FISHERMEN!

Fishermen of late have been complaining of sore and tired feet, besides suffering from Rheumatism, etc., brought on by wearing Rubber Boots. Scores of Fishermen have been telling us of how they suffered the past summer when fishing in the hot sun, their feet having burned and blistered in the Rubber Boots which they wore, and later when the burning ceased their feet were wet with cold perspiration.

Fishermen! Get a pair of SMALLWOOD'S GOOD LEATHER BOOTS. They will keep your feet warm and dry.

You may say, "Leather boots have gone up in price." Quite so, but Rubber Boots have gone up also. We will guarantee that a pair of our Boots will outwear any two pair of rubber boots on the market. Wellington Boots, Napoleon Boots, High and Low Boots, Men's, Boys' and Youths Bellows Tongue Boots.

The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XXX.

"Well, then, hesitatingly, "I don't think Sir Hugh would mind so—very much."

"No!" he exclaims, his conscience suddenly relieved.

"Sir Hugh is a devoted son," she goes on, in a low voice, "and—and I think he meant to marry me as much to please his mother as to please himself."

He starts, and his voice clears.

"It is a comedy instead of a tragedy!" he says, "and that hap-hazard suggestion of mine is the right one. We will fly. Come, say yes, my dear girl!"

"If you think—," she falters.

"I do—I do," he answers, eagerly. "It is the best way of solving the problem. See how easily it can be done! I will go down and get a license—I can, I think—yes, and you can meet me some day! Why not to-morrow?"

Her heart beats, her lips part with barely suppressed eagerness. He has fallen into the trap so completely that it seems almost miraculous.

"To-morrow!" she exclaims, with a little pant.

"Why not?" he says, eagerly. "Every day you remain will but confuse matters, and make them worse. If you so dread an explanation—and I can quite understand it, my dear girl!—why not seize the opportunity to escape from your false position at once? Come, Lucy, my dear Lucy, let us take the leap; it is not in the dark, for I feel that you love me, and my love for you is not of yesterday's growth! Come, say yes, my dear girl!"

"Must I?" she murmurs, and he presses her to him.

"Yes," he says, pondering. "And now, dearest, you must meet me somewhere. Mind, there must be no mistake! Let me see—suppose I met you at the church to-morrow?"

"Stay," he says. "Find some excuse for getting out, say ten o'clock, and go down to the end of the street. I will have a brougham there, and the man shall drive you to St. Michael's."

"Oh, must I?" she breathes again.

"Indeed you must," he answers; then he pats her hand pityingly.

"My poor girl, it is hard that you should have to give up the little fuss and ceremony which you all hold so dearly, but never mind! After all, it is the only way out of the difficulty. Will you come, dearest Lucy? Hush! there is some one outside! Speak! Quick! Ten o'clock to-morrow."

"Yes," she says in a whisper, "if it must be, dear duke!"

"May I seal the compact?" he says, and with courtly grace he stoops and kisses her.

There is barely time for him to do so before Maud's voice is heard in the hall.

"Hush! there is Maud!" she says; then she smiles. "Duke you must be very attentive to her, and—and don't let her suspect anything from your manner." And she glides away from him.

He nods, and so it happens that when Maud comes in she finds Lucy sitting at a great distance from the duke, and intent upon her antimacassar, and the duke coming forward to receive Maud, throws so much impressiveness into his greeting, that poor Maud's tell-tale face is crimson with sanguine hopes and expectations.

CHAPTER XXXI.

"The town is nearly empty; the country is just at its best, got its autumn tints on, and all that, you know. There isn't an auction sale once a week, aunt; and as to the clubs, a fellow cannot go into them without getting his coat splashed with whitewash."

It is Archie who is speaking—Archie, in his white waist-coat and the stiff, stand-up collar which the tyrant, Queen Fashion has decreed we shall all wear—Archie, in his well-cut clothes, and with his handsome face more handsome even than of old in its reflection of his new-born happiness—and he is arguing that they should all leave London.

"Well, but," says Lady Brookley, "you know your uncle never will go out of town, unless it is to Homburg or Wiesbaden. And surely you don't want to go there?"

"No," says Archie, "not yet." And he glances at Dulcie, as she leans over a table arranging some flowers, and humming an air from the last new operetta. "Not yet," he says, a little louder, "not till—ahem!—I go there for our honeymoon. Did you speak, Dulcie?"

"Nary word," she says, without looking round, but with a little dash of crimson in her cheek, for she has caught the word. "What is he trying to persuade you to do now, aunt?"

For by this title Lady Brookley has insisted upon being called by the girl whom she has learned to love as a daughter. "Don't listen to him, dear; he will tempt you into all sorts of wild courses. Oh, dear! how warm it is this morning."

"There!" exclaims Archie, extending his hands triumphantly—"there! I told you so. It is hot—awfully hot; and I'm sure Dulcie looks pale. I've noticed—"

Dulcie turns her face over her shoulder, and laughs at him with defiant contradiction.

"What an awfully thin excuse, sir!"

"No. I don't really think that will do," says Lady Brookley, as she gazes at the beautiful face so eloquent of youth and health. "Try something else, Archie."

"Well, then, say I'm getting pale," he retorts, desperately. "I am indeed; and I'm getting thinner. I assure you my waistcoat hangs on me like a rhinoceros skin, I've no appetite—"

Lady Brookley holds up her hand. "Remember you dined here last night, sir!" she remonstrates.

"Yes, but that was only a fictitious appetite; I didn't like to alarm you."

And he shakes his head with a self-sympathetic smile.

"No, but seriously," he goes on; "why shouldn't we all go away? Somewhere out of this awful dust-heap, which is, by courtesy, called London. I'm like the little boy in the ballads, dying for a mouthful of grass, and a sight of the fresh air."

"But where shall we go?" says Lady Brookley, after the laugh with which this sally is rewarded has passed. "Your uncle is so particular. He hates the sea-side, because it reminds him of the 'jolly days,' as he calls them, when he was in active service—and he doesn't like the usual places inland."

"Look here," says Archie, with a weak attempt at unpremeditation; "why not go down to Armfield? You haven't been there for a couple of years. It's a nice little place—will just be near enough to London for uncle if he must run up, and—"

"And it happens to be within a few miles of the place where a certain young gentleman is going to ride a steeple-chase," puts in the old lady, with a short smile.

Archie nods and laughs.

"That's it," he says, candidly. "I'll own to being selfish, if you like."

"It's quite unnecessary," murmurs a sweet voice at the table.

"I must go down there and see that the nags are all right, and—and—"

"It would be very nice to have one's sport and one's sweetheart both at once," finishes Lady Brookley, laughing.

"Well, why not?" he says. "I should like Dulcie and you to see the race; it is good fun, and we've exhausted everything in town, haven't we, Dulcie?"

"Yes," she says; "everything, I think," and she laughs as she recalls mentally the long list of outings which Archie has organized and carried through. "Even the Zoo begins to pall upon us."

