DISTRICT AND GENERAL

It is estimated that the Forest waterworks will cost $101,450.

James G. Cameron, principal of the Ridgeway high school, died on Saturday.

While cranking his car a few days ago, A. E. Cantelon, of Dutton, broke his arm.

Mrs. Crane, wife of the late Wm. Crane, died at Tyrconnell on Friday, in her 80th year.

Farmers and milk producers in London district, whose milk is sold in the city, must have their herds submitted to the tubercular test.

Dan Miller, of Erieau, has been arrested at Chatham on suspicion of being implicated in a series of chicken thefts throughout the county recently.

The Methodist General Conference has adopted a modified attitude towards amusements, but asks members to discriminate between the wheat and the chaff.

Five farmers of Chatham township have been summoned to appear in the police court on a charge of shooting black squirrels, which are very plentiful in the district this year.

The marriage took place quietly in Alvinston on Tuesday, Oct. 10th, of Sarah M. Carroll and Ezra Pollard, both of Dunwich. Elder Robert Watt performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Pollard will reside in Dunwich.

The celery gardens back of Arkona are the busy places these days. The celery is being dug, crated and shipped to various parts of Canada, many carloads leaving the Thedford railway station, besides innumerable trucks, every day.

Walter Smith, at Thamesville, had his fortune told by gypsies. He also had a $10 bill, which he missed after the strangers had gone. Police authorities were notified and the gypsies were trailed to Louisville and captured and fined to the extent of about $75.

James N. Dodd, governor of the Lambton county jail at Sarnia, has been rewarded by the provincial government with a cheque for $250 and an appreciative letter for his gallant services in frustrating the escape of McMullen, convicted bank robber, a few weeks ago.

The death occurred at the family residence, Aldborough-Dunwich town-line, Wednesday morning, of Charles Hathaway, aged 32 years and 4 months, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hathaway. Deceased was taken with influenza last spring and had never recovered from the effects.

The fishermen at Tyrconnell had exceptional luck for two days last week, when they were scarcely able to handle the shoal that found its way to the nets. In two days over 300 boxes of pickerel were taken from the nets, the largest two-day catch ever recorded at this point.

Thieves entered the general store of G. R. Whitton at Alvinston and secured a valuable haul of gent's furnishings, including two valuable overcoats and several pairs of shoes, besides other articles. Entrance was gained by forcing the bars of a side window. A car was used by the burglars.

A by-law dated 1896-97 was resurrected in Wallaceburg, licensing the sale of cigarettes, and imposing a fee of $20. This by-law had never been enforced, and it was decided by the council that it would be advantageous to have this fee collected, and the tax collector is to be instructed to collect same as from November 1st next.

Moving toward the enforcement of the General Assembly regulation of the $1,800 minimum stipend, London Presbytery has empowered its home missions committee to visit all congregations within its bounds which are not already paying the new minimum, with a view to laying the situation before them and urging, where possible, that the minister's salary be raised to the required amount.

That automobiles travelling at over 30 miles an hour destroy the roads is the charge made by Hon. Mr. Porran, head of the Quebec road department. His statement follows: "I defy any contractor to maintain 1,500 miles of roads if automobile tourists do not understand that they must not exceed the speed limit. Let me tell you that the damage caused by automobile trucks is insignificant compared to that caused by automobiles going at more than 30 miles an hour."

For every girl who jumps out of an automobile at midnight, ten ought to but don't.

HIGH SCHOOL REGULATIONS

The new regulations made by the Department of Education for high school courses of study and examinations contain several changes.

High schools must now be opened with reading of the Scripture and prayer and closed with prayer. Formerly this was optional.

Writing and spelling are no longer to be taught formally by one teacher but all teachers are to insist on correct spelling and good writing, and at the departmental examinations a maximum of ten marks shall be deducted for bad spelling on each paper at the rate of one mark for each misspelled word. The courses in history have been altered, and several new books of reference are required in the H.S. library. The synthetic geometry of upper school may be replaced by a course in solid geometry.

Graduation diplomas are now available for high school students. These diplomas give the student a good standing, and should be highly prized.

When recommended by the local authorities and approved by the Minister such subjects as the following may be introduced: Spanish or Italian, manual training, household science, music, business practice, stenography and typewriting.

DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

The inquest into the death of Frank Edward Nelson, of Caister township, near Winona, who was killed west of Appin station on the night of October 14th, was resumed Thursday afternoon in Appin town hall. The jury found death due to a fractured skull and broken neck, the result of jumping from a fast train, of his own free will and accord.

Harold Cushman testified that he and Nelson were in Glencoe on Saturday night and missed the 10 o'clock train for Appin. They started to walk the track home, when they were overtaken by a freight train which was pulling out of the siding in Glencoe. Nelson suggested that they jump the freight, to which Cushman replied that it did not stop at Appin. Nelson, however, got aboard the tenth car from the engine. Cushman walked, and did not see Nelson again until the next morning, after his body had been found.

Dr. Froese, coroner, who conducted the post-mortem, gave evidence that death was due to concussion of the brain, fracture of the skull and broken neck. He expressed the opinion that Nelson, in jumping from the train, broke his left arm and fractured his skull, rendering him unconscious for a time, and that upon regaining consciousness was perhaps in the act of sitting up wiping his face when he was struck by the International Limited going west, which was late, and which dragged Nelson over 25 feet from where his handkerchief lay.

THE LATE JAMES GLASGOW

The late James Glasgow, whose death occurred at his residence, Main street, Glencoe, on Monday, October 9th, was a life-long resident of Glencoe and vicinity.

Mr. Glasgow was born in Glencoe in the year 1861 on the property now occupied by James Poole. His father was section foreman at Glencoe and Newbury for some 13 years. The family moved from Glencoe to Tupperville, taking up farming on the property now worked by Mr. Glasgow's nephews. Mr. Glasgow's only brother predeceased him by eight years. Besides his widow, formerly Miss Phoebe Stinson, he leaves to mourn his loss one son, Bryden, residing on a farm in Ekfrid; two daughters, Mrs. Richard Moore, of Ekfrid, and Florence, at home; also one sister, Mrs. McDonald, of Toronto.

Mr. Glasgow was an earnest worker in the Presbyterian church up until two years ago, when ill health befell him.

Funeral services were conducted at the house by Rev. D. G. Paton, assisted by Rev. T. D. McCulloch, of London, Mr. Glasgow's pastor of 25 years ago at Dresden. The pallbearers were former schoolmates of Mr. Glasgow, from Dresden, who were his late brother's pallbearers. Friends were present from London, Chatham, Dresden, Windsor, Tupperville and Toronto.

Jack Spratt was very fat.
His wife was not so lean;
And so between the two of them
They filled a Ford machine.

It has not yet been demonstrated if the grasshopper chews tobacco. And now Peter McArthur has begun an investigation to determine why the horse has ceased to "slobber." But who cares, so long as the hen continues to cackle and the cow faithfully not to chew her cud.

DIED IN MINNESOTA

The Northern Light, published at Williams, Minnesota, has the following in its last week's issue:—Funeral services for the late Mrs. John Mason, sr., who died at her home last Thursday evening from kidney trouble, were held in the Episcopal church at five o'clock last Sunday evening. Old settlers and friends of the family were pallbearers. The church was not near large enough to hold the crowd of friends from all parts of the country, who had gathered long before the services. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

Agnes Dora Betux was born in Cogshall, Essex county, England, on August 16, 1857. On February 28, 1876, she was united in marriage to John Mason, at St. Alban's, Hertfordshire, England. They moved to Glencoe, Ontario, Canada, in 1883 and came to Williams in 1901, where they have since made their home.

Deceased was a fond and loving mother and a devoted helpmate. She was an active worker in the Episcopal church, and a woman who was always the first to aid others in sickness or death, and to assist in any move toward the development of the community.

She leaves to mourn her untimely departure, besides her husband, nine children: Mrs. A. W. Atwater and John H. and Stephen Mason, of this place; Mrs. D. G. McEachren, of Glencoe, Ont.; W. J. Mason, of Cedar Spur; James E. Mason, of Emo, Ont.; Robert E. Mason, of Woodridge, Man.; Nathan C. Mason, of Wroton, Sask.; and Mrs. P. Woods, of Spooner.

BAIN—MCKENZIE

An interesting wedding took place in the Glencoe Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon, October 18, at 3.30, when Alexander Bain, of Thamesville, and Miss Joan McKenzie of Moss, were united in marriage by Rev. D. G. Paton, pastor of the church. Miss Betty Grant presided at the organ.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Wm. Bain, of Moss, and looked charming in her gown of white georgette, with tulle veil trimmed with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Mariner McCracken was bridesmaid and was dressed in white satin and georgette, with bouquet of carnations. Little Miss Jean Bain, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl and wore a frock of white silk. She carried a basket of pink and white carnations in which the wedding ring was concealed. Sidney Hartley was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Wm. Bain, where a dainty wedding luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Bain left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and Toronto. On their return they will reside in Thamesville.

WEBSTER—GRISWOLD

A quiet but pretty social event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Griswold, Ekfrid, at noon, October 18, when their second daughter, Margaret Minerva, became the bride of William Robert Webster, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Webster, of the same township. Rev. John Elder, of Melbourne, officiated in the presence of immediate relatives. The bride, who was handsomely attired, was given in marriage by her father. The groom's gift to the bride was a Community Plate service set. After partaking of a dainty wedding dinner the happy couple left for western points, amidst a shower of confetti and good wishes, and on their return will take up their residence near Dutton.

Steen's Canadian Thanksgiving

BY EVELYN STANTON

Steen looked out of the window as she heard the sound of carriage wheels and her heart gave a sudden jump when she saw that it was Mrs. Kerry driving the black mare. Her quick blue eyes travelled over her blue house frock and white apron. Her hand travelled to her blonde hair, and felt for stray locks. There were none, so she hurried, almost ran, out to the horse block.

"Mornin', Mrs. Kerry! I hope you can well!" She smiled, speaking slowly, for she hurried her speech it was sure to be laughably ungrammatical and plentifully mixed with idioms of her native Sweden.

"Yes, I'm well," Mrs. Kerry's manner, always positive and abrupt, was this morning more so than ever.

"I should tie him the horse and you get out?" suggested the girl.

"No, I've got something to say to you and I can say it right here. It's about my boy, George."

Steen's face lightened at the mention of George's name. Her smile was illuminating and revealing. She waited for Mrs. Kerry to speak.

