PARIS, April 2.—Four fresh brigades participated in the German attack which ended in the occupation of the village of Vaux, to the northeast of Verdun, says an eye-witness of the battle.

Another Fresh Brigade. It was a fresh brigade which made its second attack towards 5 o'clock in the morning. It came from the east with an abundant supply of powerful grenades that demolished the houses occupied by the defenders of the town.

NORWEGIAN SHIP SUNK FOURTEEN LIVES LOST

Only One Man Survived Attack, While Ship Lay at Anchor.

LONDON, April 2, 8.12 p.m.—Lloyd's reports that the Norwegian steamship Peter Hume was sunk Saturday night while at anchor. One man, the sole survivor of the crew of 15, has been landed from Kentish Knock Lightship.

WAR SUMMARY

THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

FIGHTING, which was continued in front of the ridge held by the French, and running between Douaumont height and back of the village of Vaux Saturday and Sunday, did not gain the Germans, who forced the combat, any appreciable advantage, for all they obtained from four simultaneous and converging attacks was Caillotte wood, which lies southwest of the old Fort of Douaumont, and they lost any advantage which the possession of this patch of ruined tree trunks and stumps might have given them by the successful French counter-attack which cleared them out of the northern part of this wood and drove a salient into their lines.

The proof of the lack of real success for the Germans in their attacks on the lines immediately west of the Meuse is seen from their absence from launching attacks on Cote du Poivre or "Pepper Hill." If the French did not continue to hold Deadman's Hill, which the Germans claim as their own, but which enables the French to command both banks of the Meuse, the enemy would probably be able to advance down the river and make an assault on the hill with a better chance of storming it.

ASHBURTON WAS SUNK BY SHRAPNEL SHELLS

Five Members of Crew of British Steamer Taken to Hospital.

LONDON, April 2.—(4.50 p.m.)—The British steamship Ashburton has been sunk by shrapnel shells fired by a German submarine. Five members of the crew have been taken to hospital. The vessel, according to the Exchange Telegraph Company, was not armed.

FRENCH RETAKE PART

German Attempts Against Avocourt Position Defeated by Defenders.

LONDON, April 2.—Fresh German attempts to force their way through the Verdun area today, fighting against French troops on the outskirts of the Douaumont position, and the Vaux ridge, succeeded only in gaining the southern part of the Caillotte wood, southeast of Fort Douaumont, where the French later got the advantage, and in general the Germans suffered a severe repulse.

Men's hemstitched handkerchiefs or fine lawn, finished with fancy corded effect inside the hem. Tuesday, $ for 25c. —Main Floor, Centre.

IT IS A CHARMING VOGUE, rightly expressed, the chief mediums being Milan and the semi-transparent crin straws with fine hair braids and a new, soft coarse braid that is known as moss straw. Facings of crepe de Chine, Georgette and silk add to the gaiety of coloring. And brim edgings of lace, straw and tulle give a very airy effect.

The Modish Colors

THESE are worthy of special note, the all black hat being particularly smart, while by way of contrast, will be found the new French (Joffre) blue, Nattier blue, gray, a soft cyclamen pink and a new chartreuse yellow. The color combinations are very striking, for instance, a hat will be carried out in chartreuse and French blue or chartreuse and navy, with a bunch of cherries to give a touch of vivid color—green and purple will be used as the foundation of a hat with a bunch of rose colored roses, or perhaps a purple hat will depend, for distinction, on a curling yellow quill, or a Nattier blue hat on a little apricot flower. Then striped braids, such as yellow and white and black and white are very effective in the plainer hats, especially in sailors of the sports type.

The New Trimmings

SCANTILY used as befits the artistic conception of the large hat that depends upon line, for its effect the garniture is for that reason all the more important. And very novel are the ornaments to be seen on some of the plainer hats—for instance, a shell set in a quilling of ribbon, delightful iridescent bead flowers. But it is quills that strike the most prominent trimming note in smart, ready-to-wear hats—straight quills, curling quills in all sorts of hues and even leather and silk quills, posed at odd angles over and under the brims. Wings, Gourah mounts after the style of the trimmings on the Watteau hat on the right, and little oval bent-over ostrich tips and ostrich edging are much to the fore, while picot edged ribbons and flowers are used in conjunction. —Second Floor, Yonge St.

In Support of the Ever-present Vogue of Navy Blue

LIKE THE WEATHER, navy blue is always with us and only in weave and in shade does it constantly vary. This year Fashion has been unusually liberal with her variations and you may obtain navy in about eight different shades, ranging all the way from the very dark—almost black—men's wear blue to Tokio blue which verges close upon Copenhagen.

In the Suiting Section is an immense assortment of navy materials in which all the fashionable weaves are represented, each of them guaranteed fast dyed. And this, at a time when the shortage of indigo dyes is little less than a calamity, is a point to be specially remarked.

One of the smartest of these new navy suitings is triot serge, which, with the diagonal rib of a fine serge, has a jersey-like interspace that renders it most attractive. Its price is $2.50 a yard.

A new basket weave suiting, almost Japanese in its fineness, is another delightful fabric in a very pretty shade of blue. Price, per yard, $2.50.

In navy blue gabardines, with deep, medium and almost infinitesimally fine cords, there are 6 shades of navy, all at $2.50 a yard.

The popular whipcords and poplins are also represented by cords of various widths and are available in several shades at $2.50 a yard.

