FREEHOLDERS OF CHARLOTTE. - The meeting of the Legislature approaches apace.— For the first time since Charlotte; was a County, it must be unrepresented in the cours cis of the country-at least not represented to the extent of its legal right-you have, indeed, three representatives of your own choosing, but the fourth is imposed up in you against the will of the Electors, a majority of sixty-eight having declared that he was net the man of their choice—But it is said, the chosen candidate forteited his sea by a breach of privilege. Let this be granted. (though circumstances say the contrary) still, your rights and parliamentary usage both required, that if the seat of one of four represematives were vacated for any cause, you, and none other should have the right of che sing another to fill it; and that other could not be the min whom a majority of sixtyeight (recholders, in legal form at the poll un persons subsequently by petition, had declared against. If the imposition of a man thus rejected, were not, practically saying, you were unworthy of the elective franchise and that the house would exercise that right for you, I know not what is. That this proceeding is contrary to parliamentary usage, not remote but recent cises shew. So late, I believe, as the last session of the Imperial Parliament, Lord Teignmouth and Sir William - had been rival candidates for the representation of one of the suburban boroughs the majority of votes at the close of the Poll. On a scrutiny, brought at the instance of Lord Teignmouth, it was found that Sir William was disquilified. This case was perfectly analogous to that of Thomson and Owen: rnd had the Commons House of Parliament acted as our House of Assembly, Lord l'eignmouth must have taken the vacant seat; but the house said no, you ere not the choice of the Electors-I am, they have chosen a man disqualified by law to represent them, and you have been his daly qualified antagonist; but this does not const tute you their choice; the house wil therefore issue a writ for a new election and not impo e a man on the people whom, by their votes, they have already rejected. Here is parliamentary precedent, by which our Assembly is bound to guide itself.
