BEAVER FLOUR

THE BLENDED FLOUR

Compare a Loaf of "Beaver" Flour Bread With One Made of Western Wheat Flour

You never realized what a difference there could be in quality. "Beaver" Flour loaf is compact like cake—the texture is fine—smooth, even, regular—the color beautifully white—the crust, a rich, crisp brown—the taste, real homemade. Western wheat loaf is full of holes—texture, coarse—the color seems gray compared with the snowy whiteness of "Beaver" Flour bread—and the flavor is almost tasteless.

"Beaver" Flour has a quality all its own, because it is a blended flour. It is Ontario fall wheat flour—with just enough Manitoba spring wheat flour to increase the strength and make the dough stand up in the oven.

It is this combination—arrived at by years of experimenting and testing—that gives "Beaver" Flour both quality and quantity.

It is because "Beaver" Flour is a true blended flour and made of the best wheat in the world, that it is equally good for bread and pastry, and best for both.

"Beaver" Flour is immeasurably superior to any western wheat flour for all kinds of baking. You can prove this to your complete satisfaction, the very first time you use it for Bread, Rolls, Biscuits, Cakes, Pies or Pastry.

WEDDED AT LAST!

CHAPTER III.

"Never mind, mother darling," Jack said soothingly. "Uncle Gilbert will tell us."

"Ah, but he will tell it so differently!" she moaned. "I must—I must—tell you—"

She struggled into a sitting posture again, resting on Shirley's shoulder and supported in her arms, and began to speak hurriedly, yet faintly, making pitiful efforts to gather her strength.

"It was so long ago—in Scotland—and I was so young," she said brokenly. "I did not know—who could have guessed?—it was all like a play—and—no church—and— Her voice failed, her head fell back wearily.

"I cannot—I cannot!" she said pitifully, as her eyes went from one to the other wildly; and Shirley bent down, tears falling as she did so, to utter some soothing words.

"Never mind, dear, we shall know by and by. Meanwhile lie still and rest; you are so weary."

"So weary—yes. We have travelled a long way, you know; but we can rest now," murmured the dying lips, with the ghost of a smile passing over them. "Rest—you know the doctor said I was to rest. There was some one who—who was very kind, Shirley. I could not walk, you know."

"You mean the gentleman who carried you to the boat, mother. Am I to thank him for you?"

"Yes, thank him and the doctor."

The painful eager look was fading from her face now; she seemed to have forgotten the story which but a few minutes before she was so anxious to tell them. She lay back on her pillows calmly enough, and the smile which had crept to her lips crept up yet further into the depths of her dark eyes.

"I can smell the heather," she said clearly and sweetly. "Cannot you Rowland? How sweet it is! Listen—how prettily the beck murmurs among the stones!"

There was a silence; the dawn crept higher over the eastern sky and a faint roseate tinge stole into the dark gray. Over the beautiful face on the pillows the shadow of death crept slowly and darkly.

"They say that I am his wife," she said then, with a sudden pitiful cry of pain; "but that is impossible. I was not married, Rowland—tell me I am not his wife."

The two pairs of watching eyes met across the pillows, the blue ones dim with tears, the hazel eyes wide and started and miserable.

"What does she mean?" Shirley whispered.

"Nothing, dear—she wanders," Jack answered, a new gravity and tenderness on his boyish face.

"Not his wife—oh, no, we never went to church!" continued Marian Ross, in her low feeble tones. "But you are my husband, Rowland!"

"She thinks she is talking to father," Jack said tremulously. "Mother, don't you know us? Don't you know Shirley and Jack?"

"Shirley?" she repeated vacantly. "Little Shirley and Jack! Jack, take care of your sister, or she will fall!"

She had gone back to their childhood, Shirley guessed, as the great hot tears fell on the soft dark hair, and the girl's whole frame trembled with the violence of her emotion.

The minutes slipped by. Jack went to the window and drew back the curtain; a streak of morning sunshine, the herald of a fine day, fell across the carpet and touched the foot of the bed.

Suddenly the large dark eyes opened; the painful eager, puzzled look had faded from them, and they had become dim and glassy; but they smiled.

"Never mind," she said, in a faint clear, happy tone. "Shirley will not judge her mother; I do not mind Shirley. It is getting dark now, and I am going home. It is dark—so dark!"

Dark! And the sun's rays were streaming into the room in a flood of golden light! But she could not see it, for she had gone home.

Gone home, without telling the secret which had weighed upon her for a score of years, without warning her daughter against the fate which had fallen upon her! Ah if she could have seen into the future, she could not have gone home with that peaceful smile upon her face.

tion that I should not hesitate about accepting it!"

As he spoke, Guy Stuart poured out a second cup of coffee, sugared and creamed it with due deliberation, and proceeded to discuss his breakfast, as if it were of far more importance than the subject under consideration, while the other man, his friend and host, Sir Hugh Glynn, sitting opposite to him at the long dining table, looked meditatively at a note lying before him.

"Of course, it is very civil and all that," he said, in rather a plaintive tone; "but we are quite strangers in this part of the world, and we no not know what we should be committing ourselves to by accepting."

"At the most to a few days of congenial society," Major Stuart answered carelessly—"and perhaps bad dinners."

"The last is a very serious condition. My predecessor here had evidently some notion of comfort and good cooking. The cook has been at Maxwell for twenty years, the butler tells me, and I hope she may remain here for twenty more. Those cutlets she gave us last night," continued Sir Hugh, in his languid, rather drawing voice, "made mutton seem like meat from some other sphere."

Major Stuart laughed; he did not possess his friend's delicate appreciation of the art of cookery, and to him Brillat-Savarin was nothing more or less than rather a contemptible gourmand.

"The cutlets were very good, and so is this game-pie," he said carelessly, still devoting himself to the fortification of his inner man. "Will the answer to Sir Gilbert's note, then hinge on the abilities of his cook?"

"I am afraid we shall not be able to ascertain what his or her abilities may be," replied Sir Hugh, laughing. "It is more likely to hinge in his woman-kind, if one could find out anything about them."

"I should think that pretty easy."

They must be people of some consequence about here—and your servants are all old stagers; I have no doubt they know all about them."

"Fairholme is about seven miles from here," Sir Hugh said meditatively; "so that I could ride over and see how things went on here—and certainly it would be a change. Aren't you getting just a little bit tired of my society, Guy?"

"Not a bit." Major Stuart answered demurely. "I have not had a glimpse of you for nearly three years, remember, until that lucky meeting at King's Cross."

"A lucky meeting for me!" said Sir Hugh cordially. "To think that you had returned, and that you had been in England for nearly three months without giving me a notion of your existence! It was too bad, Stuart!"

"My dear fellow"—and Major Stuart's dark gray eyes, with a warm kindly light in their depths, went across the breakfast table to Sir Hugh's handsome face—"I could not discover your whereabouts. You were to be heard of everywhere; but whenever I followed you up, you had disappeared like a meteor. Sir Hugh Glynn is evidently a person of some importance in the world of fashion and distinction."

