BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA

The Bank of Nova Scotia's eighty-second Annual Statement appears in this issue. Owing to changes in the form of statement made necessary by the recent revision of the Bank Act, comparisons with last year's figures cannot readily be made. However, it may be noted that the total assets have increased from $71,279,298.95 to $80,151,829.99 during the year. Liabilities to the public (deposits, notes outstanding, etc.), total $62,686,436.27. The holdings of coin and legal tender amount to $10,440,849.08. Notes of and cheques of other banks, balances due by banks and banking correspondents, including Sterling Exchange, amount to $7,885,463.07, and other readily available assets such as call loans and investments are held to the extent of $20,746,796.20. So it can be seen that against the Bank's total liabilities to the public it holds in cash 16 per cent, in immediately availables, 29 per cent, and in quick assets 62 per cent. This is a very strong showing and should be viewed with satisfaction by the shareholders and depositors.

Net profits for the year, after losses by bad debts are estimated and provided for, amount to $1,210,744.39, as compared with $970,544.38 a year ago. These profits are distributed in the payment of dividends at the rate of 14 per cent, amounting to $814,504.60, contribution to the Officers' Pension Fund $50,000, written off Bank Premises, $150,000, premium paid Bank of New Brunswick on purchase, $100,000, and transferred to the reserve fund, $110,000, leaving a balance of $41,124.27 to carry forward.

The paid-up capital has been increased by an issue of new stock and by the Capital Stock of the Bank of New Brunswick, from $4,734,390, to $6,000,000. The Reserve Fund, with the addition of the Reserve of the bank of New Brunswick, $1,730,000. Premium received on new stock, $371,854, and a appropriation from Profit and Loss of $110,000, is brought to an even $11,000,000.

The shareholders of this sound old institution must be pleased indeed to note that their Bank has so well maintained its position during the year 1913.

APPLE JELLY

6. Pare and cut into thin slices, three or four juicy, sour apples, place a layer of the slices in a bowl, sprinkle them liberally with sugar, put in another layer of apples and sugar, and so on until apples are all used up, having sugar on the top. Place a cover over the dish, and bake for two hours in a moderate oven. When this is cold, it will turn out like a mound of jelly. Serve with whipped cream.

A SIMPLE LIE

There is no word in the English language, except "a lie", pure and simple, unadulterated and impudent, to apply to the following which is going the rounds of the Borden press just now to deceive the Canadian people and prejudice the Liberal demand for the removal of the food taxes:

"In Great Britain, where they have a so-called 'Free Trade' tariff, the duty collected on food stuffs last year amounted to nearly $350,000,000 or nearly eight dollars for every man, woman or child in the United Kingdom."

To begin with, this assertion is a brazen lie to the extent of $301,000,000. The remaining $49,000,000 are levied not on the necessities, but certain luxuries of life. Neither party in England would dare to tax the food of the masses. If the wealthy classes choose to indulge in costly luxuries, it is only right and proper that they should pay for the privilege. But the existence and the well-being of the nation does not depend on luxuries.

EDITOR'S MAIL BAG

To the Editor of the Graphic,
Dear Sir:

The present season has fully demonstrated the necessity of having a bridge span the Restigouche river, between Cross Point and Campbellton. There is a diversity of opinion as to what kind of a bridge should be built. The County of Bonaventure, considering that half a loaf was better than none, made request, in no uncertain sound, for a vehicle and pedestrian bridge. But the town of Campbellton and County of Restigouche, while desiring the bridge, want the whole loaf or none at all, that is, they wish for a combined bridge, one that would allow for railway, vehicles and pedestrians.

Now, I think this latter is a serious mistake, as the vast territory on this side of the river, adjacent and adjoining the town of Campbellton, clearly requires a bridge, not in the near future, but at once. These are growing times, and we are a growing people, with our needs and requirements increasing every day, by leaps and bounds, let us then, I say, by all means have the former bridge at once, and when the time is ripe for a railway bridge, then let us have a combination, two bridges are not two many across the Restigouche, at this point. What we want is action, immediate action to be taken by the people on each side of the river, so that both provinces will join hands and build an interprovincial bridge, and by so doing they will receive assistance from the Dominion Government towards same.

