CHAPTER X. THE TAMING PROCESS.

"Well, Miss Grace," said he, "com- instantly regained his composure and usual serenity as he answered:

"Yes," she said, "and at you." He lifted his soft hat with a mock bow.

"That is very like a compliment." "Is it?" she retorted. "Then it's very unlike what I meant it for. I meant that I had come out here to look at you because I was tired of looking at everything in the drawing-room."

"I am sorry I am not more interesting than I am," he said, with his dark smile, turning to look at her as she leaned against the balcony, her chin resting on her hands, and her young, graceful figure thrown out plainly against the patch of moonlight—youth and graceful, but how different, how darkly, roughly different to the fair-haired, blue-eyed woman he had loved and forsaken!

Bad men have their soft and painful moments—this was one for Captain Reginald Dartmouth.

"What are you thinking of?" he asked, after he had made the mental comparison and determined to disregard the tender feeling it produced.

"Are you wondering who lives in the moon, Miss Grace?"

"No; I was wondering where you had been, and what you were doing in London," she replied, without turning her head.

He half started and wholly frowned.

This was the second time she had been inquisitive about his visit to town.

"It would not interest you if I were to tell you," he said. "I have been on business—troublesome business—that is all."

"You don't look as if it had troubled you much," she said in her curt, candid way, and she turned her head to look at him. "No," she said, scanning his face and knitting her heavy eyebrows, "not a bit. But I don't believe anything would trouble you. Did you cry when your mother died?"

He raised his eyebrows.

"Yes," he said.

"You did?" said Grace, with grave astonishment. "Then you must have loved her. Did you ever love any one else—that died?"

He turned to her half savagely, but

Miss Grace. Did I ever love any one else that died? Oh, yes—a cat! I loved her very much, and she died. I remember I had to drown her because she had a bad habit of mewing at awkward moments."

Grace looked at him with doubting scrutiny.

"Oh," said she, "you are making fun of me, as usual! I don't know when I like you least, when you tell stories like that or when you are speaking the truth and scolding me."

"Oh!" he said; "and, pray, when do you like me best?" and he knocked the ash off his cigar and, leaning one arm on the balcony, turned his face toward her.

It was a handsome face—beautiful enough, with many a grace and regularity, to ensnare any woman.

It did not move the rough, untutored girl before him.

"Never!" she replied, with a quiet glance of earnestness; "and I never shall."

"Don't be too sure, my girl," he said, with his unmovable smile of quiet superiority.

"I can't be too sure," she replied, yawning and turning from the terrace.

He uttered a laugh, musical and low, and looked round at her, then turned away to the night with a dark shadow upon his brow.

Presently she came back, so quietly he did not hear her, and stood at his side for a moment.

"Well?" he said.

"Good-night," she said. "I am going to bed."

"Oh, you are polite enough to say that, are you?" he said, turning his eyes down on her.

"No," she said, candidly. "But Uncle Harry told me I was to do so, and I've done it."

"Good-night," he said, holding out his hand; "and pleasant dreams."

She touched his long, white fingers with her own small, brown ones and bounded off the terrace, leaving him there to think and plot.

In the morning the squire sent down word from his bed-room that his gout was too bad to all of his breakfasting with them. So Grace and Captain Dartmouth took their meal alone. Directly it was over the captain put on his hat and went round the farm, as he had done before his visit to town.

The men were glad to see him, and hung about waiting for his orders. Already they looked upon him as their master when the squire was away.

One of them stepped up to ask him about some young pigs that he had recommended to be removed.

"The squire said as how they was to be left till you come back, cap'n," he said, touching his forehead. "And so I left 'em."

The captain nodded.

"Send them to the market," he said, "and tell me what they fetch."

Then he walked over to the barn. There was some storing to be done, and the men were waiting for the squire to look at the wheat.

Captain Reginald stepped into the barn and looked round.

"What are you waiting for, my men?"

"For the squire, sir," was the reply. "Oh!" said Reginald; "ten, twenty, thirty," checking the loads. "The squire is bad this morning! You can go on Giles."

The men touched their caps and set about their work and he stood long enough to see them in swing and then went to the stables.

There he was already more master than the squire himself.

The grooms ran out and fussed about, and the pony was led into the yard.

"A mere scratch," said the captain, looking at the cut knee. "Put the lotion on and turn it into the paddock. John, how's the chestnut?"

"All right, sir," said the groom, hurrying to the stall and bringing the captain's horse out.

"Ah," said he, stroking its neck. "Did you walk it over the moor yesterday?"

"No, sir," said the groom. The captain frowned.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Miss Grace had him saddled for her, sir," said the groom. "I told her as you mightn't like it, captain, but she said as she would saddle it herself, and so we was obliged."

The captain nodded.

"Get him ready for me in an hour," he said, and turned toward the house. When he arrived there he found the squire was down, and looking gouty and irritable.

"Good-morning, sir," said the captain, lounging in. "Is the foot bad?"

"Yes," said Squire Darrell. "Deuced bad—been awake all night with the pain."

"Why did you get up so soon?" said the captain, sitting down and poking the fire.

"'Bliged to," replied the squire. "The men are waiting for me to go on storing, and there's the pigs—to-day's market day. I'm 'bliged to be down among 'em this morning or they won't be at it."

Reginald stroked his mustache.

"I don't see the necessity," he said. "I have just been round the farm. The men are hard at it in the barn, and the pigs are on their way, as the nursery rhyme says, to market."

The squire looked up in surprise.

"Why, the stacks ain't checked!" he exclaimed.

"Yes," said Reginald; "I counted them."

"You did? Come, that's kind of you, my boy," said the squire. "You've saved me a painful tramp down the yard. And everything's all right, eh?"

"Everything," said the captain. "I have seen to it myself."

"Thank ye, thank ye," said the squire, with a groan of pain. "Pon my word, I'm getting a good opinion of you London gentlemen. I allers thought you were an idle set of do-nothings; but I was mistaken I see. Thank ye, thank ye."

"Don't mention it," said Reginald Dartmouth. "No thanks are due. I am only amusing myself."

THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chesley, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my housework, milk eight cows, and do a hired man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish. Mrs. HENRY JANKE, R. R. No. 4, Chesley, Ontario.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

ing round. "Well, it's time he did something useful; he's been playing at doing nothing all his life."

The squire laughed.

"Now, Miss Saucy! Reginald, just hand me that paper, will you?"

The captain gave him the paper, which had only just arrived, and turned to Grace.

"I have seen the pony," he said; "it is nothing but a mere scratch, and will be right again directly."

"Oh, I am so glad!" she exclaimed, looking round at him with a flash of pleasure. "Poor fellow, he did try to clear the gate so hard!"

The squire growled.

"Reginald," he said, "I wish you'd give an eye to the young puss. I don't mind the pony, but I'd be sorry to have her break her own neck."

The captain smiled and, with a glance at Grace, he replied, laughingly:

"You must remember she was not under my charge then; she is safe enough when she is. By the way, I must ride over to the Warren this morning. I have a message for Miss Goodman. By Jove, I'd nearly forgotten it!"

"Going to Rebecca's?" said the squire. "Who gave you the message?"

"A cousin of her—Charles Anderson," said the captain, looking at his watch. "I think I'll go now. Can I persuade you to keep me company, Miss Grace?"

Grace looked at her uncle.

"Shall I go and see Rebecca?" she said.

So seldom had she asked his advice or permission that the squire was rather astonished.

"Yes, certainly," he said. "Go with your cousin, and tell Rebecca I've got this abominable gout again or I'd have come too. Ugh! You don't know what it is yet, I suppose, Reginald?"

"No, sir; not yet," said he, as he left the room; "but it'll come in time, I don't doubt. It's in the family, you know."

"Ay, confound it, and always will be!" grunted the squire.

"So you tried the chestnut yesterday?" said Reginald, as he and Grace cantered across the fields.

"Yes," she said, unhesitatingly. "I wanted to see if he'd throw me. He didn't."

"He is a gentleman, and could not be so rude to a lady," said the captain. "Do you like him?"

RESULT OF HYTH CONFERENCE.
 HYTH, England, May 15. Premier Lloyd George, Premier Millerand, and their advisers conferred here to-day. After the conference Premier Millerand and his suite left for home. An official statement issued at the close of the conference said the British and French Governments recognized on the one hand that it is to the general interest that reparation for losses and damages caused by the war should be secured as soon as possible, and with this objective in view it is necessary that resources should be made effectively available without delay and on the other hand that it is desirable Germany should be put in position to regain her financial autonomy by a speedy fulfillment of her obligations. The two Governments are further of opinion that in order to provide a solution for the economic difficulties which are gravely weighing upon the general situation of the world, and in order to mark a definite beginning of the era of peace, it is important to arrive at a settlement which shall embrace the whole body of International Liabilities, which have been left as a legacy of the war and which shall at the same time ensure parallel liquidation of the Inter-Allied war debt and of the reparation debts of the Central Empire. Accordingly an expert from each of the two countries will be charged to prepare immediately for examination by their Governments proposals for the fixing of a minimum total of the German debt which shall be capable of acceptance by the Allies, and at the same time be compatible with Germany's capacity to pay, to determine on the method of payment and the capitalization of Germany's debt which will be best calculated to assure a realization of the general views above expressed, and to establish conditions for a division between the Allies of the payment made by Germany in accordance with agreements which in case of certain Allied countries have already been arrived at and which remain to be definitely settled in case of other Allied countries.

