> With the spirits of dead and missing royalties and statesmen for spectators and in a maze of mediaeval intrigue and romance, the love affair of Shirley Clai-borne and John Armitage was brought to its happy conclusionnediaeval, we say, and advisedly, since, although the scenes of our tale are laid in up to date Europe and Virginia, it is necessary to hark back to the quaint tales of the old time romancers for such stirring adventures as befell Shirley Claiborne of Virginia and John Armitage of where? Beautiful in the manner of southern maidens of high ineage, fine spirit and daring devotion was Shirley Claiborne, daughter of a famous diplomat and sister of Captain Dick Claiborne, the best rider in the American army. Boldly she be-lieved in her lover, confident in her faith in him even when all world had turned against him. And who was John Armitage, to whom so much love was given and around whom so many great affairs revolved? Read, and you shall learn from his story and his deeds of knightly ravery that the spirit of chivalry and loyalty still abides in the prosaic, workaday, modern world, ready at the call of duty to fight against intrigue, chican-ery, falsehood and crime. Chapter 1

John Armitage, to whom he had oken. "You have lost none of your mat you are remarkably frank. When I called on you in Paris a year ago I admitted it—a slight service."

Count Ferdinand von Stroebel bowed slightly, but did not take his eyes from in Geneva. On the table between them stood an open dispatch box, and about it lay a number of packets of papers which the old gentieman, with char-acteristic caution, had removed to his own side of the table before admitting his caller. He was a burly old man, with massive shoulders and a great head thickly covered with iron gray

He trusted no one, and this accounted for his presence in Geneva in March of the year 1903, whither he had gone to receive the report of the secret agents whom he had lately dispatched agents whom he had havely department to Paris on an errand of peculiar deli-cacy, The agents had falled in their mission, and Von Streebel was not tolerant of failure.

It was not often that the light in the old man's eyes was as gentle as now. He had sent his secret agents away and was to return to Vienna on the following day. The young man whom he now entertained in his apartments received his whole attention. He picked up the card which lay on the table and scrutinized it critically, while his eyes lighted with sudden humor. The card was a gentleman's carte de visite and hore the name John Armiwere using when I saw you in Paris. Where did you get it?" demanded the "I rather liked the sound of it, so I had the cards made," replied the young man. "Besides, it's English, and I pass readily for an Englishman. I have quite got used to it." "Which is not particularly creditable but it's probably just as well so."

"I hope you are well," said Armitage kindly.
"I am not. I am anything but well. I am an old man, and I have had no rest for twenty years."

"It is the penalty of greatness. It is Austria's good fortune that you have devoted yourself to the affairs of govdevoted yourself to the affairs of government. I have read—only today in the Contemporary Review—an admirable tribute to your sagacity in handling the Servian affair. Your work was masterly. I followed it from the beginning with deepest interest."

The soid gentleman bowed half unconsciously, for his thoughts were far away, as the vague stare in his small, shrewd eyes indicated.

"But you are here for rest. One comes to Geneva at this season for nothing else."

"What brings you here?" asked the old man, with sudden energy. "If the papers you gave me in Faris are for-papers you gave me in Paris are for-garies and you are waiting"— "Yes. Assuming that, what should I be waiting for?"

be waiting for?"

"If you are waiting for events—for events—if you expect something to happen?"

Armitage laughed at the old gentleman's earnest manner, saked if he might smoke and lighted a cigaretts.

"Waiting doesn't suit me, I thought you understood that I swas not born for the waiting list. You see, I have strong hands, and my wits are—let us say—average?"

ay—everage?"

You Stroobst clasped his own hands together sees firmly and bent toward

"Is it true"—he turned again and glanced about—"is it positively true that the Archduke Karl is dead?"
"Yes; quite true. There is absolutely no doubt of it," said Armitage, meeting the old man's eyes steadily.
"The report that he is still living somewhere in North America is persistent. We hear it frequently in Vienna. I have heard it since you told me that story and gave me those papers in Paris last year."
"I sim aware of that," replied John Armitage, "but I told you the truth. He died in a Canadian lumber camp. We were in the north hunting. You we were in the north hunting. You may recall that he was fond of that sort of thing."

