THE HERALD.

FREDERICTON, APRIL 30, 1892.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Matters respecting the attitude of Newfoundland as regards Canada remain unchanged. That province seems determined to remain in bad humor with this country, and obstinately refuses to accept the olive branch held out by our people.

There are, of course, complications on account of the French having certain rights in the island that must be respected, but it is very plain that the dominion government made a mistake in trying to force a tribute from Newfoundland, and that now seeing their mistake they are trying to secure the country's favor even by granting the concession which caused the trouble.

Now that the dominion parliament is in session, it would be well should the friends of Mr. Temple urge him strongly to press on the executive the necessity of making a large grant for navigation purposes between this city and Woodstock.

As a result of the satisfactory showing of the census, Queens and Sunbury have merged into one constituency, whether for the purpose of lessening the expense by curtailing the number of members or of ensuring a seat at the next general election to a conservative.

Reports from the sections visited by W. W. Hubbard, dairy agent for district No. 2, are to the effect that all the meetings have been well attended and the people are eager for information respecting the best plans for building and equipping dairy factories.

HOT SHOT.

The Caron Charges in the Dominion Legislature. After the impeachment of Judge Elliott for misconduct in connection with the London election case in the dominion parliament on Thursday, Sir Richard Cartwright resumed the debate on the Caron charges and introduced Thompson's pretense that the charges were not specific and that the house had no right to investigate the allegation.

Every one is pleased to see the steamer Florenville on the river again. Emulating the Prussians—Our infantry school corps are endeavoring in a small way to emulate the military push of the Prussians. It will be remembered that but a short time since the Russian batteries had been floating over the Russian batteries and secure in the clouds noted the different plans for assault and defence.

CANTERBURY STATION.

April 29.—We had a very interesting lecture on co-operative dairying by W.W. Hubbard, who has been appointed by the provincial government for district No. 2. As explained by Mr. Hubbard, their first work will be to encourage the formation of dairying associations, giving information regarding the best methods of dairying, planting of corn fodder, etc.

MILLVILLE.

April 28.—We are enduring quite a lengthy term of cold, windy weather which, I should think, would be disheartening to the lumber drivers. Matters in our town, politically, are very quiet. Socially there seems to be quite a lull and the sound of the merry, merry marriage bells is getting to be quite loud and distinct.

Mr. H. Clark, one of our merchants, was compelled to assign. We are sorry for Harley, and trust that he will not be discouraged, but will try again.

Mr. W. Purvis has opened up quite a stock in the disputed premises, and seems to have his share of callers.

Mr. Van Baskirk, of Boston, Mass., has recently opened a general dry goods and grocery establishment in this place, and is prepared to supply all customers with everything in his line at city rates.

UPPER MAGAGUADAVIC.

UPPER MAGAGUADAVIC, April 28.—The death of Sandy McElwain, which occurred on the 21st inst., is sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. The funeral took place on Sunday and was largely attended. Two brothers and a sister came from Boston to be present at the funeral.

Mr. James Gartley left here on Thursday for British Columbia to join her husband, and the house she occupied by James Miller. Mrs. Gartley was accompanied by Miss Sadie Henry.

Miss Minnie B. McKinley of Kingsclear, is here teaching music. Miss McKinley has a large music class all are doing well under her efficient teaching.

On the evening of Wednesday, the 20th inst., a pie social and fancy sale was held at the residence of John McMillin. A very pleasant evening was spent, and over thirty dollars realized. The money is to aid in procuring an organ for the church.

We are glad to report that Miss Lucinda Porter, who has been in a very poor health since January, is recovering.

Mrs. William Ray and her mother have gone on a visit to Woodstock.

NASHWAUK VILLAGE.

April 25.—S. Cook, sr., made his first trip to the post office to-day after his recent illness.

M. Abernathy, who has been very ill, is reported convalescent.

Many of the Durham folks wondered at Samuel Johnson coming back from the Northwest, but they now think it is all explained, and Miss Leahy and Mrs. Rev. T. Williams tied the nuptial knot. Congratulations.