Sir Hugh laughed carelessly. He was a singularly handsome man, with a complexion as fair as any girl's; wide, sleepy blue eyes, a heavy fair moustache, and soft fair hair. His movements were slow, listless, and languid, and had he been a man of less size and presence, the charge of effeminacy might have been laid at his door.

"Well, what are we to do about this invitation?" he said, reverting to the subject once more. "Sir Gilbert evidently takes it for granted that we are tired of our own society, and should like a change. He says he would call if he were not laid up with the gout, but that his son called a day or two since. I don't remember the circumstance."

"Don't you? I do. It was the day we went into Dumfries. On our return we found his card in the hall, and Martin said he had ridden over. He is in the—the Hussars."

"Oh, well, I wish her ladyship would let us have her men and a list of the members of her household," said the young baronet laughing. "I find that ladies who have marriageable daughters are generally very civil to me, Stuart, and I dare say you have found the same."

"If Hugo mio, you forget. I am not a baronet with an unlimited rent-roll," answered Major Stuart, laughing.

"Unlimited! I find mine limited enough," Sir Hugh said lightly. "I assure you that I did not find old Uncle Robert's legacy come at all amiss. It added this place and nearly five thousand a year to my possessions, and I needed it."

"Not a legacy to be despised," observed Guy Stuart. "At the same time, you could have done quite well without it! However, you'll be able to give us some good grouse shooting here in the season, and you must be content to submit to the feminine maternal persecution which invariably follows such an eligible unmarried man as yourself." And again Guy Stuart's eyes, with a laugh in their depths, sought his friend's face, and Sir Hugh, meeting the glance, laughed also.

Thursday's Proceedings.

The District Councils of Fogo, Trinity and Bonavista met yesterday; meetings were also held this morning.

The following Resolutions were passed yesterday:

RESOLUTION 1.

Protest Against Honourables S. D. Blandford and D. Morrison being Longer Retained in the Government.

WHEREAS Hon. D. Morrison, Minister of Justice, and the Hon. Sydney Blandford, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, both members of the Executive Council, were defeated by very large majorities in the General Election held in October last, but still continue to hold their offices,

AND WHEREAS it is a violation of sound constitutional practice that persons not members of the Government should be Ministers of His Excellency the Governor, or the holders of Ministerial offices.

AND WHEREAS if elections for the vacant offices be not soon proclaimed the inclemency of winter weather may be advanced for an excuse for further delay;

RESOLVED that the aforesaid offices should not longer be held by the present incumbents.

That their successors should be appointed at once.

That the elections should be held without delay.

That failure to act in this matter with expedition will be regarded as a violation of sound principles and public right.

That a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to His Excellency the Governor.

Passed unanimously Dec. 4th, 1913.

W. F. COAKER,
President F.P.U.

RESOLUTION 2.

Amendments of Election Act.

WHEREAS the present method of counting ballots under the Election Act, results in great delay in announcing results, and this is disturbing to public business,

AND WHEREAS the system exposes the ballots to danger of loss or injury, and the result may at any election occur that the expense of a contest in a Constituency may have to be repeated,

AND WHEREAS the law does not provide for adequate identification of ballots, or sufficiently for the protection of boxes on their way to the Returning Officer after Elections;

RESOLVED that the Election Act, 1913, should be amended.

That counting should take place in the booths immediately at the close thereof.

That ballots should be perforated immediately before use, with special machines provided for that purpose.

That the boxes on their way to the Returning Officer should be accompanied by agents nominated by opposing sides and appointed by the Returning Officer.

That Candidates personally be prohibited from entering the private voting room when illiterate voters are voting.

Passed unanimously, Dec. 4th, 1913.

W. F. COAKER,
President F.P.U.

The Supreme Council will meet to-day at 3 p.m., and to-night several Liberal and Union Members of the House of Assembly will address the Convention. Several additional delegates arrived yesterday and last night the Hall was packed with members, seven-eighths of whom were delegates.

A meeting of the Shareholders of the Trading Company was held last night and another will be held to-night.

The officers of the Supreme Council will be elected to-day.

RESOLUTION 3.

Redistribution.

WHEREAS the area of several existing Electoral divisions is so extensive as to make canvassing and representation thereof a very onerous undertaking,

AND WHEREAS the local needs of large districts are frequently very much diversified, and those of one portion sometimes adverse to those of other portions,

AND WHEREAS under the present system an elector in one district may be entitled to vote for three candidates while in another an elector may only be entitled to vote for one candidate,

AND WHEREAS in view of the existing method of voting money on a sectarian basis for Education, sectarian representation is a matter of denominational importance;

RESOLVED that in the opinion of this Council,

(1) The Legislature should enact a measure for the redistribution of Seats in the Assembly,

(2) That such a measure should provide for one member Constituencies,

(3) That two additional seats—or 38 in all—should be provided for to give a fair proportion to the Protestant people,

(4) That in thirteen of these constituencies the Roman Catholic Electors should be in a majority,

(5) That in twenty-five of these constituencies the Protestant Electors should be in a majority.

That a copy of these Resolutions be forwarded to the Premier, with a request that a Bill should be introduced into the Assembly by the Government.

Hunter Tread by a Bear

BEATS OFF CLIMBING BUIN WITH RIFLE BUTT.

New York, Nov. 27.—Charles German, one of a party of hunters, who have been in camp near Rocky Hill, returned to his home at Newton, N. J., yesterday with a thrilling tale of how he was tamed by a brown bear on Monday afternoon.

German was in camp alone, he says, when he saw the bear. He fired, but missed and the bear charged him. German climbed a tree, taking his rifle.

The bear started up the tree, but German hit it on the nose with the butt of his rifle and the bear dropped. Several times more the bear attempted the climb, only to feel the rifle across his nose. Then it sat down and waited.

German believed he would freeze to death, but the bear grew weary of waiting and trotted off. The hunter then escaped.

Moral Sense.

Appropos of a scandal in the New York Bar, Bishop Winston C. Rutherford told the following story:

The morals of the New York Bar seem to be about like the morals of Colonel Byrne, no better and no worse.

Colonel Byrne, a Kentuckian, defended a man for murder. It was testified that this man murdered a woman on the night of August 30th. Two or three witnesses saw the deed. It was committed under the milky light of a full moon.

The witnesses were able to identify the defendant on account of the brilliance of the moonlight. The defendant could not prove an alibi, and things looked pretty bad for him.

But at this point Colonel Byrne produced an almanac showing that on the night in question there had been no moon whatever. Thereupon a great laugh resounded through the court room, and the defendant was speedily acquitted.

Colonel said the defendant, afterwards, how much do I owe you?

You owe me, the Colonel answered, five hundred dollars.

And that pretty steep.