"Well, you must speak to your uncle," says Lady Brookley, with a smile.

"No, Dulcie's the one to do that," he says, shrewdly. "He'd go to Kamchatka if she asked him. Why don't you leave those flowers and join in the confab?" he says, with a weak air of complaint.

"I leave you to settle it," says Dulcie; "but," with a little shy glance at Lady Brookley, "I should like to see the race."

"There!" exclaims Archie, triumphantly—"I told you so! That does settle it."

"Well," says Lady Brookley, "you can both attack your uncle after lunch—mind, after lunch—and if he consents, you can write down to old Mrs. Strong, who has charge of Armfield, and tell her to get it ready."

"That's all right," says Archie, as he goes up to Dulcie and puts his arm round her waist. "After all, I think you'd better leave it to me, Dulcie; but mind, don't you put a word in to contradict me; and if you can, manage to make a poor lunch, and sigh once or twice, to say nothing of looking pale."

At which Dulcie laughs mockingly. "I shall do nothing of the sort, sir, and if I see Lord Edward doesn't like it, I sha'n't let him go." Don't Archie, I shall never finish these flowers."

Does one need to say that these two are happy? Every word, every look of Archie's proclaims his felicity, and surely there must be some reason for the new light which beams in Dulcie's eyes, and the bright, tuneful music which, as in the old days, springs from her lips from early morn till dewy eve.

And she is happy. Not with the wild, delicious happiness of the old days at Holme Castle, but happy with a deeper, more firmly rooted joyousness.

The fact is that Archie has discovered the secret. He has found the way to woo her, and that secret is comprised in as devoted an attention and in as unselfish and patient a worship as ever man lavished on woman.

As he himself declares, he has become absorbed in one great study, and that is—Dulcie. To learn her wishes, her looks, her inclinations, is the task he has set before him, and he is on the road to success.

It is his ministrations—his whole-souled love—that has brought the roses back to the once pale face, and the music to the once silent lips.

And Dulcie, for her part, has learned something too.

She had once called Archie a dolt—a lovely dolt, it is true, but still a dolt.

But she has changed her mind of late, for she has discovered that a man may be as beautiful as an Apollo, and yet possess intelligence and manliness.

Then, again, she has had an opportunity of seeing the estimation in which her betrothed is held by the world at large, and that estimation is a high one. Wherever they go together, she finds herself regarded as a particularly fortunate girl.

Sir Archibald Hope is rich, beyond the dream of avarice. "He is the representative of an old and honored name," as poor Aunt Fernor used to say, and Dulcie is looked upon with envy by every single woman whom she meets.

But this is not all. Lady Brookley had declared that no woman could see much of Archie without loving him, and Dulcie has recognized and acknowledged the spell.

SECURED A "JAR"—A father and three sons who reside in the West End and are not in the old age class or suffering from acute illness, such as described in the new prohibition rules and regulations, were in possession of a "jar" yesterday afternoon and created quite a sensation in that part of the city. Judging by the size of the receptacle and the contents, which we learn were less than twenty per cent. alcohol proof. It looks as if there is a little drop to be had at other places than the Government store on Duckworth Street.

Poultry Show Formally Opened

At eight o'clock last evening in the British Hall, the sixth annual poultry show, held under the auspices of the Nfld. Poultry Association, was formally opened by His Excellency the Administrator, Sir William H. Forwood, who was accompanied by Lady Forwood and A. G. Watson, in the presence of a large gathering. Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., and Mr. J. Calver, President and Secretary of the Association, respectively, received the Administrator, who, before declaring the exhibition opened, spoke in felicitous terms of the Poultry Association and their efforts to encourage poultry raising. He thought that this important industry would be greatly stimulated by the displaying of birds in the outports. He was particularly pleased with the exhibition this year, because of the elaborate arrangements and the suitable locality in which it was held, which was sure to have the effect of attracting an increased number of visitors. When His Excellency had finished, the display of birds, which, though smaller in number, are of larger size and superior breed to those exhibited in previous years, were inspected and all the visitors expressed themselves as highly delighted with what they had seen. Judge Henry was also favorably impressed and intimated that the quality of the exhibits would do credit to more pretentious places. Features of the show were Mr. T. Lynch's trained dog, guinea pigs, tame rabbits, Belgian hares and sunflower seeds. The last was grown by Mr. W. R. Butler, of Leslie Street and Topsail and is an excellent poultry seed. In conjunction with the poultry show there was a fine display of vegetables, which are worth seeing. They were grown by Mr. J. King, of Klondyke Farm, who has generously offered them for sale for the benefit of the W. P. A. Fund. The poultry exhibition is being continued for three days, closing tomorrow night when there will also be a sale of some birds in aid of the W. P. A.

All the birds, which were neatly arranged in coops, were examined by Judge Henry yesterday and the prize-winners in the respective classes are as follows:—

Thin, Weak, Nervous Men Need Zoetic

Men who are daily plunging through the strain of modern business—who are taxing their brain power to capacity—need the help of this world's greatest tonic. Zoetic is a scientific preparation compounded from pure food essences. It's formula contains a good proportion of glycerophosphates which has a direct action on the brain—it gives you a new health, strengthens the tissues, renews nerve force, and will repair the waste that is caused by worry and over-exertion. All thinking men need Zoetic—need it badly and quickly. Remember three meals a day is not sufficient body nourishment under prevailing conditions. Every organ of the human body must have attention as to the details of your business—and this necessity will be found, such to your surprise and satisfaction in Zoetic. Wedding Bells.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Hilda K. Bartlett, well and popularly known in this city, was united in holy matrimony to Mr. F. Ellis Reid, a promising young business man of Heart's Delight.

The ceremony took place quietly at the home of the bride's father, Mr. John Bartlett, 115 Cornwall Avenue, and was performed by the Rev. Jabez Saint, S.T.L., President of the Methodist Conference. Miss Alice Lester and Miss Nellie Reid waited on the bride, and the groom was ably assisted by the Rev. L. G. Hudson, B.A., of the Methodist College staff, and Pie Howard Reid. The bride was beautifully attired in directoire satin with a court train. She wore well and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of Calla Lilies and chrysanthemums with maiden hair fern, and was given away by her father, Mr. John Bartlett. The bridesmaids were dressed in Copenhagen blue silk, wore slippers of shell pink, and carried bouquets of chrysanthemums, sweet peas, and maiden hair ferns.

The groom's present to the bride was a handsome silver dressing set, to the bridesmaids gold birthstone rings, and to the groomsmen gold cuff link and a wrist watch. A reception was given to the immediate friends of the bride and groom at the bride's home and dainty refreshments were served. During the pleasant social hour both the young couple received the felicitations of their friends. Congratulatory messages were read from relatives of the groom in Boston and Newfoundland. Mr. Levi Chaffin in a very fitting manner proposed the health and happiness of the bride and groom, to which the latter made an appropriate reply. A toast to the bride's parents was proposed by Mr. E. W. Lyon and responded to by Mr. Bartlett. The toast to the bridesmaids was proposed by Mr. Lemuel Bartlett and responded to by Mr. Hudson. The whole party then drank to the health of our boys in khaki on the firing line. The many handsome presents sent in are a sufficient testimony to the popularity of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid left by evening train for Holyrood where a brief honeymoon will be spent, and after returning to the city to receive friends, they will make their future home at Heart's Delight.