REPLIES TO WILSON.
 NEW YORK, May 15. A lengthy and well written reply to President Wilson's criticism of the British Admiralty, which was made public Wednesday by Secretary Daniels of the United States navy is printed by the Tribune this morning. It is in the form of a letter to the Editor by H. S. Middlemiss and gives voice to what is believed to be the sentiment of a great many American citizens regarding the United States President's references to Britain's naval administration. The Tribune gives indirect indorsement to the views expressed by Middlemiss in the heading printed over his letter, which reads, "That Panic Stricken Navy; its Records of Calm and Efficient Service to the Allies Through Four Years and on Many Seas."

AGREED TO POSTPONEMENT.
 HYTH, England, May 15. It was decided by Lloyd George and Millerand of France, at their conference to-day that the Spa Conference between the members of the Allied Supreme Council and German leaders should be postponed from May 25 to June 21.

Woman Suffrage.

It is the sign of a thoughtful, intelligent, unprejudiced mind when a man or woman realizes that a new order of things has become necessary to cope with existing conditions, both civic and political, the world over. In the last century men undertook to manage, or muddle, all the problems of that generation, but since woman has, in a measure, come into her own, and various avenues for her activity and usefulness have been opened up, she has realized her power and is naturally demanding greater recognition of her rights as a citizen in the land of her birth or adoption. The woman whose activities are circumscribed by the walls of her house or her church can never be a good citizen in the broad sense of that term. She performs her duties in attending to the needs of her household or her devotions faithfully, but beyond that rarely troubles herself to wonder whether she can lend a helping hand for the betterment of conditions in her own home town. She may work very hard for foreign missions, while almost at her door is poverty, ignorance and sin of which she knows nothing. Yet who can blame her, for man in the ages past have done his best to prevent woman from invading his domain. Universities were rigorously closed against her and every attempt at scholarship was frowned at by professors from whom one would have expected a greater breadth of mind. When Susan B. Anthony first began to agitate for "woman's rights" in the U.S., newspaper men and others wrote of her and of those associated with her as "crowing hens" and used other insulting epithets. To-day the name of Susan B. Anthony is honored from one end of America to the other, but the names of the wits who ridiculed her are as dead as the proverbial door nail.

To-day the question of the suffrage for women is an acute one. They feel that they are capable of using the vote wisely and intelligently and they are going to have it. The sooner politicians realize this, the better, for just as sure as day follows night, it has to come.

The petition which will be presented to the members of the House in a few days asks that the suffrage be granted to the women of Newfoundland, and we bespeak for it a patient and favorable hearing. It will be largely signed by women with large stakes in the country, women employers of labor and women who have suffered and spent themselves in helping our boys at the front during the long, sad years of the war. We have borne the burden and now we ask for our reward. Is it possible that any body of men could be unmanly enough to refuse us? The names of the men who carry through this great and just measure will be remembered with gratitude by the women of Newfoundland. Those who present it and those who support it, whether Government or Opposition, in both Houses of Parliament, will be honored as are the names of the men who signed the "Declaration of Independence" in the United States.—ANON.

HELPS FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.

The G. P. has another word of that which everyone wishes to give and no one wishes to offer. G. P. stands for Grateful Patient, and you may guess what it is she wants to offer.

The next night she suggested the same sort of things to herself with similar results. Drive Any Plans Out. You must be careful, she warns, not to let any plans or problems, or regrets, or any of the other mental activities that are deadly to sleep, intrude for a minute. If they poke themselves in, exercise them with a pink elephant or a smiling peanut.

When I related the G. P.'s experience to a friend, she said, "Yes, I read about it in that book and I think it's ridiculous. I know it wouldn't help me."

PILES

Do not suffer another day with itching, bleeding, or protruding piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. See a box at dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 5c. stamp to pay postage.

Sanitary Advice.

Now that the warm weather is approaching, thorough attention should be given to the sanitation of the house. All waste pipes should be flushed with boiling lye in sufficient quantities to eat away the accumulation of grease that coats the interior of the pipes leading from the kitchen sink. A solution of carbolic acid is invaluable for flushing the pipes leading from stationary washstands. The solution in either case should be poured rapidly, so that the pipes are full and every bit of the interior surface is thus made sanitary. A pound of coppers dissolved in a pall of water is an excellent solution, as also a boiling solution of sal soda, one pint to three gallons of water.

YOU.

What if another doesn't see That shady little trick you do, What if you gain the victory And men award its prize to you And that by skill you gained the crown.

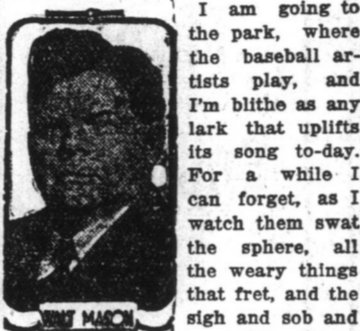

There is one voice you cannot drown— One little voice inside your breast That never gives you any rest.

What if the whole world you deceive And take its glory and its pelf, This thought must ever make you grieve— You have no power to cheat yourself. Though, no one else knows how you won.

Or just what little trick was done, And strangers praise you as you go, Deep down within your breast, you know.

What if dishonor leave no stain, And all your friends shall think you fair, If you have sold the truth for gain, Think you that you shall cease to care? The prize you hold will jeer at you: "I mark the hour you were untrue!" A constant witness from the self— You fooled the world, but not yourself.

THE GAME.

I am going to the park, where the baseball artists play, and I'm blithe as any hawk that uplifts its song to-day. For a while I can forget, as I watch them sweat the sphere, all the weary things that fret, and the sigh and sob and tear. There'll be time to walk the floor with a weep rag in my hand, when this bully game is o'er and the visitors are canned. Oh, our pitcher is in form, and a mighty arm is his; when that wing gets good and warm he'll show wizards how to wiz. When I see him winding up I forget that I must drink sorrow from a bitter cup, that will put me on the blink. I forget that rents are high, that the larder's bare of hash, that the children wall for pie, clothing, shoes and succotash. I forget that profiteers who have soaked us left and right, that the bankrupt court appears as the only thing in sight. For a while I cast aside all my brooding and despair, when I see our heroes slide round the bases on their hair. When I see the joyous mob at the ball games, as of yore, "Well," I murmur, through a sob, "we are growing sane once more."

Charles Dana Gibson has a big, fine, open face, aglow with health. His forehead is wide and his features strong and impressive. He perpetually wears an old-fashioned stand-up collar and looks, when clad for the street, more like a bank president or preacher than an artist.

Mainly About People.

Sir Percy Scott, the naval authority, who has started a controversy over the English fleet's part in the great war, is the greatest gunnery expert in the English navy. He ascribed the escape of the German fleet after Jutland to the fact that the British fleet was not properly equipped for fighting an action at night.

Boston has in Arthur Martell one of the highest paid organists in the country. He has just signed a 10-year contract with the Olympia Theater people at $10,000 a year. He is a native of Springfield, Mass. Martell has memorized hundreds of songs and organ selections.

The Indians are trying to get the Prince of Wales to extend his trip beyond Australia to India. His father and mother visited India 19 years ago as the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall. King George at that time opened the first parliament of Australia.

Many Canadians will be interested to learn that Rev. Mark Gay Pearse, who has visited Canada on several occasions, and who over thirty years ago assisted the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes in the founding of the West London Mission, is still in excellent health and able to preach and lecture very much as in the old days, though he is over eighty-two years of age.

The latest addition to the ranks of literary prodigies is Carl Morris, a boy of fifteen and a half, from whom a London firm of publishers has just accepted a 1,000-word novel, entitled "The Power of Love." It was accepted on its merits alone. Carl selected a publisher haphazard from a list he found in a periodical, and sent the manuscript by registered post without disclosing his age. The publisher was amazed when he learned the facts about the youthful author, and asked for more.

Edgar Wright a working man living at Sutton Bridge, Lincolnshire, has a hare which he has tamed and taught to play a tambourine and turn a wheel. He caught it on a farm when only two days old and fed it with a spoon until it was able to feed itself. Its queer antics about the house led to its being trained, and it will now tap the tambourine with its forepaws as often as it is asked. It stands on its hind legs to turn the wheel. After it has done its "turn" it returns to Mr. Wright, and either nestles down to rest or climbs about him, after the manner of a kitten.

I want another bottle of "Brick's Tasteless", it is the best preparation I have ever taken to give me an appetite.—apr 25, 17

The Bait Problem and Cold Storage.

The problem of always being in possession of an ample supply of fresh bait is one that is ever present with the numbers of our fishermen who employ trawls and butlovs and hooks and lines in their catching operations. This applies no less to the South and West Coasts than to Labrador, where hundreds of small fishermen use nothing else but hook and line and trawls. Usually each one of these has a fleet or more of herring nets which help them considerably in securing sufficient bait for their daily needs. But during the caplin school they are mainly dependent on the seine of the bigger planter or supplier, and caplin seine "turns" are by no means uncommon all over Newfoundland. These "turns" mean that each day the seine goes out, the seine boat has to be manned in turn by the fishermen themselves, the "skipper" being usually the owner, or his master voyage. For the privilege of receiving supplies of caplin bait, or lance, after the caplin season is over, each boat owner has to pay for his share of the supplies, in addition to giving the services of his men or himself in the seine boat. This to recoup the seine owner for the use of both seine and boat. The custom is an old one.

