MAGIC READ THE BAKING LABEL NO ALUM POWDER

Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XX.

"I feel like I was running away and leaving my new mother and all my grand-lady life behind me," she said to herself, with a gleeful little laugh. "I've half a mind never to go back."

And on she went, half fancying that ere long she should hear the boom and thunder of the great sea and catch sight of the gray old lighthouse towering up in the distance.

"Wouldn't it be good to get back to daddy and dear old Tom? How surprised they would be, and glad, too."

Kelpie had no doubt about that. The old man would take her in his arms and say, with tears trickling down his cheeks:

"Why, little woman, have you come back to old daddy?"

And Tom—surely Tom could not laugh at her.

The color in her cheeks deepened and her heart beat faster at the thought, but she went on, taking no heed of time or distance.

Now and then a carriage whirled past or a pedestrian, muffled to the teeth, made his way through the whirling drifts; but they were nothing to Kelpie, and she scarcely gave them a glance.

She kept on, thrilled by a wild sense of freedom, until her storm coat was white and an aureole of snowflakes encircled her fair, fresh young face. Then, her breath growing short and her feet somewhat heavy, she sat down on the granite steps of a handsome building to rest for a moment and collect her thoughts, which seemed to be keeping time with the dancing snowflakes.

"I wonder where I am?" she thought vaguely, "and how long it will take me to get back to Van Cortlandt Place? Won't there be a racket if they miss me?"

She laughed softly, and then held her breath as the sound of exquisite music fell on her ears. The door of the church, on the steps of which she sat, had opened, and the organ was pealing within. Kelpie arose to her feet, and gazing down the long, dim aisles, caught sight of the twinkling lights and the white-robed priests swinging their censers.

Her heart thrilled with strange rapture and a sudden rush of tears blinded her eyes.

Half a dozen women came up the steps and went in with soft footsteps and bowed heads, and Kelpie followed in their wake.

They sank on their knees before the altar, and so did she.

Then the organ pealed, and the priests chanted, and the incense arose in fragrant clouds.

When it was all over Kelpie arose with the rest and made her way out, deeply touched by this new experience and wondering within herself how people could be content to spend their lives in dressing and dining and living luxurious idleness when the great outside world held such privileges as she had just witnessed.

This little lighthouse girl had never known a place of worship save the little stone chapel at Thatcher's Rock.

The storm was increasing as the gray twilight came on, and here and there a blaze of electric light flashed over the snow-clad city.

Kelpie stood with a sudden thrill at her heart.

"Daddy is lighting the lamps at New Castle Light now," she said to herself.

"A young man, wearing a long fur overcoat and a cap of the same material pulled over his ears, stopped short in his rapid walk and regarded the girl curiously as she stood in the whirling storm with her face turned to the light. He hesitated an instant, started on, and then turned back.

"Beg your pardon," he said, "can I assist you in any way?"

Kelpie's thoughts were elsewhere, but his voice thrilled her like the notes of a half-forgotten melody. She turned and looked at him in the uncertain light.

"You are very kind, sir," she said. "I shall be glad if you'll tell me the nearest way back to Van Cortlandt Place. I'm a stranger in the city."

A great wave of electric splendor flashed over the city at this moment, turning the swift-falling snow into a glittering whirl of diamonds and bringing out the girl's face into clear and startling relief.

"The young man started violently. "Why, it is Kelpie!" he burst forth. The old lightkeeper's granddaughter had sturdy Puritan blood in her veins, and it showed itself. She did not move or evince the least surprise, though the heart in her bosom was fluttering like a frightened bird.

The young man's face grew white as he stared at her, almost as white as the snowflakes on his fur collar, and for one swift instant he bit his lip fiercely as if to keep down some terrible pain; but with his next breath the color rushed to his very temples and his eyes glowed as he caught hold of the girl's hands.

"I can scarcely believe my own eyes!" he cried. "I must be dreaming. You can't be my own, dear little Kelpie. It is impossible."

"I am Captain Stonestreet's granddaughter," answered Kelpie, with the dignity of a young princess.

CHAPTER XXI.

"My dear child, you must listen to reason!—We shall both freeze to death if we stand here much longer. You really must allow me to get a taxicab or a carriage and take you home."

"Pray don't stand here and freeze on my account, Mr. Fitzhugh," said Kelpie. "I prefer to walk home."

The young man laughed. "Why, you couldn't walk twenty yards in this blizzard to save your precious life," he said. "At any rate, I don't intend to let you try it. Didn't I understand you to say you want to go to Van Cortlandt Place?"

"Yes."

"Good heavens! I'm booked for a dinner party at Van Cortlandt Place this evening, and it's nearly six o'clock now."

The young man spoke the last words in a sort of aside, holding fast to Kelpie's arm and looking distractedly in every direction for a carriage.

"Heaven be praised! Here comes a cab at last—rather a one-horse affair, but it will serve our purpose. Come along, my dear little girl."

Kelpie's black eyes were dancing, and an odd little smile dimpled the corners of her scarlet mouth. All the old half-forgotten admiration of the bygone summer blazed up fresh in Carroll Fitzhugh's heart as he looked at her.

"Where are you going to take me?" she demanded, as the cab came whirling up.

"Anywhere you desire to go," he answered gallantly. "But let me get you under cover first of all. The storm is getting beastly."

He caught her up boldly as she spoke, whisked her across the street,

Mother Is Child's Stomach Sour, Sick.

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give California Syrup of Figs.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of California Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless fruit laxative, and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of California Syrup of Figs, which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeiters sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the California Fig Syrup Company. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

and stowed her away in the waiting cab.

"What street, sir?" shouted the cabman.

"Van Cortlandt Place, please," answered Kelpie before her companion had time to speak.

The door closed with a bang, the cabbie sprang to his seat, and away they went through the white, feathery snow.

"Well," said the young man, drawing a deep breath, "this must be a dream. I can't realize that I am sitting here with your hand in mine."

He made an attempt to possess himself of Kelpie's hand, but she drew it under the wide sleeve of her storm coat.

"I would rather not have you hold my hand, Mr. Fitzhugh," she said, quietly.

"Why, how unkind of you. You used to let me hold your hand last summer when I was lying ill at Thatcher's Rock."

"But you are not ill now, and we are not at Thatcher's Rock, which makes all the difference in the world."

"I don't see why it should. Oh, Kelpie, if you only knew how many times I've thought of you, you would not treat me like this. Do you remember that last day when my mother came and carried me off?"

"Oh, yes, I remember it distinctly."

"I hope you remember your promise, too. You said you would be glad to see me when I came back."

"But you didn't come back."

The young aristocrat flushed with pleasure.

"Oh, there's the rub," he said to himself. "The little beauty's in the sulks because I didn't show up at New Castle Light according to promise. I do wonder if she's come all the way to New York to hunt me up? I must find out."

"No, I didn't come back," Kelpie, he said aloud, "but Heaven knows it was no fault of mine. My affairs, or my mother's affairs, rather, kept me hard at work for a month or two, and then I started off on a yachting expedition, intending to take in New Castle Light and spend some weeks in the neighborhood of Shoal Islands. But the Fates were against me. My yacht was driven out of its way in an awful storm, and a few days later we were run down by a trading vessel one foggy night. The yacht went down, and more than half the crew perished. I was adrift for a day and a night on an inverted boat; a vessel picked me up and I lay for weeks in a serious condition. Oh, Kelpie, my dear, you can't ever imagine how I thought of you and longed for the sound of your sweet voice and the touch of your soft little hands through all those dreadful days."