"Yes; I remember. There was nothing else he did so well," growled Vou

"And the packet I gave you"— The old man nodded. "That packet contained the Archduke Karl's sworn arraignment of his wife. It is of great importance in-deed to Francis, his worthless son, or supposed son, who may present him-self for coronation one of these days!" self for coronation one of these days!"
"Not with Karl appearing in all parts of the world, never quite dead, never quite alive, and his son, Frederick Augustus, inrking with him in the shadows. Who knows whether they are dead?"
"I am the only person on earth in a receiving the shadows."

position to make that clear," said John Armitage. "Then you should give me the docu-"No. I prefer to keep them. I assure you that I have sworn proof of the death of the Archduke Karl and of his son, Frederick Augustus. Those papers are in a box in the Bronx Loan and Trust company in New York

"I should have them! I must have them? thundered the old man.

"In due season, but not just now.
In fact, I have regretted parting with that document I gave you in Paris. It is safer in America than in Vienna. If you please, I should like to have it again, sir." The palsy in the old man's hands had acreased, and he strove to control his agitation, but fear had never been reckoned among his weaknesses, and he turned stormily upon Armitage. "That packet is lost, I tell you!" he blurted, as though it were something that he had frequently explained be-fore. "It was stolen from under my very nose only a month ago! That's what I'm here for. My agents are after the thief, and I came to Geneva to meet them, to find out why they have not caught him. Do you imagine that I travel for pleasure at my age, Mr. John Armitage?" "The packet has been stolen?" of served Armitage calmly. "Whom do you suspect of taking it?" The old man leaned upon the table "That amiable Francis"-

"The suggestion is not dismaying. Francis would not know an opportuni-ty if it offered." "But his mother-she is the devil! blurted the old man.
"Pray drop that," said Armitage in a tone that caused the old man to look at him with a new scrutiny. "I want the paper back for the very reason tha it contains that awful indictment of her have been uncomfortable ever sinc I gave it to you, and I came to ask you for it that I might keep it safe is my own hands. But the document is lost. Am I to understand that Francis "Not yet. But Rambaud has it, and Rambaud and Francis are as thick as

"I don't know Rambaud. The nam "He has a dozen names-one for en ery capital. He even operated in Wash-ington, I have heard. He's a blackmail-er who aims high—a broker in secrets, a scandal peddler. He's a bad lot, I tell you. I've had my best men after him, and they've just been here to report another failure. If you have nothing better to do"— began the old man. "Yes, that packet must be recovered," answered Armitage. "If your agents have failed at the job it may be worth my while to look for it. His quiet acceptance of the situation irritated the minister.

"You entertain me, John Armitage. You speak of that packet as though it were a pound of tea. Francis and his friends, Winkelried and Rambaud, are not chasers of firefiles, I would have you know. If the archduke and his on are dead, then a few more deaths and Francis would rule the empire. Karl was a genius; therefore he could not be king. He threw away about 500 years of work that had been done for him by other people, and he ca-joled you into sharing his exile. You threw away your life for him. Bahl But you seem sane enough!" The prime minister concluded with his rough bur, and Armitage laughed

"Why the devil don't you go to Vienna and set yourself up like a gentle-man?" demanded the premier. "Like a gentleman?" repeated Armitage. "It is too late. I should die in Vienna in a week. Moreover, I am dead, and it is well when one has attained that beatific advantage to stay guard," declared the old man. "I wish to God he would form the dying habit, so that I might have a few years in peace, but he is forever turning up in some mischief. And what can you do about it? Can we kick him out of the suppose he could go to Budapest i morrow and make things interesti for us if he pleased? He's as full treason as he can stick, I tell you." Armitage nodded and smiled.

"I dare say," he said in English, and when the old statesman glared at him
he said in German, "No doubt you are peaking the truth.'

If so it was indeed a shining example for a prohibition community, wherein it is elaimed that all avenues of ingress for intoxicating liquor had been tightly closed and that all provisions of the prohibitory laws are strictly and impartially enforced, that was afforded the passengers of a car from South Portland last night when Officers DeCosts and Smith brought a man bare of every shred of clothing to his waist from High street, South Portland, to the police station. family save at lengthy intervals, with all the consequent increased cost and in-convenience. Speaking of the alarming increase of automobile accidents in the summer months, due to the large number of motor tourists at that time on the roads, Secretary of State Mitchell May, of New York, has made an appeal for a more general realization of the gravity of the problem of safe road travel, and a general effort to investigate all accidents and determine their causes, with a view to adopting the best possible preventive measures.

