

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series.

2.4

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

*

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadian de microreproductions historiques

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below. L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

	Coloured covers/ Couverture de couleur	Coloured pages/ Pages de couleur
	Covers damaged/ Couverture endommagée	Pages damaged/ Pages endommagées
	Covers restored and/or laminated/ Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée	Pages restored and/or laminated/ Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
Ø	Cover title missing/ Le titre de couverture manque	Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/ Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
	Coloured maps/ Cartes géographiques en couleur	Pages detached/ Pages détachées
	Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/ Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)	Showthrough/ Transparence
	Coloured plates and/or illustrations/ Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur	Quality of print varies/ Qualité inégale de l'impression
	Bound with other material/ Relié avec d'autres documents	Includes supplementary material/ Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
	Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/ La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/	Only edition available/ Seule édition disponible Pages wholly or partially obscured by err slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/ Les pages totalement ou partiellement
	Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.	obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une po etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon obtenir la meilleure image possible.
	Additional comments:/ Commentaires supplémentaires:
This i Ce de	item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/ ocument est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-de	$30US.

10X 14X 18X 22X 26X 30X

1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
1
<

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of Congress Photoduplication Service

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \longrightarrow (meaning "CON-TINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

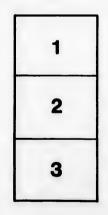

Library of Congress Photoduplication Service

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte una empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une teile empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécesseire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

1	2	3
4	5	6

étails s du nodifier r une lmage

s

to

pelure,

n à

32X

LETTER ADDRESSERS

PROCLAMATION.

BY THO PAINS

L

18

AUTHOR OF THE WORKS IN FITLED "CONSISTENT AUTHOR OF THE WORKS IN FILMS," WORKS IN FALTS," CO.

PENNTED FOR H. D. STMONDS, IN PATERNOUTER ROWS AND THOMAS CLIQ RICKMAN, NO. 7. UPPER MART-LE-BONT-STREETS

DNDON

1792-Butered at Stationers Hall,

FRICE OME SHILLING AND MERPENDE

MASS ée mando

LETTER

ADDRESSER

w. 10/7/03

PROCLAMATION.

COULD I have commanded circumftances with a wifh, I know not of any that would have more generally promoted the progrefs of knowledge, than the late Proclamation, and the numerous rotten Borough and Corporation Addreffes thereon. They have not only ferved as advertifements, but they have excited a fpirit of enquiry into principles of government, and a defire to read the RIGHTS OF MAN, in places, where that fpirit and that work were before unknown.

The people of England, wearied and ftunned with parties, and alternately deceived by each, had almost religned the prerogative of thinking. Even curiofity had expired, and a universal langour had spread itself over the land. The opposition was visibly no other that a contest for power, whilft the mass of the nation stood torpidly by as the prize.

In this hopeless flate of things, the First Part of RIGHTS OF MAN made its appearance. It had to combat with a strange mixture of prejudice and indifference; it stood exposed to every species of newspaper abuse; and besides this, it had to remove the obstructions which Mr. Burke's rude and outrageous attack on the French Revolution had artfully raised.

But how eafily does even the most illiterate reader diftinguish the fpontaneous fensations of the heart, from the laboured productions of the brain. Truth, whenever it can fully appear, is a thing fo naturally familiar to the mind, that an acquaintance commences at first fight. No artificial light, yet discovered, can display all the properties of day-light; fo neither can the best invented fiction fill the mind with every conviction which truth begets.

To overthrow Mr. Burke's fallacious work was fcarcely the operation of a day. Even the phalanx of Placemen and Penfioners, who had given the tone to the multitude, by clamouring forth his political fame, became fuddenly filent; and the final event to himfelf has been, that as he rofe like a rocket, he fell like the flick.

It feldom happens, that the mind refts fatisfied with the fimple detection of error or impolition.— Once put into motion, that motion foon becomes accelerated. art of ad to e and ies of

iterate

2

ons of of the ear, is that an No arall the he beft y conork was he pha-

d given ig forth int; and at as he fatisfied becomes elerated.

ON THE LATE PROCLAMATION.

accelerated: where it had intended to ftop, it difcovers new reafons to proceed, and renews and continues the purfuit far beyond the limits it firft preferibed to itfelf.—Thus it has happened to the people of England. From a detection of Mr. Burke's incoherent rhapfodies, and difforted facts, they began an enquiry into firft principles of Government, whilft himfelf, like an object left farbehind, became invifible and forgotten.

Much as the First Part of RIGHTS OF MAN imprefied at its first appearance, the progrefive mind foon difcovered that it did not go far enough. It detected errors; it exposed abfurdities, it shook the fabric of political superstition; it generated new ideas, but it did not produce a regular system of principles in the room of those which it displaced. And, if I may guess at the mind of the Government-party, they beheld it as an unexpected gale that would foon blow over, and they forbore, like failors in threatening weather, to whistle, left they should encrease the wind. Every thing, on their part, was profound filence.

