Wife of "Lefty Louie" Tells the Truth at the Becker Trial.

Declares That Police Captain Engineered Killing of Gambler Rosenthal.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
NEW YORK, May 16.—Debra "Lefty Louie" went to the death chair he made his young wife promise to tell the truth about the murder of Herman Rosenthal.
So in her widow's black yesterday she took the stand in the trial of Chas Becker and told the jury that the gunmen knew they were working for Becker when they shot down Rosenthal, and that she saw them divide the pay for the murder.
Mr. Mantion did all that any lawyer could do to blunt the effect of the story when he asked her if she had not testified in the trial of the gunmen that she hadn't heard a word of the talk between her husband and Jack Rose at the time Rose went to hire the gunmen, but she turned her blue eyes on the foreman of the jury and spoke the words: "Well, I lied to save my husband at that time."
Not the first nor the second trial has produced an episode of such dramatic intensity. Lillian Rosenthal.

No Coercion For Ulster

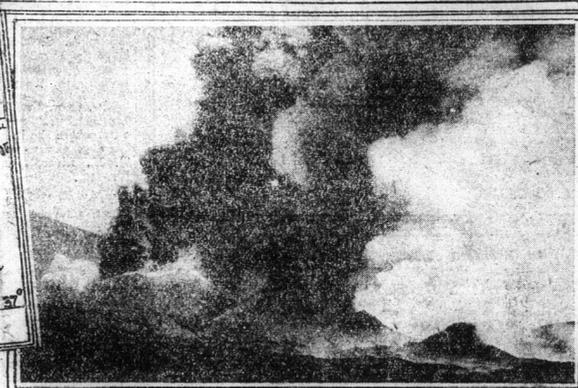

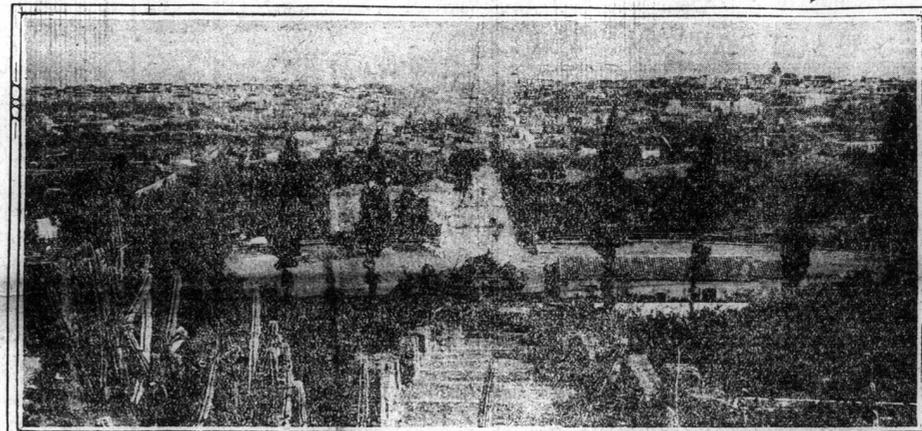

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
MONTREAL, May 16.—A London cable to the Daily Mail says the militantly radical Star has created a surprise by declaring that Ulster must be given a further option at the expiration of the six years' limit. "To every Irish Nationalist the idea of using English soldiers to subjugate Irishmen is abhorrent," says the Star. "Coercion for Ireland is dead."

Coroner Is Investigating

Killing of Ten Men in Detroit Factory Yesterday to be Probed.

DETROIT, Mich., May 16.—The coroner, assisted by several expert investigators, to-day continued his efforts to learn the origin of the explosion which caused the death of ten men and the serious injury of six others at the plant of the Mexican Crude Rubber Company in this city yesterday. Several dangerous explosives were used by the company in the manufacture of an imitation leather but what combination of circumstances led up to the disaster could only be guessed at early to-day. Every man in the room where the explosion occurred was killed instantly.
Five of the six injured were reported by physicians as almost certain to recover. The sixth, John McDonald, 26 years old, who was terribly burned and lacerated about the hips, back and arms, is in a critical condition.

HUNDREDS KILLED AND INJURED BY EARTHQUAKE AND ERUPTION OF MOUNT ETNA

The whole of the smiling countryside between Mount Etna and the Gulf of Catania, in Sicily, has been devastated by a terrible earthquake, which reduced a dozen villages to ruins and caused a number of deaths, which the first official reports estimated at 139, with 350 injured. It is believed that a greater catastrophe was prevented by the fact that the final severe shock of earthquake had been preceded by sixty others and many of the population had abandoned their houses and fled into the open country.
Railroad tracks were torn up, churches razed to the ground, houses shaken to ruin and telegraph poles overturned within a radius of several miles of Catania, at the foot of Mount Etna, which displayed a very active mood.

THE GIRL PROBLEM UNDER DISCUSSION AT THE Y.W.C.A.

Rev. Woodside Says it is Becoming a Serious One in the Cities—Annual Meeting Was Held Last Evening.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. took place in the Victoria Hall last night, when an excellent programme of speeches was pleasantly interspersed with vocal solos by Miss Hilda Hurley and Miss Marjorie Sweet. The contributions of these young ladies were greatly appreciated and lent color to the meeting.

Mr. T. H. Preston, who presided, opened the formal business of the 4-rectorate, and spoke of the work of the society, and said he thought it was not given enough publicity. In spite of the great work done in the local institution, it was considerably handicapped by lack of funds. He hoped that this handicap would soon be removed. "The women of this city will not be content until the institution has a building worthy of the ladies of Brantford," he concluded, after speaking of the advantages of the Y. W. C. A., and stating that the comparative standing of the town or city was to be judged by the composition of the Y. M. C. A. and Young Ladies Association.

Rev. Woodside was then called upon to speak, and he said that in his opinion many books were written on the boy problem, but the girl problem was so serious, and perhaps much more serious, and he congratulated the ladies of Brantford on their efforts to solve that problem. Girls were subject to much more serious problems than were young men. He commented upon the causes of these problems, and spoke of the common street walking of young girls. Every one knew the undesirability of street acquaintances and its ultimate result. It was not uplifting in any sense and calculated to destroy the tone of the minds of those girls. It blighted their future and resulted in spiritual downfall.

The habit of going to picture shows was dealt with, and this habit, with its only advantage of relaxation after the hard day's work, had many disadvantages. Friendships made there are bound to deteriorate the character. Young people who attend these shows, might after night, be they boys or girls, are not capable of doing their best at work next day. That was perhaps the extreme, but anyone with a knowledge of psychology, knew the deteriorating effect of such shows. Then there was the woman whose whole time was taken up with the question of how she was going to entertain herself. The great crisis of life is coming and we cannot prevent it, and those who spend their lives in frivolous amusement are not going to be in a position to meet that crisis. Persons whose life was filled with such things were not of the type that went to church. It was psychologically impossible. Statistics have proved that a large percentage of these girls went into the state of married life. For obvious reasons they seized the first chance to have a home of their own. We know the unfortunate circumstances of these homes and the causes of them. The girl did not understand the many problems of domestic life and troubles crept into the life of that girl. It was a serious problem. It was not the greatest question, the boy problem, no, it was the girl problem. We must have high ideals of womanhood and the higher those ideals the better and truer will be the struggle for them. It was the greatest problem of Canada, and it was presented to him every time he walked down Brantford's prime street. It tore his heart. The best and purest lives of the last century had been given up in the interests of their fellow creatures. He asked the blessing of God upon the great work done by the institution in solving this great problem.

The annual report of Mrs. Mann, the financial secretary showed a balance sheet of 27 cents after the balance sheet had been drawn up. The total expenses of the institution had been $10,196.57 and the income had been for the same period $10,196.85. This was considered very satisfactory. There was $793 yet to be collected, being promised during the whirlwind campaign when the funds of the institution had benefited by $1841.

Miss May Best, then read her annual report, which was received with applause and gave a splendid record of work accomplished.

Mr. Preston congratulated Miss Best upon the excellence of her report and called upon Miss Saunders, National Secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

She dealt extensively with the work of the Association and said when she entered it years ago, she had little idea she would be wrapped up in it to the extent that she now was. During last year the Association had found over 5,000 girls employment. Girls were benefited socially, industrially, spiritually and physically. Play was now recognized as necessary to life, and it was surprising how pleasure had fallen to the man who makes money out of it and how we have neglected it to make money. The question of the high school girls of whom there were 43,000 in Canada, was being dealt with by the Association. Music was a great thing for the uplifting the welfare of the girls, and she advocated it as she had known it was of great value. Opportunities should be given the girls to meet their young men friends in the Association building. It was the last thing desirable that girls should not care to

Griffin Coming To Brantford

An interesting fact was made known this morning, when it was stated, on good authority, that the Griffin Amusement Co. will shortly locate in this city. The site they are said to have acquired is that of the J. S. Hamilton building, 91 to 95 Dalhousie St. A big vaudeville and moving picture house will be erected, and the big road shows will also show there. As soon as the building is vacated, which will be in the course of the next month, the work of remodelling the house will be started, and it is planned to have the building ready for the opening show, which will be a road show, in about six months.

TOWNSHIP IS TO SPEND MONEY ON SIDEWALKS

Total Cost is Given at $23,084.99, and Will be Distributed.

A meeting of the Township Council took place last night, when the sole business dealt with was the consideration of cement sidewalks for 1914 in the township. The engineer to the Council, Alan Mair Jackson, presented his report on the matter, and after this had been gone into he was instructed to call for tenders on the work approved by the Township Council, which was fully represented. The report gave a full list of the improvements to sidewalks and new ones to be built, with their positions and other particulars. He estimated the life of the sidewalk proposed at about 20 years.

All the improvements recommended were approved with the exception of the sidewalk suggested for the north side of Hamilton road, running from Mohawk Park entrance to Echo Place station on the radial line. This was

SAME FIGHT BEING WAGED AS BRANTFORD IS FIGHTING

Appointment of Electrical Inspector to Suit Hydro Department at Toronto is Proving Difficult Matter.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
HAMILTON, Ont., May 16.—The city is in a peculiar position as a result of the deadlock that exists between the council and the Provincial Hydro Commission over the appointment of an assistant for K. V. Stalward, the recently appointed electrical inspector, and the outcome will be watched with interest by all the municipalities in the power union. The trouble began several weeks ago when the board of control forwarded to the commission for approval, first the name of George Crawford and the K. V. Stalward, local men. Both were rejected, but the commission later accepted Stalward, stipulating that the city should give him such necessary trained inspectors as might be necessary to carry on the work. This is where the hitch occurred. There are really no trained electrical inspectors in Hamilton, in the sense insisted upon by the commission; but there are electrical experts, and the council insists on one of them being appointed.

Although the commission has repeatedly denied it the feeling in the council is that an effort is being made to thrust the old inspectors of the underwriters on the municipalities. Brantford took the same view of it when the council there rejected Walter Mowat, who was later turned down by the Hamilton council.

While it is true that the last two men rejected by the council because they were not Hamilton men, were selected by Stafford endorsed by the controllers and ratified by the power commission, they were selected because the commission would not accept Parks' lines which probably temporarily insane. Some reports stated Parks had been "executed," and others declared his body had been buried.

The note for Huerta declaring that unless information of the fate of Parks immediately was given the American Government would consider it "an unfriendly and hostile act" followed in the wake of two other communications. The last message, drafted by President Wilson and Secretary

American Soldier Believed to Have Been Burned at the Stake.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
WASHINGTON, May 16.—While Huerta's delegates to the Niagara Falls conference were hurrying northward to the capital to-day, President Wilson and his advisers awaited an answer to the demand on Federal officials in Mexico City for news of the fate of Parks, the American soldier, who in full uniform, strayed into Huerta's lines while probably temporarily insane. Some reports stated Parks had been "executed," and others declared his body had been buried.

