"Become Your Own Landlord"
 Last year I indicated that there would be a substantial increase in the values of property, and a large number availed themselves of the timely advice then given. They bought on my Easy Terms, and are now thoroughly satisfied. Many have made a substantial profit on their purchase.
 Why go on paying Rent when on my Installment Plan you can secure a home for yourself, improve it, and get the benefit of the increase in value that is sure to take place? Others have done so, and so can you.
 Call or write for list, and you will receive a reply by return post.

Questions of the Day

AND THE LABOR MOVEMENT
 BY JAMES WILSON

Which of us, having read the history of past ages and the downfall of the tyrants of all, will say that history is not again about to repeat itself? All the world's a stage, and we are but the actors, is very much adapted to the present situation, and the scenes in the play are ever shifting from one section of the country to another and from one extreme to another. This judge says one thing and that judge says another. Freedom, the bar to liberty, is always quoted to bolster up unjust decisions, and the complications of the law are forever being made more complicated. The heavy weight of the play rests upon the shoulders of the poor unfortunate still more unbearable. The degeneracy of some sections of the church is becoming more and more apparent, and the lot of one portion of the people is becoming harder and more unbearable, while the other portion is every day living in greater luxury and extravagance. The universal brotherhood of man is the lost chord in the anthem of human happiness. The selfish spirit is the predominant spirit of the world with the great moral wrong of the competitive system ever breeding greater selfishness in the human race. Instead of this being a happy family of contented and industrious people, it is a very large extent just the opposite.

Why this condition of things? Some will say the cause lies in this direction, others in that; all coming back to first principles and blaming it upon the faultiness of the people (coming in all classes the first person singular) in the election of individuals to sit in the high places of the rulers of this country. There are too many men in our legislatures who are continually looking to the protection of their profession and their profession in their rights to make laws appropriate to the needs of their special class, whose numerical strength in relation to the rest of the people is a bare handful to the great masses, but whose legal strength is just the opposite. This is largely the result of the people's not being united in their own interests, and the result of the people's not being united in their own interests, and the result of the people's not being united in their own interests.

THOMPSON COMPANY, 530 & 532 Queen Street West.

It seems to me that you had better either eliminate that paragraph or change the clause previously quoted, or change the following one to make it harmonize somewhat. Your pledge of membership reads:
 "In consideration of fair dealing between the employer and the employee, we pledge ourselves to protect any of our fellow-members who may require our support against any unjust demands of labor organizations, and to endeavor to settle all disputes amicably."
 Fair dealing, as we take it, accords to all alike the same privileges, and it is not to you, which you in your address admit we have done, then why not in other hand admit our right to an organization to CONTROL OUR BUSINESS? We desire the facts of the case where the employer does not control his own business, as quoted by you before allowing any such a statement. We would not like to say that we don't believe you, but we would like the privilege of reading the union that will not allow an employer to hire his own help. You may either give it to us privately or publicly through the columns of this paper, which are alike open to you and all others to express your disapproval of the methods of organized labor. We believe in justice and fair dealing; we believe in allowing to others the same rights we ask for ourselves. Your address speaks very loudly in this way makes too much of the nature of a burlesque, in that we are heard and about the time the fresh air is again filling our lungs we are forgotten. The great centres where the workers congregate must make the more that will land some representatives upon the floor of the House. They must put men there whose ability will command sufficient respect and whose members shall be sufficient to make the voice of labor heard and understood in our legislative halls. The longer the present system is in vogue the worse our legislative conditions become and those laws which are passed subsequent to the interests are either left dormant or so partially enforced that we get next to nothing as a result of our agitation. If anything is to be done along this line, the present is the time for action, and the start should be made in the municipal field, so that an organization may be kept continuously alive—and the results cannot be worse than those of our methods in the past.

JENNIE BAXTER: JOURNALIST

BY ROBERT BARR.

IX.—An Unlooked For Encounter.

"Well, neither do the Russians, for that matter, by this time, and I merely wish to tell you that if it hadn't been for his action and for the promptness of a member of his staff I should have failed in this mission. I was dragged by the Russian police and robbed. Miss Baxter, who was on the train, saw something of what was going forward and succeeded most deftly in despoiling the robbers. I was lying insensible at the time and helpless. She secured the document and handed it back to me when we had crossed the frontier, leaving in the hands of the Russians a similar envelope containing a copy of The Daily Bugle. Therefore, uncle, if

She old man scribbled a most cordial invitation to Hardwick.

