

FOOD IRON

You need iron. Everybody does. The harder you work, the more you worry, the more iron you require. But Crude Iron won't do. Iron Pills, Iron Tinctures, Iron Tonics are useless in nineteen cases out of twenty. You must have pre-digested iron or your blood will not assimilate it.

FERROL

furnishes the iron you need in combination with Cod Liver Oil, and so intimately incorporated with the oil that the most delicate digestive organs cannot fail to assimilate it.

The value of the combination cannot be overestimated. It builds up and fortifies the system against Coughs, Colds, Bronchial Affections and kindred troubles. If any of these diseases have already been contracted, or if the lungs are affected or threatened, FERROL cures by enabling nature to throw off the disease, not by "killing the germs," which is a physical impossibility.

FERROL is an absolute specific for Croup and Bronchitis, and no household where there are children can afford to be without it.

FERROL is not a patent mystery. The formula is freely published. It is prescribed by the best Physicians. It is endorsed by the most eminent Medical Journals. It is used in prominent Hospitals, Sanitariums, etc.

S. N. WEARE, Medical Hall, Bridgetown

Her inquiring glance fell. He was breathless from agitation rather than from running. He was perturbed on her account. For an instant she had looked into his soul. "I will go back," she said quietly, "though I would rather accompany you. What are you doing?" "Seeking a place to lay our heads," he answered, with gruff carelessness. "You really must rest, Miss Deane. Otherwise you will be broken up by fatigue and become ill."

So Iris again sought her couch of sand, and the sailor returned to the skeleton. They separated unwillingly, each thinking only of the other's safety and comfort.

CHAPTER IV
ACROSS the parched bones lay the stick discarded by Jenks in his alarm. He picked it up and resumed his progress along the pathway. So slowly did he now examine the ground that he hardly noted its direction. The track led straight toward the wall of rock. The distance was not great—about forty yards. At first the brushwood impeded him, but soon even this hindrance disappeared, and a well defined passage meandered through a belt of trees, some strong and lofty, others quite immature.

Cooks and Bakes perfectly at the same time

There is not another range built in which the heat may be regulated so that you can bake in the oven and cook on the top at the same time without spoiling one or the other.

But you can do both equally well at the same time on the Pandora, because its heat is not wasted and is at all times under the simplest, most positive control.

If you do the cooking of your household you can appreciate exactly what this means.

One of Three Things Always Cause RHEUMATISM

Do you know the system rids itself of waste matter through bowels and kidneys? Yes, but by the skin as well.

As a matter of fact, the skin rids the system of more waste than the kidneys do.

If the skin, or bowels, or kidneys are uncleanly—they won't throw off enough waste. This waste is changed into uric acid—carried by the blood to joints and nerves—causing Rheumatism.

One never inherits Rheumatism. One does inherit weak kidneys, irregular bowels and bad skin action.

Fruit-a-Tives

will positively cure Rheumatism because they increase the eliminating action of the skin, bowels and kidneys. These three organs so vigorous and healthy that there can be no uric acid waste retained in the system to poison the blood and irritate the nerves.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are fruit juices, combined with tonics—the whole forming the most effective cure for Rheumatism.

FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED - OTTAWA

"Islands," he cried, "and big ones too."

"How odd!" whispered Iris, more concerned in the scrutiny of her immediate surroundings. Jenks glanced at her sharply. She was not looking at the islands, but at a curious hollow, a quarry-like depression beneath them to the right, distant about 300 yards and not far removed from the small plateau containing the well, though located by the south angle of the main cliff.

Here, in a great circle, there was not a vestige of grass, shrub or tree, nothing save brown rock and sand. At first the sailor deemed it to be the dried up bed of a small lake. This hypothesis would not serve, else it would be choked with seaweed. The pit started up at them like an ominous eye, though neither paid further attention to it, for the glorious prospect swept aside all other considerations.

"What a beautiful place!" murmured Iris. "I wonder what it is called."

"Suppose we christen it Rainbow Island?"

"Why Rainbow?"

"That is the English meaning of 'Iris' in a plain, you know."

"So it is. How clever of you to think of it! Tell me, what is the meaning of 'Robert' in Greek?"

