respondent of the Daily Express, telegraphing yesterday, says: A new im-perial edict promulgated this evening urgently orders all viceroys and provincial governors to endeavor to negotiate peace with the powers whose ministers are "held as hostages pending the result of the overtures for the abandonment of hostilities against China." The viceroys are also commanded to guard their territories vig-ilantly against attack and to prevent, by all means in their power, the advance of the foreign troops, especially along the Yang Tse Kiang. The decree says that the officials will answer with their lives any failure to execute these orders. Commands are also given that not a single foreigner shall he allowed to escape from the interior, where there are still fully 2,000 Euro-peans connected with missionary work in isolated stations.

BRING OUT A CANDIDATE

What about a convention ? Whe therithe elections come off this fall or next spring, is it not time the Conservative party of West Kent had a candidate in the field? What is the use of clapping a man in the race at the last moment and expecting him to redeem a riding that not long ago was giving 400 and 500 of a Liberal major-

Why not place the choice of the party in the field at once so that he can get to work? There are lots of votes to be picked up for the asking! And these are the votes that will decide the contest. There are hundreds of honest, intelligent Liberals and independents in Kent who are thoroughly dissatisfied with the performances of the Laurier government. If a candidate can get among these and get pledges of support they are mostly all, straightforward men, who will keep their promises. Every day from now until the date of the election is a day

Put the choice of the Conservatives of West Kent in the field now and if he cannot win it will be his own fault. He will have plenty of time to visit all parts of the ridings, meet the electors personally, strengthen up the weak places and organize the strong. Give, him every opportunity to make a vote where one is to be had. Then if we cannot win it will either be the fault of the candidate personally or else the riding is hopeless.

We would like to hear from our readers on this subject, and suggestions concerning candidates would be timely.

WHERE MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP SUCCEEDS.

The Toronto World in an argument in favor of municipal ownership of the gas works recently quoted some interesting figures from the St. Helens, Lancashire, Reporter, which seem to show that St. Helens has found municipal ownership, as applied to the gas plant, a decided success,

The figures are official, for they were given by the chairman of the Gas and Lighting Committee on the occasion of the submission of the annual report of the engineer.

In 1878, when St. Helens municipalzed its gas plant, the total quantity of gas sold was 99,451,000 cubic feet the quantity sold last year was 306,-126,000 cubic feet, being an increase of 207.8 per cent. during that period. The unaccounted for gas in 1878 amounted to 13.92 per cent., and last year it was 51-2 per cent. The net profits that have been declared since that time are £96,101. There have been ten reductions in the price of gas, during the period. There have been discount allowed since 1882 of £36,052, and in 1891 the meter rents were abolished. In 1895 the council abolished the charges for the hire of gooking and heating stoves. The price of gas for the current year was fixedust 2s 6d per 1,000 feet for lighting and heat; 2s for power, both "subject to the usual discounts," which are not stred. At penny-inthe-slot meters 30 cubic feet of gas are sold for Id, or at the rate of 6 cents per 1,000 feet. On last years business at these figures there were gross profits of over $100,000, of which $50,000 went for interest and sinking fund; $15,000 to the corporation, to be applied in the reduction of taxes; and the balance to the reserve fund. St. Helens, it is needless to say, has not yet "tired" of municipal own-

Toronto is divided into six wards, the principal one of which is No. 3. In ward three the total assessment is $54,377,398, and the total amount exempt from taxation $9,380,913. Isn't this enought to fire the overburdened taxpayer up to boiling point? Yet there is no relief in sight. The Ontarto government is so afraid of the churches that it daren't make a move. Yet we believe the vast majority of church members would recognize the justice of any change for the better and endorse it. Speaking of this matter the Toronto Star says: "It is very evident that a better system must be introduced. The burden must be equalized. Property that is nursed until it reaches a great value should be made to pay its own way." This outbreak in China produces afmost as many atrocities as a Kentucky election contest.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY. Electrical Review.

Wireless telegraphy seems passed through its period as a nine days' wonder and to be taking a less ninent position than it once oc cupied in the electrical field. It is greatly to be hoped that the ingenuity of inventors will devise means to over ome the several difficulties which suround its reduction to practice as on of the working means of communica ion. Foremost among these is the ap parent practical impossibility of pre centing the interference of simultane ous signals in the same region of influence, or, what amounts to the same thing, the production of a selective system for several stations whereby ny two can communicate without interfering with the others. Until this is done, the utility of the system, beautifully ingenious as it is, seems to be confined within extremely narrow limits.

SULPHUR THE MOSQUITO'S FOE. Medical Journal.

One of our readers informs us that having seen a statement of some Engish medical journal to the effect that sulphur, taken internally, would protect a person against flea bites, it occurred to him to try it as a preventive of mosquito bites. Accordingly he began taking effervescing tablets of tartarlithine and sulphur, four daily. He provided himself with several lively mosquitoes, and having put them in wide-mouthed bottle, inverted the bottle and pressed its mouth upon his bare arm. The mosquitoes settled on his skin, but showed no inclination to bite him. If this gentleman's experience should be borne out by further trials it might be well for persons who are particularly sensitive to mosquito bites to take a course of sulphur during the mosquito season, especially in view of the growing opinion that the mosquito is the common vehicle of the plasmodium malariae.

FIRST SIGNS OF AGE. By Harriet Hubbard Ayer,

Every woman dreads to see the muscles relaxing under her chin, and the first signs of age are those that come with the flabby throat which follows this condition of the muscles. A paragraph is going round through the papers speaking of Mme. Marchesl, the famous teacher of singing, who is over seventy years of age, and whose throat is as white and firm as that of a young girl.