He paused and put forth his hand, expecting, no doubt, that Kelpie would give him hers, but she kept it hidden in her sleeve, and after a moment he went on again:

"One night, when I was able to sit up a little, a white sea bird that had been following the vessel all day fluttered into my stateroom. It is a messenger from Kelpie; I said to myself, and I caught it and kept it with me for days. Then I put a tiny locket, containing my picture, on a slender gold chain and fastened it under the bird's white wings, and sent it across the sea, hoping it might find its way to New Castle Light and bear you my message. Wasn't it foolish?"

The slender gold chain glittered about Kelpie's fair throat that very moment, and the tiny locket rose and fell with every passionate throb of her girlish heart, but she only replied, with a soft little laugh:

"Very foolish, indeed."

"The young man looked at her keenly with a sudden feeling of irritation.

"She used to respond to my advances," he thought, "but she's like an iceberg now. What has changed her so?"

"You haven't told me yet," he said, after a moment, "what you are doing in New York."

"I am staying at Van Cortlandt Place at present."

The young man hesitated a moment, and then said:

"I beg your pardon, may I ask in what capacity?"

"Certainly," answered Kelpie, graciously; "as Mrs. van Cortlandt's companion."

"Ah, Mrs. van Cortlandt is a fortunate woman. But may I ask how in the world you came to drift here, my dear little girl?"

"Oh, I didn't drift. I came by appointment. New Castle Light isn't quite out of the world, Mr. Fitzhugh," replied Kelpie, with an amused laugh. "But the story is a long one, and we can't be very far from Van Cortlandt Place now."

A Neighbor Told Him To Take Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS

If you want to know what Gin Pills will do for you, just drop a line to Mr. D. A. Yorke, at Bellrock, Ont. He will tell you what Gin Pills did for him, after he had suffered with Kidney trouble for 15 years. Here is his letter:

"I suffered for about 15 years with my kidneys. I could get nothing to help me. The pain went all through my back and shoulders and down the calves of my legs. When I would sit down for a while, I could not straighten up again until I would walk a rod or more, the pain was so great. A neighbor advised me to take GIN PILLS. I did so and six boxes cured me. It is about two and a half years since I quit taking them. My back is all right; no pains and no more backache. I thank GIN PILLS for it all—they are worth their weight in gold. D. A. YORKE.

1230.—A SIMPLE STYLISH MODEL.

Costume for Misses and Small Women.

This desirable model is easy to develop. It is cut in semi-fitted style with long waist outline, and has a belt which may be omitted. The skirt is a three piece model, and fares in comfortable fullness below the hips. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or short length. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 14, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 5 yards of 44 inch material for a 16 year size. The skirt measures about 3 1/2 yards in the 16 year size at its lower edge. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

1216.—LADIES' COSTUME.

Rivaling the tunic and redingote styles one sees new models in Princess effect, as shown in this attractive design. The waist is cut to form a panel over the skirt front, and may be finished at raised or normal waistline. A deep yoke that may be cut high or at normal waistline forms the upper part of the new flare skirt. The sleeve is close fitting and finished with a smart cuff. Brown serge was used in this instance, with lace and a touch of brown velvet for trimming. Buttons to match ornament the fronts. This style is good for linen, for gingham and other cotton goods. In white linen, with embroidered panel, revers and cuffs, it would be real smart. It will also develop nicely in taffeta or poplin. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 3/4 yards of 44 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures 2 3/4 yards at the lower edge. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

The Child and the Church.

Second Lecture of a Series on This Subject Delivered Last Night at Gower Street Church.

REV. DOUGLAS HEMMEON, B.A.

A revival of earnest desire to ascertain the real nature of childhood and the true relation of the child to religion, began in the middle of the last century, and was inaugurated by Horace Bushnell. The church is gradually awakening to a sense of what she owes to this student of child nature, and no account of the past attitude of the church to the child can ignore the work he did. In his book, "Christian Nurture," he placed before the church of his day the essential requirements of the child, contending earnestly for a recognition of the limitations of childhood and a consequent adaptability of religion to his fundamental nature. He took up the saving idea of development. He avoided the intellectualism of Scholasticism and the Reformers by pointing out how Christian life and Christian character can come to the child; in fact, that their normal access to the child is rather by way of unconscious assimilation and self-expression rightly guided than by way of deliberate volition.

Bushnell was scarcely heeded in his own day, but has since been recognized as the restorer to the child of his religious heritage.

A brief examination of the relation of the public school to the religious nature of the child is necessary, because the opinion is still held by many that the public school should teach religion.

With the rise of Democracy and Protestantism there began a movement, the inevitable result of which will be that the church will lose her last vestige of direct control over the state and public instruction.

Now, it should be admitted as fundamental that the public schools must recognize the national religious faith—the religious genius of the race. The public school system of this country is theistic. It is not godless. More, it is Christian. It will, therefore, appear that there should be a certain body of

As a modern and socialized form of this institution the Sunday School proper, as is well known to this assembly, dates only from the year 1780, when Robert Haikes began his work, and has gone on increasing in power and influence, until it has spread over part of Germany and France, and all of England, Scotland and America.

There remains one other organization for the religious training of the young. I refer to the Christian Endeavor Societies, Young People's Guilds, Unions and Epworth Leagues that have sprung up within the majority of those present. This movement is supposed to take up the active side of the child's nature and give it a field for movement and direction in development. It will be taken up for closer study as we proceed.

We have now briefly and roughly given an outline of the child's position in the church down to the present day. We have found that the theoretical estimate of the child has varied from time to time, under pressure of different forces. We have seen how, owing to these varying estimates of the child, efforts have been made from time to time to make the child fit reactionary theologues rather than to adapt theology to the child.

But we must not forget that, through it all, the child has remained the same—a child of God, born, as Paul says, agios—"holy." And that word does not refer to civil status, as some say, but to religious condition. Shined within the sacred precincts of that relation to God, he has always responded to the proper agencies and often resisted the improper, with that supreme inertia of divine unconsciousness by which God often protects "them that are His."

We come now to a study of the nature of the child. The Talmud fancifully defines the child as "one who cannot ride on his father's shoulder and go up from Jerusalem to the Mount of the House," or "one who cannot grasp his father's hand and go up from Jerusalem to the Mount of the House." But these definitions are made to fit the law that exempted children from attendance on the temple worship. Rightly defined, the child is the immature human being. By common consent, childhood is divided into successive periods as follows: Infancy, from the beginning of life till six; young childhood, from six till eleven or thirteen; Adolescence, from thirteen till maturity. These periods are sub-divided for more technical purposes than ours, but such division is not necessary here. My aim will be to show the differences between the child and the adult, and will begin, naturally, with his physical structure, because all the faculties and capacities of the child depend, as we will see, in a great degree, upon physical structure.

The relation between, let us say, chastity and health, in the adolescent—who shall say how intimate it is? Malnutrition has been responsible many a time for that which was credited to original sin.

After a short description of his bodily characteristics we will proceed to discuss his senses, will, intellect and feeling. And I shall be satisfied if any word herein shall prompt anyone to a more exhaustive study of childhood, knowing that such study will begot interest in and love for the training of the young.

It will be seen, as we proceed, how necessary it is for any system of education in the school or home to be in harmony with the long process of development that intervenes between the child and the adult. It will further appear that this order of a child's training must not stand in any preconceived or logical sequence, much less in any haphazard way, but in the way prescribed by the child's own nature.

Finally, the bearing of such conclusions as are found valid, upon the spiritual training of the child, will be noticed.

We will proceed, then, to some of the conspicuous physical differences between the child and the adult.

It has seemed sometimes as though the child has been the last young animal to come into his rights. Calves, colts, pups and chickens have been the happy beneficiaries of untold thought and expenditure as to diet and environment, and their fragile and helpless condition has been amply recognized. Yet, strange as it may seem, the young of man have been looked upon as men in the small.

