NATHAN APPLEBY'S MARRIAGE.
There was a famous club in Hartford, Conn., in ante-revolutionary days, called the Seven Coppers Club, and in the early part of this century many were the tales and traditions current about it. The story of Nathan Appleby, given below, was a tale that was told for years and years. Partly from tradition and partly from slight reprints of it the following, with a description of his been gleaned.

The meetings of the Seven Coppers Club were discontinued as informally as they were begun. There was, however, a certainty about the date of its end that did not exist respecting its origin, of which the recollections were only vague and meagre. Like the earth, the Seven Coppers had a creative epoch, though a much longer one than our sphere's was, if you take the Book of Genesis—as did the gentlemen who were members of this club—as a record that means precisely what it says.

Somewhere back in the days of the French war seven American subjects of the King of England got in the way of meeting for an hour, nightly, in Landlord Moses Butler's comfortable room, though which no other was in better esteem in all Hartford town; but none of the members could tell for a certainty when it was that these gatherings became recognized as a social club, or were first honored with a name. On the evening of our narrative the club had assembled as usual, in the room, before a blazing log fire, Mr. Tyleoast had told a bear story, which had produced great laughter, the other members of the club seeming to doubt the truthfulness of the tale. At last Mr. Goodwing stopped suddenly. An expression of pain came upon his face, and, with a movement so quick that his three-colored hat fell to the ground, he put his hands to his side and began to rub vigorously.

"I have methinks caught such a stitch as never before," said he.
"Tis a mercy, I trow," said Squire Whytynge, without removing his eyes from the log.
"Truly a just observation," said Mr. Tyleoast.
"Mayhap," said Mr. Goodwing after he had sipped from his mug, having seemingly rubbed the stitch out, "mayhap you will not contain yourself, either when I tell you that which neighbor Tyleoast's tale of the bear brought to mind."

Here the six companions of Mr. Goodwing were caused to cast reproving glances at him, and their countenances were brightened by the glow of expectation.
"I'll venture the appellation once given to Polly Appleby, she who was Mistress Polly Prentiss of Wethersfield Green, has been heard by all of you," said Mr. Goodwing, by way of beginning.

"If I have heard it," said Mr. Pantry, "it has escaped me. No, I have it. It was Madame de la Mell Hobo Scratch."
"No, neighbor Pantry. You bear in mind the tale 'Squire Whytynge narrated some weeks ago,' said Mr. Blumfield. "I remember the appellation well, though I never made use of it."

"But never by all accounts did woman so deserve an unkind name," said Mr. Birchwood. "They called her, I believe, a mountain bear, because her disposition was of such savage sort."
"Some women deserve hard names," said Mr. Purchase, who had married a woman of shrewish temper. "She was and is a comely woman, spite of her vinegary tongue," said Mr. Blumfield.

"Well, neighbor, said Mr. Goodwing, 'she was delivered of a boy a week since, and I visited her yesterday with my spouse, and you may believe me or not, but she was lulling the babe with a soothing song, and did hold it with exceeding tenderness and love.'"
"Yet her husband hath great dread of her," said Mr. Blumfield.

Here Mr. Goodwing again burst into laughter, and when he had checked himself he said: "I cannot call to mind my nephew Nathan's—for he is my spouse's sister's son—wooling and marriage of that woman without great merit seeking him."
"I admit that of all the marriages in my time, that of Nathan Appleby to Mistress Polly was the one to cause greatest astonishment," said Squire Whytynge. "For Nathan is a gente person, and being well to do, and well favoured in his figure and face, he might have easily been taken to wed the sweetest and comeliest maid in this part of the country. That he should choose that shrew seems to be a matter for amazement more than for laughter."

"How in the mercy of Providence happened it that she who is so fair to look upon hath such fierceness of temper?" Mr. Blumfield asked, but without expectation of answer.
"When I heard that she was married," said Mr. Purchase, "I did remark to my spouse that sometimes Providence permitted gentle men to wed those whose words were as gall."

Here Mr. Blumfield silently nudged Mr. Goodwing.
"And I also reminded my spouse," continued Mr. Purchase, "that whom He Loveth He chasteneth, for such a marriage must be a sore affliction."
"Well, neighbors," said Mr. Goodwing, "I will narrate to you how happened it that this gentle man did choose this woman to wife, when he might have had the comely Widow Spencer, whom he did favor, and might have had her before Godfrey took her. I will also tell you what has come of this marriage."