He turned to survey the northwest side of the island. "I do not know," he answered. "It might not be farfetched to translate it as 'a ship's steward,' a man."

Miss Iris had meant her playful remark as a mere light-hearted quibble. It annoyed her, a young person of much consequence, to have her kindly condescension peeped.

"I suppose so," she agreed, "but I have gone through so much in a few hours that I am bewildered, apt to forget these nice distinctions."

Jenks was closely examining the reef on which the Sidiar struck. Some square objects were visible near the palm tree. The sun, glinting on the waves, rendered it difficult to discern their significance.

"What do you make of those?" he inquired, handing the glasses and blandly ignoring Miss Deane's pertinence while she twisted the binoculars to suit her vision. Rainbow Island—Iris!

"I've been thinking of you," he announced, "and I'm sure you'll be pleased to hear that I'm not a manial in appearance or speech. Why was he so deliberately rude?"

"I think they are boxes or packing cases," she announced.

"Ah, that was my own idea! I must visit that locality."

"How? Will you swim?"

"No," he said, his stern lips relaxing in a smile; "I will not swim, and by the way, Miss Deane, be careful when you are near the water. The lagoon is swarming with sharks at present. It is tolerably assured that at low tide when the remnants of the gale have vanished, I will be able to walk there along the reef."

"Sharks?" she cried. "In there? What horrible surprises this speck of land contains! I should not have imagined that sharks and seals could live together!"

"It will serve you to the best of my ability," Miss Deane, he exclaimed. "We must hope for a speedy rescue, and I am loath to expose. It is otherwise with you. Are you ready for the climb?"

The crest of the hill was free covered, and they could see nothing beyond their immediate locality until the sailor found a point higher than the rest, where a rugged collection of hard basalt and the uprooting of some pines trees provided an open space elevated above the ridge.

For a short distance the foothold was precarious. Jenks helped the girl in this part of the climb. His strong, gentle grasp gave her confidence. She was flushed with exertion when they stood together on the summit of this elevated perch. They could look to every point of the compass except a small section on the southwest. Here the trees rose behind them until the brow of the precipice was reached.

The emergence into a sunlit panorama of land and sea, the unexpected, was profoundly entrancing. They appeared to stand almost exactly in the center of the island, which was crescent shaped. It was no larger than the sailor had estimated. The new slopes now revealed were covered with verdure down to the very edge of the water, which for nearly a mile seaward broke over jagged reefs. The sea looked strangely calm from this height. Irregular blue patches on the horizon to south and east caught the man's first glance. He unloosing the binoculars he still carried and focused them

"You are quite right," he explained, with becoming gravity. "As a rule, sharks, after only the seaward side of these islands. Just now they are attracted in shoals by the wreck."

"Oh!" Iris shivered slightly.

"We had better go back now. The wind is keen here," Miss Deane.

She knew that he purposely misunderstood her gesture. His attitude conveyed a rebuke. There was no further room for sentiment in their present existence. They had to deal with chill necessities. As for the sailor, he was glad that the chance turn of their conversation enabled him to warn her against the lurking dangers of the lagoon. There was no need to mention the devilish now. He must spare her all avoidable thrills.

They gathered the stores from the first dining room and reached the cave without incident. Another fire was lighted, and while Iris attended to the kitchen the sailor felled several young trees. He wanted poles, and these were the right size and shape. He soon cleared a considerable space. The timber was soft and so small in girth that three cuts with the ax usually sufficed. He dragged from the beach the smallest tarpaulin he could find and propped it against the rock in such manner that it effectually screened the mouth of the cave, though admitting light and air.

He was so busy that he paid little heed to Iris. But the odor of fried ham was wafted to him. He was lifting a couple of heavy stones to stay the canvas and keep it from flapping in the wind when the girl called out: "Wouldn't you like to have a wash before dinner?"

He straightened himself and looked at her. Her face and hands were shining, spotless. The change was so great that his brow wrinkled with perplexity.

"I am a good pupil," she cried. "You see I am already learning to help myself. I made a bucket out of one of the dish covers by stitching it in two ropes. Another dish cover, some sand and leaves supplied basin, soap and towel. I have cleaned the tin cups and the knives, and, see, here is my greatest treasure."

