

INVADED BY JAPS

Who Occupy the U. S. Pacific Islands

Warship Adams Commanded by Capt. Fox Ordered to Make Investigations.

Special to the Daily Nugget. Washington, Aug. 13.—Orders have been issued by the navy department providing for a visit of the United States ship Adams to Wake Island and the midway islands belonging to the United States in the Pacific ocean. This action is determined on as the result of a communication received at the department that a United States minister while approaching Wake Island in June last discovered it inhabited by Japanese. While the Nero was making a survey of the Pacific for a trans-Pacific cable in 1899 she discovered that the Midway islands were also inhabited by Japs. The Adams will be in charge of Commander Fox who will make an investigation of the case and if it is ascertained that Japs settled the islands with the sanction of their government with a view to laying a basis for claim of sovereignty over them, representations will be made to Japan on the subject for the purpose of securing their removal. The Adams will also touch at the Hawaiian islands and will visit each one of the group.

CHOLERA IN PHILLIPPINES

Due to Relaxation of Sanitary Laws

Disease Can Not be Stamped Out Till Heavy Rains Come in October.

Special to the Daily Nugget. San Francisco, Aug. 13.—The reason given by army officers who arrived on the transport Lawton for a renewed outbreak of cholera in the Philippines is the premature withdrawal of precautionary measures by American officials at Manila, under the impression that the disease had been fought to a standstill. The scourge had only been stayed, however, and the relaxation of controlling influence resumed work of devastation with renewed vigor. "We will not get rid of cholera in the Philippines," said Lieut. Asst. Surgeon Thoides, "until heavy rains come and that will be in October. In the meantime our people are trying everything possible to keep the disease within bounds."

K. P.s at Frisco.

Special to the Daily Nugget. San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 13.—This is a very busy day for Knights of Pythias. The Pythian sisterhood held a second session. There was a review of the uniform rank and competitive drills, also the supreme lodge convened. The Imperial Palace Knights of Khorassan held session and the Supreme Temple of Rathbone Sisters assembled. The chief event was a grand parade.

Protest Dismissed.

The protest recently heard over the right to take water from the pup at No. 18 below lower on Dominion, the action having been between Elysee Cibout and A. Peterson, et al, has been dismissed with costs, the gold commissioner finding as follows: "Upon considering the evidence given in this case I have come to the conclusion that the defendants are entitled to the water naturally flowing in the tributary that flows through the upper portion of their creek claim No. 18 below lower discovery on Dominion creek, and that the plaintiff is only entitled to divert the water from this tributary at the point mentioned in his grant when it is not required by the defendants."

THROUGH OPEN STR. KAISER WILHELM II DRAWBRIDGE

Freight Train Plunges Into River

Body of one Member of Train Crew Recovered and Second Man is Missing.

Special to the Daily Nugget. Trenton, N.J., Aug. 12.—A freight train on the Long Branch division of the Jersey Central railroad plunged through an open drawbridge into the Elizabeth river today. Twelve cars are piled on top of the locomotive, which lies at the bottom of the river. The body of one of the train crew has been recovered. Another man is missing.

Opera This Winter

An enthusiastic meeting of the Dawson Amateur Operatic Society was held in St. Andrew's church last night which was attended by some twenty-five or thirty members. It was unanimously decided to continue the work of the society the coming winter, the operas chosen for presentation being "Maritana," "Bohemian Girl," and "Dorothy." Musical Director Searelle will leave for the outside in a few days and while in San Francisco will purchase the wardrobe, scores and needed accessories for the three operas, returning to Dawson about October 1 when rehearsals will be begun immediately. The proceeds of the performances will be devoted to the benefit of the society.

Mrs. Hering Returns.

Mrs. Hering, wife of John Hering, the Hunker Nugget representative, has returned from Seattle where she spent the winter. She was accompanied by her son who was seen by its father for the first time on her arrival, it having been born last winter in Seattle. The introduction of father and son was acknowledged with pleasure, especially on John's part.

At Eagle on Charge of Perjury

Jury Partly Secured for Trial of Owens Charged With Murder.

Special to the Daily Nugget. Eagle City, Alaska, Aug. 13.—Trial of the case of the United States versus J. C. Kellum, charged with subordination of perjury, the jury returned a verdict of acquittal, that decision being reached on the first ballot. This afternoon a jury is being secured for the Owens' murder trial. Owens is charged with having last winter stabbed to death his partner in their cabin in a remote section of the Fortymile country. His defense will be self-defense.

Youthful Murderer.

Special to the Daily Nugget. St. John, N.B., Aug. 12.—Frank Higgins, aged 16 years, was sent up for trial charged with the murder of Wm. Doherty, aged 17. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of wilful murder.

When Interviewed at Toronto He Defends the Yukon Against False Reports.