My Limbs Would Twitch

And Waken Me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

Windsor, Ont., November 22nd.—This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the nerves that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigor and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting. Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Arthur street, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when fire broke out in the adjoining house. My nerves were in such a state that, after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little while. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time, but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that this treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night, and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much good the Nerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

"Please talk me how the widow's cards should be engraved," requested Mrs. Widow.

"A widow is at liberty to retain her husband's Christian name on her card or to substitute her own for it. I think, as a rule, the widow uses her maiden name," said her sister.

On to Cambrai!

In this first flush it is difficult to know which aspect of the great drive which the British have made and are making towards Cambrai to dwell upon most of its opportune things, its intended effect and great possibilities or its altogether new and unique character. All three features distinguish it. Perhaps the last first strike and holds the imagination. Heretofore tremendous artillery preparation has been absolutely necessary to any large attack, both to level and reduce as far as possible the opposing trenches and machine gun emplacements and to tear up the tangled barbed wire that would else hold up the infantry disastrously. This the British, by sheer weight of artillery, have been able to accomplish, but at the expense of the total elimination of the element of surprise. The problem of combining that element with a successful advance has been, until this, an insoluble one. It has been solved, with an unexpected completeness, by a British invention, the tanks. The whole plan has been most admirable, and though we may have charged the Germans with want of brains we must admit that the deficiency is made good at Headquarters. The quiet massing of troops in this neglected area, was probably not altogether unobserved by the enemy, though sufficiently so to be the first line feather in the British cap. In the absence of the accustomed bombardment the Germans must have paid no great attention to the mere concentration of troops, and were thus fooled completely. Then, all being ready, the tanks lurched forward over comparatively smooth

Shall Your Brethren Go to War and Shall Ye Sit Here?

So spake Moses to the children of Gad and of Reuben, when they pleaded to remain with their cattle, instead of going with the children of Israel, across the Jordan, to fight the battles of the Lord.
Moses was too much of a patriot and too astute a general to let their selfish interests interfere with the plans of the Lord, in taking the promised land for all the twelve tribes.
Moses knew what we realize to-day, that when the nation is at war all the people are at war; and all must do their share, fighting, or otherwise helping the nation to win.

What the people of Israel did to win the promised land, we in Newfoundland must do to preserve Freedom, for the War has resolved itself into a life or death struggle between autocracy and the Freedom-Loving peoples of the earth.
Now, are you going to sit down and do nothing, while your brethren are fighting for you, are dying for, and in dying are asking for the help which they rightly expect of you, but which you selfishly withhold?
What you are going to do, to help, DO QUICKLY!

Police Court.

(Before Judge Morris).
An interesting case, in which a woman was summoned by her son-in-law for stealing two young trees, engaged the attention of the court a considerable while this morning. The case was the outcome of a dispute between both families. The principal witness for the plaintiff was the husband of the defendant. The sharp, snappy reports of the witness evaded the practical and cleverly put queries by the lawyer for the woman. There was also much doubt about the kind of trees that were stolen. Once it was said to be lilac, another witness designated it as a dogberry tree and another an apple tree. After all the witnesses were examined the Judge found no direct evidence against the accused and dismissed the case.
The case about a watch that made history was continued and had not finished up to 4 p.m.

Wife Ran Away

Last night a young man reported at the police station that his wife had deserted him and had left the country. Though only a year married, their life had been an unhappy one. He shipped to the fishery last spring and only returned home about a month ago, having made a successful voyage. One day last week, during the absence of her husband she disappeared from home and has not since been heard of. Enquiries have elicited that she bought a railway ticket for Halifax, supposedly on her way to the land of Uncle Sam.

Hymenal.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of England Cathedral at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the contracting parties being Miss Gertrude Miles, of Bonaville, for many years, C. of E. teacher, and Mr. Jacob Garland, merchant of Pushtrough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Wood. The bride, who was handsomely attired in a dress of silk crepe de chene with pearl trimmings and bridal veil with wreath of orange blossoms, carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums and maiden hair fern, entered the church leaning on the arm of Mr. G. Hall, of Knowling's employ, and was attended by Miss L. Lukins and Miss M. Dawe, who wore dresses of pink silk with hats to match, while the groom was supported by the bride's cousin, Corp. T. Fifield, returned veteran, and Capt. H. Rowell. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the residence of Mr. Fred Lukins, 14 Bell St., where supper was partaken of and a very enjoyable evening spent. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents, including several pieces of silver. The groom presented the bride with a cheque, to the bridesmaids gold brooches, and to the best man a set of cuff-links. Mr. and Mrs. Garland leave shortly for their future home, Pushtrough. We wish them every happiness for their future.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD SALE.
The sale of work held yesterday afternoon by the ladies of St. Margaret's Guild was well attended and the proceeds up to expectations. Teas were served and at night a very enjoyable concert was held. Those taking part were: Miss J. Strang, Mrs. Foster, Miss M. Mitchell, Miss A. Hayward, Mr. T. P. Halley, Mr. A. Bulley. A Tarce entitled "Miss Belinda's Burglar" was very enjoyable, being presented by Misses Coaker (2), Dowton and Christian. A feature of the evening was Miss Bromber's dancing class, whose performance was greatly admired. The graceful and easy movements of the performers presented one of the finest exhibitions of artistic dancing seen in the city for some time. Both teacher and pupils are to be congratulated. Miss Ethie acted as accompanist during the evening, and to her with Mrs. Sterling, who acted as the dramatic committee, much of the success achieved is due.

LEADERSHIP!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The other day I happened to be behind the scenes in a big store where a group of clerks were moving the contents of a large set of shelves and stacking them in another place. "Go through here," called one of the clerks who had discovered a short cut. "Come on," he urged, "this is a much quicker way." And still nobody would try it. Nor did he succeed in getting more than one or two to try his way, all the time I watched. Yet unquestionably his was the better way and would have saved them time and effort. Why couldn't he make them see it? Because he hadn't the quality of leadership. The ability to lead, is a rare and wonderful quality. One Leader Would Have Welded Them Into An Efficient Force. I was once at a fire in the country where one man with the power of leadership could have organized the forces into a bucket brigade that would have saved the first house. But there was no such man in the community. There were brave men and there were energetic workers and there were plenty of "willing hands" but no leader to weld all this into an efficient fighting force. Everyone did his bit in his own way. There were too many here, not enough there. Men ran about with buckets when they should have been organized into a coherent line, people fell over each other, and while confusion reigned, the fire burned. When one tries to analyze the qualities that help make a man a leader it is hard to tell what they are. It isn't Always The Men Who Can Talk Who Can Lead. Leadership is supremely important. I have known very quiet men to whom everyone instinctively turned to in any crisis. I think one ingredient is self command. You can't command others unless you first command yourself. You must know where you are going before you try to lead others. (And yet there have been leaders who lead in the wrong direction. I suppose they must have felt so burningly sure they knew where they were going that they convinced others.) It is easier to say what qualifies a leader, shouldn't have than those he should. No One Who Gets Shri!l Could Lead. You cannot imagine anyone who gets shri!l in excitement possessing the power of leadership. Or anyone who whines. Or a nervous person. Or a self conscious person. When you cannot explain why some people have any particular power and others lack it, why, for instance, some people are popular and others equally good looking and intelligent are not, there is one phrase that you can always fall back upon. I think I shall have to take refuge in it in this case. To be a leader you must have "personal magnetism." Where can you get it? Would I could tell you. I could certainly make my fortune selling the secret.