Thus by the above method an ample stock of bait for each day is assured; but there is not any provision made to hold any over in the event of any subsequent day's "shoot" being unsuccessful, and it often happens that boats are lying idle on their collars because of lack of bait, through some unforeseen cause, or because a haul has not been brought off successfully. It must be understood, of course, that during the hot spell, fresh bait cannot be long kept in good condition. Lying overnight, even when covered up, deterioration sets in, and therefore it is useless. This is where the small cold storage plant would prove invaluable, and if it were possible that each small harbor were equipped with a refrigerating room in proportion to the size and needs of the place, all the bait fishes left over from the haul could be kept in readiness for the days when no supply direct from the water is obtainable. So far as we know, there has been no attempt made to install any small cold storage plants on the Labrador coast, for the reason, perhaps, that the necessary ice with which to charge them is not available, when the need for keeping bait arises. It might be set against this statement that there is always a large stock of ice from which to draw, in the shape of the small bergs and growlers which move along the coast during most of the summer months. Such would be quite correct, and there is no doubt but that a lot of these passers-by could be utilized for freezing purposes in conjunction with salt, of which there is usually no lack on the Labrador. Some enterprising person might yet take advantage of a lost opportunity, and engage in the construction of a small refrigerating chamber as a demonstration that such is within the reach of all.

On the North, South and West Coasts nearly every large supplier has his own cold storage and freezing plant, and in these each one stores all the bait fishes procurable during the catching season, in order that when the supply becomes short, there will be no loss of time or delay to the fishermen going long distances in quest of their day's bait. The plants on the South Coast have a very large capacity, and contain sufficient to do a large number of skiffs for the months of January, February, March and April. Such supplies as are needed for these months, which are the best in the year, have to be procured at Bay of Islands or Bonne Bay, and sometimes Fortune and Placentia Bays. They are received by the merchant packed in snow. He immediately places them in his freezer, and in this way preserves their natural freshness as they are kept in a condition of frozen rigidity. During the summer months when herring, caplin and squid may be caught daily, the freezer is not in such demand, although in numerous instances the plant is kept going with the object of preserving the supplies for future emergencies. In this way the fishermen is almost invariably assured of daily bait. The only trouble is that there are not enough of these freezers. Every small harbor should have one, drawing its bait supply from a central depot, of which there should be several in each district, at such distances apart as would make it easy for fishermen to get to and from them. Every person who is interested in the fisheries knows the loss to the general catch brought about by lack of bait, and there is not one fisherman in the whole dominion, whether engaged on the Labrador, at the Bank or in the Shore fishery, but would welcome the day, and laud the government responsible, that saw the establishment of a chain of bait depots, fitted with refrigerating apparatus at regular intervals along the coasts of Newfoundland.

To Establish New South American Market.

Mr. Alan Goodridge Goes to South America to Boost Our Fish Trade.

Mr. Alan Goodridge, Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has been commissioned by the Government to inaugurate an endeavour to open up new markets for Newfoundland in parts of South America other than Brazil, which is now quite a customer of ours. Mr. Goodridge sailed by the Rosalind Saturday. He will return by August or September. The Government, in sending a man to South America for this excellent purpose, is putting into effect a policy long advocated by this paper and great good should result from Mr. Goodridge's mission.

The Salt Situation.

The salt situation appears not to be quite so serious as has been reported. A large quantity, sufficient to supply the present demand is held in port. However, if a run were to be made it is certain that the sale will have to be controlled. Messrs. Bowring Bros. have a steamer now loading at Cadiz. She carries 8,000 tons and will be here shortly, but this cargo will be for the salt pool. We were informed by Mr. Morey, that some 14,000 tons of salt are now loading at Cadiz and should arrive here at the end of the month. Messrs. Morey & Co. are going into the salt business again. According to the best informed members of the trade, there is no need for schooner owners to rush here for their salt supplies, as plenty will be forthcoming.

A Clarion Call to Women.

To the Women of St. John's:—On Tuesday and Wednesday you will be called upon to give your support to the Woman's Suffrage Movement. If you believe it is unfair that women of brains and education, women who own property and pay taxes, and those who support a family should have no representation in civic or legislative affairs; whilst the inmates of the Poor Asylum and Chinese laundrymen, etc., have a vote—then let us have your name. We want as many as possible, and in case your house or place of business is not visited there will be a copy of the petition to sign in the Ladies' Reading Room (Lyon's the Photographers) Water Street. We want every woman in St. John's to sign this petition, and on Tuesday and Wednesday the Reading Room will be open all day for signatures.

INTERESTED.

Our Streets.

It is surely possible for the Municipal Council to accomplish something more satisfactory in the matter of cleaning the streets. During the past few days there has been an intolerable affliction in the blinding and disease laden dust. It cannot be possible that the treasury is so depleted that funds cannot be found for a better street service. A winter's filth is the sport of spring winds. Such a condition lends itself to the outbreak of infectious diseases.

Seriously Ill.

The friends of Mr. Harold Russell will be sorry to hear that he is dangerously ill at his home in North Sydney. A message, saying that he was sinking fast, was received on Saturday. Mr. Russell is the only son of Mr. R. C. Russell, whose death occurred a week ago to-day.

Defying the Weather Man.

The first straw lid, worn by a male, was observed on Water Street this morning. Have a heart gent, and don't for mercy's sake, go flying in the face of the weather man so early in the season. One straw hat does not make a summer, and it seems a pity to spoil the continuance of to-days temperature and conditions.

St. Joseph's New Hall.

The recently erected Hall belonging to St. Joseph's Parish, Holytown, is being painted and finished off. The building which fronts on Plymouth Road measures 75 x 34 feet and an extension of 22 feet being recently added makes the total length 97 feet. It will seat about 600 people and the gallery, a splendid piece of workmanship will hold about 140 people. The ceiling is 12 ft. high and plastered, a wainscoting of matched board stained mahogany, running round the room. A splendid stage with dressing rooms and a large committee room occupy the north end of the building. The building of this hall started last autumn, and it is now nearly completed. It is certainly a credit to the skill of Mr. Michael Taverner and his associate Mr. O'Brien, aged 70 years. Mr. Taverner is not a professional, and had no plans to work by, but he has turned out a job that is a credit to all concerned. The place is well worth a visit by anyone interested in native skill.

ATTENTION!

Do you know that about SEVENTY PER CENT. of the coal used in your house is wasted, and that you can prevent a large proportion of waste? Coal is wasted in two ways. It goes up the chimney in smoke and soot. It is left unburnt in the form of cinders. COALOX prevents the escape of smoke, and by providing an additional supply of oxygen burns up most of the soot and cinders.
Persons who have not used Coalox say that it is all very well in theory, but it never works out.
LISTEN! One customer who used COALOX regularly during the past six months had the Sweep in the other day. They knew they were getting more heat from the coal used, but they did not know why until then. There was not any soot in the chimney and the Sweep's fee was easy money for him.
YOU TRY IT and find how it will save YOU money.
A can costing $1.20 treats 1½ tons coal. Also in $2.50 sizes.

Episcopal Visitation.

His Lordship Bishop White has been in this District since Saturday last, on an episcopal visit to several Parishes.

His Lordship arrived at Bay Roberts by the 2 p.m. train on Saturday, and went to Coley's Point. On Sunday, the Bishop attended Matins at Coley's Point, and in the afternoon at 3 o'clock administered the Rite of Confirmation at Shearstown. In the evening Confirmation was held at Coley's Point.

On Monday Upper Island Cove was visited, and on Tuesday, His Lordship proceeded to Bryant's Cove and Bishop's Cove. Confirmation services were held in these places.

On Wednesday, at 2.30 p.m., a new cemetery was consecrated on the South Side, where His Lordship was the guest of the Rev. W. E. R. Cracknell, at the Parsonage.

Yesterday His Lordship joined the train at Riverhead on his way to hold similar services at Kelligrews and vicinity.—Hr. Grace Standard, May 14.

Bad Weather Delays Fishing Fleet.

Bad weather has been delaying the beginning of operations with the Cape St. Mary's fleet and at the end of last week no vessels had been on the grounds. The fishermen are busy with their traps, however, and by the end of the month will have them ready for the water. It is said that a number of young men have left the Bay for the U. S. A. within the last few weeks and that some of the older men will be obliged to take their places.

Two Newfoundlanders on Valoria.

Three Cape Bretoners, George Tobin of North Sydney, Gus Oudon of Glace Bay and Angus McDonald of St. Peter's were among the crew of the schooner Valoria which is believed lost with all hands. The crew numbered five, the other members being James Miller and Angus Moore natives of Newfoundland. The Valoria left North Sydney on April 15th with 200 tons of coal for St. Pierre. The trip is usually made by sailing vessels in about 40 hours. Three weeks have elapsed and beyond a report received about April 16th that she was caught in ice floes, not a word has been heard of schooner or crew since.—Sydney Post.