Serges offer immense choice both in shade and weave. First come fine worsted and French serges in five shades at $2.00 a yard; wide wale, heavy men's wear serge, as well as a remarkably fine soft French serge at $2.50 a yard; and the finest of Botany yarn serges, which practically refuse to shine at $3.00 a yard. These last include a soft men's wear serge and a particularly supple, unfinished worsted in both dark and light navy.

Many broadcloths are procurable in three qualities, all with soft, satiny surface at $2.00, $2.50 and $3.50 a yard, and very effective is a dark, dark navy broadcloth with almost invisible white pencil stripe. Price, $3.00.

Penic striped and line checked navy gabardines of superfine weave are very handsome fabrics at $3.00 a yard. —Second Floor, Albert St.

The Springtime Mode of the Pelasine and "Long Back" Collars

Charmingly Exemplified in a Collection of Neckwear Just Arrived from Paris

NOW ASSUREDLY Spring has made up her mind to stay with us, and already she is chasing furs to the dim seclusion of cedar wood chests and the icy regions of cold storage, so the question of pretty neck fixings becomes of paramount importance, not only for dresses, but for suits.

And it is a most delectable assemblage of new collars that Fashion has designed for your Spring-time wearing—collars that complete the picturesque note that is struck by the wide skirts and tight little bodices that are borrowed from the modes of 1830. The veritable cape collar of that same period is pre-eminent, and with it all manner of chic models which show greater length at the back than in front.

Illustrating these effects is a superb collection of dainty Paris models, a most exquisite array, breathing the very last word in fashionable neckwear and adorned with the most beautiful handwork—both embroidery and laces.

There are cape collars made of net, scalloped and beautifully embroidered, wider on the shoulders than at the back, giving a very pretty line. There are net collars embroidered in Limerick designs and dainty, fine collars of the sheerest organdie, pleated at the back, some having roll or wired collars and some inserted and edged with real Valenciennes and filet laces, and for such artistic designs and elaboration of workmanship the prices are most moderate, ranging from $2.50 to $10.00.

Immense and Most Interesting Display of $25.00 Dresses for Women Showing All That is New and Modish and Affording the Greatest Variety Ever Offered in The Store at This Price

FIRST YOU MUST RID your mind of all the usual ideas of $25.00 dresses, for these are something quite out of the ordinary. Plans were made some time ago for this display, just to show what can be obtained for $25.00 and our buyer has been scouring the markets for the prettiest, daintiest, most fashionable dresses that have ever been grouped together in the Dress Department for so small a sum. Many of them—most of them really, are samples which, in the ordinary way, would be dollars and dollars more, and their variety is as great as their modishness is pronounced.

There are afternoon, street and evening dresses in all the fashionable silks—taffetas, satins, crepe de Chines, crepe meteoers, corded silk, Shantung, foulard and Georgette, alone and in combination, a special feature being the gayest, brightest little frocks in striped and checked taffetas and foulards, suitable for wear in the house now and for out-of-doors later. These have a most alluring quaintness, some of them with the wide bell skirts of 1830, some of them flounced and rippled and corded in most enchanting fashion.

Transparent bodices, aplenty there are, often made of Georgette veiling, metallic embroidered ribbons and dainty laces in most enchanting fashion. The new full sleeves and sleeves that end in lace frills just below the elbow, stand sponsor for that newness, also the demure rather tight, pointed or jacket bodices. Metallic embroidery is used with great effect often on skirts as well as bodices, and the evening dresses which are frequently fascinating confections of net and taffeta or satin are resplendent with metallic lace and gold and silver galons.

The colors are lovely and include the modish rose, soft mauves and blues and misty grays, the last often given character by a touch of rose or pink or nattier blue, as well as the more ordinary navy and black and quaint combinations, such as old gold and brown, green and blue, etc. Special display at $25.00.

MORE WAR VETERANS ARRIVE FROM FRONT

Twenty-Three From Toronto and District Reached the City Sunday Morning.

GIVEN FINE RECEPTION

Banqueted With Relatives and Friends at Convalescent Home, College Street.

Twenty-three more war veterans of the Toronto district arrived from overseas on Sunday morning. The C. P. R. train which brought the invalided soldiers from Quebec to the city pulled into the Union Station right on time at 7:35 o'clock.

The reception committee at the station included Sgt.-Major George Creighton, representing Mayor Church; W. K. George and G. I. Riddell of the hospital commission; George R. Warwick and George Coleman of the Citizens' Voluntary Aid Association.

The returned soldiers were taken to the Military Convalescent Home on College street, in two gaily decorated street cars. On reaching the convalescent home the soldiers, with 300 relatives and friends, heard addresses of welcome by W. K. George, G. I. Riddell and George R. Warwick.

Twenty Overseas. A Catherine returned from overseas service for the second time yesterday. When the war broke out he went to England as a reservist of the imperial army.

When a boat in which he was working on the Humber River capsize Saturday afternoon near the Old Mill, Edward G. Folkes, 47 years of age, 420 Indian road, was drowned.

Folkes, who was employed as outside man for the Bell Telephone Company, was restraining telephone wires which had been blown away when the ice broke last week.

Arthur Tweedham, 119 York street, was picked up in an unconscious condition on York street, near Richmond street, yesterday afternoon by Policeman 485. He was removed to St. Michael's Hospital in the ambulance. He has a bad cut on the back of his head and slight cuts about the face.

TORONTO STROLL LEADS TO BRISK RECRUITING

Nine Hundred and Fifty Men Offered for Service During Past Week.

SEVENTY ON SATURDAY

More Than Sixty-Seven Thousand Already Enrolled From Toronto and District.