The practical judgments of society on the child, as seen in methods of education and social and domestic care, are founded on this false assumption.

But the infant and his parent are entirely dissimilar in everything but the most fundamental characteristics. Conceive of an adult whose relative proportions had not altered since birth, and you have a monster whose immense head and dwarfed lower face, long body and short arms and legs would almost frighten you. Think, then, at what unequal rates the various parts of the body must grow.

The child and the adult do not breathe alike. Their pulse-rates are not alike. The composition of their bodies is not alike. The foetus is ninety-seven per cent. water, the adult only fifty-seven per cent. The proportion of muscle tissue is relatively much larger in the child, the proportion of tendon much smaller. Hence the suppleness of children.

The heart of an infant is relatively nearly twice as large as the heart of an adult, the newly born infant's heart being nearly one per cent. of its weight, while the grown person's heart is only half of one per cent. of his weight. In infancy the relation of the size of the heart to that of the great artery leading from it is as twenty-five to twenty, while in the adult it is as two hundred and ninety to sixty. Probably most persons have noticed the rapid and loud beating of the heart of a young child even when he is quiet.

The lungs of a child differ much from those of an adult. They do not reach their forward growth till after seven years, and differ not only in size but in form, structure, and physical and chemical importance.

The stomach is tubular in shape, and moves vertically placed than in the adult, resulting in that readiness and ease in vomiting so noticeable in childhood.

The intestines grow very irregularly in childhood and the different parts are constantly changing their relative sizes and positions.

The spinal column of a child is light and flexible, so that it may be pulled and twisted with ease. It is nearly straight, the strains of mature life having altered its shape, in the adult. It does not reach its complete development till after the eighteenth year.

These constitute the greatest physical differences between the child and man. The bearing of them upon the training of the child can readily be seen. The most the child should have to do is to grow, because his goal is far away, and he has only started, and must cover three-fourths of the distance in one-fourth of the time allowed him to reach it. The supply of material for growth and the expenditure of energy in this alone is very great.

When your little one is irritable in the evening, be patient, knowing that to the exhausting demand of exercise has been added this drain to the demand of growth, and remember that he has travelled that day a long distance in the journey toward man's estate, and is tired.

A great increase in physical growth occurs at the period of adolescence—that most critical stage in the life of a child. This rapid increase lasts from twelve to nineteen and reaches its height at about thirteen. More significant still is the fact that the rates of growth between the different parts of the body are not proportionate. Sometimes the muscles grow faster and the child is "loose jointed." Sometimes the bones grow too fast and stretch the attached muscles and the child has "growing pains." This is known as the awkward age, but when we remember the reasons, how much more patient we should be with the awkwardness and its resulting shyness and unwillingness to perform public acts, or even acts in the family, partaking of a dramatic or public nature, such as singing, playing and reciting. At this age, physical culture is of the utmost importance, especially that of the larger muscles. Those used in minute work are altering their size too rapidly to be taxed.

We come now to the consideration of differences between the child and the adult that partake of the nature of mind and relate to his ability to govern his actions.

The first in this field in the order of development show themselves in the automatic centres that control the heart and lungs and need only to be mentioned thus in passing, since they are practically beyond control.

The next in order of time possesses more interest, and have to do with controlling the movements of the limbs.

For the purpose of this lecture it will be enough to say that all movements of the various parts of the body are controlled by nerve centres either in the spinal column or in the brain proper. Certain centres begin movement, certain other centres stop movement. Now, the centres that stop or control movement, called the inhibitory centres, develop much later in life than those that begin movement.

Here is the explanation of those spasmodic, uncontrolled movements, called nervous reflexes, seen in a young child. If a baby should wish

The Success of the War

The Russian War Office has established a reputation for the accuracy of the official news it has given out during the past seven months. Much news of a sensational character, exaggerated and unreliable, has come from Petrograd but these reports are to be distinguished from official news. They are stories gathered on the streets and in the clubs and cafes of Petrograd by newspaper correspondents. For once in a way even the latter, instead of sending an exaggerated report of the number of men who capitulated at Przemysl, sent a number which was not half that which is now officially reported by the War Office at Petrograd. This circumstance is probably unique in the history of the war correspondence of the past six months. It serves however to bring out in clearer relief the importance of the Russian achievement. Reckoning officers and men, nearly 120,000 men surrendered, including 9 generals. To isolate a fortress and garrison of such magnitude as is indicated by these figures, which are given out as emanating from a source which has so far proved reliable, and to hold it by siege six months, must require the presence of even a greater army, for the besieging army had not only to hold in the garrison, and that was no easy task, as has been realized by the desperate sorties of last week, but to derive all its attempts from the outside to relieve the besieged garrison. It is surely, therefore, very conservative to estimate the Russian army engaged in these tasks at from 150,000 to 200,000 men, and it is this great army which has now been set free to engage in other tasks on the eastern front. Such a force of tried soldiers, buoyed up by the greatest victory of the war, will have to be seriously reckoned with by our enemies.

The Food of Fighting Men.
A lecture on "The Food Factor in War" was delivered at the Institute of Hygiene in London, by Dr. Gaestneau Earle, recently.
Dr. Gaestneau Earle said that the soldier's diet must contain the requisite amount of energy-producing and body-building material, and must be varied, fresh, based on national habit, and easy of transport. The basis of the British ration was fresh meat, 1 1/2 lb., and bread, 1 1/2 lb. To these were added:—Sugar, 2 1/2 oz.; oatmeal, 2 oz.; jam, 4 oz.; bacon, 2 oz.; cheese, 2 oz.; vegetables, 2 oz.; tea and salt.
This ration, compared with that of other armies, contained more of practically everything but bread, and it was especially rich in fat and sugar. Each man carried a reserve ration sufficient for three days, made up of concentrated foods, biscuits, 8 oz.; sugar, 3 oz.; bacon, 4 oz.; chocolate, 3 oz.; cheese, 4 oz.; and tea. This ration was used when the men were cut off from usual supplies. An emergency ration was also carried, consisting of Plasmon and chocolate.

McMurdo's Store News.
WEDNESDAY, Mar. 24, 1915.
The more we look through our new stock of Willard's Forkdip Chocolates, the more convinced are we that we have this time a really remarkable variety of these sweetmeats, and that it will be possible from among them to select the kinds that you or your lady friend will like best. In style, in flavour, in variety, in price, these chocolates are designed to suit all tastes, and all purses. In any event, Willard's will give the utmost satisfaction. You should buy a box for her. Prices from 46c. to $1.50 a box.
Gaul's Digestive Syrup will relieve most, and cure some kinds of indigestion. It is a good remedy for torpid liver and constipation. Price 50c. a bottle.

Many Diseases Cured by Use of Radium.
Splendid Results are Obtained at the London Institute.
London, March 17. — Out of 749 cases treated at the Radium Institute during the past year 19 are described as cured, 50 are apparently cured and 328 improved. As to the rest, the results were not apparent at the time the report was prepared. The diseases treated ranged from cancer, in which the results were varying, to sprich catarrh, of which even the severest cases were cured. Superficial growths such as birthmarks of the "wort wine stains" type were rendered unnoticeable. One of those of great facial birthmarks was a hotel porter who had been kept out of work because of his disfigurement. Warts that defied acids quickly melted away under the influence of radium. The radium institute is maintained by public subscriptions and its work is carefully watched by scientists.

General Leman.
Defender of Liege, Refuses Parole.—It Released He Would Offer Services to Belgium and King.
Paris, March 17.—General Leman, Belgian defender of Liege, now a prisoner in Germany, has refused to accept his liberty under a parole which the Germans have offered him, according to a letter received by one of his friends, a major in a Belgian engineer corps.
General Leman replied to the offer of a parole, he writes his friend, that his first act on obtaining freedom would be to offer his services to Belgium and his king. He added that the wound in his foot, which had troubled him so long, had at last healed.