Prof. Russell has returned from visiting friends in Kingston.

Nashwaak Village Methodist Sunday school was started on the 24th inst. by J. W. Smith, superintendent; George T. Bradley, secretary and librarian; Miss T. L. Williams, Miss Sadie Hanson and Mrs. G. T. Bradley as teachers.

KINGARTH.

April 25.—McKean & Sons are painting some of the fine buildings of Kingsclear. Beattie & Co. passed through here on business, Monday.

The fine warm sun of spring has thawed out the gypsies once more and they are making their way through the country.

There was a grand candy party held at Lower Kingsclear hall on Friday, 23d, which was a success.

Miss Maud Nicholson, of Upper Kingsclear, has resigned her school on account of poor health.

Palmer and brother, of Fredericton, held their magic lantern show in the school house here last week. After the show was over there were a few tricks with cards and some darkey business. The show was a success. Try again, Charlie.

BARONY.

April 25.—John Anderson, M.P.P., paid a short visit to the city last week.

Mrs. F. I. Morrison of Fredericton, spent Sunday at her old home, the Woodland Cottage, Populock. She returned to the city this morning accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hill.

QUEENSBURY.

April 24.—Farmers are busy repairing fences and making ready for the spring campaign. A little ploughing has been done. The earth is in fine condition for the season, and this week some sowing and planting will be done.

The river, which has been steadily falling, has now begun to rise, and a few scattering new logs show our boys are doing their duty. The Florenville was gladly welcomed once more and now we can get to town with some degree of certainty.

Soon the Keswick flats will be under water, and in days gone by there used to be ferries run to accommodate the travelling public. Now they are run to accommodate the owners, and when there is any danger in earning their money, or in other words, when it is a little difficult crossing, there are many excuses and frequently a flat refusal to ferry a traveller.

Mrs. H. Burden has purchased a mansion which she has let by contract to be moved and renovated, intending to make it her future residence. She then will only lack a man to sit in the log seat.

On Monday last a dwelling house at Beal Island owned by Benjamin Ingraham, and occupied by Joseph Elliott, shoemaker, took fire and was burnt. Mr. Elliott loses quite heavily in household goods.

Abram Ingraham was burning some bushes when his fire escaped control, and aided by a high wind, got into some old dry grass and soon was a veritable prairie fire. Reaching a cedar fence it soon destroyed something over half a mile of it. G. M. Ingraham and Mrs. S. A. Long lost something over a thousand face poles.

KEWICK RIDGE.

April 28.—Sugar making has about ended and with it ends a very prosperous season for that industry. Farmers have not as yet begun their spring work, but if the weather is favorable, a start will soon be made.

Mr. Van Baskirk, of Boston, Mass., has recently opened a general dry goods and grocery establishment in this place, and is prepared to supply all customers with everything in his line at city rates.

The superior school here has at present a number of pupils from other districts in attendance. Among the number are: Misses Cliff, Miss Fannie Miller, Miss Whitehead, Miss Patterson and Messrs. Curry and Porter. These were all home to spend the Easter vacation.

A. D. Coburn, of the McGill medical department, is home for the summer.

Miss Mabel Coburn and Dow Coburn paid the city a flying visit this week. Rev. S. D. Irvine has been carrying on revival services at Springfield during the last week, and we are pleased to hear that success has crowned his efforts.

The water in the river is very low—the lowest seen here for a number of years at this season. The lumbermen are about discouraged, and if more rain does not come soon, they will hang up for the summer.

YORK MILLS.

April 28.—Messrs. Moore & Robinson have returned and were busy putting their machinery in order for resuming work in the woolen mill, when Mr. Robinson received a telegram announcing the death of his wife in Lawrence. Much sympathy is felt for him in his sudden bereavement, as he had left her in good health a week before.