Toronto last week again led the Dominion in the largest number of men who applied at the recruiting depots for enlistment with the colors.

The number now called for from the Toronto district which includes eastern Ontario, is 17,500, it being announced on Saturday that 67,000 of the 85,000 men required from the district have already been enrolled.

The officers of the 201st Battalion held their first meeting on Saturday night. The battalion now numbers nearly 300 strong, and for the purpose of organization and discipline is being divided into three companies.

Official War Statements

British. LONDON, April 2.—The British official communication issued this evening says: "Last night at St. Etloi we captured an officer and four men. The grenade fighting continues."

"The artillery of both sides has been active about Souchez, Angres, St. Etloi, Loos and Ypres. There has been mining activity by both sides about Hulluch and the Hohenzollern redoubt."

Saturday night's British official: "There was considerable aerial activity yesterday on both sides. Hostile artillery was active today along the front between the Hohenzollern redoubt and Souchez. We retaliated by shelling the enemy's positions."

"Enemy artillery was active about Ypres. The enemy fired mines yesterday and today opposite Pricourt and near the quarries and in the Hohenzollern redoubt. Little damage was done to our trenches."

"Last night there was heavy shelling on both sides about St. Etloi and the enemy made three bombing attacks against our new position. The attacks were repulsed."

French. The French official statement of last night reads: "Between the Somme and the Oise, our artillery was particularly active in the regions of Parvillers, Fouencourt and Lassigny, where German trenches were shattered by our fire."

"West of the Meuse the Germans launched several powerful attacks on a corner of the Avoucourt, north of Ypres. The assaults were repulsed by our barrier fire and the fire of our machine guns."

"In the Vosges, the fire of our batteries caused the explosion of a munitions depot east of Reich Ackerkopf, west of Muenster."

"Last night a bombing squadron dropped twenty-eight shells on the railway station at Diksmuide. One of our detachments made a surprise attack on a small Austrian redoubt before the Passend and Brunnels, on the Meuse. Our guns dispersed an enemy column that was being checked by the prompt intervention of our air squadrons."

German. The German official report of Sunday says: "Western theatre: Near Fay, south of the Somme, our troops attacked and after short artillery preparation, was checked by our fire."

"In addition to the position taken March 30, French trenches northeast of Haucourt extending over about 1,000 yards, have been cleared of the enemy."

"In the Vosges, the fire of our batteries caused the explosion of a munitions depot east of Reich Ackerkopf, west of Muenster."

"Eastern theatre: The general position on this front is unchanged. East of Baranovitch there was greater fighting activity than in the west."

"Balkan theatre: There was nothing to report."

Official War Statements

Russian. The official Russian communication, issued from general headquarters Sunday, reads as follows: "Near the Ikakull bridgehead there have been encounters of secondary importance."

"Two hostile aeroplanes were driven down behind the German lines. One of our machines, which was sent out yesterday, is missing."

"The floods continue. In the basin of the upper Tchouk, our Cossacks and riflemen continue their attacks on the mountain positions, which are deep in snow. We have dislodged the enemy from some positions and captured many prisoners."

"The official statement issued Saturday by the Russian War Office said: "Western (Russian) front: The Germans continued to bombard the bridgehead at Ikakull, but were repulsed by our fire. In the same region rising floods compelled the enemy to emerge on his parapets, but our artillery forced him to return to his trenches."

"One of our batteries brought down a German aeroplane which was flying over our positions and dropping bombs on the Dvinsk region. The ice has begun to break up in the Dvinsk region. Our artillery successfully shelled an enemy train at the station of the Avoucourt, north of Ypres. The Germans fled. One of our detachments made a surprise attack on a small Austrian redoubt before the Passend and Brunnels, on the Meuse. Our guns dispersed an enemy column that was being checked by the prompt intervention of our air squadrons."

Italian. The Italian official statement of Saturday says: "There have been minor engagements to the north of the Nago Sarea valley and in the vicinity of Moria and Korvova. Enemy detachments which tried to attack those positions with the support of their artillery were repulsed."

"Our batteries shelled enemy columns in the upper Cordevole and destroyed two iron bridges on the river. One of our detachments made a surprise attack on a small Austrian redoubt before the Passend and Brunnels, on the Meuse. Our guns dispersed an enemy column that was being checked by the prompt intervention of our air squadrons."

SPRING RACING SEASON OPENED AT BALTIMORE

Fair Helen Wins Inaugural Handicap by a Head From Redland.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 1.—The east racing season was ushered in this afternoon at Prince George Park under splendid conditions. The weather was June like, the track fair and the sport interesting throughout.

Fair Helen, Mrs. Jack Phillips' speedy daughter of Broomstick, fresh from a successful campaign in the south, was returned winner of the Inaugural Handicap, a seven furlong dash, the feature event. She was ridden by Johnny McTaggart, who is under contract to ride for W. R. Cox this year. On the way to the post Republican, heavily played, ran away a mile and a half.

McTaggart was away in a hurry with Fair Helen and assumed an easy lead, but his mount was forced to do her best to get home in front of Redland by a head. Redland closed with a great burst and nearly disposed of Fillet-gold, the favorite, a distant third. The time, 1:28 1/5, is good, considering the sandy condition of the track.

Racing began at half-past two o'clock. Half an hour previous the Hall at-race track bill was brought up for consideration in the senate at Annapolis. It is fashioned after the tracks in New York and has passed the house. Its fate in the senate was a lively topic for discussion at the track.