No—not when you consider that only get one hundred out of it.

Why, what did you do with the other four hundred, Colonel? Bribe the jury?

No, sir! shouted Colonel Byrne. hply, No, sir! Do you think I have no moral sense? It cost me four hundred dollars, sir, to get that almanac printed.

No Snow Up West.

From passengers who arrived in the city by yesterday's express we learn that there is practically no snow west of Clareville. All along the line fine weather prevails, and there is very little snow in the vicinity of the Top-sails. Very few deer were seen, and according to reports game in general has been very scarce during the week.

Wedding Bells.

MOLLOY-LUNDRIGAN.
On Wednesday, November 26th, a very happy marriage took place at St. Shott's, Trepassy, between Miss Josephine Molloy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Molloy, of St. Shott's, and Mr. Tobias Lundrigan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lundrigan, Peter's River. The matrimonial ceremony was administered in a very solemn manner by Rev. Father Renouf, P.P., of Trepassy, at the residence of the bride's father, at 8 p.m. The bride was handsomely attired in a suit of azure blue with veil and wreath, and was assisted by her three cousins, Miss Mary Finlay, Miss Catherine Finlay and Miss Annie Molloy. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Wm. Molloy, brother of the bride, Mr. Francis Lundrigan, cousin of the groom and Mr. Thos. Finlay. After the ceremony a very pleasant entertainment took place between an assembly of upwards of seventy, and dancing being kept up till near noon the following day—every one enjoyed themselves vigorously. Mr. and Mrs. Lundrigan left for their home at Peter's River on Saturday, November 29th, accompanied by a great many friends and relatives. For their future we extend heartiest wishes.—Com. ### McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, Dec. 5th, 1913.
If you feel that you need a simple tonic—and many people feel so at the beginning of winter—something that will not in any way interfere with the daily round of duties, and that will yet gradually but surely build up the system from the inside, you need not go any further than our Quinine and Iron Tonic. This medicine has now been before the public for the past three or four seasons and with the increasing confidence of its members. McMurdo's Quinine and Iron Tonic contains nothing in the least degree likely to cause inconvenience to even the most delicate stomach, and is in all cases followed by improvement in the appetite, and bracing of the nerves. Price 40c. a bottle.
"Field Violets Talcum for mine" is an expression we often hear. We fully agree with the sentiment, for this talcum powder is unequalled by any talcum we have—except perhaps its twin, Lazell's Massita. Price 25 cents a tin.

Criticism Ungenerous.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In a communication published in your paper this evening, your correspondent in criticising the play entitled "Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner," was, I think, somewhat ungenerous. In the first place he might have regard to the fact that the performance was given by amateurs for a charitable purpose. With this in mind would it not have been better taste to have waited till after the second performance, before making adverse criticism respecting the costumes. He should have remembered that we have no theatrical costumier at our doors, and amateur actors labor under great difficulties in providing suitable costumes. Their costumes must be lent by friends or procured at the cost of the performer, and when the proceeds are for Charity, the aim is to keep down expenses. The whole tone of your correspondent's criticism was patronizing.

Disturbance at Railway Station.

About 5.30 p.m. yesterday a man from Bonavista Bay who had imbibed rather freely during the afternoon, tried to take charge of the Railway Station. He was going round the platform using profane language and challenging everyone within his radius to fight. A telephone message to the West End Fire Hall brought Constable Pitcher to the scene, who in endeavouring to quell the disturbance was surrounded by four or five of the offender's sympathizers and for a while a lively time ensued. Excitement ran high until Officers Smith and Crocker rendered assistance when the man was handcuffed and taken to the police station.

West End Citizens

Several citizens of the West End of the city are complaining strongly of the late hour at which the bowling alley closes every night. Many young lads of tender years congregate there nightly, setting up the "pins" for the players, and are, so we are informed, often detained there long after midnight. While these complaining are not opposed in any way to this form of amusement provided it be kept within reasonable bounds, they offer the suggestion that the management will attend to the matter, and see that the alley will be closed earlier for the future. Injustice to the children who are kept out so late, and the residents of that locality who are continually disturbed by the noise of the falling "pins" we feel that a reform in this direction would be most opportune.

The Frailty of Man.

We are all liable to error and will be so to the end of time—the most careful will make mistakes, sometimes, for are we not merely human? With the fact of our own frailty staring us in the face, would it be reasonable on our part to neglect the means placed within our reach for the elimination of error? Errors in the counting house are costly but they can be avoided by the use of present day inventions constructed as well as human ingenuity can suggest. It is to busy men that we speak—the other have no time to listen. To busy office-men the "Globe-Wernicke" devices come as a boon and a blessing, guarding as they do the essential records, which are the main vitality of business. These appliances are on view at Mr. Percie Johnson's office, and need only be seen to be appreciated.

"Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner."

The reproduction of "Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner," at the Casino Theatre, last night, drew a large audience. The performers were in good form, being more at home in their roles, and the presentation was, if possible, better than on the previous night, which was manifested by frequent applause.

The ladies and gentlemen taking part deserve to be congratulated on the success of their efforts, while special praise is due to Mr. T. H. O'Neill who acted as coach and general manager for the production. Special thanks is also due to the Misses Johnson, who contributed the orchestral selections. The proceeds, which were considerably large, are for the funds of the St. Bon's and Felix Spencer Associations.

How One Burn Was Cured.

"Did you ever hear how that little girl of Mrs. Wells' got on—the one that had the nasty burn on her arm, you know?"
"Why, yes, she was perfectly cured, not even a scar remains."
"How was that managed?"
"Easily enough; Mrs. Wells got a box of a new ointment called Zylex, from her druggist—and in a very few days the burn was healed and the child's arm as well as ever."

Zylex is the latest soothing and healing ointment, and is up-to-date in every respect. It is for sale by all Druggists. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake. Zylex, London—dec2.eod.f

Nickel Theatre.

There was a large attendance at the Nickel Theatre last night in spite of the other attractions. The program was witnessed with pleasure. Mr. Cameron, the man from Yorkshire, appeared with a new song entitled "More work for the Undertaker," and his rendition of it won the applause and favorable comment of all. He seems to have an inexhaustible supply of live comic songs and his appearance each night is looked forward to with pleasure. This evening there will be a new programme.

Roofing As Attractive in Price—As in Color

You'll admit this roof looks attractive—in distinctive colors of red or green. But for most home builders its chief attraction lies in its remarkable economy. Let's begin with its first cost. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing costs less to buy than good shingles. Greatly reduces the cost of repairs. No shingles to split, crack or "curl up." Remember, the shingles of today aren't the shingles of 20 years ago. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing makes a water-tight blanket. And best of all, resists fire—"spark-proof." Its protection from fire-hazard alone is worth all its cost. Its first cost is its only cost, too. Can you afford NOT to have NEPONSET Prostate Roofing on your roof?