Bankers Well Fished.

The banking fleet according to latest reports have done well for the first trip, the average catch being about 500 qts. The auxiliary schooner Thorndyke is high liner, with 1000 qts. The fleet will likely make a short trip on herring bait returning in time for the caplin school.

British Sympathize With Sims.

London, May 13.—Commenting upon the United States navy controversy the Evening Standard says editorially: "We can say nothing about Sims because he is an American, and such American matters are unfit subjects for British criticism. We can only express the conviction that an American sailor of such eminence must know the elements of his business. We can hardly be too thankful the British admiralty possessed the circumspection and prudence commended by Wilson though it unappreciates provides ammunition for those in the United States who are adverse to the British understanding. "Bad relations between Britain and America may benefit the armament industry but it cannot possibly help the two countries."

Want Law Changed.

During the past few days petitions were taken about town for presentation to the House of Assembly praying that some alterations be made in the present Prohibition Law. The papers were fairly well signed by the people of this town. Many who voted for the present law are not satisfied with the way the measure has been carried out. Better no law than one badly enforced. No one wants to see the open bar again in our midst, but the manner in which the law has been carried out, its laxity and abuses, must be admitted to be anything but what was expected of it. In the out-ports nothing is seen or known of the looseness connected with the script business, but if half the reports are true that come from the capital city, the conditions are as bad as they were when the saloon were running full blast.—Hr. Grace Standard, May 14.

A Masonic Colony.

An experiment which will be watched with much interest is about to be tried in the country known formerly as German East Africa. A number of Free Masons from New Zealand are forming a co-operative settlement in the hilly country bordering on the north end of Lake Nyanza. Tobacco, rice, cotton, and tropical fruits will be grown on the lower levels, the highest levels being reserved for wheat and other cereals and cattle grazing. It is proposed that every settler should acquire 5,000 acres or more of plantation land, the freehold of which, it is anticipated will cost under 1s. an acre.

The settlement is to be governed Masonically, none but Free Masons are to be admitted, and it will be run on co-operative principles. The scheme will be under the general supervision of Captain Willis, M.C., of the 1st King's African Rifles, who has been appointed commandant of a portion of the conquered territory, and who has had considerable experience in tobacco planting in South Africa, as well as in East Africa, where labor is cheap and plentiful; the native working cheerfully for 1s. a week, and where labor troubles are unknown.—Fredericton Mail.

He said that France and Great Britain had agreed upon fundamental principles, and expected would meet again in London to fix the amount of indemnity details, concerning execution of the payments, and present their report to the conference. The latter, after final examination, will adopt definite conclusions, which will be presented to the Germans at the Spa conference.

SENATE DECLARES PEACE.
WASHINGTON, May 16.
 With a few thrills, and no hitch in the prearranged programme, the Senate adopted Saturday, forty-three to thirty-eight, a Republican resolution declaring the state of war with Germany and Austro-Hungary at an end.

ALL ROUNDED UP.
EL PASO, May 16.
 All of the members of Carranza's Cabinet have been captured and sent to Mexico City, according to a message said to have been received today by revolutionary agents here from General Alvarado Obregon, who at present is in Mexico City.

VICIOUS FACTION FIGHTING.
BELFAST, May 16.
 Londonderry experienced reign of terror on Saturday, part of the city being for hours at the mercy of riotous mobs. During the disturbances, Sergeant Dennis Moroney, Chief of the special Criminal Department of this city, was shot through the right lung and died within half an hour. Londonderry thus gains the unenviable reputation of being the scene of the first police murder in Ulster since the opening of the assassination campaign of January first, 1919. Other casualties included James McCafferty, shot in chest, District Police Inspector McDonald, wounded in head with stone, while leading a police charge, and John McDallion, former soldier, wounded in the head by bayonet. After minor disturbances early in the night, ill feeling between Sinn Feiners and Loyalists flamed, and about ten o'clock the air was thick with bottles, stones and other missiles, while revolvers were freely discharged. When the riot was in full swing, forty-eight policemen, armed with revolvers, arrived in command of Inspector McDommond, who persuaded the Loyalists to retire to their wards, which was accomplished amid singing, cheering and other manifestations on the part of the rival factions. Sinn Feiners continued their disorderly demonstrations and the police charged, and scattered them into side streets. Many of them made for the quay near the Great Northern station, and it was here that Moroney met his end. The rioters entrenched themselves behind railway waggons, and directed volleys of revolver shots, point blank at the police. This led to a hot exchange of fire, and Moroney was struck, but walked a few yards and then collapsed. He exclaimed, "Boys I'm done."

THROWN FROM SADDLE.
CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z., May 16.
 The Prince of Wales was thrown by his horse yesterday at the race course at Riccarton, after the racing events of the day had been concluded. The Prince was not injured. After taking several jumps the horse refused three times in an attempt at a bush fence, and on the last occasion spilled the Prince from his saddle. The Prince, however, remounted and seemed none the worse.

MAID OF ORLEANS CANONIZATION.
LONDON, May 16.
 The whole Catholic world was represented at remarkable scenes of devotion at the celebration to-day of the canonization of Joan of Arc at Westminster Cathedral. Thousands thronged the Cathedral, including visitors from China, India, Russia and other distant parts. The shrine of Joan of Arc was decorated with laurel wreaths, and French and British colors.

FRENCH COMPELLED TO RETIRE.
CONSTANTINOPLE, May 16.
 French column of three thousand soldiers, which left Killis, Asia Minor, May ninth, to relieve the garrison at Aintab, about thirty miles north of Killis, was met by a strong Nationalist force, when ten miles from its destination, and was compelled to return. The Nationalists were equipped with a thousand cannon outranging the French seventy fives, and kept up a continual attack upon the French. Advances received here describe the situation at Killis as critical, and that at Aintab as desperate.

VOLUNTEERS BROKE STRIKE.
COPENHAGEN, May 16.
 In two of the largest provincial towns in Denmark, the strike of dockworkers has been broken, and men who have been idle are returning to work to-day. In this city the strike is also apparently near settlement, as a result of the resolute attitude of volunteers, who came forward in much greater number than were required.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE.
MADRID, May 16.
 Terrible hailstorms, accompanied by thunder and lightning, have swept through central Spain, washing away railway tracks, inundating low lands, and greatly damaging the olive and fruit crops.

ITALIAN STRIKES OFF.
ROME, May 16.
 Postal telegraphic and telephonic services have been resumed, and all other strikers have been called off, either through satisfactory settlements or as result of a sort of truce, which will hold until a new government is formed.

TRAITORS EXECUTED.
PARIS, May 16.
 Three men and one woman, convicted last July, of denouncing their compatriots to the German authorities, during the occupation of Loandring, were executed at Vincennes Prison this morning. Those who met death were Touque, Lemoine, Herbert, and Madame Aubert.

BLOODY INSURRECTION PLANNED.
LONDON, May 16.
 German Communists are planning a new insurrection, which may be attended by wholesale murders, according to a Berlin despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, quoting a statement by Herr Von Graefe, Conservative member of the Reichstag. The despatch says Herr Von Graefe has advised the Minister of Defence that meetings of Communists are being held regularly in Mecklenburg and that the question whether land owners should be put to death, or whether their wives and children should meet a like fate, is being discussed. He maintains, it is said, that there is no doubt Mecklenburg will be the scene of frightful slaughter.

MARTIAL LAW.
MOSCOW, May 16.
 A decree, issued by the Central Executive Committee, dated May 11, proclaimed martial law in the provinces of central northern Russia and Archangel.

EVERY SOUL WAS SAVED.
LONDON, May 17.

ENVER STILL ACTIVE.
LONDON, May 17.
 A despatch to the London Times from Athens, it is reported from a good source in Greek capital, says that Enver Pasha, former Turkish Minister of War, has arrived at Baku. The same correspondent says that a mixed Russo-Tartar force of approximately fifty thousand men is concentrating against Georgia and Batum, and effecting a junction with Musaphia Kemal Pasha, Turkish Nationalist leader.

SWISS FOR LEAGUE.
BERNE, May 17.
 Switzerland yesterday, in a referendum on the question of accepting or rejecting of membership in the League of Nations, voted in favor of the proposition.

Let the Joy Bells Ring.

There is universal joy and happiness to-day, and smiles and good nature are everywhere to be seen. The feeling is highly contagious and is rapidly spreading to every part untouched. Telegrams of congratulations are pouring in from all parts of the outposts, and the big London and New York newspapers are sending down special correspondents to write up the story. The suggestion to set a general holiday has been made the authorities and sailors are notifying their captains of their intention of remaining in port to join in the celebrations. Fifteen tons of fireworks have been ordered by one firm alone, while some hundreds of yards of bunting are being prepared. The schools have been ordered to observe the event, and the Great Day is to be the greatest one in our National History. It may appear a little strange to a foreigner that all this excitement should result from the "simple" fact that the Postal authorities have at last begun to remove the disreputable scaffolding from the General Post Office, but it takes years and years and years to properly understand us, Newfoundlanders. Fling out the flags! Let the welkin ring!

GRADUATED AT LAW.—Mr. John Burden, nephew of Mr. Kenneth Burden, Atlantic Avenue, has graduated at law at Toronto University, with first class honors. Mr. Burden, who is a Newfoundland, spent 3½ years as a soldier. Congratulations.

