CHAPTER XVII.

"Come questions," said Burchett. "A man knows his own business. But I'm sorry, lad. Is there anything I can do?"

Ralph shook his head again and sighed.

"Nothing. There is nothing anyone can do," he responded. "I am going to start presently. I have made a bundle of the things I must take and can carry. You'll let the rest stay until I send for them—it may be a long day, perhaps—never, I think."

Burchett nodded, and stood watching him for a moment; then he drew out his old leather purse and laid it on the table.

"Your wages," he said.

Ralph examined the contents.

"There is more than's due to me," he said.

"Take it," ejaculated Burchett, laconically. "Take it, or you'll offend me. You'll want money, wherever you're going. And I've no use for it."

There are ten sovereigns and some silver in the purse. Ralph took out five pounds, and was about to return the purse; but, changing his mind, he put the balance of the money on the table and the purse in his pocket.

"I'll keep this, if you'll let me," he said. "It will remind me of all your kindness to me—not that I shall want reminding. I shan't forget it, Mr. Burchett."

He turned away to fasten the bundle and to hide the misery in his eyes; then he looked around the room.

"There was a knife, an old friend—" he said.

"I used it to cut some tobacco this morning," said Burchett. He took from the mantel-shelf a long clasp-knife with a black horn handle, with the initials "R. F." on it, and handed it to Ralph, who opened it and shut it mechanically.

"It is a very old friend," he said. "I should have been sorry to leave it behind. No I will give it to you if you will have it."

Burchett shook his head.

"You'll want it, lad," he said.

Ralph took a small gold pin of little worth from his scarf.

"I'd like you to have that," he said, simply; and, as simply, Burchett accepted it.

"You look tired out," he said. "You will have something to eat and drink before you go?"

"Yes; I'm tired," said Ralph. "I've had a bad time—"

He checked himself. Not even to Burchett could he hint of his trouble. "I shall be all right when I get out of this place—though God knows I have been happier here than I have ever been—all my life!"

Burchett made some tea, and put it with some food on the table, and Ralph sat down. He drank a cup of tea, but he could not eat, and he sat with his head resting on his hand, staring at the fire as if he were lost in gloomy thought. Burchett did not break the silence for some time, but at last he said in a low voice:

"I suppose I can ask where you're going?"

Ralph started as if from a dream, and rose with a heavy sigh.

"Back to Australia, I think. But I've made no decided plans yet; there hasn't been time. I'll start now, I think."

He thrust a stick through the handle of the bundle and held out his hand.

"Good-bye," he said hoarsely.

Burchett gripped his hand—it was burning hot and quivering—and looked grimly into Ralph's face.

"I'm sorry to lose you, lad," he said, gruffly. "I've grown—used to you. But if you must go you must; I've no right to keep you. Life's made up of partings—" he sighed, dropped Ralph's hand and turned to the fire.

As Ralph went out he turned and looked back at the cosy room, the grim bent figure then he strode away with a heavy and weary step. The dogs followed him, whining, and he paused a moment to pat them and send them back.

The moon had not yet risen, but the night was clear and light, and he took the narrow path across the woods towards the high road. At a spot in the road from which he could catch a glimpse of the Court he stopped, and leaning against a tree looked long and yearningly at the great house, the casket that held his treasure. Treasure indeed! gem fit for a king's crown, and not to be worn in the rustian jacket of a gamekeeper. As he stood there a slim, girlish figure was passing at a turn in the road. It was Fanny Mason. She happened to glance in his direction and saw him. She stopped and looked—as longingly as he was looking at the Court—then took a step towards him; but her feet were arrested by the sound of others.

A man was lurking along the road, coming from the opposite direction. It was the tramp. She saw him stop at sight of the tall figure by the tree and heard him address Ralph with a tipsy insolence.

"What—what are you a-star-gazing at, my young spark?" he said, with a leer.

Ralph, thus roughly awakened, looked at him and was passing on; Oatway stretched out a hand and laid it on his arm.

"Whatch your hurry?" he demanded, wagging his head at him with exaggerated gravity of semi-intoxication.

"Looks as if you was a-goin' on a journey, s'elp me!"

"Mind your own business, my man, and take your hand off my arm," said Ralph, quietly enough; and he shook the hand off.

"Oh, we're hotly-toity, are we?" leered Oatway. "We think we're somebody, don't we? Goin' on a journey, eh? Got your bundle on yer back? 'Tis like a common tramp! Why—" with a sudden laugh of insolent triumph—"curse me, if I don't think you've got the sack!" He peered into Ralph's face with eager, wolfish curiosity. "That's it right enough! I can see it in your face! You've got the sack, been kicked out—" his voice rose gloatingly and he snapped his fingers in Ralph's face. "It's up and down with us, mister; you was up the other day and I was down; but its wicey wery now, and I'm on top; higher on top than you've a notion of, my young cockerel!"

Ralph had walked on, the man following him; but suddenly Ralph turned and Fanny saw the white, haggard face plainly. She was frightened and waited for no more, but ran on, stopping at the end of the road which she expected Ralph to pass presently.

Ralph looked at the man steadily but not angrily; his heart was too sore for him to be angered with the fellow.

"Go your way my man, and let me go mine," he said; but, as Oatway still seemed inclined to bother him, he left the road and entered the wood. Oatway, with a laugh of drunken audacity followed him; but Ralph walked quickly, and Oatway presently gave up the aimless pursuit, and seating himself on a tree to get his breath, drew out his pipe and, after several ineffectual attempts, lit it.

"He's goin'," he muttered, with portentous gravity and a would-be cunning leer. "Now, what does that mean? Hash the other fellow been up to any tricks, hash he been a-gettin' at him? If I thought so, if I thought as there'd been any underhand work, s'elp me, I'd step in an' interfere. What did he say-to-morrow night for? Why not to-night? This 'ere game's er payin' one, an' I'm goin' to play it for all it's worth, an' I ain't goin' to be interfered with. I don't know as I want that young chap out o' my sight, though I hate him, hate him! Seems to me that I'd better see about it. I will, too!"

He rose unsteadily, but sank down again, began to yawn, and very soon fell asleep.

Ralph went on his way. Presently the bundle struck against a tree. His stick was too long for its purpose, and he took out his knife to shorten it. As he was doing so the knife fell from his hand, struck his boot, and bounced to some distance. Ralph searched for it, but the undergrowth was thick, and though he groped in the darkness, he could not find the knife. He knew that he might grope till morning, and at last, with a sigh, he gave up the search.

