it. When he entered Philadelphia after the evacuation, he made Gov. Penn's house, the best in the city, his head quarters. This he furnished in a very costly manner, and lived in a style far beyond his income. He continued his extravagant course of living, was unsuccessful in trade and privateering, his funds were exhausted, and his creditors importunate, while his lust for high life was not in the least abated. He had exhibited heavy accounts and demands against the public; and the commissioners, upon examination, rejected about one half of the amount. He appealed to congress and a committee was appointed, who were of opinion, that the commissioners had allowed more than the general had a right to expect or demand. This provoked him to outrageous expressions and proceedings. Disgusted at the treatment he had met with, embarrassed in his circumstances, and having a growing expensive family, he turned his thoughts towards bettering his circumstances by new means. In 1779, a correspondence commenced between Gen. Arnold and Major Andre, adjutant-general to the British army, a rising young officer of great hope and merit.

For the speedy completion of the negotiation that was carrying on between Maj. Andre and Gen. Arnold, the Vulture sloop of war was stationed in the North River, at such a distance from the American posts, as, without exciting suspicion, would serve for the necessary communication. Before this, a written correspondence through other channels had been maintained between Arnold and Andre at New-York, under the names of Gustavus and Anderson.

On the 21st of September, the necessary arrangements being made, a boat was sent at night from the shore to the Vulture, to fetch Major Andre, which brought him to the beach without the posts of either army, where he met Arnold. The major continued with him during the day following, and at night, the boatman refusing to conduct him at the commission-

than the general had
and. This provok-expressions and pro-
the treatment he had in his circumstan-
ing expensive fami-
rights towards better-by new means. In ce commenced bed Major Andre, ad-
ritish army, a rising
hope and merit.
pletion of the negoti-
ing on between Maj.
ld, the Vulture sloop
the North River, at the American posts,
suspicion, would serve munication. Before espondence through been maintained be-dre at New-York, un-stavus and Anderson.
tember, the necessary
made, a boat was sent re to the Vulture, to which brought him to e posts of either army.
The major continued
day following, and at fusing to conduct him back to the Vulture, which had shifted her position, as she 'y exposed to the fire of a cannon sent to annoy her, he was obliged to concert his escape by land. He quitted his uniform, which he had hitherto worn under his surtout, for a common coat. He was furnished with a horse, and, under the name of John Anderson, with a passport from Arnold to go through the lines at White Plains or lower if he thought proper, on public business.

He pursued his journey alone towards York, passed all the guards and posts on the road without suspicion, and was much elated. The next day he travelled without any alarm, and began to consider himself out of danger; but unhappily for him, three of the New-York militia were with others on a scouting party between the out posts of the two armies. One of them sprung from his covert, and seized Andre's horse by the bridle. The major instead of instantly producing his pass, asked the man where he belonged, who answered, "To below." Andre suspecting no deceit, said "So do I." Then declared himself a British officer, and pressed that he might not be detained, for that he was upon urgent business. Upon the other two coming up, and joining their comrade he discovered his mistake. The confusion that followed was apparent, and they proceeded to search him till they found his papers. He offered the captors a considerable purse of gold, and a very valuable watch, to let him pass ; but they nobly disdained the temptation, besides the fascinating offers of permanent provision, and even of future promotion, on condition of their conveying and accompanying him to New-York. They conducted him to Lieut. Col. Jameson, the continental officer who had the command of the scouting parties, amounting to 800 men, chiefly militia. Arnold's conduct with regard to this body of men, and in other respects, had excited such suspicions in the breast of the officers, that they had determined upon seizing the general at all events, had he come down and ordered them nearer the enemy. Jameson, notwithstanding his strong jealousy of Arnold, was in the issue the means of his escape.

Major Andre, in order to give Arnold time to escape, requested that a line might be sent to acquaint him of the detention of Anderson, the name Andre had assumed, which Jameson, through an ill-judged delicacy, granted. The papers, which were found in the major's boots, were in Arnold's hand writing, and contained exact returns of the state of the forces, ordnance and defences at West Point and its dependencies, with the artillery orders, critical remarks on the works, an estimate of the number of men tors a considerable ery valuable watch,

ey nobly disdained
the fascinating of-vision, and even of ndition of their con-
ghim to New-York.
o Lieut. Col. Jameer who had the com-arties, amounting to
a. Arnold's conduct dy of men, and in ited such suspicions
tenant-colonel, and that they had deter-
general at all events,
l ordered them near-son, notwithstanding f Arnold, was in the s escape...
rder to give Arnold
sted that a line might m of the detention of Andre had assumed,
ugh an ill-judged delipapers, which were oots, were in Arnold's tained exact returns of ordnance and defences ts dependencies, with ritical remarks on the
of the number of men

that were ordinarily on duty to man them, and the copy of a state of matters that had been laid before a council of war by the commander in chief. These papers were enclosed in a packet to Gen. Washington, accompanied with a letter from the prisoner, avowing himself to be Major Andre, adjutant general to the British army, relating the manner of his capture, and endeavoring to show, that he did not come under the description of a spy. These papers were forwarded by Jameson.

No sooner had Arnold received the Major's letter, than he hastened on board the Vulture, which lay some miles below Stony Point; he had not been long gone, when Washington arrived at his quarters from the eastward. Had the plot succeeded, the consequences must have been ruinous to the Americans. The forces under Arnold's command must have either laid down their arms, or have been cut to pieces. Their loss, and the immediate possession of West-Point, and all its neighboring dependencies, must have exposed the remainder of Washington's army to the joint exertion of the British forces, by land and water, and nothing but ruin could have been the result with respect to the Americans.

On the 29th of September Gen. Washington appointed a board of fourteen general officers, with the assistance of the judge advocate general, to examine Major Andre's case, and to determine, in what light it ought to be considered. Andre, disdaining all subterfuge and evasion, and studying only to place his character in so fair a light, as might prevent its being shaded by present circumstances, voluntarily confessed more than he was asked, and sought not to palliate any thing relating to himself, while he concealed, with the most guarded and scrupulous nicety, whatever might involve others. The board shewed him every possible mark of indulgence, and sufficiently witnessed how much they felt for his situation. However, public justice obliged them to declare, "that Major Andre ought to be considered as a spy from the enemy; and that agreeable to the law and usage of nations, it is their opinion he ought to suffer death."