NEIGHBOR GOODWING'S STORY.
"Nephew Nathan was always gentle. I doubt if he ever knowingly trod upon a worm, and I'll venture no word ever escaped his lips that he would wish to recall. He early found the peace of heaven, and has been all his days thanking God that the blessing vouchsafed to him is so manifold. It is, as I now call to mind, some eighteen months ago, as my spouse stood under the maple tree that is near our porch, busy, as is her wont, with some dainty matter, that she heard the clatter of a horse's hoofs, and, looking up, whom did she see but her nephew Nathan. He rode up to her, and, without dismounting, saluted her, bending low to do so, and after presenting her with a fat and neatly plucked fowl, made discourse which I'll repeat, as nearly as my memory bears out what my wife did tell me.
"The Lord hath been very good to me, my Aunt Charity."
"So he hath, Nathan."
"My blessings are more than I can reckon, my Aunt Charity."
"Truly you do well always to bear that in mind, Nathan."
"Yes, I fear that through so many meales, I shall be ungrateful of my spiritual duties and become attached to the things of time and sense, my Aunt Charity."
"You must pray to be delivered from temptation, Nathan."
"I have cast my eyes about seeking some means by which I may be tried as by fire, my Aunt Charity."
"You do wrong, Nathan. The Lord works in His own way."
"Therefore I believe that He hath directed my thoughts."
"What mean you, Nathan?"
"Toward Mistress Polly Prentiss, my Aunt Charity."
"Now, if I know my spouse, neighbors," said Mr. Goodwing, interrupting the course of his narrative, "and to judge by the flash of indignation that was in her eyes as she told me this, the answer that she gave Nathan was not gentle. Her words were:
"Toward that shrew! Why, she hath it in her to afflict a man worse than him from whom our Lord did give her devil."
"Yet knowing that I desire Mistress Polly in marriage; surely in that way, if in no other, I may make self-sacrifice, and be tried as by fire."
"You are pleased to jest, Nathan."
"I never jest, my Aunt Charity; for every light word we are held to account."
"But heaven do not command you to eat bread that hath molded, nor take a wild beast to your home, Nathan."
"Nay; but it has come upon me with the force of conviction, my Aunt Charity, that I must have such trials as will wean me from the world, and if I marry this woman I shall have such a trial ever present."
"Thereupon my spouse," again Mr. Goodwing said by way of interruption, "did call him a stupid fool, and did pray heaven afterward to forgive her. She said to him, also, that to wed that woman would be to seek a grave or the madhouse. But she shook her head, and without further remark rode away; and my spouse did comfort herself with the thought that, determine as he might, two minutes' conversation with Mistress Polly would drive the notion from his head. A week later, Nathan came again.
"She hath promised to wed me, Aunt Charity."
"She hath promised to wed you, Nathan! Have you in truth asked her hand? I could cry with vexation and sorrow."
"How else, my Aunt Charity, could she promise to wed me unless I asked her hand?"
"How else? Why, the shrew, had she taken the notion, would not hesitate to go to you or any man and demand marriage. Of course she promised you. Little chance had she of a husband. Why, Nathan, why did you not wed the Widow Abigail Spencer? Tell me that? A good woman, and a thrifty house wife, and a gentle soul."
"Ah, my Aunt Charity, much did I desire to do so, but that would be too great a blessing. Surely I was tempted to ask the widow's hand on the day that her sister Lydia wedded young Spicer. I sat that evening in the kitchen by the window as she knitted, and marked her grace of manner and comeliness; and I made mention of Lydia's happiness, and when I did this Abigail turned to me with tender eyes, and cooly said:
"Will you not take pity on Lydia's lonely sister?" and for an instant, even many minutes, I did have some temptation to woo her; for I judged by that remark she might, if urged, have given me her hand. Then came the words of the Scripture to me, to flee temptation, and I made great effort and quitted her. I have not seen her since, except in church, where she does gaze on me with sad eyes.

"You are a wicked man, Nathan Appleby, thus to break the heart of a good woman and to take up with an shrew. Still, having done so, Nathan, tell me of your evening of Polly."

"It was on the evening of the last Lord's Day, my Aunt Charity, as the sun went down, that I made my way to Mistress Polly's dwelling. I heard the sharp tone of her father's farm hands, and she said, 'you great seed-sowing num-skull! out of my sight, you ill-favored, hideous-mannered clod!'"
"And yet you persevered in your intentions, Nathan?"
"Truly, I did, and I heard her say, 'I hate a man, great, stupid, ill-begotten things.' Then her father replied, 'I fear you will never have opportunity, to do aught but hate a man?' To this she said, 'It would be well for my mother had she not favored you. If I had a man, oh! but I'd make him rue the day!'"
"And hearing that you did not turn away, Nathan?"