"Do you love him?" Mrs. Kerry asked quickly. "That is, is there anything between you two? I'm his mother, you know, and I have to protect him."

The girl was puzzled but the smile did not fade.

"I sure well, I'm what you call crazy over him!" She tried to be gay. "He don't talk marriage with me yet, but I know—know," and she laughed.

"But you can't marry him," Mrs. Kerry fairly exploded. "He must have a wife whom he'd never be ashamed of. It isn't now that counts in life. At your age, one tumbles into love and out again, with no harm done. Later, when you get—"

"You mean—I'm no good for George?" the girl broke in, a slight catch in her voice.

For the fraction of a second Mrs. Kerry hesitated. Then she spoke slowly.

"I guess that's what I mean. You see, George will be a rich man some day. He's well educated and he's going to be great. I hope, and he can't even speak the English language, who doesn't know anything about Canadian ways. You're very pretty, Steen Briby, but—your better marry some fine Swedish boy."

Then, after a minute of painful silence, she said, "Surely, you understand that you're not the type of woman that George should marry?"

The color slowly had left Steen's cheeks and she was standing erect, motionless like the figure of a martyr awaiting sentence. What thought might be evolving in her brain found no outward revelation in her face. Mrs. Kerry saw the lack of emotion and was secretly relieved, for she thought that it meant that Steen did not love George to such an extent that she would not be willing to give him up.

"I—I guess I got broad in the oven," Steen said finally and without comment, walked quickly towards the house. Mrs. Kerry watched her until she disappeared through the kitchen door and then turned her horse toward home.

Alone in the big white kitchen the girl did not weep. She was far too deeply wounded for that. Instead, she went to the oven, glanced at the baking bread, and seeing it would be several minutes before the big fragrant loaves could be taken from their pans, she dropped to a chair by the window.

One of her first thoughts was that she was glad to be alone. Cousin Anna, a distant relative of her father's, who was really the housekeeper, had gone to town for supplies. Her father and brother were in the fields helping the farm hands gather the largest wheat crop in the history of their ownership of the farm. Yes, she was glad to be alone, for that meant that her slow-thinking but by no means stupid brain could thoroughly consider the situation that faced her.

For minutes she sat there, thinking, thinking. Then, mechanically she removed the bread from the oven and as mechanically she went back to the window and reviewed Mrs. Kerry's words. And the tragedy, which grew in magnitude as she pondered, was that Mrs. Kerry was right. She was not good enough for George!

Ten years before, when Steen was barely twelve, she had stood on the deck of an ocean liner and watched the bewildering sky line of the land that was to be hers by adoption. Her mother had been dead for several months and her father, a tall raven-haired man, unhappy from the loss of the woman who had been the love of his life, had decided that in Canada lay solace. Steen's brother Ole, then a sturdy lad of sixteen, and Anna, the distant cousin who had taken her place as housekeeper to the motherless brood, had accompanied them.

Steen liked the new land. So had they all. And they had prospered. Back in Sweden Steen's father had been a mechanic by trade but he had owned a little patch of land outside the city and had tilled the earth as a physical relaxation from his work. So he was land-wise.

The family made at once for the great wide West. While Steen's father was learning something of the country of his adoption, they lived in Calgary, but with the coming of spring there were frequent excursions into the country and finally they moved onto a farm in the heart of the wheat country. At first, Ole Briby served as a "hand" but before long was promoted to position akin to that of superintendent. A year later he paid the first installment on the farm of his own.

Steen loved the place from her first glimpse of the long low farmhouse and the big barns beyond. On the way down the road from the small town where they had left the train, she had seen a dozen large farmsteads which showed care and comfort even approaching to luxury. The girl had dreamt that their home would not be so vastly different and, to her delight, thanks to industry and native refinement, her dream had almost become a reality.

Even now, in her moment of anguish, she felt a thrill of pride that while she herself might not be all that was desirable, her home was not a place of which anyone might be ashamed. It was small compared with the big Kerry farmhouse half a mile up the road, but it was well kept, there was a generous lawn and trim hedges of flowers and shrubbery. She rose from her painful brooding and walked to the door and out, across the grass, turning to look back at the house and the outbuildings beyond. The picture was complete. Inside and out, Ole Briby had made his home comfortable, modern, handsome. It was a splendid example of a Canadian farm homestead!

Canadian farm homestead! The phrase came to Steen's mind, because she had heard the women mention it. A thought flashed to her: the Briby household had not kept pace with the Briby home! They had built up a fine type of Canadian farm homestead but what poor examples of Canadians they were! She pondered over this for many minutes, and when she started looking to the kitchen, her face wore a smile as when the sun peers through the clouds.

That night, when George Kerry drove his car up to the horse block in the Briby garden, Steen went quickly to meet him.

"Hello, peaches and cream!" He had nicknamed Steen after her complexion. "Let's go to town and get some new clothes. I want to look like a 'No-I-no go to-night,'" she said gravely. "Good-night!" and she walked away.

It was the same the next night and for many nights. She would not get into bed until she had talked to him, would not explain, so presently he stopped calling, a fact which his mother noted with satisfaction. But down in his heart of hearts he did not stop caring.

Autumn came and winter. At Christmas time, Mrs. Kerry suggested to her son that they take a trip South. She had heard and read much of Florida and wished to see it. The trip held little of keen enjoyment. George watched the gayeties but refused to take any part, and in a month they were home again. The first day, Mrs. Kerry's hired helper, told her mistress that Steen Briby and her brother were away—in Calgary, she thought, or possibly Winnipeg. Mrs. Kerry acknowledged the news with a nod, but made no comment. She was not entirely satisfied with her action in separating the lovers, but, after all, she argued, the girl most certainly was not the right type of wife for George.

Spring came again and with it the heavy routine of out-of-door work. Ole Briby came back, but it was summer before his sister appeared again about the grounds of the low white farmhouse. Mrs. Kerry saw her one afternoon as she drove by and bowed and smiled. Steen's greeting was quietly cordial and Mrs. Kerry thought what a fine figure of a girl she was and how becoming was the simple dress she wore.

Mrs. Kerry watched her son very carefully the first few weeks but there was no sign that the old friendship was renewed. So the months wore on. Gradually, the spirit of summer lifted her flowery skirts and departed, allowing vividly dressed autumn to stalk across the fields.

In October, Mrs. Kerry told her son that they had been invited to attend Thanksgiving with cousins in Winnipeg. It was to be more or less of a family reunion. George agreed mechanically and a week before the holiday they departed. Steen saw them go and the little set smile, that she had worn when Mrs. Kerry told her she was not "good enough," still lingered on her lips.

On the morning that the Kerrys reached Winnipeg a telegram was waiting for them and George read it before his mother had removed her hat. It was from Mrs. Maguire: "Pire in hen and tool house, barns scorched—not much damage."

He handed the telegram to his mother. She had managed the farm since the death of his father twelve years before, and was quite capable of rising to the present climax. She read it carefully twice, and without comment, removed her hat and turned to greet waiting friends.

After luncheon, however, her composure seemed less secure. She began to wonder just how badly the barns were "scorched" and if there had been any real damage to the stored crops. George had been secretly wondering the same thing for hours but had watched his mother's silence. When she spoke, however, he said freely that he would be a lot happier if he were home.

The night train bore them back and on Thanksgiving day, a dull heavy morning with a lowering sky that threatened snow, they were motoring farmward to hear Mrs. Maguire's story.

"I wasn't here when none of it happened," she explained. "It was towards night and the chores was done and so was supper. I went to town, to the movies, with my cousin Emma's girl. It seems like that the first person who noticed the smoke or the fire or anything was the Briby girl. She came running over and into the kitchen where Jim and Larry was settin' and she told them that the place was afire. It was the tool house that took first and then the hen house caught, and the sparks were like to get the rest of the outbuildings, only Briby's girl, she runs to the phone and in less than no time, I guess the whole countryside must have been here and she a-tellin' them what to do."

"Do you mean Steen Briby?" George asked quickly. Briby's girl might have meant Cousin Anna.

"Yes, her." Mrs. Kerry looked sharply at her son. The radiant light that flashed over his features told her that a year of separation had accomplished no thing and her heart gave a quick bound that was almost a stab of self-reproach. She hardly heard the rest of Mrs. Maguire's rambling narrative of how Steen had saved the barns, how she had worked with the men, directing, inspiring them, hair and face covered with soot, her eyes red, her throat choked. Vaguely she heard one of the hired men say that Steen was a "hero," and "ought to get a medal or somethin'."

What filled her mind was the fact that George loved Steen and she understood if the girl really loved him. If only she had been lost of the "immigrant type," if only she had been a more fitting wife for George. Well, at any rate, she must go over and thank her for her splendid service. Perhaps on the way an inspiration would come to her.

George and the hired man had made for the barns. Mrs. Maguire was busily scolding over the fact that she had not received Mrs. Kerry's telegram until so late that it was impossible to do even a tenth of the usual amount of Thanksgiving cooking.

"No turkey killed, no mince meat made, no decent crust rolled up for a pumpkin pie, not a cranberry in the house, no—she went on, but Mrs. Kerry did not even hear. She put on her hat and coat and started out for the Briby house, walked down the driveway to the kitchen door and knocked. Cousin Anna answered.

"I've come to see Steen," she said softly.

"Yeh, Steen she only go upstairs a minute ago to get changed from her work dress. I call her. Come in," and she led the way past the dining room with its fine old furniture and its homely displays of china and glass, into the living room. There Mrs. Kerry waited.

She was rather surprised as she looked around the room. It was so comfortable, so tasteful. There was an air of home about it that she had not thought to find in the parlor of a "foreigner." She had been under the impression that the "parlor" was a place opened only on state occasions but this room evidently was used constantly.

She was still wondering when a quick step sounded in the hall and Steen entered. She seemed taller or was it the fit of her tailor-made dress? Certainly, she was better looking than ever with a new note of refinement. Mrs. Kerry noted the fact before the girl had really entered the room.

"How do you do, Mrs. Kerry?" The younger woman's greeting was gentle and respectful.

"I'm quite well, thank you, Steen—Miss Briby," Mrs. Kerry had risen and taken the girl's hand. "I've come to thank you for what you did the other night. I really feel that it is to you we owe our home—our barns. It was a narrow escape. But for you—"

"I'm glad to have done it," the girl said simply. "We are all neighbors, friends and we must help each other always."