MUD.
Mud is a combination of water, beeswax, gum-arabic and despair that was originally imported from the bottomless pit. It is spread thickly over the face of nature in the spring and fall of the year, and prevents the speed maniac from committing suicide by looping the loop through a barbed wire fence. It also has another noble mission, as people who are afflicted with internal rheumatism would rather bathe in it up to their eyeballs than sink languorously into the arms of a porcelain tub. Thousands of people who have never felt the deft, appealing touch of sciatic rheumatism, however, are obliged to

Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headaches, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

People take mud baths several times a year with all their clothes on. take mud-baths several times a year with all their clothes on. Mud is caused by rain falling on the earth for four days and nights and refusing to run off. For some reason or other, mud always prefers to locate in the middle of the public highway, where it can clasp an approaching automobile to its bosom and climb all over the windshield. Why is it that mud will not choose some other place to lie down, like a pasture or a cornfield, instead of curling up on the highway to a depth of nine feet and causing the restless tourist to breathe sulphur and brimstone on the evening air? The most deadly form of mud found on this continent is the yellow clay variety, which hardly ever removes from a pair of cream-colored pants than a wad of gum which has been thoughtlessly sat upon. It is mournful to think of the number of chirping swains who have left home in lavender panties and a top buggy, to court some fair maiden at her home twelve miles from the town clock, only to sink up to the horse's hiplets in damp, penetrating yellow mud and have to be dry-cleaned before being admitted to the parlor. Mud-singing is the genteel art of making a pillar of the church who is running for office look like somebody who would rob the baby's bank on Christmas Eve. If a woman who thinks she has married an alabaster saint will allow him to run for office just once, she will learn that she is cemented to a reformed jailbird, a robber of honoraries, an oppressor of union labor and a four-time bigamist who forges checks for a living. This is mud-singing reduced to an exact science. If mud doesn't strike any deeper than the clothes, it can be put up with.

Sound Logic

A colored preacher had just concluded a sermon on "Salvation am free" and announced that a collection would be taken up for the benefit of the Parson and his family. A member in the audience objected to the paradoxical nature of the proceedings and received this bit of negro logic in response: "S'pose yo' was thirsty an' come to a river. Yo' could kneel right down an' drink your fill, couldn't yo'? An' it wouldn't cost yo' nothin'. Dat water would be free. But, s'posin' yo' was to hab dat water piped to your house, yo' hab to pay, wouldn't yo'? Waal, brudder, so it is wid salvation. Be salvation am free, but it's de hab-in' in' it piped to yo' dat yo' got to pay fo'."

BRITAIN'S FOOD.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Baron Rhoads, Food Controller, in a speech in the House of Lords today, said he was still hopeful that compulsory rationing could be avoided, but that it must come unless in the approaching few weeks the public responded to appeals for voluntary rationing. He said there is no fear whatever of famine, but the country now has to supply France and Italy. If it were only a question of supplying Great Britain, he said, he thought compulsory rationing would be needless.

PATRIOTISM OF LABOUR.

A favorable report on a resolution calling for the citizens of Allied countries brought on heated debates of the motion of the American delegation of the International Labor. It reached a climax when Thos. Black, Canadian delegate, characterized the Congress as "dastardly legislation" on to retract or leave the Convention. The Congress endorsing the resolution by a vote of 224 to 222. A number of delegates and speakers had replied to Black, in the case of Toronto, Ontario, that Black's statement did not represent the sentiment of the Trades Union. The motion was dropped after the report of the delegate from Canada on the definition of dastardly. President Compton, "He should consider what he has said at war," continued. "The delegate doesn't realize he should wake up. It is no question for academic purposes are at war for the safety of the world's democracy and we are able to win it. It is not done to win it." President then recognized delegate G. Toronto, who said that he didn't express the feelings of the people. "If he is of military duty to be serving his Labor men high and low in are out to win the victory of the front at home with the American people in every part of the world."

PATRIOTISM OF AMERICAN LABOUR.

BUFFALO, N.Y., To-day.
A favorable report to-day of a resolution calling for conscription of the citizens of Allied nations in this country brought on one of the most heated debates of the annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor. It reached a climax when Thos. Black, Canadian delegate, who characterized the Conscription Law as "dastardly legislation" was called on to retract or leave the floor of the Convention. The Committee's report endorsing the resolution was adopted by a vote of 224 to 20 amid a storm of cheers, but not until a large number of delegates and President Gompers had replied to Black, and delegate Gary of Toronto, Ont., had declared that Black's statement didn't represent the sentiment of the Canadian Trades Union. The demand for retraction from Black was not put in the form of a motion and the matter was dropped after the adoption of the Committee report. "I would advise the delegate from Canada to look up the definition of dastardly," said President Gompers. "He might then reconsider what he has said. We are at war," continued Gompers, "and if the delegate doesn't realize it yet, he should wake up. It is no longer a question for academic discussion. We are at war for the safety of the world's democracy and every honorable thing that can be done must be done to win it." President Gompers then recognized delegate Gary of Toronto, who said that delegate Black didn't express the feelings of Canadian Trade Unionists or the Canadian people. "If he is of military age, it is his duty to be serving his country. Labor men high and low in our ranks are out to win the war by service at the front and at home, and we are with the American Federation of Labor in every way it does towards that end."

THE POLAND FARCE.

BERLIN, via London, To-day.
The Polish Regency Council, upon entering office, says an official statement issued to-day, sent a letter to Emperor William declaring it was its intention to conduct the regency on the lines laid down in the Emperor's manifesto of November 5 and December 12. The letter added: "We expect the Polish people, in the further development of historical events and relying on their own defensive force and pursuing their own interests founded on the common western culture, will strive with both the Central Powers for common political and economic aims. Emperor William in reply said he shared the regency's conviction that on the basis of union with the Central Powers, vital conditions are provided for guaranteeing prosperity to the Polish State and the blessings of peace, culture and welfare to its citizens. The Emperor added he was confident that Poland had been called to enter a new period of national greatness and thereby has become an important factor in Europe's development in accordance with western ideals of culture. The Emperor concluded with the words, "May the Almighty bless your work."