Several letters passed between the Generals Clinton and Washington relative to this unhappy affair; but nothing was capable of saving the unfortunate major. On the 2d of October, the tragedy was closed. The major was superior to the terrors of death; but the disgraceful mode of dying, which the usage of war had annexed to his unhappy situation, was infinitely dreadful to him. He was desirous of being indulged with a professional death, and had accordingly written, the day before, a pathetic letter, fraught with all the feelings of a man of sen-

RY OF

ne Major Andre's in what light it Andre, disdaining ion, and studying
er in so fair a light, ing shaded by pre-
untarily confessed
, and sought not to g to himself, while most guarded and ever might involve
wed him every pos-
ce, and sufficiently ey felt for his situjustice obliged them r Andre ought to be the enemy; and that usage of nations, it
ht to suffer death."
d between the Genehington relative to
at nothing was capartunate major. On tragedy was closed.
ior to the terrors of
ceful mode of dying,
r had annexed to his
as infinitely dreadful us of being indulged
th, and had according-
ore, a pathetic letter, lings of a man of sen, timent and honor, in which he requested of Gen. Washington, that he might not die on a gibbet. The general consulted his officers on the subject. Pity and esteem wrought so powerfully, that they were all for shooting him, till Greene insisted on it, that his crime was that of a common spy; that the public good required his being hanged; and that, were he shot, the generality would think there were favorable circumstances entitling him to notice and lenity. His observations convinced them that there would be an impropriety in granting the major's request, while tenderness prevented its being divulged.

When Major Andre was led out to the place of execution, as he went along he bowed himself familiarly to all those with whom he had been acquainted in his confinement.—A smile of complacency expressed the serene fortitude of his mind. Upon seeing the preparations at the fatal spot, he asked with some emotion, "Must I die in this manner?" He was told it was unavoidable. He replied, "I am reconciled to my fate, but not to the mode." Soon after, recollecting himself, he added, "it will be but a momentary pang;" and springing upon the cart, he performed the last offices to himself with a composure that excited the admiration, and melted the hearts of all the spectators.—Being told the final moment was at hand, and asked if he had any thing to say, he answered, "Nothing but to request you will witness to the world, that I die like a brave man." He died universally esteemed and regretted.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno 1778.

The British operations against Georgia.
The affairs of the United States in a deplorable condition.

Gen. Lincoln sent to South Carolina.

Anno 1779.

Gen. Ashe surprised and defeated.

Sir Henry Clinton takes Stony Point.

Count d'Estaing sails from the West Indies for the American coast.

The French and Americans repulsed at Savannah.

Washington's army in distress for want of bread.

Charleston taken by the British forces.

Anno 1780.

Tarleton defeats Col. Buford.

A French fleet with troops arrive at Newport.

Treaty signed between Holland and America.

Earl Cornwallis defeats Gen. Gates.

Major Andre taken and executed as a spy.

Gen. Arnold makes his escape on board the Vulture British sloop of war.

C H A P. IX.

SIR Henry Clinton, on the 15th of October, 1780, in obedience to the orders sent him to prosecute the war with vigor in North Carolina and Virginia, dispatched Gen. Leslie from New-York to the bay of Chesapeake, with near 3000 choice troops. He was to co-operate with Lord Cornwallis, who was expected to be far advanced towards, if not to have reached, Virginia. In a few days, the fleet arrived in the bay, and the troops were landed in different parts of Virginia.

On the 20th of June, the French and Spanish fleets formed a junction in the West-Indies. They amounted to 36 sail of the line, which, with their united land forces, formed such an apparent superiority, as nothing in those seas or islands seemed capable of resisting; but the Spanish troops being too much crowded on board their transports, together with the length of the voyage, the change of climate and diet, and other circumstances, a most mortal and contagious disorder was generated, which first infected their own seamen, and at length spread, though not with so fatal an effect, through the French fleet and land forces. Besides the great mortality on the passage, the Spaniards landed 1200 sick on their first arrival at Dominique, and a much greater number afterwards at Guadaloupe and Martinico. Thus the spirit of enterprise was damped, and some part of their strength diminished.

In the month of September, Mr. Laurens was taken on his way from America to Holland, on the banks of Newfoundland. A packet of papers being thrown over-board, and not sinking suddenly, was saved by the boldness and dexterity of an English sailor, and most of them were recovered from the effects of the water. On his arrival in England, he was committed, upon a charge of high treason, as a state prisoner to the Tower, under an order signed by the three secretaries of state. By the medium of his papers, administration came to the knowledge of the eventual treaty of amity and commerce between America and Holland.

In consequence of this discovery, strong remonstrances were made to the States General; but as no satisfactory answer was returned, Sir Joseph Yorke received orders to withdraw from the Hague; and, on the 20th of Dec. general reprisals were issued against the ships, goods, and subjects, of the States General.

On the 12th of January, 1781, General Greene's troops consisted of about 1100. The next day, Col. Lee's partizan legion arrived from the northward, consisting of about 100 horsemen, well mounted, and 120

h greater number
e and Martinico.
rise was damped,
length diminished.
ber, Mr. Laurens
n America to Hol-Newfoundland. A
rown over-board,
, was saved by the
an English sailor,
recovered from the
On his arrival in tted, upon a charge
ate prisoner to the signed by the three y the medium of his ame to the know-
reaty of amity and erica and Holland.
is discovery, strong de to the States Ge-tory answer was re-
rke received orders ague; and, on the eprisals were issued ls, and subjects, of ary, 1781, General
sted of about 1100.
ee's partizan legion
ward, consisting of ell mounted, and 120

infantry; and on the 13th the legion was detached on a secret expedition. They pushed on for Georgetown, where they surprised several officers, and took them prisoners. Major Irwin, and many more of the garrison were killed; but the principal part fled to the fort, which Lee was not in a condition to besiege. While this enterprise was carrying on, the enemy aimed a blow at Morgan, who was advised by Greene not to risque too much.

Gen. Leslie, in compliance with his orders, left Virginia, and arrived at Charleston, and joined Lord Cornwallis who wished to drive Gen. Morgan from his station and to deter the inhabitants from joining him. The execution of this business was entrusted to Lieut. Col. Tarleton, who was detached with about 1100 men for that purpose. On the 17th of January, Tarleton came up with Morgan, when an action commenced, which terminated in the almost total defeat of Tarleton.

Tarleton was very much censured for his conduct in this battle, which he was supposed to have lost by his un-officer like impetuosity. Lord Cornwallis, with the expectations of regaining the prisoners, and demolishing Morgan's corps, instantly concluded on a pursuit, which Morgan was aware of, and took his measures accordingly.

On the 31st of January, Greene succeeded Morgan in the command of the southern army, when a kind of military race commenced between the pursuing British and the fleeing Americans; but Greene got off before Cornwallis could overtake him.

Lord Cornwallis, being afterwards convinced from Greene's movements, that he intended to venture an engagement, on the 14th of May sent off his baggage under a proper escort, and the next morning at day-break, marched with the remainder of his army, amounting to about 2400 men, chiefly troops grown veteran in victory, either to meet Greene on the way, or attack him in his encampment.

The battle took place near Guilford courthouse; and after a hard struggle of near two hours, the Americans retreated in good order to the Reedy Fork, and crossed the river, about three miles from the field of action. Greene lost his artillery, and two ammunition waggons, the greatest part of the horses being killed before the retreat began.