Fertilizing Potatoes.

Potato yields depend very largely on plantfood supply. Extensive investigation in farm management among 400 potato farms in New Jersey shows that "profits are greater with each increase of potato yield per acre. Men and horses handle as many crop acres on the heavy-yielding farms as upon the light-yielding farms." These findings are of special interest to Ontario potato growers since potato prices rule high. Cost of production is also very high. Why not make your farm and labor count for all possible in your potato yields this year? Potatoes thrive on a sandy to gravelly loam soil. This is a type of soil that must be heavily fed, if it is to do its best. The potato crop also repays abundant feeding. Since potatoes contain so much starch, they are great lovers of potash. On normal potato soil without manure you should apply from 750 to 1,000 lbs. of high grade fertilizer per acre in order to get the best results. With a good dressing of manure this application may be reduced to 500 or 600 lbs. per acre. The analysis we would advise should range not less than 4 per cent. ammonia, 6 to 8 per cent. phosphoric acid and 4 to 6 per cent. potash. Besides fertilization, the soil should be thoroughly tilled, should contain an abundant supply of humus and potatoes of high yielding type should be planted. Prey upon the potato. These must be controlled by spraying if best results are to be obtained. —Henry G. Bell, B.S.A.

It may be asked—

WHY not the manufacturers of Klim effect a slight saving in the price by putting up their product in CARDBOARD instead of their well-known airtight TIN?

THEY could—but they won't—for the very good reason that a TIN container obviates almost to an absolute certainty any possible bacterial action through exposure to air.

IT'S in your interest entirely—and it is felt that the average consumer is willing to pay the slight premium for protection.

PREPARING FOR CUP RACES.

American Yachts Getting Ready for Speed Trials.

VANTIE HAS INITIAL SPIN.
New York, May 12.—Despite a risk southeasterly blow and rain the America's Cup defence candidate Vantie had her initial trial spin of the season late yesterday afternoon off City Island, thereby living up to the plans laid on Friday. George Nichols, rear commodore of the New York Yacht Club and managing director of the trim, Gardner designed, bronze single-sticker, waited all day for the rain to cease and the occasionally evident rifts in the lowering sky gave him hopes that it would clear, but it did not and the afterguard, all anxious for the trial spin, decided to have it regardless of weather conditions. One of the old mainsails was bent by the more than willing crew at about half-past two o'clock the jib was run up and also the staysail and the slippery sloop started off on her maiden trip of the season of 1920.

Along with Commodore Nichols, who took the wheel, were Sterling Burgess and C. Sherman Hoyt, two of the Vantie's regular afterguard. When the trial started there was more breeze than there had been earlier in the day when the rain had killed most of it. This is the first spin the Vantie has had in four years, and although it was only a short one, still it was long enough to enthuse the already enthusiastic crew as the result of the speed shown under conditions that were anything but favorable.

Resolute Gives Satisfaction.
Bristol, R. I., May 12.—The first trials of the sloop Resolute, candidate for the honor of defending the America's Cup this summer, were held in Narragansett Bay to-day and gave complete satisfaction, according to the experts aboard. The sloop went out first in the forenoon, when a six-knot breeze was blowing from the northwest, and again in the afternoon, when the water had roughened under a fourteen-knot breeze from the southwest.

The yacht carried a mainsail, club topsail, foresail and jib, and it was found that the new sails set well except for the leeches of the mainsail, which was a little flat. The new mainmast, constructed of blocks of wood glued together so as to form a hollow centre, and the yard of her club topsail and the main gaff of aluminum stood the trip well, and appeared to give better stability and stiffer form.

The trials compared favorably with those of 1914-15. A test of speed was considered impossible as there were no yachts sailing against the Resolute.

For the coming test the yacht went across the harbor and into Narragansett Bay with the wind over her starboard quarter. She was then tried close hauled and put through several evolutions, including jibing the mainsail, passing ship while on the wind, running free with the sheet started and running before the wind.

In the afternoon the sloop went down the bar as far as Dyer's Island, a distance of about seven miles. The water was about as rough as is likely to be encountered during the summer, and the bow banged sharply, but the mainmast was as solid as a rock and the gear held firm. She came back before the wind in quick time.

Aboard were her managing owner, Robert W. Emmons 2d., George A. Cormack, Secretary of the New York Club; Charles Francis Adams 2d., who was at the wheel; George Parkinson, and rigging and sail experts, Nathaniel Herreshoff the designer, was not present because of illness.

How Animals Walk.

The horse strikes his gait with a cheerful, steady and strong step; the cow is uncertain in its moving, lolling and lagging in its gait. "The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea." The ass trudges, and keeps a dull eye on the earth as it journeys along. The sheep trots, and bleats as it passes, while the goat springs aloft almost heedless of its footing. The gait of birds on the level varies a great deal. There is a sort of majestic carriage in the rook, stepping over a crumbling furrow. The red-footed pigeon trips it daintily; the heron stands, as if to think, and moves with stateliness within its narrow bounds. The dog casts a careless foot, scattering dust or mud without thought; while the cat advances a dainty paw, as if distrustful of the ground. The hen scratches, and pauses to look round, as if bewildered; while the peacock lifts its foot with seeming pride, and as if the earth were honored by its moving upon it at all. The pig takes ground anyhow, and without heeding, turning about. Careless whether right or wrong. The little mouse scurries across the common path with something of the passivity of a blown leaf; while the rat assumes the ground to be its own possession, and prowls about with confidence and unconcern. Of all animals the hare bounds upon the earth as upon its heritage, and breaks it the whole day long. As Wordsworth noted the hare "runs races in its mirth."

"So This Is Your Birthday, Grandmother"

"YES, dearie, I am seventy-five years old-to-day. It doesn't seem possible, for I don't feel old."
 "And you certainly do not look old."
 "Were you never sick, grandmother?"
 "Oh, yes, indeed, there was a time in my life when I never expected to live to be fifty, say nothing about seventy-five. When your mother and my other children were small I had my hands full and got run down in health. I got so nervous that I could not sleep and had frequent headaches. Every little thing the children would do seemed to annoy and worry me until, finally, I gave out entirely, and was in bed for months with nervous prostration."
 "Did you have a doctor?"
 "Yes, dearie, I had two or three doctors, but they only told me that it would take a long time for me to regain strength. One day your grandfather came in with some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He said some one told him that it would cure me, and he went away to the drug store and bought half a dozen boxes."
 "What did your doctor say about using it?"
 "Well, what could he say? He only said that he had done all he could, and that he had run across a great many cases in which the Nerve Food had been used with excellent results. So I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it was not long before I was on the way to health and strength."

 "And did it cure you?"
 "Well, the best evidence is that I am here to-day, well and happy, after all these years. And I am more than ever enthusiastic for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for I have used it several times during the last few years when I felt that I needed some assistance to keep up vitality. As a person gets older I think their blood gets thinner, and they seem to need something like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to increase their strength and vigor."
 "That is something worth knowing, grandmother."
 "If you will take my advice, dearie, you will not forget about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you get run down, tired out and nervous. This has been my advice to a great many people, and I know that it has done them good."
 At all Druggists and Dealers. GERALD S. DOYLE, St. John's, Distributing Agent.

Madman Makes Himself Shipmaster.

On Wednesday, May 16, 1900, a madman went on board one of the river steamers of Stockholm, the capital of Sweden, armed with two revolvers, a dagger, and a knife, and with these he obtained mastery over the vessel. With the weapons he killed seven and wounded five others of the people who were on board. He then jumped into the lifeboat and rowed away, but was captured on the following day. Next month he was tried for murder, and was sentenced to death on June 30. Such forms of madness are far more dangerous to other people than ordinary outbreaks. For example—in one of the lunatic asylums in Nottinghamshire, some years ago, a patient was very proud of his bodily strength, as this Swedish man seemed to be, but he used it by getting on to the roof. The keeper went after him to prevent him committing suicide, and the lunatic threatened to throw the other down from it. The keeper, however, possessed sufficient presence of mind to say, "It would show much more strength if you threw me up on to the roof." The madman, pleased at such a suggestion, walked downstairs to do so, thereby saving the pair from the difficulty and danger, and bringing about his own capture.

Killing Bolshevism.

Bolshevism is slowly but surely dying in England. Free speech is killing it. The Old Country labor man is learning the unsoundness of the doctrine, not from those who seek to discredit the movement, but from the radicals themselves. Labor is becoming disgusted with the reds, and is showing that disgust by repudiating the movement.
 So states Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress, Canada's labor representative on the International Labor Congress held in England under the auspices of the League of Nations during the past two months, who has returned to Ottawa. Mr. Moore has not yet prepared any report. The statements he made were merely in the nature of a conversation, as he said, he has not yet discussed the events with the coherency he would like to. He just gave the outstanding impressions obtained while in Europe attending the meetings.
 The nations signatory to the League of Nations should vote sufficient

A Tribute to Mackenzie King.