"Burchett might as well have had it," he said to himself, as he left the spot. "It was the oldest friend I had."

Fanny waited at the corner for some time, but she concluded that Ralph had gone through the wood, and being afraid to linger longer lest Oatway should see her, she went reluctantly homewards.

CHAPTER XIX.

While the tragic act in the drama of two lives was being enacted in the arbour, Talbot Denby, was shut up in his own room trying to face the knowledge which had come to him from Jim Oatway.

Even yet he could scarcely bring himself to believe in the man's statement, in the fact that this gamekeeper fellow was the earl's son and heir. But he knew that the thing would have to be faced, that he must either set at defiance this man who possessed the secret, or make terms with him. Make terms with a man who would probably blackmail him for the rest of his life! He thought of a dozen plans for circumventing the man, of rendering the identification of Ralph Farringdon impossible; but one and all had to be discarded as impracticable. There seemed only one way, and that was to submit to the blackmailing. Confused and bewildered by the terrible problem, he paced up and down the room until it was time to dress for dinner. He had left his man in town, for the silent Gibbon was not a favorite with the Court servants who were as sociable crew and eyed the taciturn Gibbon with a kind of uneasy suspicion; and Talbot, on his visits to the Court, either availed himself of the services of the earl's man or was valeted by an intelligent young footman.

He was, therefore, surprised and, in his overwrought condition, startled, when, in answer to his ring, Gibbon himself appeared in the doorway, with his expressionless face and downcast eyes.

"You here! Well?" said Talbot, with the cold insolence which is harder to bear than overt brutality.

Gibbon raised his eyes and held out a letter.

"It came this morning, sir; and as it was marked 'important and immediate,' I thought I'd better come down with it."

Talbot took the letter and opened it. It was from a famous money-lender, and its peremptory contents made Talbot's face grow even darker than it had been.

"I wish to Heaven you would obey my orders and remain where you are until you are sent for. The thing's of no consequence," he said, not angrily, but with the same cold insolence.

Gibbon dropped his eyes; they were scanning his master's face while the latter had been reading.

Ralph had walked on, the man following him; but suddenly Ralph turned and Fanny saw the white, haggard face plainly. She was frightened and waited for no more, but ran on, stopping at the end of the road which she expected Ralph to pass presently.

Ralph looked at the man steadily but not angrily; his heart was too sore for him to be angered with the fellow.

"Go your way my man, and let me go mine," he said; but, as Oatway still seemed inclined to bother him, he left the road and entered the wood. Oatway, with a laugh of drunken audacity followed him; but Ralph walked quickly, and Oatway presently gave up the aimless pursuit, and seating himself on a tree to get his breath, drew out his pipe and, after several ineffectual attempts, lit it.

"He's goin'," he muttered, with portentous gravity and a would-be cunning leer. "Now, what does that mean? Hash the other fellow been up to any tricks, hash he been a-gettin' at him? If I thought so, if I thought as there'd been any underhand work, s'elp me, I'd step in an' interfere. What did he say-to-morrow night for? Why not to-night? This 'ere game's er payin' one, an' I'm goin' to play it for all it's worth, an' I ain't goin' to be interfered with. I don't know as I want that young chap out o' my sight, though I hate him, hate him! Seems to me that I'd better see about it. I will, too!"

He rose unsteadily, but sank down again, began to yawn, and very soon fell asleep.

Ralph went on his way. Presently the bundle struck against a tree. His stick was too long for its purpose, and he took out his knife to shorten it. As he was doing so the knife fell from his hand, struck his boot, and bounced to some distance. Ralph searched for it, but the undergrowth was thick, and though he groped in the darkness, he could not find the knife. He knew that he might grope till morning, and at last, with a sigh, he gave up the search.

"Burchett might as well have had it," he said to himself, as he left the spot. "It was the oldest friend I had."

Fanny waited at the corner for some time, but she concluded that Ralph had gone through the wood, and being afraid to linger longer lest Oatway should see her, she went reluctantly homewards.

CHAPTER XIX.

While the tragic act in the drama of two lives was being enacted in the arbour, Talbot Denby, was shut up in his own room trying to face the knowledge which had come to him from Jim Oatway.

Even yet he could scarcely bring himself to believe in the man's statement, in the fact that this gamekeeper fellow was the earl's son and heir. But he knew that the thing would have to be faced, that he must either set at defiance this man who possessed the secret, or make terms with him. Make terms with a man who would probably blackmail him for the rest of his life! He thought of a dozen plans for circumventing the man, of rendering the identification of Ralph Farringdon impossible; but one and all had to be discarded as impracticable. There seemed only one way, and that was to submit to the blackmailing. Confused and bewildered by the terrible problem, he paced up and down the room until it was time to dress for dinner. He had left his man in town, for the silent Gibbon was not a favorite with the Court servants who were as sociable crew and eyed the taciturn Gibbon with a kind of uneasy suspicion; and Talbot, on his visits to the Court, either availed himself of the services of the earl's man or was valeted by an intelligent young footman.

He was, therefore, surprised and, in his overwrought condition, startled, when, in answer to his ring, Gibbon himself appeared in the doorway, with his expressionless face and downcast eyes.

"You here! Well?" said Talbot, with the cold insolence which is harder to bear than overt brutality.

Gibbon raised his eyes and held out a letter.

"It came this morning, sir; and as it was marked 'important and immediate,' I thought I'd better come down with it."

Talbot took the letter and opened it. It was from a famous money-lender, and its peremptory contents made Talbot's face grow even darker than it had been.

"I wish to Heaven you would obey my orders and remain where you are until you are sent for. The thing's of no consequence," he said, not angrily, but with the same cold insolence.

Gibbon dropped his eyes; they were scanning his master's face while the latter had been reading.

Dignity.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

Popularity Papers—Being the Third of a Few Little Talks on the Ingredients of Popularity.

"Ah, the huge portrayer of popularity. 'Tis fine to sit in front of it, but what a scalding you catch when it is overturned."
—Daudet.

Dignity is one of the qualities which helps win popularity. Many people may disagree with this, but it is true, nevertheless.

By "dignity" I don't mean stiffness, haughtiness or aloofness. I mean self-respect, high mindedness, unwillingness to cheapen or lower one's self in a word—"dignity."

We never really like anyone we look down upon.