AMSTERDAM, To-day.
Commenting on President Wilson's despatch to Col. House regarding unity of plan and control among the nations at war with Germany, the Socialist organ Vorwaerts of Berlin says it is ordered that America, which supposedly is crusading against autocracy, should put the thumb-screw on the democratic states of Western Europe by insisting on a joint war council. The Vorwaerts, like other German papers, gloats over what it calls England's growing political dependence on America.

GIVE THEM ENOUGH ROPE.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
The Bolsheviks have issued a warning to the wealthy classes and servants, whom the extremists accuse of inciting strikes in the State, and municipal servants. The warning says: "You are playing with fire. You will be the first to suffer from the famine that is threatening the country and army. You will be deprived of the right of receiving products. All your stores will be requisitioned and your property confiscated." The Bolshevik leaders are holding out to their supporters the hope that the proletariat of other countries will start sympathetic revolutions on the Russian model. Thus their decrees says that German and Austrian Socialists hail the Bolshevik revolution and French Socialists greet the Bolsheviks in their newspapers. A number of anarchist papers in Petrograd are now openly urging the abolition of all authority of any kind. A Bolshevik commission visited the State Bank to-day with the object of opening the treasury safes, but withdrew after the workers and soldiers on guard had refused to permit this violation of State property.

ITALIAN SHIPPING LOSSES.

ROME, To-day.
Italian marine losses from sub. attacks during the week ended November 18 were 1 large steamer sunk, another steamer damaged by torpedo and towed into port afterwards.

TO TURN ITALIAN FLANK.

AMSTERDAM, To-day.
The war correspondent of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says the Teutonic allied movement for the turning of the Italian left flank is now being executed in the face of great Italian superiority of infantry, who have prepared strong defences on the Lower Piave River.

SMASHING THE HINDENBURG LINE.

LONDON, To-day.
The great Hindenburg defence line upon which the German Commander-in-Chief had built his hopes of holding the British from inroads into the open territory beyond, has been smashed and the task apparently was an easy one. Attacking over a front of 32 miles, extending from the Scarpe River east of Arras to St. Quentin, Field Marshal Haig with his English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh troops has made one of the most rapid and spectacular drives of the present war, catching the Germans completely by surprise in the onslaught, capturing numerous positions which were considered impregnable and taking in addition thousands of prisoners and numerous guns. The apex of the offensive apparently is centred on the important railway junction of Cambrai, lying to the east of the old line midway between Arras and St. Quentin. Having taken the town of Marcelling, Annah, Graincourt and Novelles, the victorious troops at last accented were well within gun range of Cambrai with its railway lines and roadway branches towards all the main points of the compass. Latest advices indicate that the British have not yet ceased their attack, but aided by monster tanks, which are leading the way followed by infantry and machine gun attachments, are pressing forward for further gains. Synchronously, to the south around St. Quentin and east of that point in the Alsne region the French have begun an offensive. As no details of this offensive had been reported it doubtless has the object of pushing back the Germans eastward in the former sector and northward in the latter region toward Laon, strategic moves which if successful doubtless would compel that portion of the German line north of St. Quentin which is still intact to fall back precipitately eastward. The British drive was begun without the usual artillery preparation and as the tanks and infantrymen made their way through the wire entanglements and pressed into the German first line the surprised enemy began sending up myriads of signal rockets calling for assistance. Whether aid was rushed up is not known, but seemingly the surprised Germans fled in disorder, leaving all kinds of equipment behind and in most cases did not take time as usual to apply the torch to the villages they evacuated. The British casualties are described as extremely light while German dead covered the ground as the British passed forward. Reports to-day indicate that the penetrations in the region of Cambrai have exceeded five miles, and at one point the troops swept on five miles beyond the German lines, capturing additional villages. The offensive was under the direction of General Sir Julian Hedworth George Byng, and General John J. Pershing, Commander of the American troops in France, was an interested observer of it. An indication that the Germans fortified line has been passed by the British at some points is the entry of cavalry into the Tenthonne invaders along the Piave River and in the hilly region from the upper reaches of that stream to Lake Garda. Nowhere has the enemy been able to gain additional ground. On the contrary several violent attacks in the hilly country have been repulsed with heavy losses. Probably owing to the present lack of Jerusalem, the enemy has not renewed his attacks against Monte Tomba and Monte Montenera, vital points barring the way to an invasion of the Venetian plains from the north. On the coastal front Italian and British warships are bombing the enemy positions. Still further progress has been made by the British in Palestine, the line of General Allenby now having been advanced to points five miles northwest and six miles west of Jerusalem. The former position was taken at the point of the bayonet. British shipping losses last week aggregated seventeen vessels; only ten of those, however, were craft in excess of 1,000 tons.

GERMAN CATHOLICS SUPPORT IVY LEAGUE.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
An official German statement radiographed from the Government station at Naun says that the Catholic clergy of Germany, rejecting the principle of the sovereignty of the people, have aligned themselves in support of the ruling House and monarchic constitution. The communication to-day follows: German bishops in a letter from the Episcopal throne this coming Sunday a pastoral letter in which it is declared that the Catholics of Germany repel the attacks against the German ruling House and Monarchic constitution of the state. Catholics should protect the throne against outside enemies and internal enemies. The Bishops reject the sovereignty of the people, which only brings other forms of inequality and servitude and constraint, of which the world war offers many examples.

TREMEMENDOUS BATTLE IN ITALY.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Tuesday. (By Associated Press)—The heavy fighting which began on Sunday in the morning continues with great violence, centering on the slope of Mont Perene. The enemy's masses have made alternate fierce attacks with infantry assaults, which have been repulsed by the heroic bravery of the Italian troops. The battle is taking a wide range and gradually concentrating on three main fronts. It is not a question of gaining or losing kilometres but it is a gigantic battle in which Italy's part in the war with its result and effect on her ally is largely at stake. The Austro-German offensive which began three weeks ago has not diminished but is steadily intensifying. The front attacks thus far have failed on the Piave and northern Asiago Plain. This compels the enemy to attempt to make a break in one of the Italian flanks as the only resort after the checking of the frontal attacks. This explains the gradual shifting of the front to three main divisions, the first along the Piave, the second from Brenta to the Brenta, the third from Brenta across the Asiago Plateau. The enemy's advance on the Piave and menace to Venice is fairly checked after the speedy repulse of the last few days, but the Austrians and Germans are still on the east bank of River with formidable forces pressing against the narrow straits. At the other end of the line behind Asiago the Italians have made splendid resistance and the enemy attacks have been worn down after having suffered losses estimated at a good part of three divisions; but in the central sections between the Piave and Brenta Rivers his attacks thus far have been "readily augmented and it is in this portion of the line that conditions continue grave. The Italian positions which General Diaz announced as abandoned are northwest of Guero on the Upper Piave, and the front now runs south of Guero. It is along this line where the mountains meet the plains and river valleys that the greatest effort is now being made.

near Monte Montenera and Monte Tomba. This northern sector is very vital to the east front along the Piave, as a breach at the north would bring the enemy in the rear of the Piave line, which thus far has resisted all frontal attacks, not only as regards the immediate result there but in connection with its effect on the Piave line. The Count of Turin, Commander-in-Chief of the Italian cavalry, has issued an address highly commending the part taken by the cavalry in protecting the retreat to the Piave. Particular mention is made of the groups under Generals Alroldi and Piella.