BIG PRICE FOR PLAYER. BIG PRICE FOR PLAYER.
MILWAUKER, Wis "July 15.—After persistent denials that outfielder Chappelle, had been sold to the Chicago American League team, the Milwaukee management has confirmed the reports of the sale, and announced that Chappelle had brought $15,000 cash, in addition to outfielder Beall and a catcher yet to be chosen. Outfielder Beall is valued at about $7,000 by the Milwaukee management.

Beal is valued at about $7,000 by the Miraukee management.

The catcher who will ome as the final portion of the price has not yet been agreed upon, the specification being that Milwaukee can have a eatcher when needed, and that he must be fully acceptable to the Milwaukee club.

This would make the price of Chappelle equivalent to about $35,000, the highest price ever paid for a single ball player.

HOME RULE WILL BE PASSED Before the general elections next

LONDON, July 17.—That the Government intends to let the country have a final word to say on the question of Home Rule for Ireland was intimated during the debate in the Hones of Lords yesterday by Baron Ashby, St. Ledgers, whe hold a minor post in the Government.

After Lord Lanadowne's declaration that the Upper House would not consider the bill tefore a general election is held, Lord Ashby, St. Ledgers, said that there would be no general election before 1914, by which time the Home Rule bill is expected to be passed by the Commons for a third time and signed by the King, but that there would be a general election after the Irish Farliament is sotually established, the Liberal Government, if it can, retaining office to pass the bill by May. It then, under the terms of the Parliament Act, receives the Royal assent without being again submitted to the Lords. If, after a general election, the Liberals are returned to power, the Government will expect the Lords to accept the postion, providing for a Parliament in Dublin, but if the Unionists are successful 4k will be for them to repeal the law or do what seems best in the circumstances.

MAYOR BLIGH ELECTED President of the Canadian Muni cipalities Association Saskatoon, Sask., July 17.—The Canadian Municipalities convention will be held in Sherbrooke, Que., in 1914. Officers for the year elected are:

President—F. P. Bligh, Mayor of Halifax.
First Vice-President—C. M. R. Graham,
Mayor of London, Oat.
Second Vice-President—F. H. Herbert, Sherbrooke, Que. herbrooke, Que.
Third Vice-President-F. E. Harrison dayor of Saskatoon. Mayor of Saskatoon. Hon. Secretary-Treasurer—W. D. Light-nall, K. C., ex-Mayor of Westmount, Que.

The greater part of the evening session was taken up with discussion of minor subjects such as sewerage and pavements. Many delegates complained that important subjects on the programme were not dealt with. They held that they were sent here by their city councils to secure information regarding city improvements and that very little of any value had been forthcoming. Secretary Lighthall declared this had not been because the executive had been medice to secure leaders in civic matters but without avail. The convention is practically closed.

MYSTERIOUS STORIES Of an attempt to kill young

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, July 17.—Mysterious stories of an attempt to kill ten-year old Crown-Prince Olaf have caused a great commotion. An armed man was found hiding a week ago in the gardens where little Olaf plays. The man was arrested, but the fact was hushed up. It is reported that when the Queen heard of it she was prostrated with anxiety and sobbed for hours, repeatedly saying that the Royal family must leave the country and that a bill now before the Starthing virtually puts a premium on Olafa head. That bill provides that if the King and Queen die without a male heir, Norway shall become a republic. a republic.

The anti-monarch agitation is making great beadway here and the outlook for the Royal ramily is anything but hopeful.

C. P. R. issues new order to train The St. John Globe says: Court of New Brunswick made the solemn affilmation that a woman was a "person" within the meaning of the Act. And since she was declared to be a person and entitled to all the rights and privileges that pertain to such, it is surprising how insreaching her influence has become, No man may think for a moment he can escape, but it is something calculated to make the ordinary citizan was the content of the can be content of the can be can

No man may think for a moment he can escape, but it is something calculated to make the ordinary citizen gasn to know that a great corporation like the C. P. R. has been epilsted among her willing slaves. The latest circular issued by the head office is the evidence. In this it is expressly stated that conductors and trainmen must take special care of the lady passengers and see that they get on and off the trains in safety. The reason given is the prevalence of the tight skirt among female patrons of the road. An insafette is cited where a lady getting on the train was not able to take a long enough step and fell between the care, where she would have sustained serious injury had it not been for the promptness of the train crew. And thus is Dame Fashion vindicated in spite of the south sand jeers of mere men. From thence forward let no man talk of the C. P. R. as a soulless corporation. Sir Walter Raleigh might seem rude and boorish in comparison.