Queen Mary Didn't Like It

Arrangements Completed for Canadians to Join the Service.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
MONTREAL, May 16.—The London correspondent of the Daily Mail is authority for the statement that considerable coolness has arisen between Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra in consequence of the Queen Mother having had the comedian, Harry Tate, at Marlborough House on Thursday night to entertain her Danish guests.

The court is in mourning for the late Duke of Argyll, and report has it that Queen Mary and the Duchess of Argyll are most indignant at this "breach" of the mourning regulation.

EIGHT CADETS FROM CANADA FOR THE NAVY

Arrangements Completed for Canadians to Join the Service.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
OTTAWA, May 16.—Arrangements have just been made by the Dominion navy department with the British admiralty whereby not more than eight graduates of the Royal Canadian Naval College at Halifax, N. S., will be called every year into the British navy as cadets.

For some time the admiralty has not been taking any young men from the college at Halifax and as the number of the ships in the Canadian navy is very limited the prospects were not encouraging for lads who desired to go to sea.

The admiralty has written to the navy department here, stating that it will agree to take not more than eight young men from the Royal Canadian Naval College, providing of course they come up to the necessary requirements. Cadets in the British navy get very small wages so that young men thinking of going as such need to be assured of an allowance from their parents.

TILBURY GAS WELLS MAY BE "DROWNED"

Protection is Wanted Against Water Flooding Them

Will the Tilbury gas field "play out," as did the wells in the Leamington field? Mr. William H. Hammond, an expert from Pittsburgh, who was called yesterday in the action of the Tilbury Natural Gas Company against the Maple City Gas Company, stated that they would if protection was not given against the water which would flood the wells. He said, however, that this protection could be given against "drowning" the gas. This was the cause given for the failure of the Leamington wells, although the expert contended there was still gas there. The evidence in the action was finished yesterday.

EARL GREY HAS GRABBED OFF ALL THE OIL

Said to be Part of the British Naval Plans For the Future.

Millions Involved in a Big Deal That Has Just Been Put Through.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
VANCOUVER, B. C. May 15.—Particulars of a big oil merger which has just been closed by Earl Grey, as chairman of the board of directors of the British Union Company, were announced last night by Alexander Sclater, vice-president of the Union Oil Company of California on his arrival from San Francisco via Victoria, with his lordship, who is travelling incognito as plain Mr. Earle. The British oil company is one of the largest oil corporations in the world, owning some of the principal oil concessions in Mexico. Through Earl Grey this company has purchased a majority of the stock in the Union Oil Company of California, a consideration of fifteen million dollars being involved in the transaction. This gives the British oil company control of some of the largest and most important oil wells in California in addition to its already considerable holdings.

The General Petroleum Company of California has also been bought out by British interests represented by Earl Grey. Negotiations towards a big combination of forces have been in progress for some time and Earl Grey on his way across the Pacific on a world-girdling tour, visited California to look over the properties and consult with the heads of the Union Oil Company before completing the deal.

The establishment of naval oil supply stations all over the world figures in the plans of the British oil company and its subsidiary corporations now all controlled by the English concern in which many other nobles, including Baron Pirrie, head of the White Star Steamship Line, are interested. The combination of these powerful interests and the fact that oil is now being generally adopted as fuel for naval use, shows that some big developments are pending.

Earl Grey has arranged an interview with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy before leaving for England and while announcements are being made in this connection, it is believed an extension of the policy of burning oil on locomotives in the B. C. division of the railway to Ottawa portions of the system is now under consideration. Mr. Sclater of the Union Oil Company saw Sir Thomas when he was out to the coast recently. His company supplies the oil fuel depots, established by the C. P. R.

His lordship preferred not to discuss the invitation that had been extended to Canada to unite with the other overseas dominions in the proposed Aldrich building, but in reply to a query as to whether the plan would be proceeded with in the event of the Dominion not co-operating, he said that he believed the idea would be proceeded with by the other colonies in any event.

Speaking of Australia and New Zealand, Earl Grey put his views in a word "like Canada, both countries want more men and more money."

Earl Grey is accompanied by the Countess and Lady Sybil, his daughter. The ladies stayed over at Victoria but will join him in Vancouver to-night and the party will leave for the Okanagan Sunday.

LATEST PHASE OF THE HOME RULE SITUATION TODAY No Provision For Excluded Areas Until Same Have Been Defined. LONDON, May 16.—The Daily Telegraph on semi-official authority states that the Home Rule Amending Bill will be more restricted in its scope than was at first anticipated and that no provision will be made for the excluded areas in Ulster until the areas are defined, which cannot be determined until the counties exercise their option. Power is likely to be sought to appoint a commission to prepare a plan for the administration of the excluded areas and also to adjust the finances. Redmond's "Farewell to Westminster" LONDON, May 15.—In a session when newspaper men are sifting more Irish matter than anything else, it seemed appropriate that John Redmond should be the principal guest at the Parliamentary Press Gallery, which knows no political bias. In accordance with this the Irish leader abstained from treading on delicate ground, only encroaching when he suggested the probability of his membership at Westminster coming rapidly to a close. This statement was greeted with cries of "shame" and laughter. Replying to a message of loyalty, the King, through Lord Stamfordham, acknowledged the daily debt of gratitude he and his subjects owed to members of the Press Gallery.

THE CANADIAN NORTHERN
 Mr. Bennett, the Conservative member for Calgary, and formerly a C.P.R. solicitor, made a slashing attack in the Dominion House upon the proposed deal of the Borden Government with the Canadian Northern Railway. Mackenzie and Mann he described as "mendicants," and he made them the targets of a few more epithets to the same effect.

There can be no doubt that the position of affairs is undesirable, but it is equally certain that some more financial aid has to be extended if this third transcontinental line is to be completed. If not finished, that would not prove a serious blow to a large portion of the North West but would also give a set back to Canada in the financial markets of the world, especially London, which it would take years to recover. As before pointed out, much of the situation is a legacy from the Laurier Government, but there is no need to dwell upon this phase of it. The fact to be faced is that there is a crisis which apart altogether from Mackenzie and Mann, has a national aspect. Laurier admitted this when on Wednesday, during a speech in the House he said, although differing with the proposed conditions:—

"I said a moment ago, and I repeat, that this enterprise must go on. It has been conceived for the benefit of the Canadian people. We require this railway. My right honorable friend said he would not let it go into liquidation. It must not go into liquidation, but we must have control of it."
 The Borden proposals mark a distinct forward step in the matter of guarantees, as an offset to assistance, and they have the approval of independent financial papers.

Meanwhile the latest dodge of the Liberals has been to move the six months hoist. If carried that would shelve the matter and lead to far reaching consequences of serious import.

RIO DE JANEIRO
FIELD PERILS
 The farmer plants his field of corn—the kind that doesn't pop—and hopes that on some autumn morn' he'll start to shuck his crop. And shuck his crop he often does, which is exceeding queer, for blights and perils fairly buzz around it through the year. I think it strange that farmers raise the goodly crops they do, for they are scrapping all their days against a deadly crew. To plant and till will not suffice; the men must strain their frames, to kill the bugs and worms and mice, and pests with Latin names. The cut worms cut, the chinchbugs chinch, the weevil weaves its ill, and other pests come up and pinch the corn and eat their fill. And then the rainworks go on strike, and gloom the world enshrouds and up and down the burning pike the dust is blown in clouds. And if our prayers are of avail and rain comes in the night, it often brings a grist of hail that riddles all in sight. And still the farmers raise their crops and nail the shining plunk; none but the kicker stands and yawns, and what he says is bunk. If all men brooked o'er their woes and looked ahead for grief that grief would starve who gaily goes to thresh the golden sheaf.

WALT MASON.
TOWNSHIP TO SPEND
 to cost $2015 and was vetoed by the Council.
 The total cost of the proposed sidewalks will be $23,084.99, of which the township share was $1,948.61 and the share of the property owners $21,136.38. The cost of all walks north of the canal will be 15.5 cents a square foot and 62.34 per running foot of a four-foot sidewalk. On the south side of the canal the cost would be slightly less, 13.75 per square foot and 55c per running foot. He advised that the assessment should be made payable in 20 annual instalments.
 The following resolutions were passed by the Council after discussion:
 That the township engineer be instructed to report on the cost of grading the streets, which, it is probable, will be dealt with by the Council. He was also instructed to lay out the work of draining and grading the Hamilton road between Langford hotel to a point 200 yards east, and the engineer will call for tenders on concrete sidewalks mentioned in his report given on May 12.

FROM PIT BOY TO MEMBER.
 Mr. William Henry Harvey, M. P. for North-East Derbyshire, died after a short illness, at the age of sixty-two. His death, coming so quickly after that of Mr. James Haslem, deprives the Derbyshire miners of another leader and the Miners' Federation of Great Britain of one of its oldest members.
 Mr. Harvey was born at Hasland, in Derbyshire, and at an early age of ten he began work in a coal-mine. The hours for work were from six to six, and consequently in the winter he never saw daylight. He joined the Derbyshire Miners' Union at the age of seventeen, and when twenty-one he was a delegate to the county union. This led to his dismissal from work, and he was boycotted and refused employment everywhere. Afterwards he became the secretary of the union.

In co-operation with his colleague, Mr. Haslam he succeeded in making that body the strongest organization of miners in Great Britain. He took an active part in the formation of the Miners' Federation, in conjunction with Mr. Pickard, Mr. Enoch Edwards, Mr. Thomas Ashton, Mr. Cowey, and Mr. Whitehouse.

In 1907, at a bye-election, Mr. Harvey was elected for North-East Derbyshire by a majority of 729, in place of the late Mr. T. D. Bolton. When the miners voted for becoming affiliated to the Labor party Mr. Harvey became a member of that party. But he was never quite happy in his new surroundings. An old and sincere Radical, he never took kindly to a policy of wrecking the Liberal party, and at the present moment his conduct as member for Chesterfield is under the consideration of the Labor party and the Miners' Federation. He strongly supported Mr. Barnett Kenyon in his fight for Chesterfield as a Liberal-Labor man last year.

The figures for the last two elections in North-East Derbyshire were as follows:
 1910—Dec.
 Labour 7,838
 Conservative 6,088
 Majority 1,750
 1910—Jan.
 Labour 8,715
 Conservative 6,411
 Majority 2,304
 In each case Mr. Harvey was opposed by Dr. J. Court, who fought the seat unsuccessfully six times.

The Liberal and Labour parties are quite unprepared for a contest, and, to add to the difficulties, the agent, Alderman Short who has charge of the electoral machinery, is dangerously ill. The names of Mr. James Martin, president of the Derbyshire Miners' Association, and Mr. Frank Hall, financial secretary, are mentioned as likely nominees. Major Harland Bowden will be the Conservative candidate, but he also is ill.

HE WANDERED

 Bryan was sent to the Brazilian Minister in Mexico City. He was requested to take it up with Huerta, to explain the strong feelings of the Washington Government over the incident and to make vigorous representations for a definite reply.
 What course the president would pursue in the Parks' case was not indicated. It is believed it will be one of the things considered when an attempt is made to cast a balance of accounts between Huerta and the United States Government.
 As the Parks' case assumed threatening proportions, another stumbling block in the path of mediation was removed. That was the report to the British embassy from Sir Lionel Carden in Mexico City, stating John R. Stillman, the United States vice-consul, over whose safety there had been grave fears, was on his way from Saltillo to Mexico City. There it was assumed, he would be turned over to the Brazilian legation for safe conduct to the American lines at Vera Cruz. Stillman had been arrested by Federal officials, and although he was reported to have been on his way to Mexico City several days ago, nothing definite had been heard of him until late last night. The news was a material element in clearing the atmosphere for the Niagara Falls conference.