HEALTHY GROWTH IN NEW GLASGOW

The City Has Grown From a Seaport to an Important Industrial Centre

In an interesting article on New Glasgow, the headquarters of the big iron and steel industry which he personally directs, Mr. Thom. Cantley traces the development of New Glasgow, when its principal business was shipbuilding and sea-faring to its present position as one of the leading industrial centres in Eastern Canada. Mr. Cantley says:

A Controlling Feature
"With the advent of iron sailing ships, followed soon after by steamers, the exhaustion of the original forest timber and the resultant decline of wooden ship-building, some other avenue for the constructive genius and energy of its Scottish population had to be found. The fact that coal for manufacturing purposes existed in large quantities immediately under their feet, was a controlling feature in determining the course in which their future energies were to be directed. The immediate result was that several foundry and engineering shops were called into existence, the most important being that of I. Matheson & Company, established in the year of Confederation, namely, 1867. Later came the Nova Scotia Forge Company, the Nova Scotia Steel Co., W. P. McNeill's bridge and structural works, Ballis-Underwood Company (agricultural implements), The Brown Machine Company and J. W. Cummings & Son (mining machinery), the Steel Purchasing Company—all of which with the exception of I. Matheson & Co. grew up under the shadow of the pioneer producer of the basic iron and steel products, the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company. Here, also, was established about 1882, the Nova Scotia Glass Company, also a large consumer of coal and the first industry in the province to bring in a colony of foreign artisans to establish an industry up to that time unknown in the country.

"Within the town, or if not within its actual borders, close by, was worked out many of the mining and manufacturing problems in connection with the industrial life of Canada.

In the Beginning
Here coal was first mined in a commercial way. Here was produced the first Siemens-Martin open-hearth steel, also the first basic steel made in Canada. Here was installed the first steel ingot casting mill which left the shores of Great Britain, and here this mill copped the first steel ingots ever rolled in Canada. Here was set up and worked for many years a washery to wash coal in a commercial way for the production of coke, this being the first—certainly in Canada—and if we mistake not, the first on this continent. Here, again, the first on the continent, were built and operated the first retort coke ovens of modern type, as many years previously had been built the first Beehive ovens. Here were the first works, which converted the native ores into steel ingots, steel bars, steel forgings, and here were made the first steel railway car axles in Canada. And the Scotia Company, having their headquarters here, were the first to develop the new widely known Wabana ores, the first to mine them, the first to smelt them, the first to introduce them to the markets of Europe and America. They were also the first to win these ores from underneath the sea, and, by demonstrating the value of Wabana ores and by almost simultaneously proving that the cull or small coals of Cape Breton could be washed so as to remove the sulphur and when treated in retort ovens produce a satisfactory basic furnace coke, thereby laid the foundations on which has been reared the entire iron and steel industry of Eastern Canada.

"Later here was installed the first hydraulic forging plant in Canada, while at the same time was laid down the first fluid compression plant in the Dominion which to-day is undoubtedly the finest of its type on this continent.

SWEET APPLES PICKLED
9. Tough sweet apples are best for pickles. Pare, core and quarter them. Stimmer the parings, cores and seeds, drain, and strain the juice. Cook the apples in this till tender, then drain again. Save the juice. For every seven pounds of fruit, allow four pounds of white sugar, one pint good vinegar and one cup of the apple juice. Make a syrup of the sugar, vinegar and juice, tie one tablespoon cloves and two of cinnamon in a piece of cheesecloth, and boil in syrup fifteen minutes. Add the fruit, and simmer half an hour. Put fruit into jars, pour syrup over and seal.

