Had Its Origin as a Fishing Village, But Now Caters to Two Million Visitors In Summer-The Toll of the Sea.

Like many other seaside places, Lowestoft, England, which calers for nearly 2,000,000 visitors in summer, had its origin in a village whose inhabitants depended upon fishing for a living. But while its growth into a holiday centre covers a period of little over half a century, its history stretches so far back that no one knows exactly how it got its name.

Before it was called Lowestoft it was known as Lowistoff, and before that, at various times, as Leystoff, Lothu Wistoft, Lovistoke, Lothbrog. and Lodbrog.

Lodbrog was the name of a Danish chieftain who, being driven ashore near Lowestoft by a storm, was wel-comed by Edmund, King of East Ancomed by Hamuna, King of East An-glia, who gave feasts in his honor. The king's huntaman, Berne, was jealous of Lodbrog's skill in the chase, and murdered him in the

The crime might never have been discovered but for the sagacity of Lodbrog's dog, which was instru-mental in bringing Berne to justice. For punishment, the murderer was et adrift at Corton, near Lowestoft, in an open boat.

Nearly dead from exposure, he was picked up and taken to Denmark. There he accused King Edmund of the murder. As a result, the Danish king sent an army to East Anglia, vanquished the kingdom, and found-ed a number of towns and cities, Lowestoft among them. Later the town came into the pos-session of Henry III., who gave it to John Baliol, a Scotsman of renown. From him it passed to his son, the King of Scotland. Since those far-off days Lowestoft has often figured prominently in the country's history, notably in naval engagements, among them the great battle between the English and Dutch fleets in 1665.

Most visitors to Lowestoft are aware of the town's elaborate pre-pautions against coast erosion, but the realize the vast erosion, but few realize the vast expenditure in-volved. During the past twenty-five years close on £100,000 has been spent in building special groynes and breakwaters, without which the fine stretches of beach on which visitors disport themselves could not exist. But while these measures have proved effective in the centre of the town, the southern portion is still gravely menaced by the sea. At Kirkley and Pakefield are houses so close to the edge of the cliff that they are unsafe for occupation. It is estimated that on an average the sea takes toll of this part of the coast at the rate of 11 feet a year. One of the features of the town are the quaint streets known as "Scores," a name derived from the Anglo-Saxon scoren, a cleft. They are situated on part of what is the most easterly point of land in England, and are a relic of the days when fisherfolk were Lowestoft's only inhabitants. At the top of Mar-iner's Score is the house, formerly an inn, in which Oliver Cromwell lodged on his surprise visit, with a thousand cavalrymen, in search of malignants. Up Rant's Score George II. rode on his return from Hanover, while at the top of Martin's Score is a cur-ious wooden post on which have been recorded, as they occurred, the dates of historical events in years ending in 88, from the Spanish Armada in 1588. point of keeping boys on the farm, there is the fact that keeping better stock and feeding it in the way it should be fed will materially increase ment such as has been suggested. Exhibitions have awakened to the importance of encouraging boys and girls to take more interest in live stock, and at many Fairs in Canada the most interesting and popular class is the one in which boys and girls exhibit animals of their own