Special to the Daily Nugget. Toronto, Aug. 12.—Judge Macaulay is here on his way back to Dawson with Mrs. Macaulay. He takes exception to the report of Geo. Hees to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association regarding the Yukon, and says he is satisfied the development of the country has just begun.

Captain Healey's Company

Special to the Daily Nugget. Seattle, Aug. 13.—To develop resources of the Copper river district, to establish canneries, stores, trading posts, in short, to carry on a great commercial business in Central Alaska, is the object which the Central Alaska Exploration Co. is organized for. The company has for its president Capt. John J. Healy.

Jack Jeffries vs. Burley

The following telegram was received in Dawson yesterday evening: "Seattle, August 12, 1902. William E. Drummond, care Murray & Ross, Dawson: Leave with Jeffries 28th. Want time after arrival. Answer."

"Anthony Greene." The Jeffries referred to is Jack Jeffries, brother to the champion pugilist of the world, and his object in coming to Dawson is to meet Nick Burley, champion of the Yukon. Burley is ready to meet Jeffries and the chances for a good contest in Dawson about September 15th or 20th are flattering. Jack Jeffries has a good ring reputation.

Story of the Drug Store

Old Dr. Poppitz never had an assistant till about six months before he died. Then Harold Updike, one of the "town boys," came back from the city a graduated, full-fledged pharmacist and Dr. Poppitz employed him in the drug store. "The Racket Drug Store," Beeno, Ark., that was the sign over the door, but on a little tin sign near the side entrance was the legend, "Herr Poppitz, Apotheke." The advent of Harold Updike lent new glory to the drug store. He wore a pink shirt and silk garters to hold up his sleeves. He parted his hair in the middle and kept it drooping, mane-like, over his eyes after the manner of the college football hero. He was the envy of all the young men in town because he ruled the soda fountain, and every girl in town called him "Hal" and quit buying stamps at the postoffice. Meanwhile Dr. Poppitz, who, by the way, wasn't a doctor at all, was disabled almost entirely by accelerated diabetes, and Harold came pretty near "running things" in the store.

"Would you like a cooling beverage, Miss Sue?" asked Harold one evening, when pretty Miss Clayton who had got into long dresses within the year had bought a box of note paper and some stamps. "With me, you know. My treat."

And while she was nibbling daintily at it he eyed her admiringly and stammered: "Two years have made quite a change in you, Susie."

"They've changed you, too, Hal. We're all glad to see you back—there aren't enough boys 'round, you see, and—you know Dan Atterbury—"

"Oh, that's so. I forgot about Dan. Where is he?"

"He hasn't come back from the army yet," she said, getting deeper into the confection, but blushing, too. "—that is, we have been expecting him. He said he'd be here before the Fourth, and I'm hoping—"

"Aha, Miss Susie," simpered Updike, "so he's been writing to you, eh? He always was a little sweet."

"He was schoolmate with us, with you, too," she said frowning with quite a serious attempt at severity, "and I think you ought to be glad to see him too, Hal. He's been wounded and sick and suffered ever so many things over there in the Philippines. And he was in China, too."

But Updike didn't care whether his old schoolmate ever came back, for he had some plans of his own with regard to Susie, and he knew that even a pink shirt and football hair are not special advantages over a blue uniform and a bolo wound.

But Dan came back, just the same, and the girls made quite a hero of him—for a few days. He had some presents too, principally for Susie, but he proved his generosity with gifts of a Filipino mat and a Chinese ring to Updike. He brought a carton of Manila cigars for old Dr. Poppitz, and they lay open on the little table by his bed the night the good old apothecary died.

After the funeral was over and the lonely old doctor was almost forgotten Harold began to cut quite a figure in Beeno circles. The store owed money to the Hot Springs wholesaler, and Hal was acting manager for its creditor. Meanwhile he was paying the most ardent court to Miss Susie. She might have bathed in costly perfumes and feasted interminably on bonbons and ice cream soda without infringing an inch upon Updike's grandiose hospitality. He sent her presents of every kind of note paper, fancy toilet articles, soaps, novelties, combs, brushes and the rest of drug store fancy goods.

Dan Atterbury's star, on the contrary, was on the descent. He had put aside his weather-stained campaign suit and was loafing. A soldier out of his regimentals and out of a job is not usually a heroic spectacle. Some of the good people of Beeno began to hint that "soldierin' a-lus did make fellers 'n count," and Atterbury was commencing to be aware of his questionable position in the community, when at her gate one night Susie, fixing a poppy in his button-hole, said: "Danny, what are you going to do?"

"I don't know yet, Sue," he hesitated. "I've got over two hundred saved up, I told you, and if I sell the loot I brought hom I'd have a pretty good stake—perhaps eight hundred or a thousand. We could get married on less than that, Susie."