The writers declare that they cannot tell how she has preserved this beautiful throat.

There is no secret really about it.

All great singers have maintained the firmness and beauty of their throats because of the exercises the muscles get from vocalization. For this reason, women with thin, scrawny throats and contracted chests should take voice

Mme. Lehmann, who acknowledges to her fittleth birthday, is a living proof of the effects of exercising the vocal ords.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond's Interesting Sketches in the Christian's Guide. Please listen to the talk of a young volf with his mother and to the les son learned from his fable. "How I wish mother, that I could be a dog and then I would not go hungry, as we to sometimes now, for I have heard that dogs get food every day. How can I learn to be a dog? "I will tell you. Go to-night to farmer's house where there are chi dren and do not bark sharply, let the children play with you. You will soon forget that you are a wolf."

When night came the little wolf crept near to the farmer's door. The farmer picked him up and said, "Here is a little wolf I found on the doorstep."

The children all ran to see him and

The children all ran to see him and treated him as if he was a puppy come to stay with them. The farmer told his neighbors that it was a young wolf. The children said, "It is a beautiful little puppy dog."

One day the farmer brought a weak lamb into the house. The children fed it and it soon was ready to run about and alay with them. The farmer kept it and it soon was ready to run about and play with them. The farmer kept his eye on the young wolf that was getting pretty large and the children said, "Father, Lupus is almost big enough to take care of the sheep." "Yes," the father said, "he might eat up some of the lambs, instead of taking care of them," and he put the lamb back in the fold. That night the young wolf did not sleep well. He thought of the weakly lamb in the fold, and he found his way to where the sheep and lambs were gathered and the sheep and lambs were gathered and he soon sprang over the fence and caught the lamb, killed the poor thing aught the lamb, killed the poor thing and ate it. He dared not go back to his master and the sweet-faced girl who fondled him when he was so small. Off in the distance he heard the barking of the wolves and away he ran with all his might to join them.
He found after all he had a wolf's nature instead of a dog's and would feel more at home with the wolves feel more at home with the wolves than with the children.

A PIG STORY. I heard of a lady who thought pigs I heard of a lady who thought pigs were very nice, if they were kept clean. One was given to her. She made a little dress for it and taught it some nice tricks. It used to follow her around and the boys and girls were glad to see this little pig. One day she was going past a deep mud hole and the pig broke away from her and went down into the deep mire. The clean clothes were nearly spoiled. She fished out the pig and had him washed and dressed again, but his nature was and dressed again, but his nature was the same and she got tired of taking care of him in that way. She said, "He is a pig and never will be anything but a pig."

Dear young friends, every child that has ever lived and every man and wo-man has a sinful nature and we need to get a new heart. That pig with his clean clothes on was nothing but a pig and his nature led him to love the mire. Just as surely as that lit-tle wolf had a wolf's heart, and thought it might act like a dog, after all had a fierce nature that led it to wish to destroy that young lamb, surely you have a sinful heart. You need to come to Jesus and ask God for his sake to forgive you your sins and change your heart. In Ezek. xi., 19, his words are, "A new heart also I give you and a new spirit will I put within you. I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and give you a heart of flesh." Jesus had to suffer a dreadful death on the cross that we might have our sins forgiven and our hearts changed. A BRAVE LITTLE GIRL.

I will tell you a story that I have written out in my book "Roger's Tra-vels" that will lead you to think of this. I pray God will touch your heart and lead you to say, I will become a Christian and get rid of that sinful

In the northern part of Russia the winters are very cold. The streams are frozen, and the wolves become very hungry, and press their way in from the wild places toward the homes of men. Sometimes they become very bold, and go from one house to anoth-ooid, and go from one house to another in search of food.

Away in the country lived a woodman and his daughter, about twelve years of age, and a baby sister. His wife was dead. One morning he said to his child, "I am going into the for-est to-day to cut wood. About four o'clock make up a good fire, and get dinner for us."

She did not forget what her father had said, so about four o'clock went nad said, so about four of clock went round the corner of the house to get some wood, leaving the door open. Coming back with a large stick on her shoulder, she saw a great hungry wolf, and just as she was coming into the house the wolf was ready to spring upon her. She struck the beast on the upon her. She struck the beast on the head with the heavy stick with all her might. She then managed to get be-hind it, and then blow after blow was out of the house.

Upon looking round, she saw that a young wolf was sniffing around the cradle where her little baby sister was sleeping. She at once flew at the young wolf to drive it out. This caused its mother to come back much enraged. For a long time this noble sister struggled with the savage beast. sister struggled with the savage beast. She saw she was in danger of being killed, but was determined to save her little baby sister. She watched her chance, and quickly caught her up in her arms and put her upon a shelf in a cupboard and shut the door.

As she was getting down, the mother wolf sprang upon her, and drove its sharp teeth into her neck. The poor thing was soon bleeding to death.

bleeding to death. Just then the father came home, and in stantly flew at the wolves with a heavy club and drove them out of the house and shut the door. There lay his little daughter upon the floor nearly dead; she feebly point ed to the door of the cupboard. He though she wanted water, but when he opened the door he found the little babe safely rolled upon the upper shelf. After taking it down, he put his ear close to her mouth, and in a little while be heard very faintly the story that I have told you.

that I have told you.

Now, this brave girl was willing to die to save her baby sister. Her body was laid away by the side of her mother under the cool snow in the yard near the house.

THE MORAL OF IT. How do you think her little sister will sel as she grows up, and stands by the side of her sister's grave and thinks of how she loved her, and how she gave herself for her? "My dear sister Loved Me, and Gave Her: self For Me."

self For Me."