Alexander Little has manufactured and pasted a large quantity of excellent paper, and having found the business profitable, intends to add to his machinery. He also has secured double the amount of paper wood, that being the kind used. He also commences operations in the saw mill this week and judging from the piles of logs along the banks, he will have a busy season.

The ice has disappeared from the stream and the disciples of Isaac Walton are busy with line and hook and are occasionally made happy by catching the spotted beauties.

Mr. Kelly has been confined to the house by a severe attack of inflammation, but is now in a fair way of recovery.

John W. Taylor is around delivering fruit trees from an Ontario nursery.

James Lester has put his custom cards in thorough repair for the busy season. He has a first class grist mill and has improved its appearance with a coat of paint.

The frost is well out of the ground and the farmers are busy preparing for planting.

KINGSLEAR.

April 28.—The river has opened and is remarkably low for the season. The shores are lined with great quantities of ice.

The boom company have their tugs at work, but find difficulty in getting the sheer booms in place, because of the lowness of the water and the ice on the shores.

The roads are remarkably good for this time of year, and the drivers are very busy. Mr. John Butcher has taken some fine lots of beef from this section lately.

Wilmot Guion has opened a store at Springhill, with Chalmers Turner in charge.

The Sabath school will reopen on 1st of May.

The reformed Baptist purpose holding a convention in the temperance hall here, commencing on Friday, the 29th inst.

Thomas Whitten has sold his farm to Samuel Hill. The price paid is said to be in the vicinity of $200.

The boys are all prepared for the grand event which takes place on Wednesday, the 27th. Many changes have been made by the groom in his residence and from the very large number of invitations issued, the knowing one may well expect anything undertaken in this place before.

ALLANDALE.

April 20.—Although the snow is gone and the ground bare yet there is not much done as yet at farming.

James Sheriff, once a resident of this place, but for a number of years past a resident of the state, is now making a visit in company with Mrs. Sheriff to his sister, Mrs. W. Simmons.

Thomas Connelly and wife spent a part of the winter in our midst, but have now returned to their home at Benton.

We are pleased to see our M. P. P. at home again in Dumfries. Did not know but that some of the fragments of that great bomb thrown by Mr. Stockton might have hit him. But it appears that the only ones hurt were Messrs. Stockton and friends.

Mrs. P. Bradley has left here and removed to Fredericton.

Geo. McDowell has hauled a house from his brother's farm and has had it placed as an ell to the old homestead.

Mr. Price of Woodstock, was manager.

Messrs. Geo. Simmons and Fred. Adams are out with their wood cutters in full blast. George is the boy that cuts it of every time.

AROUND THE WORLD.

The Week's Events in Brief—The Cream of our Exchanges.

Capt. St. Louis, for many years deputy harbor master at Montreal, died on Wednesday.

Fire on Wednesday destroyed the barn of J. S. Murchie, Calais. Two valuable horses and a cow were burned. The building was worth about $1,500 and was insured.

Rev. Thomas Todd, Centerville, Carleton county, formerly of St. Stephen, was prostrated by a partial attack of paralysis, Saturday morning, 16th inst. He is recovering.

Additional troops are en route to suppress the revolt in the state of Mato Grosso, Brazil. Five thousand infantry and artillery in all have been sent to the scene of the rebellion.

The Nova Scotia house of assembly defeated the bill abolishing tax exemptions for churches and charitable institutions in Halifax. The vote was a tie, and speaker Power gave his casting vote against the bill.

Another batch of 100 Jews sent by the Baron de Hirsch colony committee, left Montreal for the Northwest, and 300 more are expected to follow. These are all heads of families, which will follow when land has been taken up.

In the house of commons Sir Albert Rollitt's woman suffrage bill was refused a second reading by vote 152 to 172. The debate was conducted entirely without respect to party lines.

A terrible snow and wind storm commenced in Manitoba Thursday. In the western part of the province snow is over a foot deep and fears are expressed that the train service will be badly blocked.

John Godwin, one of the heaviest manufacturers in the Cordage trade, has withdrawn from the combination and proposes to run his factories to their full capacity. He thinks he can supply half the country.