Cape Report
Special to Evening Telegram.
CAPE RACE.—To-day, Wind W., strong, weather fine; shore from here westward all clear but along shore eastward; ice about 2 miles off moving off rapidly. The schooner reported yesterday was sighted this morning about 15 miles S.E., still in ice; a barquette composed of the Dunsire is about 5 miles south in clear water outside of ice; she will probably get clear tonight under present conditions. Bar. 28.42; temp. 28.

SOME AUTO TRUCKS ARE CAPTURED BY THE ALLIES AT SEA.
Paris, March 18.—An important capture of American goods, consigned to Germany, is reported by Le Matin. Before the outbreak of war Germany ordered 8,000 automobile wagons, fitted up for the carrying of twenty soldiers each, from American manufacturers, paying a large sum as an initial instalment. The consignment, however, was recently captured by the Allies at sea, and the autos could be used to rush 160,000 troops at a critical moment at the greatest speed to any desired point.

BULGARIA AND THE WAR.
LONDON, To-day.
King Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, to-day held an interview with M. Mallinoff, Democratic leader, says the Daily Mail's Bucharest correspondent. The subject discussed was the forming of a coalition cabinet in the event of Bulgaria departing from her policy of neutrality. Later M. Mallinoff had a conference with Premier Radoslawoff.

TO-DAY'S BIG NICKEL.
A splendid programme has been arranged for the Nickel Theatre to-day. There are two two-reel films each of which is worth the admission fee. "A Diamond in the Rough" is a delightful film which will afford the greatest pleasure to all. The other two-reel film is "Romantic Joste" a very clever story. There will be a Mutual Weekly and a Keystone comedy. Attend to-day and help on the good cause.

Man Missing.
The whereabouts of a man named Joseph Johnston are now being sought by the police and others. He left his home on Monday last and has not since been heard of. The missing man is married, middle-aged and living in a central section of the city. About two months ago he was released from the Lunatic Asylum but was not noticed to be acting strangely up to the time he disappeared, though the belief is that his mind is unimpaired.

Reids Boats.
The Bruce, Glencoe and Home are still at Trepasser.
The Ethie left Marysstown at 7.20 p.m. yesterday going west.
The Kyle arrived at Louisburg at 9.30 p.m. yesterday and calls from there again to-day.
The Megie arrived at Pushthrough at 7.15 p.m. yesterday, going west.
The Spigona left Louisburg at daylight this morning and is due at Port aux Basques this evening.

Letter of Thanks.

March 19, 1915.
Hon. J. D. Ryan, President, Beneficent Irish Society.
Dear Sir,—Will you please convey to the members of the Benevolent and Frugal Society of Newfoundland Continent, comprising your procession of the 17th inst., the sincere thanks of Mrs. Steele, myself and family for their exceeding kind and thoughtful gifts of soap, which we appreciate their mark of respect to our dead boy and ourselves. It is such acts of kind thought as these which trouble that make the whole world kin.
Very sincerely yours,
S. O. STEELE.

POSTPONED.—Owing to the unexpected illness of Mr. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., the Sacred Concert which was to be held to-night at the College Hall, under his direction, has been postponed. Persons holding tickets are respectfully asked to retain them. Particulars as to date of Concert will be announced later. J. S. TAYLOR, Secretary.—mar24,11

THE SAR LECTURE.—A very pleasing feature in connection with the lecture to be given by Fr. Cox in the State Hall, is the free gift of the Theatre by the genial proprietor Jack Rossley; the free gift of the full brass band of the T. A. Society; the voluntary services of the entire Rossley troupe, and the ushers, while the popularity of the lecturer is shown by the fact that the plan which was opened at 8.30 this morning was almost sold out as we go to press.

Big Opening Day at Rossley's.
Mr. Jack Rossley is to be complimented on the wonderful transformation he has made at his East End Theatre. Every part of the interior has been gone over. The alterations to the front of the stage has been most remarkable. The rich drop curtain is greatly admired. But what he has done in the interior is what he has done in the exterior. The new performers left Liverpool on March 19th by the s.s. Scandinavian direct from Liverpool to Halifax, and should arrive here during Holy Week. Mr. Rossley has also got some of the finest pictures ever seen here; masterpieces of the land of films. The beautiful orchestra selections by Mr. A. Crocker, are simply delightful.

We understand that he has decided to give a Recital of popular songs at the Methodist College Hall on Easter Monday night.

STAN. LUMSDEN Reported Wounded.
Word has been received in the city that Lance-Corporal Stan Lumsden of the Princess Pats, was wounded at the night attack on Neve Chapelle, March 11th, and has been taken to the hospital base for treatment. Mr. A. K. Lumsden, father of the wounded soldier, is now in London, and was informed of his son's injury by telegraph from Rouen, France. Upon receiving the message, which was confirmed by the London War Office, Mr. Lumsden cabled his son Frank, who works at Bishop & Sons office, this city. As far as is known the injuries are not of a serious nature.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.
Every night sees this classy little house crowded out at each performance, and the little singer is more popular than ever. There are some splendid new films to be shown at "Ours," several big features being among the new shipment; a great three-reel feature "Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters," another three-reel feature, "A Beggar on Horseback" is a splendid story well acted. There are many comedies, dramas, industries and travelogues, all in beautiful condition. The views of Edinburgh are very interesting, as many people are anxious to see where our soldier boys are stationed. There are several very kind remissions of Ayre & Sons.

TURKS DEFERRED.
LONDON.
A statement given by official Press Bureau disclosing of a defeat inflicted by force operating against the enemy in the Arzonne, after having very heavy losses, the attacks were completely repulsed. North of Arras at Neuve Lorette, a German force delivered on Saturday a surprise attack to evacuate several companies of infantry. After blowing open the trenches, which were held by the British, the Germans, after two miles, shelled our positions until they were all destroyed. After a fierce struggle our assailants were repulsed, and they retreated, and in the process they inflicted very heavy losses. On Notre Dame, the Germans occupied all the trenches, which were the exception of the section still in hands. At Epargues the enemy counter-attacks, in an attempt to capture positions previously held by us, but they were all repulsed also progressed north.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, March 23.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
The French Government reports two serious reverses inflicted on the enemy in the Argonne, the enemy suffering very heavy losses. Counter-attacks were completely frustrated. The Russian Government reports progress on the northern front, and furious fighting in the Carpathians; 2,500 prisoners were captured near Lupkow Pass. Near Munkacz, the German attacks were repulsed.

TURKS DEFEATED.
LONDON, March 23.
A statement given out by the Official Press Bureau this evening, telling of a defeat inflicted on a Turkish force operating against the Egyptian town of Suez, says: On the 22nd inst., at dawn, one of our patrols discovered a party of the enemy near Elubri, a port opposite Suez. Shots were exchanged. Aeroplanes estimated the number as about one thousand, and a company of infantry, artillery and a few cavalry. The guns of Elubri opened fire and inflicted casualties whereupon the enemy retired and formed a camp eight miles east of the Suez Canal. Early this morning a force under General Younghusband attacked and routed the enemy, who is now in full retreat. A prisoner says this force came direct from Bire el Sabu, having taken 12 days en route, and that General Traumer and three other German officers were with it.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.
PARIS via St. Pierre, March 23.
North of Arras at Notre Dame de Lorette, a German counter-attack, delivered on Saturday, compelled us to evacuate several sections of trenches, which we re-captured yesterday. At Boisgelle, northward, Albert, fighting operations continue. After blowing up one of the enemy's galleries we occupied the greatest part of the excavation. During Sunday, fifty shells fell on Rheims. In the Argonne we inflicted two severe reverses on the enemy. Near Bagatella we blew up three mines, and two companies of infantry assailed a German trench, in which our troops held on, in spite of vigorous counter-attacks. Five hundred metres further on, the Germans, after blowing up two mines, shelled our trenches and charged on a front of about 250 metres. After a fierce hand to hand struggle our assailants, although reinforced, were thrown back. Our artillery then opened fire on them in their retreat, and inflicted on them very heavy losses.