"I am going over to Paris in a day or two, Mr. Hardwick, to solve the mystery of dressmaking, and I think, from what I know of it already, it will require my whole attention. I must insist on returning to you the cost of the St. Petersburg journey, for, after all, it proved to be a rather personal excursion, and I couldn't think of allowing the paper to pay for it. I merely came in tonight to hand you this card from Sir James Cardiff, and I also desired to tender to you personally my resignation, and so I must bid you good night. Hardwick, said the girl, holding out her hand, "and I thank you very much indeed for having given me a chance to work on your paper."

"Before the editor could reply she was gone, and that good man sat down in his chair bewildered by the suddenness of it all, the room looking empty and dismal, lacking her presence. "Confound Lord Donald!" he muttered, "under his breath, and then, as an editor should, he went on impassively with his night's work."

It was intended that the wedding should be rather a quiet affair, but circumstances proved too strong for the young people. Lord Donald was very popular, and the bride was very beautiful. Sir James thought it necessary to invite a great many people, and he insisted on Lord Donald that a highly placed personage desired to honor the function with his presence, and thus the event created quite a little flutter in society. The society papers affirmed that this elevated personage had been particularly pleased by some diplomatic service which Lord Donald had recently rendered him, but then, of course, one can never believe what one reads in the society press. However, the man of elevated rank was there, and so people said that perhaps there might be something in the rumor. Naturally there was a great turn out of ambassadors and ministers, and their presence gave color and dignity to the crush at St. George's, Hanover square. The Princess von Steinbeimer made a special journey from Vienna to attend, and on this occasion she brought the prince with her. The general opinion was that the bridegroom was a very noble looking fellow and that the bride in her sumptuous wedding apparel was quite too lovely for anything.

The princess was exceedingly bright and gay, and she chatted with her old friends, the ambassadors from Austria and America. "I'm so sorry," she said to the ambassador from America, "that I did not have time to speak with you at the Duchesse of Chiselhurst's ball, but I was compelled to leave early. You should have come to me sooner. The count here was much more gallant. We had a most delightful conversation, hadn't we, count? I was with Lord Donald, you remember."

"Oh, yes," replied the aged Austrian, bowing low. "I shall not soon forget the charming conversation I had with your highness, and I hope you, on your part, have not forgotten the cordial invitation you gave me to visit again your castle at Meran."

"Indeed, count, you know very well how glad I am to see you at any time, either in Vienna or at Meran."

"Lord Donald Stirling—Lord Donald Stirling," mused the editor. "Where have I heard that name before?" "He is a member of the British Embassy at St. Petersburg; so you may have seen his name in the dispatches."

"No; he is not so celebrated as all that comes to. Ah, I remember now! I met that detective the other night and asked him if anything had come of that romance in high life to solve which he had asked your assistance. He said the search for the missing lady had been abandoned and mentioned the name of Lord Donald Stirling as the foolish young man who had been engaged in the pursuit of the unknown."

"Before you say anything further against Lord Donald," she cried hotly. "I beg to inform you that he and I are to be married."

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" said the editor hotly. "Then, having failed to find the other girl, he speedily consoled himself by—"

"There was no other girl! I was the person Mr. Cadbury Taylor was in search of! I willingly gave him valuable assistance in the task of finding to find myself. Having only a stupid man to deal with, I had little difficulty in accomplishing my purpose. Neither Mr. Taylor nor Mr. Hardwick ever suspected that the missing person was in their own employ."

"Well, I am blessed!" ejaculated Hardwick. "So you baffled Cadbury Taylor in searching for yourself, as you baffled me in getting hold of the Russian letter. It seems to me, Miss Baxter, that where your own inclinations do not coincide with the wishes of your employers the interests of those who pay you fall to the ground."

"Mr. Cadbury Taylor didn't pay me anything for my services as amateur detective, and he has, therefore, no right to grumble. As for the St. Petersburg trip, I shall send you a check for all expenses incurred as soon as I reach home."

"Oh, you mistake me," asserted Mr. Hardwick earnestly. "I had no thought of even hinting that you have not earned over and over again all the money The Daily Bugle has paid you; besides, I was longing for your return, for I want your assistance in solving a mystery that has rather puzzled us all. Paris is in a turmoil just now over the—"

Jennie's clear laugh rang out. "I am going over to Paris in a day or two, Mr. Hardwick, to solve the mystery of dressmaking, and I think, from what I know of it already, it will require my whole attention. I must insist on returning to you the cost of the St. Petersburg journey, for, after all, it proved to be a rather personal excursion, and I couldn't think of allowing the paper to pay for it. I merely came in tonight to hand you this card from Sir James Cardiff, and I also desired to tender to you personally my resignation, and so I must bid you good night. Hardwick, said the girl, holding out her hand, "and I thank you very much indeed for having given me a chance to work on your paper."

"Before the editor could reply she was gone, and that good man sat down in his chair bewildered by the suddenness of it all, the room looking empty and dismal, lacking her presence. "Confound Lord Donald!" he muttered, "under his breath, and then, as an editor should, he went on impassively with his night's work."