The attendance was large even for an opening day. Among those present was Algonquin Dalgarno and E. C. Smith, representing the Jockey Club on official business.

BUSINESS WAS GOOD AT ST. LAWRENCE MARKET

The Wagon Section Roused From Its Winter Slumber Saturday. FAIR PRICES PREVAILED

New Laid Eggs Abundant and Butter Was Slow Sale—Fowl Stationary.

The wagon section of the St. Lawrence Market is awakening again after its winter sleep, the intense cold of this section in the winter, causing all but the hardest spirits to cease coming in until the middle of the season.

Butter advanced on the whole during the past week, it was rather slow sale at unchanged prices, namely, 25c and 26c per pound, the bulk selling at 26c to 27c.

Fowl remained about stationary in price, winter chickens bringing 25c to 30c per pound, broilers, 22c to 24c per pound, according to their quality.

The hothouse produce was abundant, and sold at about the same prices it has been bringing lately. Potatoes are noted for their absence, but a few are being brought in as high as $2 per bushel.

MEXICANS IMPROVED Coppers Resume Activity and Automobile Group Becomes Better.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The week ended as began, with irregularity in the dominant note. Trading was very light and more narrow Saturday than in the preceding days. Oils and other Mexican issues were strong on overnight developments south of the Rio Grande.

The usual miscellaneous issues, notably U. S. Industrial Alcohol and American Coal Products, were better by 2 to 4 points, but South Porto Rico Sugar was the only stock of its particular class to manifest special prominence, rising 11 points to a new record.

HUNS DROPPED BOMBS AROUND SCHOOL HOUSE

Interesting Letter Tells of German Air Raids at Furnes, Belgium.

REFUGE IN DUGOUTS

Anti-Aircraft Guns Are Now Being Provided to Assure Protection.

Letter written by Mrs. Innes-Taylor from Furnes, Belgium, to Mrs. Adamson and forwarded by the latter to Mrs. Arthur Popier, Toronto of the Belgian Relief Committee, T.W.P.L.:

"Well, I don't want to go thru the experience of last week, but if we come out of it as well as we did then we should have much to be thankful for. Last Wednesday the other school opened with an attendance of 180 children. Everything went well. Saturday I returned to the hut to fetch one of our soldiers to put up some shelves. The motor was not working well, and just as we got out to see what was the matter the tocin began to ring. We had just time to bolt into the nearest cellar when a bomb fell in the Rue de Sud, in front of the shop just where we had passed a minute before. Six bombs fell altogether, one killing a man and wounding two. When the excitement was over I walked back to the hut, as the motor wouldn't work, to find that a woman had been taken frightfully ill on account of the shock. It was decided to send for an ambulance from the Hospital L'Ocean at La Panno and have her taken there. I telephoned to them and they said if it was urgent they would come at once, but the ambulance would have to wait at the station in Furnes, as the chauffeur did not know the way to our hut. I was to meet him there. I reached it another bomb fell on the platform, killing two men and wounding two. I threw myself into another house, and when the excitement had passed started with the ambulance for the woman's cottage. I arrived there and was up in the attic getting her ready when a good old fellow began to drop bombs, fortunately injuring no one, but I was far from happy under the eaves with that poor woman and no cellar to go into. Bombed School House. Monday in school about 11 a whole flock of taubes arrived and peppered bombs about the new school. There was nowhere to go. The only thing to do was lie flat on one's face and pray they would drop on one. They flew awfully low and the whirr of the engines was frightful. They stayed about a quarter of an hour. Several people were killed and injured. After it was over I dismissed the school and said that no more would be held until there were proper dugouts. On my way back to the hut I met a lot of children who said a bomb had fallen at our place. Imagine my feelings. I saw a crowd in front of the depot, but everyone was all right. They had been in the dugout when the bomb fell. We had pieces of bomb thru the walls in several places, every window broken, tins of milk, meat and syrup blown off the shelves. Frightful disorder everywhere. The probable reason for it was that an English aviator was obliged to descend in a field just back of the school. I suppose those disgusting Huns got word of it and wanted to smash up his machine. An English aeroplane is not a safe bait to have near one's living quarters. Great excitement yesterday. A German captive balloon got loose, flew over Furnes and was brought down at St. Ideobald and fell into the sea. The Zeppelins simply peppered it with shrapnel. Both schools are closed until the dugouts are made. The inside of the chapel beside the old school is being strengthened with beams and seats of earth so we can put all the children in it. They are establishing a lot more anti-aircraft guns in Furnes, so things ought to be much safer in future."

REACTION NECESSARY TO HELP RECRUITING

Present System Not Meeting the Demands, Declare Several Commanding Officers.

WOMEN HAVE INFLUENCE

Emergency Corps Consider Methods by Which They Might Further Aid the Cause.