Some of hon. Alexander Mackenzie's admirers are anxious to start a fund to erect a monument to his memory in Hamilton. Two subscriptions for that purpose have already been offered to the Times of that city.

It is estimated that fifty new canning factories will be opened this season between Shediac and Esquimaux. This has given a good deal of employment in making traps and boats. The demand for fishermen was never so great.

The Melbourne Standard says it is in a position to announce, without reserve, that Deering confessed to his lawyers and doctors, who examined him, that he committed the majority of the jobs in the Ripper crimes in Whitechapel district, London.

Chas. Langelier and Ernest Paquet, accused of conspiracy to defraud the province in connection with contracts for a stationery, appeared in the Quebec police court Wednesday in answer to summonses served on them. Their cases were postponed till May 3rd, as being more convenient to the crown prosecutor.

Four brothers, named Gaenoc, went out in a boat on the St. John river, near their home at Oak Point, Sunday, the 25th inst. The boat upset and one of the boys was drowned. Another attempting to swim shore was seized with cramps and went down. The drowned boys, Willie and Edgar, were 8 and 11 years old.

Fire at Dorchester on Wednesday destroyed the house and outbuildings of Capt. DeMille Buck, on the road to Dorchester Cape. Nothing was saved. The loss is placed at $2,500. There was no insurance on the buildings except on the house, on which there was $1,000 in the Western. Captain Buck is away from home.

A copy of Audubon's Birds of America was recently sold in London for £245. This is a work which is steadily rising in value, for it rarely comes into the market, and the last copy which changed hands realized £300. A copy of this work, prepared especially for Louis Philippe, adorns the legislative library at Fredericton.

When the province of New Brunswick entered confederation it was entitled to fifteen members of the house of commons. The census of 1871 gave it sixteen members. The census of 1881 takes away the one gained in 1871 and one other, reducing the total to fourteen. This is a result of misgovernment which compels people to go out of the province.

While a drain was being dug in Moncton, a few days ago, the remains of an old coffin were found. This is the second discovery of this kind within a year or two, and there is no doubt that the earliest French settlers occupied the river bank at that place as a graveyard. The coffins are of the rudest sort and must have lain in the ground upwards of a hundred, perhaps two hundred years.

The destruction of the Grand Central theatre by fire at Philadelphia, proves far more terrible in results than anticipated. Six members of the Devil's auction company lie dead beneath the fallen walls of the building. Nearly three score people are in a hospital suffering from burns. Of the men and boys in the hospital the recovery of several is doubtful—all members of the audience. Fully 50 others are being treated for minor injuries.

St. Luke's church, Woodstock, was the scene of an interesting event Wednesday evening, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Helen King, third daughter of the late Dr. King, and Charles Upton, son of Wm. Upton of that town. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Neale.

The bride, who was prettily attired in pale blue brocaded satin, was given away by her brother, Arthur King. The bridesmaids were Miss Della Drysdale, Miss Jennie King, sister of the bride, while Chas. Peabody officiated as best man.

Rev. Geo. A. Hartley, of Carleton, St. John, received a recompense for a service, a few days ago, which is quite unusual. He was asked to attend a funeral in a country village and on his return to the city was told by a friend that he had something to hand to him for his trouble. The rev. gentleman was very much surprised to receive $111.65, being a deposit of $100 and interest on it. This sum had been given by the deceased to the friend with the request that if rev. Mr. Hartley performed his funeral service he should receive the fund.

WELCOMED.—Those who have been welcomed here the present week are: Hon. Dr. Angus A. Stockton, St. John; Dr. J. W. Bridges, of Orancton; Andrew Richey, of Haverhill; Senator Blester, survivor general; F. H. Hale, Woodstock, superintendent Haggerty, McAdam; T. Burke, inspector of inland revenue, St. John; and C. H. Green, of Montreal.

GLADING THE TRACK.—Preparations are being made by the C. P. R. for grading their track between this city and the Junction. Most of the gravel will be brought across the railway bridge from some of the pits on the other side of the river. It will make considerable work for a month or so.