NEPONSET

Waterproof Building Products

Roofings NEPONSET roofings are a fire protection, "leak-proof" and long-lived, layered construction. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing is for general use. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing is a waterproofing material for dwellings, attractive colors.
Building Papers NEPONSET Waterproof Building Papers are built into walls and floors. The building will be warmer, will cost less to heat and will last years longer. Recommended by architects, engineers and building owners everywhere.
Wall Board NEPONSET Wall Board is a scientific product which takes the place of lath and plaster; comes in sheets 32 inches wide. Remember, it is the only wall board with waterproofed surface. Requires no further decoration. Apply on put it up.

Are you going to build? Write for valuable information about modern ways to waterproof and weatherproof. Send for samples, free booklet and name of nearest NEPONSET dealer.

Municipal Boards.

We congratulate the editor of the Daily News on taking up his political lance once more. This morning he broke silence on the subject of our article on Municipal Boards. We welcome his criticism in the hope that he may take up the question of the retention of the Hon. Donald Morrison and the Hon. Sydney Blandford in office without sending them to seek the confidence of the electors after their defeat in Bonavista. Although his objections to our criticism of the policy of the Morris Government on Municipal Boards are set forth with some freedom, they are most disingenuous. We, quoted from the manifesto of Sir Edward Morris published in the fall of 1908. Sir Edward Morris declared the law on the question of the Election of Out-port Road Boards was cumbersome and costly and that the people had not been able to avail of it. Sir Edward promised the enactment of a law which would be simple and inexpensive. We pointed out that he had broken this pledge. No simple and inexpensive law has been put on the statute book during his administration. The law which he criticized was a law to which he was a party, and passed by a Liberal Government while Sir Edward was a leading member of that administration. If the enactment of this law showed that Sir Robert Bond was strangely blind to the merits of these admirable institutions, it showed a similar blindness in Sir Edward Morris, and the promise of an amendment of that law by Sir Edward and his failure to redeem his promise proved his blindness was wilful. The editor of the Daily News artfully states that within a few weeks after the Spring election in 1909, Grand Bank and Fortune demanded local boards, and they got them. This is a mean way of hiding the truth and of trying to emphasize and illustrate an untruth, viz., that the Morris Government is the only Government that ever attempted to put the principle of local election boards into existence.

We have consulted Mr. Gear on the matter and he tells us that Grand Bank and Fortune had Municipal Board for six years before 1909, and that these towns elected their representatives. Further he said that the rest of the Burin District had Municipal Boards but they were not elective, and that the Bond Government tried the experiment with Municipal Boards, either elective or non-elective in the district for six years. All the local money, main line money, ferry money, poor grants and special grants were placed in a Bank to the credit of these Boards. They disbursed all these monies and had full control of them. This system with the exception of three places was discontinued in Burin district by Morris and the old system revived. In Bonavista District elective Boards were given by the Morris Government but we are informed that the only money placed at the disposal of these boards was the local road money and this policy gave rise to intense dissatisfaction in that district. As a matter of fact all the evils of grants to individuals were intensified by the Morris Government, and to-day great dissatisfaction prevails owing to the breach of Morris's pledge and the wanton waste in connection with family and other grants.

Municipal Commissions.

Mr. Gosling Defines His Position.
Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I have to thank you for again publishing my letters on Municipal Reform. I think that probably the time for publication in the first instance was not well chosen, but as there now seems to be considerable interest in the matter, I hope they will be more a propos.

Before dealing further with the question of Government by Commission, permit me to contradict the rumor which seems to have gained considerable vogue, that I was willing to stand for Mayor at the next elections. As Mark Twain said when the newspapers reported that he was dead: "The rumor is greatly exaggerated." It would be utterly impossible for me to think of undertaking this important office, as I am in the unfortunate predicament of having to work for my living, and could not give the time to it. Anyone who reads my letters will see at once that in my opinion this is the sort of thing from which we have suffered. I do not think this city can be properly managed by anyone in the off hours of an active business life. I think we want men who will be on the job all the time; who will be at their post every day and all day, who will visit every portion of the city seeing for themselves how the city employees are performing their duties, and what the needs of the city really are and for the performance of these arduous duties I think they should be adequately paid.

Also, even if I had the time I would not think of offering myself for election under the present Municipal Act, as I am convinced, that no one, no matter how desirous he may be of improving the condition of the city, could accomplish much with the circumscribed powers at present given to the Municipal Council.

Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

Cable News. SELLING OUT

Special to The Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
Nearly twenty thousand miners in South Wales are idle through the spread of the Great Western Railway Strike. It originated through the dismissal of an engine driver. Although not authorized by the Union, the movement developed fast.

LONDON, To-day.
Mrs. Fox describing the arrest of Mrs. Bankhurst, said that when the suffragist motor boat attempted to follow the police boat, two battleships were drawn up in front to defend the chief constable and his officers from a handful of suffragettes.

RICHMOND, Va., To-day.
The American Committee for the celebration of the hundred years peace among English speaking peoples, at a session here adjourned after cabling cordial greetings to the British Committee, London. The report of the Committee on the International Celebration, which was adopted, proposed to make these demonstrations of an universal character as possible and suggested various monuments, tablets and observances in the States, Canada, Britain and elsewhere, particularly at Ghent where the last peace treaty was signed.

DELLAS, Texas, To-day.
The flood centre shifted Southward last night towards the Gulf centering from Hearne to Richmond, where the flood crest of Brazos River continued to do great damage and cause some loss of life. The general flood situation improved, when the rains began to cease after three years continuous downpour. The total number of dead as the result of floods stood last night at twenty four. The estimates of property damage ranged between one and two million of dollars, with Waco and San Antonio the heaviest sufferers among the cities. The San Antonio loss was a quarter million. At Waco the damage is expected to be as great. As the water receded pilfering began and the Waco militia were put on duty on East Waco to guard property and deserted houses, and stores.

LONDON, To-day.
Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs speaking at Bradford last night, blamed the Unionists for the failure of attempts to realize a Home Rule settlement by consent, calling attention to the fact Home Rule could not come into operation before 1915. He said there was no hurry in the settlement of the Ulster problem. The Government would exhaust every effort to secure such a settlement, in accordance with the principles the Prime Minister had laid down, but declared the best move must come from the opposition leaders. The demand for a federal system to be applied to the whole Kingdom was a big thing, requiring much thought. The Foreign Secretary said that though the Federal system was the Government's ultimate aim, the Home Rule question must be settled first.