On Saturday evening the central executive of the Women's Emergency Corps met in St. Margaret's College, Bloor street, for the purpose of further consideration of the ways by which the corps might help recruiting. In addition to representatives from the various branches of the city, officers commanding different battalions were present and took part in the discussion of the meeting. Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, president, had the chair during the first part of the evening, but later invited J. M. Godfrey to preside. Lt.-Col. Price then called upon, stated it as his opinion that a moral inertia was setting upon the province, and that a reaction was necessary. He would favor conscription in getting recruits, the present system not meeting the demands. His testimony was that the wealthy and the laboring classes were doing their part, but a great many small shopkeepers and others with small business concerns, that would fall to the ground if the owners were away, were unwilling to make the sacrifice. So many, too, wanted to be officers. A whole battalion of these could easily be got hold of, but not a battalion of privates. Col. Price was on the opinion that the women might help in many cases by going to the parents of enlisted young men and making them see the need of doing their part in urging their sons to enlist. The voluntary system has never stood the test of any war," was the testimony of Lt.-Col. Mulloy, who made an eloquent appeal for a change in the methods of the present system. He denounced as wasteful from an economic standpoint. From his experience while recruiting in No. 3 division, he drew illustrations to show that we are constantly drawing from men who should be left at home, and leaving untouched those who would be benefited and be of benefit to the country by being made to train and become accustomed to military discipline. It is the first duty of every citizen to defend the state, and when conditions exist as at present, it was, to his mind, a species of hypocrisy to say "We are in the war to the last man and the last ditch. Among the suggestions to encourage recruiting was that of a certificate to be given to all volunteers, such as they would be proud to hand down to their descendants. The battalion which he is now raising, and which is to be one of high ideals, was described by Col. Hagarty. Many mothers are deterred from encouraging their sons, thinking that the ordinary life of the army would be detrimental to their standard of living. The members of the Emergency Corps would be helpful, Col. Hagarty thought, in persuading those mothers to urge their sons to recruit with his other battalion. Major Campbell, like the previous speakers, was of the opinion that the present system is inefficient. Women, he thought, had in many cases a certain indefinable quality that would make their services in recruiting along individual lines more effectual than that of the men. When the commanding officers had given their experiences, Mrs. Cummings told something of the things already accomplished by members of the corps thru the medium of public addresses, and thru personal or direct appeal. Dr. Abbott had not much faith in the ordinary recruiting meetings, as it had to an extent lost its first usefulness. He believed in setting upon a definite number to be gotten one town or locality, and then setting to work to get that quota. He suggested special methods such as a banquet or smoker. Mr. Godfrey was strongly in favor of a Sunday campaign when the women of the Emergency Corps might address the women of the different churches. This did not meet with general approval, and was not decided upon. Others who took part in the various topics of the evening were Mrs. Humphreys, Mrs. Burnett, Mrs. Starr and Mrs. Peppal.

Jemima in the Gloaming

I WAS sitting in the gloaming last night watching for Jupiter and Venus. But my gentleman friend called instead. He says to me, "O Jemima, why are you sitting in the dark?" And I says to him, "I was looking for Venus and Jupiter and you come along instead." And then he replied with a tremble tone. "We are some stars us two ourselves."

"But," says he. "O Jemima, it wasn't worthy of you—I mean the piece you put in the paper. I knew it was you by the crocus and you with the yellow head of hair. But I want you to know I'm no worm, nor the makings of one. If you're looking for worms you needn't pick on me."

Says I, smiling. "You should understand I took out a poetical license. So I could say things that sound 'cute' and mean something different according to how you feel. And he says 'Poetical licenses don't go on newspapers, but are quite proper for ladies.'"

This seemed to annoy my gentleman friend which was calling on me. So I says "Would you like to hear our new gramophone record?" And he says, "I'd rather see Jupiter and Venus, or how would you like to go to a movie?"

Then very soon the darkness closed around us, and he held my hand for seven reels. After that the ice cream was perfectly lovely.

Jemima Jones.

SOMETHING DISTINCTIVE MARKS SPRING BLOUSES

Bright Touch of Color is Prevalent in Models of Silk or Crepe.

WHITE SATIN MODISH

When Combined With Georgette, as Illustrated in Smart New Pattern.

Colored blouses are the rage of the moment. Long have dainty waists of flesh pink and creamy white monopolized the devotee's favor, and now in this season of novelty and surprises comes still another shock in the form of the "baby blue" blouse as a rival of its rose-colored cousin. Not only is pale blue to be in great demand this spring in crepe de chine and silk, but ever so many new shades of blue, soft and bright, geranium red, cerise, rose, purple and yellow, as well as chartruese will be featured in exclusive blouse models. Shrewdest possible materials are used—notably chiffon, Georgette crepe, soft pussy willow and will-o'-the-wisp taffeta, all of which make up admirably in the new modes. Hemstitching remains a pronounced feature of the tailor-made models which exhibit the smartest of yoke sections, outside patch pockets, convertible collars, flaring cuffs and a host of other interesting features in keeping with the times and fashion's trend. Still emphasizing the vogue of white is a recently designed model for immediate wear of soft white satin and filmy Georgette. Made in surplus fashion, crossing well over and passing about the back to form a novel belt section is the satin portion, poised over a dainty vestee of the crepe. Open armholes are softly filled in with Georgette draping into a most becoming sleeve, which is gathered into a soft pointed cuff of the satin, piped with white soutache. Feather stitching fastens all the seams in place of hum or machine stitching, and tiny white buttons like carved ivory discs are a pretty finish. Similar models are developed in all the season's most popular shades. Some of the colored blouses have good-looking oriental or Norwegian embroidery in white, metals and colors to contrast.

FATHER O'CONNOR BURIED

Special to The Toronto World. BELLEVILLE, Ont., April 2.—The remains of Rev. Father O'Connor, curate of St. Michael's church in this city, who died at Brockville, were on Saturday brought here and interred in St. James' Cemetery. The body was met at the G.T.R. station and escorted by the Knights of Columbus to St. Michael's church, where the Libers was sung. Archbishop Spratt, of Kingston diocese, and many priests from the surrounding district were present at the obsequies. Deceased was only 32 years of age and was deservedly popular in this city.