"What I heard only satisfied me, my Aunt Charity, that I should find the tribulation I do greatly need. My fronties came to me, and I spoke my mind to him without delay. I said that I desired his daughter in marriage."
"And what did he reply?"
"He answered that Ennie was a well-favored girl, and that he could not deny her to me, if she choose to take me. I said that not Ennie, but Mistress Polly, I desired, and I confessed in seemed amazed, and did stare at me with a certain fixed expression that was painful to look upon. Then he approached me and said that he never heard that I was imprudent in my drink, and I had trouble to persuade him that his suspicion was wrong. Then he looked at me again, and even intimated that my reason had left me. At last I persuaded him to send his daughter Polly to me. As he quitted the room he seized my hand, and said: 'Nathan, I pray she may drive you from the house. It would be a blessing for you.'"

"Mistress Polly came into the best room, my Aunt Charity, and, as the door closed, she stood with her back against it and smiled, and, but only scorn in it. I trembled at that smile, fearing she would drive me thence."
"Speak up, Nathan Appleby," she said, "for never, since your mother bore you, did you speak louder than at a new one."
"If I now remember right, I answered her nothing, for my thoughts were in confusion."
"Art dumb?" she said. "Might as well be for aught you can say. Your face is like a jack-o'-lantern, and your tongue as full of speech. What's now, I say!"
"I asked her if her father did not tell her."
"Had he told me," she said, "you would not see me here. Curiously, to know what you, whose spunk is less than a worm's, could have to say to me from your own lips. Not to give advice, I'll venture. You're no such idiot as to try that. Come! I'll have it out of you. Belike you would marry me."
"She said this, my Aunt Charity, as in sarcasm; yet I am glad she said it, for my spirit seemed to melt like an April snow bank, and had I not taken her words on the echo, I fear I could not make known my errand. Her glance as I said this was terrible, so that I turned my eyes to the window as for a chance to escape violence. I cannot recall all she said, but I do bear in mind that she termed me a beetle, that she said my legs were egg-like shanks, which is untrue; that she remarked contemptuously upon the paleness of my face, and likened me to Sandy Sam the idiot. I perceived, however, that her violence was only of the tongue, though that is enough for one person. She called me a padora, whatever that may be, and that I should marry her, and right away, and a sad day it would be for me, too. She warned me to have no delay, to cause the bans to be published next Lord's Day, and as soon thereafter as the law permits to come for her, and she warned me to keep out of her sight till then. Other painful words she said which I will not repeat, my Aunt Charity, and thus has she promised me."

"What think you all, neighbors, of such a wooing as that?" Mr. Goodwing inquired.
"That your spouse did say rightly when she called him a stupid fool," said Mr. Pantry.
"That it passes all comprehension," said Squire Whytynge.
"Well, I say," remarked Mr. Purchase, whose domestic experience was sad, "that he who knowingly puts his head in such a noose deserves to wear it always. Vinegary women are wont to be smooth tongued in courtship and to make amends afterward."

"Well, tell us the rest, neighbor," said Mr. Blumfield. "They were married?"
"Yes, they were married, on the Lord's day three weeks, and those who saw them as they quitted her father's house say that she berated him all the way to his home."
"And did he soon wish he were dead?" asked Mr. Purchase in such a suggestive tone that Mr. Blumfield slyly nudged Mr. Goodwing.
"He bore her shrewishness uncomplainingly for six months or more, though he did grow pale and lose flesh greatly; and he did confess to me upon one occasion, that he did not bear in mind when he married that death only parted husband and wife. His silence enraged her; but never did he speak a word in temper to her. Now I will narrate to you that which is the most marvellous as well as amusing of all of it. My spouse happened to fall in with Nathan's wife about a year ago, and I will say, neighbors, that as a spouse, though usually smooth-spoken, can say a thing sharply, if she so desires. She did tell Polly Appleby that it was a grievous shame for her to be labor that patient man, Nathan."