BEST APPLE SAUCE
10. Peel tart apples and quarter them, if very large cut once again. Have two quarts when peeled. Put into a granite kettle, pour over them two cups of sugar, and set on the back of the range. Let them cook slowly until perfectly clear. Cover while cooking. They must be clear and translucent when done.

APPLE CUSTARD PIE
8. Strain a cup of apple sauce through a fine strainer. Beat the yolk of one egg and a half cup of sugar until light and foamy, add by the apple sauce, season with lemon extract. Bake in quick oven with one crust. Make a meringue of the white of the egg, spread over pie, and return to oven and brown lightly.

APPLE WATER
6. Official home well-flavored apple water. To a large jug, add three or four cloves, a strip of lemon peel, boiling water, then pour over all. Let stand one day. Makes a wholesome drink in twelve hours. If preferred add sugar to taste.

WHAT IS THE AGE OF MOTHER EARTH?

Scientists Employ Various Methods in Trying to Answer Question

(Translation in the Literary Digest)
It is assumed that all the sodium chloride in the sea has been taken by the rains from the land. It is shown how much the sea contains and how much the rivers add to it annually. Supposing that the sea water was originally fresh, it is easy to calculate when the salting began.

By this method, Joly found 95,000,000 of years; E. von Romer 160,000,000. The difference should not astonish us. Of the two fundamental data of the calculation, one, the total quantity of salt in the ocean, may be determined with sufficient exactitude. But the other fundamental quantity—the quantity of salt washed down by the rivers, can not be so closely estimated. There are few rivers whose average flow and average salinity are well known.

Let us pass on to the method founded on the disintegration of radioactive material. Helium has been discovered in mineral waters and in rocks. Soon after this discovery it was noted that the ratio between the quantity of helium and that of radioactive matter (the "co-efficient of helium") increases with the geologic age of the rock. Unfortunately the limestones, which from their richness in fossils would seem to be proper basis for a chronology, present such considerable departures from this rule that they cannot be used. Some rare minerals, zircon in particular, gives concordant results. Supposing that zircon retains all the helium produced by the decomposition of its radioactive constituents, and that the quantity of helium produced annually is constant, the "co-efficient of helium" evidently gives the mineral's age.

It is an interesting fact that the number of years given by this method increases with the geological age of the specimens used. One from the end of the Tertiary gives 8,000,000 years; one from the Eocene, at the end of the Tertiary, 31,000,000; one from the Carboniferous, 150,000,000, and one from primitive igneous rock, 710,000,000. Other measurements run up as high as 1,025,000,000 years for primitive strata.

Finally we should mention the determination of the earth's age made by G. H. Darwin in connection with his investigations on the evolution of the moon. To tell the truth, this is the only determination that deserves the name, since the moment of the catastrophe that severed the once single body into two distinct parts, earth and moon, must be considered as the real birth of both.

For this calculation, of which it is impossible to give full details here, Dr. Darwin was obliged to make several arbitrary hypotheses, so chosen that the number of years sought should be as small as possible. The figure that he obtained was 53,000,000 years.

As may be seen, all these methods, different as they are, produce results of the same order of magnitude. They all reach the conclusion that the phases of the earth's history embraces tens and hundreds of millions of years.

Mrs. A. R. Tabor, of Crider, Mo., had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by all dealers.

CHAPTER XVII.

Opposite the Cathedral.

Fifth avenue at two o'clock in the morning is fast asleep. There are loathes in New York which are more widely awake at that hour than at any other time of day, but the highway of fashion is not one of them; and in the neighborhood of Fifth street, its repose is as profound as at any point of its long, undeviatingly straight course.

For over an hour I had waited in that sumptuous white marble club edifice of the plutocrats which ostentatiously punctuates the avenue at Sixth street, and, tired of sitting nervously and disappointed, I had chosen to walk down to my rooms, believing that the exercise in the clear, frosty air would serve to counteract, in a measure at least, all three of these vexatious conditions.

