Better than Ever.
CARRICK FALL SHOW A BIG SUCCESS IN SPITE OF INCLEMENT WEATHER.

The Twenty-seventh Annual Exhibition of the Carrick Agricultural Society was held in the Village of Mildmay on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The weather man did not favor us with as good weather as usual, Tuesday being quite showery. However, the progress of the show was not seriously interfered with, and all the judging was completed in comparative comfort.

The threatening weather affected the gate receipts slightly, there being a decrease of $20, from last year's receipts from that source.

This year there were 144 horses entered for exhibition, which was probably the largest field of horses ever exhibited here. And the quality was here—in fact, the prize winners here have been carrying off nearly all the premiums in all the surrounding shows. The directors have been increasing the prizes in this class for several years, and that they have acted wisely was evident on Tuesday. Last year there were 113 entries in this class.

There was a substantial increase this year in the number of cattle shown, there being 78 prime cattle exhibited here on Tuesday, as against 62 last year. Bilger Bros. had their fine herd out and it would be difficult to beat them at any show in Ontario. Samuel Schmidt is fast coming to the front with his thoroughbred cattle. Jas. G. Thompson had a fine bunch of thoroughbreds and got a big share of the prizes.

There were 44 sheep exhibited this year, as against 52 at our last show. The judge on Tuesday remarked that the quality of the exhibits was first-class.

Old and experienced hog breeders tell us that the exhibit of hogs here was the best they had seen at any country show. Last year's entry list in this class was more than doubled this year, and everything shown was extra good.

There was quite a falling away this year in the poultry exhibits. We are inclined to think that this class needs some little attention from the society, and a number of changes made that would awaken interest again. There should have been 150 entries in this class.

The exhibit of grain this year was about up to the average, in spite of the backward year. All the grain shown was grown this year, and the quality was astonishingly good.

There were 146 entries in roots this year, which was about 25 per cent. less than last year. The quality of the exhibits was very good. In dairy products the number of entries exceeded that of last year, by about one third.

The display of fruit in the hall was very much larger than last, there being nearly twice as many entries. It was pleasing to see so many fine exhibits of fruit, nearly all the available space being taken up.

In the ladies department the display of exhibits was very elaborate. Last year there were 117 entries in this class, but this year the number reached 245. It was the finest display of ladies work ever shown here.

In all the other departments the classes were pretty well filled. John Hamel had a magnificent display of furniture of his own manufacture which attracted considerable attention. C. Liesemer also had a display of hardware, and Fred Bury, photographer, also occupied a space in the hall. We are pleased to see our business men take such an interest in our fall exhibition.

The only drawback the Agricultural Society has to contend against, is the lack of room to exhibit the stock. In the Agricultural grounds it is absolutely impossible to show horses properly, and in such a small ring space accidents are exceedingly hard to avert. We venture to say that with a suitable ground the Mildmay fall exhibition would soon grow to be the most popular show in the county. We have the best township in the county, we grow the best grain and roots, and our stock men are sweeping all the shows in the county. This is an urgent matter, and one that should engage the attention of the Society at once.

The prize list will appear in our next issue.

OCTOBER WEATHER FORECASTS

An early spell of unseasonable cold and frost will visit much of the country, central and northward, in September, or at the latest, during the first half of October, until after the close of the Venus period, shown by the storm diagram to extend up to near the middle of October. We believe that the last half of October and all of November will bring a spell of open weather, more favorable perhaps, for outdoor work, and bringing as little general exposure to orchards, gardens and fields, as the reactions to cold and frost during much of September and early October.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th. On and touching Wednesday the 2nd to Friday the 4th, return to storm conditions will be noted, in falling barometer, change to warmer, bringing cloudiness and autumnal rains progressively over the country.

A regular storm period is central on the 8th, covering the 7th to the 11th. The new moon falls on the celestial equator on the 7th. This fact will precipitate storm conditions at the beginning of this period. Low barometer, very warm for the season, and general storms of thunder, wind and rain, will set in about the 7th in the west, and during the 8th 9th and 10th these storms will take wide paths in their eastward sweep across the country. High barometer from the northwest will push severe to dangerous gales over the lake regions all to be followed by marked change to colder, bringing frost to much of the country, from the 7th to 13th.

A reactionary storm period will culminate on and touching the 14th and 15th. In fact, the causes are such that threatening conditions, with autumnal rains, may continue from the preceding period, the 7th to the 11th, ending in a secondary culmination or crisis on the 14th and 15th. Much of the country will experience very cool days and frosty nights not far from the 15th to the 18th. Watch and see.

A regular storm period embraces the full moon very close to the celestial equator. This matter of the Moon being on the equator at new and full appertains to the equinoctial periods, and they correspond this month so closely as to suggest equinoctial phenomena not far from the 7th, as well as the period 18th to 22nd. Seismic disturbances will be quite natural at both periods. This fourth storm period covers the 18th to 22nd, and promises to bring very decided autumnal storms. The crisis of the period will fall on the 20th and 21st in all the central parts of the country. Rain and wind, with lightning and thunder, will attend the first stage of these storms, but change to cool, autumnal rain, with snow possible in the north and west, will result on the north and west flanks of storm areas, all followed by very cool nights and frosts, reaching well to the southward.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 25th, 26th and 27th and falls within the brace of the Mercury disturbance. It will bring a period of mistiness and thick, prolonged cloudiness that will hardly break away during the remainder of the month.

A regular storm period begins on the 29th, is central on the 31st, extending to November the 3rd. As October comes to its close the barometer will indicate approach of positive and general storm conditions from western sections. From about the 31st to November 3rd, autumnal rains will take up their march from west to east, touching most parts of the country, and being followed from the west and north by rising barometer, change to cold, westerly winds, with early snow and sleet over large areas to the northward.

A report comes from the Peninsula that during the dry weather this summer the cattle fed on the leaves of the trees and shrubs, and that they are in good condition.

An Irishman in a brown study unthinkingly entered a field, where he soon awoke to find that he was not the only occupant. The beast with horns down and tail horizontal, bore down on Erin, who straining limb and nerve, and feeling that every bonnd was hastening a crisis, was heard to exclaim, "Pihwat am Oi runnin' the same way with the baste fer? When he run won way, why didn't Oi run the ither?"

BELMORE.
 The cider mill is again in operation, and Mr. Edwards expects to do as large a business as ever.
 Mr. E. F. Collins wrote on, and passed, the Senior Teachers' examination on History (British, Mediaeval and Modern) Latin Authors and Latin Composition. The latter two are considered the most difficult subjects for Senior Leaving. The new regulations permit any teacher to write on as few as three subjects in one year; formerly six subjects had to be taken before a certificate was granted.

Anniversary services were held in the Belmore Methodist Church on Sunday, conducted by Rev. Mr. McTavish of Gorie. On Monday evening a harvest home festival was held in the church, at which there was a splendid attendance, the seating capacity of the church being taxed to its utmost. Excellent addresses were given by Revs. Wilson of Tecumseh and Powell of Brussels, and Mr. Kerr of Brussels. The musical part of the program was furnished by the Mildmay Methodist Choir, and their selections were all thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Reynard, of Ethel, sang two beautiful solos, Miss Edwards of Belmore, contributed a solo, and Miss Fotheringham gave an interesting recitation. The proceeds of the entertainment amounted to about $60.

Mr. W. I. Chisholm, M. A., I. P. S., paid a visit to our school last Tuesday. Some points in his address to the pupils may be of interest to the people of the section:

- 1.—The work being done in the school is of a high order, and the school ranks among the most satisfactory in his Inspectorate.
- 2.—He felt no anxiety for the school since it has been in charge of the present teacher.
- 3.—The order is excellent.

She had a long time to wait. Could he have forgotten that she was waiting here? And Katie was by no means accustomed to wait. What did she care if he had promised a book to Lora? What did it mean? Katie made up her mind to study this book a little, before she gave it to Lora. She did not believe in this sort of thing. Lora was a hypocrite. She so often blushed when they met the doctor in the walks, or when any one mentioned his name. Katie suddenly stamped her foot and clenched her fist. She could have shaken Lora for sheer vexation, and yet she did not know for what. She would go away, and yet she was held back by the thought that she must find out what it was about the book. At last he came. The book was wrapped up in a newspaper. "Were you afraid?" he asked. "You ought to have gone in to my mother." "I am not afraid," she replied crossly. She snatched the book out of his hand. "Is there anything else I can do?" "No, Fraulein von Tollen knows about it. But perhaps it may interest you to know that I cannot give the lesson in literature next Thursday, because I am going away for a week." "Indeed! A pleasant journey!" She meant it to sound very indifferent. "It is not a journey of pleasure," he remarked, "I am going to a philology meeting in Mainz. But we will go now. I will accompany you home." "No, thank you," she replied, "I should much prefer to go alone. Good-evening." Katie fled through the garden, out into the street, as if she feared pursuit. Not until she got into the street that led into the town did she go more slowly; but then the book burned like fire in her hand. She stopped under a gas-lamp beside the bridge, and looked at the packet. It was tied up with a string and fastened with a seal. Her mouth took on a cold, scornful expression, which made the young face look older by many years. Her fingers twitched as if they must break the seal, but she left it unopened. "It is shameful!" she murmured, hurrying on with redoubled haste. She rushed noisily into the door of her father's house, and, as she heard Lora's voice in the kitchen, she stood the next moment before her sister, who was busy at the stove, getting ready for father's supper. "Here!" she exclaimed in a hoarse tone, holding out the packet to Lora, "here is your book." "What book?" was the surprised inquiry. "The book from Dr. Schonberg. You needn't look so surprised. Take it. I am not anxious to stand here holding it to you." Lora took the sauceman, in which her father's broth was cooking, from the fire, and then took the packet. Katie stood with folded arms, watching her sister as she stood at the kitchen-table before the little kerosene lamp, untied the string, and took a book out of the wrapper. As she opened it a slip of paper fell to the floor, unobserved by her. Katie did not stir. Lora shook her head. "A Greek lexicon—Katie, there must be some mistake." The young girl laughed aloud. "The explanation is lying at your feet, Lora," she cried. "Probably Schonberg hadn't an idea that you would find it so hard to comprehend; otherwise he would no doubt have written on the outside of the packet, 'A billett-doux within.'" Lora stooped quickly and picked up the note; she read it, blushing deeply: "I did not meet you to-day, Lora, and I wanted to see you. I must talk with you about speaking to your father, for I cannot bear this sort of thing any longer. Make up your mind, and come to-night, after dinner, to my mother. I have told her everything. I must say good-bye to you for eight long days. I have just found a letter which calls me to Mainz. If you love me, Lora, grant my request."