In the month of February, reprisals having been commenced against the Dutch, Rodney and Vaughan received instructions from Great Britain to direct their views to the reduction of the Dutch island of St. Eustatia. The British fleet and army instantly appeared there, and surrounded it with a great force. Rodney and Vaughan

, Greene succeed-
nd of the southern military race com-
raising British and but Greene got off
overtake him.

g afterwards con-
movements, that he engagement, on the his baggage under a ext morning at daye remainder of his ut 2400 men, chief-a in victory, either way, or attack him

near Guilford court-struggle of near two etreated in good or-and crossed the riv-om the field of action.
y, and two ammuni-
est part of the horses retreat began.

ruary, reprisals hav-against the Dutch,
received instructions direct their views to Dutch island of St.
h fleet and army ine, and surrounded it Rodney and Vaughan

sent a peremptory summons to the governor, to surrender the island and its dependencies within an hour, accompanied with a threat, that if any resistance was made, he must abide the consequences. Mons. de Graaff, totally ignorant of the rupture between Great Britain and Holland, could scarcely believe the officer, who delivered the summons, to be serious. He returned for answer, that being utterly incapable of making any defence, he must of necessity surrender, only recommending the town and inhabitants to the clemency of the British commanders. The wealth of the place excited the astonishment of the conquerors, the whole island seemed to be one great magazine. All the store houses were filled with various commodities, and the very beach was covered with hogsheads of sugar and tobacco. The value was estimated considerably above three millions sterling. But this was only a part; for above 150 vessels of all denominations, many of them richly laden, were captured in the bay, exclusive of a Dutch frigate of 38 guns, and five smaller.
The neighboring small isles of St. Martin and Seba were reduced in the same manner.
Rodney being informed, that a fleet of about 30 large ships, all richly laden, with sugar and other West-India commodities, had sailed from Eustatia for Holland just before his arrival, under convoy of a flag ship of 60 guns, he dispatched the Monarch and Panther, with the Sybil frigate in pursuit of them. These soon overtook the convoy, when the Dutch admiral refusing to strike his colours, and all remonstrances proving ineffectual, a short engagement took place between his ship, the Mars and the Monarch. He died bravely in defence of his ship, when she instantly struck, and the whole convoy was taken.

The keeping of Dutch colours flying at Eustatia, rendered it for some time a decoy to French, Dutch and American vessels, a considerable number of which fell accordingly into the hands of the conquerors without trouble.

Preparations began to be made, on the 21st of June, for the army under Gen. Washington to take the field. The Americans marched towards White Plains, where they were joined by the French troops under Rochambeau.

Sir George Rodney, in consequence of information concerning the French fleet under the Count de Grasse, detached the Admirals Sir Samuel Hood and Drake, with seventeen sail of the line, to cruise off Fort Royal for the purpose of intercepting him. On the 28th of April, some of Sir Samuel's headmost ships returned hastily in sight, and with signals announced the appearance of a superior fleet, and a numerous convoy, to

atched the Monarch
ybil frigate in pur-
soon overtook the h admiral refusing d all remonstrances short engagement ship, the Mars and
l bravely in defence
stantly struck, and aken.

ch colours flying at r some time a decoy American vessels, a f which fell accord-he conquerors with-

to be made, on the e army under Gen.
e field. The Ameri-White Plains, where ne French troops un-

y, in consequence of g the French fleet un-se, detached the Ad-ood and Drake, with ine, to cruise off Fort of intercepting him.
some of Sir Samuel's ed hastily in sight, and ed the appearance of a numerous convoy, to the windward of Point Salines. The admiral made a signal for a general chase to windward, and at night it was determined by the admirals to continue the line ahead, so that getting as much as possible to windward, they might close in with Fort Royal at day-light, and cut off the enemy from the harbor.

In the morning the French appeared, their convoy keeping close in with the land, while Count de Grasse drew up his fleet in a line of battle for their protection. Admiral Hood used every manœuvre to bring him to action; but he being to windward, and so having the choice, preferred a long shot distance. A partial engagement ensued. The van and the nearest ships in the centre of the British, were exposed to a long and heavy weight of fire, in their struggles to close the French, and get to the windward; but suffered principally in their masts, hulls, and rigging. The action lasted about three hours, when Admiral Hood perceiving, that not one shot in ten of the French reached, and that his attempts to gain the wind were fruitless, ceased firing, and the British fleet bore away for Antigua.

Let us now return to the transactions under Lord Cornwallis. One great object of the British force was the establishment of a strong post and place of arms, and such as might render them perfectly masters of Chesapeak bay, and therefore they repaired to York Town and Gloucester.

The French and American armies continued their march from the northward, till they arrived at the head of Elk; and within an hour after they received an express from Count de Grasse, with the joyful account of his arrival and situation. By the 15th of September, all the troops were arrived and landed at Williamsburgh, and preparations were made with all possible dispatch for putting the army in a situation to move down towards York Town.

On the 30th of September, Lord Cornwallis was closely invested in York Town. The trenches were opened by the combined armies on the 6th of October, at 600 yards distance from Cornwallis's works. On the 9th they opened their batteries, and continued firing all night, without intermission. The next morning the French opened their batteries on the left, and a tremendous roar of cannon and mortars was continued for six or eight hours without ceasing.

The French and Americans continued to carry on the siege with great success. On the 16th their several batteries were covered with near 100 pieces of heavy ordnance; while the British works were so destroyed that they could scarcely show a single gun. Thus was Lord Cornwallis reduced to the necessity of preparing for a surrender, or of ore they repaired to ster.

merican armies conti-
the northward, till l of Elk; and with-received an express with the joyful ac-d situation. By the
the troops were ar-Williamsburgh, and de with all possible
e army in a situation York Town.
tember, Lord Corn-
ested in York Town.
ened by the combined October, at 600 yards allis's works. On the batteries, and contin-
without intermission.
e French opened their
and a tremendous roar ars was continued for ithout ceasing.
mericans continued to ith great success. On batteries were covered es of heavy ordnance;
orks were so destroyed
eely show a single gun.
rnwallis reduced to the ng for a surrender, or of attempting an escape. He determined upon the latter. Boats were prepared under different pretences, for the reception of the troops by ten at night, in order to pass them over to Gloucester Point. The arrangements were made with the utmost secrecy.

The intention was to abandon the baggage, and to leave a detachment behind to capitulate for the town's people, and for the sick and wounded, his lordship having already prepared a letter on the subject, to be delivered to Gen. Washington after his departure. The first embarkation had arrived at Gloucester Point, and the greater part of the troops were already landed, when the weather, which was before moderate and calm, instantly changed to a most violent storm of wind and rain. The boats with the remaining troops were all driven down the river, and the design of passing over was not only entirely frustrated, but the absence of the boats rendered it impossible to bring back the troops from Gloucester. Thus weakened and divided, the army was in no small danger. However, the boats returned, and the troops were brought back in the course of the forenoon with very little loss.