When the Second Part of "RIGHTS OF MAN, "combining Principle and Practice," was preparing to appear, they affected, for a while, to act with the fame policy as before; but finding their filence had no more influence in ftilling the progrefs of the work, than it would have in ftopping the progrefs of time, they changed their plan, and affected to treat it with clamorous contempt. The Speech-making Placemen and Penfioners, A 3 and

and Place-expectants, in both Houfes of Parliament, the Outs as well as the Ins, reprefented it as a filly, infignificant performance; as a work incapable of producing any effect; as fomething, which they were fure the good fenfe of the people would either defpife or indignantly fpurn; but fuch was the overftrained awkwardnefs with which they harangued and encouraged each other, that in the very act of declaring their confidence they betrayed their fears.

As most of the rotten Borough Addrefsers are obscured in holes and corners throughout the country, and to whom a newspaper arrives as rarely as an almanac, they most probably have not had the opportunity of knowing how this part of the farce (the original prelude to all the Addresses) has been acted. For their information, I will suffered a while the more ferious purpose of my Letter, and entertain them with two or three Speeches in the last Session of Parliament, which will ferve them for politics till Parliament meets again.

You must know, Gentlemen, that the Second Part of RIGHTS OF MAN, (the book against which you have been prefenting Addreffes, though, it is most probable, that many of you did not know it) was to have come out precisely at the time that Parliament last met. It happened not to be published till a few days after. But as it was very well known that the book would shortly appear, the parliamentary Orators entered into a very cordial coalition to cry the book down, and they began their attack by crying up the bleffings of the Conftitution.

СГУ

rlia-

t as

in-

ing,

ople .

fuch

they

ayed

are

the

had

fthe

ffes)

will

my

three

hich

neets

cond

hich

it is

w it)

Par-

ifhed

nwoi

on to

сгу

men-

2

Had it been your fate to have been there, you could not but have been moved at the heart-andpockets-felt congratulations that passed between all the parties on this subject of bleffings; for the Outs enjoy places and pensions and sinceures as well as the Ins, and are as devoutly attached to the firm of the house.

One of the most conspicuous of this motley groupe is the Clerk of the Court of King's Bench, who calls himself Lord Stormont. He is also called Justice General of Scotland, and Keeper of Scoon (an opposition man) and he draws from the public for these norminal offices, not lefs, as I am informed, than fix thousand pounds a year, and he is, most probably, at the trouble of counting the money, and figning a receipt, to shew, perhaps, that he is qualified to be Clerk as well as Justice. He spoke as follows: *

"THAT we fhall all be unanimous, in ex-"preffing our attachment to the conftitution of "thefe realms I am confident. It is a fubject "upon which there can be no divided opinion "in this house. I do not pretend to be deep "read in the knowledge of the Conftitution, but "I take upon me to fay, that from the extent of my knowledge (for I bave so many thousands a year for nothing) it appears to me, that the form the period of the Revolution, for it was

" See his Speech in the Morning Chronicle of Feb. 1.

s by

" by no means created then, it has been, both in " theory and prastice, the wifest fystem that ever was " formed. I never was (he means he never was " sill now) a dealer in political cant. My life has " not been occupied in that way, but the fpecu-" lations of late years feem to have taken a turn, for " which I cannot account. When I came into " public life, the political pamphlets of the time, " however they might be charged with the heat " and violence of parties, were agreed in ex-" tolling the radical beauties of the Conftitution " itself. I remember (be means be bas for-" gotton) a most captivating eulogium on its " charms by Lord Bolingbroke, where he re-" commends his readers to contemplate it in all " its afpects, with the affurance that it would " be found more estimable the more it was " feen. I do not recollet his precife words, but " I wish that men who write upon these fub-" jects would take this for their model, instead " of the political pamphlets, which I am told, " are now in circulation, (fuch, I fuppofe, as " Rights of Man)-painphlets which I have " not read, and whole purport I know only by " report, (he means, perhaps, by the noise they " make.) This, however, I am fure, that " pamphlets tending to unfettle the public " reverence for the conflitution, will have very " little influence. They can do very little harm " -for (by the bye, be is no dealer in political " cant) ibe English are a fober-thinking people, and se are more intelligent, more folid, more fleady in their « opinions,

" opinions, than any people I ever had the fortune to "fee. (This is pretty well laid on, though, for a "new beginner.) But if there fhould ever come a time when the propagation of those doctrines fhould agitate the public mind, I am fure, for every one of your Lordships, that no attack will be made on the constitution, from which it is truly faid that we derive all our prosperity, without raising every one of your Lordships to its fupport. It will then be found that there is no difference among us, but that we are all deterimined to fand or fall together, in defence of the ineftimable fystem"—of places and pensions.

After Stormont, on the oppolition fide, fat down, up role another noble Lord 1 on the ministerial fide, Grenville. This man ought to be as strong in the back as a mule, or the fire of a mule, or it would crack with the weight of places and, offices. He role, however, without feeling any incumbrance, full mafter of his weight; and thus faid this noble Lord to t'other noble Lord !