"Man! Nathan's wife replied. Man! Being of your blood, it is no wonder he's no man. He means like a cat, and he purrs like a cat, and he has less spunk than either. A cat will hunt and a kitten scratch!"
"Well, as to that, Madame Appleby, sharp speech never made a cat to hunt nor a cat to scratch. Your speech is of no more account to him than it would be to them," said my spouse.
"With that Mrs. Appleby became very wroth, and did call my spouse a padora."
"Humph," says my spouse, "I could tell you that which would make you angry for cause. Do you not know that the sharper speech you use, the better does he like it?"
"At this Mrs. Appleby did open wide her eyes, and, neighbors, as I have here, for the first time in her life she answered not one word."
"Do you know why he married you? Are you so stupid that you have not discovered that?" my spouse asked. "I knew, for he made confidant of me previous to the wedding. He married you because he had no trials, there were his words, and he feared he would not reach heaven unless he had his share. Therefore he wedded you."
"Aha, a good one," said Mr. Pantry as he tremulously shook his head with laughter.
"And what said she to that?" asked Squire Whytynge.
"Never did she speak so quietly, and for some time made no response; at last she said:
"So that was his reason, was it? Well—I'll—disappoint—him.—I'll—be—even—with—him.—I'll make him another sort of a wife from this hour, for I will not be a pack horse to carry my husband to heaven!"
Here Moses Butler sharply snuffed both candles, and when the laughter of the gentlemen had in a measure subsided, Mr. Goodwing continued:
"When Nathan came in, soon after, what did his wife do but approach him and kiss him, and Nathan trembled, for never had she done that. And she said, 'dear Nathan,' and she did lovingly caress him, so that he was as one in a trance."
"Neighbors," continued Mr. Goodwing, "I have seen their babe, as I remarked; and I saw Nathan gently stroking his spouse's brow, and he did say soft words to her to which she made loving response, and as she looked coyly over his shoulder to my spouse and me, she said, 'My Aunt Charity, you see what your words have driven me to. I am not any pack horse, am I, my husband? and Nathan did even in our presence kiss her, and if she returned not the kiss of love, then I never gave one myself.'"
"Would that I had known that this could she have been conquered. For she was the comeliest lass in all these parts, and I would have put up with six months of gall for a lifetime of sweetness. Had I known what I know now, her name would be Blumfield, not Appleby," said Mr. Blumfield sadly.

"Aha, neighbor Blumfield, we have your secret now," said Mr. Birchwood.
"No, you have not, neighbors."
"Tell you you did betray yourself!"
Here the tall clock struck nine, and Moses Butler rising and snuffing a candle, said: "Now, gentlemen, all of you, it is time to be in your beds. Go home and tell your spouses to hear it." And with his usual authority he sent them all away.

The members of the Seven Coppers must have taken Moses at his word, for of all the gossiping in Hartford town, there was never such gossip among the matrons as there was the next day over Nathan Appleby's marriage and the result of it.

A negro, undergoing an examination as a witness, when asked if his master was a Christian, replied: "No, sir; he is a member of Congress."

In the pending evictions on Lord Kenmare's estate, the agent, Mr. Samuel Murray Hussey, J. B., has refused in every case to the expensive and complicated process of bringing action for debt in the Superior Court at Dublin in order to make an example of the defaulting tenant, and strike terror into his neighbours. In some cases the criminal, as well as the civil machinery of the law, has been evoked to this end, and arrest on suspicion has quickly followed eviction process. Here are a few specimen cases, showing the manner in which the tenants of the Lord Chamberlain have been, and are now being, dealt with:—

John Courneay, of Dromdubh, held 38 acres of land of medium quality, some of it being coarse and rushy, the valuation of the farm being just one pound and six pence. His rent was £52. Two years ago Lord Kenmare, or his agent, had four acres of the land planted with timber to serve as a cover for his Lordship's game. When rent day