REMOVED FROM THE HOSPITAL.—Thomas Rutherford was removed from Victoria hospital to his home yesterday at Manners street without hope of recovery. He is a son of John Rutherford, postmaster.

POETRY.

MY OLD RAG DOLL.

Last night I searched the garret for a long forgotten book, And as I pried and peered about, down in a dusty nook...

Oh! dear forgotten childhood's joy! Oh! precious, long-lost treasure! I cannot tell why such a pain was mingled with the pleasure...

Dear relic of my childhood—of that happy, happy time When life meant play and sunshine and every joy was mine...

The old, familiar, dirty face, with features done in ink, And the little faded ribbon tied with many a childish prink...

And though I am a woman, with a woman's work and care, And though I look each morning for the silver in my hair...

SELECT STORY. BERYL BRENTANO. THE SAPPHIRE OF THE SOUTH. CHAPTER XXIII.

She smiled, and her eyes dropped; but there was strange emphasis in her words as she clasped her hands.

"God keep my lover now and forever, Mr. Dunbar, when you discover him, I have no fear that you will harm one hair in his dear head."

"If you know all you have cost me, you might understand why I will never forego my compensation. I bid my time; but I shall win. You asked me, as a special favor, to preserve and secure for you something which you held very valuable."

"I forgot to tell you that something very dreadful happened at the Lilacs last week. Judge Dent had a stroke of paralysis and died the next night."

"He tore away the paper wrapping, and held toward her the meerschaum pipe, then dropped it on the table as though it burned his fingers."

"At sight of it the sudden faintness made the girl reel, and she put her hand to her throat, as if to loosen a throttling touch."

"Her eyes filled, and in a whirling mist she seemed to see the beloved face of her father long dead, of the gay, beautiful young brother who had wrought her ruin."

"Weakness overpowered her, and sinking on her knees, she drew the pipe closer, laid it against her cheek, folded her arms over it on the table, and wept."

"What a host of mocking phantoms loomed through the portals of the Bygone—babbling of the glorious dawn when that was whitening into a radiant morning, when the day-star fell back below the horizon, and night devoured the new-born day."

"The sun had gone down behind the dense pine forest stretching beyond the prison, but the sky was a vast shifting flame of waiting red and deepest kindness."

and ask her to pray for me, that I may be patient. Now leave me, for I can bear no more."

She put aside his hand and hid her face once more. He stooped, laid his lips on the shining hair, and walked away. At the door he paused. The long corridor was very dim and gloomy, and the deep tones of the tower were ringing slowly."

CHAPTER XXIV. THE BLOSSOM OF LOVE. Each human soul is endowed with an inherent adaptability to its environment, with an innate energy which, properly directed, grapples successfully with all assailants...

Very slowly physical health and spiritual patience came back to Beryl; but by degrees she bravely lifted the stained and mutilated wreck of life, and staggered on her lonely way, where that repose which means the death of hope.

At one time death had smilingly pushed ajar the door that opened into eternal peace, and beckoned her bruised soul to follow; then, mocking her, he had closed it, and left her to renew the battle. From that double window in the second story of the prison, she watched the silver of full moons shining on the spectral white columns that crowned Elm Bluff, the fire of setting suns that blazed ruby red a Gubbion way, along the line of cements that pierced the front facade, a bristling perpetual reminder of that tragedy that cried to heaven for vengeance.

With returning health, had come to Beryl activity of those artistic instincts, which, for a time, had slumbered in the torpor of despair; and when her daily task of work had been accomplished, the prisoner leaned with folded arms on the window, and watched the world and studied every changing aspect of earth and atmosphere.

Next day she went humbly, yet shyly, down to the common work room, and took her place among the publicans, hoping that the sound of some outcast might be won to repentance. Now and then messages of sympathy reached her from the outside world, in the form of flowers, books, magazines; and two of the jurors who convicted her, sent from time to time generous contributions of dainty articles that materially promoted her comfort; while a third, whose dead child had clung to her Christmas card, sent her a regretful pang by the gift of a box containing paper, canvas, crayons, brushes, paints, and all requisite appliances for artistic work.