Suppose she should say, "Oh, I don't care; I did nor ask her to die for me. I never saw her. Why should I love her? Why should I shed any tears over her?" What would the boys and girls in Russia say to her if she were to talk in that way? Why, they would be ready to throw her among the wolves, and say she deserved to be torn to pieces by them.

Ah, how much more Jesus suffered for us when he shed those great drops of blood in the garden of Gethsemane; when in Pilate's hall he was buffeted, and scourged, and were a crown of thorns, and was nailed on the cross, there to "bear our sime in his own body on the tree."

And yet, have not some of you said. "I have never seen Jesus; I never asked him to die for me. It was so long ago. Why should I love him for it?" Ah! my dear children, it is wrong of you to talk in this way You should be very sorry for not loving Him long ago. He has been calling you to look unto him and be saved; but instead of looking unto Him you have rejected him.

Will you not make this your own prayer? Dear Jesus, we came to thee with our sins. We have not loved the Bible. But, worst of all, we have not loved thee; we have often rejected thee. Our sins helped to crucify thee and yet thou wert willing to die for us. O God, we humbly confess our sins. We repent of them; we wish to for-sake them all. Dear Jesus, show us thy love, so that we cannot help loving thee. Thy blood cleanseth from all sin. Lord; we believe; help thou our unbelief.

SIDE VIEWS OF LIFE.

The man who makes a fool of him self usually turns out a good job. The average wife knows the prick of conscience is productive of pinmoney.

A woman who suffers untold agony is an exception to the rule. As an aid to cutting one's eye-teeth a gold brick is more effective than a rubber ring. It sometimes happens that a man of resources is one who has ingenious methods of contracting liabilities. A man learns a good many things enough to know as little as he does. GEMS,

The native music of aboriginal tribe is regarded as of great importance in anthropology, and the recent Britisn expedition to the Torres straits and New Guinea have taken steps to preserve some of them. Some of the songs heard on Murray island are already obsolete, and will, it is believed, die out with the old men of the tribes. "In savage life," says one of the mem-bers of the expedition, "the songs of a tribe are its chief heritage."

Brimingham, England, is the only place in which manufacturing crowns is an industry that may be said to flourish. The trade is principally with Africa, where the numerous kings have come to regard a crown as a far more elegant emblem of royalty than the stovepipe hat which they formerly at fected. A servicable crown, gaudily decorated with imitation precious stones, may be purchased for quite a small sum. The Japanese apply one of their many pretty ways to the launching of ships. They use no wine but hang over the ship's prow a large pasteboard cage full of birds. The moment the ship is afloat a man pulls a string, when the cage opens, and the birds fly away, making the air alive with music and the whirr of wings. The idea is that the birds thus welcome the ship as she begins her career as a thing of

The English people think that the proposed new nine-penny coin will en-able them to get the better of the French, who, it is assumed, will accept the coin as the equivalent of a franc. At present, when John Bull visits Paris, he frequently has to surrender a shilling in exchange for an article the value of which is a franc.

Prepared to Confess

That He and Gerald Sifton Killed the Latter's Father-More Damaging Evidence.

London, July 30.—In the examination into the Sifton murder case Saturday both prisoners appeared to be on good terms. The boy will go into the witness box at the trial, it has been announced, but he will say that while he made certain statements to McLoud, the high constable, he did not understand their meaning or the consequences they might bring upon him. The only witness on the stand Saturday was Martin Morden, who told of Sifton's having come to the city to get him to assist in getting rid of the deceased.

Sifton said that the old man was rid of the deceased.

Sifton said that the old man was to be married to Mary McFarlane in the morning, and he wanted to know if the witness could not go out to Arva and influence Mary not to have anything to do with the deceased. He said Mary was in trouble, and Morden said that under those conditions he would have nothing more to do with would have nothing more to do with the girl. Sifton asked him if money would not be an inducement, and Mor-den answered that it would not. Sifwent on to urge Mc out in the morning and help put up a hay track for the old man, and he said that if a part of the track could not kill the deceased by falling on him two or three raps on the head with a hammer would by falling on him two or three raps on the head with a hammer would finish him. It was a rather bad business for a person to tackle alone. Sifton put his hand into his pocket, and, drawing out a vial, he asked Morden if he knew what was in it, and Morden replied that he knew too well. Sifton said: — "If one thing will not do it another will." Morden supposed it was strychnine, as it was crystal-like in appearance, and of a lighter color than Epsom saits. of a lighter color than Epsom salts. Sifton said the old man and Mary would never marry, and Morden told him to let them go ahead if they wanted to. Sifton would not consent to the wedding. On the afternoon of Sifton's death Morden saw Walter Herbert in London township, and in conversation about the supposed ac-cident, Herbert said that Mary Mc-farlane had accused Sifton and him of doing the old man.

Witness testified that Sifton afterwards told him he did not carry out his plan be-cause it was too risky. He also said he had heard the Mordens were kicking up a fuss. If it was money they wanted to keep their mouths shut he would give them $1,000 between them. Martin declined to touch a cent. He then asked Martin to find out what was in the second will which was in what was in the second will which was in Edgar Morden's possession. It was brought out that Edgar wanted the witness to see if he could get Sifton to make an offer for the will made by the deceased the evening before he met his death.

The purpose of the wight to Sifton. The purpose of the visit to Sifton was to ascertain what could be drawn out of Gerald, but Martin said that after threats made to James and Edgar by Sifton he did not know whether it would be safe for him to

THEY SURRENDER LINENS!