Bargains in Crockeryware.
JOHN B. AYRE.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Administration officials here are viewing with satisfaction, evidences of a growing sense of responsibility on the part of the rebel leaders in Northern Mexico for the protection of life and property within the territory in their possession. The State Department's request for the release of Americans held for ransom or arrested on suspicion is now receiving prompt attention at the hands of the Constitutionalists. It is apparent these officers in turn are gradually exerting more power and imposing greater restraints over subordinates. Some semblance of civil authority is also beginning to appear in Northern States and meeting with recognition at the hands of military leaders. Altogether officials here see indications of a regularly organized civil government about to be evolved from the chaotic conditions which prevailed in the section of Mexico for the past nine months. It is believed the Constitutionalists themselves are divided on the question of seeking formal recognition by the States. A considerable portion of them are said to incline to the view ascribed to General Villa, that such a recognition of their Government might encourage a movement for the separation of the Northern States from the remainder of the country.

(Under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson.)

The ladies of W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church will hold their Annual Sale of Cakes, Puddings, Candy, Plain and Fancy Work in the Presbyterian Hall on Wednesday, Dec. 10th, at 3.30 p.m. Afternoon Teas served. Grand Concert at 8 p.m. Partridge Supper 9.30 (Turkey and Chicken also served). Admission—Afternoon, 10c. Concert 20c. Supper and Concert 50c.—dec5,41

THE WORLD'S GREAT LOVE STORIES.

The Amazing Marriage of Edward Bulwer Lytton—Described by His Wife as "a Monster in Human Form."

Although the first Lord Lytton died in the year 1837, his popularity as a novelist and dramatist is still as great as when he was the most famous man in England. The genius of the man ranged over many fields of literature, so that his historical novels, like "Harold," "The Last of the Barons," and "The Last Days of Pompeii" are found on the bookshelves in thousands of homes, while his novels of modern life, like "The Caxtons," "My Novel," and "What Will He Do With It?" still sell by the million. His plays, "The Lady of Lyons," "Richelieu," and "Money" hold the stage as firmly as the masterpieces of Goldsmith and Sheridan, and few great writers have had a more powerful influence upon the imagination of the English people.

Self-Conceit and Brilliant Wit.

Yet the man himself was more romantic than any of his books. His character was a mixture of colossal self-conceit and brilliant wit of profound scholarship and fantastic absurdity. Throughout his career, he was like a spoiled child of life, and the amazing story of his marriage reveals a man lacking in all the qualities of self-control.

His married life was indeed a tragedy, both to himself and to the beautiful woman with whom he was married. The love that seemed to promise them both a continual joy changed into hatred and bitterness on both sides. The girl who had adored her handsome lover denounced her husband as "a monster in human form." Rosina Wheeler, who afterwards became Lady Lytton, was a beautiful Irish girl of good family. When she was introduced to high society in London the wonderful beauty of the girl, her sparkling wit, and the sharpness of her intellect attracted many admirers. She had literary gifts also, which were praised by connoisseurs, but they did not see her cleverest writings, which caricatured her own friends. She could never resist a pet word or a smart repartee, and when she had a pen in her hand it seemed to write with acid instead of ink.

Perhaps in all literature there is no such description of a woman's first impression of them and who became her lover and her husband as the one penned by Rosina Lytton, then the beautiful Miss Wheeler. It was at within his reach. She had great ambitions for him, and desired him to marry some high-born damsel with a handsome dowry. She therefore refused her consent to Edward's marriage with the pretty-but penniless Rosina. Perhaps, also, she was not ignorant of Rosina's sharp tongue, fiery spirit, and gift for ridicule. It may have come to her indignant ears that Miss Wheeler had described her as "an ugly old dowdy." She may even have heard personal remarks about her nose which, according to her future daughter-in-law, was "so large that it would have been an exaggerated feature for a man."

Be that as it may, the old lady had no love for the Irish girl, and her son, who was at that time no more than twenty years of age, could not afford to marry without her consent. Yet he persisted in his wooing, and wrote hundreds of letters, to his lady love, breathing out the most burning fires of affection, and vowing that he could not live without her. Meanwhile he had begun to write books as well as letters, so that gradually he became more independent, and at last persuaded himself and his lady that there are limits even to filial obedience, and that a son is not bound to wreck his own and his betrothed's happiness for life in deference to the whim of an ambitious mother.

Early Married Life.

The date for the marriage was postponed three times, but at last in 1827, when Edward Bulwer Lytton was twenty-six and Rosina twenty-seven, this strange, handsome couple were made man and wife, and departed from London to make their home at Woodcot House, Oxfordshire.

For a little while they were supremely happy. Passion seemed to promise a lasting love. Both the husband and wife were intensely emotional, they were both highly imaginative, they were both very young, and neither of them realized that the fires of passion burn low very soon and that loyalty, forbearance, and unselfishness are needed in married life.

"Scenes" at Woodcot House.

Rosina Lytton had two great faults. She was intensely and insanely jealous, and when she was in one of those moods she lost all control of her tongue and spoke with such violent language that each word seemed like a sharp knife. The first quarrel came quickly. It was followed by a continual sequence of domestic scenes, exasperating to a young man of Lytton's temperament. He, too, had a caustic tongue. There were scenes when Woodcot House, Oxfordshire, was like a scene in a tragic melodrama. After such quarrels young Lytton rushed off to town, on the pretext of seeing a publisher or attending some literary function, but when he returned he found a wife frantic with jealous suspicions, and in tremendous "tantrums."

Yet it is impossible to believe that in spite of her undoubted provocation, young Edward Bulwer Lytton should have behaved so brutally as the accusations of his wife declare. In a written statement of an extraordinary character she asserted that his first act of violence took place in May, 1828, a month before the birth of her first child. Worn out and exhausted one evening (so her story goes), after having helped him in his literary labors by getting down books of reference from the shelves, she had lain down on the sofa, when her husband asked her to hand him down another volume, and for that purpose to mount a step-ladder.

"Really, Edward," she said, "I cannot do more; I am so tired." In a sudden fit of fury he sprang to his feet, and she alleged that he kicked her in the side with such savage violence that she fainted with pain.

"Brutal Rages."

After the birth of a daughter whom they called Elizabeth, and a year later of a son named Edward, the husband and wife travelled for some time in Italy, which Lady Lytton acknowledged to be the happiest months in her life. In her diary of this time there is no word of ill-usage, but afterwards she declared that her husband had grievously ill-treated her. Her waiting-maid also made an affidavit in which she took her oath upon the following accusation:

"At Naples, in one of his brutal rages, he kicked and banged her ladyship against the stone floor in the Hotel Vittoria. She was black and blue, and had to keep her bed." The greatest outrage, however, charged against Lord Lytton by his own wife is an incident which, as she recorded, took place at the house in Hertford Street, London, where they lived after the Italian tour.

"The provocation," she gave this man was this: Upon his asking me with whom I was going to the christening of Mr. Footlanque's child that night, and I replying, "With Lady Steppey," he then repeated, as fast as he could, a dozen times running, "My mother calls her 'That ugly old woman.'" He then called out, "Do you hear me, madam? Of course, I hear you. 'Then why don't you answer me?' I did not think it required an answer. 'Do you, madam!'" he exclaimed.