To the limit of sight there stretched away a double, converging chain of twin lights marking the curb line for endless blocks, and illuminating the nearer sidewalk and roadway, if not to effulgence, certainly with a clearly defining radiance. Now and then, I met a quick-stepping pedestrian, usually in evening dress with cigar alight; and at more or less brief intervals limousined motors and taxicabs with gleaming lamps sped by me at top speed. Once a hansom passed, the hoof-beats of the hard-driven horse resounding jarringly against the night silence.

At Fifty-fourth street I cut diagonally across the avenue to the west side, and, continuing my way southward, absorbed in the problems confronting me, had been for a little while lost to encompassing objects. Then, suddenly, fearing lest in my abstraction I should pass the street on which my rooms were located, I aroused myself to get an idea of my location.

Across the way the grim facade of the Cathedral rising dark and sullen as a fortress made clear. But, on my own side of the avenue there was no such distinguishing mark. The brown stone dwellings, monotonously ugly, with their high stoops and balustraded areas, were no more enlightening than the stone flagging of the sidewalk or the asphalt of the roadway. Scores of blocks presented practically the same aspect as this. But as with critical gaze I measured one after another of these combinations I was all at once arrested by sight of a tall, bent figure clutching the high iron railing which guarded the corner frontage of the house on the corner—the only really individual house in the row.

My first rough concept was that I had come upon incapacity resulting from intemperance. At clear view, however, I tempered my judgment. The possibility of illness or injury intervened, and I paused Samaritan-like to offer succor. The wayfarer was evidently a man of middle age, if I might judge from the contour of his back, which was toward me, and I saw at once that he was struggling to keep upon his feet by sheer muscular hold of the railing's iron uprights, for his knees were bent threateningly and his arms were extended and tense. He seemed to be endeavoring to make some sign of realizing my presence. Indeed I think it was not until I spoke that he half turned his head towards me, and, for the first time, I got sight of his features.

Whether or not I uttered a word, or made a sound, or stood for a long moment silent, I cannot say. I know only that I doubted my eyes and questioned my reason; for, if these were not playing me false, the profile thus revealed to me was the profile of Robert Cameron.

To try to set down in detail just what followed must be an idle effort, with fancy providing the bulk of the ingredients. Surprised, amazed, astounded even, are all too feeble terms to apply to my emotional condition. Dazedly, I was floundering in what seemed a veritable sea of unreality. When the commonplace began to re-adjust themselves, I was standing at the curb, my arm wound supportingly about Cameron's waist and his arm pressing heavy on my shoulder. Drawing in to us was an empty hansom cab, provided by Providence, and hailed, I suppose, by me, though I swear I have no recollection of it.

The cabman helped me to lift him in, and at this the pity of his plight smote me, tempering the joy of having found him, and quickening within me a spirit of angry retaliation against his enemies. For the man now at my side was far different from that man who had sat with me on the after deck of the Sibylla, only four weeks ago. He was, indeed, it seemed to me little more than the husk of the Cameron I had known. In facial conformation the change was not so marked, though his expression was pathetically at variance with anything I had ever before seen him wear. The lines of his face were drawn, as with pain, and his eyes were dull to vacancy. He talked, slowly, in a cramped heap in his coat, and I was conscious of a moment in his face, then, turning to me, he asked:

"But what has happened to Mr. Cameron, sir?"

"I wish I could tell you Checkbeedy," was my unguarded reply. "I wish he could tell us himself." "But he is so wasted, sir! And his clothes, I never saw Mr. Cameron in such clothes."

It was quite true. They were of what is called, I believe, a pepper-and-salt mixture, coarse of texture and ill-cut, yet not much worn. "He does not recognize us," Checkbeedy went on, "and still he is conscious. May I ask you, sir, where you brought him from?"

I chose to ignore the question, in sudden realization of the necessity of caution.

"And he has been missing a month, they say, sir," continued Mr. Checkbeedy. "Missing!" I repeated. "Who says he has been missing?" "The servants all say so, sir."