Mr. Harris was of genial character and literary tastes and was well liked and highly respected. Interment will be at Charlottetown on Saturday morning.

Citizens who appreciate art out of doors should step into the Parade and see the Halifax City Crest done in flowers. The mayor's name is set between the cap and shield, this being the custom in American cities. This transformation of the ofrcu-lar bed to a shield is a decided improve-ment, and reflects much credit on the dement, and reflects much credit on the designer, Richard Power, Jr., assistant Supt. of the Public Gardens. Another piece of new work, worthy of special mention, and done by the same young man at the Public Gardens, is a Canadian ahield, giving the crests of the fourteen Provinces, surmounted by Lion and Unicorn bearers, representing the British and Canadian coats of arms. At the top is given the date of Confederation, 1807, and below the present year, 1913, with the base "Canada our Canada." Work of this sort should be an incentive to citizens to strive for finer effects in their gardens and fronts.

Mexico City, July 17.—The U. S. Ambassador, Henry Lane Wilson, left Mexico City last night over the Mexican Railway to Vera Cruz, from which port he expects to sail to-day. He will lay before the Administration at Washington the exact situation in Mexico, but that the Ambassador will make a plea for recognition, except possibly in some modified or indirect form, is open to doubt; that he will advocate intervention unless conditions during his absence grows worse is considered by those close to the Ambassador as unlikely. Many Mexicans appear to regard intervention almost as a certainty.

With respect to the campaign now proceeding throughout the country, Government reports, which are practically the touly available information here indicate that the Federals in the north are meeting with success. They have occupied some of the towns formerly held by the Carrangs rebels, but the rebels have not been captured, and are still operating: Controller O'Connor read a very lengthy report in which he held that the physician and officials were not to blame.

Controller Hoben stated that he was of the opinion that the child was not in afti condition to be discharged from the hospital when he was, and he suggested that a physician should visit the hospital every day while patients are there, and that a chart be kept and retained giving the history of the pulse, temperature, etc.

Mr. Wooten reported that he did not onsider that there had been any neglect on the part of the medical attendants or nurses.

Clarke explained the character of the buildings, and stated that the tuildings would not be occupied until there was a sewer in the street.

On motion of Commissioners Wooten and Scanlan a permit was granted.

Mrs. Patton was present at the meeting in reference to notice about the conditions at rear of Gottingen street. Controllers Hoten and O'Connor moved that the Board of Control connect the sewer with Mrs. Patton's premises, at her request. The motion carried,

An opinion was read from the City Solicitor in reference to the removal of a nuisance on some land on Longard Road owned by St. Paul's Parish, which is in the vicinity of the Incincrator,

The nuisance has been removed by the Health Board and the opinion was to the effect that under the health by-laws the owners were obliged to pay for the removal, although they had not been instrumental in placing it there.

He simply told her he had become engaged to another girl. This other girl proved to be Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, O., just across the river from this city. Although failing to understand her request, Miss Molatyre's parents gave, her permission to have her hair cut off. Then she donned a suit of her brother's clothing, visited Bridgeport and through a friend met Miss Aiken.

It was a case of love at first sight on the part of the Bridgeport girl, Miss Molatyre, who was masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover and every night found Lawrence at the Aiken home.

Last Sunday night, while Lawrence and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendelton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Spurred on by her new found sultor, Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendelton and ordered him never to see her again. She then confessed hor love for her "Lawrence."

Years in Behaif of His Pet Idea—
Is a Well-Known Journalist.

A most interesting and important movement for the benefit of the working class of every form of occupation has been going on foc over ten years in the Province of Quebec, and is now making its influence felt not only within that province but in other parts of Canada and in the United States as well. This is the movement for the establishment of co-operative credit societies which began with the founding of "La Caisse Populaire," or People's Bank, of Levis. The movement is an adaptation to Canadian conditions of one form of the credit societies which have done more than almost any other one thing to save the common people of a number of constructs and any other one thing to save the common people of a number of constructs of continental Europe from bankruptcy and despair.