"Yes! And—Steen, there is something else about which I wished to speak to you." Then the words failed. She had been so full of what she meant to say, so excited, that for a minute she was not impressed with something that she should have noticed at once. Steen's English! It was perfect! There was none of the odd, broken phrases, nothing ungrammatical. She looked intently at the girl as if to be sure that this was really Steen.

"I—I wanted to tell you," Mrs. Kerry hurried, "that—I am sure—my boy—still cares for you. I did not know it. I did not think that you even thought seriously of one another, until this morning. His joy when he heard that it was you who had saved the barns, well, it told me the truth. And—as for your being good enough—why—she stopped, confused, then, suddenly cried, "Steen! you've changed—how you've changed!"

The girl's musical laugh rippled through the room. It was the laugh of one who "laughs last"—a happy laugh of some unspoken victory.

"Yes, I have changed—all of us have changed, dear Mrs. Kerry. And I know what you came to tell me this morning; that you are sorry you spoke—that you did not mean to be unfair, unkind, that you were protecting your son. I know, Mrs. Kerry, and you were right. I was not good enough then."

Mrs. Kerry did not know what to say, but she took the girl's hand in both of hers.

"I told you that morning that I would think it over and talk with you again," Steen continued, lovingly in her happy calm. "I did think of all you had said and what it meant and there was nothing to say to you—then, I sent George away each time he called. That morning after you left, I said to myself that I would be good enough for him. I saw that while my people and I had come to this country, found happiness, comfort and almost riches, we had not become a part of the country. We could not speak its language properly. But we could learn, my brother Ole, my father and I. We all talked it over and started at once. We went to the county town and took out our first naturalization papers. We studied, we even went down to Winnipeg to take a short course. We read. Every day we were better Canadians. You see, some day I wanted to be good enough."

"Steen!" Mrs. Kerry's eyes filled with tears and she put her hands in a caress on the girl's shoulders. "Steen, you're wonderful! And I—I was very cruel. I should have thought of that—I should have helped you. You must have been very unhappy."

"Unhappy? No. Lonely sometimes but not unhappy. I was doing right! I sent him away—I was best but I knew that the hour would come when I would have him back. When I was most lonely, I worked harder. I—I shall have to tell him the whole story, even though he hates me afterwards," Mrs. Kerry said softly.

"No, that is my privilege. I will tell," she stopped suddenly, her eyes knocked. Cousin Anna answered.

"I know what you can do. It is Thanksgiving! You stay here. It will soon be time for dinner, a Canadian Thanksgiving dinner. I will go and get George, and work dress. I call her. Come in," and she led the way past the dining room with its fine old furniture and its homely displays of china and glass, into the living room. There Mrs. Kerry waited.

She was rather surprised as she looked around the room. It was so comfortable, so tasteful. There was an air of home about it that she had not thought to find in the parlor of a "foreigner." Our Thanksgiving

Some things we may not understand but we can always pray
The Lord of Harvest whose great sun shineth from day to day.

Sometimes by drought and hail and rain our work is swept aside,
Sometimes the fields of golden grain fill every thought with pride;
Sometimes our neighbors' hearts are sore with pain and loss and grief,
Sometimes they're glad while we, alas! of sorrowers are chief;
Sometimes for one, success and joy—another walks bereft,
One half the world in sunshine steeped—the rest in darkness left.

These things we may not understand but we can always pray
To Him whose love no surcease knows from day to endless day.

We must keep faith whatever comes: hail, rain or withering drought,
Full bins or empty, wealth or want; the serpent-head of doubt
Can not disturb the peace of souls stayed steadfastly on Him
Whose radiant Presence deep enshrined makes all the world-lights dim.

Some day shall come the end of sin and pain and accident,
Some day we'll read the story through and why these things were sent;
Some day the meaning of it all to all eyes shall be clear,
Some day the glorious fruitage of all dawn-sprung hope appear;

So we have thanks at Thanksgiving whatever may befall.
Resting our faith and hope and love upon the God of all.

—Ada Melville Shaw.

Thanksgiving.
Now gracious plenty rules the board,
And in the purse is gold;
By multitudes, in glad accord,
Thy giving is extolled.
Ah, suffer me to thank Thee, Lord,
For what Thou dost withhold!

I thank Thee that how'er we climb
There yet is something higher;
That though through all our reach of time
We to the stars aspire,
Still, still, beyond us burns sublime
The pure sidereal fire!

I thank Thee for the unexplained,
The hope that lies before,
The victory that is not gained—
O Father, more and more
I thank Thee for the unattained—
The good we hunger for!

I thank Thee for the voice that sings
To inner depths of being;
For all the upward spread of wings,
From early bondage freeing;
For mystery—the dream of things
Beyond our power of seeing!

For Your Thanksgiving Dinner

Take a chicken which weighs 2½ or 3 pounds, split down the back as for broiling, lay it in a dripping pan, skin side up, and surround it with six parsnips which have been peeled, parboiled, and split lengthwise. Sprinkle with one and one-half teaspoons of salt. Bake until the chicken and parsnips are tender and brown, remove chicken to platter, garnish with parsnips, and then add two cups of rich milk or thin cream to the liquor in the dripping pan. Thicken this gravy with two tablespoons flour and season with one teaspoon salt. Serve with baked potato.

Mock Oyster Stew.
Three cups milk, 2 cups cabbage, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter.
Chop the cabbage, cook in clear water until tender. Add salt, butter, pepper, and the heated milk. Serve with crackers same as oyster stew. Cauliflower may be substituted for the cabbage.

Shell Beans in Winter.
Two cups red beans, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter.
Pick over and wash beans. Let soak overnight, and stew them in the morning for two or three hours. Add the milk, salt, and pepper, and finish cooking. It will take from half an hour to an hour to finish cooking the beans after adding the milk, according to the amount of water left in them at that time. Just before serving add the butter.

Apple Butter and Nut Pudding.
Three-quarter cup apple butter, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 small egg (beaten), 3 tablespoons nut meats, ¼ cup milk, 1¼ cups flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, 4 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt.
Mix in the order listed, and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour. Serve with cream and sugar.

Steamed Berry Pudding.
One and one-half cups flour, 1½ cups canned blueberries or blackberries, ¼ cup molasses, ¼ teaspoon soda, ¼ teaspoon salt.
Beat soda in molasses until it froths. Add to other ingredients, and steam in a greased pan three hours. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

Indian Pudding With Apples.
Three cups milk, 3 tablespoons corn meal, 4½ tablespoons molasses, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon each cinnamon and ginger, 4 apples.
Cook corn meal in milk for ten minutes, stirring frequently. Add molasses, spices, and salt, and bake in a slow oven two hours. Stir two or three times during the first hour of baking. Put in the pared and quartered apples when the pudding has baked one and one-fourth hours.

A National Anthem

Maker of earth and sea,
What shall we render Thee?
All things are Thine;
Ours but from day to day,
Still with one heart to pray
"God bless our land alway,
This land of Thine!"

Mighty in brotherhood,
Mighty for God and good,
Let us be Thine.
Here let the nations see
Toll from the curse set free,
Labor and liberty.
One cause—and Thine.

Here let glad plenty reign;
Here let none seek in vain,
Our help and Thine—
No heart for want of friend
Fail ere the timely end,
But love for ever blend
Man's cause and Thine.

Here let Thy peace abide;
Never may strife divide
This land of Thine.
Let us united stand,
One great devoted band,
Heart to heart, hand in hand,
Heart and hand Thine.

Strong to defend our right,
Proud in all nations' sight,
Lowly in Thine—
One in all noble fame,
Still be our path the same,
Onward in Freedom's name,
Upward in Thine.

Usefulness of Music.

The value of education in music must be estimated by its usefulness in after life. The musical opportunities coincident with school life, from the lowest primary grade where the seeds of harmony are sown up through the academic and high school, forecast precisely the kind and degree of interests students will manifest after graduation. An obstacle which seems insurmountable, because of its prevalence, is the tendency among boys and girls of certain ages to frequent cheap vaudeville and movie shows. Because of small admission prices, high-class music is not provided in these theatres. What is offered by jazz piano players and noisy organ performances of the clap-trap order is vitiating to a wholesome musical taste.

In many cases there is a little attempt to assist in the interpretation of what is shown on the screen.

Public school orchestras, choruses, glee clubs, can, if under proper supervision and financial support, help to develop a love for the true and the beautiful. This would mean the young people away from cheap and trashy entertainment which is vicious and degrading and which mitigates against the much-needed uplift in our national musical life.

Music is happily becoming more and more an integral factor for our social life. A knowledge of what constitutes good music should be as widespread as possible during the formative period of character. In view of this, vocal music at least should be developed to a greater extent in the schools.

The Fly Industry.

Down in the region of San Vincente (Mexico) lives a community whose sole means of support is the fly. Men and women, old and young, spend their lives fly-catching. They are the champion "swatters."

But the supply is inexhaustible; the industry will never be stopped from shortage of materials. The fly is not of our common house fly kind, but a species resembling the Finnish bluebottle, and swarms rise in such dense clouds that the closely-packed mass rising in the air actually obscures the sun. And they are easily caught by the operatives of the local industry. Nothing is easier.

Armed with large nets and copious box receptacles, the natives gather flies by the million at a cast. Into the boxes the nettles go, and are rammed down tight to suffocation.

When sufficient have been obtained the flies are pressed into blocks and dried. The product is ready for market.

It is a regular trade with a demand equal to the supply, for the dead flies are sold to the poultry-breeders, and go to nourish hens and other domestic birds.

Doors That Wind a Clock.

Quite a useful little invention is one that is made by a Continental firm for winding up the clock. This is done merely by the opening and shutting of the door of the room.

The clock—a large one for hanging on the wall—is hung just above the door. When this is opened the movement is transmitted by means of a Bowden cable to the mechanism of the clock.

Precautions are taken to prevent too much winding if the door is very frequently opened, and on the other hand that it is sufficiently wound if the door is not opened more than three or four times during the day. This is done by the use of a spiral device.

It is quite a useful and clever invention, for how many of us, with the best intentions in the world, have a way of forgetting to wind our timepieces. The clocks usually stop at the most inconvenient times. With a contrivance like this, we can be sure that at least one clock in the house can always be relied upon to be doing its duty.

One contract in your pocket is better than thirteen promises.

PRACTISING OLD-FASHIONED ARTS
The picture shows Mrs. Paulson, of Winnipeg, who has passed her ninth year, and who still keeps herself actively engaged in spinning on the old wheel which she brought with her from Ireland twenty years ago, or in knitting and sewing.