Some author, it seems to me it is Barrie, but I am not sure, tells of a minister who, whenever he was invited out to tea, used to relate so many funny and foolish stories about himself that those who heard him never could respect him afterward. He was probably seeking for popularity in thus making fun of himself, but because he went too far and impaired his own dignity, he missed his goal. Respect is part of any true popularity, just as it is the foundation of real love or friendship. We are willing to laugh at people who lack dignity; we will even seek their company for a time; but we do not admire them and we do not desire them for our most treasured friends.

Of course, dignity must not be construed in too strict a sense. A man or woman may be as genial and jolly and informal as you please without losing an atom of dignity. An unexpected caller once found Abraham Lincoln down on the floor playing leapfrog with his children, but he did not find his president lacking in true dignity. True dignity is something deeper than that. It is the kind of fine self-respect which Lincoln had and could never lose, no matter if he did do informal or unexpected things.

Respect yourself and others will respect you, and what is more, will probably like you if you do not have other qualities that prevent it.

No one can tell you what true dignity is if you don't know in your heart. If you do know what dignity is and do have it, may serve to remind you of its value and to assure you that it is worth cherishing if you care for popularity.

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the woman who experiences hot flashes, dizziness, and a general nervousness, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysterics, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine.

For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing, cordial and restorative tonic.

"My disease was called retroversion," writes Mrs. LYNN McDONALD, of Macosta, Mich., Route 1. "I had nervous chills and numb spells and the doctor said I had a floating kidney. I doctored seven months with our family physician. He said I would have to have an operation. Then I stopped taking his medicines. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines, I have not had any nervous chills or weak spells. I am better than for years."

"My daughter is now taking the 'Prescription' and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also the 'Pain-Expeller' for nervousness and vertigo. These remedies have helped her ever so much in a short time. We have great faith in your medicines for female troubles."

Mrs. McDONALD. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movements.

Household Notes.

Do not allow the hearth of the range to be blackened, as it will soil your aprons or dresses. Wring a household out of warm soapy water and wipe the hearth clean every morning. Blackening will not be necessary.

In every way possible, beauty and utility should be combined in the home. Dispense with everything that does not serve well for use or ornamentation. Gaudiness and congestion are not suggestive of prettiness, and things unnecessary only collect dust.

Sunburn will be less severe if you do not wash your face before going out; rub it with cold cream instead, wipe off with a soft rag and use powder; there will be none of that heated, burning feeling that would have resulted had you used water.

If turpentine is put on a burn immediately, it will stop the burning and there will be no pain. Saturate a piece of bandage with turpentine, then wrap the burn carefully and saturate again and again; keeping the bandage wet for some time.

The work of polishing windows and mirrors can be made much lighter if instead of using wet clothes or whitening you sprinkle a little liquid brass polish on a rag and apply to the glass, allow it to dry and then clean off with a soft dry duster. The result will be most satisfactory.

Woolen garments that cannot be put away in summer in the regular packing away, should not be hung in a dark corner, but keep them near the closet door and have them hung out in the sunshine every week. This will keep the moths from breeding and eating holes in the garments.

In cooking meat, the idea is to retain the nourishment and flavor. The flavor and juices depend as much on the method of cooking as upon the quality of the meat. Boiling water or strong, dry heat will retain flavor, enclosing the meat in a crust which will not permit the juice to flow out.

When Chinese lanterns are hung on the porch or about the lawn, put a couple of handfuls of sand in the bottom of the paper lanterns around the cup which holds the candles. This holds the lantern much more steady and in case of ignition, it separates the lantern and prevents the flame from spreading.

A simple and easy way to iron sheets is to first fold the two hems together right side out, then fold the sheet across the centre forming a square, with the broad hem on top of the sheet outside. Then simply iron the square on both sides and the sheet will have a well ironed appearance when on the bed.

The flesh of fish out of season is unwholesome. If necessary to keep fish overnight, place them where the moon will not shine on them; the effect is as bad as hot sunshine. Cod, haddock and halibut may be kept a day before using, but mackerel and white fish lose their life as soon as they leave the water.

If convenient, the waffle batter may be made the evening before it is used. The cakes will be lighter and any batter which is cooked fat, such as griddle cake or fritter batter, is more easily digested if made long enough ahead to allow the starch granules in the flour to swell so that they will burst when heat is applied.

A very handy darning machine for the sewing machine is made of two pieces of black velvet ribbon six inches long and three inches wide, sewed together on their edges and stuffed with wool. This makes a long, rather fat cushion, very easy to stick pins in. Narrow black ribbons were sewed to each end and the cushion was held in the sewing machine in a convenient place and stretched full of pins and needles. Thursday is generally set apart for cleaning windows and sweeping the living room and cleaning the bathroom—Thursday afternoon and evening being the maid's outing time. Friday day is a general sweeping day. Saturday being baking day. There should be one day in every week when the housewife has not planned anything, but does the little odd things which have no name. But do not become a slave of routine, the best rules can be broken with impunity.

For winter clothes which are best not crushed by putting into a chest, there has been invented moth bags and moth sheets, these bags are made to close air tight and will accommodate automobile garments, ulsters or suits and small size come for muffs and furs. The sheets are used for packing rugs and curtains. This should all be done before the moth fly has made its appearance as a nit laid in the garment may hatch even after the garment has been put away, and the worm will destroy a great deal.

The piano case sometimes needs cleaning. For this, provide two basins of clean, lukewarm water, to be renewed as often as necessary, and three good sized pieces of "cheese-cloth." Wring one cloth nearly dry from the first basin, rub in Ivory soap and clean about a square foot of the surface. Wring the second cloth nearly dry from the second basin and wipe off the suds. Rub dry with the third cloth again and wipe any moisture that remains. Rub dry with the third cloth, using quick light strokes and little pressure. Proceed in this way until the entire instrument has been cleaned. Then go over slightly with a clean, soft handkerchief, or a very soft new cambric.

On Second Thought.

BY JAY E. HOUSE.

If a woman leaves her relatives for her husband the community, in time, forgets it. But the husband never is permitted to do so.

You, no doubt, wonder how a dog gets its reputation for intelligence. We'll tell you. It gets it through its owner.

In the contest to decide as to the most useless thing, the left hand hip pocket has a good many partisans. A New York woman is advertising for a husband lost in 1899. How long does it take the statute of limitations to run on a lost husband.

When a dog kills a sheep upon the theory that mutton is good to eat, the joke is on the dog.