She held up a small metal lamp.

"Where in the world did you find that?" he exclaimed.

"Buried in the sand inside the cave."

"Anything else?"

His tones were abrupt. She was so disappointed by the seeming want of appreciation of her industry that a gleam of amusement died from her eyes, and she shook her head, stooping at once to attend to the toasting of some biscuits.

"This time he was genuinely sorry. "Forgive me, Miss Deane," he said penitently. "My words are dictated by anxiety. I do not wish you to make discoveries on your own account. This is a strange place, you know—an unpleasant one in some respects."

"Surely I can ramble about my own cave?"

"Certainly. It was careless of me not to have examined its interior more thoroughly."

"Then why do you grumble because I found the lamp?"

"I did not mean any such thing. I am sorry."

"You think you are horrid. If you want to wash you will find the water over there. Don't wait. The ham will be frizzled to a cinder."

"I'm sorry," she said. "Was ever man fated to hear such unmerited odium? He savagely loved his face and neck. The fresh, cool water was so delightful at first, but when he drew near to the fire he experienced an unaccountable sensation of weakness. Could it be possible that he was going to faint? It was too absurd. He sank to the ground. Trees, rocks and sand strewn earth indulged in a mad dance. Iris' voice sounded weak and indistinct. It seemed to travel in waves from a great distance. He tried to brush away from his brain these dim fancies, but his iron will for once failed, and he began heading downward into darkness.

When he recovered, the girl's left hand was around his neck. For one blissful instant he nestled there contentedly. He looked into her eyes and saw that she was crying. A gust of wind rose within him that he should be the cause of those tears.

"Oh! Are you better?" Her lips quivered pitifully.

"Yes. What happened? Did I faint?"

"Drink this."

She held a cup to his mouth, and he obediently strove to swallow the contents. It was champagne. After the first sip of water and when the application of water to his face failed to restore consciousness Iris had knocked the head of the bottle of champagne.

He quikly revived. Nature had only given him a warning that he was over-drawing his resources. He was deeply humiliated. He did not conceive the truth, that only a strong man could do all that he had done and live. For thirty-six hours he had not slept. During part of the time he fought with wider beasts than he knew at Ephesus. The long exposure to the sun, the mental strain of his foreboding that the charming girl whose life depended upon him might be exposed to even worse dangers than he yet encountered, the physical labor he had undergone, the irrisone restraint he strove to impose upon his conduct and utterances—all these things culminated in utter relaxation when the water touched his heated skin.

"How could you frighten me so?" demanded Iris hysterically. "You must have felt that you were working too hard. You made me rest. Why didn't you rest yourself?"

He looked at her wistfully. This collapse must not happen again for her sake. These two said more with eyes than lips. She withdrew her arm. Her face and neck crimsoned.

"Good gracious!" she cried. "The ham is ruined!"

It was burnt black. She prepared a fresh supply. When it was ready Jenks was himself again. They ate in silence and shared the remains of the bottle. A smile illumined his tired face.

Iris was watchful. She had never in her life cooked even a potato or boiled an egg. The ham was her first attempt.

"My cooking amuses you?" she demanded suspiciously.

"It gives every sense," he murmured. "There is but one thing needed to complete my happiness."

"And that is?"

"Permission to smoke."

In S. N. Wear's window there is an exhibition at present a splendid collection of flowers grown on the grounds of the Annapolis county hospital. Eighteen varieties are shown and Mr. Hiltz informs us that there are a number of others not included in this assortment.

Mrs. H. Goodwin, of Granville, was the winner of the Monitor's "Free Trip to the Dominion Exhibition." We added quite a number of new subscribers to our list, but Mrs. Goodwin's list was only twenty-one. The next highest was but fourteen. We expected that this competition would arouse greater rivalry as the prize was a good one.

Percy Burns, the machinist, joined the Monitor staff yesterday, as pressman. He will have the entire charge of the machinery in the office, which should reduce to a minimum all chances of delay through breakdowns. This office depends more on machinery than any other paper in the valley and a small breakdown is apt to put the whole plant behind in its work.

The Weymouth Gazette published its first number last Thursday. It was not all that could be desired from a typographical point of view but this is excusable in that the staff had not had sufficient time to get the plant in working trim after standing idle so long. It was well filled with reading matter, but only about fifty per cent of those who had taken advertising space were represented. This week's paper should be much better.