Things were now hastening to a period, which could be no longer protracted; for the British works were sinking under the weight of the French and American artillery. All hopes of relief from New-York were over, and the strength and spirits of the royal army were broken down and exhausted by their constant and unremitting fatigue. Matters being in this situation on the 17th of October, Lord Cornwallis sent out a flag with a letter to Gen. Washington, requesting a cessation of arms for twenty-four hours, and that commissioners might be appointed for digesting the terms of capitulation. Commissioners were accordingly appointed; and on the side of the allies, were Viscount de Noailles, and Lieut. Col. Laurens, whose father was in close confinement in the Tower of London, while the son was drawing up articles by which an English nobleman and a British army became prisoners.

On the 19th of October, the posts of York Town and Gloucester were surrendered. The honor of marching out with colours flying, which had been denied to Gen. Lincoln, was now refused to Lord Cornwallis, and Lincoln was appointed to receive the submission of the royal army at York Town, precisely in the same way his own had been conducted about eighteen months before. The troops that surrendered prisoners exceeded 7000; but so great was the number of sick and wounded, that there were only 3800 capable of doing duty. The officers and soldiers retained their baggage and effects. Fifteen hundred seamen shared the same fate as the garrison. The Guadaloupe frigate of 44 guns, and a number of transports, were surrendered to the conquerors. About 20 transports had been sunk or burnt during the siege. The land forces became prisoners to the Americans; but the seamen and ships were assigned to the French admiral. The Americans obtained a fine train of artillery, consisting of 75 pieces of brass ordnance, and 69 iron cannon, howitzers, and mortars.

On the 24th of October, a fleet destined for the relief of Lord Cornwallis arrived off the Chesapeak; but, on receiving the news of his surrender, they returned to New-York. The fleet consisted of 25 ships of the line, two fifties, and eight frigates.— When they appeared off the Chesapeak, the French made no manner of movement, though they had 36 ships of the line, being perhaps satisfied with their present success. Every argument and persuasion was used with the Count de Grasse to induce him to aid the combined army in an operation against Charleston; but the advanced season, the orders of his court, and his own engagements to be punctual to a certain time, fixed for his future operation, prevented his compliance. His instructions had fixed his departure on the 15th of October, and he had already exceeded that time. On the 27th the troops under the Marquis St. Simon began to embark for the West-Indies, and about the 5th of November de Grasse sailed from the Chesapeak.

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno 1780.

Sir Henry Clinton sends 3000 troops to the bay of Chesapeak.
The French and Spanish fleet form a junction in the West-Indies.
Mr. Laurens taken in his passage to Holland.
Sir Joseph Yorke leaves the Hague.

Anno 1781.

Lieut. Col. Tarleton detached after Gen. Morgan by whom he is defeated.
Sir George Rodney and Gen. Vaughan take St. Eustatia, St. Martins and Saba.
The French troops join the Americans under Washington.
Sir Samuel Hood and Count de Grasse engage.
Lord Cornwallis repairs to York Town and Gloucester.
Is obliged to capitulate, and surrender York Town and Gloucester.
De Grasse sails for the West-Indies.

C H A P. X.

ON the 27th of November, the king of England went to the house of peers, and opened the sessions of parliament. Warm debates took place on account of the ruinous manner in which the American war was continued; but Lord North and his party, who thought they had not yet carried things far enough, maintained a considerable majority in the house of commons. Mr. Burke had made several motions relative to the release of Mr. Laurens from the Tower. However, at length, Mr. Laurens was brought before Lord Mansfield, on the last day of the year, in consequence of an order from the secretary of state, and was discharged upon certain conditions.

The naval force of France and Spain in the West-Indies, in the month of February, 1782, amounted to 60 ships of the line, and their land forces when joined would have formed a considerable army. Jamaica had no more than six incomplete battalions of regular troops and the militia of the island to defend it; and therefore in case of attack, must have been soon conquered. The arrival of Sir George Rodney with twelve sail of the line at Barbadoes, and his subsequent junction with Sir Samuel Hood's squadron, together with the arrival of three ships of the line from England a few days afterwards, perhaps providentially saved Jamaica from falling into the hands of the enemy. The English fleet at St. Lucia amounting to 36 ships of the line, and the force under de Grasse at Martinico to 34. The metal of the French is always heavier than that of the English, in equal rates, so that in this point the French had the advantage.

The van of the British fleet was commanded by Sir Samuel Hood, the centre by Sir George Rodney, and the rear by Admiral Sir Francis Drake. The three divisions of the French fleet were under Count de Grasse, Mons. de Vaudreuil, and Mons. de Bougainville.

On the 8th of April, the French fleet began to turn out of Fort Royal harbor early in the morning, with a great convoy under their protection, all bound to the French or Spanish ports in Hispaniola. De Grasse, in order to avoid an encounter on his passage, meant to keep close in under the islands, till he had eluded the pursuit of the English. However their departure from the bay was so speedily communicated by signals from the frigates, and the English fleet was in such excellent preparation, that all the ships were clear of Gross Islet Bay by noon, and pursued with the utmost expedition; so that the French saved only a few hours, by being the arrival of three land a few days afentially saved Ja-

e hands of the ene-St. Lucia amount-
, and the force unnico to 34. The ways heavier than qual rates, so that had the advantage.
sh fleet was com-
lood, the centre by the rear by Admi-
The three diviswere under Count udreuil, and Mons.

the French fleet be-Royal harbor early
great convoy under and to the French or iola. De Grasse, in nter on his passage, under the islands, till suit of the English.
re from the bay was ted by signals from lish fleet was in such hat all the ships were y by noon, and pur-
pedition; so that the few hours, by being masters of the time of departure. The English gained sight of them under Dominique at night, and afterwards regulated the pursuit by signals.

Early the next morning, Count de Grasse formed the line of battle, and thereby afforded an opportunity to his convoy for proceeding on their course, while he remained to abide the consequences. The van of the English fleet first closed with the French centre, while the English centre and rear were becalmed. The action commenced about nine o'clock on the ninth. The Barfleur, Sir Samuel Hood's own ship, had at times seven and generally three ships firing upon her, and none of the division escaped encountering a disproportionate force. The firm and effectual resistance with which they supported all the efforts of the enemy's superiority, was to the highest degree glorious. At length the leading ships of the centre were enabled to come up to their assistance. These were soon followed by Sir George Rodney in the Formidable, with his seconds the Namur and the Duke, all of 90 guns: they made and supported a most tremendous fire. De Grasse now changed the nature of the action, and kept at such a distance during the remainder of the engagement, as might prevent any thing decisive happening. The rest of the English fleet coming up De Grasse withdrew his ships from the action, and evaded all the efforts of the English commanders for its renewal. Two of the French ships were so damaged, that they were obliged to quit the fleet, and put into Guadaloupe. On the side of the English the Royal Oak and the Montague suffered extremely; but they were capable of being repaired at sea, so as not to be under the necessity of quitting the fleet.