He was sitting in his arm-chair by the stove, smoking, as usual. "I should think you had been grinding the meal," was his greeting to his daughter. "Punctuality has gone out of fashion. Where is your mother?" "She is downstairs in the parlor, with Aunt Melitta; Frau Becher has only just gone." "What do those old women want anyway? I could hear that old Becher shrieking all the way up here." "She wanted to inquire how I was after the ball," replied Lora, shrugging her shoulders. The major, who had been drinking his broth, wiped off his moustache and laughed. "An old cat, eh, Lora?" "Yes, papa." "And that pack have millions, and they don't even know how to spend it decently. And we must go hungry. There must be something wrong with the regulations up above, or else that fellow Adalbert would be making shoes for the regiment, eh, Lora? Or do you like him?" She stroked his unshaven cheek tenderly. "Dear papa," she said. "Lora," called Frau von Tollen. The daughter hurried to the door. "Yes, mamma." "Aunt Melitta will stay to tea," was the answer; "boil a few eggs." She ran down the stairs in dismay. That was stupid of Aunt Melitta. "But soft, child, very soft," called out the old Fraulein, after her. When a few minutes later, Lora carried the tea into the little dining-room, she found her mother, aunt, and sister already sitting there. Rudolph's place, next to her own, was vacant. The major always took his supper in his own room. Fraulein Melitta was excessively talkative, and she appealed continually to Lora. "I was just saying to your mother, Lora, that one ought never to judge too quickly. This Frau Becher is really a charming woman; a perfect lady, Lora." "She takes almost as much upon herself as if she were one," remarked Katie. "Katie, I must beg that you will not be so ready to give your very unripe opinions," said Aunt Melitta reprovingly and her curls shook all over her head; "besides, I was not speaking to you. I spoke to Lora." "Lora has no time to-day to think about Frau Becher," replied Katie, sticking an egg with her knife, "have you Lora?" "We have some secrets to talk over, by-and-by—about papa's birthday." "After tea, I hope," said her mother. "Yes, mamma." Lora cast a grateful glance at her sister, but Katie looked through her as though she did not exist. "Really, I have seldom seen anything so tasteful as the Becher's furniture," began Aunt Melitta, again. "Only fancy, dear Marie," she continued, turning to her sister-in-law, "the salon is fitted up with violet velvet, and in the boudoir, adjoining, they have maize-colored satin, embroidered with flowers—a charming effect. I shall decorate my next doll's house like it; and moreover, Frau Becher declares that the upper rooms, which her son partly occupies now, and which he will fit up entirely when he gets married, are much handsomer. The bride whom Adalbert may choose will not find it necessary to bring more than her personal wardrobe with her, for everything else is already there." "Except decent ideas," murmured Katie, fortunately so low that her aunt could not understand her, and had to ask what the young lady said. "Oh, nothing," replied the latter; "I was only talking to myself; it is a habit I have." "Yes; and Adalbert Becher told me yesterday, that he would not go anywhere but to Italy on his wedding-journey. He has often been in the land where the golden orange glows; 'Thither, oh, thither—' Lora, how does it go? 'I would go, O my beloved, with thee!' My poor dear Plover used to sing it so beautifully." Lora suddenly got up. "Will you excuse me, mamma?" "Yes, but make haste; for papa wants to play a rubber of whist. As auntie is here, we can easily manage it if you play too." "Mamma," stammered Lora. "Go now, quickly, child. You know your father is so impatient." Lora, followed by her sister, ran through the dark hall into the little salon, which was opposite the dining-room. It was a very plain room, dimly lighted by the kerosene lamp, which still unheeded of extravagance!—was burning on the table before which the ladies had been sitting with Frau Becher. It was all very poor and plain, and yet there was an air about it that always gave a visitor a sense of comfort. The walnut furniture, with its polish worn off, an old-fashioned mirror, in a horribly ugly gold frame, over the console, between the muslin curtains, with a clock in front of it which had long since ceased to go; a large flowered carpet, before the sofa; on the right and left an arm-chair, an old embroidered fire-screen, a little table, on which stood an alabaster vase, which here and there showed marks of repair, and a writing-table, a very useless piece of furniture, covered with little knick-knacks from better days, when the mistress of the house was young and beautiful. Here Lora sank into a chair. "Katie," she cried, "you must help me!" "No!" replied the perverse girl. "But you don't know—" "And I don't want to know." "Katie," Lora went up to her with clasped hands, "we have always been fond of each other—I love him so much, Katie—do help me!" The younger girl's face grew pale as death. "You cannot have such a foolish prejudice, Katie, as that we are not suited to one another because I happen to be called Lora von Tollen, and he Ernest Schonberg. Katie, he is such a dear, splendid fellow, and you like him, too—" "No!" gasped Katie. "I must speak to him this evening," said Lora, taking another tone. "If you will not help me, then I must manage for myself. I only ask you to say nothing." "That is of course," replied her sister, with a curling lip. "Lora, Lora!" sounded a voice outside, "your papa is waiting." "Katie," implored the young girl, "I cannot get out—I beg of you—no one will miss you; run over to Frau Pastor Schonberg's, and say I cannot come, much as I would like to—" "In the name of all the devils!" thundered the major, at the head of the stairs, "what are you about? Will you come?" Lora flew to the door—"I am coming, papa, this moment! Katie, for Heaven's sake go! Say I will be at the station to-morrow morning, at half-past seven. It is no matter if some one does see us, I beg of you to go, Katie, if you care for me at all, and I will thank you all my life. Tell him not to fret—" Her eyes were full of tears. "Oh, yes," murmured Katie, and Lora flew upstairs. Katie did really put a shawl round her and steal out of the house. She knew she would not be missed; every one would think she was writing her exercise. It was a dark, stormy night; the lanterns, which were swung across the street, swayed in the wind. The young girl walked very fast; though she did not realize it herself, she almost ran. Her head seemed burning, and the whole world seemed to be turning round with her, she felt so oppressed and so melancholy; and yet she was angry. She thought what a comfort it would be if she could seize Lora by the arm, and shake her, and say to her very face: "You serpent—you hypocrite!" As she drew near to the Schonberg's garden-gate, she began to walk more slowly; she felt about in the dark for the latch, for there was no lamp here, and she looked for the small ray of light over the blinds of the Frau Pastorin. It was all dark in his room upstairs. All at once she felt her hand seized, and the next moment an arm was thrown around her, and a kiss was pressed on her lips. "Lora, Lora, thank God, you have come!" murmured a passionate voice. She was quite overwhelmed by this, and for the moment she could not utter a word. Not until he had kissed her forehead and her hand, and repeated, "Lora, my Lora!" did she find strength to free herself from his arms, and thrust him away. "It is I," she said hoarsely. "Katie—Lora could not come." "At this moment he remained silent. Then Katie sounded in her ear in a tone of vexation and disappointment. "I could not help it," she murmured, beginning to sob. "No, no; only you must excuse me, Fraulein Katie. I hope Lora confided in you. But won't you come in?" His voice now sounded as cool and composed as if he were at his desk. At this moment the house-door opened; light streamed out into the darkness, and the small figure of the Frau Pastorin appeared like a silhouette in the frame of the doorway. "Is my little daughter there?" she asked in a low and pleasant tone. "No, mother; it is Fraulein Katie." "Will you not come in?" the old lady asked, repeating her son's invitation. "No, I cannot; I will not," murmured the girl, retreating. "I only wanted to say that Lora could not come; she had to play whist with papa and Aunt Melitta; but she will come to the station if she can, or will write." "Was it really so absolutely impossible?" he inquired bitterly. She shrugged her shoulders. "Lora said so—but Lora is a coward," she muttered passionately; "if I—it it had been me—good-night!" She disappeared suddenly in the darkness. When he hurried after her to the gate, he could perceive no trace of her in the lonely, dimly-lighted street. "Let the little will-o'-the-wisp go; what can happen to her in Westenberg?" he murmured, and went back in a rather angry mood. Lora ought to have come, he thought; she ought to have found ways and means. Why should she be so particular when it regarded the happiness of two people? Was it not a rather petty trait? He stood before his mother with a pale face. "Well, well," said the old lady comfortingly, putting the cake-plate and the teacups carefully away; which had been taken out for the refreshment of the expected guest. "These are a lover's troubles, my boy. Don't fret; it will all come right." Lora sat at the whist-table, with the cards in her hand, and listened to every footstep that went by in the street.