Usually Arise From Same Cause—Relief and Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Nearly everybody knows of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the most effective treatment for piles or hemorrhoids that medical science has been able to compound. So much suffering and misery arises from this ailment that one is not long in falling his friends when he has found an actual cure. This accounts for the enormous sales of Dr. Chase's Ointment. This latter tells of relief from the suffering of varicose veins by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Many suffer from this trouble not knowing the comfort to be obtained by the use of this great soothing ointment. Mrs. R. J. Evans, 131 Aurora street, Toronto, writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years. I have been troubled with varicose veins, and been unable to do my work. I have found it the only thing that gives relief. For every purpose when a soothing, healing ointment is needed, there is nothing so good as Dr. Chase's Ointment." 50 cents a box all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Sick, Sour Stomach Indigestion Or Gas

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sour, gassy, and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Joy Cometh.

I sat and sighed, with down-cast head, my heart consumed with sorrow, and then my Aunt Jimena said: "I'm going home to-morrow!" I'd feared that she would never leave, her stay would be eternal, and that's what made me pine and grieve, and say, "The luck's infernal!" I thought my dark and gloomy skies no sunbeam ever would borrow, then Aunt Jimena up and cries, "I'm going home to-morrow!" Thus off the kindly gods confound the kindest and the carkiest, and joy comes centering around just when things seem the darkest. "We all have aunts who come and stay until their welcome's shabby, who eat our vittles day by day, until the purse is flabby; and when we think they'll never go, or let us know what peace is, they up and dissipate our woe by packing their valises. The darkest hour's before the dawn, and when your grief's intensest, it is a sign 'twill soon be gone, not only hence, but hencest."

A New England Montessori.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

On a hot day in a very hot kitchen some years ago, a hard-working mother had just finished ironing four waists and three fussy white dresses and hung them on a clothesline when the front door bell rang. It took her almost ten minutes to get rid of the peddler, and when she finally came back to her kitchen, there on the floor was her three-year-old son calmly folding up the last of those garments.

The work of hours had been destroyed in ten minutes. For a moment that tired woman felt just one impulse that of anger against a naughty child, and then, being a rather remarkable mother, she began to think. The baby isn't old enough to do that from mischief," she thought.

"It's just that he has seen me fold things, and he wanted to do the same. He didn't mean to be naughty, he just wanted to fold something. I suppose if I gave him something to fold he'd enjoy folding it, and it would keep him out of mischief."

Whereupon, instead of punishing the child, she got out two or three old dish towels and an old spread and gave them to him, and he sat on the floor amusing himself for an hour, folding and unfolding, just as he had seen his mother do.

Moreover, she did not forget her lesson. When the next baby reached the folded age she brought out the old spread and dish towels, and added a few more articles, and when he had passed the folding age, she laid them aside for the next comer.

And so each baby was harmlessly amused for many hours, and at the same time learned something about the use and control of his hands and arms.

Now the above incident is not original with me. I cribbed it out of a book about the Montessori method and retold it from memory. Doesn't that arouse your interest in the Montessori method? I meant that it should.

"The Montessori method of child education" sounds very technical and abstruse. As a matter of fact it is simply a thorough development and enlargement by Maria Montessori, an Italian doctor, of the same idea which came to that New England housewife, namely, that most of the apparently mischievous things a child does are not naughty at all, but merely natural attempts to get into touch with the world about him and do what he sees others doing, and that if we will supply him with harmless implements for doing these things, he will not make trouble and he will educate himself.

Perhaps this is not the millennium in child education, but it certainly is a splendidly sane viewpoint and my heartfelt advice to all fathers and mothers who want to give their children the squarest deal going, is to get some one of the interesting books which have been written on this subject, and read it from cover to cover.

The extraordinary scene may be described in Lady Lytton's words: "The moment I drove into the hell the mob began to cheer, and even Sir Liar's two powdered flunkies and both his postillions, took off their hats and caps and joined. I instantly alighted, and walked over calmly and deliberately to the hustings, just putting the crowd aside with my fan and saying, 'My good people, make way for your member's wife.' They then began to cheer and cry, 'Silence for Lady Lytton!' Sir Liar's head fell literally as if he had been shot by my friend Mrs. Clarke said she never saw such a thing in her life. He staggered against the post, and seemed not to have strength to move."

She then denounced him as a mean scoundrel.

"Sir Liar, with his hands before his face, made a rush from the hustings."

Afterwards she made a long speech setting out her private grievances, and appealing to the people to support her claims against a man who, she declared, quite untruly, had forced her to live on charity. The mob moved by a woman's plea, cheered her to the echo, and in the Press next day there were accounts of the extraordinary affair.

The World's Great Love Stories.

"For God's sake," I said, 'take care what you are about, Edward!'"

"He then dropped the knife and, springing on me, made his great teeth meet in my cheek, and the blood spurted over me."

It is impossible now to test the truth of these appalling stories. "In all probability they were the wild imaginings of a woman who exaggerated the violence and infidelities of her husband until they became distorted and horrible. Undoubtedly Lord Lytton, as he afterwards became, was not a good husband to her, and gave far too much excuse for her jealous mania, but that a man of his refinement and good breeding should ever have been guilty of such coarse brutalities stem outside the range of ordinary human nature.

The crisis in this amazing marriage came when Rosina received a telegram one day to say that her absent husband was ill, and upon going to his rooms in town discovered him with a young lady, enjoying a luxurious companionship. There was a scene on the threshold of that flat in the Albany. Lady Lytton denounced her husband as "an incarnate lie," rushed back to her carriage, and from her house in the country sued for separation. This was arranged formally in 1836, eight years after their marriage, and Lord Lytton saw his wife only once again during the remainder of his life.

Watched by Detectives.

For a time he allowed his two children to live with her, but after she had denounced him to all his friends as a "monster," and after she had written a novel holding him up to the world under a thin disguise as a brutal fellow, he took her children away from her and forbade her to see him. The girl Elizabeth died in lodgings, and the wretched mother, who forced her way into the house, was prevented by the doctor from going into the death chamber. For several years she lived a queer desolate life, falling into the hands of swindling rogues and people of low repute, but receiving the friendship also of distinguished men and women who listened to her stories about her husband, now one of the most famous men in England, and believing them, and sympathizing with her.

Upon returning to England Lady Lytton protested against her allowance of £400 a year, and wrote such violent and furious letters against the character of the man whom she habitually called "Sir Liar" that Lord Lytton became the victim of a public scandal.

The most awful moment of his life was when he was elected as member of Parliament for Hertford, and in the middle of a speech to his constituents, whom he was addressing from the hustings, saw the woman whom he had once loved with such passionate adoration, and whom he now hated with perhaps more sincerity.