On the 11th the French fleet weathered Guadaloupe, and gained such a distance, that the body of their fleet could only be descried from the mast-heads of the British centre, and all hopes of Sir George Rodney's coming up with them seemed to be at an end. In this critical situation, one of the French ships, which had suffered in the action, was perceived, about noon, to fall off considerably from the rest of the fleet to leeward. This produced signals from the English admiral for a general chase, which was so vigorous that the Agamemnon, and some others of the headmost of the English line, were coming up so fast with this ship that she would assuredly have been cut off before evening had not her signals and imminent danger induced de Grasse to bear down with his whole fleet to her assistance. This movement put it out of the power of the French to avoid fighting. The pursuing English fell back into their station, and a close line was formed.—The French also

ded all the efforts
ers for its renewal.
were so damaged,
quit the fleet, and on the side of the
and the Montague
they were capable so as not to be un-
ing the fleet.
ch fleet weathered
such a distance,
t could only be de-ads of the British Sir George Rodem seemed to be at ituation, one of the l suffered in the ac-
out noon, to fall off st of the fleet to lec-gnals from the Engl chase, which was memnon, and some of the English line, with this ship that ve been cut off ber signals and immi-Grasse to bear down er assistance. This of the power of the
ug. The pursuing their station, and a
—The French also prepared for battle with the greatest resolution, and the night passed in preparations on both sides.

About seven o'clock in the morning, of the 12th of April, the battle commenced, and was continued with unremitting fury until near the same hour in the evening.— As the English came up, they ranged slowly along the French line, and close under their lee. Being so near every shot took effect, and the French ships being so full of men, the carnage in them was prodigious.
The Formidable, Admiral Rodney's ship, fired near eighty broadsides, and it may be supposed the rest were not idle. The French stood and returned this dreadful fire with the utmost firmness, each side fighting, as if the honor and fate of their country were that day to be decided.

Sir George Rodney in the Formidable, with his seconds the Namur and the Duke, and immediately supported by the Canada, between twelve and one o'clock, hove directly and with full sail athwart the French line and successfully broke through, about three ships short of the centre, where Count de Grasse commanded in the Ville de Paris of 110 guns. Being followed and supported by the remainder of his division, and wearing round close about the enemy, he effectually separated their line. This bold adventure proved decisive. The battle lasted till sunset, for the French fought with the greatest bravery.

The British fleet having now gained the wind of the French, their general confusion was completed. Hood's division had been long becalmed and kept out of action; but his head ships and part of his centre, as far at least as the Barfleur, which he himself commanded, came up at this juncture, and contributed to render the victory more decisive. The Cæsar, Glorieux, and Hector, soon struck their colours but not till after they had made the most noble defence.

Count de Grasse was nobly supported, even after the line was broken; and the Didem, a French 74, went down by a single broadside, in a generous exertion to save him. The Ville de Paris was almost reduced to a wreck, but de Grasse still held out. At length Hood in the Barfleur approached him just at sunset, and poured in a most destructive fire. The Ville de Paris supported all these shocks for a quarter of an hour after, when she struck to Sir Samuel Hood. It was said, that at the time she struck, there were but three men left alive and unhurt on the upper deck, and that the count was one of them.

The Cæsar was unfortunately set on fire, and blew up in the night of the action. A lieutenant and 50 English seamen perished, with about 400 prisoners. The number of

h fought with the

g now gained the general confusion
division had been out of action; but his centre, as far which he himself
this juncture, and e victory more de-
ieux, and Hector,
rs but not till after noble defence.

nobly supported,
roken; and the Dit down by a single s exertion to save
was almost reducrasse still held out.
Barfleur approached
l poured in a most Ville de Paris sup-
for a quarter of an ruck to Sir Samuel at at the time she three men left alive
r deck, and that the rtunately set on fire, ut of the action. A sh seamen perished,

rs. The number of the French slain in this engagement, and that of the ninth, was computed at three thousand and near double that number wounded. The small superiority of British ships in point of number, contributed nothing to the success of the day, as more of Hood's division than that difference amounted to, were prevented coming into action through the want of wind. The whole loss of the English, in killed and wounded in the two actions, was stated only at 1050, of which 253 were killed on the spot.

In the Ville de Paris were found thirty-six chests of money, destined to pay the subsistence of the troops in the designed attack on Jamaica. Sir Samuel Hood being sent in pursuit of the scattered enemy, on the 19th he came up and took the Jason and Canton of 64 guns each, and two frigates.

Thus the French lost eight ships of the line: six were in possession of the English, one had been sunk, and the Cæsar blew up after her capture. The English having joined off Cape Tiberoon, and the French having no force to the windward, Sir George Rodney proceeded with the disabled ships and prizes to Jamaica, as well for their repair, as the greater security of the Island, should the combined fleet still venture upon the prosecution of their former design. Sir Samuel Hood was left with about 25 ships of the line to keep the sea, and watch the motions of the enemy.

Let us now return to North America, where all parties seemed to be heartily tired of the war. On the 5th of May, Sir Guy Carleton arrived at New-York, and on the 7th he wrote to Gen. Washington, and sent him some public papers, that his excellency might learn from them, the disposition that prevailed in the government and people of Great Britain, relative to the making of a peace with America.

The British administration having resolved upon abandoning all offensive operations in America, the scheme of evacuating all the weakest posts in the United States was adopted. Accordingly, on the 11th of July Savannah was evacuated, and the Americans immediately took possession of it, the works and town being left perfect.

On the 14th of December, Gen. Leslie, who commanded at Charleston, completed the embarkation of his troops, and quitted that town. Gen. Wayne, with the legion and light infantry, had been before their works for several days, by order of Gen. Greene. It was hinted to him from Gen. Leslie, through a certain medium, that if they were permitted to embark without interruption, every care should be taken for the preservation of the town. Wayne was directed to accede to the proposal, the British also agree-

RY OF
the sea, and watch
y.
North America,
to be heartily tired of May, Sir Guy
-York, and on the ashington, and sent that his excellen-
m, the disposition
ernment and peoative to the making
.
tration having re-
all offensive ope-
scheme of evacuat-osts in the United Accordingly, on the
was evacuated, and tely took possession n being left perfect. mber, Gen. Leslie,
arleston, completed
troops, and quitted
e, with the legion and n before their works der of Gen. Greene.
from Gen. Leslie, um, that if they were without interruption, ken for the preservaayne was directed to the British also agreeing not to fire on the town after getting on board. The conditions being fully understood by both parties, Charleston was evacuated and possessed without the least confusion, the American advance following close on the British rear. The governor was conducted into his capital the same day; the civil police established the day following, and on the third the town was opened for business. On the 17th the British crossed the bar, and went to sea.

Every thing now seemed to announce the approach of peace. The American commissioners expedited the negotiation with the utmost assiduity, and on the 30th of November, provisional articles were agreed upon and signed, to take effect whenever terms of peace should be finally settled with the court of France. The business was finished so privately and unexpectedly that the ministers and ambassadors, as well as others in and about the court of Versailles, were surprised upon hearing the news.