Responsible man wanted to represent news gathering organization. Duties to report on proposed new construction work, new businesses, business changes, business news, area, etc. could be easily handled by one in connection with his regular business. Charted With Bottles.

The ocean traveller, who, in mid-Atlantic, sees from the side of his liner a bottle, apparently the helpless sport of the waves, should look at it with eyes of respect. It is probably one of many lonely voyagers whose mission it is to chart the oceans of the earth.

Bottles in hundreds are at present scattered over the surface of the North Sea, rendering valuable service to the scientists who study ocean tides. Many of them, we are told, are liberated from lightships, to wander, it may be, many months before they are picked up by some passing trawler, or to float ashore on some remote beach in Norway, Denmark, or on the wild coast of Shetland.

Inside each is a card, containing a request to the finder to post particulars of the place and date of picking up to the Fisheries Department of the British Ministry of Agriculture. Thus the experts know how long and in what direction the bottle has floated, and the speed and direction of the ocean current that carried it is thus ascertained and placed on record.

Similar bottles are charting the currents of the Baltic and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and from their travels the currents of these seas are being traced on the world's maps.

If these vagrant bottles could but speak, what strange tales they could tell of their long wanderings over the face of the waters, for not a few have drifted for considerably over a year before they have come to land again.

Thus, one bottle was only recovered 495 days (more than sixteen months) after it had been flung into the Atlantic, and during this period it had journeyed 4,700 knots, much more than a fifth of the distance round the Equator. This astonishing record was completely eclipsed by another bottle, which spent two and a half years at sea, bobbing steadily along at an average of four-and-a-half knots a day.

But this bottle was a veritable tortoise compared with one thrown overboard from a steamer, which actually drifted 4,000 knots in a period of 181 days, keeping up an average speed of 22.7 knots (nearly 27 land miles) a day.

Canadian Heads Imperial Government.

The political situation in Great Britain holds more than usual interest for Canadians just now, as a Canadian, Right Hon. Bonar Law, has been asked to form a new Government, and become Prime Minister. Before this turn of events materialized political speculation in London vied for choice between Bonar Law and Lord Derby as next Government Leader. Canadians have a particular interest in the latter, also, for during the period when his father, then Baron Stanley of Preston, was Governor-General of Canada Lord Derby acted as his aide-de-camp at Ottawa.

Mr. Bonar Law was born in 1858 in New Brunswick, where his father was a clergyman. He has been an outstanding figure in British politics for two decades. He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1900 and 11 years later he was chosen to succeed Mr. Balfour as Leader of the Unionist party in the House.

He is a big business man and carries the tactics of business into his political career rather than the tactics of a professional politician. In debate he has depended on logical, business-like appeal.

Before the war Mr. Bonar Law was one of Joseph Chamberlain's lieutenants in the tariff reform crusade. He had an opportunity to become Prime Minister in 1916, but preferred to be a Lieutenant of Lloyd George. He became Chancellor of the Exchequer and shouldered the tremendous responsibilities of war budgets which were figured in the billions. In addition he acted as Government Leader in the House. He fulfilled the arduous duties of his office until 1921, when he was obliged to retire on account of his health.

Mr. Bonar Law has always been noted for his firm stand on any question he took up. He was a determined opponent of the Irish Republican movement and crossed swords with Lloyd George on the latter's proposal to resume trade relations with Soviet Russia. In his own business he was eminently successful as an iron merchant in Glasgow, and it was for Blackfriars division of that city that he was first elected to the Commons.

Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world, and what they are doing; how they keep up our hope; awake new courage and faith; soothe pain; give ideal life to those whose homes are cold and hard; bind together distant ages and foreign languages; create new works of beauty, bring down from heaven—I give thanks for this gift, and pray God we may all use it aright and abuse it never.—James Freeman Clarke.

French Birth Rate Low.

The anxiety of the French public over the constantly decreasing birth rate was intensified by the publication of the latest statistics of the ten largest French cities showing that the birth rate had dropped off another ten per cent. in a single year.

PANGS OF NEURALGIA

This Painful Trouble is Due to Poverty of the Blood.

Neuralgia is one of the most painful maladies that afflict humanity. The trouble is usually seated in the face or head, following the course of some nerve, but it attacks other parts of the body as well. It is characterized by acute pains, sometimes steady, at others spasmodic and darting. But whatever course it takes the pain is agonizing and almost unbearable. Medical authorities agree that neuralgia is due to poverty of the blood—that the nerves are actually being starved. It is further agreed that if the blood is purified and enriched the trouble will disappear. It is for this reason that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been so successful in treating neuralgia. They enrich the blood which feeds the starved, aching nerves and thus bring relief to the sufferer, whose general health is also improved. Proof of the value of these pills in cases of this kind is given by Mrs. M. Brown, R.R. No. 1, Warsaw, Ont., who says: "I have taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and can recommend them as being the best medicine I know of for neuralgia. Two years ago I had an attack of this trouble in the neck and shoulder. The repeated attacks of the pain were of such frightful intensity that my life was almost unbearable. I consulted two doctors and took their medicine, but without relief. I had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills years ago, when they helped me wonderfully, and I decided to try them again. Before I had taken more than a half dozen boxes the pain had disappeared, and I have since enjoyed the best of health, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $5.00 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Traffic in Habit-Forming Drugs

Dr. J. G. Shearer, Secretary Social Service Council of Canada.

Addition to the use of habit-forming drugs such as opium, morphine and cocaine has assumed such large proportions and been so difficult to suppress and makes such terrible havoc, physical, mental and moral of its enslaved victims as to cause grave concern to leaders alike in Church and State. Parliament is always unanimous in making the Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act more stringent and effective. The only question raised by members in Commons or Senate is how best to accomplish the end sought.

The present Premier, Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, then Minister of Labor, introduced the Act in 1911. It has been strengthened since under the Right Honorable Sir Robert Borden and Arthur Meighen, and last session under the Hon. H. S. Beland, Minister of Health. The penalty was raised to seven years. Whipping was added where drugs are supplied to juveniles, and unnaturalized aliens convicted of offences were ordered deported after serving sentence.

It is interesting to note the distribution of this traffic in the provinces of the Dominion. The very latest figures supplied by the Federal Department of Health, giving the numbers for Federal convictions for the year ending 31st March, 1922, are as follows:

	Non-Chin.	Chin.	Total
Prince Edward Island	0	0	0
Nova Scotia	9	8	17
New Brunswick	14	9	23
Manitoba	16	0	16
Ontario	66	52	118
Saskatchewan	58	73	131
Alberta	101	54	155

Importance of Wood.

If you stop to think of it, you will realize that the city man and woman are far more concerned with what happens to the forest than the farmer or the mountaineer. It will be the city people, not those who live under the shadow of the trees, whose standard of living will first suffer from the lack of wood. It takes more wood, used in more ways, to feed, clothe, and house the city dweller than those who live where the food and the lumber come from. For after the raw material is produced it must be shipped, manufactured, and distributed, and all these are impossible without wood.

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR BABY'S OWN TABLETS

No medicine receives such great praise from thankful mothers as do Baby's Own Tablets. Once a mother has used them for her little ones she will use nothing else. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels and stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; relieve colds and simple fevers; promote healthful sleep and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Omer LeBlond, Maddington Falls, Que., writes:—"I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets and will always use them for my little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A cunning man is seldom wise and never honest.

and the Maritime Provinces. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have 15 each and Alberta 42; Ontario 14, with a population of half a million more than the four combined.

The case of Quebec is also not easily explained. Two hundred and thirty seven, including Chinese, or 104 not including them, is abnormal. This is certainly not to be charged up to the French Canadians. Out of the 237 in that province only 21 are outside Montreal in an almost solid French population, and of these 21 only 11 are non-Chinese. This is a highly creditable record to Quebec outside Montreal. Montreal itself is the most perplexing. The Health Department's more complete report gives Montreal 216, including Chinese, or 93 without them in a population of perhaps 750,000. Compare this with the figures for the whole of the Maritime Provinces, 25 including Chinese, or 6 without them. And there is no finer type of population anywhere than the people of Montreal in general.

Montreal has had for many years an abnormally large and (at least negatively) tolerated colony of criminal, that is, commercialized social vice, as the reports of the Montreal Committee of Sixteen conclusively show.

Says It Made A New Person Of Him

Thousands of people needlessly endure a half-sick, nervous, run-down condition when they might enjoy sturdy, robust health and all its manifold blessings if they only knew what to do. People in this condition find Tanlac soon ends their trouble and builds up abundant strength, energy and vitality. John Aherm, of 1 Boulton Ave., Toronto, Ont., says: "Stomach trouble had me in a general run-down condition. I was badly constipated, had headaches and dizzy spells and felt worn out all the time. My wife received such splendid results from Tanlac that I took it myself. Now, my troubles are things of the past and I'm a well man once more." Nervousness and a run down, tired-out feeling are but symptoms of a hidden cause, which usually lies in the stomach. Tanlac enables you to digest your food properly, eliminate waste and regain your old time strength and vigor. Get a bottle today at any good druggist. Adv.

The Future.

'Tis well that the future is hid from our sight. That we walk in the sunshine, nor dream of a cloud; We cherish a flower, think not of the blight And dream of the loom that may weave us a shroud.

It was good, it was kind, in the Wise One above To fling Destiny's veil o'er the face of our years, So we see not the blow that shall strike at our love And expect not the beam that shall dry up our tears, Though the cloud may be dark, there is sunshine beyond it; Though the night may be long, yet the morning is near; Though the vale may be deep, there is music around it, And hope 'mid our sorrow, bright hope is near.

Took All the Poor Beggar Had. Augustine Birrell, in his early days at the bar, often had many poor clients. On one occasion the defendant was so poor that Birrell offered to handle his case for nothing. Birrell won the case, and the grateful client sent him fifteen shillings. In order not to hurt the man's feelings, Mr. Birrell accepted the fee, but a fellow lawyer reproached him for doing so. "Don't you know," said the fellow lawyer, "that it is unprofessional to take less than gold?" "Well," said Mr. Birrell, seriously, "I took all the poor beggar had. You don't consider that unprofessional, do you?"

Melba's Little Vanity. Melba, the famous singer, has a very pretty wit. One rather likes this story which has just been told of her. Not long ago, she turned up unexpectedly at a charity cafe-chantant in London, and put everybody in a flutter. It was too good an opportunity to be missed, and the organizer of the charity rushed to Melba with outstretched hands. "How delightful to see you here!" she exclaimed. "Everybody wants to hear you sing badly." But Melba shook her head. "Then I'm afraid they won't," she said, "because, you see, I can't."