A. are engaged in throughout Honan, Japan, India and also in the West of our Dominion. Every congregation in the diocese should have a branch of the W. A. and every woman as far as possible should be a member as the W. A. and every woman as far as possible should be a member as all can do one or other or all of three things to help the cause—sew, give, or pray. Mr. Ballachey of Paisley chairman of Bruce Deanery Layman Association, then gave an interesting and instructive address dealing with and explaining the various objects of the diocesan budget and showing how worthy they all are of our support and that we should aim at raising 100% of the same alloted to the deanery where as last year we raised only 66% of that amount. The Biole plan was that of giving 10% of our income to God, whereas we average only 2½%. Rev. Captain Pugsley leading in the discussion said if we interest ourselves in the work outside the parish the work within will pros-per. A person is no Christian who is not interested in missions. Would you refuse the last request of a friend? Then why refuse the last words of Jesus "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." When the Duke of Wellington was asked "What do "What are your marching orders?" We should be thankful we have the privilege of giving to the various ob-icts of the diocesan budget because in so doing we are uplifting some and asing them from sin and degrada-tion. It was decided on motion of Rev Shore, seconded by Rev. Pugsley, that each clergyman in the deanery en-respective parishes to attend the next demery meeting to be held at Lucan, with a view to decide on some defin-ite plan towards raising 100% of the deanery appointment this year. Rev. Mr. Corey continued his subject on the work in Japan. For a Japanese to become a Christian it does not mean the advancement but rather the all can do one or other or all of three the Women's Institute of InWood who attended the district meeting at Arkona last week: Mrs. H. ALVINSTON The ladies of the United Church met on Friday afternoon at the par-sonage for the purpose of organizing a Ladies' Aid. Some fifty ladies were present and after a social hour spent by all, ice cream and lemonade were served. The election of officers took place as follows: president Mrs. (Dr) E.C. Axford; vice president, Mrs. G. H. C. Norsworthy; 2nd vice presi-dent, Mrs. G. A. Hadden; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Frank Oke. The inauguration services of the United church of this village took place on Sunday last. Large crowds attended both morning and evening services. The pastor, Rev. A. L. Spracklin, delivered a very inspiring sermon at both services. G. H. C. Norsworthy sang a very pleasing solo at the evening service. The W.M.S. of Guthrie Presby-terian church held their annual gar-den party on the lawn of Mrs. A. B. McNeH on Friday evening. A large crowd attended and were entertained by Jock Balantyne and his concert ompany of London. The local C.G.I.T. group met on Friday evening in the church base-ment. SUCCSSFUL RURAL DEANERY MEETING IN KERWOOD

The Spring meeting of the Rural Deanery of West Middlesex and of the Deanery Woman's Auxiliary was held in St. Paul's church, Kerwood, on Wednesday, June 10th. There was a good atendance from most of the parishes in the deanery. Communion service was held at 9.30 a.m., con-ducted by the rector, Rev. H. R. Dichl, assisted by the Rev. H. R. Corey, returned missionary from Japan, the latter of whom also preached an interesting and impres-sive sermon bearing on the work in Japan, basing his remarks on the text "Desire of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inherit Japan, basing his remarks on the text "Desire of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inherit-ance and the uttermost part of the earth for thy possessions." Ps. 2:8. Business meeting was then held af-ter which luncheon was provided by the ladies of the three congregations, and served in the new parish hall. A vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies for the splendid provision and many compliments were paid the rec-tor and congregation for their suc-cessful enterprise in erecting the new hall. The address of welcome was given in the afternoon by the rector, wherein among other things in the diocese in 1833. The first rec-tor being Rev. S. E. scheme in order that your partner will undrstand what you are attemp-tin. to do. The court is a little larger for doubles than for singles. The length is the same, but the width one-third greater. Naturally, as there are two players covering this court oven greater accuracy and pace in attack-ing is necessary than in a singles game. Select reserving court accord-ing to your stoke strength, the man with the best forehand taking the right court. If there is nothing to choose between them, let the best player take the left court, as he does most of the centre court volleying, and has many critical return services to make after deuce has been called. 34. Correct Position in Doubles. In doubles even more than in singles, you should avoid standing between the base line and the service line, known as the danger zone, for any return of good strength will light at your feet, a very difficult place to make a return from. The famous twin Baddeley brothers con-tended that a double team should be behind the base line and the service. The formation of one player at the net and one at the bane line has only once been successfully put into prac-tice, namely, by the Smith and Risse-ly team, twice word hcampions. The former was a wonderful base line driver, with the hardest hit forehand drive of any player, and the latter perhaps as fine a volleyer as the game driver, with the hardest hit forenand drive of any player, and the latter perhaps as fine a volleyer as the game has ever seen. This formation is un-orthodox and in my opinion valueless. Smith and Risely were the exception that proves the rule. If you and your partner are at the net and your op-ponents lob over your partner's head and he runs back for it, do not stay at the net, but run back and keep in line with him. So long as you keep in line there will be no holes for your opponents to score through.