'Die Hards' in Ascendant

LONDON, May 15.—That Premier Asquith still holds the trump card to play against the Nationalists seems to be the opinion of the Irish Independent, which expresses its fear thus:—"If the two bills—the Home Rule and the Amending Bill—become law at practically the same time, it is apparent that Parliament will be called upon to consider the Amending Bill before the royal assent has been given to the main measure. Will the Government be brutal enough to tell the Nationalists that the Home Rule Bill will not be submitted for the royal assent until the Amending Bill is accepted? In this contingency they could not vote against the Government without endangering the whole Home Rule position."
 At Westminster the Irish question is simmering, pending resumption of consideration of the bill next Wednesday, when the financial resolutions will be discussed. The feeling of the Opposition has perceptibly hardened during the week. A fortnight ago there was a tendency to ask for peace at any price, whereas the "die hards" now seem in the ascendant. While a while ago a general election seemed a very hazy possibility, it is now looming up strongly in the face of strong demands from the Opposition.
 Among the Liberals the chief interest centres in the provisions of the Amending Bill, the general belief being that they are willing to provide for exclusion by county option according to Mr. Asquith's pronouncement on March 8th. Few details are known or judicial. The question given with regard to the postoffice, time limit is not regarded as vital, as most Liberals probably rely upon being able to meet the Unionists on this point.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS
 Copyright 1913 by W. G. Chapman.

"This gentleman was hit once at least," he said, "possibly thrice."
 "Twice," said Tarzan, "once in the left shoulder and again in the left side—both flesh wounds, I think." But the doctor insisted upon stretching him upon the award and tinkering with him until the wounds were cleaned and the flow of blood checked.
 One result of the duel was that they all rode back to Paris together in D'Arnot's car, the best of friends. De Coude was so relieved to have had this double assurance of his wife's loyalty that he felt no rancor at all toward D'Arnot. It is true that the latter had assumed much more of the fault than was rightly his, but if he lied a little he might be excused, for he lied in the service of a woman, and he lied like a gentleman.
 The ape-man was confined to his bed for several days. He felt that it was foolish and unnecessary, but the doctor would not take the matter so to heart that he gave in to please them, though it made him laugh to think of it.
 "It is droll," he said to D'Arnot, "to lie abed because of a pinprick! Why, when Bolgani, the king gorilla, tore me almost to pieces while I was still but a little boy, did I have a nice soft bed to lie on? No, only the damp, rotting vegetation of the jungle. Hidden beneath some friendly bush I lay for days and weeks with only Kala to nurse me—poor, faithful Kala, who kept the insects from my wounds and warned off the beasts of prey."
 "When I called for water she brought it to me in her own mouth—the only way she knew to carry it. There was no sterilized gauze, there was no antiseptic bandage—there was nothing that would not have driven our dear doctor mad to have seen. Yet I recovered—recovered to lie in bed because of a tiny scratch that one of the jungle folk would scarce realize unless it were upon the end of his nose."
 But the time was soon over and before he realized it Tarzan found himself abroad again. Several times De Coude had called and when he found that Tarzan was anxious for employment of some nature he promised to see what could be done to find a berth for him.
 It was the first day that Tarzan was permitted to go out and he received a message from De Coude requesting him to call at the count's office that afternoon.
 He found De Coude awaiting him with a very pleasant welcome and a sincere congratulation that he was once more upon his feet. Neither had ever mentioned the duel or the cause of it since that morning upon the field of honor.
 "I think that I have found just the berth for you, Mr. Tarzan," said the count, "and it is one of much trust and responsibility, which also requires considerable physical courage and prowess. I cannot imagine a man better fitted than you, my dear Mr. Tarzan, for this very position. It will necessitate travel and later it may lead to a very much better post—possibly in the diplomatic service."
 "At first, for a short time only, you will be a special agent in the service of the ministry of war. Come, I will take you to the gentleman who will be your chief."
 A half hour later Tarzan walked out of the office the possessor of the first position he had ever held. On the morrow he was to return for further instructions, though his chief had made it quite plain that Tarzan might prepare to leave Paris for an almost indefinite period, possibly on the morrow.
 And so it came that on the following day Tarzan left Paris en route for Versailles and Oran.

At Bourla the detachment defrained, and the balance of the journey was made in the saddle. As Tarzan was dicking at Bourla for a mount he caught a brief glimpse of a man in European clothes eyeing him from the doorway of a native coffee house. There had been something familiar about the face or figure of the fellow. Tarzan gave the matter no further thought.
 The march to Aumale was fatiguing to Tarzan, whose equestrian experiences hitherto had been confined to a course of riding lessons in a Parisian academy, and so it was that he quickly sought the comforts of a bed in the Hotel Grossat, while the officers and troops took up their quarters at the military post.
 Although Tarzan was called early the following morning, the company of spahis was on the march before he had finished his breakfast. He was hurrying through his meal that the soldiers might not get too far in advance of him when he glanced through the door connecting the dining room with the bar.
 To his surprise he saw Gernois standing there in conversation with the very stranger he had seen in the coffee house at Bourla the day previous. The man's back was toward him.
 As his eyes lingered on the two Gernois looked up and caught the intent expression on Tarzan's face. The stranger was talking in a low whisper at the time, but the French officer immediately interrupted him, and the two at once turned away and passed out of the range of Tarzan's vision.
 This was the first suspicious occurrence that Tarzan had ever witnessed in connection with Gernois' actions, but he was positive that the man had left the barroom solely because Gernois had caught Tarzan's eyes upon them; then there was the persistent impression of familiarity about the stranger to further augment the ape-man's belief that here at length was something which would bear watching.
 Tarzan did not overtake the column until he reached Sidi Aissa shortly after noon, where the soldiers had halted for an hour's rest. Here he found Gernois with the column, but there was no sign of the stranger.
 It was market day at Sidi Aissa, and the numberless caravans of camels coming in from the desert and the crowds of bickering Arabs in the market place filled Tarzan with a consuming desire to remain for a day that he might see many of the sons of the desert. Thus it was that the company of spahis marched out that afternoon toward Bou Sarda without him. He spent the hours until dark wandering about the market in company with a youthful Arab, one Abdul, who had been recommended to him by the innkeeper as a trustworthy servant and interpreter.
 Here Tarzan purchased a better mount than the one he had selected at Bourla, and, entering into conversation with the stately Arab to whom the animal had belonged, learned that the seller was Kadour ben Saden, sheik of a desert tribe far south of Djelfa. Through Abdul Tarzan invited his new acquaintance to dine with him. As the three were making their way through the crowds of marketers, camels, donkeys and horses that filled the market place with a confusing babel of sounds, Abdul plucked at Tarzan's sleeve.
 "Look, master, behind us!" And he turned, pointing at a figure in Arab garb which disappeared behind a camel as Tarzan turned. "He has been following us about all afternoon. He must be a bad man or he would have honest business of his own to occupy his time."

The Dancing Girl of Sidi Aissa.
TARZAN'S first mission did not bid fair to be either exciting or vastly important. There was a certain lieutenant of spahis whom the government had reason to suspect of improper relations with a great European power. This lieutenant, Gernois, who was at present stationed at Sidi ben Abbas, had recently been attached to the general military staff, where certain information of great military value had come into his possession in the ordinary routine of his duties. It was this information which the government suspected the great power was bartering for with the officer. And so it was that Tarzan had come to Algeria in the guise of an American hunter and traveler to keep a close eye upon Lieutenant Gernois. At Sidi ben Abbas he presented his letters of introduction to both civil and military authorities—letters which gave no clue to the real significance of his mission.
 Tarzan possessed a sufficient command of English to enable him to pass among Arabs and Frenchmen as an American, and that was all that was required of it. He met Gernois, whom he found to be a taciturn, dyspeptic looking man of about forty, having little or no social intercourse with his fellows.
 For a month nothing of moment occurred. Tarzan was beginning to hope that, after all, the rumor about Gernois might have been false when suddenly the latter was ordered to Bou Sarda, in the Petit Sahara, far to the south.

SATURDAY, MAY SIXTEENTH
 Frank Stillman Barnard, elder brother of G. H. Barnard, M.P. for Victoria, B.C., and himself an ex-member of the House of Commons, was born fifty-eight years ago in Toronto. Shortly after his birth his father moved to the coast, where he established a stage line between Yale and Barkerville. F. S. Barnard was sent east for his education and on his return took an interest in the express and transportation business. He succeeded his father in 1888 as M.P. for Yale-Cariboo and sat until 1896 for that constituency. He is one of the chief promoters of the B. C. At The World's Exposition Held at Ghent, Belgium, 1913

One of the Finest Exhibits in the "Textile Class" ever shown was that of "FINE LINENS"---by the celebrated firm of John S. Brown & Sons, Limited of Belfast, Ireland.

Last Autumn the management arranged with us to take that portion of the Exhibit allotted to Western Ontario in time for the early showing and trade of Spring 1914.

Many of the articles are of a higher class than are usually kept for Canadian trade, but as the whole collection is put on for Display and Sale, our instructions are in the case of the highest class exhibits, to SELL them after they have been seen and admired---even if in doing so some slight loss is sustained.

The goods will all be shown simultaneously. The highest class specimens when "sold" will be so marked and will be delivered on the evening of the third day of the Exhibition; orders as well, will be taken from the samples, and where materials or monograms are desired, will be delivered as soon as they can be brought out from Ireland.

This Exposition should by no means be missed as no such Exhibit has ever been made in Ontario. We append an approximate list which will all be on view on Tuesday morning, May 19th, at 10 o'clock.

A Budget of News For Those Interested in Labor

Gleaned From the Exchanges and Other Sources

The Housing Problem

The Same as in Other Cities Where the Land Shark Holds Sway.

One can imagine how in a city like Toronto or Hamilton, with their rapid growth in area and population, there may be some excuse (under existing circumstances) for a housing problem in so far as the working population is concerned, but that it should be in evidence in a city of the size of Woodstock should certainly be cause for criticism.

In this little city in the county of Oxford there should be no scarcity of land, and in the large industries of which quite a number are located there, the rate of wages is not to be compared with the scale in operation in the larger industrial centres. In other words, with cheaper farm produce, cheaper land, and no necessity for journeying long distances by car to and from work, with its attendant expense, the workers should be in a better position to acquire and own their own homes, even with a smaller wage rate, than in a city like Toronto where the majority of workmen must reside miles away from the workshops and factories in which they are employed. However, advice is to the effect that the housing problem in Woodstock has become so serious that local business men shall take action on lines followed in other cities and form a syndicate for the erection of suitable workmen's dwellings. It seems that many of the men employed in local factories cannot secure proper accommodation, and some of them are housed under the most unsanitary conditions.

It may be said, however, that this housing problem is a live one not only in Woodstock, but in every other small city in the province. Irrespective of the size of the place affected, the land shark and speculator is getting in his work.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago men who only earned a dollar a day not only managed to live but buy houses and gradually pay out their mortgages. To-day this is a clear impossibility. Upon the wages paid in Woodstock, Brantford, London, Hamilton and Toronto the worker has not the same chance to own a home as he had upon a wage rate of one dollar per day twenty-five or thirty years ago.