YOUR EYES

Why Faults of Vision May Cause Other Maladies

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins University)

WERE man so godlike as to be possessed of an all-seeing, all-perfect eye, the light reflected from real things would not be bent—refracted—in a blurred, irregular or defective fashion. The objects seen by such an eye would be visible clearly and without confusion, and the realities which escape the average person's eyes would be correctly seen. Unhappily, you are human, all too human. Your eyes see as "thru a glass darkly."

Errors of refraction, which may be associated with even the sharpest eyes, are the reflections of things badly deflected by imperfect focusing on the retina or "wallpaper" of the eye-chamber. They are brought about by any misplaced optical structure, mis-shapen eyeballs, ill-health, eye-strain, age, occupation, and they may be inherited. How are you to re-establish the better focus for the "weak eye," required of the healthful, fairly efficient eye? So minute are the peep-holes and iris muscles of the eye that they cannot be seen unless magnified many hundreds of times. Yet they are capable of many ingenious and powerful activities. Indeed, these tiny bands of elastic are the most dependable parts of the normal eye. Actually when all other portions of the eyeball pitcher's arm muscles work all day and into the "week-end" hours of the night, week in and week out, and you may reveal to your eyes the soreness, fatigue and exhaustion which fall to the lot of the "climber" muscle of the iris.

Sleeplessness, headaches, back-aches, over-active kidneys, worry, irritability, nagging, disordered alimentary and other such complaints often should be leveled at too many hours of indoor eye work. The eyes should never remain continuously at work with the same focus for too long an interval. Frequent changes of focus relax the iris muscles, and eight hours' daily work with the eyes are more than ample. Sailors, farmers, guides, hunters, automobilists, tourists, aviators and others engaged in outdoor work usually escape these ailments, because the muscles are loosened when the eye is focused for distant vision. Signs of such "errors of refraction" are in evidence if you have a tendency to fall asleep often and without cause. Twitching eyelids, forehead pains, spasms of the lids, styes, "blood-shot" optics, heavy lids, "sand-man" sensations, wrinkles under the lids or over the brows, dull aches around the eyes and in their neighborhood, headaches and all sorts of head and digestive disorders have been remedied by proper attention to the eyes. One of the widely heralded benefits, for example, of "life in the open" is often the relaxation of the eyes due to the change which goes along with removal of four close walls.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUESTIONS.

Long Hours, Toronto, Ont.—Q.—Upon rising in the morning I often have a sick stomach. Kindly advise a remedy for same.

A.—Take 7 grains of oxide of magnesia before meals and 6 charcoal tablets after meals.

E.V.V., Toronto, Ont.—Q.—I have severe pains in the muscles and when I remain seated my knees become stiff. I run a power sewing machine. Could this be the cause?

A.—This is an occupation malady due to the kind of work done. It will grow longer difficult. Nowadays a tank on wheels, with hose attached, is rolled into the room and the paper sprayed with a special solution. The stripes have a glossy finish, making the birds and flowers stand out from it as though painted.

Another paper, with a plain black glossy ground, is covered with an all-over pattern of dillies. The flowers are in shaded pink, purple, white and yellow, surrounded with the green leaves, and are reminders of the old-fashioned country gardens. This is also a favorite living-room pattern, occasionally used in bedrooms.

Bedroom papers are most popular in small designs or chintz patterns, in delicate colors. One attractive paper has an Empire pattern in blue and gold with bows and medallions, on a white ground. Another quaint bedroom design is one which recalls cross-stitch embroidery; it has floral stripes in color, with medallions to match on a two-tone gray background which gives the effect of canvas.

A new paper for the child's room is called the bluebird and cherrytree pattern; it has oddly shaped, conventionalized cherry trees, with smaller trees and bunches of, lilacs-of-the-valley growing on a gray ground. Under the trees are standard bird-houses, with lots of bluebirds, walking and flying about them. The paper is odd and very attractive.

For a morning room, there is a Japanese chintz pattern that is rather unusual. It has a pale tan ground with a repeated motif of a woman and child at play under a cherry tree and arbor, with climbing vines, caught here and there with a blue bow.

For dining-room use, there is a two-tone gray paper in Adam design. It is exquisitely simple, and, while it looks better with the Adam furniture, it lends itself very acceptably as a background for non-period furniture.

Another period paper is in Jacobean stripes. It has a tan, invisible dotted striped background, covered with brown shaded, heavy, stalk-like vines.

The black and white fat, while still flourishing, has undergone modifications, at least where wall paper is concerned; people found the broad stripes and large checks rather trying to live with. This season the American designers have brought forward both a paper having a white ground with a delicate black tracery over it and one having a black ground with a design in white tracery. These patterns are used with borders of the checks or stripes, in any size or width desired. The description of a few designs now being shown may furnish ideas to those who are contemplating having their walls done over.

One striking design is a chintz pattern, having a black and white striped ground with pink roses, small blue flowers, cherry blossoms and brilliant pheasants sprinkled in large motifs over it. This paper is appropriate for living rooms. The stripes have a glossy finish, making the birds and flowers stand out from it as though painted.

IS MRS. CUPID HELPING OUT THIS YEAR?

By Will Nies

EVERY affair of the heart there arrives a moment when things come to a halt—when words fail and even glances shyly falter. It's the crucial instant—the turning point. From this moment things can never be again precisely what they were. A change MUST occur. Hearts must come together or they must part. This is Cupid's instant. Then it is that he fits the arrow to his bow. It's the moment of defeat or victory. Will Love lose or TRIUMPH? In ordinary years, Cupid fights his battle all alone. But every once in a while there comes a MAGICAL year when not alone to man but to woman also is granted the privilege of asking life's momentous question. Then, indeed, he's busy. Who is his helper at the crucial instant? Who else could it be but—Mrs. Cupid?