"Confound it, look what you are about!" shouted the major, who was her partner. "I played clubs. The way you play is enough to drive one mad!" She looked at him absently. "There comes Katie upstairs," said Fraulein Melitta, as she trumped the trick. "Thank you, Lora; we are sure to win now." "The devil may play with you!" thundered the old man, flinging his cards on the table. "I would rather have a dummy." Lora got up hastily and went to the door. "Come here!" shouted the major; "sit down and pay attention. How else will you ever learn?" She returned obediently and sat down at the table again, like a marble statue. Now and then the major asked her a question: "Well, child, how would you manage that? How would you play?" She looked at him with an anxious glance as her thoughts came back from her lover. "Papa, I have a bad headache," she said in excuse, as the cuckoo-clock struck ten, and the cards were shuffled again. "Go to bed, then, for all I care," grumbled the major, as he arranged his cards. She said "Good-night," and went quickly to her sister's room. Katie was sitting on her bed; her cheeks burned like fire, and her eyes looked fixedly at Lora. "Katie," cried Lora breathlessly, taking her sister's cold hand in hers, "did you see him? What did he say? Was he angry?" Katie shook her head. "I told him what you said, and what else had I to do?" she replied, turning away. "No, nothing else. I thank you, Katie," was the disappointed reply. "But are you ill?" she asked, as a slight shiver passed over the frame of the young girl. "No, let me alone." "Don't be so horrid, Katie. When a girl loves a man, she doesn't think about his family tree." Katie laughed shortly, but she did not reply. Lora made an attempt to stroke her hair, but her sister thrust her away. "Let me alone!" she repeated. "Good-night, Katie," said Lora, and went away. She had hardly shut the door behind her when the bolt was shot and she thought she heard pat sonate sohs. "Katie!" she called once, but all was still. She went into her room and began to write a letter to Ernest Schonberg: "Yes, Ernest, it is better that you should ask my father's consent as soon as possible. I am so anxious and afraid. As soon as you come back from M., come to papa, and I will prepare him. I wish you a pleasant journey, but don't forget." "Your Lora." "In case of an emergency," she murmured, "if I cannot go to the station, Katie must take it. She will have had her cry out by that time, and will get reconciled to it, the foolish, proud child!" She stayed awake for a long time yet, and read, in Scheffel's "Trompeter von Sakkinen." The lamp lighted up her pure, beautiful face, which looked so happy at this moment, when she was dreaming over a charming poem. Then she started up suddenly. The outer door shut. "Rudolf!" she cried, and, like a heavy weight, the anxious reality settled down on her spirit. (To be Continued.)

TRAVELLING TELEPHONES.

The Civil and Military Gazette reports that Lord Kitchener has accepted for use in India a form of movable telephone, which can be employed with great facility in the field. The cable weighs only seven pounds per mile, but is so well insulated that it can be stretched across a stream of water without loss of current. It withstands a strain of 120 pounds. An apparatus for placing and removing the cable, working automatically, and capable of being attached to a saddle, is employed. Recently in the Punjab a horseman, proceeding at a gallop, placed the cable over a distance of two miles in seven minutes. To remove it 18 minutes were required.

FORTUNES TOLD FROM TEA-LEAVES.

After a tea-party or a picnic it adds to the general entertainment if the hostess can read her guests' fortunes in their teacups. An old lady who has built up quite a reputation in this way has revealed to us how she does it. "Is the first place," she says, "you must turn the cup upside down above the saucer, and slowly revolve it three times. Then start your inspection. If there are any drops of tea adhering to the cup, it is a sign of tears to come. A long line of leaves means a journey, and if the line is broken, a sea voyage. A little square patch means a letter. A circle means a proposal of marriage, and a short line means a visitor. Then there will be patches resembling animals and objects, such as birds, etc. Having observed all these indications, you start to weave your story, using your imagination freely, but keeping everything within the bounds of possibility, from your knowledge of your guest's character and circumstances."

Howell—"A good deal depends on the formation of early habits." Dowell—"I know it. When I was a baby my mother paid a woman to wheel me about, and I have been pushed for money ever since."

FAMOUS DEATH VALLEY

IT HAS BEEN THE SCENE OF MANY TRAGEDIES.

Gradually Losing Its Terrors—Railroads Entering—Stories of Robbery and Bloodshed.

The famous Death Valley of Colorado is losing its terrors. Perhaps no other area of equal size in the world has been the scene of so many tragedies and dastardly crimes. Now the hand of civilization is reclaiming this devil's garden of the West. It will be Death Valley in name only, or as a memory, in but a few more years. Formerly only desperate characters lived on the desert, but within the last few years they have been practically thinned out, and the advent of railroads and the consequent rush of miners will complete the renovation.

OLD DAYS OF CRIME.

The desert characters are not so dangerous as they were even a few years ago. There are several settlements of "Arabs" scattered throughout the desert, one of these being not far from the borax mines, where they are within easy reach of passing teams. There was another band that hibernated near the Black Crater, in San Bernardino County, several miles east of Johannesburg. Like the Orientals from whom they were named they left without being allowed the formality of folding their blankets.

At Leake's Springs about forty miles from Johannesburg, was a "Robbers' Roost," the most noted and dangerous spot on the desert. It was settled in the early days by criminals, principally from Los Angeles. Here they held up the first wagon train from Salt Lake bound to Southern California, killing several, burning the wagons after plundering them and taking the stock. These thieves, like pirates waiting for a treasure ship, waylaid and robbed the borax wagons after pay days, and killed the teamsters if they resisted. Mining prospectors who passed that way were never seen again. In addition to the ranch house of the robbers there was a saloon.

BEGINNING OF GRAVEYARD.

Now there is only a row of stones marking the lines of the walls. Nearly on a sloping mesa was an old Indian camping ground, where agate, jasper and obsidian chippings are found. From a peak above, a figure resembling an elephant's head, carved by the hand of nature, seemed to be looking down upon the desolate and once bloody scene. There was a pitched battle between the outlaws and the Indians, but the red men were vanquished by the longer range arms of the paleface.

In the Valley of Death at Saratoga Springs, on the banks of the shallow Amagosa River, are the ruins of two stone houses, one of which was a store and the other a saloon. This spot was settled in the early days—more than half a century ago—and the place did a lively business, as the road was spotted with teams. Nearby is a graveyard. The place bore a bad name, and more than one teamster was killed and robbed at this oasis. Local tradition records a noted gun fight between a teamster and his "swampier" in which both were killed, and this was the beginning of the graveyard. A "swampier" is a helper who walks along and helps the teamster manage the line, pulls on the wagon brakes and also assists the teamster in swearing.

WORK HARD AND DON'T WORRY

Rules for Living to be 100 Given by Mrs. Brown, Who is 105.

Mrs. Johanna Harper Brown, of Worcester, Mass., who celebrated her 105th birthday the other day, delivered a short lecture on the value of hard work for prolonging one's days. The boys and girls have too easy a time, Mrs. Brown thinks, and depend too much upon their elders to clothe and feed them. Plenty of hard work is good medicine, according to Mrs. Brown, and she adds that if she had not worked hard all her life she would have been dead long ago. She thinks it better for a woman to work hard than to waste her energy carrying a poodle dog.

"A great fault of most women to-day is that they worry too much," said Mrs. Brown. "Worrying isn't going to help them at all and I always made a practice not to worry and fret. 'Just take things as they come, and take it easy. When women do that they will live to be as old as I am.' Mrs. Brown is also certain that the same rule applied to man will lengthen his days.

Mrs. Brown was born in Montreal and went to Massachusetts eighty-four years ago, making the trip overland by wagon and on horseback. She was of a family of six children and the mother of eight. Her hearing is perfect, she reads newspapers without glasses and daily climbs a flight of stairs unaided to visit neighbors in the house on Lake street, where she lives with her daughter. She believes in the old order of meals: breakfast at 7, lunch at noon and supper at 6. At the birthday celebration this week there were ninety descendants of Mrs. Brown present and five generations.

"What do you call your little dog?" "I used to call him William until he had fits, and now I call him Fitzwilliam!"

About the House

FOR THE HOME COOKS.

Roller Oat Cookies.—To one egg, well beaten, add one-half tablespoon butter, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups rolled oats, vanilla to taste. Beat well and bake in slow oven. It is nice for 5 o'clock tea.

Egg Dish for Luncheon.—Boil hard as many eggs as desired. When cold remove the shells, cut in half length-wise, and dip in egg and cracker crumbs. Let stand a little while; then fry in butter. Serve in a bed of lettuce leaves. Eggs cooked in this manner are dainty and delicious.

Rhubarb Pudding.—Stew the rhubarb as for sauce. When tender strain through colander; then put liquid on fire, adding a little more water. When it boils thicken with corn starch; let cool, and add sugar and teaspoon vanilla. Pour in moulds and chill. Serve with cream for dessert.

Crystallized Fruit.—Small fruit and sections of large fruit are attractive when served with a frosting of sugar. Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth; dip the fruit in so that it will be coated entirely with the egg; then roll in powdered sugar and lay on parchment paper to dry. Keep cool and serve while fresh.