In the smaller towns by working at nights in the garden after the day's toil in the factory is over, an industrious artisan or laborer may dispense with the cost of buying vegetables that is incumbent upon the workers in the large cities. He will save care every day and his rent will be lower, but his wages will be lower also, and in the factory he will probably work at least an hour longer than where the crafts are strongly organized. Where the land is the prey of private or corporation speculators, the dwellers have to pay the shot and the enormous increase in the value of land must be met by somebody. The speculators make thousands of dollars by merely holding on to land; the worker who buys that land upon which to build a house has got to pay the price of accumulated profit. What is necessary for relief is a system of land taxation that will entirely eliminate the speculator. Under a proper system of land taxation there would be no necessity for housing companies, for there would clearly be no housing problems. Woodstock, like other smaller and larger municipalities, is simply up against an unnatural and unnecessary evil that might easily be abolished if the workers would give more time to a study of social problems. There is a remedy, but it is not to be found in business men getting up philanthropic housing schemes, some of which are of practically little benefit. It's a question that the workers themselves should study out. In other words it's a question of political economy that can be solved.

The Social System

No intelligent individual who has studied conditions as they exist to-day can come to any other conclusion than that society is on the eve of mighty changes. All the signs of the times point to the fact that the present social system is rapidly falling into decay, and that its final dissolution cannot be much longer delayed.

Indeed, this is so plainly and universally recognized that men and women the wide world over readily acknowledge its truth. Any system under which it is possible for the military to shoot down defenceless women and children, and burn others alive, as was the case so recently in Colorado, cannot be defended, and it is not necessary to go outside of Canada to find illustrations of the breakdown of the present social system that places property and the dollar before character and human life. The outrages that have been perpetrated upon the miners of Vancouver Island are as equally indefensible as the murder of the innocents in Colorado.

In every town and city in Canada during the late winter, unemployment has been rife. Many thousands of unemployed have been in evidence, not men alone, but women also, and charitable institutions and big daily papers have felt constrained to raise funds to provide Christmas cheer for the deserving poor.

At the present time there are thousands in this Dominion who are willing to work, and cannot find it, and they are menaced by the influx of thousands from the countries of Europe, who are fleeing, many of them, from even worse conditions.

Working Class Solidity

All over the civilized world the working class has begun to realize that the hope of the future lies in the political predominance of the industrial masses.

To be industrially free labor must capture the powers of the state and control the armies and the navies and the legislatures of the world.

And this work goes steadily on apace. Labor is rapidly rising to political prominence, and was never before so conscious of its inherent strength, or recognized the necessity of working class solidarity.

The entire political situation has changed inside of the last ten years, and everywhere labor is making its influence felt at the ballot box.

The majority has the absolute and undeniable right to rule, but hitherto that majority, the workers, have been blind to their own interests.

What will the next ten years, aye, what may not the next five years, bring forth?

History is in the making, but the industrial masses will have the more to say in the future as to what shall be written on its pages.

The journeymen barbers of British Columbia will ask the provincial legislature to pass a bill providing for earlier closing of barber shops and to set a higher standard for efficiency than at present prevails, and aims also to enforce rules for the better sanitation of such places of business, and to protect the health of the journeymen and the patrons.

World of Labor

South Bend, Ind., garment workers have succeeded in reducing hours from 54 to 48 per week, with a 12 per cent increase in wages.

Furniture workers, carpet weavers and drapery hands in New South Wales are demanding a minimum wage of from 3 pounds per week to 3 pounds 45 shillings.

Easton, Pa., brewery workers are on strike against the twelve hour day and inadequate wages. They demand the ten hour standard with a wage rate running from $16 to $18 per week. Engineers $19 and $20 and firemen $16.

Organizer Arcand of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is doing good work in the interests of his organization in the vicinity of Montreal. He has just succeeded in putting in a live local with a large charter membership, at Lachine.

An immigration agent was recently fined heavily in London, England in a case brought against him by the Board of Trade for inducing seven Englishmen to emigrate to the Argentine Republic by means of misrepresentation as to existing industrial conditions.

Painters and decorators of East St. Louis, Ill., who recently struck for 60 cents per hour, have reached a compromise with the employers, who have agreed to a 2 1-2 cent advance, or 57 1-2 cents per hour for eighteen months, after which time the 60 cent rate will become operative.

Judge John Kennedy of Kansas City, has ruled that the strikers have a perfect right to picket a non-union shop if they do so in a peaceful manner. He discharged five union men who had been arrested for picketing a struck establishment. He said they were clearly within their rights in so doing.

Quite an organization campaign is on at present in Bay City, Mich. Woodworkers, electrical workers and a Bartenders' International League have all been recently instituted, and other crafts have also been looking up. Unionism is popular in this part of the state, and the workers have recognized that in unionism is their only real strength.

Union bakers in Butte, Montana, have just won a three months strike. Wages have been advanced all round. Foreman are to get $23 per week; bench hands $27.50 per week; overtime to be paid at rate of time and a half. Jobbers employed by the shift and not regular, will receive $6 a day for foremen and $5 a day for shift bench hands. Apprentices $10 per week for first year, $12 for second year, and $15 for third year.

The Rockefeller interests made a bad move when they unsuccessfully attempted to introduce the speeding-up system among their tank builders in the fields near Bakersfield, Cal. The employees, who are all highly skilled, were unorganized, but they refused to stand for the proposed new conditions, and put up a strenuous three weeks' strike, with the result that the Standard Oil gave way and the old system was restored. In the meantime the tank builders have grown wiser and do not propose to take any chances in the future and have formed an organization in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

The American Steel Trust had a total increase of about eight hundred million dollars in 1913, and a net profit of 81 million dollars. The turnover rose by 51 millions, and the net profit fit by 27 millions, although the production remained practically stationary. The selling price increased considerably, but all attempts upon the part of the workers to organize and obtain human conditions were opposed in the most brutal manner. Organized workers were discriminated against and the employees were forbidden to belong to beneficial organizations and clubs that did not pronounce against the sale of beer and wines in the club rooms.

Hon. J. F. Rutherford of New York, who will give a free lecture at the Grand on Sunday afternoon.

Lodge Notes

Royal Templars.

The Brantford Royal Templars held an "at home" on Thursday evening at their lodge rooms and a most enjoyable time was spent. Bro. Townsend presided and a programme of music and recitations was given in the first part of the evening. The Alexander quartette were fine and had to respond to an encore. Mr. Daniels also had to respond to an appeal for another song. Miss Steel gave two humorous recitations which caused roars of laughter. The second part of the evening was given over to games and eventually the party dispersed at 10.30 p.m., after having had refreshments. Everyone agreed that they had spent a most enjoyable evening.

They Cured All Of His Troubles

What Nova Scotia Farmer Says of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Just Wry John A. Campbell Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills to Everybody Who Has Kidney Disease.

HILLSDALE, N. S., May 12. (Special)—I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to everybody suffering from Kidney Disease. These are the words of Mr. John A. Campbell, a well known and highly respected farmer living near here. Mr. Campbell suffered from Kidney Disease for three months. He used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills with the result that he says emphatically, "Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of all my troubles."

It is well to note that Mr. Campbell says was cured of all his troubles. For when you cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills results is new health and vigor all over the body. The kidneys are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. When the kidneys are wrong they fail to do their work and the impurities remain in the blood, the circulation becomes clogged and the net result is lassitude and weakness all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills correct all this and give new life and energy all over the body.

Industrial Canada

Carpenters in St. Catharines, Ont., commencing on July 1st, will have their wage scale increased from 40c to 43c per hour.

New locals of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers have recently been organized in Sydney and Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia. International unionism continued its onward march in the Maritime provinces.

At the present time, so a Canadian press despatch says, there are four thousand unemployed in Fort William, Ont., and many more are seeking from other places are drifting in in the hope of finding things on the up move.

Montreal laborites will expend five thousand dollars in renovating and improving the labor headquarters. A new electric light and ventilating system will be installed and when completed the unions will have one of the most costly and comfortable meeting places to be found anywhere.

London and Ottawa have both got their eyes upon the 1915 convention of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union. It is also said that the other Canadian cities have similar ambitious views and are anxious to land this desirable plum. One thing is sure, there is only one of them due to land it, and perhaps some of the big industrial centres south of the boundary line may yet be heard from in connection therewith.

And now the co-operative movement has got a hold in Welland. The workers of the town have taken the initial steps to establish a co-operative store, and at a meeting recently held, a large number of the citizens put up their money for shares. A temporary board of managers was appointed and empowered to get busy on the proposition without any loss of time. From the enthusiasm that is being manifested it looks as though it will be a real go.

DRUGGIST WOULD NOT GET THEM

So She Ordered Them By Mail

The people of the United States appreciate GIN PILLS quite as much as do we Canadians. They have tried GIN PILLS—have found that they cure all Kidney and Bladder Troubles—and they won't be beguiled into using anything else.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

"Having taken 2 boxes of your excellent GIN PILLS, they relieved me so much that I am quite satisfied with the results. I gave an order to my druggist about three weeks ago to send me some more. Nothing has come yet and I had to borrow a box from a lady friend who was also using GIN PILLS. I have none left and am sending you $1.50 for three boxes which I would ask you to send at once as I am not quite so well when I am without GIN PILLS."

AGATHE VANESSE.

If you, who are taking GIN PILLS, have any trouble in getting them, write us direct. We will send you any quantity at the regular price of 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50 and will also arrange with a dealer in your vicinity to handle GIN PILLS so that you can always get them without inconvenience or delay.

Don't take substitutes. Nothing else is "just as good" or "just the same" as GIN PILLS—and you can't afford to risk your health and waste your money when you know that GIN PILLS will give prompt relief in all cases of Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Swollen Joints, Suppression and Incontinence of Urine, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. NOW FOR THE GREAT FORWARD MOVEMENT

It is now more than assured that the convention of the Labor Educational Association of Ontario, which convenes in St. Thomas on Monday, May 25, will exceed the expectations of the most optimistic spirits in the movement. It is not delegates, but delegations that will be in evidence in the Railroad City. One pleasing feature to note is the number of credentials that are being received from the Railroad Brotherhoods. The delegates to the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions, which convenes in the same city on the following day, May 26, will all be in attendance as representatives to the Labor Educational. At the present time there are more credentials on hand than the full total of those in attendance at last year's convention. In order to supply ample accommodation for the big turnout which is now assured, the St. Thomas committee of management have secured the big Oddfellows' Hall. It is next door to the Machinists' Hall, in which it was proposed to hold the convention, but which it was afraid might prove too small. The great forward movement which is to be planned at this convention should be an incentive for the different towns and cities in the province to be fully represented upon this occasion. Therefore, there should be the strongest efforts put forth to have everybody in line. All the men prominent in the fight for Workmen's Compensation will be on hand, as well as the most prominent Trades Unionists in Ontario. Now let every body get busy. Make Monday, May 25, a red letter day in the history of organized labor in the Province of Ontario.