The friends of Rev. E. E. Daley, including resident clergymen of various denominations, are cordially invited to be present at a social gathering, to be held in the Baptist Vestry on the evening of Monday next, from 8 o'clock to 10, in order that an opportunity may be given to say a kindly farewell to the retiring pastor and his family, who are about removing to another field after six years of successful and highly appreciated labor among us.

The first moose of the season was brought to town on Friday by Ephraim Ramey and Reed Wade. It was a beautiful animal and weighed six hundred pounds. The party went into the woods back on the "Randolph" last Monday, with Freeman Shipps of Dalhousie, as guide, but it was not until Wednesday that they succeeded in locating their quarry. About four o'clock in the afternoon, in response to the skillful calling of the guide, the animal—a bull—appeared suddenly at a distance of no further than twenty-four paces from the hunters. All three fired and all the bullets took effect. After being struck the animal ran fully one hundred paces before falling dead. On examination it was found that one of the three bullets had passed directly through the heart. The antlers had a spread of almost four feet.

Visitors will do well to note the hours and dates so as not to miss seeing one of the most up-to-date institutions in Canada. Admission to exercises and concerts free.

The rain somewhat marred the harvest festival in St. James Church on Sunday last, the congregations being much smaller than customary on such occasions. The church had been very tastefully and effectively decorated with flowers, fruits, vegetables and autumn leaves, and the singing was of a festal character throughout the day. The Rev. Canon Vroom, D. D. Divinity Professor, of King's College, Windsor, was the preacher. At the morning service he preached an appropriate sermon from Galatians VI verse 9: "Let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." In the evening he preached from II Chronicles XXIX, verse 1: "The work is great for the palace is not for man, but for the Lord God." This was a sermon in the interest of the proposed Anglican Cathedral to be built in Halifax, which it is hoped will be commenced next year. No digest would do it justice; we hope to publish it in extenso at some future time. Canon Vroom also preached an appropriate sermon in St. Mary's, Belleisle, on Sunday afternoon from I Cor. III, verse 9: "For we are labourers together with God."

ONLY THE BEST LEMON IS PUT UP UNDER THIS BRAND. YOUR GROCER HAS IT.

THERE was a curious diversity of opinion about tunnel No. 3. Barclay, the contractor, who had a little shanty of an office at the top of the shaft, with blue-print plans on the walls and a stove-pipe crooking out of one corner of the roof, said it was a beautiful tunnel.

Up to that time the air had not been used, but now the men rushed from the deep workings, the inner steel door of the lock was clapped shut, and the compressed air was turned in.

Having now nearly reached the steel door of the lock, Barclay invited them to enter the pressure workings, where twenty men and a mule were toiling, but the chairman refused.

It is a curious fact that the deeper into a tunnel one penetrates the poorer its reputation. The five had not been permitted to catch so much as a glimpse of Barclay, the contractor, lord of the pressure workings.

"She's a thundering greaser," in the cold ooze at the end of the tunnel, where the truth was, gaudy half clad men, with pickaxe and clay plunging balls, said things about the tunnel that would not look well in print, and being men of experience.

"You're a pretty pretty, Monty," shouted Barclay. "Why don't you throw over the home plate? Here, Swanson, you Swede, climb up there and paddle."

At the end of three hours of the heavy air and the heavier work the men returned to the air lock, suffered again the pain of reducing pressure and went into free air, wet and shivering with cold.

growing more wild. All of the men sprang to the end of the plank roadway. An Italian who went by the name of Macaroni—for the sake of uniformity—yelled lustily for Barclay.

A MOST FAMOUS MISER

CANADA LOST HIM WITH PASSING OF "JOHN" MORRISON.

Montreal's Financial Meeting Heckler Left a Fortune of $300,000—Began to Save When He Was Getting On 22

"John" Morrison, the well-known Montreal miser, will no longer "heckle" the presidents of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Bank of Montreal, the Merchants' Bank, and the heads of other public institutions, says The Montreal Star.

Morrison was known as every public board in Montreal. Fearless, whimsical, possessing a caustic humor, he took a delight in heckling the presidents and managers of the various corporations.