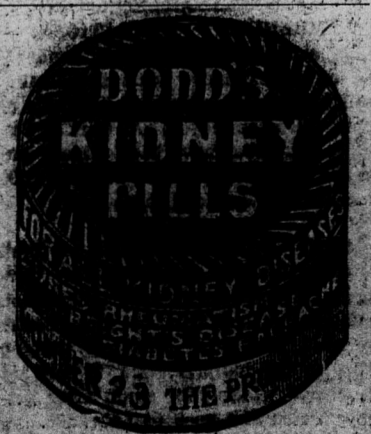

"He is the sort of man," said Eph Wiley yesterday in discussing Lish Gideon, "who bids four in a pitch game when he needs only two to win."

The financial condition of the actor is reflected with tolerable accuracy by the number of dogs he keeps.

If you are not prejudiced you are not interested.

The average man isn't looking for information. He is looking for an argument.

When a man tells you he is thinking it over, that means he has decided not to do it.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 28, 1912.

Governor Going.

Sir Ralph Chamneys Williams leaves Newfoundland next February. We cannot express regret at his going. Our only regret is that he will not go sooner.

It would appear that last February Sir Ralph applied for an extension of service and on May 2nd the Secretary of State assented to his application.

The pith of it is, the assent of the Secretary of State was given before Sir Ralph made his outrageous decision whitewashing Morison. Had that decision been given and brought to the notice of the Secretary of State, together with the state of indignation which prevails in the community at the desecration of constitutional principles in the Morison decision, the Secretary of State could not have assented to Sir Ralph's request.

By Authority.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Captain Thomas Fitzpatrick, to be a Justice of the Peace for the Colony.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint Rev. Dr. Murphy, to be a member of the Roman Catholic Board of Education for the District of Brigus, in place of Rt. Rev. Mons. Kennedy, left the District; and Messrs. Michael Walsh, and Stephen Hannaford, to be additional members of the same Board; Mr. Wesley Martin, to be a member of the Road Board for Hickman's Harbour, District of Trinity, in place of Mr. Samuel Thistle, deceased; Messrs. Andrew Winsor, John Budgett, and Samuel Newman, to be members of the Road Board for Troystown, District of Twillingate, in place of Messrs. Sea Water Forecasts.

In the report for 1911 of the Lancashire (Eng.) Sea Fisheries cruises an account is given of Prof. Basset's investigations of the conditions of sea water in connection with weather conditions. It seems that the professor made a correct forecast of the unusually wet summer of 1910 in England, and the very dry and hot season of 1911. After discussing the values of the salinities made at three different seasons common in England, Prof. Basset bases his theory on the temperature and salinity of the Gulf stream.—New York Fishing Gazette.

Denver, Aug. 22.—William J. Burns, the detective, is sick at a local hotel here, suffering it is said, from ptomaine poisoning. No one is allowed to see him except his physician and nurses.

A report gained currency here that Burns had been the victim of a personal plot, but little credence is placed in the rumor.

Board of Trade

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade was held on Friday last, the subject of Absentee Landlords was discussed; a letter from the Government was read assuring the Council that they had this matter under consideration.

Correspondence on the subject of the manufacture of dogfish for fertilizer was read; three reduction works have been established by the Canadian Government, as these plants have only been in operation a short time each year, from experience gained one cannot judge if they could be run successfully from a business standpoint; the correspondence has been forwarded to the Government.

The Council decided to make representations to the Government on the subject of bait supplied to foreigners by Canadian Cold Storage Companies, and also the making of Sydney the head quarters of a French Fleet of Steam Trawlers and ordinary trawlers; the Council trusts that the Canadian Authorities may be prevailed upon to endorse our bait policy, and so prevent the sale of bait fishes to foreign fishermen, and insure that no concessions be given which may be detrimental to the fish interests of both Canada and Newfoundland.

Morwenna Here From Montreal

The Black Diamond Liner, Morwenna, Capt. Holmes, five days from Montreal via usual Gulf ports, reached port at 8 o'clock this morning. She left Montreal on Friday last and made an excellent run to Charlottetown where a half day's delay was occasioned taking aboard potatoes, hay, etc. Summerside and Sydney were next visited. The latter port was left at 9 o'clock Monday night and despite fog and strong head winds the passage from there was made in thirty-five hours. She brought a full cargo, principally flour and thirty passengers.

Planned Under Automobile, Wife Asks Husband to End Her Agony.

Petaluma, Cal., Aug. 19.—Lying in the middle of a road, beside their overturned automobile, fatally wounded and suffering agony, Mrs. E. W. Mason, wife of the secretary of an oil company, begged her husband to end her suffering by shooting her.

Pinned under his car and frantic at the sight of his wife's pain, Mason was barely able to reach the horn of the automobile with his right hand, and sounded it repeatedly. As he lay there and blew the horn he watched his wife die.

Attracted by the sound of the horn, some farmers nearby came to the scene of the accident. The found Mrs. Mason dead in the road and her husband delirious, crushed and pinned beneath the heavy car.

The automobile was jacked up and the wounded man taken from beneath it. He will live. As told by Mason when he regained consciousness, he lost control of the machine and it ran into a ditch.

Dastardly Act.

While a dance was being held at the residence of Mrs. Carroll, on the Torbay Road, a couple of nights ago some person or persons committed a dastardly act. The gate, through which the people who were making merry, had to pass was besmeared with filth and the clothing of several was spoiled. The police were informed of the matter and if the perpetrators can be caught they will be prosecuted.

A Challenge.

The crew of H. M. S. Sirius before the ship left issued a challenge to the winning crew of the Ellinor in the Naval-Reserve-Firemen Race, on Regatta Day. The challengers wanted to row on the harbour in the ship's boats but this the Ellinor's crew refused though they will be glad to meet the blue jackets again on Quidi Vidi Lake.

Boston Train Hits Wagon.

ONE BOY IS KILLED.

Moncton, Aug. 22.—As the Boston train was approaching Petitcodiac, the locomotive struck a truck wagon which was crossing the track at the east crossing. Two boys, Harry McFarlane, aged 10, and Marshall Bannister, aged 12, were in the wagon. The McFarlane lad had both legs and one arm broken, and also sustained a fracture of the skull, dying four hours later. Young Bannister was badly injured, but will recover. The horse and carriage escaped damage. The boys had driven onto the track before they saw the train and tried to back up, but were unable to do so. They then urged the horse forward, but could not clear the track.