Captain R. Innes-Taylor (Copyrighted 1925) (Continued from last week) The game of doubles must be considered as an entirely different game from singles in that a new factor is introduced, i.e. combina-tion. When you are playing with a partner you decome merely one fac-tor in carrying out a scheme of at-tack or ordense as previously decid ed upon. The individuality of your own tactics must be mered into this scheme in order that your partner will undrstand whet you are attemp. The court is a little larger for is the same, but the width one-this scheme in order that your partner will undrstand whet you are attemp. The court is a little larger for is the same, but the width one-this greater accuracy and pace in attack ing is necessary than in a singles game. Select reserving court accord ing to your stroke strength, the man with the best forehand taking the right court. If there is nothing to choose between them, let the best player take the left court, as he does. A. Correct Position in Doubes. In doubles ween used the strucker must stand far back for this one, as to be unplayable, and it also gives your partner at the net more time to intercef the return. I cannot over-emphasize the value of getting the first scruce for your stroke structure is state of the centre court volleying and has many critical return services to make after deuce has been called. A. Correct Position in Doubles. In doubles ween more than in bingles, you should avoid standing the tay your feet, a very difficult place to make a return from. The inde dust a double team should ho fidence in you. 36. The Smash. The smash, or in other words, the overhead volley must ultimately be perfected, as it is one of the main point winners in doubles. Theoretical-ly, an overhead smash appears to be the same stroke as the overhead ser-vice. But it is not so. In the overhead volley you have to judge the flight of the ball whilst in the air and get in the proper position to play it. In the service you throw the ball up, putting yourself in the correct position at the same time. Do not attempt to smash with your bonnet in the contect post in a Do not attempt to smash with your body facing the net. Always have your body nearly in line with the flight of the ball. Do not be over anxious in smashing, because it will make you hit the ball too soon, a very common error. I am not much of an advocate of the half volley, although several players have been successful with it, and it is an extremely useful stroke to know how to make. In most instances a quick step forward will convert it into a yolley, or a step backward into a ground stroke. 37. Australian Formation.

37. Australian Formation. In recent years the Australian double teams have made such a deep impression on most players that I am afraid quite a few readers will dis-agree with me when I say I do not favor the Australian formation for receiving. In the Australian forma-tion for receiving of service, the re-ceiver stands in the proper positions to receive, and his partner about two or three yards back from the net cn the other side of the court. This poss-ibly is all right provided the receiver is able to send his return of service back so swiftly and well that neither the opponent at the net or the server running up can make an ace of it. 37. The famous Doherty brothers tried this formation on several occasions, and I believe practically every defeat they suffered was experienced under these conditions. The proper place for you to stand when your partner is re-ceiving is behind the base line of your own side of the court, the whole scheme of doubles being for you and your partner to be in line, no matter in what portion of the court. 38. Lady Players. The principle of foot work in ten-nis is the same as in dancing. To have the required fleetness of foot you should be able to move about the court in the same graceful way a 2464 should be able to move about the court in the same graceful way a dancer moves on her feet. One of the most noticeable things about a lady player is the fact that most of them do not move as swiftly on the court as the men do. This is curious because girls are good dan-cers, better as a rule than men. But in tennis for some reason, they are inclined to stand flat-footed instead of on the ball of the foot. You must be prepared before the stroke starts be prepared before the stroke starts. With your heels on the ground you are lost, for there is a second's paus are lost, for there is a second's pause before you can propel yourself. I cannot sufficiently impress on girls who want to improve their game the vital necessity of good foot work, it is the foundation of an all round game. Statistics prepared by John Farrell immigration inspector at London to determine whether genuine agricul-turists are coming from Europe, show that of 1400 men located in Middle-sex and adjoining counties during 1924, nearly 75 per cent. became per-manent residents of rural parts. Of the remainder some are in Canadian cities, but the majority crossed the border into the United States. Mrs. Isabel James, of St. Thomas, has collected $600 damages from the C. P. The township of Euphemia may be small, but what it lacks in size it makes up for in endeavoring to pop-ulate the rest of the country which ulate the rest of the country which has a larger acreage and perhaps not such an industrious class of people. The genial clerk of that township, Harvey Annett, (a bachelor himself) takes great pride in pointing out the fact that during the month of May for ten days straight there was a boy born each day, while during the next week three more were born. This is surely a record and is surely worthy of special mention. And to cap it all our local M.P. B. W. Fansher comes along with twin boys born to him and his wife.—Alvinston Free Press.