Week-end Air Express to the United States Vision of Grahame-White, Famous Aviator; Work Inaccessible Doomed to Early Death

"A few months ago I was dining with a friend who, while interested in aviation, thought that the limits of the practical uses of the heavier-than-air machine had been almost reached," says Mr. Claude Grahame-White, in the Daily Graphic. "You'll never," he declared, "no matter what engine-power you have, get a greater speed out of an aeroplane than 100 miles an hour. The resistance of the air is too great." "We disagreed," I firmly believe, "I told him, 'that in under a quarter of a century there will be no part of the globe inaccessible to the aeroplane and that on journey, whatever the distance, will occupy more than eight or nine days.'" "United States Week-End Air Express" "That evening is recalled to my mind now," adds Mr. White, "because Mr. Ruyard Kipling has recently told us 'That time is near when men will receive their normal impressions of a new country suddenly and in plain not slowly and in perspective; when the most extreme distances will be brought within the compass of one week's—one hundred and sixty-eight hours—travel; when the word 'inaccessible,' as applied to any given spot on the surface of the globe will cease to have any meaning.' "I am entirely with Mr. Kipling. "In 1934, that is to say, it will be possible to leave London on Friday afternoon in a luxurious aerial Pullman, where one can eat and sleep in comfort, and reach New York the following morning. One would leave America on Sunday afternoon and in town on Monday morning, with no more inconvenience than going to Paris or Scotland for the week-end now." "Stoking Up!" "It would seem that men have lost the power of putting away the stress and strain of the bustling working day," says the Sydney Sunday Times. "The 'rush' habit has become more than a mannerism; it has reached the dignity of an obsession, and is as difficult to shake off as the drug habit, and just as pernicious in its effect upon our system. "We don't die now, we merely 'stoke up,' and in so doing light the fire of that terrible demon, Dyspepsia. Moreover, the epicure has become as rare as an omelet of great auk-eggs. Surely we are not degenerating back into the stone age, when the 'piece de resistance' was carved with a flint hatchet?" "Are We Living Too Fast?" "At what rate are we expending our life-capital? In other words, are we living too fast? and are we perpetually replenishing our losses by death?" asks the Daily News. "To furnish the answers to these questions a series of ingenious calculations for the purpose of 'capitalizing' human lives in the metropolis and arriving at an estimate of the future lifetime of the population are given in the Red Book on Public Health issued by the London County Council. The following tables estimate the probable future life of London's inhabitants:

Table with 3 columns: Sex, Mean, Total. Rows for Persons, Males, Females.

The average Life Capital of persons is put at 37.51; of males at 35.29, and of females at 38.62. The average expenditure of Life Capital in each year is 2.66 per cent. for all persons, and 2.75 for males and 2.58 for women. The average life capital increased in the ten years roughly about 2 per cent. in each instance. "Arising out of this the question is asked whether the increased 'expectation of life,' that is, the improved value of life, has been sufficient to compensate for the marked diminution of the birth rate. The improvement it is estimated, is exactly, 2 per cent.; ten years ago 132 years of life were added for every 100 lost by death; now 134 years are added." "A great many people will be sitting down to-day, after week-end visits, to write that letter of gratitude for hospitality which has come to be known as a 'Collins,' says the Times. "There are some who have a gift for writing Collinses, just as there are politicians who can enthrall an audience for an hour by telling them nothing, and journalists who can fill a column without having an idea in their heads. "But to most the writing of a Collins is the sorest of all polite duties. "The nuisance, of course, take its name from the vicar of Hunsford, and we are left to contemplate the significance of the fact that the Rev. William Collins' letter on leaving Longwith all the solemnity of gratitude which a twelve-month's abode in the family might have prompted." That is all we know. Even Jane Austen shirked the writing of a Collins." "Boys and girls, young people and older folks ought to find it no hardship, but a pleasure to express gratitude either for hospitality or gifts of service," says David Williamson, commenting on the above article.

THE RIGHT TO DIE.

MONTREAL, May 16.—A cable to the Gazette from Berlin says the question of the right to die has been brought, in Selisia. Dr. Tinnie, headmaster of a school there, killed his wife and then attempted suicide. He told the police that his wife suffered such pain from an incurable cancer that for weeks she implored him to put an end to her sufferings. At last he decided to do so and to take his own life at the same time. His wife was found dead in bed and Tinnie gravely wounded. If he recovers he will be blind, as the sight is destroyed.

FREE LECTURE

By Hon. J. F. Rutherford of the New York City Bar—Noted Lecturer at the Grand Opera House on Sunday

"FUTURE LIFE OF MEN AND NATIONS" will be the subject of Hon. J. F. Rutherford's lecture at the Grand Opera House Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. Rutherford is noted in America and Europe as a Bible lecturer of unusual ability and force. He is an active lawyer, Member of the New York City Bar. He gives his spare time to delivering lectures on Historical, Scientific and Biblical subjects, particularly relating to man, his origin, his course and his future destiny. His arguments are based upon the Bible, are clear, convincing and pleasing. Judge Rutherford declines to accept money for his Bible lectures, hence admission to the Grand Opera House will be entirely free, and no collections will be received.

It is a noticeable fact that all over the civilized world the people are awakening to the study of the Bible, particularly laymen, and all the great truths therein, are being brought to bear upon questions relating to the times in which we are living and the future welfare of mankind and the nations of earth. It is rather unusual for a lawyer to give time and thought to the Biblical side of these great questions, but Judge Rutherford holds that the Bible contains the solution for the perplexing problems of our time. After giving the subject deep and careful consideration, he is giving the public the benefit of his research and personal investigation free of charge. He has traveled extensively in the Orient, Egypt, the Holy Land and Europe, studying conditions. Public press reports are to the effect that Judge Rutherford is a powerful speaker and that his lectures are exceedingly instructive and helpful. Nearly every one is interested in the future of man, because they have some loved one who has died and gone before. The future of nations necessarily depends upon the future of men, hence closely allied are the questions.

Much interest is being shown in this coming lecture. No seats will be reserved, but those going first will have the choice seats. His Worship Mayor Spence will preside at the meeting and introduce the speaker. Some appropriate music has been arranged for the occasion. We are pleased to announce the coming of this well and favorably known lecturer to our city.

Dufferin Rifles

Latest Activities of the Regiment—Cadets Made Great Showing at Their Inspection.

Lieut.-Col. Howard will lecture next Thursday night, at 8.30, in the mess room, under the auspices of the Brantford branch of the Western Ontario Tactical Society. It is of great interest in military circles. Lieut.-Col. Ashton will occupy the chair and the subject of the address will be "My Observations and Impressions of the French and Swiss Manoeuvres." Apart from the soldier interest, the Colonel will deal generally with European life and travel and give some interesting reminiscences of his trip.

Military Notes.
Preparations are on foot for camp in the headquarters. The spring fever has brought with it a distinct movement for "clean up" and "barrack soldiering." The rifles and equipment are being subjected to a rejuvenation. They should look in first-class order on Monday next.

Camp This Year.
The camp at Niagara this year seems to be anticipated by an even greater number than ever. It promises well, and the thoroughness of the arrangements which the Colonel and staff have made will ensure no disappointment. Everything, from a tent peg to the messing, which is in the capable hands of Mr. Crumback, has been planned with a scrupulous regard for detail that augurs for everybody's enjoyment, and it will, when

GUNBOAT SMITH IS NOT LIKELY TO GET CARPENTIER IN RING AT PRICE FRENCHMAN ASKS

(By George T. Pardy.)
NEW YORK, May 16.—Jim Buckley's radiant vision of that $25,000 purse for a row between his protégé Gunboat Smith, and Georges Carpentier, the French star, has lost a whole lot of its erstwhile brilliancy.
Georges insists upon claiming $15,000 straight for his end, with an added bonus of $5,000 to cover training expenses and a lost other engagements which he asserts are his for the mere acceptance, theatrical and otherwise. Dick Burge, who scheduled the affair for his London ring aristocrat $15,000, but this new demand made Richard feel sick and at war with the world.

Hence has come about a delay on Burge's part of posting the $5,000 guarantee to bring off the match, and Buckley's declaration that unless Burge makes good in short order he will go ahead and match Smith with Langford before another London club. Jim says that another British promoter is willing to go as high for a bout between the negro and Gunboat as Burge offered for the ex-saltator and the Frenchman. Now, Gunboat's mentor may be sincere in his belief but one rather inclined to think that his exuberant imagination has led him astray, or that, to put it in cockney lingo, 'some joss' 'as been a spoofing of 'em."

Might Draw the Money.
There is a possible chance that Carpentier might draw a sufficiently large house to warrant his receiving $15,000 for his bit in London. Because Georges has whipped so many of England's scrappers, including their much-loved Bombardeur Wells, the sports look upon him as the greatest ring product of the age, and there is no doubt of his being a top attraction in the big metropolis. But they are fully aware that Langford is no longer the untamed terror he was in the bygone days, when he knocked out their favorite Gunner Moir, then heavyweight champion of England, a feat, by the way, for which Langford only received the sum of $1,700. Also they know that Gunboat Smith holds a decision over the negro, gained in a 15 round scence.
Hugh McIntosh tried the experiment of offering big purses in London for the better part of a year, with the result that his bank roll melted like butter exposed to the rays of a midday June sun, and Hugh went back to his native Australia a sadder and wiser man.

Large purses are the exception and not the rule in England.
Even Burge's offer of $25,000 for Carpentier and Smith was viewed with suspicion by those acquainted with the boxing situation on John Bull's Island. Not that they doubted his ability to furnish the funds, but it was hard to realize the usually discreet Dick taking such a gambler's plunge. And as for any-one else digging up a similar amount for the purpose of losing it on a match between Smith and Langford, why, the suggestion carries hardly enough weight to qualify straight, authenticated news.
It would naturally be imagined that with Gunboat Smith standing by right of conquest at the lead of our white heavies, and with a victory over Langford to his credit, the French promoters would have long ere this made tempting offers for a battle between Buckley's man and Carpentier, or a second meeting with Langford, to say nothing of the "large dark puss" now in Paris.

Yet the Paris matchmakers have not evinced any feverish desire to lure Smith abroad. This odd state of affairs was brought about by the fact that many American boxers and managers who visited Paris during the past six months unkindly informed the fastidious showmen of the world's gayest city that Gunboat quit cold in his fight with Carl Morris at Madison Square Garden. Now this assertion contained just enough truth to make it unpleasantly forcible.

Virtually Quit.
Smith virtually quit before the giant from Oklahoma when Morris fouted him. But opinions varied as to whether he was sufficiently hurt by the foul to warrant his very evident wish to stop fighting. One thing is certain. Up to the time Morris committed the foul he had his opponent beaten by several city blocks. Probably never before or since did the Gunboat man get such an awful mauling. Morris outweighed him by fully 40 pounds and made the most of the advantage, roughing and crowding the lighter chap in regular grizzly bear fashion. Smith couldn't tease the big fellow, although he slammed his famous right swing to Carl's jaw time and time again. Gunboat seemed to lose heart when he found he couldn't hurt the mountain of flesh opposed to him, and the referee's decision of a foul in his favor came as a welcome relief.

Yet Smith won and, according to all recognized rules, ought to be given credit for his victory. But the fact remains that the echoing swing of the anvil chorus, the resounding clang of the knocker's hammer, has injured his reputation abroad. Pierce thing into this professional jealousy, what?

Speed of Yachts in Big Races for American Cup

Discussions of the speed of yachts had ever been sailed. The Columbia contemporary notes that in the fifteen races for the American cup sailed between 1893 and 1903 and all won by the United States, eleven have been fifteen miles to windward and return, and four over equilateral angular courses, all being at thirty knots. The average elapsed time of the winning yacht has been 3 hours, 56 minutes. The fastest time was by the cutter Columbia, in 1901, which took 3 hours and 13 minutes and 18 seconds. The yachts while sailing these fifteen races were roughly 90-foot L.W.L. cutters.

It is most remarkable that none of these cutters carried a record speed for a Sandy Hook course for an America's cup race. No less than forty-two years ago, in 1871, the schooner Columbia, beating James Ashbury's Livonia, completed the course in 3 hours, 1 minute, 33 seconds, and this was the fastest time in which the race had ever been sailed. The Columbia was a centee board schooner, 96 feet long, 17.5 feet beam, and 10 feet draft. The race sailed by Columbia was supposed to be twenty miles to windward and return, but as a fact it was only about fifteen miles each way, and turned out to be practically a reach all round, a circumstance which was the cause of much dissatisfaction at the time.