Cost of Running Pleasure Autos

Rough Estimate Which May be Made Basis of Comparison

The cost of running a motor car depends entirely upon conditions. Taking care of his own car is not always a matter of economy to the motorist. The owner who trusts entirely to his chauffeur, frequently through his own ignorance, skimps his car. Many times without knowing that his chauffeur ought to have time to clean out the crank case, and put in new oil, or that the cylinders need scraping, or that the valves a slight readjustment, he will insist upon postponing the work. That is costly to the car, and eventually to the owner, for when the car requires a thorough cleaning and refilling with grease and oil it needs it just as badly as a starving human being needs refilling with food.

Every automobile has its own peculiarities. One will take more oil than another, one will eat up tires faster, another will use more gasoline, more grease for the differential, universal or transmission, but almost any two cars with the same size engine will, under similar conditions, cost within a few dollars of each other.

Probably on a half of the lot, automobiles to-day cover 1,000 to 1,500 miles a month. This will mean 30 to 60 miles a day during the week and a Sunday run of 50 to 150 miles.

Distance Per Gallon.

The average four-cylinder car of from 30 to 50 horse-power will get from 12 to 13 miles out of a gallon of gasoline, while the smaller car, with less piston displacement, naturally consumes less. Many of the 18 to 20 horse-power four-cylinder cars of the light touring variety will get from 20 to 30 miles out of a single gallon of gasoline. Cylinder oil is consumed more slowly, the car running from 100 to 150 and 200 miles a gallon, according to the size of the car. Grease for transmission, universal, and differential will be used up at the rate of from 5 to 20 pounds a month.

A man who wishes to keep his car in a garage of his own can put up one of metal for $75 to $100. He purchases his gasoline by the barrel for 13 cents a gallon. His cylinder oil he buys by the barrel at 40 cents and his grease he can get in 100-pound cans, reducing the cost about one-half.

The owner who drives his own automobile and has business cars to keep him occupied during the day, does not find any too much time to travel and will cover an average of more than 500 to 700 miles in a month. He usually finishes his dinner by 7 or 7.30 and then takes his family for a ride of two or more hours.

WELL PEOPLE TOO

Wise Doctor Gives Postum to Convalescents.

A wise doctor tries to give nature its best chance by saving the little strength of the already exhausted patient, and building up waster energy with simple but powerful nourishment.

"Five years ago," writes a doctor, "I commenced to use Postum in my own family instead of coffee." (It's a well-known fact that tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) "I was so well pleased with the results that I had two grocers place it in stock, guaranteeing its sale."

"I then commenced to recommend it to my patients in place of coffee, as a nutritious beverage. The consequence is, every store in town is now selling it, as it has become a household necessity in many homes."

"I'm sure I prescribe Postum as often as any one remedy in the Materia Medica—in almost every case of indigestion and nervousness I treat, and with the best results."

"When once I introduce it into a family, it is quite sure to remain. I shall continue to use it and prescribe it in families where I practice."

"In convalescence from pneumonia, typhoid fever and other cases I give it as a liquid, easily absorbed diet. You may use my letter as a reference any way you see fit." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Advice to The Walker.

I can say from experience that one should never begin a long walk in new shoes or Oxford ties. Buy shoes with heavy soles and soft uppers which lace two or three inches above the ankle. The shoes should also be of sufficient length and width in the tread across the toes.

Heavy stockings should be worn when I go on a long trip I generally wear two pairs of stockings, as this prevents undue friction and chafing of the heels. In a long walk it is no the heart and lungs which give one first, but the feet. To toughen them use a strong solution of salt water.

Do not open the blisters while on the walk, but wait till night and give them proper treatment. Hum a tune or whistle, and keep rhythm with the step. Make hobby of walking and "walk" the hobby good and hard.

Clothing light in material and color should be worn in the summer time as the dark colors receive and retain more heat from the sun than the pale colors. When one becomes overheated from walking, he should put on an overgarment or a sweater, especially if he rides in an open trolley car after the walk. In case of sprains of muscles, or tendons, the best treatment is rest and hot application. Elevation of the injured member is also effective in reducing inflammation.

Women should be properly costumed for the long or cross country walk. One reason that women do so little walking, or become discouraged is because they are not properly dressed. There are, however, more women walking for health and the reduction of excessive fat since such games as tennis and golf came into vogue, as these games called for a shorter skirt than was formerly worn.

Never wear high heel shoes or clothing so tight as to resist the movement of the chest. The most suitable skirt is one that comes to the ankles, made of some such material as denim, as this offers more resistance to breezes and other obstacles likely to be encountered than most other dress goods.

A parasol for a woman and an umbrella for a man is a prime requisite, as it protects one when the sun's rays are severe, is useful in time of rain, and may be used as a can when ascending and descending slopes.—William J. Cromie in Woman's World for September.

New Woman's Record.

St. Heliers, Jersey, Aug. 19.—Miss Nora Neave established a new woman's record for a mile open swim today when she swam the distance in 31 minutes and 41 4/5 seconds. The previous record was held by Miss Annette Kellerman the Australian swimmer, whose time was 32 minutes, 44 seconds. Miss Neave is the holder of the 300 metres swimming record for women. She is well known in England as the winner of many local championships, and she was the victor last year in a 15/4 race for women on the Thames.

WINARD'S LUBRICANT LUBRIB HANDS FRIEND

Making Ice in Hot Weather.

The Inside of an Ice Factory is no Colder than an Ordinary City Office.

Ice is now an article of great importance from a commercial point of view, and Great Britain imports from Norway about £200,000 worth per annum. But although the use of ice for preserving beef, mutton, fish, milk, butter, fruit, and other staples increases enormously year by year, the import of ice will gradually be reduced because it is now possible to "manufacture" it so cheaply by artificial processes. Moreover, ice made in these ways is often purer than the "genuine article."

It is usually supposed that a large ice works must be one of the coldest places on earth. But this is very far from the truth. In fact, you would find that an ice factory is very little colder than an ordinary City Office, and in the engine room, where two enormous ammonia compressors are at work the heat is almost unbearable.

In the freezing room of the factory there are fifteen tanks built under the floor, each one being about nine feet long, four feet wide, and four feet deep. These are partitioned off by walls of thin metal into eighteen sections, known as "cells," which are filled with the water to be frozen. The walls are quite hollow, and it is through these that brine, which has been reduced to a temperature of about fifteen degrees below zero, is allowed to flow.