A COVERT THREAT.

GENEVA, To-day.
The Austrian Embassy in reply to a telegram sent to her by the Geneva press association asking her to take Venice and its treasures under her protection, says it is understood that an open town which makes no attempt to defend itself has certainly the right to every indulgence. Nevertheless the fate of Venice depends entirely upon the action of the Italian Government.

TORPEDOED IN MEDITERRANEAN.

LONDON, To-day.
A British patrol vessel was torpedoed by an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean on November 18, according to an Admiralty statement issued to-day. Four officers and five men of the crew were killed.

AMERICANS LOST AND DESTROYED.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Lieut. Commander Walter E. Reno, Commanding Officer, his two Junior Officers, Lieut. Chase F. Woderburn and Ensign H. G. Skinner, Jr., and 18 enlisted men were lost in the sinking of the American torpedo-boat destroyer USS Chauncey in the zone on Monday morning, the Navy Department was advised to-day by Vice-Admiral Sims.

WORK OF THE TANKS.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, To-day.

Thousands of British cavalry to-day were co-operating with the great army of tanks and infantry in continuing the successful assault begun yesterday by the British troops against the Hindenburg defence. Open fighting has been going on at many places since yesterday and the horse troops, who are the backbone of the army, have been rendering invaluable service in "mopping up" the enemy territory. The German losses have been heavy. At least four divisions of infantry had been badly smashed since the fighting began. Large numbers of civilians already have been released from the captured towns, about five hundred were brought back from Masniere and other places furnished their quotas of non-combatants who received their deliverance with rejoicing. General Bing asked his chances on the tanks, and the tanks made good beyond the wildest expectations. Just before these mighty engines went forward to prepare the way for the infantry and cavalry, the General commanding the iron monsters distributed an order of the day in which he said, "We expect every tank to do its damndest." They did this and dealt the Germans one of the most staggering blows they have received in many months. With the tank "General" leading them in a monitor in which he flew his flag they charged through two of the strongest lines in the German defence system on the western front as though these fortified trenches had not been there, and behind them on a front of some six miles the infantry and cavalry pushed through the great gaps which had been made.

CANADIANS JUBILANT OVER BYNG'S SUCCESS.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, To-day.

The splendid British advance has electrified the Allied forces on the western front. Nowhere has the striking success of Byng and his army been greeted with greater enthusiasm than by the Canadian Corps. None of the congratulations pouring in upon him are more sincere than those from the Canadian force, whom he commanded so ably. So well was the secret of the advance kept that it was not until the afternoon of the attack that the whisper ran from division to division, brigade to brigade and battalion to battalion that the army of which General Diaz was striking to the south. With that whisper went the conviction that success would accompany the advance. By evening, when the splendid success of the attack was known, Canada in Flanders was jubilant.

A New Thrill For Blase Motorists

Driving a Willys-Knight is a greater enjoyment than the novelty of your first motor car.

It registers an altogether new and different motoring experience.

While many engines perform well when new, the Willys-Knight retains its maximum efficiency, in fact grows better with use.

Can you conceive of a greater boon? It explains why the passive tolerance of many motorists has been changed into active enthusiasm by the Willys-Knight.

One veteran motorist says his car glides so smoothly and evenly as though there were a vacuum in front of the radiator instead of the powerful and faithful Willys-Knight engine back of it.

Begin now to enjoy the engine advantages obtainable from this engine that makes beneficial use of carbon; that thrives on carbon; that for thousands of miles grows stronger, and more flexible through carbon; that never needs carbon cleaning and valve grinding to "set it up."

Come in and see us about it.

Praises Mr. Walsh.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—It was with feelings of regret when the people of Placentia and vicinity heard of the departure of our worthy and popular representative Mr. W. J. Walsh and family for St. John's.

The people from all parts of the district who have occasion to pass through Placentia express their best wishes for his future welfare and rejoice that although our junior member did not desert us as his colleagues did, but has gone right into the firing line so as to be in a better position to look after the welfare of his constituents. He will need reinforcements, the voice of the people, to make the contractors perform their duty to the public, as the public are paying the contractors, and the peoples interest should be safeguarded and get full value for their money.

Mr. Walsh will see that the coastal steamers, especially the Argyle, perform their trips regularly, as at present he is working night and day to have the Argyle placed on her regular route so that the people of this Bay get the service which they justly deserve also to see that the Portia calls at this port regularly, as last trip going west she passed leaving fifteen passengers and twenty bags of mail behind. But with Mr. Walsh quartered in St. John's he will be in a better position to see that his district gets the full benefit of the traffic and coastal service which the contractors are bound to perform.

Even the ferry service on Placentia Gut and N. E. Arm, which some think good enough, is not half good enough, and the people of Jersey Side and Dunville will very soon get a much better service, as Mr. Walsh intends taking this matter up at once, and see that suitable boats are put on, as the present boats are in a very dilapidated condition, and are not safe for this important service. The extra boat now doing service is one of the old Black Punt which was worn out in the old black punt days, now converted into a motor boat which may fall to pieces any moment crossing with a load of passengers.

Many a poor traveller passing through Placentia will miss the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh where they always received a hearty welcome. Wishing Mr. and Mrs. Walsh every success in their new home and when the next General Election comes round to place him where he justly deserves at the head of the poll.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

THE HINDENBURG LINE BROKEN.

LONDON, Nov. 21. The Hindenburg line has been broken to a depth of four to five miles, the war office announces. The British troops stormed the first system of the Hindenburg line defences on the whole front between St. Quentin and the Scarpe River. The British drive covers a part of the field of last year's offensive on the Somme and a section of the Arras battlefield, south of Arras. The British centre in this thrust is nearly opposite Cambrai, an important German base and railway centre from which the British line on the Bapaume-Cambrai road was about ten miles distant as it had stood for several months. The main force of the push just launched is apparently aimed at Cambrai along this road. The attack was begun yesterday by the third army. There was no artillery preparation and the Germans were taken completely by surprise. The second system of German defences captured by the British is known as Hindenburg's support line. The British captured Benais, Lameau Wood, Lavacourie, the defences known as Welsh Ridge and Ribecourt Village. These operations are continuing. The British also fought their way through Courcellet Wood. Lieut. General Sir Julian Byng is in command of the attacking army. Several thousand prisoners have been taken. The whole German line west of the canal due north to the Bapaume-Cambrai road has been captured. The towns of Havrincourt, Marcoing, Graincourt, Annezin and Neuf Wood have been captured, by the British. A large number of tanks moved forward in advance of the infantry when the attack was opened, and broke through successive belts of German wire defences which were of great depth and strength.