QUET REIGNS AT SINGAPORE.
LONDON, Mar. 23.
The British Colonial Office this evening gave out a statement dealing with the situation in Singapore, where recently there was mutiny among the Indian troops. The statement read: All messages from Singapore, since the last notification, show the restoration of normal conditions. Of those who took part in the recent riot, all except eleven have now surrendered, have been captured or have lost their lives. Five rioters have been shot.

Don't Cough Your Throat Sore "Nerviline" Will Cure You Quickly

The Annoyance of a Bad Cough
Soothed Away in One Day.
Nothing so bad for the throat as coughing, and nothing half so annoying as to have some one near by that is hacking, sneezing, or constantly clearing the throat.
Rub on Nerviline—it will save you all further pain and distress. Even our good rub with this soothing, penetrating remedy will bring the finest relief, will take out that rasping soreness, will stop that irritating tickle that makes you want to cough so much.
Nerviline isn't something new. It has a record of forty years of wonderful success behind it.
In rubbing on Nerviline you use something safe, reliable, and sure to cure. Its action is marvellous. The way it sinks in through the tissues—the way it penetrates to the seat of the congestion is really a wonder.
For chronic colds, coughs, or sore throat can't beat this trusty old family remedy. Its name spells care for any sort of pain in the joints or muscles. Try it for rheumatism, rub it on for sciatica or lumbago, test it out for neuralgia or headache—in every case you'll find amazing virtue and curative power in Nerviline. Most families keep the large 50c. bottle always handy on the shelf; trial size 25c., at all dealers in medicine.

after trial by a summary general court martial. One has been sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment, and seven to 1 year's imprisonment each. During the rioting, 17 German prisoners escaped. Of these, six have been recaptured. The conduct of the remainder of the German prisoners is exemplary.

THE SURRENDER OF PRZEMYSL.
PETROGRAD, March 23.
The Russian War Office announced to-day that 117,000 men were captured at Przemysl. The statement of the War Office says: According to figures given by General Kusmanek, the late commander, the number of prisoners who surrendered to the Russians was nine Generals, 93 officers of the general staff, 2,500 officers and officials, and 117,000 men. The number of guns and other war materials captured is being calculated.

LENIENT TREATMENT PROMISED.
WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.
Lenient treatment has been promised by the British Government for American cargoes contracted for before March 1st, now leaving or about to leave German ports bound for the United States. That assurance has been given by the State Department by the British Government in answer to an enquiry as to the status of cargoes brought by Americans in Germany which could not be shipped for lack of transportation facilities before the issue of the British order in council. Just what lenient treatment will mean has not been defined, but it is assumed that where there is no question about American ownership of goods, they will be promptly released if seized by any British cruisers.

WE WILL EVACUATE ANTWERP.
LONDON, Mar. 23.
The correspondent of the Daily Express at Amsterdam says: Exclusive news which reaches me from most authoritative quarters indicates clearly that the Germans intend to evacuate Antwerp by May 1st. They will in-trench directly from the Yser to the Meuse, where they expect to make their final stand in Belgium. The German Intelligence Bureau recently has been exceptionally active in Belgium and France and has sent to the main headquarters exhaustive reports about the strength of the Allies all along the line with a view to making it understood in Germany that it is futile to resist their pressure.

St. Patrick's Dey Celebration at Holyrood.

St. Patrick's Day—the great Irish festival—was duly observed and the great Saint highly honored. The members of the Star of the Sea Association met in their hall at 9 o'clock in the morning, and after a short business routine, and an encouraging address from Vice-President Walsh, lined up outside the hall under Marshal's O'Rourke's direction, to begin the annual parade. The day was an ideal one for the celebration. The society in their regalia and the large numbers of citizens proceeding along the route proudly sporting the dear little Shamrock and garlands and wreaths of green—all combined to make an attractive scene. The parade arrived at the church at 10.30 a.m. and occupied the front pews. High Mass was sung by the church at 10.30 and occupied the hour, and the organist Miss Nellie Flynn had a beautiful programme of music prepared for the festival which was rendered in faultless style and elicited most favorable comment. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the Society reformed and marched back to the hall. Halting on the way at the Presbytery, Vice-President Walsh tendered the society's greetings and well-wishes to the respected Pastor and Spiritual Director, Rev. W. P. Finn, P.P. In reply Father Finn thanked the society for its greetings and well-wishes to him upon St. Patrick's Day, and commented upon the great part Irishmen—St. Patrick's people—were playing in the present big war. He eulogized V.P. Walsh for his fine speech and upon the fact of his having a son, a volunteer in the 1st Nfld. Regiment. Cheers were then called for and heartily given for Father Finn, Ireland and V.P. Walsh and the Star of the Sea Association of Holyrood, and the parade continued the route to the hall. The Society having returned to the hall was addressed by V. P. Walsh, lauding the members for their presence in such strength and urging unity and fraternity amongst the members so as to make the Star of the Sea grow stronger numerically and financially. A.V.P. Hicks, Treasurer Carroll, Secretary Dwyer and L. O'Rourke also congratulated the members for the successful parade and V.P. Walsh for so worthily discharging the duties of presiding officer of the day's celebrations. Regret was also expressed at the unavoidable absence of our Serious Assault.

MAN ATTACKS ANOTHER WITH AN AXE AND CHOPS HIM OVER THE EYE.
It was stated in certain circles last evening that a sensational incident resulting in the loss of life happened in the interior of the country. Fortunately the nature of the affair is not so serious, and enquiries made by us elicited the fact that on the morning of Thursday last, March 18th, a man named Harris, of Dark Cove, near Gumbo, went into the house of a man named George Ivany and attacked him with an axe, inflicting a severe wound over the left eye about an inch and a half long. No particulars could be ascertained as to the cause of the quarrel, but it has been learned that both men have been living at variance for a very long time. On his return from Grand Falls Magistrate Fitzgerald will investigate the assault.

Little Enteric in Army.

London Chronicle:—The number suffering from enteric has been kept very small—only 500 since the commencement of the war. The contrast with our terrible enteric figures in South Africa is sufficiently sanitary measures now taken in the Army; but there can be no doubt that the discovery and practice of inoculation has had much to do with it.

Post Office Case.

A further enquiry into the alleged robbery of money and clothes from the post office at Clarendville was conducted before Judge Knight yesterday afternoon. Head Const. Dawe, who arrested the accused, now on remand, gave evidence. I. G. Sullivan is acting on the case for the Crown and Mr. Morine for the defence.

Says Corsican Flew.

Montreal, March 16.—The Stars and Stripes were floated from the mast of the Allan liner Corsican while she was steaming down the Mersey on her last voyage, because two German submarines were waiting in the waters hard by, according to one of the passengers on the Corsican, Mr. David McKay, of the C. P. R. freight department, Winnipeg, who arrived in Montreal to-night from Halifax. The American flag was hauled down, he said, as soon as the steamship cleared the Mersey and dropped her pilot.

Seaman Arrested FOR REFUSING DUTY.