Five Thousand Boers Lay Down Their Arms.

Terms Were First Asked and Refused, Then They Yeilded.

London, July 30 .- The following official despatch has been received from Roberts:

Pretoria, July 29.-July 26th, Mas Donald fought a rear gaurd action with the enemy from early morning until dark, nine miles outside of Naauwpoort, in the Bethlehem hills, resulting in his effectually blocking Nasauwpoort nek to the Boer wagons. Hunter reports that the enemy twice checked his advance by holding strong positions on two neks, one of which was taken before dark, by the Scots, the Royal Irish, the Wiltshire and the Leinster regiments. Our casualties were only five or six. The second nek was taken during the night by the Scots and Guards, without option, the enemy retiring class to tion, the enemy retiring close to Naauwpoort.

Prisoners taken stated that 1,200 burghers would surrender if guaranteed that they would be freated as prisoners of war and not as rebels. As a result of these operations Prinsloo, commanding the Boers, asked, under a flag of truce this morning, a four days' armistice for peace negotiations. Hunter replied that the only terms he could accept would be unconditional surrender, and, until these terms were complied with, hostilities could not cease. I expressed my approval, and told Hunter on no account to enter into negotiations. As I am writing a telegram has come from Hunter saying that Prinsloo had written a second letter expressing willingness to hand over himself, with his men, rifles, ammunition Having Seen a Lawyer he is not

Self, with his men, thes, and other firearms, on condition that the horses, saddles, bridles, and other possessions of the burghers will be guaranteed them and they be free to return to their homes. I have replied that the surrender ust be absolutely unconditional, that all rifles, ammunition, horses and other possessions must be given up, and that the burghers will be considered as prisoners of war. I added that Prinsloo's overtures will not be allowed in any way to interfere with Hunter's operations, which must be contin-ued until the enemy is defeated or has urrendered.

A later despatch from Roberts, dat-ed July 29, confirms the surrender of Prinnsloo, with 5,000 Boers.

German and Japanese Legations in Pekin Send Word.

Attacks Ceased on July 12-Amer Killed 1000 Ohinese.

Washington, July 30 .- The secretary of state has received a despatch from Consul Fowler. Fowler says: A let ter from the German legation dated July 24, has been received at Tien Tsin. The German loss is 10 dead and 12 wounded. The Chinese ceased their attack July 12. Baron von Ketteler's body is said to be safe. The Austrian, Italian, Dutch and Spanish legations are destroyed and the French partially A letter from the Japanese legation dated July 22, arrived at Tien Tsin July 25. Ten battalions of Chinese shelled the legations consecutively from June 20 and stopped July 17, but may renew. The enemy are decreasing. The German, Russian, American, British and half the Japanese and French legations still defended. Japanese say they have food for six days but little ammunition. The Emperor and Empress are reported at Pekin.

The latest advices from Pekin, under date 15, say the legations are holding out. The Chinese attacked the legations on the night of July 10, but were led into a trap by the Americans and British, and 1,000 of them were killed. Afterwards they continued the heading, the legations were tinued bombarding the legations more freely.

"We are defending ourselves against the Chinese very well. but now the attack has Chinese very well. but now the attack has stopped. We will keep up to the last of the month, although it will be no easy task. The Japanese casualties are: Killed—Kozima, diplomatic attache, captain and one student, and also a few marines. Wound-ed-Five or six. Slightly wounded-Very many.

At the inquest into the cause of the G. T.
R. fatal accident at Madoc Junction, Conductor Kerr and Engineer Maybee of the Madoc train, admitted they were to blame, having forgotten about the Peterboro train.

New York, July 30.—A despatch to the Herald from Che Foo, July 27, says: The Japanese consul at Tien Tsin sent a runner on July 15 to Pekin. On the 19th the runner left Pekin, bringing a cipher telegram to the Japanese government. It reads:

The Boers Have Been Driven by Gen. Hunter.

Baden-Powell Again Beseiged-Dele ray has Him Shut up in Rustenburg. London, July 29.-A despatch from Fouriesburg, dated July 27, shows that the capture of Fouriesburg was preeeded by heavy fighting to force a pasage of the passes, which was stubbornly contested for two days. Gen. Hunter's forces had the hardest work in forcing Relief's Nek, his casualties mounting to about 100. Upwards of 6,000 Boers, with a very rge number of wagons, a large uantity of stores and many cattle we now been driven into the mountain passes where they are watched by British troops. Their escape from that point will be very difficult.

BACK IN PRETORIA. London, July 30.-Operations outh Africa have again arrived at a sort of standstill. Pretoria telegrams announce that Lord Roberts has returned there with his staff, apparently finding it useless to spend his energies against a constantly retreating foe.

Commandant General Botha, with several thousand Boers, like Gen. Christian DeWet, has thus eluded Lord Roberts' grasp. Gen. Delary is be-sieging Gen. Baden-Powell at Rusten-burg, in Western Transvaal. The reourg, in Western Transvaal. The re-ief force sent to Gen. Baden-Powell's assistance under Col. Hickman, proved too weak to be effective, and was ob-liged to fall back on Pretoria.

The operations have been hampered with bad weather, thunder storms and deluges of rain, accompanied, by intence cold. Lieut. MacLaren and three Highlanders have died of exposure, as well as many horses and cattle.

Adespatch to the Daily Telegraph from Lorenzo Marquez says that President Kruger is now at Watervalonder.