The extraordinary scene may be described in Lady Lytton's words: "The moment I drove into the hell the mob began to cheer, and even Sir Liar's two powdered flunkies and both his postillions, took off their hats and caps and joined. I instantly alighted, and walked over calmly and deliberately to the hustings, just putting the crowd aside with my fan and saying, 'My good people, make way for your member's wife.' They then began to cheer and cry, 'Silence for Lady Lytton!' Sir Liar's head fell literally as if he had been shot by my friend Mrs. Clarke said she never saw such a thing in her life. He staggered against the post, and seemed not to have strength to move."

She then denounced him as a mean scoundrel.

"Sir Liar, with his hands before his face, made a rush from the hustings."

Afterwards she made a long speech setting out her private grievances, and appealing to the people to support her claims against a man who, she declared, quite untruly, had forced her to live on charity. The mob moved by a woman's plea, cheered her to the echo, and in the Press next day there were accounts of the extraordinary affair.

In a Private Asylum.

The situation was intolerable to a man of Lord Lytton's fame and public standing, and the wild behaviour of his wife seemed to him consistent only with insanity. He resolved to have her put into a private asylum, and immediately carried the resolution into effect. A doctor certified her as insane, and she was taken off to a private establishment. It was undoubtedly an unjustifiable action, for, though the woman was hardly responsible for her actions, she was not actually insane. Such a storm was raised in the Press that Lady Lytton was liberated within three weeks, on a certificate granted by Dr. Forbes Winslow, the famous expert on mental cases.

The remainder of her life was uneventful, but wretched and melancholy, owing to comparative poverty and a bitter grudge against life itself. She survived her husband, and died at eighty years of age, still with traces of the beauty which had attracted many lovers in her youth. Her story is a tragic one, and although the accusations she made against Lord Lytton were beyond belief, one can hardly acquit the great English novelist from all blame, because in the early years of their wedded life he gave her just cause for the jealousy which unhinged her brain, and was utterly selfish in the pursuit of his own ambition.

A Child's Laxative Is "Syrup Of Figs"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of old, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the logged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Little folks are wearing fur-trimmed bonnets and coats and fur-lined boots. Tunics are pulled up in the back and are short in the front, the back forming a train. A pretty coat for a small tot is made of grey cloth with collar and ruffs of squirrel. Some of the smartest afternoon gowns are of corduroy or ribbed velvet in bright colors. The dyed fur is not considered so smart at present because it is copied in the cheaper furs. In the new corsets, the bust is lower, waist larger, but the blouses are few and softer. The slipper most preferred for afternoon wear is the Colonial pump, made of patent leather. The two-button length glaze gloves in the various shades are very smart for afternoon wear. Wigs are a fad with Parisiennes at present, adding much grace and charm reminiscent of older times. Metal laces and brocades are used, not only for evening wear, but for day frocks and tunics; blouses are even made of it. Muffs vary in size. Some are huge, cumbersome affairs, covering the entire cap; some are medium size and some are dear little shapes. Fashionable for evening wear is the sixteen-button-length kid glove in white, trimmed across the back of the hand with three rows of black stitching.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.
President Wilson is suffering from a cold in the head and throat, and remained in bed to-day. On his physician's advice to-morrow's engagements have been cancelled.

DENVER, Dec. 4.
By a unanimous referendum vote the striking coal miners of the Southern Colorado Coal Fields have rejected the strike settlement proposition made them by Governor Ammons.

LONDON, Dec. 4.
The suffragettes tried yesterday to drain the canal between Farnsworth in Lancashire and Marple in Cheshire by cutting a channel to the River Goyt at Boleby. The work proved too laborious and was abandoned.

LONDON, Dec. 4.
New Zealand's Naval Defence Bill passed its second reading by 31 to 21. Colonel Allen, in moving it, pointed out that the only Australasian part of the agreement of 1909, carried out, and the sole part of the China unit in existence, was the cruiser New Zealand.

PLYMOUTH, Dec. 4.
Contrary to expectations there was no disturbance when Mrs. Fankhurst was arrested on the Majestic, on arriving from New York to-day. She was placed on a tug, which had been chartered by the police, and was taken to Devonport dockyard. The police heard the Majestic as soon as she anchored, shortly after noon.

GLASGOW, Dec. 4.
The British steamer Inverclyde reported to-day that while on a voyage from Penarth for Halifax, she picked up the crew of the British brig Evelyn, commanded by Capt. Roberts, abandoned on Nov. 28th, while sailing from Beaverton, Nfld., for Glasgow. The Inverclyde is the same steamer that was coming to Halifax to coal the New Zealand.

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.
The importation of arms into Ireland is about to be forbidden, according to newspapers here, which declare that a proclamation to that effect will be issued in a day or two. This will be the result of a conference between Chief Secretary Birrell and Viceroy Aberdeen, and the first step against the Carson rebellion. Shipments of rifles and bayonets in large quantities into Belfast have, it is said, been on the increase the last few weeks.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.
Between now and April a score of little vessels of the Revenue Cutter Service will patrol the waters along the American shore, in readiness to aid distressed mariners. By proclamation of the President they are sent out to assist all vessels in distress, keep an ever watchful eye on fore-letters that may drift into the ship lines and destroy them; and listen for the dreaded "S.O.S." wireless signals. Later other vessels will start on the annual ice patrol to warn the great liners of the approach of bergs and icefloes.

L.C.A. Sale Closes.

The attendance at the Sale yesterday was much larger than at the opening. The various stalls were thronged and large quantities of the goods were disposed of during the afternoon. The tea tables were exceptionally well patronized, especially between 6 and 8 o'clock, when all the ladies were kept busy. The concert opened at 9.15 p.m., the first number being an organ solo by Mr. G. Christian, R. A. M. A. T. C. L., whose splendid performance called for warm applause. The vocal numbers by Misses Gosling and Storey were pleasingly rendered and Mr. H. Courtenay gave "Men of Merry England." The violin and pianoforte selections by Miss Johnson and Mr. Steele, respectively, were very well received, and on the whole the entertainment was of a high order.

Practically all the goods were disposed of during the sale, which was very successful from a financial standpoint. To the Presidents of the L.C.A.S. and Y. L. G., respectively, and the ladies who assisted them in their efforts, congratulations are due on the splendid success achieved.

Vessel Overdue.

The schr. Novelty, Capt. Benson, is now out fifty days from Pernambuco. A little anxiety is being felt as the vessel left the Brazilian port a week ahead of the schr. Dorothy Baird, which arrived last month and have since sailed again for Brazil with another fish cargo. It is because of this fact friends of those on board are beginning to get uneasy. However, seafaring men express the opinion that the Novelty might have met different and more adverse weather altogether to the Dorothy Baird, and no grave fears need be entertained for her safety.

Suggests Glass Doors.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Would the Postmaster General or someone in authority, kindly inform the public, why plain glass (the kind that one can see through), is not placed in the doors leading to the General Post Office? More than a year ago, attention was called to this same subject, but up to the present no steps have been taken to effect a remedy.
Managers of Banks and other business institutions in the city made it a point to have the entrance as bright as possible, so that customers may find their way in and out with ease and safety.