This, however, is of no moment from a scientific point of view, but the speed of old Columbia of 1871 and her opponent, the English schooner, Livonia, which completed the course in 3 hours, 6 minutes, 49 seconds—faster than any of the modern cutters—will afford some food for reflection by other readers upon the comparative speeds of the grand old vessels of bygone days and the new craft which they will describe as the useless modern machines which compete for the America's cup.

expected that as many as possible will accept the invitation.
President W. N. Andrews of the Scout Council was present to see the parade at Y.M.C.A. on Saturday last, and expressed great pleasure at their appearance.
The Headquarters Patrol of Hamilton will spend from the 23rd to the 26th in camp in Brantford and will be the guests of the local troops while here and will be entertained royally during their stay.
Word has been received from Toronto that the great two mile photo play, entitled "The making of a Scout" will be on show locally in the near future.

Mr. A. A. Macfarlan,
Scout Commissioner, Y.M.C.A.,
City:

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the Reception committee, as well as myself, I desire to express our sincere thanks and appreciation of the splendid turnout the Boy Scouts made on Saturday, May 9th last, on the occasion of the visit of H. R. H. Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada and Princess Patricia. The Boy Scouts certainly made a very fine appearance, and we would appreciate very much if you would express to the officers and members of the different patrols, the appreciation and thanks of the Reception committee for their kindness in assisting to make the reception of the Royal Party one of the best in Western Ontario.

Again thanking you on behalf of the committee I have the honor to remain,
Yours very truly,

Interesting pupils' recitals by the music students at the Conservatory of Music, take place every Monday evening before teachers, relatives and friends. The idea is to give the pupils, (some of whom are very young) courage to play when requested to do so.

It was a delightful dance Thursday evening at the Golf Club, when Mr. Reginald and Miss Sadie Scarfe entertained in honor of the bride-to-be, Miss Gertrude Scarfe and Miss Elsie Cockshutt, who looked charming, the former in white crepe and the latter in pink, and the latter in a smart gown of mauve crepe de chene. To Musgraves' enchanting strains, the dance went merrily on, with a pause at midnight, when a dainty supper was served from the table beautifully arranged with pink carnations and greenery. A pleasant feature was the number of strangers present, who included Mr. and Mrs. George Sutherland, Hamilton; Miss Marjorie Van Allen, who has returned from abroad; Mr. and Mrs. McArthur, Mr. and Mrs. Gould, Mr. Baker, Miss Greta Moffat, Calgary; Mr. Jack Hope, Toronto; Mr. Douglas Mitchell, Guelph.

A charming day for the opening of the Golf Club, with the breeze gently swaying the fresh green leafage. Nature has been very busy spinning her soft green carpet and with lavish abundance, has stretched it far and near. She treats prince and pauper alike. No reserved seats in her drawing room. Our Lady of the Sunshine is hostess, and extends a smiling welcome to all who come and go, for warmth and brightness is the key note of her cheerful nature, and she brings such a fragrant blossom world in her train, that we all hail her with joy. The devotees of the game are fit as a fiddle, ready for the season's play. The tea room is attractive; the table gay with spring blooms at which Mrs. Herbert Yates and Mrs. R. H. Reville are presiding, assisted by Mesdames H. Hewitt, G. P. Buck, B. Forsythe, E. L. Gould, W. L. Creighton, L. Harris, C. W. Aird, the Misses Van Norman and C. Jones.

A correspondent writes, asking would we define the word "rhythm." If we may state this is not a correspondence column. It is the ordered movement that runs, as it were, through all beauty. It is to be found in the wind that chases sunlight and shadows across the fields; in the ebb and flow of the sea, in all artistic expression, in the order of life itself. It has been most clearly revealed in music, which by rhythm may stir the highest emotions of men and women. Rhythm and vibration in music are the basis of life. Where there is rhythm there is order, and where rhythm is lacking there is no order.

The little town of Picton, Nova Scotia, claims with admiration Christie Macdonald, a native of that place. There were prowess a-plenty when Christie packed her round topped trunk and telescope and hied away to "Boston Town" in search of fame and fortune. "The Kirk," to which Christie belonged, was wrathful, at the thought of a member of the fold leaving home and friends, to go away alone and study for the stage. But Christie's pluck and Highland determination was not deterred by anything—not even the dictum of the Kirk, could prevent her ambitions for a career. The hall bedroom in the big city was the recipient of her joy and sorrows. And there were plenty of both. For a young girl's life is not hedged with roses, when she starts out to tramp its path. Many a night after a hard day's work, she thought of the green fields of Picton and the bright fire-side. But Christie made good. No actress in comic opera today is more popular than Christie Macdonald. Winsome and winning in manner, with a voice of unusual sweetness and a thorough knowledge of the arts and wiles of the commedienne, she has established herself as a prime favorite with stage goers everywhere. She bought Basswood Island, among the Thousand Islands. There she spends her summers, golfing and boating and motoring to her heart's content. For the past season, Miss Macdonald has been appearing with great success, in Victor Herbert's latest operetta, "Sweethearts."

When Earl and Countess Grey and Lady Evelyn Grey are in town during rate week they will be the guests of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Gibson.

Mrs. J. A. McSloy and Miss McSloy of St. Catharines are in Ottawa for the Horse Show this week. Hon. Adam and Mrs. Beck are also in the city. A few Toronto people there for the week are: Sir Henry Pellatt, Major Douglas Young, Major Kilgour, Capt. Walker, Capt. Van Straubenzie and Mr. Aemilius Jarvis.

Then there was the question of worship the Society was promulgated for the sake of worship. By worship she meant a continually looking up to God. The spirit of God was caught not taught.

The Association worship should only lead to church life as that was really the only permanent end to worship. The church should be the real spiritual home of all girls. The thing that was wanted above all in Association work was prayer, devout prayer, without which nothing can be accomplished.

An announcement by Miss Veigh with regard to the Missionary Department to be held next Thursday, concluded the business of the meeting and then a congenial half hour was spent over coffee and buns, daintily served by the young ladies of the Association and a very successful gathering came to a close.

We have called you together on this twentieth anniversary because as members of the work is yours, and we want you to have an interest in what is being done, and feel that you have a part in the association.

In this report we hope to give a concise outline of the work in the different departments, as given more fully in the reports of each month.

We will merely mention the regular meeting of the directorate, held on the first Friday of each month; the many special meetings for business, which required immediate attention; and the numerous committee meetings of the directorate and the different clubs. These, with the routine executive business, are common to every association.

We usually classify our work under the season's headings: Religious, Educational, Social, Extension, Boarding Department. And yet, no one part can be completely separated from another.

Religious.
Under the heading of religious work, we would mention especially the World's Week of Prayer for the Young Women's Christian Association. Through this we have a splendid opportunity to gain a wider knowledge of Association work, the success and the needs of other lands, as well as our own. While struggling with the problems of the local association we sometimes forget that we are but a part of a strong, worldwide force for good in the service of the Master. Meetings were arranged for each day of the week, with special speakers and music. Our contribution to the World's Penny Fund amounted to $5.00.

The "I Will Trust Club" is a religious meeting for girls, held every Saturday night. Miss Mildred Cook found it necessary on account of ill-health, to resign as president, and Mrs. D. L. Wright was elected in her place. During the year fourteen of the meetings have been in charge of outside speakers, and five have been turned into social events. On November 15th we entertained a newly organized Trust club from the Hamilton Association, and on February 7th, Dr. Margaret Patterson of Toronto, paid a return visit. Through this club a branch of the Pocket Testament League has been started, and now has a membership of one hundred. By means of an entertainment known as "The Ladies' Home Journal" the sum of $65.00, clear of expenses has been raised, with which to send delegates to the Y.W.C.A. Summer Conference in Muskoka. Mr. Jack Wilkes of Fort William, left yesterday for his home in the west.

Miss Adelaide Montizambert will entertain next Monday evening at bridge in honor of the brides-to-be, Miss Gertrude Scarfe and Miss Elsie Cockshutt.

Congratulations are many to Mr. Hilton Wilkes, who has been capped, gowned and received a medal from old McGill, which, no doubt, spells success in his future career.

The Art League of Dufferin school are making arrangements to give a garden party on the school lawn in the near future. The object is to equip an up-to-date recreation place for the children at play.

Interesting pupils' recitals by the music students at the Conservatory of Music, take place every Monday evening before teachers, relatives and friends. The idea is to give the pupils, (some of whom are very young) courage to play when requested to do so.

It was a delightful dance Thursday evening at the Golf Club, when Mr. Reginald and Miss Sadie Scarfe entertained in honor of the bride-to-be, Miss Gertrude Scarfe and Miss Elsie Cockshutt, who looked charming, the former in white crepe and the latter in pink, and the latter in a smart gown of mauve crepe de chene. To Musgraves' enchanting strains, the dance went merrily on, with a pause at midnight, when a dainty supper was served from the table beautifully arranged with pink carnations and greenery. A pleasant feature was the number of strangers present, who included Mr. and Mrs. George Sutherland, Hamilton; Miss Marjorie Van Allen, who has returned from abroad; Mr. and Mrs. McArthur, Mr. and Mrs. Gould, Mr. Baker, Miss Greta Moffat, Calgary; Mr. Jack Hope, Toronto; Mr. Douglas Mitchell, Guelph.

We are very anxious to have a summer cottage this year, where girls may find it possible to have a real rest and wholesome recreation, at the lowest possible price. Different locations are being considered, and definite announcements will be made at a later date.

GERMAN MILITARY PARTY AND INCREASED ARMAMENT

Agitation for Larger Army and Naval Forces Causes Uneasiness Over Whole Country—Drain on Taxpayer, but He Will Have to Contribute.

(Special Dispatch.) BERLIN, May 16. THE reassembly of the Reichstag has once more interested public opinion in Germany in the question of the national armaments. The threat of an early dissolution of the Assembly (which was elected early in 1912) at the behest of the powerful Junker-Conservative party, who still remember with bitterness the stand taken by the majority during the first day of the Zabern affair, hangs over the horizon.

The last four or five years have each brought their army or naval bills, but in this regard 1914 is still a blank sheet. It is true that a very cleverly worded sentence of Admiral Tirpitz's in the last session of the Naval Estimates is considered by the majority as the promise of a "speeding up" of the naval building programme, but there is nothing yet to indicate when this acceleration is to be proposed.

The Vossische Zeitung states, however, with assurance, on the authority of a "highly placed personage," that there is to be a further increase in the navy, making it twice as powerful as the fleets of France.

With regard to the question of the land forces, there have been signs innumerable of late that a large part of the conservative group would willingly see a further increase of strength on this side. The very noisy and rather reckless campaign against Russia and all things Russian, which started the diplomatists of Europe several weeks ago on account of the part which a section of the semi-official press played in it, soon subsided, but it has lately been replaced by a milder and cleverer and longer-winded campaign which stands a far better chance of bearing the desired fruit—bringing the Russian scarecrow level in size and fearfulness with the rather tattered French hobgoblin. And, utilizing the wave of feeling thus produced, the extreme militarists of the

Young Italy Among Ruins of Old Rome

This picture of His Royal Highness the Hereditary Prince Humbert of Italy was taken by his mother, Queen Helena, amid the ruins of Castel Porziano at Taranto during his recent prolonged cruise in the Mediterranean. Prince Humbert was born at Racine Castle on September 5, 1904. He has two sisters.

SIDELIGHTS ON HISTORY OF RAMPOLLA PAPERS

(Special Dispatch.) ROME, May 16. CARDINAL RAMPOLLA'S papers have produced some interesting disclosures, one of the most notable being the fact that after the famous Conclave of 1903, when he just missed being Pope, under the appearance of seclusion and disinterest in everything, the old combatant still existed and still attempted to influence the policy of the Papacy. Letters have been found addressed to him by Cardinal Lorenzelli when he was Nuncio in Paris, from which it appears that the Papal representative to the French Republic was more inclined to follow the directions of Cardinal Rampolla than those of Cardinal Merry del Val, his proper head. Mr. Lorenzelli has already received the red hat; otherwise it is doubtful if this disclosure would be a permanent bar to his promotion.