Canadian Pudding.—To one-half cup of sugar add butter the size of an egg; one egg; one-half cup of sweet milk; one cup of flour, and one teaspoonful of baking-powder. Stir this well together. Place nuts or fruit in the bottom of mould; pour the batter over it and steam for one-half an hour.

Escalloped Fish and Potato.—Butter baking dish, scatter over bottom moist bread crumbs to depth of an inch; then place an equal quantity of cold fish, a few slices of cold boiled potato, and a finely chopped onion. Salt and pepper to taste. Use another cup of the bread-crumbs on top. Pour one-half cup of sweet milk over all and bake thirty minutes under cover. Dot with bits of butter and brown the top.

Apple Butter Cooked in Oven.—Cook apples until tender, run through a colander, and sweeten to taste. Place them in any cooking vessel you use for that purpose, filling it quite full, and put in the oven. It will cook fast. You will not have to clean it off your stove and have your hands burned by its popping on them. This method is just as good for preserves. If you put them in crocks or granite basins you can leave it in the oven and let it cook when you have a fire for other things.

Supper Dish from Stale Bread.—To one cup of moist bread crumbs add the same quantity of cold boiled potatoes, cut in small dice. Season with salt, pepper and sage to taste. Have tablespoonful of dripping hot in heavy iron spider; turn into it the mixed bread and potatoes and toss about lightly with a fork until delicately browned and slightly adhering. Serve with cold meat for supper. On a cool evening this is appetizing and wholesome.

Brownie's Delight.—Use four layers of rich white cake. Make a boiled frosting. Add one grated coconut, and pulp of one orange, rubbed through a sieve. Spread this upon the first layer. For second layer: To frosting add one cup of hickory nuts or English walnuts; one cup of chopped raisins, and tablespoonful of chocolate, grated. For third layer use one cup of chopped citron. On top there should be a smooth frosting.

Cream Pie.—Heat enough milk to fill your pie tin. Before it boils, add the yolks of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of water, and three tablespoonfuls of sugar, beaten together. Stir until smooth. Take from the fire and add butter the size of a walnut and vanilla to flavor. Bake crust and add this filling: Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and put in a little sugar and flavoring. Put this over the top of the pie; return to the oven a few minutes and brown. For chocolate pie use the same recipe, only add chocolate and more sugar, and leave out the flavoring.

TO LIGHTEN LITTLE BURDENS.

Umbrella Bags.—Make a long bag with a drawing in top to put away the parasols and umbrellas that would hang in closet exposed to the dust. Add a strong loop at one side to hang by. This is neat and convenient.

Mark Umbrellas.—Mark your umbrella with your full name and address. Borrowers will take no pleasure in its possession. Take artists' white tube paint and put it on blotting paper to remove the oil. Transfer it to a palette; thin a little with turpentine, and apply with a steel pen.

Shopper's Convenience.—A most convenient help to the busy housewife when shopping is a little notebook, in which are entered the sizes of shoes, hosiery, underwear, collars, gloves, hats, etc., for each member of the family, also any special styles or brands, and the number of yards of various articles, in fact, many little helps toward shopping, thus avoiding many mistakes.

Help for Crowded Closet.—An inexpensive skirt hanger and one on which six skirts may be hung is a small board, half an inch thick, six inches wide, and a foot long. About an inch from each end drive six nails an inch apart. Fasten skirt as you would when wearing and hang by loops on nails. This not only saves room but prevents skirts from wrinkling at the top, as when loops are placed together and hung on the nail.

Tightening Window Shades.—Unwind the shade about half way or more. Then place the shade in the holder at the rough end. Wind the shade up; place the other end in place, and your shade is tightened. If too tight, remove the latter end and unroll a few times.

Building Hink.—In building to save space put your attic stairs in the ceiling of the upper hall, or any upper room; take some flooring or wainscoting long enough to reach from the ceiling to the floor and nail some steps on the upper side of this wainscoting. Finish the under side with hard oil finish. Operate with pulleys fastened to the rafters. A rope fastened at the lower end opens the door. Any child can open it.

Bed Springs that Won't Sag.—With a brace and bit bore holes around the frame of the woven wire spring and remove the slats and coils of wire beneath used to support the wire netting. Then take a cord the same as was used years ago to cord up the old style bed; use it in the same way, and you have a much better bed than a "cord bed" and the wire prevents the wear on the mattress.

Guard your Comb.—The safety of a costly comb may be assured by slipping a small rubber band up one of the teeth. Twist a stout hairpin in one end of the loop. The band is concealed when the comb is adjusted and the hairpin helps keep the comb in place as well as to render it unlikely that both comb and hairpin ever can slip from its place unnoticed by the wearer.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE TOOTHLESS.

Chop sliced cucumber fine with chopping knife and bowl and season as usual.

Ratishes may be run twice through a meat chopper and will be relished. Lettuce should be laid smoothly leaf upon leaf; then rolled tightly, placed on a hard-wood slicing board, and shredded with a sharp, thin knife. Cut crosswise, until finely minced, and season to taste. Don't try chopping or grinding lettuce, for it bruises and withers it.

Boiled beets should be chopped fine. A little strong vinegar suffices to pickle. Green corn should be boiled on the ear. With a sharp knife slice off the tips of kernels and scrape with the back of the knife, leaving the husk of kernels on the ear.

When the rest of the dinner is on the table dip meat chopper into hot water so it will not cool the meat; grind a slice of cooked steak or roast and serve immediately.

NEW USE FOR POSTAGE STAMPS.

Turkish Government is to Build a Railway Through Their Sale.

The Turkish Government, in announcing the intended sale of seventeen million postage stamps to collectors, has proceeded to be devoted to building a railway between Damascus and Beirut, is merely following an old-established precedent.

Long ago Spain found the sale of surplus stamps so profitable that she changed her designs every few years, realizing enough upon one occasion to construct a cruiser and several torpedo boats.

St. Helena has up till now kept herself from bankruptcy after a similar fashion. Paraguay provided new uniforms for its by no means insignificant army, upon one occasion, and upon another it added over five million rounds of small-arm ammunition to its reserve. San Marino built itself a hall of justice in 1889, and Rumania a new prison in 1891, the cost in each instance being defrayed by what are known in philatelic circles as "commemorative issues."

The Begum of Bhopal appointed an official whose special duty it was to push the sale of local stamps among dealers and collectors, and invested the proceeds in pearls.

In French Guinea they have, within the last twenty years, sold to outsiders enough stamps, mostly surcharged varieties, to pay for the building of two hospitals, a fort, and a gaol. British Honduras cleared $50,000 a year for many years in succession after a similar fashion, and invested it in attempting to improve the quality of the bananas grown there.

Friendship may have the true ring, but it isn't the kind of ring that is calculated to satisfy the girl who is in love.

SORE FEET

THRILLING EXPERIENCES

SPLENDID FEATS OF HEROISM BY DEEP SEA DIVERS.

Diver Leverett Risked His Life to Save a Comrade—Octopus Attacked a Diver.

Not for the rich spoils of a wreck, however, did Diver Leverett, whose pluck has entitled him to a place amongst the world's heroes, risk his life in the English Channel recently. A comrade's life was in danger. While working in twenty-five fathoms of water the latter's air-pipe and breast-line became entangled. To stay at such a depth under water for more than half an hour was to court death. And yet Leverett, in his anxiety to release his comrade, went down and remained below for two hours, ultimately bringing his mate to the surface, but not until he himself was completely exhausted.

Unfortunately, as some readers may remember, the sequel to this splendid feat of heroism was a somewhat sad one; for Trappell, the rescued diver, who had been five and a half hours in the water, succumbed to the shock a day or two later. No better example, however, of the pluck and comradeship which exist between men engaged in this dangerous calling could be found than that furnished by Leverett's bravery.

To Captain Mattson, of the Swedish barque Flora, all credit is due for his ingenuity and courage. While in the Bay of Biscay the vessel sprang a leak, necessitating repairs from the outside. This the skipper successfully undertook, clothed in an improvised diving-suit, consisting of a large bag, 16 feet long and 2 feet in diameter, made of sail-cloth. This, which was kept in shape by metal rings and provided with arm-axes, sleeves, and a small window, was with its occupant lowered over the vessel's side.

THE GALLANT CAPTAIN

soon located the damage, and despite the proximity of a shark and the fact that he narrowly escaped drowning by the rush of water through a small hole, accomplished his hazardous task in workmanlike fashion.

The dramatic episode in Victor Hugo's romance, "The Toilers of the Sea," was re-enacted in real life when a diver named Palmer, in the employ of the Cape Town Harbor Board, descended to a depth of 35 feet to examine into the damage done by the Dunvegan Castle when she collided with the South Arm Pier. The water was clear, and the diver thought to proceed with his work under favorable conditions; when, suddenly, from behind a dislodged block of concrete shot a hideous tentacle that caught him by the leg. The next moment his arm was gripped, and an octopus, emerging from its lurking-place, flung its other feelers around its luckless victim, who, having no knife, was at the mercy of his pitiless assailant.

Fortunately, Palmer kept his presence of mind; he pulled the signal-cord, and his comrades above commenced to haul him up. Slowly he rose to the surface, whence he emerged with the sea-monster still enfolding him in its gruesome embrace. Relief, in the form of knife and axe, was promptly at hand, and the creature was cut and chopped from its prey. When subsequently measured it was found to be

NEARLY 12 FEET ACROSS.