Such I regret to say, is not the case at the G.P.O., for just as you are about to enter or leave there the door is pushed violently in your face, not through any fault of the person on the other side. Consequently friendly greetings are not always exchanged. Men who are not possessed with a strong push have had their shoulder almost dislocated, children of tender years are knocked down and ladies have had their latest hat crushed into next year's style, and still the torture goes on. We heard rumors more than a year ago about the up-to-date remodeling this institution was to receive.

For a start I would suggest having plain glass placed in the doors. Open the western door which is now so curiously bolted. Place a bullet-proof board between the windows announcing the express is due.
We know the man at the window will cheerfully supply the information, with him we have no fault to find, he has told some of us nine hundred and ninety-nine times already.
Give us the board; I feel confident it would fill a long felt want, but I there should be sufficient reasons for not changing the glass, then hang it outside so that we can see it from the street, for all do not carry an accident insurance policy.

Healthy and Unhail by Lighting

Gas, it may be said, vitilates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitilating power. Electricity does not vitilate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—
Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jameson B. Hurry.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity. The latter had been employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—Nov. 14

Grenfell Nurse Saw Grand Falls.

New York, Nov. 28.—Miss Laurie Coates, a nurse who has been associated with Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell in his work in the far north, arrived here to-day on board the Stephano of the Red Cross Line. She asserts she is the first white woman to view the Grand Falls in Labrador. Miss Coates says that she made the trip last summer from Hamilton Inlet, where she was stationed, the most northern relief station, in company with a half breed Indian guide. They travelled by canoe most of the three hundred and twenty-five miles to Grand Falls, losing one canoe in the trip.

Drowned When Schooner Sank.

On the strength of the identification by seaman John Bennett, sole survivor of the crew of the schooner Annie Roberts of the dead body picked up on the shore near Morien some days ago as that of Wm. Francis, cook of the ill-fated schooner, the coroner's jury at No. 6 Saturday evening rendered a verdict to the effect that the body was that of Francis and that he came to his death by drowning when the schooner was sunk. Coroner Ogilvie conducted the enquiry.—Glace Bay Gazette.

Luxuries.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Swish."
A luxury is something which is a pleasure this year but will become a necessity next year.
Men can get along without luxuries and as long as he does so he is safe. But as soon as he adopts a luxury he cannot get along without it and has to classify it thereafter as "living expenses."

When man first began his variegated career, food and water were the only necessities, and a bed of nice soft leaves was a luxury. But after he had bedded his family down in furs for a few weeks a bed became a necessity and whenever he tried to lodge the job of gathering it on a cold rainy night his wife threatened to leave him on the ground of non-support.
Ever since then man has been tentatively acquiring luxuries and then industriously accumulating enough money to continue them as necessities. There was a time when a fork was a novelty, and the man who owned one gave parties at which each guest was allowed to experiment with the new one. Now no girl can get married unless she has dined on several pounds of solid silver, meat, dessert, oyster, fish, lobster, soup and ice cream cakes.

The first man who wore a plug hat in England got great pleasure from wearing it while his friends came to a boil from envy. Now plug hats are a crushing burden all over the island and men who cannot earn the money to buy one frequently jump to the dock to end their sufferings.
Up to a few days ago the telephone was a luxury and people used it with pride and satisfaction in order to procure their pleasure. Now the world is full of appetite men who would gladly tear the telephone out by the roots and had it several miles away with a low hissing sound if they could get along without it.

The automobile, two years ago was the world's greatest luxury. Now people are going to and from the country to find a friend has happened with a limousine and they have forgotten how to use their feet.
If luxuries would stay put they could be very nice. But it is the luxury which creeps into our hearts and pocket-books and becomes a grim necessity that has set the cost of living after the aeroplane record.
Recognizing these great principles, our governments should say so much for honesty that it would have to be classed as a luxury—after which it would speedily become a necessity and we would all live happily ever after.

U.S. to Enforce Fishing Law.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Complaints against Canadian, Japanese and Russian fishermen invading Alaskan waters for halibut, have led Secretary Redfield to include in his estimates for the department of commerce an appropriation of $100,000 to purchase one sea going vessel, one light draft tug and six rapid motor boats to enforce the alien fishing law. For additional employees he asks $8,500,000.
The department now has no vessel to use for this purpose, and the secretary points out that when a government official has to visit an Alaskan cannery or fishery to see that the law is being observed, "his only means of transportation is a boat owned or run by the very company or person that may be violating the law."
The fisheries of Alaska yield annually more than $18,000,000, while almost $35,000,000 is invested in the salmon industry, which employs 18,000 men.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNUAL SALE.

The ladies, under the Presidency of Mrs. David Baird, are doing all possible to ensure the event being a grand success. Mrs. Baird will superintend the catering for the supper, which will be a guarantee that all will get prompt attention and plenty of good things to eat.

Dogs Guarded Dead Priest

One Animal Led the Way to Woods Where Body Lay.
Mobile, Nov. 22.—The body of Fr. Velasquez, a professor in the monastery at Rosaryville, La., was found to-day, guarded by a small dog, in the woods near the institution. Another dog led the searching party to the place. The priest had been missing since Saturday, and death was due to heart disease.
The dogs were fast friends of the priest. Nero, the larger, went to the monastery at 4 o'clock this morning and began to howl and whine, at the same time tugging at those who had arisen as a result of the commotion. When followed, he led several priests to where the dead man lay. The little dog was found whining over the body.
Father Velasquez was 58 years old and was the first rector of the University of Manila after the Spanish-American war.

Fusion Campaign Cost Some Money

New York, Nov. 24.—The total cost of the Fusion campaign that resulted in the election of John Purroy Mitchell as mayor of New York was $129,519, according to the report of Charles Bernheim, treasurer of the citizens' municipal committee made public this morning. Among the large contributors to the fund were Andrew Carnegie, $7,500, Jacob H. Schiff, $6,000, and Cleveland H. Dodge, Geo. W. Perkins and John D. Rockefeller, $5,000 each. Many women contributed.

STOP Coughing.

How often do you awake during the night and have an attack of "Coughing"? Don't you find that the cough is caused from a tickling sensation in the throat? What is the cause of this tickling sensation? It is because you contracted a cold in some simple way and did not trouble about it. The cold has developed to a "cough," and now you must try and obtain some remedy to stop this "cough." If you do not do this you are making a great mistake. A mistake which, after the cause of regret for the rest of your life.
If you have a "cough or cold" try a bottle of Stafford's Phosphate Cough Cure; also mix equal parts of Stafford's Liniment and Camphorated Oil in a saucer, warm slightly, saturate a piece of thick flannel with same, and apply to chest and throat. You will find relief at once.
The large quantity of these two preparations having been sold, this year prove them to be genuine.