The basis of credit in these institutions is the same as in well-conducted banks—personal character and an 1-1 derstanding that the money loaned shall be put to good, profitable use. The societies are absolutely co-operative in character, and to preserve that quality in its purity they are made closely and exclusively local. Each society is, in reality, a group of neighbors who know one another's character and affairs. The smallest savings—down to a five-cent piece—are accepted by the society, and loans are made of any sum down to a dollar. The borrower satisfies the society is committee on his good faith in the use of the money and his ability to repay the loan with interest, and the loan is made. So wisely has the movement been guided thus far that these co-operative institutions, are able to boast that not one dollar of principal or interest has ever been lost. Their effect in promoting habits of thrift and industr; among the people is beyond calculation.

The Levis institution, as the result of its twelve years of operation, has accumulated assets of $204,000. Its loans represent a total '$1,06,000. Public incredulity on the subject of this new system of banking was so general a this new system of banking was so general at first that it was not until the Levis bank was an assured success that others were willing to copy its plans. But now the movement is spreading with great rapidity, and especially so as economists and statesmen in America generally have noted this work in Europe and look to the Quebec exemplars of it to guide them in framing laws under which the system may be made to flourish generally on this side of the Atlantic. There are now 105 of these societies In Quebec, a number in Ontario. These societies this year will collect great sums in five and ten cent pieces, and will loan to their members probably as much as $10,000,000 for use in productive industry in small ways.

as much as $10,000,000 for use in productive industry in small ways.

The founder and prophet of this movement in America is Mr. H. Alphonse Desjardins of Quebec. Mr. Desjardins is now one of the official reporters of the House of Commons at Ottawa. He is a native of Levis and has lived there all his life, still maintaining his house there, though his duties keep him in Ottawa during the session. Beginning life as a journalist, Mr. Desjardins filled responsible positions on leading newspapers of Quebec city, of which Levis is a transfluvian suburb. For a number of years he was a colleague of the late J. Israel Tarte, recognized as one of the greatest fournalists Quebec has ever proest journalists Quebec has ever produced. In graduating from journalism into "Hansard," Mr. Desjarding has made a step which nearly all his colleagues on the official reporting staff have made. staff have made.

Over twenty years ago Mr. Desjardins took up the study of ... The result was "La Caisse Populare de Levis," an extremely small and unaggressive concern, but now flourishing, as just shown, and the parent of a great and growing brood. The "caisses" opened its doors for business on the 23rd of January, 1901. The record of the institution shows steady progress, small at first, but now going on with a good swing. cord of the institution shows steady progress, small at first, but now going on with a good swing. Mr. Desjardins was manager, and, by common consent of his associates, practically dictator in the business. His careful preliminary study had given him knowledbe of the diffigulties that were to be met and how to meet them. There has not been one serious hitch in the work of the society, and there has never been a time when Mr. Desjardins' associates were not perfectly confident that his management would prove successful. prove successful.

From the first Mr. Desjardins has served without pay of any kind, and he has resisted—even to the extent-of threatening to resign—many attempts on the part of his colleagues to make some substantial acknowledgment of his services to the society. The detail work has been placed in the hands of a paid assistant, but Mr. Destarding remains as manager with. Designations remains as manager without pay. At first, and for some years, he and his fellow-directors had to bear he and his fellow-directors had to bear individually the responsibility for the society's money and the direction of its affairs; but a few years ago a law was passed by the Quebec Legislature under which these and other cooperative societies may be incorporated, thus relieving the officers of general responsibility.

Egg Circles.

Co-operative Egg Circles have proved a great success in Ontario County, and other counties are organising on similar lines.

Is your chest "wheezy ?" Is your chest "wheezy?"
Tightness and wheezing means your trouble is deep-seated. To delay is dangerous. Inflammation must be drawn out at once. Rub the throat and chest with Nerviline, and put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster. Relief comes in an hour. The counter-irritant effect of the plaster relieves the tightness and strain, draws out the soreness, eases the pain. The penetrating qualities of Nerviline enable it to soak to the very core of the trouble, and you experience a feeling of warmth and relief that proves the danger is pact. For weak chest, sore throat and tendency to colds, the Nerviline Treatment beats all others, try it.