"Then the servants must get rid of the idea, at once," I said, sharply. "Mr. Cameron has merely been out of town for a while. He went away for his health, and now he has returned, benefited. Do you understand, Checkbeedy? He has returned, benefited. And now, you and Louis will set him to his room, while I telephone for Dr. Massey."

Checkbeedy bowed, assenting, and Louis, still whimpering, wiped his eyes. It was nearly four o'clock when the physician, late his patient, joined me in the library downstairs. His face was very grave.

"I have examined Mr. Cameron thoroughly," he said, "and I can assure you that he is not seriously injured." The phrase opened up a new line of thought to me.

"Seriously injured?" I repeated. "I don't understand, Doctor. Do you mean that?"

"I mean," he interrupted, "that the blow on the back of the head caused no fracture."

"Then he was struck?" "Undoubtedly. Probably with a sandbag. Hence his present dazed condition. Had the blow been delivered with more force, it might have resulted in complete loss of memory. You have heard, of course, of instances where men have forgotten even their own names?"

"I nodded."

"Mr. Cameron will regain his memory. It's merely a temporary matter. I have telephoned for a man named for him—one who understands such cases. He will be here in twenty minutes. At present Mr. Cameron is sleeping. I am in hopes that when he awakens his mind will be comparatively clear."

It was about to bid me good-night when I checked him.

"Doctor," I said, "I am glad to find you so optimistic. Before you go, I want you to write me a bulletin of Mr. Cameron's condition and sign it. I want to mention it in the injury, since it is not serious. If possible, I would suggest that you use the word 'indisposition' and be sure to employ the 'temporary' you called into play a moment ago."

Dr. Massey gladly assented. Seated at Cameron's writing table he scribbled a bulletin of even more encouraging and confident tenor than I had indicated. And I used it to turn the tide of speculation in Crystal Consolideated. But neither the physician nor the written words of the physician held for me any considerable measure of solace. My friend's condition was desperate. I knew it and my heart ached for him; but it ached more for Evelyn, who, I felt sure, would be given the gladness of good news only to be crucified the next moment on the cross of anxiety.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Three Promises.

Need I say that I did not sleep that night? It was five o'clock when I left Cameron's, after a talk with the nurse, and I promised to return in an hour. The interval was devoted to a cold bath, a shave, and a change of clothing at my room, and at six I was back again, talking once more with Checkbeedy who was personally serving me with coffee in the breakfast room.

"Between you and me," I began, "there is small need of concealment in this matter of Mr. Cameron's disappearance and return, his coming as remarkable and mysterious as his going. I think I am experienced enough to understand that such an affair as this cannot be kept entirely secret—especially not from Mr. Cameron's servants—and it is better, Checkbeedy, that you should understand it thoroughly. I can fancy the distorted story that has been circulated below stairs. That more rumors, wide of the truth, not leaked out and gained press publicity, speaks very well for you and your staff, and I congratulate you on your loyalty and good judgment. All I ask now is that you will continue to be guarded in what you say. A single unadvised word might interfere very materially with our efforts to trace the guilty ones and bring them to punishment."

And then I told him as much as I deemed wise of the facts of the case, of the master's previous plight, and of my anxiety concerning his present condition.

"And above all things, Checkbeedy," I added in conclusion, "don't look solemn and distressed when Miss Evelyn is present. Before her, no matter how we really feel, we must appear confident."

Casting, Cleaning & Polishing

All at One Time

THE old way to clean a hardwood floor was to dust it, then clean it, then oil and polish it. A half-day's task—lots of back-breaking work—and even then the result was not always satisfactory. But the new way, with the O-Cedar Polish Mop—you dust, clean and polish all at once. Easy, quick and satisfactory. No stooping or bending. No hard rubbing. You simply pass the mop over the floor—all the dust and dirt is collected and held and the floor is given a hard, lasting, lustrous polish. A few minutes easy work and the result is always satisfactory.

O-Cedar Polish Mop

For cleaning and dusting everywhere—not only the floors, but the tops of doors, the sills and banisters, etc. Everywhere, all the hard-to-get-at places. You don't have to move the beds and heavy furniture, you can reach under them easily, for the handle of the mop is 54 inches long.