We must not here avoid mentioning an unfortunate event, which happened at the close of the still more unfortunate American war. Ten men of war, including Count de Grasse's ships, with a large fleet of merchantmen from Jamaica, suffered exceedingly by a tremendous gale of wind off Newfoundland, on the 17th of September. The Ville de Paris and the Glorieux found-dered, and only one man out of the complement of both ships escaped to tell the melancholy tale. The Hector also sunk; but being descried in time by a snow that made towards them, the crew were saved. The Ramilies went down, but her people were saved by the merchantmen in company. The Centaur was likewise lost, and all her company, except twelve, with the captain, who got into the only remaining boat. They traversed a space of near 800 miles on the Atlantic ocean, without compass or quadrant, and with a blanket for a sail. They had only two biscuits divided among them every twenty-four hours; and as much water during that space to every man, as the neck of a wine bottle broken off would hold. At the expiration of sixteen days when the last division of biscuit and water had been made, to their inexpressible joy, they discovered the Portuguese island of Fayal, where they safely arrived at night, and received every assistance their melancholy situation demanded.

On the 3d of September, 1783, the definitive treaties between Great Britain, France and Spain, were signed at Versailles by the respective plenipotentiaries authorized for that purpose. On the same day, the definitive treaty with Great Britain and the United States of America was also signed at Paris, by David Hartley, Esq. the Bri-

RY OF

out of the comple-
ed to tell the mel-
or also sunk ; but a snow that made were saved. The t her people were men in company.
se lost, and all her
, with the captain, aining boat. They 800 miles on the compass or quad-
for a sail. They vided among them
rs ; and as much
e to every man, as e broken off would on of sixteen days
f biscuit and water
r inexpressible joy, ortuguese island of
ly arrived at night,
stance their melan-
ed.

ber, 1783, the defin-reat Britain, France
ed at Versailles by entiaries authorized n the same day, the Great Britain and the rica was also signed artley, Esq. the Bri-

6'

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche
Series.

CIHM/ICMH
Collection de
microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1982

ti
ja te

n
d r s
v

v s l
t
t
v

tish plenipotentiary, and John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and John Jay, the plenipotentiaries of the said states.

By the articles of this treaty, his Britannic majesty acknowledged the independence of the Thirteen United States of America, to wit, New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. He also relinquished all claims to the government of the said states, and consented to treat with them as a free and independent people. Their boundaries were also settled, and they were allowed the liberty of fishing and drying fish as usual on the banks of Newfoundland.

The particulars of the treaty between Great Britain, France, and Spain, will be found in our history of England, to which it more properly belongs.

Thus ended the unhappy American war, which added to the national debt of the mother country one hundred and twenty million pounds sterling, besides the loss of many thousands of our bravest officers, soldiers, and seamen, to the disgrace and infamy of those ministers, who advised and carried it on, contrary to the general voice of the people of Great Britain!

Memorable events recorded in this chapter.

Anno 1781.

Mr. Laurens discharged from his confinement in the Tower of London.

Anno 1782.

The fleets of Sir George Rodney and Count de Grasse meet in the West-Indies. They engage, and Count de Grasse is defeated and taken.

Savannah evacuated by the British forces. And afterwards Charleston in South Carolina.

Provisional articles of peace signed between the British and American commissioners.

Anno 1783.

The definitive treaties between Great Britain, France, Spain, and America signed.

y, &c.

d in this chapter.

1.

from his confine-London.

2.

Rodney and Count
West-Indies.
t de Grasse is de-

the British forces.
on in South Caro-

ace signed between can commissioners.

83.

between Great Bri-
and America signed.

Appendix.

Constitution of the United States.

WE, The People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquillity, provide for the common Defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, DO ORDAIN AND ESTABLISH this CONSTITUTION for the UNITED STATES of AMERICA.

ARTICLE I.

Section 1. ALL legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Sec. 2. The house of representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states; and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives, and direct taxes, shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each state shall have at least one representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the state of New-Hampshire shall be entitled to chuse three; Massachusetts, eight; Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, one; Connecticut, five; New-York, six; New-Jersey, four; Pennsylvania, eight ; Delaware, one ; Maryland, six ; Virginia, ten ; North-Carolina, five ; South-Carolina, five ; and Georgia, three.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

The house of representatives shall chuse their speaker and other officers ; and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Sec. 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen by the legislature thereof, for six years ; and each senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled, in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year ; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

The vice-president of the United States shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

The senate shall chuse their other officers and also a president pro tempore, in the absence of the vice-president, or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

The senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the president of the United States is tried, the chief justice shall preside : And no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States ; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be li-

able ment
Se
for state
time
place
Th
and unles
Sa
turn of ea ler n rize
man vide
E pun conc
E
from may may
the
journ N
out day
sha
S
com
pai
all pri
of
frow hou
I
wh
the cre ed
the his

Maryland, six; Virginia, Carolina, five; and Georrepresentation from any thereof shall issue writs of all choose their speaker and the sole power of impeached States shall be composed, chosen by the legislature h senator shall have one assembled, in consequence divided as equally as may of the senators of the first ration of the second year, on of the fourth year, and n of the sixth year, so that second year; and if vacanerwise, during the recess he executive thereof may til the next meeting of the ch vacancies.

who shall not have attained en nine years a citizen of not, when elected, be an ine shall be chosen.

ed States shall be president vote unless they be equally ther officers and also a pre-ce of the vice-president, or of president of the United

e power to try all impeachurpose, they shall be on oath dent of the United States is side: And no person shall rrrence of two-thirds of the hment shall not extend fure, and disqualification to hold ust or profit under the Unit-cted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment according to law.

Sec. 4. The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof; but the congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators.

The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Sec. 5. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither house, during the session of congress, shall without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

Sec. 6. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

Sec. 7. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives; but the senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate, shall, before it become a law, be presented to the president of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be re-passed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

Sec. 8. The congress shall have power

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States.

venue shall originate in the senate may propose or con-bills.

sed the house of representare it become a law, be pre-ited States; if he approve l return it, with his objecshall have originated, who on their journal, and pro-reconsideration two-thirds he bill, it shall be sent, toe other house, by which it d if approved by two-thirds law. But in all such cases e determined by yeas and s voting for and against the of each house respectively. by the president within ten t shall have been presented, in like manner as if he had,
their adjournment prevent not be a law.

te to which the concurrence entatives may be necessary ment) shall be presented to s; and before the same shall him, or, being disapproved wo-thirds of the senate and ding to the rules and limitabill.

ve power ies, imposts and excises, to e common defence and gene-; but all duties, imposts and out the United States:

dit of the United States;
oreign nations, and among the ian tribes;

of naturalization, and uniform cies throughout the United value thereof, and of foreign ights and measures;

nt of counterfeiting the secunited States.