Troubled Ireland.
(Toronto Globe's Special Commissioner.)
KILLARNEY, Nov., 1881.
There are few parts of Ireland where the struggle between landlord and tenant is being so determinedly fought out on both sides as in this section of the County Kerry. Neither party shows any disposition to compromise. The most extensive landlords positively refuse any abatement of the rent, and the tenants on their part are equally determined not to pay their rents without a substantial reduction. Writs of ejectment are being issued by wholesale. There is likely to be plenty of work for soldiers, police, and emergency men within the next few weeks. The workmen authorities have received a notice to be ready to accommodate the families of one hundred tenants whose heads the terrors of the law are suspended. No one knows beforehand exactly when the eviction will take place, or I certainly should have been present at a scene of the present is to get it over with as little delay or publicity as possible, and so though the public know that such and such evictions are to take place before long, the exact time is never made public. The sheriff selects his own time, the soldiers and police make quick work of it, and the whole thing is over, if it can be managed, before the country side is roused and a crowd attracted to the spot. Most of the pending evictions are on the estate of Lord Kenmare, whose relations with his tenantry have long been unfriendly. A number of writs were also issued last week by Mr. Henry Arthur Herbert, M. P. for Kerry, who owns a considerable estate at Muckross, two miles from the town. Herbert, Mr. Herbert, though he had driven hard bargains with his tenants, has not been prominent as an evictor. To many of his tenants the Court will afford no relief, as they hold under leases taken out before 1870. Anticipating the Act of 1870, Mr. Herbert raised his rents from 10 to 20 per cent. all round, and compelled the holders to take the farms on lease. Had this been done after the Act of 70 the tenants could have come into the Land Act for interfering with the provisions of a lease made before 1870, Mr. Herbert's property, like that of Lord Kenmare, is badly rack-rented, especially since he forced the leases upon his tenantry. His dealings with tenants have as a rule been harsh and oppressive, so much so that the farmers even when they had their rent in hand dread the day, not knowing lest some further imposition would be devised. I heard an anecdote told of a man who does a retail business in town which illustrates the terror inspired in some of the peasantry by the prospect of an interview with the landlord. One of Herbert's tenants on a rent day called at the public house kept by my informant and asked for a "half one." A half-one in Ireland is about two fingers of whiskey and is about the usual quantity taken at a time, unless the drinker is very dry or cold, when he takes a whole glass. He took his drink and went out, but the rent office was not open, and in a few minutes back he came for another half one, and then after the lapse of a short time he returned again.

"I'm going in to see him now; give me just another half-one." Here, the landlady of the tavern interfered and suggested that he should not drink any more, at least till the interview was over. "Oh give me a drop to kepe me courage up," said the hapless tenant, trembling at the prospect. "I must have it. Shure I'm now afraid than if I was going before the Judgment Seat of Heaven this blessed minute. It's there I'd get justice, but here I know I'll get none." It was not that he could not or would not pay his rent, but purely for fear of the oppressive increase that he expected was about to be made on account of the improvements he had effected.

LEGAL TERRORISM.
In the pending evictions on Lord Kenmare's estate, the agent, Mr. Samuel Murray Hussey, J. B., has refused in every case to the expensive and complicated process of bringing action for debt in the Superior Court at Dublin in order to make an example of the defaulting tenant, and strike terror into his neighbours. In some cases the criminal, as well as the civil machinery of the law, has been evoked to this end, and arrest on suspicion has quickly followed eviction process. Here are a few specimen cases, showing the manner in which the tenants of the Lord Chamberlain have been, and are now being, dealt with:—

John Courneay, of Dromdubh, held 38 acres of land of medium quality, some of it being coarse and rushy, the valuation of the farm being just one pound and six pence. His rent was £52. Two years ago Lord Kenmare, or his agent, had four acres of the land planted with timber to serve as a cover for his Lordship's game. When rent day

Troubled Ireland.
(Toronto Globe's Special Commissioner.)
There are few parts of Ireland where the struggle between landlord and tenant is being so determinedly fought out on both sides as in this section of the County Kerry. Neither party shows any disposition to compromise. The most extensive landlords positively refuse any abatement of the rent, and the tenants on their part are equally determined not to pay their rents without a substantial reduction. Writs of ejectment are being issued by wholesale. There is likely to be plenty of work for soldiers, police, and emergency men within the next few weeks. The workmen authorities have received a notice to be ready to accommodate the families of one hundred tenants whose heads the terrors of the law are suspended. EDITORIAL NOTES.

From the time when the Syndicate bargain was ratified by the Dominion Parliament, the Globe and other opposition journals have made repeated assaults upon the Government, only to be repulsed on every occasion...

It is rather amusing to note the efforts made by Liberal journals to overturn the defeat of their adherents in political contests. The smallest gain, (even of half a dozen votes) over any previous election...

Ministerial journals have been wont to look upon the Reform party (so called) as the "Organized Hypocrite," but it is seldom that a journal whose sympathies are wholly with the opposition...

The Liberals now find themselves in a hopeless minority in the Local and Federal Legislatures, for five, probably ten or fifteen years. The consequence should be, and will be to some extent, to purge the ranks of the Libs of all jobbers and temporizers...

Better Times Under the N. P. Dun, Wims & Co. give the following statistics of Canadian failures for the past year: Total number 637, with liabilities of $5,770,717.

Fire at Sackville Academy.

Special Despatch to Daily Evening News. Sackville, Jan. 9.—The Mount Allison Institution has again suffered a severe loss. Yesterday morning about three o'clock one of the female servants...