Try It at Our Risk

The price of the O-Cedar Polish Mop is only $1.50, and every cent of your money will be refunded, if, after two days' trial, you do not find it satisfactory in every respect. We know you will find it the most satisfactory household article you ever used.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all rest of medicine in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. Mary EARLEWINE, R.F.D. No. 3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.
Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now I am cured. I feel better than I have for years and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. HETTIE GREENSTREET, Nebo, Illinois.

are concerned in these difficulties. "To the ordinary man, dynamite and danger are synonymous. Time was when a suggestion of using explosives on the farm in other than weapon form would have been regarded as a sign of insanity. The world moves, however, and at the present time responsible persons can use and handle dynamite just as safely as they can handle gasoline, matches or coal oil. True, accidents may occur, for dynamite is not at all suitable to entrust to a child or a careless laborer. Neither is a fractious colt which is likely to run away; or a binder or other valuable and intricate machine which may be almost irreparably injured. Accidents will occur with dynamite, but if properly handled there is no more danger from it on the farm than there is from fire, flood, storm, or any of the other numerous mishaps which affect the average farmer. Improved manufacture and time-tested methods have rendered accidents, practically nil, where proper care is exercised."

FORMER MONCTON BANK CLERK GOT SIX MONTHS

Says a Toronto despatch.—D. A. Kean, former assistant manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at Mount Dennis, appeared before Justice Denison in the County Court, Toronto, Thursday, to answer a charge of forging a cheque for $700. The father of the accused had wired his willingness to refund the money, and His Honor remanded the case to enable the bank authorities to communicate with Kean's relatives. Bail in one surety of $2,000 was granted the prisoner. Kean is well known in Moncton and for a time worked in the Bank of Nova Scotia branch here. He made many acquaintances and was well-liked by all who knew him. He belongs to Campbellton, where his parents still reside. He got six months.

FIRE LOSS HEAVY AT CARAQUET

F. T. B. Young's Store And Contents Destroyed Last Week.—Partly Insured

Mr. F. T. B. Young suffered a severe loss early last Tuesday morning when his large general store was completely destroyed, together with its contents, by a fire which, when discovered about half past one o'clock, was far beyond control. The fire was first seen by Mr. Young's daughter, who was awakened by the glare of the flames, and who quickly aroused the household. The building was then ablaze from end to end, so that no effort could be made to remove the stock, which was particularly large, as Mr. Young was about to commence supplying his fishermen with their supplies for the coming season, and it was impossible even to enter the office where the safe was, and a number of contracts and other valuable papers were destroyed. The wind was fortunately blowing off the large warehouse and fish sheds nearby, so there was no difficulty in preventing the spread of the fire to them, but a large barn below the store caught fire several times from flying sparks, and was only saved after much watchful work.

The store building was valued at $2,000, and the stock $5,500. Insurance was carried of $1,000 on the building and $4,500 on the stock, so that Mr. Young's loss is a very serious one. He has already commenced fitting up one of his warehouses for use as a store and office, and will resume business there at an early date. The safe passed through the fire unharmed except for the destruction of the combination lock, and when the safe door was removed, the contents were found undamaged. A number of other important records were, however, destroyed. The origin of the fire is as yet unexplained.

FARMING WITH EXPLOSIVES

James J. Larkin, writing in JANUARY CANADA MONTHLY, presents some new facts about explosives as a farmer's proposition. The progressive farmers have taken up the long-dreaded dynamite, and have put it into practical operation. Says Mr. Larkin: "Explosives on the farm though, as yet, of course, not in general use, have proven a decided success. As in all experiments their use at first was very limited. A few farmers, perhaps with some knowledge of quarrying, utilized them to destroy particularly inconvenient tree stumps. Naturally other uses for the explosives suggested themselves until to-day dynamite or blasting powder is not only used to break up boulders which render fields worthless, but a valuable part of a farmer's equipment. It is used to remove the stumps of trees which defy the efforts of machinery for removal, but is proving the farmer's friend in the breaking up of subsoil or 'hardpan'—the lower strata which cannot be reached by the plow or which has become hard in rejuvenating orchards; in planting trees in splitting logs; in making roads in digging wells and, a most important innovation, in excavating drainage ditches. It is used for a lake, though not many farmers