An equally formidable foe is the shark, which is so much dreaded by divers in the southern seas that few will work save within the bars of an iron cage. Lambert, the diver, when engaged off the island of Diego Garcia upon a coal hulk that had been fouled by a steamer, disclaimed such protection, and might have fallen a victim to his temerity.

When first he descended he was approached by a large shark, curious to inspect the invader of his domains. By opening the escape-valve in his helmet, and allowing some air to rush out, Lambert scared the creature away. Next day, however, it returned, and despite temporary repulses by the diver executing the same manoeuvre with his helmet, continued its visits with such regularity that Lambert resolved to have recourse to more drastic measures.

On the occasion, therefore, of the creature's next visit, he signalled for a sheath-knife and a looped rope. Using his bare hand as a bait, he made the shark turn on its back, when he attacked it with his knife, inflicting several severe wounds. Then, passing the nose of his rope over the fish's body, he signalled for it to be hauled up. As a trophy of his prowess Lambert brought home the shark's backbone.

A LONG-LOST DAGGER.

A diver named Bardi missed a valuable dagger which had been given to him, and was, therefore, highly prized. Some years later, when his loss was well-nigh forgotten, he was at work off the Italian coast on a sunken vessel. His labor was gruesome in the extreme, for the bodies of those who had been drowned remained below. In the cabin he came upon two corpses locked in an embrace of direst hate. One was that of his brother—of whom he had heard nothing for many years—the other that of a woman, in whose breast was buried the blade of his long-lost dagger, whereof the hilt was hidden in her murderer's rigid grasp.

On September 22nd, 1842, two divers, named Jones and Girvan, between whom there had been some ill-feeling, were at work together on the wreck of the Royal George, which foundered off Portsmouth in 1782, when Girvan, who was a very powerful man, made a sudden attack upon his mate. The latter endeavored to escape, but the other, seizing him by the leg, frustrated the attempt.

Desperately did Jones struggle, and at last, with a frantic kick, broke the lens of Girvan's helmet. Through the crack rushed the water, and Girvan, now himself in sore straits, pulled the signal cord. His call was promptly answered, but only just in time, for he was at death's door when hauled up. Three days, however, in Haslar Hospital completely restored him, and the two submarine duellists subsequently worked together in the greatest harmony.—London Tit-Bits.

A PRINCESS OF MYTHS.

Supposed to Have Saved the Life of Captain John Smith.

Princess Pocahontas, the Red Indian girl whose skeleton was supposed to have been unearthed the other day at Gravesend, England, recently, might well be christened the Princess of Myths. For of all the many romantic stories that have gathered, in the course of 400 years, about her name, scarce one has any foundation in fact.

She was not even a princess. Her father, Powhatan, was merely a sub-chief of a small and roving band of savages.

The most romantic reported episode in her career was when she was supposed to have saved from death at the stake the famous Captain John Smith, by interposing her own body between that of the white captive and his would-be executioners. But this story was invented by Smith after the appearance of Pocahontas in England.

Neither is it true that she offered her hand to Smith in marriage. She was, in fact, already married to the chief of a neighboring tribe, from whom she was treacherously stolen by a certain Samuel Argall. As a ransom, seven white captives, with some muskets, axes, and other goods, were sent into the English camp, according to agreement.

Argall kept both the ransom and the girl, and presently, growing tired of her, gave her to one John Rolfe, who had her baptized in the name of Rebecca, afterwards going through a form of marriage with her. Rolfe took her to England in 1616, but she only lived until the year following, dying of consumption at Gravesend on board the vessel that was to have conveyed her to her native land.

In London she was known as the beautiful savage. But La Belle Sauvage Yard, off Ludgate Hill, was not called after her, despite all assertions to the contrary. Neither was she in reality beautiful, but a very ordinary-looking girl indeed.

SAVES LITTLE LIVES.

Most liquid medicines advertised to cure stomach and bowel troubles and summer complaints contain opiates and are dangerous. When the mother gives Baby's Own Tablets to her little one she has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or narcotic. Therefore, she can feel that her little one can equal Baby's Own Tablets in preventing summer complaints or curing them if they come on suddenly. Keep a box of Tablets always at hand—they may save your child's life. Mrs. C. E. Hancock, Raymond, Alta., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for summer complaints, constipation and sleeplessness, and always with the best results." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

YOUR ENORMOUS STRENGTH.

Even those of us who take no interest whatever in physical culture have one set of muscles developed to a remarkable degree. We have been training them unconsciously from our earliest years, till now they can exert a pressure of no less than 300 pounds. Dr. Joseph Head has been making some interesting experiments, and has discovered that to bite a piece of boiled beef we exert a pressure of three pounds. Roast lamb needs four pounds, corned beef twenty, pork twenty-five, and roast beef as much as forty. You can make the experiment very easily for yourself. Take a crust of dry bread, lay it on a table, and place weights upon it till it is crushed. You will find that the weight necessary is about fifteen pounds. Can it be wondered at that we sometimes chip or break a tooth—especially when we substitute for the comparatively soft things mentioned such a hard substance as brittle coffee.

A chick head generates a multitude of thin ideas.

ALL HAIL PE-RU-NA.

A Case of STOMACH CATARRH.

Miss Mary O'Brien, 306 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Peruna cured me in five weeks of catarrh of the stomach, after suffering for four years and doctoring without effect. In common with other grateful ones who have been benefited by your discovery, I say, All hail Peruna."

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes: "I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago. There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured, for I do not feel any more ill effects, have good appetite and am getting fat. So I say, and will say to all, I am cured for good. I thank you for your kindness. Peruna will be our house medicine hereafter."

Catarrh of the stomach is also known in common parlance as dyspepsia, gastritis and indigestion. No medicine will be of any permanent benefit except it removes the catarrhal condition.

Gained Strength and Flesh. Miss Julia Butler, R. R. 4, Appleton, Wis., writes she had catarrh of the stomach, causing loss of sleep and appetite, with frequent severe pains after eating. She took Peruna, her appetite returned, she gained strength, flesh and perfect health.

"BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES."

(By A. Banker.)

At any rate that is the assurance of the popular song; though, as a matter of fact, the tossing, inconsistent waves altogether repudiate any allegiance whatever to her rule. And yet the mighty British Fleet, which under Providence is the defender of our homes against the jealous foreigner, who would fly at our throat if he dare, is a spectacle of stately and imposing masterdom; especially when, as at the great review recently held, a large number of battleships, cruisers, and other craft are assembled together.

Embarking upon the barge of one of the battleships, a large open boat towed by a small stem picket-boat, the visitors invited to witness the review soon have an opportunity of experiencing how futile is the claim of Britannia to rule the waves. For in a very short time the heavy barge is pitching and tossing in a manner which, to those not accustomed to the vagaries of the deep, is distinctly disquieting; especially as, from time to time, a great wave breaks over the bows of the boat, drenching everyone, from stem to stern.

And so it goes on for nearly half an hour, some few of the guests gradually becoming paler and greener, until at length the battleship is reached, and, with some difficulty, the visitors board her. And what a spectacle of massive, stupendous power; and what an amazing and altogether bewildering multiplicity of means of defence does she present. Gigantic cannon, one well-aimed shot sufficient to disable an enemy's vessel miles away, deadly, lethal torpedoes, which, stealthily and rapidly pursuing their unseen course beneath the surface, strike the foe, and in a moment a fine battleship is shattered, and plunges headlong into the deep; innumerable smaller guns, and other weapons of offence; together with most marvellous and complex electrical and other appliances of all kinds for directing and firing the guns and torpedoes from distant parts of the ship.

And now suddenly the cannon roar along the entire line in salute to the King-Emperor of the great British Empire, who in his fine yacht steams slowly between the lines of nearly two hundred battleships, cruisers, gunboats, destroyers, submarines, and other war vessels, manned by five and thirty thousand of Britain's sons; while as each vessel is passed a roar of lusty cheering salutes King Edward.

But the Empire should beware lest,— If drunk with sight of power we loose Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe.

Rather let us as a nation humiliate ourselves before the God of our fathers, Beneath whose awful Hand we hold Dominion over palm and pine.

But if we forget Him; if we refuse to serve and obey His Son who on the agonizing cross made expiation for our sins; then—

Lo, all our pomp of yesterday Is one with Nineveh and Tyre.

COUNTY AND DISTRICT.

The Brooklyn widow who weighs 525 pounds and is still growing should look around soon if she expects to find a man who thinks she is worth her weight in gold.

Don't teach your children that it is a shame to wear worn and patched clothes if you are not able to afford better, but that it is no honor in wearing new ones that are not paid for. A poet said, "Remember, that rags may cover a boy, who will some day be the great world's joy."

Ready On The Shelf.—That's were you'll find Nerviline in every well regulated household. So pleasant to take that even little children will cry for it. So certain to cure coughs, sudden colds and tight chest that thousands of bottles are used every day. Polson's Nerviline does prevent illness, it does, ease pain and inflammation, and by being handy will save worry and keep down the doctor bills. Large bottles sold for a quarter at all dealers.