Sister Serena had gone on a labor of love to a distant state; and faithful Dye, hopelessly crippled by a fall from the mule which she was forcing across the bridge leading to the prison, had been permanently consigned to the wide rocking chair, beside her cabin berth at Elm Bluff.

"It was a bleak night in January, and intensely cold, when Mrs. Singleton wrapped a shawl about her head, and ran along the dark corridor to the cell, where Beryl was walking up and down to keep herself warm. Only the moonlight illumined it, as the rays fell on the bare floor, making a broad band of silver beneath the window."

"I forgot to tell you that something very dreadful happened at the Lilacs last week. Judge Dent had a stroke of paralysis and died the next night. As if that were not trouble enough to last for a while at least, then dropped it on the table as though it burned his fingers."

"At sight of it the sudden faintness made the girl reel, and she put her hand to her throat, as if to loosen a throttling touch. Her eyes filled, and in a whirling mist she seemed to see the beloved face of her father long dead, of the gay, beautiful young brother who had wrought her ruin."

"Weakness overpowered her, and sinking on her knees, she drew the pipe closer, laid it against her cheek, folded her arms over it on the table, and wept."

"What a host of mocking phantoms loomed through the portals of the Bygone—babbling of the glorious dawn when that was whitening into a radiant morning, when the day-star fell back below the horizon, and night devoured the new-born day. Memory comes, sometimes, in the guise of an angel, wearing fragrant chaplets, singing us the perfect harmonies of a hallowed past; but oftener still, as a fury, scourging with serpents; and always over her shoulder peers the pale and pitying eyes of a divine reprob."

"The sun had gone down behind the dense pine forest stretching beyond the prison, but the sky was a vast shifting flame of waiting red and deepest kindness. Ah, the unfathomable tenderness with which he bent over the only woman he ever loved; the intolerable pain of the thought that after all he might lose her. He heard the shuddering sob that broke from her overtaxed and aching heart, and despite his jealous rage he felt unmanned. When she raised her face, tears hung on her lashes."

"I will thank you, Mr. Dunbar, as long as I live, for this and the greatest kindness. If I could tell you what this precious relic represents to me, oh, if you knew! you would pity me indeed."

"Tell me. Trust me, God knows I would never betray your confidence, nor matter what it costs me."

ughly thawed; Ned is downstairs, and the children are asleep." "No, thank you; I should only feel the cold more when I came back."

"Then take my shawl and cover your ears and throat. There, you must. Good night."

She closed the door and fled down the long black passage to the bright cozy room, where her babes slumbered. Slowly Beryl resumed her walk from window to door, from bar to bar, but of the stinging cold she grew oblivious, and the blood burned in her cheeks and throbed with almost suffocating violence at her heart.

She comprehended fully the significance of the message, and dared not comfort herself with the supposition that it was prompted by a spirit of bravado.

To what quarter of the globe was he tracking the desperate culprit who had fled across the ocean, stealthily, administering that supreme and inflexible anesthetic whereby the torturing throes of human woe are surely stilled.

Very slowly physical health and spiritual patience came back to Beryl; but by degrees she bravely lifted the stained and mutilated wreck of life, and staggered on her lonely way, where that repose which means the death of hope.

At one time death had smilingly pushed ajar the door that opened into eternal peace, and beckoned her bruised soul to follow; then, mocking her, he had closed it, and left her to renew the battle. From that double window in the second story of the prison, she watched the silver of full moons shining on the spectral white columns that crowned Elm Bluff, the fire of setting suns that blazed ruby red a Gubbion way, along the line of cements that pierced the front facade, a bristling perpetual reminder of that tragedy that cried to heaven for vengeance."