Reduction in Price Was Brought About by Competition

Practically the only article of universal consumption that shows a big decline in price in the last year in the United States is sugar, the cost of which is about 8 per cent lower than it was in 1912. In fact the price of sugar has not only declined in 1913 as compared with 1912, but it is the only commodity in a big list on which there has been a marked falling off over a ten year period. While eggs, sirloin steak butter and numerous other products that the farmer raises and sells have increased very greatly in price, sugar, which is a factory product, has fallen off. Sugar has had protection, which according to popular conception would make the reduction in its price all the more remarkable. The situation with regard to sugar is that domestic competition has been encouraged by the protection afforded in the home market so that the consumer has benefited.

What is true of sugar is true of many other lines of manufactured goods, whether in United States or Canada. Assured of a reasonable protection against the dumping of foreign products at a reduced price, domestic manufacturers may invariably be relied on to vie with one another in competition for the home market. Reasonable competition encourages efficiency and insures fair prices to the consumer. This is the ideal towards which all protective policies work.

With the steady development of industrial and wholesale centres in Eastern Canada there is an increasing market for the products of mixed farming. Apart however from this convenient home market, which is steadily increasing in size, many of the products of mixed farming through modern cold storage facilities, can be shipped advantageously to foreign countries.

HOME MARKET SAVED STATES FROM DISASTER

A Glance at Development in the United States—Early Industrial History—Jefferson and the Tariff

In seven years, 1807-1814, when excluded from the markets of Europe by Napoleon's Berlin Decree, and Great Britain's retaliatory duties American trade was ruined. Her exports fell from $122,000,000 to a mere seven millions. There was a financial crisis and even the government lost credit. A government that for seven and a half millions suffered miserably, only one-third being able to scribble.

Manufactures Necessary

The United States was forced to build up a home market or else perish. Her protective policy dates from 1812. Long before, this Jefferson had said: "He therefore who is now arguing domestic manufactures must be for reducing us either to a dependence on a foreign nation or to be clothed in skins and live like wild beasts in dens and caverns." It is equally true of Canada that manufactures are necessary to our independence as our comfort. By the time of the Civil War, 1861-5, the United States possessed a home market principally due, it must be admitted, to the industry of the North for the chief source of wealth in the South was the export of raw materials. Accordingly, during a period of national calamity far worse than that of the Napoleonic era, there was no financial crisis in the North. The population actually increased three millions. In the South on the contrary, the loss of their foreign trade brought bankruptcy to the Confederate States. The North, with a superior vitality due to a home market resting on the two pillars of agriculture and manufacturing industry, emerged from a devastating war into a new era of prosperity.

Lesson to Canada
These two chapters of United States history are not without an important bearing upon present day Canada. With the balance of trade so immensely against us as it is, it is certain that in the event of serious European complications and the loss of our foreign markets our only anchor in the storm would be our home market, that is our power of self-help. Nothing else would keep our farmers and manufacturers from being swept headlong into a bottomless abyss of commercial stagnation. In this era of international peace and British naval supremacy Canada should make the best of its opportunities to ensure its economic independence. There can be no greater incentive to increased production than safe and sure markets in the neighborhood of the producer, no stronger stimulus than the proximity of farms to cities.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in Halifax, the papers of the Maritime Provinces had some very friendly and timely references to the manufacturing industry.

Referring to the convention one of the speakers stated: "It is unnecessary to remind our readers that this Association, representing the manufacturing industries of all Canada, is a most important body, having in its care the advancement and prosperity of industries which rank in some way or other