The Deceased Wife's Sister Bill, which has been a bone of contention between the High Church adherents and the Low Church party for a long time, has at last passed the House of Lords by a substantial majority. The contention of the bishops and the ultra high church peers was that marriage between a widower and his deceased wife's sister was highly improper, the Archbishop of Canterbury, declaring that such unions were incestuous. To the lay mind it appears odd that while it is maintained that it is highly improper for a man to marry his dead wife's sister, it is quite right for a widow to marry her dead husband's brother. It is said that the Late Queen Victoria and the present King Edward strongly favored the passage of the Bill. The Bishops are however not yet convinced and have issued instruction to the clergy not to perform such marriages.

Do Your Ears Ring?—When they buzz and seem slightly deaf, beware of catarrh inflammation. This grows steadily worse, but can be cured by Catarrhazone J. A. Hamill of Greenmount, P. E. I., proved the merit of Catarrhazone and writes: "No one could have worse Catarrh than I had for years. It caused partial deafness, bad taste, upset my stomach, made me sick all over. Catarrhazone cleared my nostrils, stopped the cough and gave me a clear feeling in my breathing organs. I am absolutely cured." Doctors say nothing is better than Catarrhazone. Try it and you'll say so, too. Two sizes, 25c and $1 at all dealers.

The Royal Hotel, Meaford, which was purchased last fall by the temperance people of the town in anticipation of local option coming into force in May, has been leased to hotelkeeper McGirr, who will run it as a regular licensed house. The situation is peculiar because the owners of the premises are opponents of the licensed bar, and some of them are ministers. The local option bylaw failed to carry.

"What constitutes a day's work?" We figure it out that it depends altogether on your occupation. If you lay brick, ten hours; if you preach the gospel two hours; if you are a porter in a sleeping car, twenty hours; if you serve the Government, one hour; and if you are a newspaper man, twenty-four hours.

Youth's Vitality Sapped Away.—Your child looks poorly, is tired and fretful. You would like this boy or girl to be more robust, more energetic and vivacious. The something that is wrong is simply this. Stomach and bowels need attention. Constipation and indigestion must be relieved, new life and vigor are required in the blood, slight assistance is needed for the kidneys and liver. Nothing is so effective as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They put new life into young folks as well as the old ones. Every child should use this medicine regularly because its benefits are not to be had in any other way. 25c at all dealers.

The Dominion Stores, Limited, will build a departmental store in Calgary within a few months. The building will be five stories high, constructed of reinforced concrete and will cost in the neighborhood of one million dollars.

The township of Bentinck, Grey, is in for paying $500 damages to Robert Smyth. While crossing a bridge near Durham, with his traction engine on May 3rd, Smyth, with his outfit, broke through. He tried to settle with the Council but failed and the matter was submitted to arbitration, with the result that Smyth got the above award. The accident was due to defective workmanship on the bridge.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free on request, by Dr. Shoop Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by J. Coates.

Loss of Appetite and Energy.—Singly they are a worry—combined they become a burden, telling that waste has been immensely greater than the body's power to rebuild. The first need is to reconstruct the blood, make good the deficiency of red cells. Ferrozone improves digestion, makes blood, the kind that nourishes and rebuilds. Quickly the nervous system responds to the new power supplied by Nerviline. Strength returns, ambition revives, energy and endurance give the system just what it needs to maintain the balance of health. No tonic better than Ferrozone, 50c per box at all dealers.

Canadian railways have done their share towards filling the cemeteries of the land. For the nine months ending April 1st last, the record is appalling, and shows that 460 persons were killed and 603 injured. Since April 1st, there have been a number of other accidents that have largely increased the number of killed and injured. Is there no means of prevention? Is human life not worth more thoughtful care? Accidents will happen, but carelessness may have a great deal to do with making so large a list of killed and injured in nine months.

PRESENTATION.

Mrs. Hooy, of our town, received a pleasant little surprise last week when her daughters, who were all home to join in the reception of their brother Chas. and his bride, presented her with a couch and the following address:—

Dear Mother,—The privilege of all meeting again in the old home fills our hearts with deepest gratitude to God for His kind care and protection, and especially in sparing to us the one who has spent so many days in loving toil for us, and our hearts are united in a prayer that you may yet be spared to us many years, and that we may each have a part in making bright your remaining days.

We have taken this privilege to present to you this couch, as a small token of our love, and trust that as you rest thereon you will remember that although some of us may be absent from you, you still have the devoted love of each of your children.

The family re-union was a time which will long live in the memory of each participant.

Nothing is more certain than the direct action Ferrozone exerts in female complaints.

It is the best medicine for restoring vitality and strength.

By instilling new life into the blood, every organ in the body is better nourished, and in consequence takes on strength.

Ferrozone's record is marvelous.

It makes you feel strong and sturdy.

Nourishes the weak, rebuilds and restores those in search of better health.

For girls and women, both old and young, Ferrozone can work wonders, as it did for Mrs. Mary Melong, of Harbor Bouche, N. S., who writes:

"Ferrozone built me up."

"Before using it I scarcely knew what good health meant."

"I was just as weak and miserable as any woman could be."

"Tired from morning to night, bothered by trifles, unceasingly nervous."

"The first box of Ferrozone improved my blood, gave me appetite. In a short time I was like a new person. Now I rejoice in abundant good health."

Try Ferrozone. It will make an unexpected improvement in your looks, you feeling, your health.

Whether anaemic, nervous or suffering from secret disorders,—if you want cure, use Ferrozone. Price 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

BE CHEERFUL.

Don't scowl; it spoils faces. Before you know it, your forehead will resemble a small railway map. There is a Grand Trunk line from your cowlick to the bridge of your nose, intersected by parallel lines running east and west, with curves arching your eyebrows, and oh! how much older you look for it! Scowling is a habit which steals upon us unawares. We frown when the light is too strong and when it is too weak. We tie our brows into a knot when we are thinking, and knit them even more tightly when we cannot think. There is no denying there are plenty of things to scowl about; but why scowl? What good will it do? Better cultivate an even temper and maintain a cheerful countenance.

Stomach troubles, Heart and Kidney ailments, can be quickly corrected with a prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The prompt and surprising relief which this remedy immediately brings is entirely due to its Restorative action upon the controlling nerves of the stomach, etc. A weak Stomach, causing dyspepsia, a weak Heart with palpitation or intermittent pulse, always means weak Stomach nerves or weak Heart nerves. Strengthen these inside or controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly these ailments disappear. Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis., will mail samples free. Write for them. A test will tell. Your health is certainly worth this simple trial. Sold by J. Coates.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.
TORONTO.

Receipts of live stock at the city market since last Friday, as reported by the railways, were 90 carloads, composed of 1251 cattle, 476 hogs, 2126 sheep and lambs and 186 calves.

The quality of fat cattle was much the same as has been delivered on the market for several weeks, with one or two exceptions.

Trade was brisk for all approaching good quality, with the common grades slow at unchanged prices.

Exporters—Few exporters were on sale, but there was one lot of 14, the best on the market for some time, brought in by E. McConvey, weighing 1340 lbs each, that were bought to fill a special order, by Maybee, Wilson & Hall, at $6 per cwt. These cattle were equal in quality to the best Chicago cattle and are being shipped to Bermuda. Export bulls were quoted at $3.25 to $4.50 per cwt. It must be remembered that this sale is no criterion to go by, as there were no other cattle on the market approaching them in quality.

Butchers—Picked lots were reported at $4.75; best loads, $4.25 to $4.60; medium $3.75 to $4.15; common at $3.25 to $3.60, cows $2 to $3.75; canners $1 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers—Few feeders or stockers are being offered. There is a demand for distillery cattle, steers at $3.25 to $3.50, bulls at $2.25 to $2.50.

Milk Cows—Several Montreal buyers looking for choice milkers and springers caused a good trade for the best class, but common inferior cows were slow of sale. Prices for the best ranged from $40 each while common to medium ranged from $25 to $35 each.

Veal Calves—There was a good demand for the best class of veal calves; prices ranged from $3 to $6.25, with a few choice new milk-fed calves at $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts were large, export ewes selling at $4.25 to $4.40; rams at $3 to $3.50; lambs $4.50 to $5.75 per cwt.

Hogs—The run was light. Mr. Harris reports prices unchanged at $6.12 for select and $5.87 for lights and fats. Packers are complaining of the quality of hogs being marketed. There are far too many light pigs and pigs with coarse heavy frames, that are unfinished, coming on the market. Packers are determined to remedy this by discriminating in price against both these classes. Drovers will do well to leave all such hogs with the farmer to finish.

COMMUNICATION.

Dear Sir:—I am going to stay by my name as it appeared in your columns three weeks ago "A Lover of Right." You must not, however, believe that it does me good to air my grievances. I do it that some one may be benefited.

The episode which appeared over my signature three weeks back has I believe had its effect. It has called forth expressions from men which have shown the stand they take on this vital question of "Sunday work" and believe me, sir, I find that we have some good, stout hearts beating beneath the rough exterior of many of our fellow citizens.

Believing therefore that I have the good wishes of many who will read this article, let me then use your valuable space to call the attention of your readers to a "moral failure" which possesses many of our otherwise good citizens. I refer to the relationship which exists between man and the lower animals.

We are glad to know that we have some who have a tender spot in their heart for the unfortunate "dumb brute." We are also glad that we have those whose interest is great enough to compel those who have not the necessary requisites which distinguishes the real man from the brute; to compel them to observe the laws of the land which says that man may not abuse the dumb brute.