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

NEARLY CRAZY WITH PAINS IN BACK

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Becroft

Hamilton, Ontario. "I have suffered for three years from a female trouble and consequent weakness, pain and irregularity which kept me in bed four or five days each month. I nearly went crazy with pains in my back, and for about a week at a time I could not do my work. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the Hamilton Spectator and I took it. Now I have no pain and am quite regular unless I overwork or stay on my feet from early morning until late at night. I keep house and do all my own work without any trouble. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to several friends."—Mrs. EMERY BECROFT, 16 Douglas St., Hamilton, Ontario.

For nearly fifty years women have been telling how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast.

If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It has helped others, let it help you.

The Transcript

Published every Thursday morning from The Transcript Building, Main Street, Glencoe, Ontario. Subscription—In Canada, $2.00 per year; in the United States and other foreign countries, $2.50 per year.

Advertising.—The Transcript covers a wide section of territory in Western Ontario, and its readers are the leading farmers and townspeople. It is a first-class advertising medium. Rates on application.

Job Printing.—The Jobbing Department has superior equipment for turning out promptly books, pamphlets, circulars, posters, blank forms, programs, cards, envelopes, office and wedding stationery, etc. A. S. Sutherland, Publisher.

SEEK ETERNAL THINGS.—We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.—2 Corinthians 4: 18.

FOUR GOOD REASONS

One of the counties of Minnesota has ordered all advertising signboards removed from the road right-of-way in the county. The authorities have four reasons for their action, all of which seem to be logical:

- (1) Such signs in the roadway interfere with the proper upkeep of roads.
- (2) They are erected in such positions that views on many crossings are obstructed.
- (3) Some are placed on curves and distract the attention of drivers while turning corners.
- (4) They are unsightly and detract from the scenic beauties of the landscape.

Besides—there is a much more effective way of advertising. The newspapers offer it.

The Brakeman's Bad Break

One of the division railway superintendents, an energetic, excitable little man, recently received numerous complaints that freight trains were in the habit of stopping on a grade crossing in a certain small town in New Hampshire and of blocking traffic for long periods. He issued strict orders against it, but still the complaints came in. Finally he decided to investigate the matter in person.

He went down to the crossing, and there he saw a long freight train standing square across it. A brakeman was sitting on top of a car.

"Move that train on!" sputtered the little man. "Get it off the crossing so people can pass. Move it on, I say!"

The brakeman looked the tempestuous stranger over. "Go on, you little shrimp," he replied. "You're small enough to crawl under."

SPOILING A BEAUTIFUL DRIVE

To the Editor of The Transcript:

I was very much disappointed, while motoring with a party to Grand Bend over the Aux Sable lake road, to find that this beautiful winding drive through the pine forest was being straightened and converted into an improved road.

This road is not a linking road and there is no call for straightening the present winding road through the forest and spoiling the scenic grandeur of one of Ontario's most beautiful forest drives through a wilderness that will always be a wilderness. No grading or drainage is necessary. All that is necessary is widening the present road enough for two cars to pass, and graveling.

The Aux Sable river road is Ontario's only link connecting directly into the provincial highway through Algoma, and forming part of Ontario's only logical connection between Lake Huron and Lake Erie via 24 sidetrack in Warwick and Brookville, Glencoe townline and Aldboro and Dunwich townline.

The Aux Sable river road can be constructed and maintained at less than one-tenth the cost of constructing and maintaining the lake road. The present Aux Sable drainage scheme will drain thousands of acres of the best farm-land in Ontario, and will drain the river road. All that is necessary to make a first-class road through one of Ontario's best farming sections of the future is to grade and gravel, with abundance of gravel everywhere for road construction.

In the interest of Ontario it is the duty of every citizen and every motorist to use their influence in preserving for future generations the present winding road not graded but widened and gravelled, and stop if possible the expensive straightening and grading which spoils forever the scenic grandeur and pleasure of driving through this forest which will ever remain a forest.

Robert Stead Writes Once More of Canadian Homestead Life

"Neighbours," a Happy Novel of the Northwest, His Latest and Best

The Second Great Wave of Settlement
The Theme of an Absorbing
Romance

Stead finds Delightful Material in the Modern Saskatchewan Home.

ROBERT STEAD.
Author of "Neighbours," "Dennison Grant," "The Cowpuncher," "The Homesteaders," etc.

When Robert Stead was only a lad, I see from a recent biographical sketch before me, he bought out a lumber mill. I wonder if his memories are at all connected with the opening paragraph of this latest novel of his, "Neighbours."

"My earliest recollection links back to a grey stone house by a road entering a little Ontario town. Across the road was a millpond, and across the millpond was a mill; an old-fashioned wooden mill which was the occasion and support of the little town. Beside the mill was a water-wheel, not a modern turbine, but a wooden wheel which, on sunny days, sprayed a mist of jewels into the river beneath with the prodigality of a fairy prince."

Surely there must be much of Robert Stead himself in a book which is so instinct with simple reality as this one.

"Neighbours" opens in a little Ontario town, as described above, where two families of young people grow up together. In the course of events, each brother and sister is left without friends in the home, and both families decide to settle in the west. They make the long trip to the Saskatchewan country, where each takes up a homestead. From this point on, "Neighbours" is not only a fascinating novel, but a permanent contribution to history. The account of the building of a homestead community on the western plains will be an authentic reference, generations after the homesteader has disappeared—for it is presented with beautiful faithfulness and understanding. A vein of genuine humour enters the story here also, which is not lost to the close. Old Jake appears on the scene as official "locator" for the gullible "greenhorn" settler, and his methods and temperament are an education in themselves. I have read somewhere in the press that Stead had a hard time censoring Jake for book form. It can easily be believed, for despite the author's efforts, or thanks, perhaps, to his broadmindedness, a great deal of the original still remains, "shouting his triumph to the gods forever." He and his wife, "Bella Donna" are a refreshing interlude wherever they appear.

The variety of the characters which Stead has brought together in the story, does credit to his versatility and insight. They not only add to the feeling of reality which pervades the book, but are a chief part of its charm and readability. There is the real western farmer, the Scotch family, "The Sneezits," a Polak family, the little English widow—and Spoof. Spoof is the young Englishman who supplies the touch of mystery and unexpectedness for the love story which will keep the reader on his toes up to the very last.

For good reading and a real appreciation of Canadian literature, "Neighbours" is a book indeed. Outside of the fact that it will probably be one of the best selling books of the year, it deserves high praise as a delightful piece of work. Stead is one author who has never "let the public down" through a series of excellent publications. We wish "Neighbours" the great success which "The Homesteaders," "The Cowpuncher" and "Dennison Grant" have brought their author.

Canada's Most Widely Read Author again gives Proof of His Gift for Realistic Writing.

Excellence in Every Detail

The Studebaker Special Six upholds the best Studebaker traditions of mechanical excellence and body building skill.

Its 50-horsepower, detachable-head motor delivers great resources of quiet, smooth-flowing power and remarkable flexibility. Its perfected, dry-plate disc clutch makes gear shifting quiet and easy. The bearing equipment at the steering knuckles provides an ease of steering that every driver appreciates.

Included in its appointments are the rain-proof one-piece windshield; cow lights; cow ventilator; eight-day clock; thief-proof transmission lock which reduces insurance rates 15 to 20%; massive headlights; tonneau light with long extension cord; windshield wiper; tool compartment in left front door; large, rectangular plate glass window in rear; outside and inside door handles, and many other details that add to comfort and convenience.

Only because of Studebaker's experience, resources and the savings due to economies in manufacture, can Studebaker offer the Special Six at the exceptionally low price of $1795.

The broad principle upon which Studebaker business is conducted and upon which it has prospered for seventy years, now grounded upon tradition, insures satisfaction to everybody who deals with the House of Studebaker, and we solicit your valued patronage on this basis. This policy protects you better than the ordinary guarantee.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Frank Watterworth, of Wardsville, wishes to express her thanks to kind friends and neighbors for sympathy and assistance extended to her in her recent bereavement.

TOWN AND VICINITY

Turkeys are expected to be cheaper this fall.

George Bechill and Roy Siddall intend going north for a deer hunt in November.

Mrs. Peter McIntyre has sold the Coleman property in Toronto for a handsome price.

If you grow discouraged, think of the weather prophets and see how they keep on trying.

The price of gasoline has taken another drop of one cent a gallon—the second within two weeks.

The Daughters of the Empire have invitations out for a Halloween party at the town hall on Tuesday evening.

M. McGeachie, of Ridgetown, has purchased a poolroom at Dutton and will move his family to that village shortly.

The call of Rev. N. Stevenson, of Tempo and Delaware, to Appin and North Ekfrid, has been sustained by the Presbytery.

A. J. Wright and family have moved into their handsome new house on Concession street, which has just been completed.

J. G. Lethbridge, M.P.P., is announced to deliver a lecture at Clachan on Friday evening on an agricultural subject.

The Ford Motor Company last week announced a cut of $50 in the prices of all passenger cars, establishing a record low price.

Concession street from Main street to the corporation limits has been taken over as a county road and has recently been newly gravelled.

Miss Palethorpe, of Korea, will address the annual thankoffering meeting of the W. M. S. in Glencoe Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

The Germline Free Reading Library at Calcutta, India, has added The Transcript to its list of newspapers to be kept on file and available to its patrons.

The next regular meeting of the Metcalfe township council will be held on Monday, Nov. 13, instead of Monday, Nov. 6, the latter being Thanksgiving Day.

At a short meeting of the high school pupils on Friday, on the resignation of the pianist, Miss Annabelle McRae, Miss Miriam Oxley was elected to that position.

Jack Miner gave his illustrated lecture last week to 8,000 children in Edmonton, Alberta. He will be here on November 27th—afternoon for children and evening for adults.

Nowadays when you see a man hunting around under the currant bushes in the back yard you may be sure he is looking for that piece of coal he threw at the cat last spring.

Rev. A. S. Whitehall will conduct anniversary services in the Methodist church at Guilds on Sunday, October 29th. The pastor at Guilds will conduct the regular Methodist services there.

The appointment, made some time ago, of Peter J. Morrison, of Glencoe, as police magistrate for the townships of Lobo, Delaware, Ekfrid, Caradoc and Mosa, was gazetted last week.