There will be ample room provided for all the children to continue to board at the ladies' academy. People are coming from all quarters to see the ruins. The executive committee have been invited to meet on Monday night.

The Male Academy, which was opened in 1848, was founded by the late Chas. F. Allison, Esq. The original building was burned on the 10th of January. It destroyed on Sunday was ready for occupation in the following week.

Sir Leonard Tilley and the Tariff. In the course of the past week or two the Toronto Grid organ has signalled its sense of the kindness of the season by a row of abusive epithets on Sir Leonard Tilley.

Are Surpluses Bad? Unless some very unexpected check occurs it is now certain that Mr. Gladstone will have a handsome surplus to dispose of in April next. The revenue paid into the exchequer exceeds already by about $2,800,000 the sum received at same date last year.

At the present time shipbuilding interests are by no means dormant, there being under construction vessels aggregating about $1,000,000.

(Toronto Mail.) Agricultural Protection.

It is always gratifying to learn the whole resources which the enemy possess, and in that sense yesterday's article on agricultural protection published in the columns of our morning contemporary is as pleasing as it is assuring.

It is asked, "What profit can the Canadian farmer reap from the circumstance that our imports of American breadstuffs were less by $800,000 in 1880 than they were in 1878?" The advantage derived is manifest.

As regards the flour-milling interest, statistics show that the tariff has given our manufacturers the home market. In 1880 there were imported into this country 571,665 barrels of flour.

Church Dedication. We take from the Fredericton Herald an account of the opening services of the new Methodist Church at Sackville, N. B., on the 1st inst.

Marriage Bells. We learn from the Advance that an event which has been looked forward to with much interest in our highest social circles, took place yesterday morning at St. Paul's Church.

Mount Allison. Mr. W. L. Goodwin, B. Sc., University of London, has formally accepted the professorship of Mount Allison to which he was recently elected.

Sudden Death. On Wednesday we received a despatch from Sackville announcing the sudden death of Mr. Geo. S. McCord, Manager of the office of the Great North Western Telegraph Co.

General Intelligence.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The District Attorney, speaking to-day of the length of the trial of the prisoner, thought the record would show that the prosecution had not occupied over two weeks. The other five weeks had been taken by the defence in their examinations, long cross-examinations, and the interruptions of the prisoner.

At seventeen minutes past 8 o'clock the guests invited by Mr. Greene to take a ride over the Grand Southern, to St. Stephen, embarked at Carleton Place. The train was accompanied by the Hon. Speaker, Messrs. Perley, Hamilton, and Marshall; Messrs. Woods, McLean, and Ritchie, of the Opposition; J. V. Ellis of the "Globe"; Count DeBury, Hon. F. A. Pike, Mr. Boxhall, C. E., General Warner, and other distinguished gentlemen.

The Irish Grievance.

London, January 4.—John Bright, speaking at a meeting in London, traced the cause of the Irish disaffection to a long course of Tory misrule and justified the coercive measures on the ground of absolute necessity. He said that the British Government had not only no sympathy with absentee landlords who, from a safe distance, counsel others to commit crime while they administer the law, but that they had extracted from them for so many years a large sum of money.

Tacoma, A. T., Jan. 7.—Official intelligence from Hermocille, Sonora, of recent Indian depredations, states that two bands numbering three hundred, under chiefs Chris and Jo, have been depreeding the districts of Molevum, Sahpima, and Arizha, and killed superintendent Woberling of Lampasosa, 14 men, 6 women, and 4 children. General Ortega left Hermocille with a large regular force for the scene. It is expected that they will overtake the near Chis Para. The Indians are well armed with repeating rifles, and have about eighteen hundred rounds of ammunition.

New York, Jan. 6.—A special to the Herald says there is good reason to believe that the Emperor of Mexico, Maximilian, is still in the hands of the Imperialists. He has just been discovered at Chihuahua. Howland Vincent, a sent down special despatch, says that the Emperor is in the hands of the Imperialists, and that the person who planned the attempt will shortly be apprehended. It is believed that the person who planned the attempt is a personal enemy of the Emperor—but nothing certain is yet known.

A Big Explosion.

A POWDER MAGAZINE USED AS A TARGET.

Oakalosa, Ia., Jan. 5.—This afternoon John Phillips, the mayor's son, Gerald Joyce, and John Stedman were practicing shooting with breech-loading rifles. They used a wooden building, in which was stored five hundred kegs of powder, as a target. The whole magazine exploded with a terrific shock, and all the boys were instantly killed. They were carried from fifty to two hundred yards, and mutilated and burned almost beyond recognition.