One of the highest compliments yet paid to the Hon. Mackenzie King, comes from an American, who in a lecture some time ago on "Industry and Humanity; a way to Industrial Peace," based his address very largely upon Mr. Mackenzie King's recent book bearing the same title as Mr. Alfred W. Martin's lecture. Amongst other references to the Opposition leader, who is justly recognized as one of the greatest living authorities on all social questions of the day, the lecturer said that Mr. Mackenzie King, when he was Deputy Minister of Labor for Canada, drafted the most notable piece of labor legislation that had ever been put on the Statute Books, namely, the Industrial Disputes Act.

This served as the model on which recent labor legislation had been enacted in the United States. He said that Mr. King's book was also the most notable contribution in literature in the present day upon industry and labor, and he proceeded to advocate its main suggestions which were that the four parties to industry, namely, capital, management, labor and a community should be represented upon councils to whose hands should be entrusted the work of making industrial peace, and of promoting industry in its proper light, namely, that of service.—Acadian Recorder.

Origin of Courts-Martial

The custom of holding Courts-martial in the British Navy after every case of shipwreck has a curious origin. In 1741 the 'Wager,' one of Commodore Anson's vessels, was wrecked off the coast of Chile, most of the crew being saved. The men and some of the junior officers held that they were no longer amenable to discipline, because their pay ceased with the wreck; but the captain, whose name was Davey Cheap, differed, treated them as mutineers, and shot one of his midshipmen. He was then deposed, and most of the crew made off in three of the boats. Later, when it was proposed to proceed against the so-called mutineers, the law officers of the Crown decided that the men had been correct in their view. This discovery led to the framing of section 91 of the Articles of War, which provides that in case of shipwreck, destruction or capture by the enemy a ship has to be deemed to remain in commission pending inquiry into the circumstances by a Court-martial.

Law is Light.

Among the many delusions which beset us, none seem more firmly fixed than the much talked of amendment of the Prohibition Act. It has been fostered and encouraged by our anti-pros ever since the vote of the people. The best opinion of this amendment is content to believe that the Prohibition became law, then a light shed abroad and into those dark and secret places where the vice of strong drink has over-ruled, and there can be no denial of the fact, Prohibition was an extraordinary instance of the conquest of the material power over the much machinery, which were dispossessed of all their weapons and dispossessed of their enthusiasm, and also we must sorrowfully admit that the liquor laws have not served us that entire immunity from drunkenness, yet half a loaf is better than no loaf at all, and some of us remember when this whole nation was in the grip of that vicious tiger called the "open bar," that downed scores of our brightest best in the very tower of early sobriety. There are very few families who have not either directly or indirectly suffered from this blight. It seems incredible that we should again allow ourselves to fall into the clutches of the beast, and as the popular open bar, it was a foe to domestic peace, drinking, and gambling at cards usually go together and are twin vices, especially so among our own countrymen with whom card playing is a pastime of which they are passionately fond. And we all know that habitual gambling at cards tends to deaden the moral perceptions and causes men to bid defiance to prudence and common sense, and the worst feature concerning this vice is that the habit once formed, it is next to impossible to wear a man away from its influence. You may reason with him and use all your power of moral suasion but—cham you never so sweetly—he returns sooner or later to the lure of the siren.

To return to the subject of Prohibition, the liquor question has ever been one of our governments' greatest trials and we cannot hope for any real progress until some means have been found to eliminate that villainous compound of bottled horror commonly called "dope," and which has its headquarters on New Gower St., that dark and filthy spot, where every night numbers of our returned soldiers are to be found, and they will tell you frankly that they deny the right of any to force them to restrain their appetite for strong drink. It seems hard to realize that these young men of bemused brains and foolish behaviour are the same lads who, so short a time ago since, were classed with England's "Bravest and Best."

No doubt the sale of this one destroying drink, distributed under different labels, is responsible for much of the rough and ready brutality of our streets at night, and the clergy-men of this town would surely stand aghast if they had knowledge of the obscure happenings in our back streets, during the hours of divine service in our churches. But to hark back to the liquor question. No one will deny that the two chief contributory causes which have weakened Prohibition are to be found in the dope monster and the indiscriminate sale of "scripts," both of which are checks and hindrances to all progress and moral and mental and social. I shall refrain from hostile criticism in the matter of "scripts," but it is obvious to all, that there does exist great incomplicity between Prohibition and dope drinking and scripts, and I would like to pay my humble tribute to those of our medical men who possessing faith in their own powers of attainment steadfastly set their faces against scripts. To those who so zealously pick flaws in our spirituous liquor laws I would like to point out that the view they take is not only wrong but actually mischievous in effect, for it has been proven without the shadow of doubt that Prohibition has secured the greatest good to the greatest number, which has ever been the best test of public measure. Many of us may recall from experience and memory that hideous nightmare, the open bar, and it is to be hoped that our Temperance workers will awake out of sleep and prove themselves less dilatory, and ineffective than they have been of late, for although floods of silver tongued oratory have been poured forth from our different public platforms, yet we are far from arriving at the solution of the drink problem; indeed it does seem as though we merit the rebuke that as a people we are "long on talk, short on action." It is plain that our greatest need at present is some properly constituted authority with power to make war upon our present system of scripts as well as the sale of iniquitous dope.

The Insect Peril.

According to Mr. P. L. Simmonds, a great authority on the subject, there are 350,000 different sorts of insects in Europe, of which 3,500 kinds are either noxious to mankind or actively destructive.

The papers are always full of instructions to "swat that fly," but while the house-fly and blue-bottle certainly do spread typhoid and similar diseases, there are other insects who bleed our pockets to the tune of millions of pounds yearly.

The common codlin moth costs English apple-growers at least £100,000 a year, and the damage done by the green fly is greater.

The flea beetle destroys whole fields of turnips, rape and cabbage every summer, while as for the wire-worm, this pest alone eats up every year the roots of enough wheat and other food plants to feed half a million people. There are only two plants the roots of which the wire-worm will not attack. These are wood and mustard.

There is only one way of clearing land of wire-worm, that is by using bisulphide of carbon; but the poison is too expensive for ordinary field use.

Wood borers are everywhere. The worst is the goat moth, which tunnels into the solid wood of pear, apple, walnut and other trees. There is only one remedy—namely to cut down an infested tree and burn it.

The pine beetle is only one-fifth of an inch in length, yet is responsible for the destruction of acres upon acres of valuable forests.

Sometimes we get an invasion of horrors like the Colorado beetle or the Hessian fly. The Colorado beetle destroyed half the American potato crop in 1859, and so dreaded is it that, by an Order in Council, it is a serious offence for anyone, even a scientist, to keep one alive in this country.

As for the Hessian fly, it would be impossible to calculate the millions of bushels of wheat and rye which it has destroyed.

Insects are man's worst enemies. Some scientists believe that in the end they may destroy mankind.

The Mystery of the Coal Beds.

Whence did we get our greatest national treasure? No one can say with certainty. The origin of the coal-deposits still baffles science. Some men, after years of investigation, say that bitumen flowed out of the earth into lake-bottoms and estuaries, and there, in the course of ages, was gradually changed into coal.

Others believe it to be of animal origin, like the great guano and nitrate beds. But a majority of scientists believe that coal resulted from a great accumulation of vegetable matter. At one end of the various kinds of coal fuels we have peat and lignite, and in these the vegetable remains are clearly visible. But at the other end is anthracite, in which no trace of vegetable structure can be seen.

In all the main types of coal there is some evidence of vegetable origin excepting anthracite. But one great problem that cannot be solved is, how did this vast accumulation of vegetable matter take place? It seems incredible that sufficient could be gathered together to form the thick seams of coal so common in England and Wales. The question remains a mystery of Nature.

Doings at Trinity.

Since my last report of our doings collectively and individually, we have passed through a month of early spring monotony, and we are only just beginning to feel the pulsations of enjoyable activities that usually come to us with the month of May. The subject of a site for the Soldiers' Monument has been a difficult one to decide. All the available sites in town belong to the Church of England, and they were gladly offered by the Bishop, and the Rector of St. Paul's for the purpose. In order to make one of the sites quite large enough, Mr. and Mrs. Hussey offered to give a piece of their land adjoining. The three sites selected by the committee to be voted for by the public were, the old Parsonage site on the hill; the Church paddock, plus Mr. Hussey's field, and the vacant lot at the west end of St. Paul's Church, inside the Church gates, with the Church as a background.

At the public meeting, a majority of those who voted, did so in favor of the Parsonage hill. Since that decision, however, the committee have visited the hill, and to their surprise they have found that it will cost at least $800 to fence and clean up. This, in face of the fact that we have not a dollar to spare for such a preparation, has shown the folly of voting for a site without having ever seen or examined it. This has ruled it out of the list of sites. Another public meeting will be necessary to decide upon a site. In the meantime interest in it is on the wane, and probably the worst is yet to come.

The five memorial windows ordered from the Luxfer Prism Co., Toronto, last fall, came to hand last month, and were placed in position in the Mortuary Chapel. They are in memory of Charles Granger, Fred Somerton, Stephen Morris, Frank Morris and Arthur Malmont, and they are the most beautiful windows that it has been our pleasure to handle. They were provided by the parents of the boys who fell, and in whose memory they have been enshrined. The medallion in each is filled with emblems such as indicate the objects for which they fought and died. In the body of each window are the words, "He died that others may live," and at the base is the name of the boy, the battle in which he fell, together with age and date of death and the prayer that the soul may rest in peace.