To establish post-offices and post-roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the supreme court;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years;

To provide and maintain a navy;

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress.

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may,
by cession of particular states, and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings;

And, to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

Sec. 9. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be assed.

No capitation, or other direct tax, shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration herein before directed to be taken.

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one state, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever, from any king, prince or foreign state.

Sec. 10. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make any thing but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

No state shall, without the consent of the congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws, and the nett produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and controul of the congress. No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

Sec. 1. The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice-President, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole

numb
may l senta
under

Th
by ba an in shall numb
certi
the U
the p ate s
and t
the g numb
point jority repre
them
from
man
the v
each cons
state
a ch
the p tors,
two from

T
elect whic
N
the tutic
shel
atta
year
In
his
and vice
the

x, shall be laid, unless in ation herein before direct-articles exported from any given by any regulation of of one state over those of to, or from, one state, be les in another.

the treasury, but in cone by law; and a regular ceipts and expenditures of d from time to time.

nted by the United States;
f profit or trust under them ongress, except of any pref any kind whatever, from into any treaty, alliance or marque and reprisal; coin ake any thing but gold and f debts; pass any bill of at-w impairing the obligation nobility.

sent of the congress, lay any exports, except what may cuting its inspection laws, es and imposts, laid by any ll be for the use of the treaall such laws shall be subject e congress. No state shall,
s, lay any duty of tonnage, ime of peace, enter into any ther state, or with a foreign actually invaded, or in such nit of delay.

LE II.

ver shall be vested in a Pre-America. He shall hold his r years, and, together with r the same term, be elected och manner as the legislature f electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the congress; but no senator or representative, or person holding an office, of trust or profit, under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.

The electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate; the president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the house of representatives shall immediately chuse by ballot one of them for president; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list, the said house shall in like manner chuse the president. But in chusing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the president, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors, shall be the vice-president. But if there shall remain two or more who have equal votes, the senate shall chuse from them by ballot the vice-president. [See Amendments.]

The congress may determine the time of chusing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No person, except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

In case of the removal of the president from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice-president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a president shall be elected.

192 Constitution of the United States.

The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

Sec. 2. The president shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the supreme court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law. But the congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session.

Sec. 3. He shall from time to time give to the congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them with respect to the time of adjournment, he declaring what officer shall officer shall act accordingly, , or a president shall be times, receive for his seril neither be increased nor which he shall have been ve within that period any ed States, or any of them.

ution of his office, he shall

ation :
firm) that I will faithfully t of the United States, and preserve, protect and de-United States."

e commander in chief of the States, and of the militia of into the actual service of the e the opinion, in writing, of the executive departments, e duties of their respective r to grant reprieves and par-United States, except in cases t with the advice and consent s, provided two-thirds of the he shall nominate, and by and the senate, shall appoint amers and consuls, judges of the officers of the United States, herein otherwise provided for, ed by law. But the congress ment of such inferior officers as resident alone, in the courts of ments.

power to fill up all vacancies recess of the senate, by grant-expire at the end of their next me to time give to the congress union, and recommend to their as he shall judge necessary and raordinary occasions, convene m, and in case of disagreement to the time of adjournment, be may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

Sec. 4. The president, vice-president, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

Sec. 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court; and in such inferior courts, as the congress may from time to time ordain and establish.--- The judges, both of the supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behaviour, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services, a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

Sec. 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states, between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states, between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects. (See amendment, Art. XI.)

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be a party, the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations, as the congress shall make.

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

Sec. 3. Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Sec. 1. Full faith and credit shall be given, in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

Sec. 2. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

A person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

No person, held to service or labor in one state, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor; but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

Sec. 3. New states may be admitted by the congress into this union; but no new states shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the congress.

The congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations, respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed, as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular state.

Sec. 4. The United States shall guarantee to every state in this union, a republican form of government; and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the legislature, or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constiinfant. No person shall be a witness in open court, or to declare the punish- of treason shall work con- cept during the life of the

E IV.

shall be given, in each state, judicial proceedings of every may, by general laws, pre- acts, records and proceed- ect thereof.

state shall be entitled to all ens in the several states, te with treason, felony, or m justice, and be found in of the executive authority be delivered up, to be re- diction of the crime.

labor in one state, under the, other, shall, in consequence in, be discharged from such delivered up on claim of the labor may be due.

admitted by the congress into shall be formed or erected ther state; nor any state be or more states, or parts of the legislatures of the states congress.

er to dispose of, and make all respecting the territory or e United States; and nothing construed, as to prejudice any of any particular state.

shall guarantee to every state or government; and shall levies, and on application tative (when the legisla- tions are two-thirds of both houses shall ope amendments to this constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid, to all in- tents and purposes, as part of this constitution, when ratifi- ed by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress; provided, that no amendment, which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth sec- tion of the first article; and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate.

C L E V.

Constitution of the United States. 198

ARTICLE VI.

All debts contracted and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this constitution, as under the confeder- ation.

This constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every state shall be bound thereby, any thing in the con- stitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstand- ing.

The senators and representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state legislatures, and all execu- tive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support this constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust un- der the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine states shall be sufficient for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in Convention, by the unanimous consent of the States present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names.

Go: WASHINGTON, President, and Deputy from Virginia.

179 Constitution of the United States.

Delegates.
Gen. Read,	Gen. Read,
Gunning Bedford, junr.	Gunning Bedford, junr.
John Dickinson,	John Dickinson,
Richard Bassett,	Richard Bassett,
James Wilson,	James Wilson,
Maryland.	Maryland.
James McHenry,	James McHenry,
Ben. of St. Tho. Janifer,	Ben. of St. Tho. Janifer, Dan. Carroll.	Dan. Carroll.
Virginia.	Virginia.
John Blair,	John Blair,
James Madison, junr.	James Madison, junr.
North Carolina.	North Carolina.
Wm. Blount,	Wm. Blount,
Richd. Dobbs Spaight,	Richd. Dobbs Spaight,
Hugh Williamson.	Hugh Williamson.
South Carolina.	South Carolina.
J. Rutledge,	J. Rutledge,
Charles Cotes Pinckney,	Charles Cotes Pinckney,
Charles Pinckney,	Charles Pinckney,
Pierce Butler.	Pierce Butler.
Georgia.	Georgia.
William Few,	William Few,
Abr. Baldwin.	Abr. Baldwin.
William Linnson, Secretary.	William Linnson, Secretary.

At Convention, Monday, Sept. 17, 1787.
 Present, The States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Mr. Hamilton, from New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.
 In the preceding constitution to be laid before the United States in congress assembled, and that it is the wish of this convention, that it should afterwards be submitted to the consideration of each state by the people, and that each convention should give notice thereof and ratifying the same; and that each convention should give notice thereof to the United States in congress assembled.
 Resolved, That it is the opinion of this convention, that as soon as the conventions of nine states shall have ratified this constitution, the United States in congress assembled Delaware.