Horses Wounded In Battle. Horses wounded on the battlefield are duly attended to when no danger to human life is involved. The veterinary officer in charge is expected to follow close on the fighting line and, together with a number of aids, to inspect properly wounded animals and give instructions for their removal or slaughter, as the case may be. The veterinary surgeon is naturally exposed to considerable danger, but if his work is not carried out during the progress of hostilities in all probability it cannot be accomplished afterward, for, although the royal army medical corps is allowed to proceed to the rescue of the wounded men under the Red Cross, the members of the army veterinary department are not permitted to attend to the injured horses, because they are not under the protection of the Geneva convention, which makes no provision whatsoever for wounded At the conclusion of the battle, if it has been decisive and one or other of the combatant armies has been driven from the field, a party of veterinary surgeons, with their assistants, is sent out to examine every animal that has fallen and to shoot such as are badly wounded. Those suffering from only slight injuries are collected and taken to the veterinary hospital lines, formed as fixed camps and established on a similar basis to those of the royal army medical corps. - Pearson's Maga-

A STORY OF LOVE AND WAR.

->> BY MARY J. HOLMES,

Author of "Lena Rivers," "Edna Browning," "Tempest and Sunshine," Etc., Etc.

with her as if she had known ier all her life. At first she had little to meet the fearless heroine of the mountains. A girl who had held a revolver at the heads of both Federal and Confederate; who, in the night, had ridden twenty miles on horseback to conduct a party of refu-gees to a piace of safety, and had guarded the entrance of the cave in the ace of a furious mob, must be something very formidable, or, at least, something unlike all Rose's ideas of what a lady gently born should be; and both Rose and her mother had waited nervously for the arrival of one who, they felt sure, was to be the wife of Tom. Nothing definite had been said upon the subject since Arthur died, but it was tacitly understood by all parties that Maude de Vere was, sometime, to be Maude Carleton; and Tom was allowed to pay her attentions which could only be paid to his fiancee.

In a great flutter of spirits, Rose had heard of Maude's arrival at the Monteur House, and homediately after dinner had driven down to see her, accompanied by Will, who, if possible, was more anxious than herself to pay his respects to Maude. She was kneeling by Charlie's couch when the party entered, but she rose at once and came forward, with the most beautiful carnation staining her cheeks, and a look of modesty in her brilliant eyes. She wore a long, trailing dress of heavy silk, and stood so erect, and held her head so high, that she seemed taller than she really was,—taller than Tom, Rose feared; but as he stepped up to her, she saw that he had the advantage of her by at least four inches, and thus reassured she drew a long breath of relief; then, as thoughts of all her husband and brother had been saved from by this heroic girl came over her, she sprang toward Maude, and winding her arms around her neck, sobbed hysterically, but never spoke one word. "What is it? What are you crying for?" Maude asked, petting her as if she had been a little child. "Oh, I don't know. The sight you who have done so much for the war and been so brave, makes me seem so little, so small, so mean, beside you, Maude de Vere." Rose replied, brokenly, and then Maude's eyes filled with tears, and she hugged the sobbing little creature, whom, from that moment. she loved so fondly.

She, too, had dreaded this meeting for she knew that Rose Mather and her mother were both women of the highes culture, and she felt that they might criticise, and perhaps condemn, one who had lived so long among the pines of Ternessee. But Rose's manner divest ed her of all fear, and in a moment she resumed that unconscious air of superiority to all else around her, which was a part of herself. Queenly was the word which best suited her looks and her manners, and Rose paid homage to her as to a queen, and told her that she loved her, and how much she had thought of her, and how anxious her mother was to see her, and how happy they would all be when Jimmie and Annie came home.

There had been daily visits to the Moneteur since then, and Mrs. Carleton had met the beautiful Maude, and men-tally approved of Tom's choice.

Charlie too had been petted and caressed, and his blue eyes opened with wonder as he saw what northern we men were like, and remembered his prejudice against them. He liked the northerners, he said, but he was loyal to the southern cause, and listened, with flashing eyes and crimson cheeks, to all he continually heard of the sure defeat and disgrace of the Confederacy. , Matters were in this wise when the day came on which Annie was expected home with Jimmie Great preparations had been made for that arrival. In Rockland there was more than one pri-soner who had been nursed by Annie Greham, and her name was spoken with reverence and love by the veriest vaga-bond that walked the streets. They had not made a demonstration in a long-long time, but they were going to make one now, and the honors which poor George saw in fancy awarded to himself were given to his wife. Jimmie, too, whose terrible sufferings had excited so much commisseration, was to have his share of consideration. Bill Baker, who bad been home for a week, and was as usual the most active spirit of all, suggested that when they flung out the banner on which was inscribed, "Honor and welcome to Annie Graham," they should give three cheers for Mr. Carleton, too. "Bein', 'as he said, "that they are about as good as one." Prompt to the moment when it was due, the train swept round the Rock-land curve and stopped at the depot, where a large concourse of people was gathered. They had not expected the Widow Simms, and when her green yell and straw bonnet appeared on the platform, the foremost of the group looked a little disappointed, while the widow's face darkened as she saw the waiting multitude, and guessed why they were

Annie appeared by this time, and at and dearening shouts of welcome greet ed her on every side. The flag bearing her pame was held aloft, the cannon i the adjoining field sent forth its bellowing roar, and the band struck up the sweet refrain of "Annie Laurie;" while the voices of the Andersonville prisoners, who had been Annie's charge, sang the last line: 'And for bonny Annie Graham I would lay me down and die." Surely this was a coming home which Annie had never looked for, and with her face flushed with excitement, and her eyes shining with tears, she stood in the midst of the shouting throng, gazing wonderingly from one to the other, and realizing nothing clearly, except the firm clasp of her arm.