THE POPE'S AFFECTION FOR HIS SISTERS

(Special Dispatch.) ROME, May 16. IT is now more than a year since the death of the eldest sister of Pope Pius X., who, with her two younger sisters and their niece, Gilda Parolin, lived in a humble apartment in the Piazza Rusticucci, close to the vast mass of the Vatican Palace. The sisters of the Pope are characteristic and interesting figures, who, notwithstanding the exalted position of their brother, remained in the Eternal City as simple and unpretending as in their early days at Riese. Like most women of their class, they never wear hats out

BAN ON WEDDING BUREAUS

(Special Dispatch.) BRISTOL, May 16. THE Kaiser has put his foot down on officers of the active list securing wives through matrimonial agencies. Recent trials in the courts have disclosed that officers when hard up are in the habit of applying to the agencies to find them wealthy brides, in return for which the agents are paid a handsome commission from the bride's dowry. The Kaiser has in consequence issued a secret order announcing that any naval or military officer who is found to have employed a marriage broker will be at once dismissed from the service. A list of agencies against which all officers are warned is issued with the order.

HOW A GIANT GROWS

(Special Dispatch.) MADRID, May 16. KING ALFONSO took a great interest at a recent circus performance in Madrid in a French giant named Eusebio Arceau, who is aged nineteen, stands 7 feet 6 inches and weighs nearly nineteen stone. The King sent for the giant to come to the royal box. There he made the giant hold out his arm horizontally while he himself stood underneath it. "Why, by the side of you I might be a child," exclaimed King Alfonso. "If you were a Spaniard I should very willingly enroll you in my guard. I wish very much that I could do so." Queen Victoria Eugenie was much amused to see the King side by side with the giant.

Hope to Sell 5,000,000 Roses on Alexandra Day in England

Sub-Committees in Three Hundred Centres of Country Will Invaade Streets to Dispose of Queen Mother's Favorite Flowers—"Smart" Balls in Prospect.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, May 16. QUEEN ALEXANDRA DAY, which has been arranged for June 24, will be celebrated this year on an even greater scale than before. The aim is to sell 5,000,000 wild roses, which is Queen Alexandra's favorite flower. There will be sub-committees in three hundred centres throughout the United Kingdom, compared with seventy-two last year. The women who will invade the streets as sellers of the roses will be dressed in white, with white or light colored hats trimmed with wreaths of the day, their own contribution to the fund.

There were about fifteen thousand Alexandra Day women and girls in London last year. This year there will be more than twenty thousand. A feature will be an automobile floral procession in which it is anticipated that hundreds of automobiles will take part. Both the automobiles and their drivers will be covered with roses, and should provide a pretty spectacle.

The Ritz Hotel still holds pride of place as the scene of "smart" balls for the coming season. Some people thought that the new Curzon in Piccadilly would become the rage, but the builders' strike put an end to that idea for the present, at any rate, since the foundations of the prospective rival are in the same state as they were months ago. A hostess who entertains at the Ritz is certain of her guests putting in an appearance, if only for the supper, for which the hotel is famous—notably the quails served with muscatel grapes, which have served to draw many a young Guardsman and blasé worldling from a ritz hostess' dance before now, and will again.

After the dancing world, like any other, enjoys the consciousness of being at an expensively ordered function. For a ball, the Ritz charges $10 a head, and flowers extra. A hostess who has invited four hundred guests to the most fashionable of London's rendezvous will receive no change out of a check for $5,000. That is why, when one is asked to a ball at the Ritz, the invitation is invariably accepted "with pleasure."

Arrangements for the Eighty Club ball at Claridge's Hotel on May 18 are now complete. The ballroom, which was beautifully furnished with white and pink flowers, and Casanova's pictures and furniture, was sold to a Sheffield dealer and dispersed by him, and this picture, blackened by smoke and considered valueless, must have lain away, hidden and neglected for many years. The canvas still shows the effect of having suffered from the heat and smoke.

Find a Rubens in a Hotel Room

Mr. David Wigglesworth, of Burnage, Discovers Picture He Bought for $5.50 Is Masterpiece.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, May 16. ROMANTIC picture "find" has been made by a Manchester hotel keeper, Mr. David Wigglesworth, of the Farmers' Arms, Burnage, who has in his possession a large painting which is an almost exact replica of the canvas entitled "Winter," ascribed to Rubens, which hangs in Windsor Castle. The painting, the value of which, it is believed, may easily run to about $50,000, was bought by Mr. Wigglesworth about two years ago at a sale at the residence of the late Mr. Norton, of Lee Gate House, Heaton Mersey, near Manchester. It was knocked down to him for $5.50, considerably less than the value of the massive gilt frame containing it. Until recently it hung in the hotel smoking room, an object of merely curious interest.

One day a caller expressed the opinion that the dirty, dilapidated canvas was a masterpiece. Mr. Wigglesworth made inquiries. Expert opinion confirmed the caller's view, and the result of their inspection left little doubt that the work, if not an actual Rubens, revealed the master hand. It was probably begun by Rubens and finished by one of his clever pupils, and is believed to be the replica painted for King Charles I. and presented to the Marquis of Newcastle, whose manor house at Workop was partially destroyed by fire in 1761. The salving, including statuary, pictures and furniture, was sold to a Sheffield dealer and dispersed by him, and this picture, blackened by smoke and considered valueless, must have lain away, hidden and neglected for many years. The canvas still shows the effect of having suffered from the heat and smoke.

Boiling Wax Baths for Gout Are To Be Tested in London at Once

Assertion of French Physician That This Treatment Is Beneficial Is Attracting Attention in Hospitals—Must Be Unpleasant Because of Extreme Heat, Is One Opinion.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, May 16. THE hot paraffin wax bath, which has been noted French physician to be the best treatment for rheumatism and gout, is now attracting the attention of many medical men in London, particularly those who work extensively in the hospitals. Dr. Barthe de Sandfort for some time has used plasters of superheated wax on wounds and ulcers with success, and has now discovered that wax at 125 degrees Fahrenheit is equally efficacious when applied to the whole body. The nurse physicians at St. Bartholomew's Hospital told an inquirer that the paraffin wax treatment had come to their notice, and had impressed them to the extent that they were going to experiment with it at once. The confederate joins the others as a stranger and the three exchange confidences, the confederate often taking the pocketbook of his chief into the street for a few minutes and returning as a proof of his honesty. Then the dupe is asked to confide his valuables to the others, who may in turn display their honesty. In nine cases out of ten he does so—and loses them. So here are a few points for tourists to London to remember:— Don't encourage conversation with a man or woman who has dropped a pocketbook. Don't believe a story about a stranger coming into a fortune, part of which has to be given to charity, however strong the evidence may appear. Don't tell your affairs to strangers you may meet in the vicinity of the Strand, the British Museum or the Tower of London. BLACK HAND SECRETS REVEALED BY CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE

CONFESSION OF "COMITO," TOOL OF THE BLACK HAND

By
WILLIAM J. FLYNN,
Chief of the United States
Secret Service.

A SECRET Service operative was shadowing a man he suspected of being one of the Black Hand counterfeiters.

For days he had trailed this man while other operatives had watched other members of the society. The net was drawing closer about Lupo and Morello. We knew several of their lieutenants, but we were greedy for more evidence, more facts. My men were under orders to find out where the counterfeiting plant was. For reasons I have previously explained I shall not divulge the name of the operative in question.

He followed his man into New York's Grand Central Station. There the suspected counterfeiter bought a cigar and went into smoking room and remained for some time. After that he had his shoes polished. Then he walked out of the building to Sixth avenue, strolled through to Forty-fourth street, where he turned west and returned to the railroad terminal.

Every step of the way the Secret Service operative was behind him. When the counterfeiter reached the ticket office the operative was only a few feet behind him. He hurried to get in line behind the man he was following. In his hurry he jostled against a woman carrying a heavy suit case. Hastily he apologized, but the delay was just enough to keep him a few paces from the counterfeiter when he purchased a ticket.

The operative could not hear the name of the place to which the ticket was purchased, but he saw him man give a two-dollar bill to the agent and receive fifty cents in change.

He was afraid to ask the agent about the ticket. There was little possibility that the agent could be connected with the Black Hand society, but there might be half a dozen counterfeiters watching him, and if he showed any particular interest in the movements of the Black Hand they would immediately tip off their comrade and the operative would become the one who was shadowed.

For the same reason he thought it inadvisable to follow the man into the train. But one thing was established. If the man was one of the counterfeiters and was going to the place where the bogus money was being made, the plant was at a place which could be reached from New York for $1.50 railroad fare. At first I thought it was Poughkeepsie. Then I began to put two and two together and, remembering that Lupo and Morello had fled from New York to Ardenia, a little town back of Highland, N. Y., I became convinced that the counterfeiting plant must be somewhere along the west bank of the Hudson River not far from Highland.

The country a short distance back of the hills which line the river is very wild and very lonesome and would be an ideal section for the plant of the counterfeiters. Investigation of that whole district was immediately started, but an unforeseen coup made possible by one of my best men hastened the final round-up of the counterfeiters.

Because it is nothing like his real name, we will call this operative Logan.

Logan is known in the files of the Secret Service as a fearless operative. Should the Black Hand members ever so much as suspect that he was in the employ of the government he will be found in some secluded spot, his body covered with knife wounds, the mark of the Black Hand pinned to his clothing as a warning to those who would whisper the secrets of the Black Hand. The murderers might be some day apprehended, but the reason for the crime would never be known. Those of the public who gave to the incident any attention at all would set it down to a squabble between thieves and let it go at that. None would ever know that a man had died in the act of performing his duty to the state and to society—died a hero unsung.

After months of patient toil and after risking his life a score of times, Logan worked his way into the inner councils of the Black Hand society.

On one occasion a member of the society pointed out to Logan a man whom the counterfeiters called "Comito the Sheep."

"There goes the man," said the counterfeiter, "who operates the presses. He it is who actually makes the bogus money and it is time that you should know him."

Logan later met Comito and became his close friend. At the very earliest opportunity he pointed him out to me and I knew that at last the goal for which I had been striving was close at hand.

Now, I learned that Comito was living in a little flat in New York city with a woman named Caterina. He being the man that printed the notes I, of course, expected to find bundles of them in his rooms, together with letters and other evidence connecting him with Lupo, Morello and others. I went to his flat to make the arrest in person. My men searched the place from end to end. Every nook and cranny was pried into. Caterina was searched and all her belongings were gone over carefully. Not a single bogus note was found, nor were any blackmail letters discovered. I had heard that Comito was merely the dupe of the Black Handers, and that he was not at heart a criminal nor had he profited at all by the counterfeiting scheme. The lack of evidence in his apartment seemed to corroborate this.

The Sheep was well named. Instead of placing him under arrest I sat down and had a long talk with him. Not only was I convinced that Comito had been a dummy, but I soon learned that if I could get him to talk I would have a witness who could fasten guilt upon almost every man of the hand I was running to earth. This strange character was influenced to a remarkable extent by kindness.

There were tears in his eyes when I told him that neither he nor Caterina would be arrested, but in the plainest terms I stated that at the first attempt to mingle again with the Black Handers he would find himself entangled with the law.

Though they were allowed to go free the Secret Service did not for a moment relax vigilance. The girl was spirited away and put under the protection of the government and Comito himself was under my own supervision. For days he was in the Custom House in New York, never leaving the building except disguised and with me.