 Read,
 New Bedford, June.
 Madison, Nassau,
 Graham,
 Maryland.
 Wm. Henry,
 of St. Thomas, Janitor, Carroll,
 Virginia.
 Blair,
 as Madison, June.
 Virginia Carolina.
 A. Blount,
 Ed. Dobb's Spaight,
 Wm. Williamson,
 South Carolina.
 Lawrence,
 Charles Cotes, Pinckney, Charles Pinckney,
 John Butler,
 Georgia.
 William Few,
 Wm. Baldwin,
 as Jackson, Secretary.
 Monday, Sept. 27, 1798.
 Massachusetts, Massachusetts, from New-York, New-Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, by a resolution adopted on the 27th of August 1798, and before the United States, and that it is the duty of the United States to be submitted to the United States by the members of its Legislature, for and that each convention as soon as it shall give notice of its meeting, shall be notified by the members of this convention, that the United States shall have ratified the same in Congress assembled.

Constitution of the United States. 197

should fix a day on which electors should be appointed by the states which shall have ratified the same, and a day on which the electors should assemble to vote for the president, and the time and place for commencing proceedings under this constitution. That after such publication the electors should be appointed, and the senators and representatives elected: That the electors should meet on the day fixed for the election of the president, and should transmit their votes certified, signed, sealed, and directed, as the constitution requires, to the secretary of the United States in Congress assembled; that the senators and representatives should convene at the time and place assigned; that the senators should appoint a president of the senate, for the sole purpose of receiving, opening and counting the votes for president; and, that after he shall be chosen, the senators, together with the president, should without delay proceed to execute this constitution.

By the unanimous order of the Convention,

GO: WASHINGTON, PRICED

WILLIAM JACKSON, Secretary.

In Convention, September 17, 1787

SIR,

SIR,
WE have now the honor to submit to the consideration of the United States in Congress assembled, that constitution which has appeared to us the most advisable.

The friends of our country have long seen and desired, that the power of making laws, order and justice, that of issuing money and regulating commerce, and the corresponding executive and judicial authorities should be fully and effectually vested in the general government of the Union; but the impropriety of delegating such extensive trust to one body of men is evident. Hence results the necessity of a distinct organization.

It is equally impossible, in the federal government of these states, to secure all rights of business and movement to each, and to provide for the interest and safety of all individuals entering into society, than give to a state of liberty to preserve the rest. The freedom of the country must depend as well on location and circumstances as on the object to be achieved. In all times difficult to draw with precision the line between those rights which must be secured, and those which may be asserted; and on the present occasion this difficulty was increased by a difference among the several states as to their situation, extent, habits and particular interests.

In all our deliberations on this subject we kept steadily in our view, that which appears to us the greatest interest of every true American, the consolidation of our union, in which is involved our prosperity, felicity, safety, perhaps our very existence. This important consideration, we think, and deeply impressed on our minds, led each state in the convention to be less rigid in points of inferior magnitude, than might have been otherwise expected; and thus the constitution, which we now present, is the result of a spirit of amity, and of that mutual deference and concession which the peculiarity of our political situation rendered indispensable.

That it will meet the full and entire approbation of every state is not perhaps to be expected; but each will doubtless consider, that had her interest alone been consulted, the consequences might have been particularly disagreeable or injurious to others; that it is liable to as few exceptions as could reasonably have been expected, we hope and believe; that it may promote the lasting welfare of that country so dear to us all, and secure her freedom and happiness, is our most ardent wish.

With great respect, we have the honor to be, sir,

Yours most obedient and humble servant,
 Geo. WASHINGTON, President.

By unanimous order of the Convention.
 J. M. A. Secretary then President of Congress.

Amendments.

ARTICLE I.

CONGRESS shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II.

A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

increased by a difference in situation; extent, habits of mind, and the greatest interest of the union, in which safety, perhaps our consideration, and ends, led each state, in the
of inferior magnitude, expected; and the con-
is the result of a spirit of and concession which the on rendered indispensable entire approbation of every but each will doubtless alone been consulted; the particularly disagreeable to as few exceptions as ted, we hope will believe welfare of that country dom and happiness, is our

the honor to be, sir, dictated and minute verbatim.
INGTON, President.
Secretary of the Convention Congress.

EE I.
law respecting an establishing the free exercise thereof speech on the press, or ly to assemble, and to peti-ons of grievances.

EE II. necessary to the security of people to keep and bear arms.

ARTICLE III.
No soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV.
The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall be issued, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V.
No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war, or public danger. Nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI.
In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed; which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII.
In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved: And no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

ARTICLE VIII.
Excessive bail shall not be required; nor excessive fines imposed; nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX.
The enumeration, in the constitution, of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE I.
The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE II.
The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.

ARTICLE III.
[The Article of Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, in the second article of the Constitution.]

The electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for president and vice-president, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as president, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as vice-president; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as president, and all persons voted for as vice-president, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate. The president of the senate shall in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates, and the vote shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for president shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the greatest number, not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as president, the house of representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the president; but in choosing the president, the votes shall be taken by states, each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice; and if the house of representatives shall not choose a president whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the vice-president shall act as president, as in the case of the death or other constitutional parage others, retained the United States by the the states, are reserved people.

XI.
The States shall not be com-or equity, diminished or of States by citizens of one of any foreign state.

XII.
The States shall not be com-
the Constitution.

their respective states, and no president, one of whom of the same state, with shall hold the person, who shall make subject him of and all persons voted for number of votes for each rtify, and transmit, sealed, the United States, directed The President of the Senate the house of representathe vote, shall then be greatest number of votes dent. If a number be a ectors appointed; and if from the persons having ng three on the list of those of representatives shall the president; but in choi-be taken by either, and re-ving one vote; a quorum a majority of all the states and if the house of represident whenever the right before the fourth day of vice-president shall act as death or other constitutional

Declaration of Independence.

201

Stability of the president. The person having the greatest number of votes as vice-president shall be vice-president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of the electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the senate shall choose the vice-president; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice; but no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of president shall be eligible to that of vice-president of the United States.

Declaration of Independence.

IN GENERAL CONGRESS, Philadelphia, July 4, 1776.

WHEN in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence indeed will dictate, that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient endurance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former system of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly refused to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature; a right inseparable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, essential to the security of the people at large, have never returned to the people at large; and by this means he has endeavored to bring about a perpetual and arbitrary government by his own will; and has endeavored to bring about the same by dissolving the legislatures of the colonies.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their settlement; and raising the conditions of new grants of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers. He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and has swarmed officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation.

For quartering large bodies of troops among us:
For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders they should commit on the inhabitants of these states:

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world:
For imposing taxes on us without our consent:

For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies:

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments:

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy, scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and yet unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions, we have petitioned

[illegible]

divine Providence, we must have our fortune made by [illegible]

[illegible]