It was Jimmie's hand, and Jimmie him self leaned upon her, as the crowd coupled his name with hers, and hurrahed for "James Carleton and Annie Graham."

"And the Widder Simms,-I swan if it's fair to leave her out. She did some tall nussin' down to Annapolis," Bill Baker said: and then the widow was cheered, and she acknowledged the compliment with a grim smile, and wonder ed when "folks would quit making fools of themselves, and if Susan wasn't up there, somewhere, in the jam. course she was; 'twas like them Ruggleses to go where the doing was." And while she shook the band of her neighbors, she kept her eyes on the watch for Susan, and felt a little chagined that she did not find her-

Susan was at home in the neat little house which John had bought with his captain's wages, so carefully saved. The same house it was at which Annie Graham had looked with longing eyes, in the commencement of the war; and in the pleasant chamber which overlooked the town there was a little boy who had been in Rockland only a week, and whose existence was as yet unknown to the widow. They purposely kept it from her, so she had no suspicion that he was expected; and the first genuine feeling of happiness she had known since Isaac died she experienced when she was ushered into Susan's room, and the little red-faced thing was laid in her lap. She had looked askance at the new house, and neat furniture, and the pretty curtains, as so many proofs of "them Ruggleses" extravagance; but she was not proof against the white face which, from the pillows, smiled so kindy upon her, and called her mother. And was guilty of kissing her daughterin-law, even before she saw the baby, her first grandchidl, whom Susan called Isaac, although she hated the name, and had tacked on to it Adolphus, with the hope that the future would adjust mere fanciful than the good, plain Bible Isaac. And while the widow kissed and wept over her grandson, and felt herself growing young, and soft, and gentle again, the crowd around the deot had dispersed, a part going to their own homes, and a part following the soldiers and band which escorted Annie Graham and Jimme Carleton to the

Mather mansion, where everything had been made so beautiful for them. It was a pleasant coming home, and a most ample compensation for all the weariness and privation which Annie, as hospital nurse, had endured, and she felt that far more was awarded to her than she deserved. "Mr. Carleton was the one to be hon ored," she said, and her soft, blue eye rested upon the pale, tired man, who, exhausted with his journey and the excitement, by down at once upon the sofa, and pitied, and cried over his poor white face, and long, bony hands, which were almost transparent in their white-

Maude was not one of the party the Mather mansion that night. "You ought to be alone the night," she said when Rose insisted that she should join them. "To-morrow I will come around and call on Mrs. Graham and your brother.'

And then Tom told him of his hopes concerning Mande de Vere, and Jimmie said to him, saucily:

"Don't you remember I told you once you had had your day? But some lucky dogs have two, and you, it seems, are one of them."

CHAPTER XXXVIII. . -

The next day brought Maude de Vere, looking as handsome in her black dress, with her coquettish drab hat and long drab feather tipped with scarlet, that she reminded Annie of some bright tropical flower as she came into the room with the sparkle in her brilliant eyes, and the deep, rich bloom upon her cheek. She had regained her health and spirits rapidly within the last few weeks, and even Jimmie, who seldom saw beyond Annie's face and soft blue eyes, drew a breath of wonder at the queenly girl who completely overshadowed those around her so far as size and form and physical development were concerned. But nothing could detract from the calm, quiet dignity of Annie's manner, or from the pure, angelic beauty of her face, and as the two stood holding each other's hands and looking into each other's eyes they made a most striking tableau, and Mrs. Carleton thought with a thrill of pride, bow well her sons had chosen. That night, as Maude was walking back to the hotel accompanied by Tom, he asked her again the question put in the cave of the Cumberland.

understand about Arthur," he said; "but he is dead; there is no promise now in the way. I claim you for my own. Am I wrong in doing so?" That Maude's reply was wholly sat isfactory was proved by the expression of Tom Carleton's face when at last he stopped at the door of the hotel, and by the kiss which burned on Maude's lips long after he had disappeared down the street. The next afternoon, while Tom was with Maude, and both Mrs. Carleton and Rose were out on a shopping expedition Annie sat alone with Jimmie in the pleasant little room which had been given to him as a place where he would be more quiet than in the parlor. Annie had been playing with Rose's boy,the little Jimmie, a handsome, sturdy fellow of nearly a year old, whom the entire household spoiled. He was already beginning to talk, and, having taken a fancy to Annie, he tried to call her name, and made out of it a toler-ably distinct "Auntes," which brought a blush to Annie's face, and a teasing smile to Jimmie's. "Come, sit by me a moment, Annie," Jimmie said, when the child had been taken out by his unrse. Sit on this stool, so,-a little nearer to me,-there, that's right," he continued, in the tone of authority he had acquired since his

He was lying upon the couch, and Annie was sitting at his side, and so near to him that his long fingers could smooth and carees her shining hair, while his saucy eyes feasted themselves upon her face, as he asked "when she would really be the auntie of the little boy who called her now by that name.'

"Not till you are able to stand alone," was Annie's reply, and then, for th first time since his return from Andersonville, Jimmie spoke of that episode in his life at New London, when little Lulu Howard had stirred his boyish blood, and filled his boyish fancy. Perhaps he wanted to tease Annie, for he said to her: "I did like that little blue-eyed Lu,that's a fact. I used to think about her all day, and dream about her all night. I wonder where she is now." "What would you do if you knew?"