"No we couldn't Dan. Not unless you had a position, or some business, or something ahead. It doesn't take long to spend a thousand dollars, Dan."

"Well, what would you do?" he asked, boy-like, "I'm willing to do anything. Would you go to the city and study law, or medicine, or—"

"Pharmacy?" she laughed, helping him out. "No. Dan, don't study phar-

fare looked more like a verdant tunnel than a country road. Suddenly my mule stopped, drooped his ears and turned his head about. Thinking that this was evidence of a desire on his part to bite my leg, I was about to whip him, when I noticed that he was shivering all over in an ague.

"I looked up and down the road, and then I shivered. Not more than 60 feet away a huge snake, half coiled around a bough which projected over the road, lay swinging and looking at me with a glare that was not at all reassuring. I had left my rifle behind on a baggage mule, and had nothing with which to fight save a hunting knife. I drew this promptly from the scabbard, and, with the courage worthy of a better cause, used it as a spur upon my luckless steed, which turned and galloped for dear life in the opposite direction.

"I reached my party, got the rifle, and with my men galloped back to secure the constrictor. The reptile and I must have had the same brand of bravery. He had dropped from the bough and vanished in the recesses of the jungle."—New York Post.

Life's Stages

Seattle, Aug. 2.—The Lynn canal liner Humboldt reached port yesterday morning from Skagway, with $482,070 in treasure and eighty passengers.

There was a newly married couple aboard, occupying the ship's bridal chamber; a baby boy was born in another stateroom, and the corpse of a pioneer Klondiker on shipboard.

The bridal pair were Mr. and Mrs. A. Shattuck of Juneau. The bride was formerly Miss May Agnes Swineford, a daughter of Governor Swineford.

Their departure from Juneau was marked with great eclat. Just before the steamer sailed the pair were treated to a shower of rice and worn out shoes, and a magnificent bridal bell was suspended in their stateroom on the steamer. The groom is a representative Juneau merchant.

In latitude 56-41 north, longitude 132-50 west, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. N. Johnson. The boy was christened "Humboldt" in honor of the boat, with appropriate ceremonies.

The body of C. G. Perkins, formerly of Port Townsend, who died in Dawson, was brought down for burial.

Coronation Day at Gold Bottom

The celebration was held after supper Saturday evening and Hunkerites are congratulating one another on its success. In the sports only local celebrities took part, which added immensely to the interest shown by the crowd. There was one event in which almost everyone took part by fair means or otherwise—the tug-of-war between up creek and down creek. The up creek fellows won, but more could be said on that subject than that bare statement.

Shaughnessy won the 100-yards dash, J. A. Crowe the running jump and Bob Highland the high jump. The girls' race, married women's race, three-legged and pick-a-back races, etc., were all well contested.

At the conclusion of the games the local orators were permitted to operate. Dr. Clendennan and Mr. R. Highland had some pertinent remarks to make re coronations and elections. George H. Locke told some interesting personal anecdotes of the king and queen.

The celebration was closed by blue-light illuminations and a great bonfire on the hill overlooking the village. They say—

That Shaughnessy balked so often in the long jump because he couldn't get past Cassidy's saloon.

That Malcolm Campbell wanted to make a Gaelic speech but the crowd couldn't understand it.

That George H. Locke is a personal friend of the king and queen.

That there is an election not far away.

We are the people.

Railway Bridges

All existing railroad spans of over 300 feet have been built since 1870, and probably more in America than in all the rest of the world together, and certainly these are much better and cheaper and have been more rapidly and safely constructed than those of any other country. In a word, American engineers have built most of the greatest and most difficult bridges in the world, and in less than half a century, largely within the last quarter century, have developed the art of bridge building to a perfection that no other sort of construction has reached in hundreds of years. They have brought it to practical limits that cannot be greatly extended until some radically new material is provided that is notably stronger, cheaper or lighter than steel.

Dog Catcher at Work

Licenses for dogs and the sale of tags was begun a few days ago since which time the city has been doing a thriving business in that line. At the close of business last night 46 licenses and 55 tags for males and 10 for females had been issued. The discrepancy between the number of tags and the number of licenses is caused by one license sometimes covering a number of animals. Every dog must wear a tag but if several are owned by one person but one license is issued for them all. The dog catcher was instructed yesterday to begin his work of picking up the strays at once. His orders are to enforce the bylaw rigidly and any animal found running loose without a tag will be taken to the pound no matter whether it is a thoroughbred or a mongrel.

"You pretend you don't like politics," observed the doctor, "but when you open a newspaper the first thing you do is to turn to the political page."

"Certainly," replied the professor. "I don't like dead cats, either, but if there's one on my premises I hunt for it with a good deal of interest till I find it."

"So you really enjoyed hearing the declaration of independence read, did you, Johnny?"

"You bet! The man roared it through a megaphone."