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

The Home Information Bureau

By ISOBEL BRANDS

HOW often we see a "household hint" or a newspaper or magazine article that we read with interest. And a few weeks later, when we suddenly need just that kind of information, we search our memories vainly for the details of that very article which so interested us at the time.

Business men find that a record of valuable information is one of the best assets and helps in business. The housewife can take a leaf out of the book of the business man, and improve her business by carefully keeping bits of information that might be of value—keeping it in a file" instead of burdening her memory with it, and then too often forgetting.

Of course, a large three or six drawer filing cabinet such as business men have in their offices is unnecessary and too cumbersome for the average home. But the average homemaker will find that a dozen of the large manila envelopes—about 12 inches by 12 inches—which can be obtained at most stationery stores for a small sum, will be ample for most of her clippings, and will save her endless waste of time. Each of the envelopes should be marked and labeled with the subject of articles it is to contain.

For example, a set of envelopes which one homemaker files gradually and which was a perfect mine of an information bureau, contained clippings on Household accounts. Market ideas—weights and measures. Pure food articles. Menu-ideas for holidays, entertaining.

Child care and education. Decoration of the home. Cleaning devices and methods. Laundry ideas for making "wash-day" easy.

Servant-training and management. Sewing, mending, embroidering, etc. Any time she read an article she considered of value, it was straightway clipped and placed in the envelope labeled for that subject.

These little helps which friends gave her were not written and then dropped into a purse to be forgotten and forgotten to. If they were good enough to record, they were good enough to use. In the same way, you always have a place in your little household file, and always a day when you exactly what you will collect. This filing plan is not a bit complicated. It is in no way for covering the card index plan of keeping records which many women prefer to the cook-book plan. You can mark the envelopes with whatever subjects you are most interested in getting information about. It is a very short time you will collect a valuable mine of information.

If you are wondering what sort of novelty you can possibly introduce at a birthday or holiday luncheon, all you need to do is to consult your little envelope on ideas for entertaining, and the many clever articles which have been collected will undoubtedly suggest a plan which you can adapt for the occasion. Moreover, you always have the exact information, and you don't have to rely on a few bits of hazy remembrance which are vaguely remembered.

There's nothing like the household file for a reliable and quickly accessible information bureau for the homemaker!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT JUST BEING TIRED

Copyright, 1916, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

YESTERDAY I took a day off—in bed. I wasn't ill and I wasn't particularly worn out. I was just tired. Tired of saying "Yes, indeed," "No, thank you," and "Oh, do you think so?" Tired of listening to little stories about nothing, and answering little questions about less. Tired of looking pleasant, tired of smiling, tired of trying to fool myself. Tired of visitors and people who just run in for a minute. Tired of little worries and small frets.

"I'm going to stay in bed," said I, "all day." I had my breakfast sent up and everybody was worried about me, and the doorbell rang and all the bells went down stairs again, stepping very softly so as not to disturb the invalid. All the kind ones for me because I do work, and all the conservative people who wish I wouldn't work, telephoned and were very solicitous and more than nice. The real friends who really loved me hung up the receiver and said "Oh!" and that was the end of it. They knew just how it was, and they tried themselves.

I read the morning papers without trying to get "an idea" out of them, and the wind sang in the trees and the breakers roared on the beach below and I lay serene and undisturbed in my room, high and high, and rested. A door slammed in the back of the house. That was somebody else's business. Up in the garret a window rattled. Who was going to look after it? Not I! Somebody was at the door with a bill. Let who might dispute it, it was nothing to me. I was resting.

A Brand New World. The children came in and played quietly, as I love to have them, and I was no part of the game, either as player or arbitrator. I lay and listened—and snored. And I saw them quite clearly as other people do, without the veil of solicitude or material affection. They weren't mine and I wasn't theirs, not for that day. We were just in the same world together, that's all.

A wild, stormy, tempestuous world it was outside and a quiet, cosy, delicious world inside. A world of fire blazing on the hearth, a world with a faithful dog on the rug, a graceful, secretive cat on the window-sill, the table, music, singing, light chat, pleasant chatter—and no responsibility.

In the evening there was tea—upstairs in my room—by the fire, and the little girl made the toast, and the little boy brought the cream, and one who loves me well brewed the tea, and then somebody read aloud a tale of wild adventure in strange lands and over stormy seas, and we sat snug within and marveled at it.

This morning I'm new, brand new. And so is the world—to me. I was out of it yesterday for a whole day. For twenty-four hours I slipped the leash that ties me to care and unlocked the chain that binds me to responsibility, and the place upon my wrist that was lame with the blame is rested, and the neck that was tired of the yoke is strong again. Bring on your responsibilities, I'll carry them like a feather today, for yesterday I rested.

And yet, as far as the body goes, I was not in the least tired. But I have established a custom. From this day forth, every little while, whenever I feel the weight of things too much, I'm going to throw everything to the winds and rest. It pays, oh, how amazingly it does pay!

Life a Continued Story. Where's the problem that puzzled me so forty-eight hours ago? Gone forever. Why, it never was a problem at all! It was just a pretty little puzzle, like the things you buy in boxes at Christmas time. Let's see if we can't put it together. The blue, that goes here, the yellow there, here's the place for the red—why, it's done! Rather fun it was to do it, too, when you got down to it and stopped looking at it seriously.