With returning health, had come to Beryl activity of those artistic instincts, which, for a time, had slumbered in the torpor of despair; and when her daily task of work had been accomplished, the prisoner leaned with folded arms on the window, and watched the world and studied every changing aspect of earth and atmosphere.

Next day she went humbly, yet shyly, down to the common work room, and took her place among the publicans, hoping that the sound of some outcast might be won to repentance. Now and then messages of sympathy reached her from the outside world, in the form of flowers, books, magazines; and two of the jurors who convicted her, sent from time to time generous contributions of dainty articles that materially promoted her comfort; while a third, whose dead child had clung to her Christmas card, sent her a regretful pang by the gift of a box containing paper, canvas, crayons, brushes, paints, and all requisite appliances for artistic work."

Sister Serena had gone on a labor of love to a distant state; and faithful Dye, hopelessly crippled by a fall from the mule which she was forcing across the bridge leading to the prison, had been permanently consigned to the wide rocking chair, beside her cabin berth at Elm Bluff."

"It was a bleak night in January, and intensely cold, when Mrs. Singleton wrapped a shawl about her head, and ran along the dark corridor to the cell, where Beryl was walking up and down to keep herself warm. Only the moonlight illumined it, as the rays fell on the bare floor, making a broad band of silver beneath the window."

"I forgot to tell you that something very dreadful happened at the Lilacs last week. Judge Dent had a stroke of paralysis and died the next night. As if that were not trouble enough to last for a while at least, then dropped it on the table as though it burned his fingers."

"At sight of it the sudden faintness made the girl reel, and she put her hand to her throat, as if to loosen a throttling touch. Her eyes filled, and in a whirling mist she seemed to see the beloved face of her father long dead, of the gay, beautiful young brother who had wrought her ruin."

"Weakness overpowered her, and sinking on her knees, she drew the pipe closer, laid it against her cheek, folded her arms over it on the table, and wept."

"What a host of mocking phantoms loomed through the portals of the Bygone—babbling of the glorious dawn when that was whitening into a radiant morning, when the day-star fell back below the horizon, and night devoured the new-born day. Memory comes, sometimes, in the guise of an angel, wearing fragrant chaplets, singing us the perfect harmonies of a hallowed past; but oftener still, as a fury, scourging with serpents; and always over her shoulder peers the pale and pitying eyes of a divine reprob."

—, but might linger in New York sufficiently long for a letter to reach him; and doubtless his address could be learned at his office."

"If Mr. Dunbar will give me an opportunity of acquainting him with some facts he is anxious to discover, he shall find it unnecessary to travel to Dakota; and will thank me for saving him from the long journey he contemplates."

The sun was setting when Mr. Singleton returned from the attorney's office, and held out the note which he had been instructed to address and deposit in the mail. "It is a matter of my importance, I am sorry to tell you that this cannot reach Mr. Dunbar immediately. He goes only as far as Philadelphia, where Miss Dent's nephew meets her; then Dunbar travels right on west without stopping till he reaches Bismarck. He left instructions at his office to retain all mail matter for a couple of weeks, then forward to Washington city; as business would detain him there some days after his return from the west. Good gracious! how white your ear. Sit down. What ails you?"

She put her hand over her eyes, and tried to collect her thoughts. To suffer so long, so keenly, and yet lose the victory; could it be possible that her sacrifice would prove utterly futile?

"Mr. Singleton, you have shown me many times your friendly sympathy, and I am again forced to take your kindness. It is important that I should see or communicate with Mr. Dunbar within the next forty-eight hours. Could you induce the telegraph operator here to have a message delivered to him on the train before it reaches Washington?"

"I will certainly do my best; and to insure it I will go to the railroad station, who understands the operators, and can catch Dunbar more easily than a message from the general office. Write out your message, and I will send it by my messenger."

"Please let me see you before you go west. I promise information that will render you unwilling to make the journey to Bismarck."

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been afflicted with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower. Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure."

They were divided in opinion as to whether it was acute neuralgia of the head or rheumatic affection of the brain, but all agreed that I could never recover.