Immediately the walls are filled with this brine the water round the edges of the cells begins to freeze, and as soon as it is all partly frozen, iron hooks, nearly a foot long are placed in the water and allowed to freeze into the ice. This enables the huge blocks to be lifted from the tanks as soon as the water is completely frozen.

If, however, the ice sticks tightly to the cells, the blocks are thawed from the sides by hot water being allowed to take the place of the cold brine for a short time. This makes the ice slide easily out of the cells on to a huge crane, which places them on a platform outside the room, and from there they are loaded into the great ice vans.

When the brine has reached a higher temperature, which it is bound to do in performing its duty, it is pumped back into the brine tanks and cooled with ammonia, and then allowed to flow back into the hollow walls of the cells again. The presence of impurities always prevents freezing, which accounts for the fact that the temperature at which sea water freezes is very much lower than the freezing point of pure fresh water. So, in order to free the water from air and all impurities, a small machine is kept swaying from side to side at the bottom of each tank.

This motion keeps the water constantly on the move, and drives all the air and impurities to the surface. Were the water kept perfectly calm the ice would be dull instead of crystalline, and would take much longer to freeze.

The ice made by this method is called "cell-ice," and the average price of it is one shilling a hundred-weight. Another, and perhaps a better quality of ice, is that used by hospitals, which is known as "plate ice."

All kinds of fresh water ice are extremely brittle, and huge blocks may be broken into the smallest fragments by a needle or a knife being thrust briskly in one side. And yet at the same time the ice is remarkable for its plasticity, and it may be moulded into any form by the application of pressure. But salt water ice is found much more difficult to break because of the substance it contains.

better results would have been obtained, as the best fishing in that locality is in the late spring. The gill netting part of the programme was a failure, and Capt. O'Neill does not think this manner of fishing adapted to the Newfoundland coast. Very few haddock were found. Capt. O'Neill, however, thinks that the project of shipping fresh fish from the Newfoundland coast is feasible, as a supply may be obtained from the large number of fishing boats pursuing their occupation in those waters. Courvoisiers "Perfumes without spirit" are likely to increase their reputation as their great strength, economy, and potency is better understood and appreciated. And the perfumes are so sweet and delicate withal that they at once become a favorite with most people. Price, $1.25 a bottle.

The Sagona's Report.

Favourable Accounts From Labrador.

The S. S. Sagona arrived here at 9.30 last night from the Labrador and brings very cheering accounts of the fishery at that important place. From Captain Parsons we learn that intervals of dense fog made navigation dangerous and this danger was intensified by the presence all along of numerous icebergs. For some time also heavy rain was experienced and on Thursday last a gale of wind from the N. E. made matters very uncomfortable as the ship came south. Saturday last it was very foggy with a S. E. gale and the ship time and again went in rail under. As the most important matter concerned with her voyage is her fishery report we append what her commander supplied so kindly to our representative:—

From Battle Hr. to Square Islands very little doing. Crews from 50 to 150 qtls.

Dead Islands, crews 150 to 250. Snugg Harbor, crews from 200 to 400 qtls.

At Bolster's Rock the fishery was very poor and only from 50 to 150 qtls. were caught.

From Comfort Bight to Seal Islands and all along that shore, very little was done.

Webber's Harbor to Indian Tickle, 250 to 350 qtls.

Black Island, some not more than 30 to 100 qtls.

Grady, 100 to 200 qtls.

Long Island, from 150 to 300 qtls.

Pack's Hr., very little doing.

Captain Parsons said that the scarcity of salt crippled the fishery in several places.

From Indian Harbor to the Turnabiks, they would have done extra well had this disideratum been on the shore. A fairly good fishery, however, may be attributed to Smoky, Cut Throat, Emily Hr., Horse Hr., Holton, Tinker's Hr., King's Bay, Sloop Cove, Cape Harrison, Jigger Tickle, Ragged Islands, Iron Bound Islands, Makovick Islands, Ilak and the Turnabiks both east and west.

The ship met the Stella Maris at Hopedale and she reports that from the Queen's Lakes to Muford there is fairly good fishery. When the Stella Maris passed there, from Muford North, there was very little fish. She however passed there the first week in August and since there has been ample time for a favourable change.

Bear Gut's, schooners no fish.

Sedilk Bay, schooners 100 qtls. each.

Mugford Tickle, schooners from 200 to 300 qtls.

Cut Throat, schooners from 500 to 600 qtls.

Solomon's Island, schooners from 500 to 600 qtls.

Dawe's Island, schooners 500 qtls.

Becky Island, well fished.

Perry's Gulch, schooners 400 to 500 qtls.

Savage Island, schooners 300 qtls.

The Farmyards, only one schooner there; she hauls for 500 qtls.

Henry Norman of Bay Roberts war at Iron Bound Islands with 900 barrels.

So foggy has it been all the season that only on this trip did Capt. Parsons catch, once, a glimpse of Belle Isle. At Wolf Island the fishery has been a total failure. Hook and line everywhere has been almost a blank.

Want of salt has been a great handicap at Spotted Islands, Domino, Indian Tickle and contiguous places the people had to haul up their traps it being useless to catch fish. When salt did arrive the cod had left the coast.

N.B.S. Sociable.

The members of the British Society and their lady friends have been making active preparations during the past fortnight for their sociable which takes place in their hall to-night. It will consist of a concert commencing at 8 o'clock, then a tea will be served by the ladies, followed by a grand dancing assembly. A rare treat is in store for those who attend.

REPLACING SAGONA. — The Solway will replace the Sagona on the Labrador service. She will sail on the new route to-morrow.

DIED.

On the 27th inst. Patrick, beloved son of John and Bridget Joy, aged 20 years; funeral on Thursday, at 2.30 p.m. from his late residence, No. 5, Lyon's Square; friends and acquaintances will please accept this, the only intimation. — Boston papers please copy.

The new Methodist Church built at Whiteway, Witless Bay, was opened for worship for the first time on Sunday last. The Rev. J. Whitehead Atkinson, of Green's Harbor, officiated, and there was a large congregation present. The new church was built by the people of the place, can accommodate over 200 people and reflects credit upon their workmanship.

Woman Severely Burned.