A chimney fire at Dan Trestain's residence occasioned the ringing of the fire alarm on Wednesday evening. The firemen turned out promptly, but their services were not required.

Several carloads of coal have been received by the local dealers, and it is thought that there will be no danger of a shortage. The price—$16 to $20 a ton—is a fly in the ointment, however.

Mrs. Dobie, of Campbellton, has been called to the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Wright, of Dutton, who had the misfortune to fall and break her hip. Mrs. Wright is in a critical condition.

The addition of a fourth teacher to the staff of our local high school has enabled a general reorganization to be made. Upper school work, which was dropped last year, has been resumed and with a registration of 122 up to date a prosperous year is anticipated.

Married—at the Methodist parsonage, Glencoe, on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 21st, by Rev. A. S. Whitehall, George Henry James, of Newbury, and Miss Annie Croucher, of Milford Bay, Muskoka.

Glencoe public library will be closed on Monday and the books stored in the armouries preparatory to having them assorted and recatalogued before placing them in the new library building.

Hydro-electric power was off for the best part of an hour on Sunday evening, and church services were interrupted. The congregations sat in darkness for several minutes until coal oil lamps could be secured.

Members of the municipal council of Dutton visited Glencoe and Bothwell last week to inspect the public halls at these places with the view of adopting their good points in the new library building.

The Glencoe Methodist church, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society, are sending a bale at the end of this week to the Northern Ontario relief, and would like donations of clothing, bedding, shoes, etc. Same can be left at the church.

There is said to be much shooting of black squirrels in the surrounding country, which is distinctly against the law at this time. There is a heavy penalty for such an offense and authorities declare that prosecutions will follow every case that is brought to their attention.

The members of the Presbyterian church responded to the call for winter clothing, bedding, etc., for the sufferers of Northern Ontario by shipping four large bales on Saturday.

Mrs. Thos King and daughter Elma are moving from Chatham to Glencoe and will occupy the house on Victoria street north just vacated by A. J. Wright.

The annual field day of the West Lorne school was held on Wednesday, with Glencoe, Wardsville, Rodney and West Lorne schools competing.

The West Lorne school was the winner and secured the silver cup for the most points scored. Owing to the very cold day the attendance was not as large as usual and part of the events could not be run off.

The fact should not be overlooked that robbers are operating throughout Western Ontario, and many stores in the surrounding towns and villages have been used as a means of get-away. A timely warning to fasten all doors and windows securely should be taken seriously and thus avoid locking the garage door after the motor has disappeared.

While R. W. Oxley was motoring to West Lorne last Wednesday with a number of high school students to participate in the field day exercises there, his car left the road at one of the sharp turns on the Graham road and ran into the ditch. The car was considerably damaged, but no one was hurt to any extent. It is stated that no less than six weeks have occurred at this point in the road within the last two years.

The Pratt's Sliding U. F. O. and the Battle Hill U. F. W. O. packed two large bales and three boxes of splendid goods, consisting of clothing, bedding, shoes, etc., for the fire sufferers in the north on Friday at the home of Mrs. Chas. Gould. In addition, the Battle Hill U. F. W. O. donated the money which was on hand in the flower fund, and purchased children's stockings and underwear. These were sent with the bales and boxes.

J. A. McBrayne, who resides near Blenheim, appeared before Police Magistrate P. J. Morrison on Saturday on a charge of assault preferred by George Smith, of Mosa. Mr. McBrayne owns a farm near Newbury, which he had rented to Smith. In collecting his rent Mr. McBrayne took possession of several head of stock, some farm machinery, grain, etc., and disposed of them at auction on Tuesday of last week. Next day McBrayne and Smith had a dispute as to the ownership of some of the grain, during which it is alleged that McBrayne hit Smith over the head with a club. Defendant was remanded for a week and will have his trial before the magistrate here on Saturday afternoon.

RULERS IN EXILE

Trouble-Making Monarchs Who Were "Set Down."

Case of the Late Emperor of Austria and That of the Great Napoleon Similar.

Banishment of trouble-making former monarchs to islands of the sea far from their one-time dominions is an uncommon procedure, but precedent for the plight of former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary, who was recently exiled to Madeira, is found in the banishment of Napoleon I, who passed six years on St. Helena in the South Atlantic, 700 miles from the nearest land, a prisoner, more than a century ago.

St. Helena is not only much smaller than Madeira, but, compared to the latter, is as "a devil's island" to paradise. Five-sixths of its area is devoid of vegetation and, aside from an army garrison, there are no big towns or other evidences of life.

Madeira, five times the size of St. Helena, is an ocean garden spot. Funchal, its chief city, has a population of more than 20,000, and the island, one of a group of four owned by Portugal, produces some of the most famous wine and laces in the world, as well as an abundance of fruits, grains and sugar. Oats are mainly used for agriculture, instead of draft horses, and other farming methods are primitive. Less than 2 per cent of the people can read and write.

The Portuguese military garrison is very small, and Charles, Zita and their six small children had every freedom except that of an unchaperoned ocean voyage. Napoleon was guarded day and night by soldiers.

Madeira, the Portuguese word for "forest," is directly in the Atlantic ocean trade routes. St. Helena, a British naval coaling station, often doesn't see a ship for days. Madeira is a port of call and thus is kept in daily touch with the outside world. The island, 400 miles west of Morocco, has a temperate climate. It is 12 miles wide and 35 miles long and elliptical in shape. Three other islands nearby complete the Madeira group. They are Porto Santos, which, with Madeira, have a population of 170,000, and the Desertas and Selvagens, two smaller islands of volcanic origin. The latter are uninhabited rock formations jutting out of the sea.

Napoleon's banishment in 1814 was no less bitter than Charles'. The former Empress Josephine had died and his living consort, Marie Louise, with her son, the little prince of Rome, had gone from Fontainebleau to Vienna following the emperor's abdication. Meanwhile the Allied powers had ceded to Napoleon the island of Elba in the Mediterranean, and there as a "sovereign" he might have passed the rest of his life in peace and tranquillity. Eleven months of retirement, however, sufficed to spur him to escape and new adventures.

He had been brought to Elba aboard the British warship "Dauntless" on April 20, with royal dignity and consideration. On the night of Feb. 26, 1815, with 1,000 followers he slipped out of Porto Ferrajo and then began the famous "One Hundred Days" in which he sought to regain the throne of France. He gathered strength in men and guns as he crossed the Alps and marched on Paris, but his reign as a "constitutional monarch" was of short duration. Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia declared him an outlaw and raised 150,000 troops to crush him. The lost battle of Waterloo the following June saw the end of his power.

The former emperor threw himself upon the mercy of the British, falling in an effort to flee to the United States. He made overtures to Captain Maitland of the warship Bellerophon, who took him to Plymouth, Eng., pending disposition of his case by the Allied powers. It was finally decided to send him to St. Helena and there, guarded by a strong British force, he landed on October 17, 1815.

For six years he lived in practical solitude, writing his memoirs and monographs on military campaigns and political affairs, dying on May 5, 1821, of a cancer which had been aggravated by deep periods of hatred and depression. The British General Wilkes, the first governor of St. Helena, proved too lenient with Napoleon and "too amenable to his influence," and, as a result, was displaced some years before the Corsican's death, by Sir Hudson Lowe.

Will Keep Faithful Pup.

Two years ago an Enfield (N. H.) man presented Jay Sweet of Franklin with a hound, telling him that when he got sick of the pup to ship him back to Enfield. Mr. Sweet moved recently to a flat where dogs were unwelcome, so he boxed up the hound and sent him to Enfield by express. The next morning the Sweet's were awakened by a howling in the front yard, and there was the hound, tired, wet and hungry after his 50 mile jog, but evidently happy. Sweet has decided to move again and keep the dog.—Boston Globe.

Wasps Aid Sugar Planters.

Though wasps are a pest to grape producers in this country, they are a boon to the sugar planters in Hawaii. The planters have instructed their traveling agents to make large shipments of wasps to the island because the insects are necessary to fertilize the banyan trees, which in turn are of service in protecting the water-sheds that supply the sugar plantations.—Youth's Companion.

A young man asked courteously what could be done for them. "We want to see the head of the firm," said Mrs. Hardy. "We want to buy a house." It occurred to Irene that in some respects her mother was extremely artless, but the issue was for the moment postponed.

They were shown into Conward's office. Time had been when they would have seen no further than a head salesman; but times were changing, and real estate dealers were losing the hauteur of the days of their great success. Conward gave them the welcome of a man who expects to make money out of his visitors. He placed a very comfortable chair for Mrs. Hardy; he adjusted the blinds to a nicety; he discarded his cigarette and beamed upon them with as great a show of cordiality as his somewhat beefy appearance would permit. The years had not been overkind to Conward's person. His natural tendency to corpulence had been abetted by excessive eating; his face was red and fleshy, his lips had no more color than his face; and nature, in deciding to deprive him of a portion of his hair, had very unkindly elected to take it in patches, giving his head a sort of pinto effect. These imperfections were quickly appraised by Irene, but his manner appealed to Mrs. Hardy, who outlined her life history with considerable detail, dwelling more than once upon the perfections of the late Dr. Hardy—which perfections she now showed a disposition to magnify, as implying a certain distinction unto herself—and ended with the confession that the West was not as bad as she had feared, and anyway it was a case of living here or dying elsewhere, so she would have to make the best of it. And here they were. And might they see a house?

Conward appeared to be reflecting. As a matter of fact, he saw in this inexperienced buyer an opportunity to reduce his holdings in anticipation of the impending crash. His difficulty was that he had no key to the financial resources of his visitors. They had lived in good circumstances; they were the family of a successful professional man, but, as Conward well knew, many successful professional men had a manner of living that galloped hard on the heels of their income. The only thing was to throw out a feeler.

"You are wanting a nice home, I take it, that can be bought at a favorable price for cash. You would consider an investment of, say—"

He paused, and Mrs. Hardy supplied the information for which he was waiting. "About twenty-five thousand dollars," she said.

"We can hardly invest that much," Irene interrupted, in a whisper. "We must have something to live on."

"People here live on the profits of their investments, do they not, Mr. Conward?" Mrs. Hardy inquired. "I have been told that that is the way they live, and they seem to live very well indeed."