PRISONERS TAKEN.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Andrew Bonar Law announced this evening in the Commons that eight thousand prisoners, including one hundred and eighty officers, have been taken by the British in their present operations. At one point the British penetrated five miles behind the German lines. Several villages in addition to those already announced have been taken.

FRENCH ATTACK.

BERLIN, Nov. 21. The French opened a strong attack on the Germans on a six-mile front north of the Aisne this evening, according to an official report from General Headquarters to-night. The British were still using powerful forces against the Hindenburg line in the Cambrai sector.

HAIG'S REPORT.

LONDON, Nov. 21. The report from Field Marshal Haig's headquarters to-night on the British drive in the Cambrai sector reads: Important progress was made again to-day west and southwest of Cambrai. Though the rain has fallen continuously, the reinforcements which the enemy hurried up to the battlefield to oppose our advance have been driven out of a further series of villages. Other fortified positions and many additional prisoners have been taken. The tanks have again given great assistance to the advance. On our right we made progress in the direction of Crevecoeur Sur Lescant. Northeast of Masnières we captured the enemy's double line of trenches on the east bank of the Scheidt. Sharp fighting occurred in this neighborhood and hostile counter attacks were driven off. North of Marcoing, the village of Noyelles Des Lescant was captured in the morning. Here also heavy fighting occurred and hostile counter attacks were successfully repulsed. During the morning Scotch troops moving northeast from Flequières captured German defensive lines southwest of Cantaing and the village itself together with 500 prisoners. Later in the day they continued their advance and established themselves in positions more than five miles behind the former German front lines. North of Annezin, West Riding battalions have been engaged with the enemy south and southwest of Bourlon Wood. Further west, Ulster regiments crossed the Bapaume-Cambrai road and entered Moeuvres. During the day strong hostile counter attacks against our new positions in the neighborhood of Bullecourt have been defeated. The number of prisoners who have passed through our collecting stations exceeds 8,000, including 180 officers. The number of guns captured has not yet been ascertained.

REUTERS' CORRESPONDENT CABLES.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Reuter's correspondent at the British headquarters cables it has been raining hard since yesterday morning, and it is still raining, but somewhere beyond the veil of storms, our troops and tanks are still pushing forward. We get reports of them even on the Marcoing-Masnières line and of patrols penetrating in the direction of Noyelles; Noyelles is three and one-eighth miles from Cambrai. The heavy blow dealt the Germans has driven a wide wedge through the Hindenburg line in which there is every evidence of the Germans fleeing or surrendering without making a serious attempt to hold the defences, which were of an enormous strength. Up to the actual hour of the British attack there were moments when a great stillness reigned over the battlefield. It seemed impossible that within a short time the line would be a seething cauldron. At 5.20 o'clock on the left of the line tanks distributed over a wide front moved forward. At the same time the British infantry on either side of the land monitors made thrusts at the German line. Within a few seconds the entire enemy front for a distance of many miles was flaming with variegated signals, which called frantically for help from the German gunners in the rear. Red, green, white and blue lights shot up in every direction and rockets showered myriads of stars down through the gloom like a mammoth display of fire works. The dismay of the Germans was blazed across the sky as clearly in this unforgettable whirlwind pyrotechnic as though their higher command had officially announced it. Their guns came into action, first one, then half a dozen, then scores, but their fire was weak. They were not prepared for such an eventuality, or they would have shown it in their artillery work. The British big guns soon began to break the silence on their side, not in the form of barrage fire, but in counter battery work. Meanwhile the tanks rolled on over what was virtually a virgin battlefield. For weeks the process of concentrating men and guns for this great attack had been going on, and so carefully had it been done that comparatively few officers in the British army knew what was transpiring. It was a startling move on the part of Field Marshal Haig to open a battle so quickly on a quiet part of the line far removed from the cockpit of Europe around Ypres. For many months there had been nothing more than occasional raids with now and then a flurry of artillery fire in the Cambrai sector. This morning before daylight things were moving along at much the same pace. The Germans had evinced some nervousness during the night and for a few minutes about 5.30 a.m. dropped a barrage along a section where it probably appeared as though the British might be planning a raid. The enemy presumably had been looking for something in this nature, but that they did not expect a battle was clear. It is evident that the correspondent reached a point near the British line a little after 6 o'clock. At that hour there was very little artillery work on either side. Machine guns occasionally broke out with their staccato bark. Then came a period of absolute silence. Suddenly one line of British tanks moved forward, and in a moment the variegated signal lights of the Germans shot high in the air. The British troops came out of their shelters with fixed bayonets and grenades and followed the tanks swiftly toward the enemy barriers. The ground was firm and covered with long grass. There were few big shell holes such as are to be seen in Flanders, for comparatively little artillery work had been done against this sector. It was ideal going for the big land monitors, and they made the most of it. As they started forward the British put a heavy screen of smoke up all about them so that it was impossible for the enemy to see them many yards away. The tanks reached the German outpost line in front of the main line and without stopping surged through it towards the barbed wire entanglements, their guns working steadily all the time. Here was a point where it had been feared they might encounter difficulties, but they didn't. They crashed through the barbed wire and by 7.29 the British infantry were going through the gaps thus made. At 7.47 the infantry operating just west of Havrincourt had swarmed up the elevation known as Mt. Vesuvius. A few minutes later this knoll was blown up, having been mined by the Germans. At 8.34 seven tanks and infantry were seen in Havrincourt station. In evacuating Havrincourt the Germans did comparatively little damage and the place hadn't suffered greatly from shell fire. It is in much better condition than many of the towns which saw the bitter fighting of the Somme last year. Few, if any, German airplanes ventured over the British lines. This morning there was considerable fog and this, added to the smoke barrage, made observation practically impossible for them. British airplanes, however, were operating in large numbers, flying in most cases within a few yards of the ground. Fighting was still continuing this evening.

DEMAND FOR HIGHER WAGES.

SYDNEY, Nov. 21. The wage committee of the A.M.W. made demands of the Dominion coal company in which it is said a request is made for an advance of wages with a minimum of 30 per cent, and a maximum of 75 per cent. The demands are so sweeping that they could not be considered at the moment, and the committee was informed the matter will be laid before the directors, and the miners will be apprised of the former's decision early in December.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

ROME, Nov. 21. (By British Admiralty Press.)—Today's official report says: Yesterday there was intense artillery activity on the whole front of the coastal zone. The National Navy and British monitors lent effective co-operation. In the evening the enemy three times made violent attacks on the Monte Pertica, northwest of Monte Grappa. He was repulsed each time with severe losses. On Monte Tomba and Monte Monferrate, infantry actions were not renewed. Our aircraft carried out bombing operations and engaged in several duels with hostile planes, as a result of which two enemy machines were downed.

THE SUBMARINE STILL ACTIVE.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Seventeen British merchant ships were sunk by mines or submarines last week, according to the weekly statement issued by the Admiralty. Of these, ten were ships of 1,600 tons or over.