Annie asked, and Jimmie replied:

"I believe I would go miles to se her, just to know what kind of a wois not like her aunt. I could not endure her. She struck me as a hard, selfish ambitious woman, terribly afraid lest the world generally should not think Mrs, Scott Belknap all which Mrs. Scott Belknap thought herself to be." Annie's cheeks were very red by this time, and imputing her heightened color to a cause widely different from the real one, Jimmie drew her face down to his, and, kissing the burning cheeks, "Of course I should take you with me when I went after little Lu. "You would bardly find her if you did not," Annie said, while Jimmie looked inquiringly at her. Annie had only been waiting for Jimmie to speak of the little Pequot, before making her own confession, and she now said to him abruptly: "Did Lulu look any like me?" "Why, yes. I've always thought so only she was younger and had short hair, you know, and short dresses, too. Annie, Annie, tell me,—was she,—do you,—are you,"—Jimmie began, raising himself upright on the couch, as some

CHAT WITH A PAWNBROKER.

The Oddest Thing Ever Offered to His The Business Not All Profit.

"The oddest thing I ever had offered to me," said a pawnbroker, "was a skeleton; and I didn't take it. I hadn't any doubt that it was all right, that man that offered it owned it and had a right to sell it. I suppose he was a medical student who wanted money just then more than he wanted the skeleton. But I didn't know anything about the value of skeletons, and how much to advance on it, and so I didn't take it. But that will give you some sort of an idea of the variety of things that the pawnbroker has offered to

"Of course, you understand that not all pawnbrokers take everything; there are men who advance money on nothing but watches and jewelry and diamonds and pictures and that sort of thing and who wouldn't give anything on the handsomest satin-lined overcoal that ever was, because it isn't in their line. They have no place to put such things; no conveniences for taking care of them. And then there are pawnbrokers doing a general business who take all sorts of things, watches and banjos, boxing gloves and silver spoons, practically anything and every thing that offers. They might occassionally run across something they wouldn't take, as I did with the skeleton, but not-often; there's practically nothing but what they will take, and practically nothing but what is offered at one time and another. "On some things the amount advanced is very small; but still I've got things in safe that I never should get my money back on if I had to sell them. You'd suppose it would be easy for the pawnbroker to give on a thing no more than he could get for it if he had to sell it, and so it would be; but as a matter of fact he may give more than he could get back. He would be governed by circumstances, and by his judgment of the person offering the goods. "I might have a customer bring in a diamond ring that I would lend so much on, whatever it was, and that would be a safe loan: the ring would be good for it if it was never reclaimed. But may be the next week the same customer, hard up and needing money, would bring in a pair of trous ers, spotted and worn; not worth much if you had to sell them. And very likely I would lend more on those trousers than I could ever get for them; lending that because he's a customer and I want to accommodate him. and want to keep him as a customer, and because the chances are that he'll take the trousers out again; but if he doesn't why then I'm out. "The question of whether a man who wants a loan is likely to redeem what he offers is often taken into account. It is a common thing for, the pawn-broker to look at the man, maybe a stranger, and lend on his judgment of the man as well as on his knowledge of the value of the thing the man puts down on the counter. Of course, he makes mistakes in this, but he takes the chances, and I suppose he oftener gets it right than not. There might come in here you, or anybody, needing money, with an old-fashioned key-winding watch that I could not get $1! for, and want to borrow $15, and very likely I'd lend it though I know I never could get my money back if the watch wasn't redeemed. But I know, or I think I know, at a glance, whether he will redeem the watch or not, what sort of a man he is, and how much he values the watch for its associations; and I go according to my judgment. "No doubt as a general proposition, the pawnbroker sets out to lend on things no more than he could sell them for; there are times when instead of making money he loses it; what he tries to do is to get a profit as the net result.

home, on Summer street. The room was tightly closed, and the sun beating down on the roof, made it seem like an oven. The boyiwas rescued, after seven hours of torture. He was nearly exhausted. His parents had left him there for punishment.

A neighbor who heard stifled cries coming from the garret of the Donnelly house, knowing that the boy's parents were out all day at work and that the house was locked, complained to was so weak that he responded in fee-ble tones to the cheering words of the policeman. Hatch removed the straps and cords and carried the boy out into the air. The boy's throat was so be told the policeman that his parents had left him in that position

I When the police visited the Donnellys to ascertain why this method of punishment had been adopted, they ble child and had given them much annoyance, getting into all sorts of mis-chief while they were at work. Mrs. Donnelly told him a few days ago that if he did not change his habits she would "teach him a lesson" that he would remember. The boy ran away that day and failed to come home at eight. Yesterday morning he entered his father bound him to the chair. They closed the attic door so that his shouts would not be heard while they were absent at work.

Superintendent Birmingham warned the parents that they would be arrested if they inflicted such punishment on the boy again. Frank was told that if he continued his misconduct he would be sent to the State Reform School for Boys.