A warrant was sworn out yesterday afternoon by Capt. Yeoman of the Furness Line steamer Tabasco for the arrest of a member of his crew named Gammou, who, it is alleged, refused duty on several occasions recently. Const. O'Keefe took charge of the warrant when issued and inside of half an hour met the seaman he was looking for, presented him with the document and asked him to kindly accompany him to the police station, which he did.

Russia Buys Up Wheat Will Ship Product as Soon as the Danubians are Forced.

London, March 17.—To relieve the Russian civil population the Russian Government has bought practically all the wheat that can be exported from the Black Sea, and should the waterway be opened as the result of the present naval operations of the Allies against Constantinople. The government will form a special organization to transport and sell wheat. Great Britain and France have the promise of an option on all exported wheat, not only for the use of their military, but of the civil population as well.

Stars and Stripes.

Montreal, March 16.—The Stars and Stripes were floated from the mast of the Allan liner Corsican while she was steaming down the Mersey on her last voyage, because two German submarines were waiting in the waters hard by, according to one of the passengers on the Corsican, Mr. David McKay, of the C. Big Jobs —are gained largely by doing common tasks uncommonly well.

But—to do unusually good work of any kind, fitness of body and mind are required.

Food plays a big part in this matter—food that contains true nourishment. And true nourishment—be it remembered—must include certain important elements which unfortunately are often lacking in the ordinary dietary—especially in white bread. These elements are phosphorus, iron, lime, sulphur, etc., stored by Nature in her field grains, and absolutely necessary for building strong, vigorous bodies and active brains.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD
—made of choice wheat and malted barley, affords all the nutrition of these grains, including these important mineral elements, in form for easy, quick digestion.

Grape-Nuts food is always fresh, crisp, sweet and ready to eat—with cream or milk.

Thousands have found that a ration of Grape-Nuts each day makes for real progress towards the bigger things of life.

ROYALTY AND THE WAR.

Nine members of the Royal Family are now on active service—the prince of Wales, Prince Albert, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Princes Alexander and Maurice of Battenburg (sons of Princess Henry of Battenburg), Princes George and Louis of Battenburg (sons of Prince Louis of Battenburg), and the Duke of Teck and Prince Alexander of Teck, while the Duke of Connaught, who is doing Imperial duty as Governor-General of Canada, has also undertaken the personal supervision of the organization and training of the Canadian troops for the front. This list would have borne another name had it not been that Prince Maurice of Battenburg was killed in action when serving with his regiment, the King's Royal Rifle Corps. Three of those named are serving on the Headquarters Staff at the front in different capacities, these being Prince Arthur of Connaught, the Duke of Teck, and Prince Alexander of Teck.

BELGIAN ARMY'S REBIRTH.

One of the most striking phenomena of the war is the rebirth of the Belgian army. Immediately after Antwerp it was tired, somewhat disheartened, and greatly weakened in numbers. Since then it has grown into an important force, and behind the fighting line in France recruits, arriving by devious ways from Belgium, and more directly from the various colonies of refugees, have assembled in ever increasing numbers. The announcement contained in an article in a Paris newspaper that 80 per cent. of the young men of the 1914 class escaped from the provinces of Belgium bordering on the Dutch frontier, will not surprise those who have been in touch with Belgians in London. At fairly frequent intervals one came across men who had just come from Holland, having risked the penalties attaching to capture in an attempt to cross the frontier of their own country. I talked with two Belgian soldiers some weeks ago who had left Antwerp three days before. It seemed very romantic, this "chance" meeting with men from the German-rudden city. "And to-morrow," they said, "we are going again to Belgium—through France. It is a long way round from Belgium to Belgium in these days!"

hitherto known as reserves on the same footing as the rest of the army may be variously estimated. The announcement bears all the features of an official recognition that troops which have been in training behind the lines have now reached a level of efficiency which makes the term "reserves" inappropriate and perhaps offensive. The order definitely refers to this progress of training. Another inference that may plausibly be drawn is that the disappearance of the distinction between two sections of the army implies the early employment of them together. The training and equipment of large bodies of men which has been going on in France at the same time as the building up of the new British armies was known some time ago to be producing remarkably good results.

DUTCH MILITARY ACTIVITY.

Another item, the significance of which must not be overlooked, is the step which has just been taken by the Netherlands Government. Holland, since the outbreak of the war, has maintained its army at full strength. Many of Queen Wilhelmina's subjects were residing in Belgium when the German invasion took place, and a proportion of these found their way to Great Britain upon the enemy's advance. The Netherlands Consul-General in London has now invited all such Dutchmen domiciled in Belgium, but staying in the country, who were born in the year 1896, together with their parents and guardians, to communicate with him as soon as possible, "in connection with their reporting for service in the Netherlands Army." This would seem to indicate that the Dutch Minister of War contemplates the calling up of a further class, and thus preparing for any immediate emergency.

THE MULE IN THE ARMY.

From the quality of the latest arrivals of mules here, it appears that they are to be used for cavalry purposes. The lot at Epsom (the famous race-course just outside London and the scene of the annual Derby) are declared by experts to be as clean as polo ponies, able to gallop and quite big enough for the purpose—they are about fourteen hands two inches high. They would outrun any of the heavy stamp of horse, of which there are plenty left, whilst horses suitable for cavalry purposes are scarce all over the world. Mules, of course, are used by Spanish and Mexican cavalry, but they have not hitherto been used in the British army except for transport and for mountain batteries. The likelihood is that there will be a revival of the mounted infantry idea, to take light cavalry men who are now working in the trenches from place to place where motor traffic is impossible. Sir Garnet Wolley in 1872 foretold something of the kind in his "Wellington Essay," where he said that mounted infantry, on mules or even in carts, accompanied by a "small proportion of real cavalry," would be of signal use in days to come. The mules and ponies that formed the whole of Sir Frederick Robert's transport from Kabul to Kandahar—he had no oxen or camels—carried two "maunds" which is about 160 pounds, but were capable of carrying much more. A mountain battery mule's load runs up to 220 pounds, but he is never as big as fourteen hands.

AN OUTPOST OF EMPIRE.

I have been permitted to see a letter just received from the Governor of a British possession in the Indies. It gives an interesting account of the steps taken in the colony on the news of the outbreak of war, with some ideas of the problems which he had to face. He writes: "On the 31st July I telegraphed to Bombay to obtain 200 tons of rice as a reserve, and started planting in all Crown lands with foodstuffs, and removed all restrictions as to fishing, so, as planters followed my lead as to planting maize and potatoes, with an inexhaustible supply of fish there is no question of starvation. I issued a paper currency covered by cash deposited by our local bank in India, and assisted firms to meet their expenses and decrease unemployment. I dumped 2,500 tons of Admiralty fuel in shallow water to deny its use to itinerant cruisers, and since the Emden and Koenigsberg have been accounted for have recovered all but about 200 tons. Take it all round my people have behaved well. There has been no panic or trouble. As we are quite open to raid there was considerable excitement, as both the Emden and Koenigsberg were in our close vicinity. For eleven days in August we were entirely cut off from the world by the almost simultaneous breaking of our cables between _____ and _____ and for seven weeks we had no home mails. How we can supply our families with enough of the right kind of food at the lowest possible cost is the most acute problem of the average American housewife. We took a nibble at this problem yesterday. Let's take another today. Of the three substances, proteins, fats and carbohydrates which the body requires, protein is the most important because it rebuilds the body. As the average person gets a large proportion of his protein from meat and eggs that makes it also the most expensive. Now what we should do is to try to substitute for the expensive cuts of meat from which we have been getting the body building proteins some other less expensive food which also contains protein. Now what are these foods?

Substitutes for Expensive Meats.