The responsibility that weighed so heavily upon me two days ago—how foolish I was to feel so about it! I did my best. 'What more can anyone do? And, after all, no human being is really responsible for the real life and career of another.

How could I have taken so much upon myself? Why, I was like the too self-confident fool who rushes in where angels fear to tread! I'll let other people worry about their own affairs, and I'll look at mine as just part of a great, big, interesting puzzle.

It's all a story, this thing we call life, a continued story, with the exciting things just at the end of the chapter. What's the use of getting so rightfully worried about it? We've just a part of the great scheme of things, a little, little part—those I love and want to help, and I. How could I have the assurance to play Providence like that?

Hurray! The sun is shining, the sea is blue, the great tree stands straight and strong, for all the storm that tried to wreck it last night! The world is good, the people are good. I was just tired, that's all. I'll never allow myself to get so tired again. It doesn't pay. I really doesn't.

Spring Wall Papers to Suit All Rooms

HOUSE-CLEANING days seem to be a time when one can clean from the walls out, adorning the room with fresh wall paper. The taking off of the old paper is no longer difficult. The Amateur Gardener

FERNS are popular plants, and will be found extremely satisfactory when well grown. But when poorly grown they are very disappointing. As a general thing failure with them is attributed to unadaptability to the conditions which prevail in the ordinary living room. This, however, is seldom the case, as all of the varieties of which mention is made in this article can be grown successfully in the house, provided they are given proper care.

One of the most popular varieties is Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, better known as the Boston fern. This has fronds often six feet in length, and as there will be scores of them in large specimens, the plant becomes a very attractive cascade of foliage. This variety is not adapted to window culture, because of its size, but should be given a place on a bracket or pedestal where its fronds can droop without being interfered with by other plants.

The Whitman variety, unlike its parent, the Boston fern, does not have long fronds. The average length is perhaps a foot and a half. But what they lack in length they make up for in width, which will average seven or eight inches on well grown plants. These fronds, instead of having narrow leaflets, as in the parent variety, have leaflets divided in such a manner that each becomes a miniature fan, and these give the plant a feathery lightness, which has gained for it the name of ostrich feather fern. I consider this the finest of all varieties for house culture.

Nephrolepis Scott is a variety—also a sport from the old Boston type—of dwarf habit. Its fronds are about a foot in length and quite narrow. But so many of them are sent up by each plant that the effect is pleasing. This is excellent for window use, and it does not occupy more room than a geranium.

Ferns are generally supposed to be fond of water at their roots, and so much is given them that they are often watered to death. While they are fond of a moist soil, they do not take kindly to mud, and an oversupply of water is sure to injure them. Give them a soil of leafmold, if you can get it, with some sharp, coarse sand mixed into it.

If leafmold is not obtainable, go into the roadside and turn over a sod and scrape away from the bottom of it that portion which is full of fine grass roots. This will give you an admirable substitute for genuine leafmold. Mix it with light sandy loam, and use the mixture of the latter to one part turfy matter.

See that the pot is provided with best of drainage. If this is done there will be little danger of the plants being in an excellent plan to cover the drainage material with a layer of sphagnum moss, before putting in the soil, as this will prevent the latter from washing down and clogging the drainage which surplus water is supposed to find its escape. Aim to keep the soil simply moist all thru.

It is an excellent plan to shower ferns several times a week. This serves two purposes: One is to keep the foliage free from dust. The other is to discourage the red spider from taking possession of the plants, as he often does when the room in which they are kept is warm and without much moisture. Most varieties can be well inclined to stand still it may be well to apply some good fertilizer, and thus encourage growth.

If the pots containing ferns are kept standing in jardiniere be sure to see that the water that accumulates in the bottom of these receptacles is emptied frequently. Stagnant water is likely to do much harm to the roots of the plants.

Those who have only north windows in which to grow plants will find ferns admirably adapted to culture in them, as no sunshine is needed by them. Most varieties can be propagated easily, either by division of the roots, or by rooting the runners which are thrown away, strawberry fashion.

If the crown of the old plant divides and forms several crowns, each one of these, if broken away from the others with some roots attached, can soon be grown into a fine specimen plant. Small plants will be found useful for the decoration of the table, when used by themselves or in combination with a few bright colored flowers.

CARD INDEX RECIPE

Beefsteak Pudding

Cut the meat into thin slices; mix the flour, salt and pepper; dip the meat in flour, and roll up with a small piece of fat in each roll. Shred the suet and chop finely, add the flour, salt, baking powder and crumbs and mix well. Make into a stiff paste with cold water and roll out once. Grease a 1 1/2-pint bowl and line it with the paste put in the meat and add enough water to half fill. Cover with the paste, wetting the edges and pressing firmly together; trim neatly. Cover with greased paper and steam 1 1/2 hours.

INGREDIENTS METHOD

1/2 pound steak. 1/2 teaspoonful flour. 1/2 teaspoonful salt. Water. 1/4 teaspoonful pepper. 1/4 pound flour. 1/4 teaspoonful baking powder. Pinch of salt. 1 tablespoonful bread-crumbs. 2 ounces suet.

Spring Suits for the Boys

Of course, there's actually no season of the year when a real boy doesn't need a new outfit! A great "stunt" is the extra pair of bloomers. With warm weather on the way, when coats are thrown aside for greater freedom, an extra pair of bloomers is almost a necessity, in order to get full wear out of the coat. Such an offering is this morning's.