SCYTHE IN THE PINE TREE. Curious Reminder of the Son's Going to the War, Never to Return. Thirty-eight years ago young Augustus Bliss, of Warwick, quit cutting brush on his father's farm, hung his scythe on a pine tree and went off war. The soldier boy never came back, and the scythe has never been taken down from the tree where he hung it, but has become imbedded in the growing pine until it is a fixture. This pathetic reminder of the great civil struggle is a familiar sight to members of the Sheomet Club of this city, as the tree stands near the club's comfortable quarters in Blissville, a hamlet just across the North Orange line into Warwick. When young Augustus Bliss left home and parents, to fight his country's battles, Blissville was a busy centre of small industries, traces of which remain to tell the story of the shifting of the scene of manufacturing from the small country hamlet to large centres. The tree has witnessed all these changes, has seen the mill stand-ing near slowly falling into decay, the population changing, but still the scythe hangs there, summer and win-ter, a mute testimonial to the devotion to duty that animated young Bliss. His father, Milton Bliss, was engaged in building the dam standing by, and sent his son to cut some briers that were in the way of stone that were needed. After the briers were cut the scythe was hung on a small pine tree near, probably without a thought of how long it would remain there. In a day or two Augustus Bliss went to the front, having enlisted for a three years' term of service in the army some time previous. The young soldier never came back. He was but eighteen years old when he enlisted, August 4, 1862, in Company H, Thirty-sixth Massachusetts Regiment. While with his regiment in the South, he was overtaken by a fatal disease and died in an army hospital at Mildale, Miss. The circumstances of his contracting disease were very and. He had gone to get water for his comrades, and his company had orders to march while he was gone. He tried to overtake them, and the over-exertion was more than he could stand, and he was taken ill with fever before he had been in battle. He was not brought home for burial, but his name is on the roll of honor on the soldiers' monument at Orange. In all these years no one has med-dled with the scythe. It has hung there a symbol and visible reminder to his father of his son's devotion to duty. As the tree grew, the scythe has become embedded in the wood, until it is a part of the tree. The snath, which has been forced off the scythe by the growing tree, is supported in its original position by a small framework. The woodwork of the tholes has yielded to the action of the elements and fallen away. Around the tree, which is probably a little over a foot in d' ameter at its base, has been erected a railing .- Springfield Republican.

Together the party mapped out a line of action. First they obtained permission from the landlord of the hotel to smash in the door of the room occupied by Gordon and the woman. This done, Mrs. Gordon appeared greatly elated at her success in trapping her spouse and gave vent to a great deal of laughter. She clapped her hands in glee. Soon, however, anger gave away to satisfaction and she jumped at the Hannan woman and commenced to pull her hair and beat her about the face. She would have done her serious harm had not would have done her serious harm had not the men restrained her. The Hannan wo-man, all this time, kept strictly on the defensive, being apparently too completely taken by surprise to realize her situation. Gordon and the woman were taken to the station, where the latter was locked up on the customary charge Gordon was al-lowed to go home, to appear when wanted. Sergt. Pritchard and his daughter in the orning obtained the necessary warrants.

Car Accident at Toledo. Toledo, O., July 30.—Eleven or more people were injured in a street car accident last night, one, Mrs. Ott, fatally and two others very seriously. Three of them were slight and their names were not learned. The accident was a peculiar one. A blinding flash or electricity followed by a cloud of smoke and cries of injured passengers as they were tumbled into the street, attracted the attention of belated passersby. The inthe attention of belated passersby. The injuries are of such a character, that they are in every instance extremely painful.

The car was provided with the usual twolight circuits, but the crew are of the opinion that during yesterday's storm lightning struck the short circuit and cut it out. This left but one circuit protected with the connecting wires subject to a cut-out or an over-charge of electricity. Just how the explosion occurred is not known, but the circuit fuse blew out with a crash, the car was instantly filled with the lurid flashes of subtle electric fluid, and cries of pain and astonishment were followed by men and women falling over each other out of the car.

Swallowed His Destination. A Clevelander who made a trip to Washington says that, much as he was impressed by the beauty and grandeur of the national capital and its surroundings, the thing he will remember longest was a remark he heard made by a colored deckhand on one of the handsome boats that take daily trips up and down the Potomac. These boats stop at many of the picturesque little Virginia and Maryland river towns that dot the banks of the historic river and take freight shipments to and from Washington. One of the things shipped from one of the down river towns on the boat the Clevelander rode on was a goat of the sort that delights the average small boy. The Clevelander was wandering bout the boat, interested in the dif ferences between the Potomac river boat and the Lake Erie craft with which he was familiar, when he noticed the colored deckhand standing almost motionless before the goat, which was tied to one of the supports of the upper deck. He was scratching his head and apparently very much puzzled. "What's the matter?" the Clevelander asked the deckhand.

"Why," answered the colored man, "de goat done eat up whar he gwine The goat had simply chewed up and swallowed the tag on which was the address to which he was being ship-

The Biters Bit, "See that party with the jag sitting in the corner of the car?" said a conductor who was riding to the car barns in a Zoo and Eden park car to the conductor in charge of the car. "Yep. He's got a heavy bundle," was the answer. "Well, take this counterfeit half dollar with you when you collect his fare. A passenger passed it on me a month ago. If he gives you a dollar, you can shove it on him.'

The conductor of the car took the lead half dollar, entered the car, and the man with the jag held out a silver dollar and received the counterfeit half and 45 cents in change.

"Worked like a charm," said the conductor as he reached the platform.

"Here he comes now. He wants to get off." The drunken man wabbled to the door and unsteadily descended from "Now we'll split up," remarked the conductor of the car as he drew the dollar from his pocket. And as both of the conductors gazed at the silver dollar they gasped in unison: "We're up ag'in it! It's a counterfeit dollar."-

Balegga Eating Elephant, Stark naked savages, with long, greased plaits of hair hanging down to their shoulders, were perched on every available inch of the carcass, hacking away with knives and spears, yelling, cursing and munching, covered with blood and entrails; old men, young men, prehistoric hags, babies, one and all gorged or gorging, smearing them-selves with blood, laughing and fight-ing. Pools of blood, strips of hide, vast bones, blocks of meat, individuals who had dined not wisely but too well lay round in bewildering confusion, and in two short hours all was finished. Nothing remained but the great gaunt rihs, like the skeleton of a ship's wreck, and a few disconsolate vulture perched thereon.—E. S. Grogan Before the Royal Geographical Society.