For days I worked over him, always treating him with the greatest kindness and striving to overcome the fear which at times got the better of him. As you shall see when I come to Comito's confession, which I shall make public for the first time since it was written for me in long hand by "The Sheep" himself, he had reason to fear the vengeance of the society for which he had worked. He knew what had happened to many a man who had whispered of the affairs of the Black Hand.

Each night I went with Comito to some Italian restaurant and dined on spaghetti with tomato sauce and onion soup until I felt inside like a Sicilian and added inches to my girth. At first Comito glanced fearfully about him and only played with his food. He knew the men with whom he had to deal and he knew their methods, but gradually he came to look upon me as the representative of a power greater than that of the Black Hand, a power for law and order, which would protect him even against the secret vengeance of the men from Corleone.

During these excursions with Comito I established the identity of many men among the counterfeiters whom I had not known before. Comito also gave me much information about the workings of the society, its methods and its activities. Closer and closer we drew the net about the leaders, as Comito furnished us with more and more information. The activities of my men showed the Black Handers that the Secret Service was learning some of their secrets. The members of the society knew that Comito had fallen into my clutches and they realized that it must be he who was telling me of their affairs. Lupo and Morello offered $2,500 for information as to where Comito was, but they never found out.

Knowing that Logan, the operative who pointed out Comito to me, was a friend of "The Sheep," Lupo and Morello thought it possible that the two might communicate. They did not suspect Logan of being a spy. Had they done so his life would have paid for it. They would have taken no chances. However, they believed that Comito might write to Logan.

One of Morello's aids procured from the Post Office a regular printed card used to notify the Postmaster of change of address. This was filled out and mailed to the Postmaster with Logan's name signed to it, asking that his mail be forwarded to No. 23 New Boverly.

Now as Logan had actually worked his way into the inner councils of the Black Hand, other operatives who did not know that he was in the employ of the government were continually trailing him. As soon as the change of address card was received at the Post Office, one of these men notified me. I asked Logan if he had filled out the card or if he had changed his place of living.

"No," he said, "I have done nothing of the kind."

He was very much surprised to hear that the card had been mailed and more astounded to learn that I knew all about it. He did not know that other Secret Service operatives suspected him of being a counterfeiter and were watching his every move.

I obtained the card and it was at once evident that the signature was not Logan's. It asked to have his mail forwarded to an address where Don Gasparo kept a drug store in which was a branch post office used frequently by the Black Hand members. Much of their mail was sent there. It did not take long for operatives to dig up Gasparo's past. He had lived for a long time in the Bronx near the tenement houses built by Morello and Lupo. From time to time he had been associated with Morello in ventures which did not make for the peace of the community. There were many reasons why he should desire to help Morello.

So we laid a counter plot to the change of address scheme. From all parts of the country I caused to be mailed letters in vari-colored envelopes addressed to Logan in the Custom House, New York city. Of course these letters were all forwarded to the branch post office in Don Gasparo's drug store, at No. 23 New Boverly, arranged in the general delivery box marked 1.

The envelopes were made large and colored so that Secret Service men could at a considerable distance, see who took them from the general delivery box. For days my men watched the place. They saw the envelopes placed in the box. They saw men they knew to be Black Handers go into the drug store and call for mail, but none took the letters written to Logan.

A strange face passing by the window; a hint dropped at some secret meeting; an unknown person seen frequently in the neighborhood; any of these would have been enough to frighten the men who otherwise would have called for and taken away Logan's mail. Some Black Handler may have been on the very point of asking for the letters. A carefree boy passing the store may have whistled shrilly. That would be enough to prevent him fulfilling his mission. Moreover it is doubtful if any man would have gone for the letters without a look-out being posted near the store. Should this lookout become the least suspicious of any person in the neighborhood, or see any one of whom he was not absolutely certain, he would manage to convey to the men inside the store a warning not to act.

But if my little plot failed so did that of the Black Handers. They never learned where Comito was.

All this time I had been gathering information from Comito, and at last in Washington, after I promised to protect him from the vengeance of the Black Hand, he wrote his confession, which will show you what the counterfeiters were doing all the time that my men were drawing the net about them. It has been said that Comito's confession was wrung from him through the so-called "third degree." This is not so. It was won through kindness. With some men this would not have been possible, but with "The Sheep" it was the only way.

Parts of the confession I will quote verbatim, but it will be necessary from time to time to digress and connect the doings of the counterfeiters with the actions of my men. It was not until I had Comito's confession complete that I arrested the members of the Lupo-Morello gang.

Comito was a native of Cananero, Calabria, a province of Southern Italy. He went to New York in the latter part of June, 1907. He had been a teacher in private and government schools and was a printer by trade. Seven years of his life were spent in Southern America, where he learned to speak Spanish very fluently. In Rio Janeiro he taught school and assisted the Italian Consul. In introducing his confession Comito wrote in his own quaint way:

"You will pardon me if in reading the story of my connection with the counterfeiters there are errors of language and periods not well expressed.

"During the latter part of 1908 and a good part of 1909 I had occasion to know many malefactors who from the beginning horrified me and after I had studied their brutal character I feared, I refrained from denouncing them to the police because I was constantly in danger of losing my life had I done so."

"This is the explanation, in a few words, of Comito's connection with the Black Hand Society. He goes on to say:

"My brother met me at the Battery and compelling my embraces with him remained a little confused. Through the dizzying crowds and traffic he took me to his home. After dinner my uncle, who is a very intelligent man and cautious, and who served the Italian government for twelve years as a non-commissioned officer in the line infantry, talked to me privately.

"Do not acquire bad friendships," he said, "be careful of works which evil men may lay for you. There exists in New York a band of malefactors who go by the name Black-Hand. Every day this band commits crimes, assassinating persons, setting fire to houses, breaking in doors, exploding bombs and kidnapping children."

"My uncle's talk I took to heart, for I was desirous only of working and did not think of badness. I was a printer and though I did not know English very well I thought to get work on an Italian newspaper. At last I obtained a position with M. Dassori and was able to send considerable money to Italy. I became a member of the Order of the Sons of Italy and the Foresters of America and in the first named society I became supreme deputy. Business troubles came and I was frequently out of work.

"At times I had little money, but I was in love with a young Italian girl, Caterina, who lived with me and who was my best friend throughout all the trials which came. We divided our money equally when times were hard and sometimes Caterina made more than I did.

"On the evening of November 5, 1908, I was at a meeting of the Sons of Italy. As was the custom, toward the end of the evening I chatted with the various members of the order. One, Don Pasquale by name, came to me, clasped my hand, and without further ceremony said, 'Professor will you take a walk with me? I have something to talk of to-night that will interest you.'

"When we were entirely alone, Pasquale said, 'I know that you seek work and that you are a good printer. I know of a position in Philadelphia and I can recommend you for it to my friend there. But it will be necessary for you to go to Philadelphia to work.'

"It makes no difference to me, so that I work," I told him.

"The next morning I was awakened by a knocking on my door. I opened it and Don Pasquale and another man entered.

"This," said Pasquale, "is Don Antonio Cecala, proprietor of a printing shop in Philadelphia."

"Cecala, you will remember was arrested with Boscardi at one time and served a term in prison for circulating counterfeit money."

To continue Comito's confession:—

"Are you a printer?" asked Cecala.

"Yes," I replied.

"Well," said Cecala, "I am the proprietor of a printing shop in Philadelphia, and I need a trustworthy man who will look after my interests while I am away on my other work, inspecting sewing machines. If we reach an agreement I hope that you will bring your wife to Philadelphia with you, for then I shall be more certain of your fidelity."

"But I shall not act as I wish, shall I? You must have other experienced men there," I said.

"They do not know their business," Cecala told me. "They cannot properly execute the work I wish you to do."

"Cecala then showed me some money order blanks, commercial papers and handbills, and I told him that such work was my specialty.

"It was agreed that Caterina should go with me to Philadelphia, and Cecala promised us that we should soon be so wealthy we would not have to work. It was not fixed in my mind just where Philadelphia was, for I had not been in America long and had remained all the time in New York. But Cecala told me we would be well taken care of during the trip, and that if I did not strike a key back to New York, when Cecala promised to pay the rent we owed on our rooms and to discharge any other debts Caterina or I had contracted, I was swept by a great wave of gratitude. Cecala even told me that we should live in the house where he carried on his business, and that there would be no rent to pay as he owned it.

"When Caterina returned from work that evening she cried with happiness over the news and seemed more joyful over my own fortune than her own. At first she did not want to go with me, however, for she said the trip would be expensive, and she wanted to remain at her work so that all my earnings would benefit me. It was not until I told her that the expenses for both of us were to be paid that she consented to go.

"With Cecala I went to a photographer's and bought cameras, plates and a tripod, and then to the printing shop in which I had worked, where Cecala said he had arranged for a press which Cecala said he needed. It was on leaving there that I met 'Don Turi' Cina, whom Cecala introduced as his godfather. Cina took my hand in his great paw and shook it so that the bones cracked, and I could have groaned with the pain of it. He was a terrible man. That I knew at the first sight of him.

"Do not watch his ordinary clothes," said Cecala to me. "He is a man of gentle manners."

"Late in the afternoon Cecala, Cina, Don Pasquale and a man named Sylvestre rushed into our rooms and began putting labels on the furniture, which we had packed for shipping. All the time Cecala kept me busy with some papers and Caterina was so occupied with wrapping up some of the smaller things that neither of us noticed what was printed on the labels.

"Just as they were carrying the furniture from the house my eye caught one of the tags. On it was printed:—

"A Cina, Highland."

"Suspicious, I turned upon Cecala. 'Do not go to Philadelphia,' I cried.

"A—ha—ha," laughed Cecala, and his eyes shot black, wicked fire. 'We go to Philadelphia, but the house is really outside the city. This is the place where the boat stops and from there we walk twenty minutes. But have no fear, you will be put to no inconvenience, for we shall hire a carriage. Do not worry about the labels. It is just as though we were sending the furniture to the Bronx, or Harlem. Would it not be all New York?'

"But do not go by rail?" I inquired.

"That would cost too much," said Cecala. "Besides we could not load the furniture on the train as we can on the boat. It will be a beautiful trip."

"We left New York that evening. When we were not more than two hours from the pier Cecala came to me and said, 'Mr. Comito, we are about to make a very poor showing.'

"Why is that?" I asked.

"Because I find I have not money enough to pay all the fares to Philadelphia. Our friends who helped us pack the furniture are going to assist us in setting up the presses, so I should certainly pay their fare."

"I have not one penny," I told him.

"When he asked Caterina if she could lend him some money she took five dollars from her stocking and gave it to him. This was the only money we had between us."

In this way Cecala and his friends made it impossible for Comito and Caterina to escape them if they should become suspicious. Once more, according to Comito's confession:—

"Late at night Cecala awoke me and said that the boat was stopping at Highland, where we should get off. It was cold and there was snow on the ground, which made Caterina very cross and we were not at all happy."

"I am sorry that we are high tired after the trip," said Cecala. "Philadelphia is not far from here, but we will stop at the house of my other godfather for a few days until you are rested."

"We waited for half an hour on the pier and Caterina grew crosser each minute. I myself had many misgivings, yet I felt very grateful to these men and the thought of having good work and saving a little money outweighed all else.

"There was a clattering of horses' hoofs and a wagon rattled up to the pier at great speed. Cecala introduced the driver as Vincenzo Ciglio, his father-in-law, and we drove to his place, where there was a great feast ready with plenty of wine, which put Caterina in a good humor once more. My suspicions were lulled and it seemed that at last life was to flow along like a beautiful dream."

How "life flowed along" for Comito and Caterina you will see by the next article.