Let me call the readers' attention to this fact abuse does not mean the laying on the whip alone. I does not necessarily mean to be heavily worked. It means the lack of tenderness and above all the lack of proper care. In horses especially many failures are due to neglect of proper and sufficient food. A horse will stand a good deal of abuse if properly fed. How cruel on man's part to refuse the food, and then lay on the whip because the work is not done.

Let me call your attention to what I witnessed in Mildmay last week. I saw a team of horses standing, attached to a wagon load of chop, in one of our hotel sheds at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. At five o'clock they were still there,—at 7.30 they were still there and at 10 o'clock, instead of quietly feeding in the old home stall, the poor brutes were still standing attached to the wagon. And yet there might possibly be an excuse for this. There are times when such treatment could not be helped, but on this occasion there was none. How do I know? because in front of the bar of that hotel stood the owner of the team filling up on his beloved "booze."

This is not a new thing in Mildmay. I wish it were because then there would be time to stop it, but men are being hardened to it. Passers by do not even cast a pitying glance at the poor helpless animal that patiently stands in heat or cold, rain or snow, waiting for his master to satisfy his brute craving.

Sir, there is law against this. Where is our constable. His duty would be to take the horses thus abused, stable and feed them, and charge the same to the owner. His duty is more than this. It is to summons the owner before a court of Justice, where Justice would be twice meted; to the dumb brute, and, to the owner. Some one says the hotel stable is a fine thing for the town. It is if we make proper use of it. It is a shame to the town if such men, as I have described, are going to use it to cover up their sin.

Is there anyone who will speak up for that most faithful and useful animal—the horse—which cannot speak for itself? What tales of neglect and abuse by thoughtless man he could tell you if he could speak. But no, he bears it all. Not because he likes it, but because he has no friend to take his part. Yes, I love right, and as our domestic animals have a claim upon us for our protection instead of abuse, I will always be the first to condemn cruelty, and to raise my hand to protect the helpless. Thanking you for this space, I remain

SIMPLE HOME RECEIPT.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissue of the kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture; yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach and other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

A druggist here at home when asked stated that he could either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription for our readers, also recommends it as harmless.

A despatch from Harrisburg, Penn., reports as follows:—Confidence in a dream probably averted a big wreck on the Northern Central Railroad. Previous to reporting for duty at the roundhouse, Engineer Jas. Burd, who hauls the Buffalo flyer leaving Harrisburg at 11.10 p. m., dreamed that his train had run into a landslide at a point between Dauphin and Halifax, fifteen miles from Harrisburg. He told his dream to several roundhouse attaches, but they laughed at him. Engineer Burd, to ease his mind, determined to run slowly after passing. So, speeding his train up to the limit till Dauphin was passed, Burd slowed up, and it was well he did, for at a point some distance north of Dauphin, identical with the place he had seen in his dream, the engine plowed into a landslide. Going slowly, the engineer was able to bring his train to a stop with little or no damage.

PANDORA RANGE

A convenience much appreciated by every owner of a Pandora is the towel rod attached to the range. As one-third of the rod is made of emery, it makes a splendid knife sharpener, too.

It's always there handy for you. You need waste no time hunting around for the easily misplaced "steel." Bright idea, eh?

An accurate thermometer is a reliable guide to successful baking, while an inaccurate one is a "cheat" of the worst kind.

Every Pandora thermometer is carefully adjusted and undergoes a practical test by heat—is proven correct before being sent out.

The figures, which show the required degree of heat necessary for the successful baking of bread, cakes, pies, etc., are plainly inscribed in black on a white enamel surface, so that they are easily readable, even when the day is dull.

If your local dealer does not sell the Pandora, write direct for free booklet.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

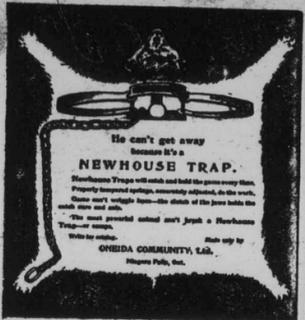

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Bright's or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

The parrot, that garrulous pet, is generally supposed to have the monopoly of the power of talking among birds, but, as a matter of fact, the parrot's voice is decidedly inferior to that of the mynah. There are always examples of these birds in the large aviary of the London Zoo, and they repeat various phrases with great clearness of utterance. Curiously enough, the hen has a gruff voice, while the cock speaks in a clear, high tone like that of a child. The mynahs can be easily provoked into showing off their power of speech, and will greet the visitor with "Good morning!" in response to his salutations. The mynah is a kind of starling, and this latter bird is well known for its imitative powers.

Its Power Grows With Age.—How many medicines loudly blazoned as panaceas for all human ills have come and gone since Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil was first put upon the market? Yet it remains, doing more good to humanity than many a preparation more highly vaunted and extending its virtues wider and wider and in a larger circle every year. It is the medicine of the masses.

A wealthy lady gave a reception in honor of her daughter's birthday, for which music was furnished by a popular orchestra. The leader of this orchestra was a violinist who had won social as well as professional success, and the hostess evidently wished to display her knowledge of this fact. When the evening was half over, the butler approached the musicians, who were having a short rest, and in his loftiest manner said, referring to a paper in his hand: "The violin cats in the dining-room; the rest of the instruments in the pantry."

ARMY PIGEONS ABOLISHED.

Birds Sold and Lotts Destroyed by Order of English War Office.

For some reason as yet unexplained the British War Department has abolished its carrier pigeons. Many of the birds were presented by patriotic pigeon owners, and under the direction of Captain Allatt interesting and valuable experiments have been carried on. The birds have now been sold and the lotts destroyed.

In Germany and France the number of pigeons kept for military purposes was never greater than now, and the English naval authorities still maintain their lotts at Portsmouth and Devonport, under Lieutenant Barrett.

As it will be many years before small, scattered sections of an army can carry their own wireless telegraph apparatus, it is difficult to assign a reason for the action of the military authorities.

A Recognized Regulator.—To bring the digestive organs into symmetrical working is the aim of physicians when they find a patient suffering from stomachic irregularities, and for this purpose they can prescribe nothing better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which will be found a pleasant medicine of surprising virtue in bringing the refractory organs into subjection and restoring them to normal action, in which condition only can they perform their duties properly.

"Don't be afraid, Harold," the lady said; "that lion is stuffed." "Yes," said Harold, "but maybe he isn't stuffed so full that he couldn't find room for a little boy like me."

If attacked with cholera or summer complaint of any kind send at once for a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial and use it according to directions. It acts with wonderful rapidity in subduing that dreadful disease that weakens the strongest man and that destroys the young and delicate. Those who have used this cholera medicine say it acts promptly and never fails to effect a thorough cure.

"I always try to practice charity," said Miss Passy. "My motto is, 'Do unto all men as you would have them do unto you.'" "Gracious!" exclaimed Miss Park. "You don't really kiss them, do you?"

Spots and blotches on the face and neck are often merely signs of foul blood. Apply Weaver's Derate to obtain immediate relief and take Weaver's Syrup to rid the blood of pollution.

"You're extravagant," said the uncle. "These cigars are a lot better than the ones I smoked at your age." "Yes," muttered his nephew, in a ill-concealed aside, "they're a lot better, than those you smoke now."

Suffer no More.—There are thousands who live miserable lives because dyspepsia dulls the faculties and shadows existence with the cloud of depression. One way to dispel the vapors that taint the victims of this disorder is to order them a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are among the best vegetable pills known, being easy to take and are most efficacious in their action. A trial of them will prove this.

DISASTERS FROM FIREWORKS.

Five Explosions Occurred in Italy in One Month.

Fatal accidents in fireworks factories are so alarmingly on the increase in Italy that politicians are being inundated with petitions from all quarters to devise special preventive legislation. As is generally known, Italy has an enormous inland trade in fireworks, and in the southern provinces and Sicily pyrotechnic displays form an indispensable item in every sort of public rejoicing.

During last month alone five terrible explosions were recorded through carelessness in the process of manufacture, costing in each case the lives of from one to five persons. The other day two further mishaps swelled the list of victims.

Several hundredweights of gunpowder blew up at a factory in the commune of Saint Antonio, in the suburbs of Naples, killing three workmen and inflicting fatal injuries on seven others. The explosion was so terrific as to set fire to a big storage of hemp nearly a mile away.

The other disaster occurred at Lecce, where a large consignment of fireworks ready for a popular festival, exploded. Of three brothers, partners in the firm, who happened to be standing near, one was blown to pieces and the other two were horribly lacerated.

Roofing Right

Put them on with no tools but a hammer and tinner's shears,—can't go wrong. They lock on all four sides, are self-draining and water-shedding on any roof with three or more inches pitch to the foot. Make buildings fire-proof, weatherproof and proof against lightning. Cost least in the long run. Made of 28-gauge toughened sheet steel—only one quality used and that the best—bent cold and double-galvanized. Last longer with no painting than any other metal shingles heavily-painted. Guaranteed in every way until 1932. Ought to last a century. Cheap as wood shingles in first cost; far cheaper in the long run. "Oshawa" Galvanized Steel Shingles cost only $4.50 a square, 10 ft. x 10 ft. Tell us the area of any roof and hear our tempting offer for covering it, with the cheapest roof you can really afford to buy. THE ENGINEER'S STORY HINDUS BEATEN BY WHITES

Swears That Train Was Travelling at Rate of Less Than 20 Miles. Driven From U. S. Territory They Make for Canada.