THE RECENT NAVAL ACTION.

Base of the British Grand Fleet, Nov. 21. (By Associated Press.)—The recent naval action in the Cattegat where the British sank a German cruiser and ten armed patrol ships, is an example of the careful planning which lies behind every move on the naval chart. A comparatively insignificant force of British destroyers and light cruisers were the actual stage performers in the little Skagerrak in the Far East. His unpopularity the Cattegat began about 7 o'clock in the morning and was over three hours later. The German fleet behind its fortifications received calls for help, but dared not to take the chance, probably well knowing that any attempt to send help would be confronted with enemies rising out of the sea from all directions. Fog lay over the entire Cattegat throughout the action, and the British destroyers picked off their victims one by one and sank them. The German auxiliary cruiser Marie, which was leading the fleet of patrol boats, was a ship of 2,000 tons. Her captain, Herr Lauterbach, was wounded, but reached the Danish shore safely. Naval men who have been on the China station in years past, remember Captain Lauterbach. He was known from Shanghai to Vladivostok as Baron Munchausen, and is said to have been the most unpopular German naval officer in the Far East. His unpopularity extended even to his own men, and in the Cattegat action the first remark made by a German sailor rescued from the sea was the fervently expressed hope that the British had not made a mistake of rescuing his captain. Lauterbach's reputation will probably suffer somewhat from the Cattegat battle. His report that he fired his guns as long as possible is denied by his own men, who declare that Lauterbach was seized with funk as soon as the enemy appeared, and not a single shot was fired from the Marie's gun. An interesting comparison might be made between this clean victory by the British destroyers and the tip and run raid by German light cruisers on the British convoy on Oct. 17. The Germans sent out two of their fastest cruisers in the darkness and struck their blow in nervous haste in the early morning hours, not even rescuing a single life of the hundreds of combatants, and then ran away to spend the remaining hours of daylight in hiding. When night came they sped down the Norwegian coast and returned home without being intercepted. On the occasion of the British victory the fight occurred not in the North Sea, but on Germany's doorstep, not at night, but in daylight, not hurriedly or nervously, for 64 prisoners were taken. The drowning men were rescued from the water, thus providing another vivid contrast between the German and British methods of warfare. Moreover no non-combatant lives were lost or endangered in the British action, whereas the Germans ruthlessly sacrificed scores of innocent neutrals.

A GREAT TRIUMPH.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Earl Derby, in a speech to-day, said that Field Marshal Haig's victory was a great triumph, the full text of which is not yet known.

CONFERENCE COMMENTED ON.

LONDON, Nov. 21. The Anglo-American War Conference yesterday is featured by the newspapers and is commented upon as an event of highest importance. Much is said of the picturesque and historical side of the meeting, but the practical aspects are given equal emphasis. While Lloyd George's statement of the needs of the Allies receives attention, the point also is made that it is necessary for the Allies to remember that the United States is not in the war solely or mainly for their benefit.

DAILY MAIL REPLIES TO CARSON.

LONDON, Nov. 21. In reply to Carson's attack on Northcliffe, the Daily Mail to-day points out Sir Edward Carson's complaint concerning attacks on Admiral Jellicoe, First Sea Lord, and says the proper course is not to make a vague complaint about the attack, but to answer the specific criticism made. If Sir Edward Carson or any other Minister is satisfied about the conduct of the Battle of Jutland, let him make a reasoned reply to Admiral Henderson's criticism in the Daily Mail last month, printed in an article by Admiral David Henderson, criticising the direction of the British fleet in the 'Battle of Jutland.'

FOREIGN MINISTER TROTZKY.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 21. The Foreign Office has been taken over by Trotzky; Sub-Secretary Veratoff, who has had charge since the arrest of M. Terestchenko, formally surrendering control and departing along with the other employees. The military staff headquarters work is reported to be at a standstill except business of army supply.

THE MINORITY IN CONFIDENCE VOTE.

PARIS, Nov. 21. The minority of the 65 in the vote of confidence given to the new Premier, M. Clemenceau, in the Députés last night, was made up almost entirely of Socialists, although some of that party abstained from voting. One Socialist, Andre Lebri, voted for Clemenceau.

PLEDGES SUPPORT.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 21. Without a dissenting vote, the American Federation of Labor to-day reaffirmed its unwavering loyalty to the country and its determination to stand behind the National Administration until peace comes.

CLEMENCEAU'S WAR AIM.

PARIS, Nov. 21. The war aim of Premier Clemenceau is to be a victor, he told the Chamber of Deputies to-day. "For Germany to-morrow expressed the wish to enter into the society of nations I would not agree," M. Clemenceau said. "For Germany's signature cannot be trusted. You ask what my war aims are. My aim is to be a victor." During interpellations after the Ministerial declaration, Deputy Forget demanded the firm handling of political scandals. He declared that Louis Z. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, either is a traitor, or that Leon Daudet, Malvy's accuser, is a scoundrel. He declared that the connection with the scandals of Joseph Calliaux, the former Premier, should be made clear. Premier Clemenceau made an approving gesture, and Mr. Calliaux applauded; but the Premier in reply refused to enter into details. He assured the Chamber that justice would be dealt rapidly and relentlessly for crimes against the country. The Premier expressed sympathy with the Socialists and idealists, and declared that experiments were impossible in war time. He turned the laugh on some of his interrupters by saying that the only advantage of old age is that one becomes deaf.

CHANGE OF COMMANDERS EXPLAINED.

LONDON, Nov. 21. In the course of his despatch dealing with the Egyptian campaign between March and June this year, during which the Turks only escaped a complete disaster, General Murray, at that time Commander in Chief, says it became apparent that General Dobell, commanding the Eastern force, who had previously suffered a severe touch of the sun, was no longer in a state of health to bear the strain of further operations in the coming hot weather. Therefore General Murray most regretfully relieved him of his command, to which Lieut. General Chomands was appointed.

CLEMENCEAU'S WAR AIM.

PARIS, Nov. 21. The war aim of Premier Clemenceau is to be a victor, he told the members of Deputies to-day. "If tomorrow expressed the desire to enter into the society of nations I would not agree," M. Clemenceau said. "For Germany's signature must be trusted. You ask what my aim is. My aim is to be a victor. I am not making interpellations after the fashion of a declaration. Deputy Forde declared the firm handling of the situation. You are in perplexing circumstances when you want to know what to send him. We will try and help you out. He needs something to break the strain always on his nerves. He wants to be taken away from his surroundings for a time, even if it is only his mind.

WE SUGGEST A BOOK.
You think, Oh what is a Book? When he is finished with it it will be no good to him. But you send him cigarettes and cigars which give only about five minutes enjoyment to him alone, while a book, long after he has read it, lingers in his memory. And even after he has finished it it can be passed from one to another in the trenches.

We have the largest collection of Books.
We will save you all the trouble sending it.
Write your letter at home or at our store.

We will supply writing materials and a place for you to write in quietness.
We will mail it for you.
We will try and help you in your selection. Call at