The Rector, Rev. Chas. Stickings, asked Rev. Canon Smart, as Rural Dean to come and dedicate these windows to the Glory of God and in loving memory of the boys who fell. This, he most kindly consented to do, and suggested The Ascension Day as a fitting time for the service. The day was beautifully fine, and at 3 o'clock on that holy day, the Mortuary Chapel was filled with a congregation devoutly interested in the order and object of the service.

The order of the service was shortened by the Rector, The Lesson was read by Mr. Samuel Grant, Lay Reader. After the prayers a special Hymn, borrowed from the American Church, was sung, the first two verses of which were as follows:

"O valiant Hearts, who to your glory came Through dust of conflict and through battle-flame;
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,

Your memory hallowed in the Land you loved.

"Proudly you gathered, rank on rank to war,
As who had heard God's message from afar;
All you had hoped for, all you had, you gave
To save Mankind—yourselves you scorned to save."

Then Canon Smart, standing before the altar, having asked that the offerings of the people be now presented, Canon Lockyer—who designed and ordered the windows—came forward and said: "Rev. Rural Dean Smart, in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Granger, Mr. and Mrs. Somerton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morris, Mrs. Charles Morris and Mrs. Heber Malmont, I offer these windows as a part of this building, to the Glory of God, for use, for beauty and for teaching. I ask you to accept them and to dedicate them for this purpose, and in memory of Charles Granger, Fred Somerton, Stephen Morris, Frank Morris and Arthur Malmont, who fell in battle, and who died that we may live."

Canon Smart, in the name of the Bishop of the Diocese, announced his acceptance of the offerings, and in the presence of the kneeling congregation, humbly presented them to God.

Then standing before the altar—from a heart overflowing with sympathy for the parents of the boys at rest, with a consciousness of the wondrous beauty of the building and the service, and with the many hallowed memories that crowded in upon him, the Canon spoke to the people such words as brought comfort to the bereaved and caused us all to visualize the Ascension of the Saviour, and to realize the value of the blessings that have come to us all because of it. Canon Smart expressed his pleasure at being with us again, and we assure him of our pleasure too, and of our thankfulness for his kind words and actions.

At 4.30 a reception was given to the Canon and Rev. Dr. Facey in the Parish Hall, when a goodly number of old friends met for a friendly shake of the hand, and a pleasant chat over a cup of tea. It was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and fully appreciated by the visiting clergy.

At 8 o'clock the Parish Hall was fairly well filled with those who had come to hear Canon Smart and Rev. Dr. Facey present the cause of Queen's College, St. John's. The Canon was in excellent form, and he succeeded in convincing us of the privilege as well as the duty of giving towards the College extension and maintenance. Rev. Dr. Facey gave us an outline of his policy and plans, as the Principal of the College, and illustrated his remarks by a series of lantern slides. We were all pleased to meet Dr. Facey as a Trinitarian and in his official capacity, and we are proud of him.

The Church of England and Methodist School Boards have had a series of meetings to consider the proposal made by the Church of England Board to amalgamate their schools in Trinity. The meetings were most harmonious from start to finish, and so far as the respective Boards are concerned the amalgamation has been effected. An appeal is now being made to the public for a guarantee of subscription for five years, to supplement the existing grants, to enable the amalgamated Board to employ two first class teachers, fully equipped to provide an education for our children, that will do away with the necessity of sending them away from Trinity at the age which is now necessary. The Church of England school house is a fine building for all the necessary requirements, and it is now up to the people of Trinity to provide the money necessary to give their children the educational advantages, which of late years they have been without, and for which the parents have been asking for.

Rev. W. Cole, who has been in charge of the Methodist congregation in this Circuit, has been transferred to the Nova Scotia Conference, and will leave in a few weeks for his new charge. We wish him well.

Mr. E. J. Ryan's new schooner the "Tipperary," came last week salt laden from La Have, Nova Scotia. She is a fine looking vessel, and will be a valuable addition to the local fleet.

We have now four automobiles and an "Indian" motor cycle belonging to citizens. They will give pleasure to their owners and friends, and will break the monotony of our usual quietness.

Mr. James D. Lockyer, of St. John's, spent a few days in town, and left again for the city.

Mr. Edwin Grant is visiting New York, Boston, and other American cities and will return via Halifax.

During the days of last week when the ice was away from the shore, the trap men did well with fish.

Cleans Thoroughly-- Polishes Brilliantly

THE remarkable, beautiful effect obtained from the O-Cedar treatment, is due to the fact that O-Cedar "cleans as it polishes."

It is important that all dust and grime be removed from any surface, in order to give it that lustre which is something more than a mere surface polish.

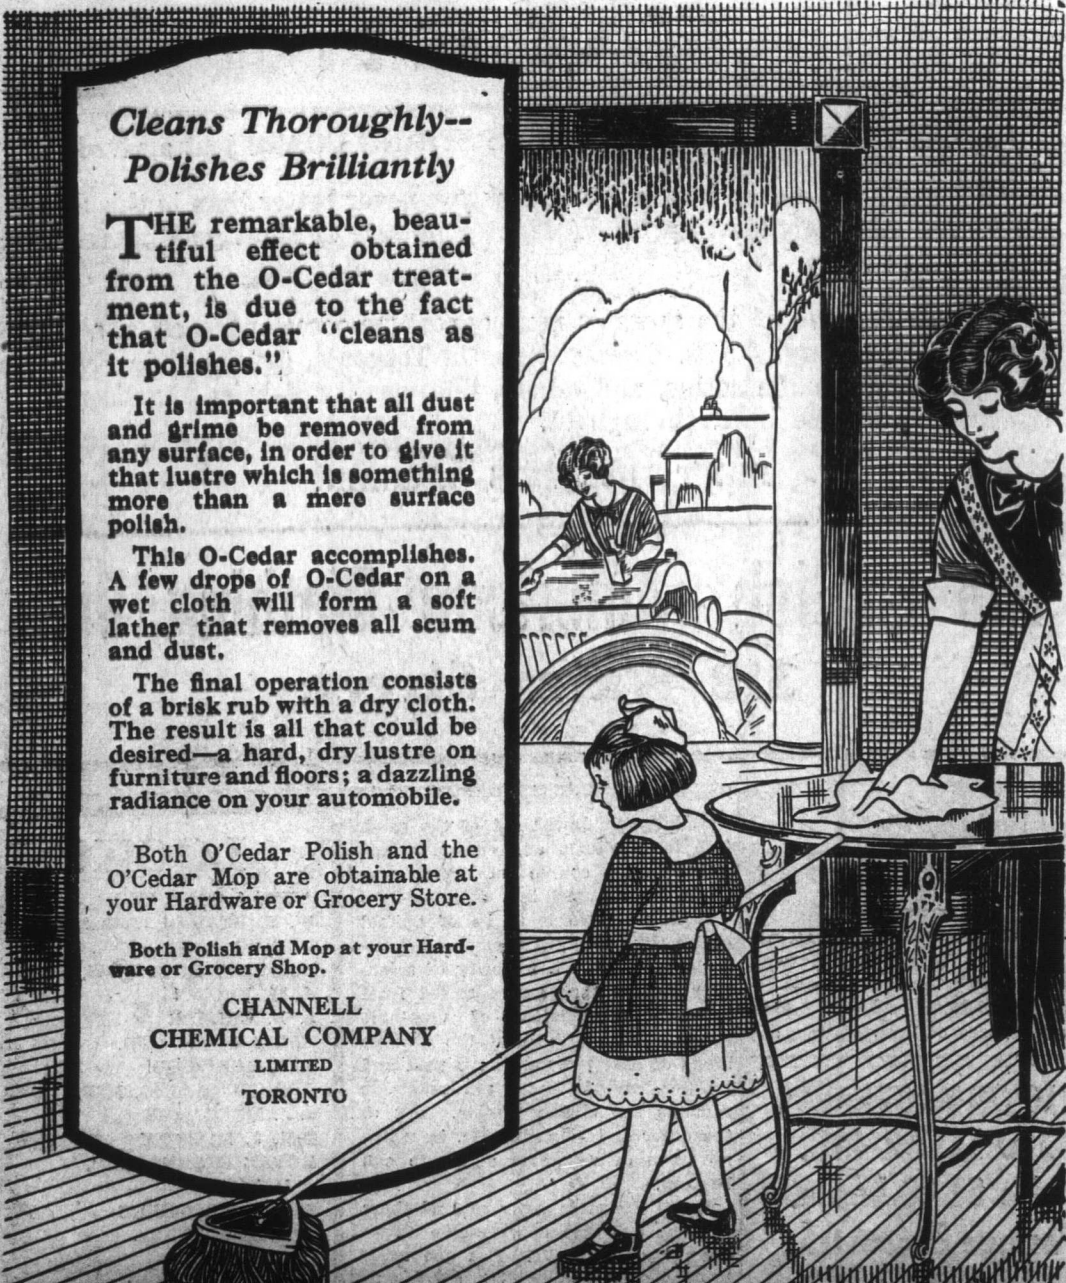

This O-Cedar accomplishes. A few drops of O-Cedar on a wet cloth will form a soft lather that removes all scum and dust.