Oakalosa, Iowa, Jan. 6.—The boys who were killed in the powder explosion yesterday were all of prominent families. They were seen to shoot at the building from a short distance and then go up to see the result. They afterwards fired another shot, and then came the explosion. The body of young Phillips was found fifty yards from the building, his clothing nearly gone, and the back portion of his head carried away, and his body otherwise horribly mangled. John Stedman was blown through a wire fence one hundred yards away, and was fearfully torn. Geo. Joyce was found in a creek one hundred and fifty yards away, with his head almost completely gone. The houses in the north part of Oakalosa are badly wrecked. Doors, windows and work are broken. Stables are completely wrecked, chimneys, topped and fixed to the ground top to bottom. The wreck of plate glass cannot be covered by $50,000.

P. T. Barnum Falls Into Line.
Scanning our various exchanges, we notice the special dispatch given in prominent New York dailies to Barnum, Halley & Hutchinson's strong endorsement of St. Jacobs Oil as a pain-reliever. They say, "We have fallen into the same old, old error."

Hillsville, Ohio, Jan. 3.—A shocking accident happened here this morning, resulting in the death of a young boy in a public hall, the floor of which collapsed, causing several deaths and injuring many persons. The society is composed of the first families of the place and the gathering included the intelligence and beauty of the neighborhood. The band had just ceased playing when a crowd was seen to enter the hall from the rear. The door was closed, and the people, tables, stove and all together, fell into the hall. The crowd, which was estimated to be about twenty, was crowded down. The chandelier in the store-room below was broken and the oil spilled over a number of persons and burnt a boy named William Yoder, five years old, who was burned to death in his mother's arms. She was fatally burned. Fortunately the building did not catch fire. The casualties are: 3 killed, 5 fatally burned, 7 seriously injured, and 45 painfully but not dangerously injured.

Dr. Harris, of Middlebury, Vt., says:
"I had been troubled with Bronchitis for two years, so affecting the organs of speech that I could not speak for more than a few days at a time. I had with it a severe cough and cold night sweats. I took two bottles of Allen's Lung Balm and am entirely cured."

The Royal Baron of Beef which graced Queen Victoria's table on Christmas day weighed about 300 pounds. It was cut from a prime steer and white shorthorn, fed by the Duke of Connaught at Baginbun Park, which fetched $75 at Her Majesty's recent sale at Shaw farm. The huge joint was roasted at Windsor castle and forwarded to Osborne.

PERKINS' INDIAN HERB OINTMENT
Is the remedy that will cure Erysipelas. It has been used for 15 years, and I challenge the world to show me a case where it was used according to directions and did not cure the sufferer. The great Directors of the world are cured in a few days, and you are satisfied with the old treatment of a hundred years ago, and then die as thousands do under that treatment. Space will only admit of two parties who have been cured in a few days by Perkins' Indian Herb Ointment, John Baylis, Picton, N. S., and Dr. H. H. Perkins, N. B., and I will furnish you hundreds of names sent to me for publication, where they had been cured of Erysipelas after they had been given up to die.

PEREMPTORY SALE OF Winter Dry Goods!

Blankets, Flannels, Dresses, Silks, Satins, Shawls, Mantles, Winceys, Prints, Millinery Goods, Smallwares, Haberdashery, Cottons, Stocking's Supplies, Berlin Wool Goods, Men's Clothing and Furnishings, Camp Blankets and Lumbermen's Supplies, Socks, Mitts and Hosiery.

Recognizing the fact that $ A DOLLAR $ should be only valued for its purchasing power and that merchandise has to be turned over under the influence of CASH, We have decided to put on Sale $28,000.00

Worth of sound, reliable and seasonable Goods, which represent our reduced winter stock of Dry Goods, purchased by us for cash from manufacturers.

We are now STOCK TAKING, and goods are being marked down and must be sold, even REGARDLESS OF PROFIT. This is no small Frivolous Things Destined to Meet the FATE OF TOYS at the hands of children, but a MAMMOTH CHEAP SALE of Durable and Household Goods of HIGH STANDARD VALUE, SELECTED WITH GREAT CARE AT CLOSE CASH DISCOUNTS. The reason we sacrifice this splendid stock is, we anticipate the largest trade ever done by any firm on the Miramichi next spring and summer. We want to start with Fresh Spring Goods on a larger scale, and have decided on CLEARING OUT all our stock.