At 6.30 p.m. yesterday a woman who resides at the corner of Boncloddy Street and Pennywell Road was the victim of what came near being a fatal accident. She had just lit the fire in the kitchen stove, but as it did not burn up brightly poured some kerosene oil on it from a can; the resultant flame caught her clothing and she rushed into the street with her child in her arms and with the flames enveloping both. The child was quickly snatched from the mother by a passer-by and was thus saved from injury. The woman, however, was not as fortunate as the child and was considerably burned about the hands, arms and face. A doctor was called in to treat her.

English "Water Lily" Will Attempt To Swim The Channel

She Holds Many Swimming Records Has Bitten Many of Best Men Swimmers, Both For Time and Distance.

The entire swimming world has its eyes upon a young English girl of great beauty, Miss Lily Smith, "The English Water Lily," as she is admirably called in England. Will "The Water Lily" put the capstone by swimming the English Channel? Every devotee of aquatics in England shares the belief that she has the best chance a woman ever had to accomplish this feat.

No matter if no woman ever before swam the Channel. No matter if but two men ever went the entire distance, and that thirty-six years elapsed between these successful attempts—thirty-six years interspersed with yearly battles with the rough Channel waters by the best swimmers of the world. "The Water Lily" is confident that she can go the route. She is now in the second year of her arduous training for the great attempt.

Some favorable day in August she will dive off the Government pier at Dover and strike out with a steady trudgeon stroke for the shores of France. In 1875 Captain Matthew Webb, an English swimmer, made the journey, swimming fully thirty miles in his battle with the tides to cover the twenty-eight miles that lie between Dover and Calais. His swim across the Channel stood until last year, when the same feat was accomplished by William Burgess, a Yorkshire blacksmith.

A Fireman's Daughter. Miss Smith is the second daughter of James G. Smith, superintendent of the London Fire Department, one of the medal of honor men among London's fire fighters.

Mr. Smith is prouder by far of his family of three beautiful daughters than he is of his own honors. All three of them, the Misses Nellie, Lily, and Gwendoline, have been expert swimmers since infancy.

Lily by reason of her daring and powerful build, began to display championship calibre when very young. Before she was fifteen years old she earned the title of "champion of all London" in open competition. Before she was sixteen she accompanied Jabez Wolfe for four hours and half on his attempt to swim the Channel.

Miss Smith was still fresh when, after battling with the waves and tide for four hours and a half, her father insisted that she come out of the water.

"But I will not do it yet. From now on my ambition is to swim the Channel," she said. And never since that day has she lost sight of the great goal of her desire.

Beat Out Twenty Men. Her record has been a continuous succession of triumphs. In 1907, when seventeen, she competed against thirty-four men in the fifteen-mile swim from Richmond to Blackfriars, beating twenty of them and covering the distance in four hours and eleven minutes. She was on this occasion the first woman swimmer to compete against men. She repeated this performance in 1908 and 1909, beating twenty competitors on each occasion.

She holds all records both for the distance and time in her great swim in 1910 from Dover to Ramsgate and back to Deal Down the Channel.

She covered this twenty miles of rough sea water in seven hours.

Last August she attempted the twenty-four-mile swim in the Solent from south-sea to the Isle of Wight and return, a feat hitherto accomplished by but one swimmer, Horace Dayenport, in 1884. Miss Smith reached Ryde Pier at the end of the first lap of the journey in four hours and twenty minutes. She merely touched one of the piles of Ryde Pier and struck out for the return trip to Southsea.

When three miles from Ryde and still almost as fresh as when she entered the water she suffered an injury to her knee.

She pluckily bandaged the knee in the water with her handkerchief and tried to continue the swim, but on the advice of her trainer, Walter Brickett, the trainer of Jabez Wolfe, she left the water.

She had swum fifteen miles of the distance without effort. The ease with which she negotiated the distance in the rough water and against the heavy tides of the Solent, which is even a more treacherous and difficult swim than the Channel, makes her friends confident that she will be successful in her designs upon the honor of Webb and Burgess.

The "Personal" of the Past.

The advertisement of one's personal concerns is by no means, as some may think, a modern usage. In the old days there was scarcely a fashionable wedding recorded that did not have, as an accompaniment, an advertisement setting forth the bride's fortune. Thus, in the "Gentleman's Magazine" of March 15, 1735, one may find:—

"John Parry, Esq., of Carmarthen, married to a daughter of Walter Lloyd, Esq., member for that county; a fortune of £8,000."

This was a regular custom in the reign of George II., and was continued for a considerable time later. In 1731 you may find this advertisement:—

"Married, the Rev. Mr. Roger Walmsley, of York, about twenty-six years of age, to a Lincolnshire lady, upwards of eighty, with whom he is to have £8,000 in money £200 per annum and a coach and four during life only." In the same paper is this:—

"The Earl of Antrim, of Ireland, to Miss Betty Pennefeather, a celebrated beauty and toast of that kingdom," which would seem to indicate that the lady had beauty in place of fortune.

Towards the end of the century such wedding announcements were given with less glaring precision. In the Gazette of January 5, 1789, you find:—"Sunday, seventh, at St. Aulman's Church, Shrewsbury, A. Holbeche, Esq., of Slowley Hill, near Colehill, in the county to Mrs. Ashby, of Shrewsbury, a very agreeable lady with a good fortune." Or, "On January 3rd, at St. Martin's Church, William Lucas, Esq., of Holywell, in Northamptonshire, to Miss Legge, only daughter of the late Mr. Francis Legge, builder of this town; an agreeable young lady with a handsome fortune."

One of the latest of these personal advertisements occurs in the Birmingham Gazette, July 14, 1800, being the notice of the wedding of the Right Hon. George Canning, Under Secretary of State, to Miss Scott, "with £100,000 for a fortune."

Quite Accommodating.

The story is told of a Methodist local preacher who had an appointment one Sunday a long way from home. At the close of the morning service he was invited to have dinner with one of the workers who was present at the service.

As they journeyed on to his friend's home, the preacher felt it borne upon him that he should offer to pay for expenses of the meal. On reaching the home, we were more than ever convinced about the necessity of this by being introduced to ten children, one after another. With such a family the worker could not be expected to have to find his meals free of charge. He told his host of his decision.

The host replied that if he mentioned such a thing again he would be offended. No more was said until the meal was over; then, having noticed what appetites the children had, the preacher again pressed his host to name the expense to which he had been put.

The host looked indignant as he said, "I will not take it; you are welcome to all I can offer you." Then, after a pause, he said: "But if you feel you want to make some slight acknowledgement, you may give the children a shilling apiece all round!"

The man was terrified and stared at Lord Pelham.