The final operation consists of a brisk rub with a dry cloth. The result is all that could be desired—a hard, dry lustre on furniture and floors; a dazzling radiance on your automobile.

Both O-Cedar Polish and the O-Cedar Mop are obtainable at your Hardware or Grocery Store.

For Possession of a Woman.

Indians Fight to win Bride--Braves Battled for Prairie Flower.

Two Fox Indians fought for a bride on the site of Iowa, Ia., in 1840, is related by W. S. Ward, of Des Moines, as told to him by his father, an eyewitness. The duel took place on the Capitol square, southeast of the old stone arch, in the city. The story follows:

By some means it became known in the town that there was to be an Indian duel on the square. The name of a woman named Alga, the daughter of Cocohic, she was as beautiful as a prairie flower. Two young Indians had been courted for a long time. Her father had them that his daughter must wed Alga. The title of a brave would be gained by war or in the field.

The young men were determined to win the honor of a brave. In the fall of the year they went for their annual hunt. Each of these young men was armed with the scalp of a Sioux Indian, enemies to their tribe, hanging from his belt. They were admitted to the council of the brave and were given names by the council. One was named Elk, the other was named Bear. The Elk was a tall, and had the step of an athlete. The Bear was short and stout and as swift as a cat.

The new braves now renewed their vigor with all the fervor of ardent youth. All this time there was engaged in and about Iowa "City" a hundred Fox Indians--Cocohic, the father of the Indian maiden, could decide between the lovers, and the matter was referred to Chief Poweshiek. He decided that it must be settled by a combat, the best man to have the maiden. Curiosity led my father to go and see the combat, expecting to see an exhibition of savage fury. He was mistaken. Arriving on the ground he saw assembled five hundred Indians on the open prairie south side of Capitol square. Up near where the old capitol building now stands was the commanding figure of Chief Poweshiek in full view of the scene. The Indian maiden was there in all her wild finery. She seemed to be unconscious that she was the cause that impelled two noble youths to plunge the murderous knife into each other's bosom.

The Combat.

Near the centre of the ground stood a man towering above the assembled Indians, his head silvery over with the frost of sixty winters. His arms were folded, and he was looking as gloomy as his native forest. He was Chief Kishkiskask and was directed by Poweshiek to take charge of the arrangements for the contest.

He was waiting for the shadow of a pole set in the ground south of them to fall on a mark. As the shadow neared the mark he stepped off the ground. The order of the combat was soon arranged. The Bear and the Elk were naked to the waist. Kishkiskask made a few remarks to them, after which they politely stepped to where the maiden was and bade her good-bye. They went to their places as cool as if they were going to their wigwams for dinner.

After Kishkiskask had placed the contestants ready for the combat he gave each of them a large hunting knife. The shadow was on the mark, he stepped back and gave the word. Now for a while they circled around and around each other while waiting

Feels Almost Like New Person Since Taking Taniae She States.

"Before I began taking Taniae I had about given up hope of ever regaining my health, as nothing I tried did me any good; but I can't remember when I ever felt better than I do now," said Mrs. George Phaley, Prince street, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

"Three years or more ago I began getting in a badly run-down condition. I lost a great deal in weight, and was so weak I was barely able to do my housework, part of the time just having to let it go undone, as I couldn't get around at all. My appetite was so poor I had to almost force down every mouthful I ate. I was also subject to violent headaches, which nearly drove me distracted. My nerves were in such bad shape the least little noise upset me, it was simply impossible for me to get a good night's sleep, and quite often I was so restless I walked the floor all night long. I had little life or energy left, and just felt tired and worn-out all the time.

"I tried everything that came along for my troubles, and when I heard of Taniae I decided to try that. My nerves are in fine condition. I sleep well, and never have a sign of headache. That tired, worn-out feeling is all gone, and, in fact, I feel almost like a new person. As I don't believe I would have ever seen a well day again if it hadn't been for Taniae, I will never be able to say enough for it."

Taniae is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale--adv't

The Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd., Yarmouth, N.S.

Dear Sirs--Just a few lines in favor of your Liniment. I would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT for anything, as it will relieve almost anything. When I go hunting I always take a bottle in my pocket. It is the best for Cold in the Head I ever used; and for Cold in the Chest, and every other part of a person, and for Sore Throat it has no equal. It is also a good liniment for the hair as I always use it. I have also taken bleaches off of horses with MINARD'S LINIMENT and I would use no other for any reason For Man or Beast, as I think it is far the best.

I remain, yours truly,

for a chance to strike. Presently Elk aimed a blow at the Bear; he lifted up his knife, but was wounded in his right arm. They now stood up manfully to their desperate work, thrusting and standing on their guard. Elk made a plunging strike at the Bear, wounding him badly and he was himself wounded.

In a few moments they were both down, when at a word from Kishkiskask 2 Indians leaped upon their feet, steadied them for a moment, then let them go. Bear kept his feet, but Elk went down again. They were both desperately wounded. Kishkiskask, having satisfied himself that Elk was unable to rise, decided the contest in favor of the Bear and gave him Alga, the Indian maiden. They left the grounds.

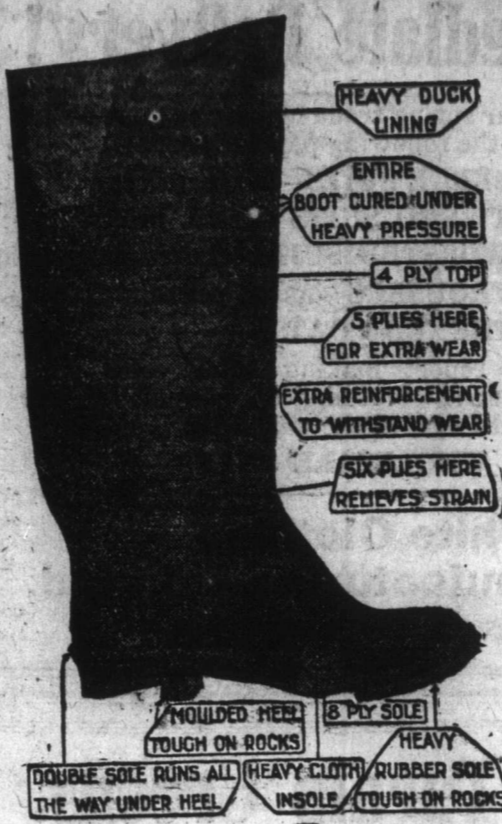

It seemed for a moment that the Elk had no friend and that he would be allowed to bleed to death; but there was one woman true to him. She was his mother. She was down on her knees by his side to stop the effusion of blood that would surely ebb his life away. Several Indian women came to her assistance. They bandaged up his wounds and carried him off the ground to their wigwam.

A Battle Averted.

Now there was a war cloud arising dark and lowering over the prairie. On the south side of the square the friends of the Elk were stationed. They raised the war whoop and came in a solid body brandishing their knives and tomahawks to attack the friends of the Bear, who had taken their stand in a grove of oak trees on a ridge near where the capitol building now stands, prepared for battle.

The Indian braves had left their firearms at their camps by order of War Chief Kishkiskask. The friends of the Elk were met near where the stone walk now is coming down from the old capitol building leading to the east--by Poweshiek and the great medicine man of the tribe. Poweshiek spoke to the angry Indians with all of his natural eloquence. At times he would assume a commanding attitude (his voice was loud and commanding) then again would lower his voice to a soothing tone that was truly eloquent, and the talk of the great medicine man stayed the onward march of the friends of Elk, and they returned to their camps, and then the white angel of peace brooded over the scene.

Pliable Uppers, Weatherproof and Wear-Resisting, Tough Tire-Tread Soles. Hard to wear out.

You know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of the rubber and how the rubbers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life of resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and cold far longer than other boots, consequently they don't crack anywhere so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

These are exclusive features of "EXCEL" boots.

The picture at the left, of an "EXCEL" boot, with every detail of construction visible, shows how "EXCEL" boots are reinforced at every point of strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure which leaves the rubber pliable, weather-proof, and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Below are listed seven special features which make "EXCEL" boots superior. Read them carefully so that when you need boots you will know how to get the best value for your money.

Seven Special Features that make the "Excel" Best.

FEATURE No. 1--The entire boot is cured under heavy pressure, forcing all parts together in "one-piece", and retaining the full life and resiliency of the rubber.

FEATURE No. 2--An 8-ply double sole of tough, durable rubber, made like an Auto Tire, running all the way under the full moulded heel. This sole and heel are so wear-resisting that they are commonly called the "tough on rocks" sole and heel.

FEATURE No. 3--A heavily reinforced boot which will withstand the hardest kind of wear.

Most reliable dealers sell "EXCEL" boots. Be sure to look for the name "EXCEL". Substitutes and "just as good" boots will not give you "EXCEL" service. If your dealer does not have them in stock, write us for name of nearest dealer.

FEATURE No. 4--Six plies at the instep relieves strain and prevents wrinkling or cracking.

FEATURE No. 5--Reinforced five-ply leg for extra wear. Just the right amount of strength to stand up, yet not be uncomfortable.

FEATURE No. 6--Four-ply top, very pliable.

FEATURE No. 7--Heavy duck lining, and a heavy insole prevent dampness and keep feet dry and comfortable.