"Oh, certainly," Conward agreed, and he plunged into a mass of incidents to show how profitable investments had been to other clients of the firm. He emphasized particularly the desirability of buying improved property—preferably residential property—and suddenly recalled that he had something very choice in which they might be interested. At this juncture Conward's mood of deliberation gave way to one of briskness; he summoned a car, and in a few minutes his clients were looking over the property which he had recommended. Mrs. Hardy, who during her husband's lifetime had never found it necessary to hear financial responsibilities or make business decisions, was an amateurish buyer, her tendency being alternately to excess of caution on one side and recklessness on the other. Conward's manner pleased her, and she was eager to have it over with. But he was too shrewd to appear to encourage a hasty decision. He realized at once that he had sold Mrs. Hardy, but Irene was a customer calling for more tactful handling. Conward's eye had not failed to appraise the charm of the young woman's appearance. He would gladly have ingratiated himself with her, but he was conscious of a force in her personality that held him aloof. And that consciousness made him desire the more to gain her confidence. . . . However, this was a business transaction. He did not seize upon Mrs. Hardy's remark that the house seemed perfectly satisfactory; on the contrary, he insisted on showing her other houses, which he quoted at such impossible figures that presently the old lady was in a feverish haste to make a deposit lest some other buyer should forestall her.

Back in Conward's office, while the agreement was being drawn, Irene heard that laugh, and it stirred some remembrance in him. Instantly he connected it with Irene Hardy. The truth was Irene Hardy had been in the background of his mind during every waking hour since Bert Morrison had dropped her bombshell upon him. How effectively she had dropped it! What a hit she had scored! Dave had recoiled ever since between amusement and chagrin at her generalship. She had deliberately created for him opportunities—a whole evening full of them—to confess about Irene Hardy, and when he had refused to admit that he had anything to confess she had confounded him with an incident that admitted no explanation. For a moment he had stood speechless, overcome with the significance of what she had said; the next, he reached out to detain her, but she was already on the stairs of her apartment and waving him a laughing good-night. And now that voice—

Dave had no plan. He simply walked into Conward's office. His eye took in the little group, and the mind behind caught something of its portent. Irene's beauty! What a quickening of the pulses was his as he saw in this splendid woman the girl who had stirred and returned his youthful passion! But Dave had poise. Upon a natural ability to take care of himself in a physical sense, environment and training had imposed a mental resourcefulness not easily taken at a disadvantage. He walked straight to Irene.

"I heard your voice," he said, in quiet tones that gave no hint of the emotion beneath. "I am very glad to see you again." He took the hand which she extended in a warm grasp; there was nothing in it, as Irene protested to herself, that was more than firm and warm, but it set her finger-tips a-tingle.

"My mother, Mr. Elden," she managed to say, and she hoped her voice was as well controlled as his had been. Mrs. Hardy looked on the clean-built young man with the dark eyes and the brown, smooth face, but the name suggested nothing. "You remember," Irene went on, "I told you of Mr. Elden. It was at his ranch, we stayed when father was hurt."

"But I thought he was a cow puncher," exclaimed Mrs. Hardy, with no abatement of the contempt which she always compressed into the one Western term which had smuggled into her vocabulary. "Times change quickly in the West, madam," said Dave. There was nothing in his voice to suggest that he had caught the note in hers. "Most of our business men—at least, those bred in the country—have thrown a lasso in their day. You should hear them brag of their steer-roping yet in the Ranchmen's Club." Irene's eyes danced. Dave had already turned the tables; where her mother had implied contempt he had set up a note of pride. It was a matter of pride among these square-built, daring Western men that they had graduated into their office chairs from the saddle and the out-of-doors.

"Oh, I suppose," said her mother, for lack of a better answer. "Everything is so absurd in the West. But you were good to my daughter, and to thinking of myself. Your health may demand other expenditures."

"My health was never better," Mrs. Hardy interrupted. "And I'm not going to miss a chance like this, health or no health. You have heard Mr. Conward tell how many people have grown wealthy buying property and selling it again. And I will sell it again—when I get my price," she ended, with a finality that suggested that large profits were already assured.

"It is as your mother says," Conward interjected. "There are many rapid increases in value. I would not be surprised if you should be offered an advance of ten thousand dollars on this place before Fall. It is really a very exceptional investment."

"There must be an end somewhere," Irene murmured, rather weakly. "I shall give you five thousand dollars now," she said, "and the balance when you give me the deed, or whatever it is. That is the proper way, isn't it?" "Well, it's done," said Irene, with an uneasy laugh, which her excitement pitched a little higher than she had intended.

In an adjoining room Dave Elden heard that laugh, and it stirred some remembrance in him. Instantly he connected it with Irene Hardy. The truth was Irene Hardy had been in the background of his mind during every waking hour since Bert Morrison had dropped her bombshell upon him. How effectively she had dropped it! What a hit she had scored! Dave had recoiled ever since between amusement and chagrin at her generalship. poor, dear Andrew. If only he had been spared. Women are so unused to these business responsibilities. Mr. Conward. It is fortunate there are a few reliable firms upon which we can lean in our inexperience."

"Mother has bought a house," Irene explained to Dave. "We thought this was a safe place to buy."

A look on Elden's face caused her to pause. "Why, what is wrong?" she said. Dave looked at Conward, at Mrs. Hardy, and at Irene. He was instantly aware that Conward had "stung" them. It was common knowledge in inside circles that the bottom was going out. The firm of Conward & Elden had been surrying for cover; as quietly and secretly as possible, to avoid alarming the public, but surrying for cover nevertheless. And Dave had acquiesced in that policy. He had little stomach for it, but no other course seemed possible. Conward, he knew, had no scruples. Bert Morrison had been caught in his snare, and now this other and dearer friend had proved a ready victim. "As Conward was wont to say, business is business. And he had acquiesced. His position was extremely difficult.

Boy of 14 Never Has Shed a Tear in Life.

The case of a boy of fourteen who has never shed a tear is described by The London (Eng.) Daily Express. This is the case record of a Cambodian boy, Bernard Waites, who has never been known to cry and has whimpered only once.

"I have never seen his eye moisten since the moment he was born," said Mrs. Waites to a reporter. "He had most of the baby ailments that bring tears, and has since had his share of bumps and bangs like any other boy."

"Every means has been tried to make him cry. Bigger boys have tormented and excited him, mocked and jeered at him, told him sad stories, and even stuck pins in him—without drawing the suspicion of a tear. He whimpered once for about half a second when his father cut his corn too low."

This fourteen-year-old tearless boy has an exceptionally strong and well-knit frame. He is well over 5 feet 3 inches in height. He has the muscles and sinews almost of a man, liss like a child, and still has seven of his first teeth uncut. He began to talk only when he was twelve years old.

"He has more than the normal boy's share of feeling, intelligence and understanding," said Mrs. Waites, "and I am convinced that a good burst of tears would cure him of his 'queerness,' backwardness, and restraint. I would sell my home to see him cry."

A Slight Mistake.

Jim was very much in love, but held back his proposal from sheer bashfulness. At last he decided to pop the question by telephone.

"Mabel, I love you!" he gasped, his heart thumping. "Will you marry me?"

There was a moment's hesitation before the answer came.

"Of course I will, Arthur. Why didn't you come and ask me yourself?"

Then Jim shouted back: "You'll have to break the news to Arthur yourself. I'll be hanged if I will!"

The German woman who designed the first "Teddy bear" is still alive, aged seventy-five.

BONAR LAW SUCCEEDS LLOYD GEORGE AS PREMIER OF GREAT BRITAIN

Entire Coalition Government Followed the Prime Minister Into Retirement—His Majesty Summoned Bonar Law to Form a New Ministry.

A despatch from London says:—David Lloyd George, after holding the office of Prime Minister through seven critical years, resigned on Thursday. Andrew Bonar Law will become Premier for a short term of office, and has undertaken the task of naming a new British Cabinet.

Lloyd George carried the entire Coalition Government with him into retirement, when the Unionist wing of his followers, at a meeting held in the Carlton Club, voted 186 to 87 against the proposal of Austen Chamberlain pledging the Unionist party to support the coalition and favoring a general election to confirm that course.

The ministerial crisis developed Thursday afternoon along lines that were totally unexpected, especially by the Ministers themselves. Nowhere in the press was it anticipated that Chamberlain would be defeated at the Carlton Club, and up to almost the last moment the leaders of the revolt were seeking a bridge by which disruption of the party could be prevented. On the other hand, the followers of Lloyd George felt perfectly secure of going before the country buttressed by the vote of nearly two-thirds of the Conservative party. When the result of the ballot was announced, it was at first believed there must have been some mistake, but when the figures were verified the anti-Coalitionists were vociferously jubilant, while the Coalitionists were simply astounded.

The result is a stunning victory for the rank and file led by Bonar Law and a crushing vote of censure on Lloyd George and the Conservative members who have supported him.

As soon as King George could receive him, Premier Lloyd George waited on him at Buckingham Palace and handed in the resignation of the Government, which, of course, the King had no other course open but to accept.

At the same time Lloyd George, it is understood, advised the King to send for Bonar Law to form a new Government, as Bonar Law had led the opposition that resulted in the overthrow of Lloyd George. In some quarters it was suggested that Lord Curzon might be recommended by Bonar Law for the position, but Lord Curzon, although he has been behind the "die-hards" in the present crisis, and gained much prestige by his handling of the Anglo-French trouble, has no personal following, and besides, most Conservatives are ready to recognize that in these times the Premier should be a member of the House of Commons. This feeling apparently rules out Lord Derby.

When King George received Bonar Law Thursday night he questioned the latter regarding the Unionists' stand on the Irish Treaty, and was assured that the Unionists would stand by it. Later, Lord Salisbury, voicing the attitude of the "die-hards," declared in a speech that if Ireland stood by the treaty, so would the Conservatives.

The resignation of the Premier, in any case, involves that of the whole Coalition Government, but in normal circumstances a new administration might be formed. In the present instance, however, as several subordinate ministers had already resigned before the Carlton Club meeting, and as a general election had been practically decided upon, any administration constituted to replace the Lloyd George Government can only do so with the express object of going before the country without delay.

A later despatch from London says:—In the still highly speculative political situation on Friday night only two facts stood out as definite—that there will be almost immediately a general election, and that parliamentary ratification of the Irish constitution is safely assured.

Andrew Bonar Law, who is to lead the new government which will take the place of that of David Lloyd George, in a message to an evening newspaper confirmed his intention to advise King George to immediately dissolve parliament, and added that this fact would give ample time to deal with the Irish legislation.

Mr. Lloyd George, in a message sent to William Cosgrave, president of the Lord Lee.