"I am certain you will buy my little white rabbit this moment," said the lord.

"Oh, with the greatest pleasure," said the butcher who had recognized his former victim.

"What is the price of it?"

"What I had to pay you for it once—a hundred pounds."

"In cash or in a check?"

"I prefer cash."

The butcher counted out the money on the counter, Lord Pelham put it in his pocket, placed the basket with the rabbit on the counter and—their bills were evenly settled.

Laziness.

BY H. L. RANN.

Laziness is a form of creeping paralysis which has such a numbing influence upon some people that they are totally incapable of recognizing a day's work when they are led up to it.

It is usually accompanied by a prejudice against labor in any form and by an appetite which knows no brother. When a woman is tied to this combination until the last triumphal trump, she will have to hurdle from the cook tub and back again or starve.

Laziness may either be acquired or inherited, like the habit of snoring from an angle. Acquired laziness can sometimes be dislodged by moral suasion or running over the patient with a flour pin, but the inherited kind is harder to cure than an attack of the swelled ego.

Laziness begins to show its teeth early in life, and can always be detected by a disinclination to fill the woodbox or go after the cow. When these symptoms appear, they should be taken firmly in hand and eradicated with a loving purpose and a four-inch strip of hickory bark.

Many a confiding young bride has married a stout, healthy groom in the belief that he would provide something besides poetic piffle and soul kisses, and then has waked up to find herself building the kitchen fire with hard coal and a strawberry box.

This world is full of men who are too lazy to do anything but eat everything on the table but the vinegar cruet, after which they will curl up on the front porch and talk about the stolen delegates until the supper bell rings. The only cure for this variety of hybrid laziness is a prompt form of unwept death.

Laziness sometimes runs in family

Walked on the Bottom of the Seine.

Paris, Aug. 20.—Maurice Fernex, an old sailor, created a mild sensation in the Seine to-day, by giving an exhibition of a simple apparatus he has invented which enables him to remain under water a long time without suffering apparently the slightest inconvenience.

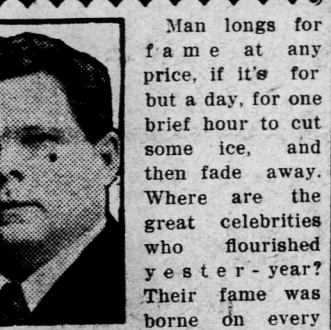

Attired in ordinary bathing trunks and equipped with his appliance, which is almost small enough to be carried in the pocket, Fernex made several promenades under water, each lasting from ten to twenty minutes along the bottom of the river.

The apparatus consists of a moutpiece arranged so as to permit of the escape of the wearer's breath, and attached to it is a rubber tube connected with a bicycle pump, which can be operated by an assistant either in the boat or on shore. It can be put on in ten seconds, and used by any one.

A number of officials and doctors who superintended the experiments, declared the apparatus a remarkable success.

Fame's a Bubble.

Man longs for fame at any price, if it's for but a day, for one brief hour to cut some ice, and then fade away. Where are the great celebrities who flourished yesterday? Their fame was borne on every breeze in either hemisphere. Then in the limelight where they all, and honored their names; we hung their pictures on the wall, in large and gilded frames. But for their pictures we've no use, since all their glory flew; oh, what's become of Captain Loose, and where's I-Took-a-Shoe? To-day with pride man's bosom thrills, next week his name is Sox; oh, where is Beecham now, whose pills were worth five bones a box? To-day the widely touted chap all self-complacent grins; to-morrow he is off the map—and where is Johnnie Binns? Man takes an axe and kills a friend, and goes upon the stage; he thinks his fame will never end—he'll always be the rage; then some one takes a gun and kills some six or eight or ten; the first man's name goes off the bills, and ne'er comes back again. So let us humbly toil and sing, content to be obscure, for fame's a vain and trifling thing that seldom will endure.

The White Rabbit

Lord Pelham Had to Wait For His Chance to Sell.

Lord Pelham lived in a castle not very far from London, near the banks of the Thames. He had the habit of walking quite often, all alone, to the city. One day, in the year 1811, when on his way to London, he saw a man coming towards him.

"My lord," said the man, "can't you buy a white rabbit from me?"

Lord Pelham shook his head and went his way without another word. The unknown followed him and said, "My lord, you must buy my white rabbit."

"What shall I do with it?" replied the lord in surprise.

"I am certain, my lord, that you will buy my white rabbit," said the man, placing a revolver to my lord's breast.

"Well, I see I am in your power, and must buy the rabbit. How much do you want for it?"

"One hundred pounds sterling, my lord."

"One hundred pounds for a rabbit?"

"Not a shilling less! And I am sure you will give it to me."

"You shall have the money, but I don't carry so much cash with me."

"I believe it, but your signature is sufficient; I know your banker."

"But I must have—"

"Paper, pen and ink. Here it is, my lord. I thought of everything."

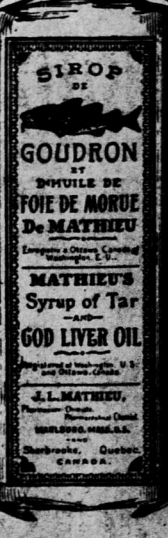

Lord Pelham, who saw only too well that there was no escape from this man, sat down and wrote the check. Then he wanted to continue his walk to the city, but the unknown stepped in his way with the revolver and said: "You are mistaken, my lord, this is the road that leads to your castle. You must now bring your purchase home. Good-bye, my lord. There is your way and this is mine."

Pelham did not consider it advisable to continue this discourse. He took the rabbit, returned to the castle, and never said anything about the price he had paid for it.

The Tale of Perfect Time in a Watch

From Watchmaking to Watch Repairing, between them lies the secret. The Watchmaking is the power which it transmits to the active parts of the watch. The Watch Repairing is the control and regulates the motion. The fitting is most delicate; intricate in the part of the hair. (Unmistakable list (17). Yet it is simple to insert in its performance, so wonderful in its adjustment. The friction from accumulating dirt; lack of oil, etc., destroy these perfect fittings. Do not let your watch run down from neglect. Remember our business is the care of watches, and our opinion costs nothing.

Why "Paisley Flour" marks an advance in home baking.

It eliminates the time and trouble taken when using yeast.
Takes away the uncertainty of ordinary baking powder.
It is always fresh and pure, and retains its raising power very much longer than self-raising flour and cake mixtures.
It gives improved results in lightness, fineness and digestibility.