Well, for one thing, some of the cheaper meats contain just as much protein as the more expensive. The theory that the best is the cheapest is not true of meat buying. The more expensive meat is more palatable but not necessarily more nourishing. Next a housewife should remember that fish is almost as satisfactory a protein container as meat and use it accordingly. Then there are other sources of protein less expensive than fish even. Oatmeal, cheese, milk and the dried legumes (peas and beans) have fairly large percentages of protein. Thus on the morning when you do not serve eggs a large dish of oatmeal will help supply the deficiency in protein. Dried beef is also very rich in protein and thus makes an excellent breakfast or lunch dish. An interesting fact is that skimmed milk is as rich in protein as whole milk (the loss is in the fat) and this makes it a valuable food for the money. For instance flower trimmed caplets they form a turnout that can be worn anywhere and everywhere. The furs to go with this latest style of toilette are quite original in shape, and resemble nothing more than the small fur mats one sees on the floors of sporting households that is, the entire skin, head and all, of some animal not much larger than a fox. Long stoles have entirely gone out. Considering the recent weather it is not surprising that umbrellas have come in for considerable attention. Handles are very long and quite decorative in effect, and may be highly ornamental.

WINTER DRESS AGAIN.

With the return of the cold weather London women have resumed their winter apparel, rather prematurely discarded in favor of spring fashions. One of the newest modes, however, is one which lends itself to either spring or winter equally well. It is the combination of dark blue serge with black silk or satin, which has come to us via Paris and which bids fair to be very popular here owing to the maximum of usefulness it manages to combine with smartness. The two are seen in the finest serge and satin or in stouter materials for both morning and afternoon wear, and with the latest light colored spats and footwear and the tiny new to get his hand to his mouth, he waits till some chance activity of the centres should bring it. Should he wish to turn his head in given direction, he would find without the means of doing so, as some one has said, a spine creature.

A child cannot begin to control movements till the fibres that the necessary orders begin to do work. So we find him endowed with a marvellously fine and complete set of tools for delicate tasks, but make no use of them. He has a tongue, but he cannot frame sentences; feet and legs, but they carry him anywhere. And the way is long and a wherein he grows from this condition to the self-control of it. Inhibition means more than persons suppose. It is the lesson man has to learn. Obey child of three or four. How power of self control he has. Not inhibit or control his impulsive action. to get his hand to his mouth, he must wait till some chance activity in the spinal centres should bring it there. Should he wish to turn his head in a given direction, he would find himself without the means of doing so. He is, as some one has said, a spinal-cord creature.

A child cannot begin to control his movements till the fibres that carry the necessary orders begin to do their work. So we find him endowed with a marvellously fine and complex set of tools for delicate tasks, but he cannot make use of them. He has fingers, but they might as well all be thumbs; a tongue, but he cannot frame a sentence; feet and legs, but they cannot carry him anywhere.

And the way is long and arduous wherein he grows from this helpless condition to the self-control of maturity. Inhibition means more than most persons suppose. It is the hardest lesson man has to learn. Observe a child of three or four. How little power of self control he has. He cannot inhibit or control his impulses to action. Stand him before you and tell him to keep perfectly still. You might as well talk to the wind. He cannot keep still. The conscious effort hurts him. His muscles twitch, his body sways, tensions appear about his eyes and mouth. His activity can only be controlled by something external upon which his interest is centered. If he tries to control it he fails. A normal child is never still in the strict sense of the term.

A certain manufacturer of children's rubbers has recognized this lack of control in his youthful customers, and puts a cushion or buffer on the heel of his product just where the foot of the restless little sitter strikes on its backward swing. It is to be hoped that the child's Sunday School teacher, to say nothing of his parent, is as wise as the maker of his rubbers in making allowances for his undeveloped state.

When your little boy spills his mug of milk over the clean table cloth, remember, before you take the matter in hand, that whereas your own brain issues its orders to well-trained servants in eye and hand and foot by well-trained messengers in nerve and fibre, those little hands are only learning the rudiments of accurate motion, and that behind those steady eyes efforts were initiated and orders given that were never fulfilled.

The centres that control the largest muscles are prepared for service first, and there is a definite order in which the others come under the control of the will. The last to report for duty are those which control the combinations of various members, for such complex tasks as writing and drawing, as well as those still higher centres that control impulses and desires of a more obscure and subtle character. Neurologists have shown that this course must be followed in the growth of the child. How difficult, then, is it for him to adjust himself to his environment? He cannot observe the proprieties, conventions, and manly things of mature life; for these things depend upon the control of natural tendency from motives derived from long experience.

When our little one innocently asks our bald-headed visitor why his head is so shiny, and otherwise shocks the proprieties; when, grown older, he breaks a bit of parlor trumpery, or answers heedlessly or passionately, before you say that these things are the result of the old Adam in him and must be excused with the "strap," think whether it would be fair or not to say that the ability to prevent them has not been fully developed, and ask yourself who is responsible for its development.

Self-control during adolescence is of the utmost importance. We have seen its necessarily gradual development with regard to the purely physical muscular activities. But as we approach those inhibitions in the moral realm, the matter increases in interest, import and complexity.

The youth is now growing to a fuller self-consciousness. New feelings and desires take possession of him. This is the age in which the powerful sex-instinct is developed. It is the critical period of life. The child's future is made or marred here. All depends upon the proper exercise of this wonderful sex-instinct. The secret of success lies in converting the more immediate satisfaction of the senses into a higher equivalent, into enthusiasm for some form of science such as botany, chemistry, geology; some form of art as etching or painting. Beat of all into some form of more direct helpfulness of humanity and service of God.

This is the age when, with the development of self-consciousness comes a sense of independence and freedom, a sense of ability to govern his own conduct, and of responsibility. It is now that he refuses to be any longer treated as an infant. How many parents lose their children here? How many children are orphaned at this stage? The parent treats the boy or girl as an infant to accept his will. The child is conscious of an invader monitoring himself and his nature experiences a revolution against outside dogmatic control that often approaches the pathological. He should be advised, guided, sympathized with taught to rule himself, and only controlled by outside constraint as a last resort.

It is at this stage that the religious nature of the child asserts itself with fullest vigor. This is the age of "long, long thoughts," of conscious choices, of decisions. Consequently, this is the age of conversion, i. e., the fuller consciousness of a personal relationship to God and of responsibility for the recognition of that relationship. Heretofore the life has been, or should have been, one of unquestioning dependence upon the goodness, loving kindness and reasonableness of the parent. But now the life is thrown back upon itself. What matter then, it may be asked, what the past training has been? This past training determines present choices. This is where the child takes up unconsciously the character the past has formed in him, the ideals it has given him, and makes them his own for life.

"The child is father of the man." Given the proper training in his earlier stages, and the rule guarantees the formation of proper choices as the age of choice comes on, and without any of those agonies of emotional stress in which many have been made to connect the religious life with an event rather than with a growth. The abrupt form of such religious conversion, however, is not an essential to a determination to take up religious responsibilities. Rather is it, as already hinted, indicative of defective training.

Finally, in this matter of control, what a flood of light is shed upon the development of moral conduct when we remember that the centres of self-control are not fully matured till from twenty-five to thirty-five years of age. This is about the time we speak of persons "settling down" or "getting steady." We see now what the expressions really mean. Shakespeare speaks truly when he says: "Our own precedent passions do instruct us. What levity is in youth!" No man is fit for his life work till he has learned self-control, till he is fully developed. And it is no surprise to us to see that the world's great men have taken up their calling at about this age.

We arrive now at differences between the child and the adult in the senses. Much that has already been said is applicable in this sphere. The child learns to see, hear, taste, and smell just as he learns to walk; that is, by developing the inner centres that correspond to the outer organs.