A despatch from Toronto says: There is every indication that the investigation into the cause of the Caledon disaster is to be a very thorough one. The principal evidence was that adduced by Engineer Hodge, who was driving the train.

Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., appeared on behalf of Engineer; Mr. Angus McMurphy represented the C. P. R., and Ccuny Crown Attorney McFadden, of Peel, appeared on behalf of the Crown.

THE ENGINEER'S STORY.

George Hodge, the engineer of the wrecked train, was called, and immediately he got on the stand his counsel, Mr. Robinette, K. C., had entered a formal objection to Hodge giving evidence, so as to obtain the protection of the court concerning anything which he might say to incriminate himself.

"I think," said the coroner, "it would be well to allow the witness to give his evidence in this way, that if he objects to answer a question, because it might incriminate him, then he has the protection which he craves. That answer could not be used against him."

"At the same time," remarked the coroner to Hodge, "you are not excused from answering any question which may be asked you here."

"I am quite satisfied with that," Mr. Robinette replied.

The examination of Hodge was then proceeded with. He deposed: "I left Markdale at 7.34, and had a good run to Orangeville, which we reached at 8.55. There were three cars added there and we left between 9.05 a.m. and 9.06 a.m. We reached Caledon at 9.20, and received an order to run one hour late of the original schedule. We left Caledon at 9.21, and before reaching the slow board, I slowed down and shut off steam. I applied the brakes about a quarter of a mile from where the accident occurred, and I felt the brake held. This made a reduction of 7 lbs.

on the air pressure of the brake, which was sufficient, in my opinion, to steady the train. Just before the accident was about to release the brakes."

"Did you release the brakes?"

"No, sir. Not intentionally."

Describing the accident, Hodge said he felt the engine give a sudden lurch, and found himself out on the ground. Hodge explained that at the time the engine gave a lurch he was thrown to the north, and as he had his hand on the brake it would have the effect of releasing the brake.

HODGE'S EXPERIENCE.

Replying to Mr. Robinette, Hodge said he had been acting as engineer of a freight train since January of this year, but had had experience as a fireman since December, 1902. He had only previously to last Tuesday run one passenger train over this line. He was between 23 and 24 years of age.

In answer to Mr. McFadden he said: "I took one train up the night before. There were passengers on it. That was the only passenger train I had run over this line."

BRAKES WORKED WELL.

The brakes were working well. H examined the brake after the accident and he could not find anything to account for the accident.

"What do you think yourself was the cause of the accident?"

"I couldn't say."

"The engine was all right?"

"Yes."

"And the roadbed was all right?"

"Yes."

Between Caledon and the slow board 20 miles an hour was the highest speed reached.

Replying to a juror, witness said he had been on continuous duty since 10.15 the previous night. He had had a good rest the previous day. His hours work average 9 or 10.

The coroner pointed out that the witness had already been working about seven hours at the time of the accident.

despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: Six Hindus, badly beaten and treated by a mob, are in the hospital at Bellingham, Washington; 400 are being held in the jail and public buildings, and 150 beaten, hungry and naked, are on their way to British Columbia. These are the results of a large outbreak of local sentiment in the United States town on Wednesday evening.

The trouble started in the Pelly Street district, which is filled with Hindustani houses. These houses were broken out, and the occupants driven down to the waterfront and the streets swelled the mob.

Hindus, and those of them who return to work will do so armed. The explanation given of the affair is that every day the whites in mills are being replaced by blacks. It is said that the Hindus have become insolent, pushing women into the gutter and insulting them on the street cars.

"Drive out the Hindus" was the cry to which the mob marched on Wednesday night.

RIOT IN VANCOUVER.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: The campaign against Oriental labor has taken a new and sinister turn in this city. Saturday evening a gang of the men from Bellingham, across the border, in the State of Washington, came to Vancouver and organized a parade with the intention of making trouble. There were some thirty of them, and reinforced by a large number of hoodlums, they proceeded to the Chinese and Japanese quarter and began to raid the stores and assault the Orientals. Property was damaged and many people stabbed and otherwise injured, while it taxed the efforts of the police force and the entire fire brigade to keep the mob from burning up the Chinese and Japanese quarters. Several arrests were made after a strenuous time between the mob and the officers who took the men.

EXPRESS TRAIN WRECKED.

Twelve Persons Killed at Norris, Indiana.

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 6.—Twelve persons were killed and twelve others injured in the wreck of an express train on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad at Norris, Iowa, on Friday. The express train, northbound, jumped the track while going at full speed, and crashed into a freight train standing on the siding. All of the dead and injured were in the smoking car, which was immediately behind the baggage and mail cars. The smoking car was demolished. The northbound express was ten minutes late at Norris, where the freight train was awaiting. The express came along at terrific speed in an effort to make up time. Just as the locomotive of the passenger train was about to pass the freight locomotive, the trucks of the former left the tracks, and the moving engine crashed into the engine of the freight, wrecking both locomotives and telescoping the baggage and the mail cars, and demolishing the smoking car.

WEAK SPOT IN THE LAW.

Eighteen Chinese Cause Government Officials Worry.

A despatch from Ottawa says: There are eighteen Chinese in custody in Sydney who are providing a puzzle for the chief controller of Chinese immigration at Ottawa, and who seem to have hit upon a flaw in the fabric of Canadian law. The Chinese came ashore from the schooner Colorus, which brought them from Newfoundland. The captain alleged that they escaped. They were seized by the customs officials as smuggled goods, and are now in jail. The law provides that the Chinese who enter Canada irregularly may be placed in jail for a year, but it makes no further provision regarding them. No authority is given to deport. It is not considered good policy to keep eighteen Chinese in jail for a year and then give them their liberty, without even the payment of the 500 entrance fee. A year in jail is hardly considered a qualification for permanent Canadian residence. The only thing apparently that can be done to keep the Chinese until a law may be passed next session for their deportation, and then send them back.

WOLVES TORE BOY'S ARM.

Accident to a Little Lad in Winnipeg Menagerie.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Walter Brewer, a lad of 9 years of age, met with a painful injury on Tuesday afternoon at River Park by having one of his arms nearly torn to shreds by wolves that are in the menagerie there. The little fellow was feeding one of the animals some grass through the wires, and in taking the grass a wolf took the boy's thumb into his mouth and bit it so that it made the blood flow. This gave the beast a taste of blood and made it savage for more. Three or four other wolves which were in the enclosure attacked the boy's arm, and before aid could be summoned they had terribly lacerated it. A man came to the relief and beat the wolves off. The boy was sent to St. Boniface Hospital. The doctors fear that the arm will have to be amputated.

G. T. P. CONSTRUCTION.

Report Shows Good Progress in Various Sections.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A report received by the Government on Friday as to the progress of construction on the G. T. Pacific Railway up to the end of August shows that the steel had been laid for 124 miles westward from Portage la Prairie, of which 87 miles is ballasted, one-fifth of the grading between Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie is completed, while from the latter point to Saskatoon 85 per cent. is finished. The company has 1,100 men and 800 teams at work on the 462 miles between Winnipeg and Saskatoon. The company could employ many more men, as large numbers of laborers have left to take part in the harvest for which higher wages are paid.

ABOUT TO WED; TOOK HIS LIFE.

Prospective Bridegroom Suicides at Kingston.

A despatch from Kingston says: A derided despondent by financial troubles, Harry Nicholson, an Englishman about thirty years old, committed suicide by shooting on Friday, at 11 o'clock, the eve of his wedding to a Montreal girl. Deceased, who had no relatives in this country, was a marble worker and had a shop here. He came from Montreal, where he dealt in musical instruments, and gave lessons the mandolin. A letter from Montreal signed "Minnie" was found in pocket.

CRASHED THROUGH BRIDGE.

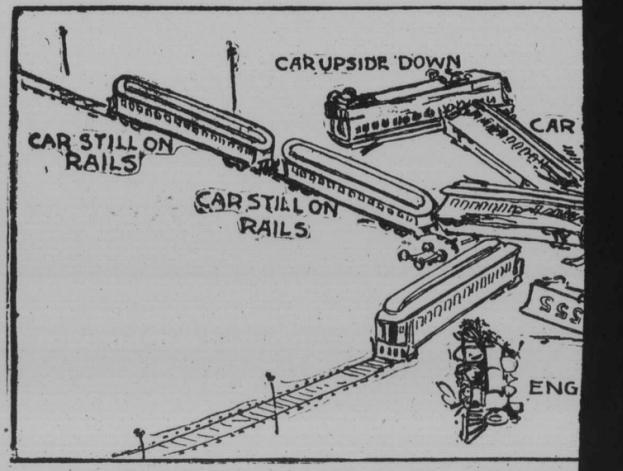

Thomas Clark, Driver of Traction Engine, Killed.

A despatch from Brantford says: Thomas Clark, farmer, of Brant township, was killed on Wednesday morning by being crushed to death by a traction engine which he was driving and which crashed through the bridge over Fairchild's Creek on the Hamilton road, five miles east of here. He was pinned under the engine in the way. Clark was unmarried and 32 years of age.

FIVE YEARS FOR BRIBERY.

San Francisco Man Sent to Prison for Bribing Civic Official.

A despatch from San Francisco says: Louis Glass, Vice-President of the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Company, convicted of having bribed Supervisor Longan to vote against granting a franchise to the Home Telephone Company, was on Wednesday sentenced by Superior Judge Lawlor to five years imprisonment in the State prison at San Quentin.