APARTMENTS OF A PRINCESS.

Reigns as Mistress.

With the letting down of her frocks resently Princess Mary, of England, attained that state which may be termed almost young womanhood and at the same time a still greater dignity was conferred upon her. She was given a set of apartments of her very own at Buckingham Palace. Her rooms are a charming suite and were those occupied by her aunt, Princess Victoria, in the late King Edward's time. They have been considerably altered, of course, to suit their young occupant and Mary was allowed a certain amount of liberty in the choice of colors and wall papers for her new domain. There are five rooms altogether, one of which is occupied by her governess. Then there is the princess' bedroom, which has a pretty rose-patterned wall paper, pink hangings at the windows, a white bedspread embroidered in pink roses and a pale rose-colored carpet. Out of this is the schoolroom, a nice, large, light room, which will be converted into her boudoir when she outgrows the school-girl stage. Here the walls and carpet are a particularly restful shade of green, while the furniture is covered with a chintz gay with roses. The princess' books, that fill the bookcases round the room, are bound in rose-colored leather. Prominent among these volumes are the works of Ruskin, which her majesty likes her daughter to read. Besides Ruskin, there are volumes of memoirs of famous people, biographies, history and travel and a few-very few-Five Rooms Over Which Mary Now likes her daughter to reed. Besides Ruskin, there are volumes of memoirs of famous people, biographies, history and travel and a few-very few-novels. The little princess has probably read less fiction than any other girl of her own age in England. There is hardly any time for them, for there is no much that the poor child has to know.

Near one of the windows stands the princess' desk and in it lies the diary that she has kept with the greatest regularity every day for the last five years. As she has already assisted at many ceremonies and met a great many famous folk this dary, should it ever be published, ought to be most interesting reading. A piano stands near another window and in one corner of the room are a pair of light clubs and a pair of dumb bells, with which her royal highness does an hour's light exercise every morning. This is her father's idea.

Out of this room is yet another which Princess Mary calls her "workshop." Here is a small gas stove, where she cooks cakes and other light dainties, about which her brothers chaff her mightily when they are at home, but which they never fail to devour all the same. A table stands near on which she makes her pastry.

In the furthest corner from the win-

In the furthest corner from the window is a table devoted to her photography, at which her royal highness may most often be found in her spare time. No need for dark rooms now, and Mary does all her own developing and printing.

One other room—and the one least inhabited by her royal highness—is a small drawing room, in which she entertains her friends when they come to see her, for "playing hostess" is regarded as part of her established the part of her if the same and the s

When Mr. Horne was returned for When Mr. Horne was returned for Ipswich in 1910 he enjoyed the reputation of being the only active Congregational M.P., and in this connection he tells an amusing story against himself. One of his canvassers when going the rounds came across a work man intently studying the portraits of the two candidates "Well, what do you think of them?

The workman merely shrugged his shoulders by way of reply.

"What candidate do you intend to vote for?" persisted the canvasser.

"Don't know anything about none of them," replied the elector. "But what I seen of 'em, I thank Eaven as only one can get in." one can get in."

A Graves Story. It is interesting to note that Mr. George Graves had been selected to appear at the command performance at Knowsley Hall, Lancashire, held recently during the visit of the King at knowsiey Hall, Lancashire, held recently during the visit of the King and Queen to Lord Derby.

Mr. Graves tells innumerable funny storles. One of them is about an enthusiastic wife who was boring a friend with tales of her husband's elegence.

"My husband is such a handy man-about the house," she exclaimed. "He can do anything. Only the other day he took the cuckoo clock to pieces and cleaned it and put it together again. cleaned it and put it together again.

Now it runs as well as ever."

"Really," said the bored friend, "it goes all right again?"

"Yes, indeed," was the reply. "But we're a bit worried about the cuckoo; it will persist, when it calls the hours, in putting the 'oo' before the 'cuck'."

London's Wanderers. The "homeless" population of Lon-on, according to the latest census don, according to the latest census of the county council, numbers nearly 22,000. Some time ago a scheme was started by which the police give lodging tickets to these night wanderers. This has somewhat depleted the ambankment and the streets, but the fact is noted that only about half of the people who get tickets make use of them. They clearly prefer the wandering life.