NO MISTAKE. ABSOLUTE SALE. THESE GOODS MUST GO. Therefore Bargains will be given. This is the time for Country Store Keepers to get low prices and their own terms. Prices are going to pieces, and competitors annihilated in presence of the fact that disesteemed public know where to buy, and appreciate our efforts to place really honest goods at their doors for prices heretofore paid for trashy fabrics.

We guarantee every article as represented or money returned. Parcels and samples sent post free on application. We submit our merchandise to the closest comparison, and respectfully invite the purchasing public to call and examine our goods, when we will tender them the best courtesy and treatment whether they buy or not.

came the tenant naturally supposed that some allowance would be made him on the account, but was told that no reduction would be given.

A very similar case is that of Jeremiah Lealey, who rented a farm from Lord Kenmare at Courablesy. The former rent was £24, the same sum as the valuation of the land, but in 1870 it was raised to £104.

These cases show how the powers of the Coercion Act are capable of abuse in order to oppress private landowners. An extensive landlord is always a J. P., so is his agent in many cases.

David O'Brien, of Ballynamagh, two miles from Killarney, owed twelve months' rent in April, and was served with a writ. He defended on the ground that Lord Kenmare had run a road through his property and made no allowance for it.

Another Plot to Kill the Czar. The London Telegraph's correspondent from St. Petersburg says: A plot has been discovered for the assassination of the czar in Karavallan street.

P. Donoghue, of Teeraboul, pays £40 a year rent. He was served with a process served by the Superior Court, and before he could recover possession had to pay a bill of $67 7s. 6d. costs.

All these instances of injustice and harsh usage of tenants on the Kenmare estate are well authenticated and cannot be denied.

A WHIMSICAL LANDLORD.

In addition to the losses by oppressive legal proceedings the Kenmare tenants are liable to suffer in other ways from the mere whims and caprices of the lord of the soil. Since he put up his magnificent new mansion, costing a hundred thousand pounds, the rents of the estate have been simultaneously increased.

Lord Kenmare is a member of Mr. Gladstone's Government. It is not, of course, fair to blame the Prime Minister for the doings of all his colleagues, but considering the quality and political character of everything bearing on the land question, it is not surprising that those within the range of his influence in this locality, should be so completely captivated by his name, and caprice which characterize him, or rather his agents' dealings with the tenants are unable to take much notice of the professions of the Ministry of which he continues to be a member.

WHAT WOODSTOCK WANTS.

THE DISCOVERY MADE BY A NEW BRUNSWICK TOWN.

London Daily Telegraph. Woodstock, in New Brunswick, Canada, has just made a discovery which, while it is not of much use to the place of its invention, is nevertheless a valuable one to other towns.

It is that a fire-hose is of little value unless it is of a sufficient length. According to the various chronicles of the events which transpire in this town, a conflagration broke out which threatened to annihilate an immense amount of valuable property.

Gift to a Methodist College. (From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Dec. 2.) Mr. Hober, a Barnes has made many gifts to religious enterprises of different denominations, but his last was $25,000 to the Central Methodist College at Fayette Howard County.

Another Plot to Kill the Czar. The London Telegraph's correspondent from St. Petersburg says: A plot has been discovered for the assassination of the czar in Karavallan street.

FILLING UP THE COSTS. P. Donoghue, of Teeraboul, pays £40 a year rent. He was served with a process served by the Superior Court, and before he could recover possession had to pay a bill of $67 7s. 6d. costs.

All these instances of injustice and harsh usage of tenants on the Kenmare estate are well authenticated and cannot be denied.

THIS IS THE WAY THE REACTION WORKS.

Since September, 1878, forty-two by-elections have taken place. Two of these resulted in the election of men of the same political stripe as their predecessors. Of the remaining nine, two only—East Northumberland and Ontario—were won by Conservatives.

Woodstock, Dec. 29.—A man calling himself Charles Ivers, who came from St. John, clocked himself to death while eating a piece of beefsteak yesterday afternoon at John Reardon's house, a few miles below this town. He had been drinking very heavily of late.

The Old Farmer's Almanac, which has been issued for ninety years is the oracle of many a farming household in New England. The farmers' calendar has always been a most important feature of this annual.

Lord Kenmare is a member of Mr. Gladstone's Government. It is not, of course, fair to blame the Prime Minister for the doings of all his colleagues, but considering the quality and political character of everything bearing on the land question, it is not surprising that those within the range of his influence in this locality, should be so completely captivated by his name, and caprice which characterize him, or rather his agents' dealings with the tenants are unable to take much notice of the professions of the Ministry of which he continues to be a member.