He is among the thirteen Unionist members of the Government who have declared their intention to stay by Lloyd George.

Dail Eireann, has removed any fear of opposition from him in his new position as leader of the Opposition in Parliament. The Marquis of Salisbury, on behalf of the "die-hards," has made a similar promise, so there is no party in the House of Commons that is likely to offer any hindrance to the carrying of the Irish treaty into effect.

The most interesting suggestion, which has been advanced with a considerable air of authority, is that Lord Carson, the former Ulster leader, will be the new Lord Chancellor.

Motion Which Caused Political Upheaval

A despatch from London says:—The vote of the Conservatives at the Carlton Club was taken on a motion by Colonel Pretyman, Unionist member for the Chalmersford division of Essex, which read: "Resolved, that this meeting of Conservative members of House of Commons declares its opinion that the Conservative party, while willing to co-operate with the Coalition Liberals, should fight the election as an independent party, with its own leader and its own program."

LLOYD GEORGE IN A FIGHTING MOOD

After the vote of the Conservatives at the Carlton Club, announcing their determination to fight the elections as an independent party, Lloyd George tendered his resignation to the King, and has been succeeded by Mr. Bonar Law.

WIN A BICYCLE

Or a Wristlet Watch, Camera or Set of Dishes, FREE OF COST

HERE IS A WHOLE XMAS TREE FULL OF PRESENTS. HOW MANY OF THEM CAN YOU NAME?

What are the Xmas presents which Santa Claus has put on and around this tree? Make a list of them and win a splendid bicycle (either gent's or ladies' style) or a lovely wristlet watch, or a camera, or a set of china.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO TRY, AND WE ARE GOING TO GIVE 1000 Prizes TO THE WINNERS IN THIS BIG CONTEST

For several years the price of Xmas cards has been four for ten cents. We have determined to bring the price back to what it was before the war. Ten cents a package, and six lovely cards in each package. The only way we can afford to sell them at this price is to double our business. THAT IS WHY WE ARE OFFERING THESE MAGNIFICENT PRIZES to all who help us to let people know our new price.

If you can make a list of at least twelve presents on and around this tree, and will introduce our Xmas cards to 20 of your friends and neighbors, who will want to buy them, we ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEE that you will win one of the prizes. It may be the bicycle, or a wristlet watch, or a camera, or it may be a smaller prize. Whatever prize you win you will be well paid for the little bit of trouble you go to. Send us your list to-day (if you can make a list of twelve or more of the presents) and we will send you complete list of prizes, together with 50 packages of Xmas cards and seals to show to your friends. We trust you with them and it will not even cost you the price of a postage stamp because we will put extra cards in your parcel to make up for your cost of postage. Write us to-day and win one of the lovely prizes.

FAVORABLE END TO EMBARGO PARLEYS

Canada Has Secured Everything That She Asked.

A despatch from London says:—The conference between British and Canadian Ministers on the legislation which will give effect to the removal of the embargo on Canadian cattle was concluded on Friday and the decisions reached are entirely satisfactory to the Canadians who have been taking part. While no announcement has been made, either by the Colonial Office or the representatives of the Dominion, the correspondence has been assured that Canada has secured everything that she asked for.

Another important point is that the political upheaval will not do more than slightly delay the carrying into effect of the decisions of the conference. Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, who is expected to succeed himself as president of the Board of Agriculture when Bonar Law completes his Cabinet, was a party to the conference and so will be fully grasped of the whole question, as a new Minister might not be. Bonar Law, the new Prime Minister, is known to have strongly favored the removal of the embargo. It is even hoped that at the next session which it is expected will be held next month, prior to the dissolution of Parliament, a bill to give effect to the agreement reached at the conference will be passed.

Strict Rules in Britain.

Drivers of motor cars traveling through certain parts of England are not only responsible for the handling of their vehicles, but are now liable to be fined if they allow their passengers to misbehave themselves during the trip.

Natural Resources Bulletin

The Natural Resources Intelligence Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa says:—Last year there were nearly one million cords of pulpwood cut in Ontario, as well as nearly three hundred million feet of other timber. Over four million railway ties were also taken out. Nearly three and three-quarter millions of dollars of revenue was collected from the forests. Do these big figures not suggest a good reason why the forests should be protected from fire?

Andrew Bonar Law

The Canadian-born leader of the re-organized Conservatives in Britain, who has been invited by the King to create a new government. He has long been a leader of the Unionists.

Yukon is Now Cereal Producing Country

A despatch from Dawson City says:—Canada's cereal producing area has been extended to the Yukon. Flour made from Yukon-grown wheat is now on sale in Dawson.

James P. C. Superintendant of the Dominion Experimental Farm, near Dawson, this season raised a fine crop of wheat, which he milled into high-grade whole-wheat flour.

Austin Chamberlain

Who strongly supported Lloyd George and Coalition government.

Two cars of Saskatchewan creamery butter which were sent to one of the large British produce houses in England some weeks ago, met with a favorable reception on the English market, according to reports received by the Provincial Department of Agriculture. This was the first shipment made direct from Saskatchewan to a British firm under government grade certificate this year.

New Deputy Minister

George J. Desbarats, C.M.G., appointed new Deputy Minister of Defence, after forty years in the Dominion Public Service. He was decorated for his services in 1914.

LAST SHIPMENT OF WAR MEDALS

Canadian Militia Department Has Big Task in Delivering Decorations to Soldiers.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Practically all war medals have now been received at Militia headquarters here and the last shipment of 110,000 arrived on October 12th. The issue of medals commenced in February, 1921, and up to the present 237,888 British war medals and 221,713 victory medals have been despatched. Of this number, 9,046 British war medals and 8,435 victory medals have been returned undelivered due to change of address.

When these medals are received in the Militia Department here, an idea of the amount of work entailed in sending out these medals can be gained when it is known that they have to be sorted and checked against nominal roles prior to despatch in order to ensure that no mistakes occur in the engraving insofar as regimental number, rank and name are concerned.

While many complaints have been received from ex-soldiers about the non-arrival of their medals, this has been due to the fact that the Militia Department has not found it possible to issue medals in any particular order or by units due to the manner in which they are received from the British War Office. This accounts for the fact that some ex-soldiers of one unit received their medals very much sooner than other soldiers of the same unit. The average daily output of medals is approximately 1,200 and the average daily return of medals undelivered is approximately 40.

Canada to Send Exhibits to Empire Fair

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Canada will participate in the British Empire Exhibition, which will be held near London in 1924, announcement to this effect being made by Premier King. Mr. King further stated that the extent of Canada's participation depended, to a certain extent, on what the various Provincial Governments were prepared to do. He had, he said, addressed a letter to the Provincial Premiers, asking how far they were prepared to go in taking part in the exhibition, and replies were now being awaited. Mr. King pointed out that the cost of the Canadian exhibit would probably be appreciable. He also emphasized the importance of including all sections of the Dominion in an exhibition, such as it is proposed to make this one.

Cornish Miners for Hollinger Gold Fields

A despatch from London says:—Over one hundred Cornish miners left Friday morning for Plymouth, where they will be embarked on the Canadian liner Andania, en route to Northern Ontario, where they will be employed in the Hollinger gold mine.

There were affecting adieux from 2,500 miners remaining behind, who, owing to unemployment, are suffering from lack of necessities.

Peace Conference on Nov. 13 at Lausanne

A despatch from Paris says:—The Near Eastern peace conference date has been tentatively set for November 13, at Lausanne. Whether the conference will have to be further delayed depends upon the British political situation. France is urging the necessity of holding the meeting as soon as possible because the Turks are becoming daily more restless, officials say, and will not regard the allied promises as definite until the peace meeting is actually under way.

Tens of thousands of wild caribou are now swarming over the hills through the suburbs of Dawson for a radius of 50 miles. The great herd which annually trucks through the district is now moving northward. Large herds swimming the Yukon have interfered with the progress of steamers in the rivers. The herd is so vast that the hunting by men, women and children, who have provided nearly every home with deer meat for the winter, has made no noticeable effect on it.

General Harrington

He has received the official thanks and commendation of Britain for his services in the Near East situation.

Lord Derby. A Conservative Peer, a prominent figure in Lloyd George's War Cabinet, who will probably be invited to enter Bonar Law's cabinet.

The Cost of Living

ADVERTISING turns over stocks rapidly, and therefore multiplies profits. This means that prices in a shop which advertises can be short rather than long.

Of this you may be sure. Prices in a shop which advertises are not MORE than in a shop which does not advertise. The chances are that they are oftentimes lower.

This, also, is generally true: You will find better goods, better values and better service in those shops which turn over their stocks rapidly. This means, as a general thing, shops which advertise.

A Note To Merchants

Advertising costs you nothing—it is paid for by the profits on increased sales.

Advertising is easy—it is simply saying in writing what you say to the customers in your shop. Turn over stocks quickly, if you would make more money.

The fast Louisville baseball team played two games of ball with the Newbury team on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 14, on the Old Boys' Park. The home team won both games. Score of first game, 8-7. Batteries: Newbury—Connelly, Babcock and Babcock; Louisville—Babcock and Arnold. Score of second game, 5-2. Batteries: Newbury—Babcock, Babcock and Connelly; Louisville—McKim and Arnold. This game originated through an argument between the Babcock brothers, Roy and Milton of Louisville claiming they had a better team than Newbury, where their brothers, Dave, Lawrence and Harry, played. The result, however, proved that the three brothers belonged to the better team. The game, which was friendly throughout, was much enjoyed.

"Conscience" was the subject of a very forceful and practical sermon given by Rev. Mr. Farquharson on Sunday afternoon to a large congregation in Knox church. Bible class was held at 7.30 p. m., when the subject taken up was "The Joy of the Master." Next Sunday evening's topic is to be "The Greatness of Mind of the Master."

Mr. Parnall spent Monday in London.

About 25 were present at the A. Y. P. A. meeting held in the basement of the church Friday evening. In the absence of the president, Mr. Murphy took the chair. It was decided at this meeting to enter the Dominion A. Y. P. A. campaign. Rhea McRae was chosen leader on the red side and Thomas Weer leader for the blues. The membership campaign will continue until Dec. 1st, on which date the losers will banquet the winners. A short program was then given.

Mrs. Murphy read an excellent paper on "Christian Love" and Mr. Murphy gave a short talk on the aims and doings of the A. Y. P. A.

Earl Guest, of London, is visiting his brothers, Joe and Charlie Guest.