The centre of vision in the retina is developed after birth. The newborn child cannot really see for some weeks, and, for some time after sight comes to him, can see but dimly. The ability to see clearly, to measure distance, and to grasp the third dimension is of very slow growth. Knowing this, one would never expect from a child the visual ability of an adult.

The sense of hearing also develops very slowly and unevenly, and the ability to distinguish the finer distinctions in sounds is of comparatively late growth.

The senses of smell and taste are exceedingly elementary in the child, only the greater differences being noticed.

The child has not the means for accurate analysis possessed by the adult. He is liable to make mistakes, may mistake one sound for another, or see things in their wrong proportions. And the memories of these things should be outgrown. To the child there is no inherent or reasonable distinction between truth and falsehood. Asked for the facts about an event, all things being equal, he will tell the simple truth. But other things not being equal, he will be influenced by motives to one side or the other. To save himself from punishment, or to gain some desired end, he will discard in an instant the righteousness of truth. Children are not by nature prone to wilful falsity, and they learn to lie just as they learn to tell the truth. And they can be taught to do the one or the other with about the same effort.

There is danger of overemphasizing the wrong things not being equal, if the adult to the same offence as committed by the child, thus teaching the little one to think of himself as being worse than he is. Good habits are not learned by magnifying the enormity of bad ones, but by forgetting them, and a child is easily discouraged.

We will now consider the child as a thinking being. His limitations in this respect are very great. A child is, at first, incapable of possessing what is called a general notion. Men, tree, watch, goodness, are general notions, or abstract words. Father, the little apple-tree, mother's watch, are particular notions, or concrete terms.

The child learns first about his mother's watch, then he sees his uncle's watch, then a friend's. Some day he sees a shop window full. If you speak of some particular one of those he has seen. But some day the word flashes on him in its general sense, and he thinks of "watch" without reference to any particular one. This is the way a child learns to think. He must always begin with the concrete, or particular, and through the concrete work his way slowly to the abstract or general.

Goodness has no meaning to the child apart from some good person. His father, his mother, his Sunday School teacher, are good. He does not know what love is in itself. He loves his brother, his playthings, his cookies. But by and by the meaning of love enters the growing soul.

This is the only way the child reaches the general notion, and the reason of it is that the part of the brain that deals with the general notion, or the abstract, is the last to develop. Hence the futility of beginning at the wrong end by using abstract terms to the child, of telling him to "love the good" for instance. Hence, also, the necessity of telling a story about some particular child who did some particular thing that was good. All wise primary and Junior Sunday School teachers should, therefore, use the story-telling method.

Tennyson well says: "For wisdom dealt with mortal powers Where truth in closest words shall fall. When truth, embodied in a tale, Shall enter in at lonely doors."

Hats have diminished so rapidly that they have all but reached the vanishing point. The new silhouette shows high collars, fitted sleeves, snug waist lines and flaring skirts. trees that reach the sky. Stones, flowers and trees think, speak and feel. Fairies, dwarfs and angels come and go at will. It is no matter of surprise to him that an old woman should live in a shoe; no miracle that cows should jump over the moon and boys climb bean-stalks to lands above the clouds. To him there is no miracle. So a corpulent Santa Claus will always come down an encausted chimney and out of a tiny fireplace to reach his Christmas tree. It is only through the land of Christmas trees that the land of the Burning Bush is reached. And the fireplace of childhood, in God's good time, becomes the Shekinah of His abiding presence.

In this connection a word about the truthfulness of young children is again in order. Not only is a child liable to mistake the events of his life because his senses have mistook them to him, but, under the influence of his imagination, he will rehearse things most preposterous to his elders, but entirely credible to himself. Here is a point where great care needs to be taken. If the child is checked too sharply, he may lose confidence in you for thus laying about you so rudely in his little world. Hawthorne has read a lesson in the "Snow Image" that many "common-sensible" people need to learn. On the other hand too much indulgence in the weaving of tales may form a strong habit which will lead to mischievous results in after years when such things should be outgrown.

To the child there is no inherent or reasonable distinction between truth and falsehood. Asked for the facts about an event, all things being equal, he will tell the simple truth. But other things not being equal, he will be influenced by motives to one side or the other. To save himself from punishment, or to gain some desired end, he will discard in an instant the righteousness of truth. Hr. Grace Notes.

The King Edward Brigade under command of Col. James, and accompanied by the British Band, attended Divine Service at St. Paul's Church last night.

Mr. Frank Morris, son of Mr. Joseph Morris, Keeper of Harbor Grace Island Light, met with an accident on the Island early on Saturday morning. He was hunting sea birds and in some way he slipped and the gun falling exploded, the charge entering his thigh. He was quickly taken to Bryan's Cove, the nearest settlement, and Dr. Cron, of this town, summoned. The doctor attended to his injuries which, we are glad to say, are not so serious as at first thought.

Yesterday, the day set apart for special prayers for peace in the Catholic Church, was one of the finest days for the season, and large numbers of the denomination visited the Cathedral and offered up prayers for world's peace. The C. C. C. had two of their number on guard at the door of the church all day. Two lads were on guard for two hours, when they were relieved by two others and so on throughout the day.

Some of the young ladies of the town are arranging for a 10 cent tea on Thursday evening and night of this week for the benefit of the poor. The tea will probably take place in the British Hall.

Sunday next will be known in the Methodist Church as Anniversary Sunday. A special programme has been arranged for Sunday School and evening service.

Two young ladies while coming from the South Side, on Saturday evening, fell through the ice near the Point of Beach. They were rescued by a young man, but not before he, too, had a cold bath.

Cruelty to animals is one of the most pitiable things imaginable. Fancy a man getting from his "Vic" and throwing stones at his own horse. This is not the only way this poor brute is ill-treated. Hope the police will soon "catch on" and have the man punished.

BRITAIN TO RECEIVE 30,000 WOUNDED.

London, March 18.—The British Red Cross is now preparing to receive 30,000 wounded soldiers from the front, Sir Frederick Treves, the famous surgeon and head of the department of applications of the society, said to-day.

According to his statement, two new hospitals are being made ready—the lunatic asylum at Chichester, which will have 1,000 beds, and a new institution near Waterloo, to be called King George's Hospital, which will be the largest in England and will have 1,650 beds.

"It is true," said Sir Frederick, "that the War Department has issued a call for 3,000 physicians to do work for Lord Kitchener's new army. These physicians will practice in England in convalescent homes and hospitals for the sick who have been brought back." It was necessary, he explained, for these physicians to be British subjects, as they would have a military rank and be on the pay roll of the British army as regular officers. Though the Red Cross, he went on, appreciated the many offers from Americans, it would be impossible to accept them for this work. However, he thought he could safely offer to find work for all first class American surgeons and physicians who would volunteer for other work of the Red Cross. He explained the need of the additional 3,000 physicians, and said it was absolutely false that many physicians who had volunteered at the outbreak of the war had been killed or lost.

DOING TOO MUCH.

"I fear I'll do too much," said James; "I'll more than earn my pay; I don't intend to bust my haves, a-tollin' round all day, for such a stipend as I get in this dod-gasted store, and if the boss would see me sweat, he'll have to pay me more." "The day is far too short," said John, "for all I wish to do; the hours fly past, and daylight's gone, before I'm half way through. And though my pay looks pretty sick, I'll work like old Sam Hill, till boss observes that I'm a brick, and leads me to his till." The boss was keeping tabs on them, as bosses always do; to James he said, "Young man, them! We have no use for you. The lad who fears he'll do too much with tramps will roam the pike, and when he's old he'll be in touch with poor-farms and the like." To John he said, "I've marked your gait, since first you came last fall, and early you have toiled and late, although your pay was small. Oh, all the time and every day, such lads employers seek; and I will now increase your pay by fifty cents a week."