UNION MEN SHOULD NOT FORGET.

The memory of most men is a frail, deceptive thing at best. Even intellectual giants, endowed with remarkable power, retaining occurrence, expressions and thought, are often puzzled at their inability to remember the correct thing at the right time and place.

A good memory is a desirable gift, but it must be cultivated or else it will not long remain good. If left to shift for itself it will soon dwindle, wither and die under the pressure and darkness of the many obvious weeds that are crowding it out of existence.

The human mind is like a fertile garden—full of native vegetation that must be weeded out when it first appears if the soil and more desirable plants are expected to grow.

There are a few things that laboring people, and particularly union working men, would do well to remember, but which are often forgotten. The organization becomes an important factor in the industrial, social and political life of the community.

Wages are raised, hours are shortened, credit is the system of government are wrought, and the man of yesterday's obscurity is the hero of tomorrow's fame—not achieved Alexander, Caesar or Napoleon like by his own indomitable energy or courage, but thrust upon him—forced by circumstances that he is incapable of even comprehending—results of industrial development and a logical evolution of the labor movement.

But he forgets. Surrounded by improved conditions, basking in the light of smiling prosperity, he fails to remember. He yields to the temptation of pleasure. He indulges and becomes a prey for all the baser instincts that humanity is heir to. His memory and reason are badly impaired, and instead of accomplishing that which is good for him, he is busy holding his own—trying to get the best of what he is something, which he is not.

Prosperity is desirable, and all should strive for it, but if it does come it will not abide with you if you do not understand how to use it right. Try to remember—to reflect—to meditate. Try to think.

A unionist whose name is well known throughout the United States and Canada, wherever men are organized, told us the other day that it was a sin to ask laboring men to think.

He said that he was doing considerable thinking for the last twenty years, and he has also made more than a dozen attempts to improve the conditions of the wage-workers. Still, he believes in committing this sin—to think!

Laboring men must think if they are to gain their rights—the full products of their labor—complete economic liberty.

"Union Label" Goods

"Union Label" goods, Ladies and Gentlemen, "Union Label" goods! In the name of Labor "Union Label" goods! And why "Union Label" goods? The "Union Label" is the badge of responsibility and respectability. It proves that the goods are of the highest quality and the finest workmanship.

Being the highest quality "union made" it means in clothing, hand-made collars, hand-padded shoulders, hand-worked buttonholes, the seams double stitched with twisted French silk, the trousers seams over-laid and double stitched the coat and vest linings of the highest grade and even to the buttons so well sewn that they are on to stay forever and a day.

Union Label clothing is to-day shown by this Union Label shop in the most stylish and up-to-date effects, the fine hair line stripes and the pin head checks, the heather mixtures, the mid-grey mix and in the blacks, navy and dark blues, every suit of which is guaranteed to keep its color and its shape.

In hats the blacks, browns or pearls; in soft hats the wide shapes, in creased crown or plain in every desirable width or shape, hand-wrought, fur-felt. In stiff hats the wide or medium brim with a swagger over curl. In the Stetson, Dunlop or Knox blocks don't forget to look for the Union Label.

C. P. R. and G. T. R. employees, we have just received a new union made overall that is the daddy of them all; ask to see it.

Our new lines in Union men's shoes has created a furore in labor circles. We have already done an immense trade in this department although the season is as yet not at its height. One customer tells another, that is the kind of advertisement we like.

Our gentlemen's furnishing department has that air of jaunty and newness in styles which appeals to every good dresser. All we ask is an inspection for we are sure that in the City of Toronto none can compare with us for tastefulness and originality and perfection of style; the highest class of goods at the lowest possible figure.

THE LABOR PAPER.
The labor paper is conducted strictly in the interest of the toiler, is the medium through which the organized labor forces are enabled to reach the public, to educate non-unionists, secure accessions to their unions, and have their cause represented without the restrictions imposed by the capitalist press.

VARIOUS VIEWS.
"Is there no satisfying those Irish," exclaimed the King, removing the cigarette from his mouth.

"I don't see that," remarked John. "I do," snapped the secretary. "Din't we offer to buy their land for them?"

"And make them pay for it," replied John. "Well, wouldn't we advance the money to do it, and put through the deal and all that for them?" answered the secretary.

"And charge them interest on it," said John. "Haven't I a right to interest on my own money when I lend it?" queried the King, lighting a new cigarette.

"Of course, you have," agreed Willie. "And didn't we offer to give them $50,000,000 to help them along?" put in the secretary.

"But what is it you want to buy?" asked Mr. Thompkins. "Why, the land, of course," answered the King. "Don't the people of Ireland want the land?"