He had always been regarded as a misogynist, and it was therefore with astonishment that his friends learned of his marriage to a pretty young girl, who lived with her widowed mother a few doors from him.

He used to take a delight in testing the politeness of the subordinates in the C. P. R. and the Bank of Montreal, by summoning them to their offices in an idle sort of way, and asking questions with an air of confidence.

"Young man," "John" would say, transfixing the other with outstretched fingers, "you are generally so much more fastidious than their employers, not knowing the man, would answer the capitalist indignantly.

When Crawford was a student at the law, he was a member of the law society of Montreal, and he was a member of the law society of Montreal, and he was a member of the law society of Montreal.

He caught one Italian with a blow on the chin that sent him sprawling into the water. The second passed, and Morrison leaped at him and drove him

HYMENEAL

Crisp-Ruggles.
The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Carey Phinney, Paradise, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, September 25. The marriage room had been beautifully decorated with hemlock and autumn leaves. Promptly at 10 o'clock Miss Mary Phinney opened the prelude to Mendelssohn's wedding march. The officiating clergyman, pastor H. H. Saunders, and Arthur Vitroy Dimock, B. D., brother-in-law of the groom, led the procession. C. E. Crisp, the happy groom, was well supported by Dwight Ruggles, brother of the bride. The bridesmaid, Miss Frances Ruggles, sister of the bride, was tastefully dressed in cream albatross and carried a bouquet of white asters. The last chords of the wedding march were rendered by the bride, Miss A. Lillian Ruggles, daintily dressed in white silk with bridal veil and orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of bridal roses, entered leaning upon the arm of her stepfather, who presented her to the groom in a very felicitous manner. As the contracting parties, with their attendants, took their places beneath a pretty arch from the centre of which hung a bell of white asters, the ceremony opened with an invocation. After the benediction hearty congratulations were extended to the happy couple. The presents, which were select, costly and numerous, bespoke the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held. After partaking of a bounteous collation, provided by the mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Crisp drove to Middleton amid showers of rice to meet the Brideson for the east, whence, after spending a few days, they will return to be at home to their friends at Maplehurst after October 1.

LOWER GRANVILLE

We regret deeply to report the death of another of our best known and most generally respected people. We refer to the demise of Robert B. Parker which sad event took place on Thursday last, after a brief illness. Mr. Parker was an upright obliging neighbor and a consistent member of the Methodist church. A large circle of friends deeply sympathize with the bereaved family.

A wedding reception was held at the residence of Stanley Farusworth's, in honor of his daughter Miss Josie, who had been married the day before in Lynn to Reuben Conly, one of our most generally respected young men. A large party of invited guests assembled and the occasion was a very enjoyable one. A long list of useful and valuable presents attest the popularity of the bride. We extend congratulations and hope a long and happy married life awaits them. The occasion of the opening of the M. & V. R. Division of the Halifax & South Western Railway was received with general enthusiasm along the line. Flags were flying and crowds assembled at the stations to see the party arriving on the train. J. D. Sullivan, Supt. of the line, and Mr. Trefel, of the Davison Lumber Co. and S. W. W. Pickett, M. P. were in the train and made a personal observation of the big pier.

Clifford Duncan was installed as station master at the terminal and we are sure the appointment will be a popular one. All the company need to do is to establish proper connection with the States and they will have a route that will command all the business it can handle.

Killed in Halifax.

O. E. Smith, of Yarmouth, was killed by falling from a window of the house of Mrs. George Arthur, 21 Russell street, Halifax where he was boarding Sunday.

Smith went to Halifax on Saturday, for the Dominion Exhibition. Whether his death was suicidal or accidental is not known. The man had been drinking in his pocket was his card as representing Cand. D. McMichael, 40 Deck street, St. John, N. B., and a book of rules for an employee of the St. John railway. An employe of the sugar refinery, on his way to work, discovered the body of a dead man on the sidewalk. An alarm was at once raised, when it was found that the remains were those of Smith, but whether he threw himself out of the window or fell out no one knows. Smith's skull was badly fractured and death must have been instantaneous, the distance of the bedroom window from the sidewalk is twenty-five feet.