"The patriotic and manly manner in which "the noble Lord has declared bis fentiments on the fubject of the conftitution, demands my cordial approbation. The noble Vifcount has proved, that however we may differ on particular measures, amidft all the jars and diffonance of parties, we are unanimous in principle. There is a perfect and entire consent (between us) in the love and maintenance of the conftitution as bappily subfifting. It must undoubtedly

th in was was e has pecun, for into time, heat exution forn its e "rein all would t was s, but e fubnftead. told, ofe, as' have nly by they , that public very : harm olitical le, and n their inions,

" doubtedly give your Lordships concern, to find, " that the time is come I (heigh ho!) when there is " propriety in these expressions of regard TO (ol " o ! o !) THE CONSTITUTION. And that there: " are men (confound-their-po-li-tics) who dif-" feminate doctrines bostile to the genuine spirit " of our well balanced fystem, (it is certainly " well balanced when both fides hold places and " penfions at once.) I agree with the noble Vif-" count that they have not (I hope) much. fuccefs. " I am convinced that there is no danger to be " apprehended from their attempts: but it is truly " important and confolatary (to us place-men, I fup-" pose) to know, that if there should ever arife " a ferious alarm, there is but one /pirit, one fenfe, " (and that fenfe I prefume is not common fenfe) and " one determination in this houfe."-----which undoubtedly is to hold all their places and penfions as long as they can.

Both those speeches (excepting the parts enclosed in parenthes; which are added for the purpose of illustration) are copied verbatim from the Morning Chronicle of the 1st of February last; and when the fituation of the speakers is confidered, the one in the opposition, and the other in the ministry, and both of them living at the public expence, by finecure, or nominal places and offices; it required a very unblushing front to be able to deliver them. Can those men feriously suppose any nation to be so completely blind as not to fee through them? Can Stormont imagine that the political ind,

e is (01

here

dif-

birit

inly

and

Vif-

cefs.

be

ruly

fuparife

ense,

and

lions

en-

pur-

the laft ;

der-

1 the

: cx-

fices,

able pofe

ot, to

t the itical

un-

political cant, with which he has larded his harangue, will conceal the craft? Does he not know that there never was a cover large enough to hide itfelf? Or can Grenville believe, that his credit with the public encreases with his avarice for places?

But, if these orators will accept a service from me, in return for the allusions they have made to the Rights of Man, I will make a speech for either of them to deliver on the excellence of the constitution, that shall be as much to the purpose as what they have spoken, or as Bolingbroke's captivating encomium. Here it is.

• THAT we fhall all be unanimous in expressing our attachment to the constitution, I am confident. It is, my Lords, incomprehensibly good : but the great wonder of all is the wisdom; for its is, my Lords, the wifest fystem that ever was formed.

With refpect to us noble Lords, though the world does not know it, it is very well known to us, that we have more widdom than we know what to do with; and what is ftill better, my Lords, we have it all in ftock. I defy your Lordships to prove, that a tittle of it has been ufed yet; and if we do but go on, my Lords, with the frugality we have hitherto done, we shall leave to our heirs and fucceffors, when we go out of the world, the whole ftock of wifdom, untouched, that we brought in; and there is no doubt but they will follow our example. This, my Lords, is one of the bleffed effects of the hereditary fystem; for we can never be without wildom to long as we keep it by us, and do not use it.

⁶ But, my Lords, as all this wifdom is hereditary property, for the fole benefit of us and our heirs, and as it is neceffary that the people fhould know where to get a fupply for their own ufe, the excellence of our conftitution has provided a King for this very purpofe, and for no other. But, my Lords, I perceive a defect to which the conftitution is fubject, and which I propose to remedy by bringing a bill into Parliament for that purpose.

. The conflitution, my Lords, out of delicacy, I prefume, has left it as a matter of choice to a King whether he will be wife or not. It has not, I mean, my Lords, infifted upon it as a conftitutional point, which, I conceive, it ought to have done; for I pledge myfelf to your Lordships to prove, and that with true patriotic boldne/s, that he has no choice in the matter. The bill, my Lords, that I shall bring in will be to declare, that the conftitution, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, does not inveft the King with this choice; our anceftors were too wife to do that; and, in order to prevent any doubts that might otherwife arife, I shall prepare, my Lords, an enact. ing claufe, to fix the wifdom of Kings, by act of Parliament; and then, my Lords, our Conftitution will be the wonder of the world ! ...

Wifdom, my Lords, is the one thing needful; but that there may be no miltake in this matter, and

and that we may proceed confiftently with the true wifdom of the conftitution, I fhall propofe a certain criterion, whereby the exast quantity of wifdom neceffary for a King may be known. [Here fhould be a cry of Hear him ! Hear him !]

' It is recorded, my Lords, in the Statutes at Large of the Jews, "a book, my Lords, which I "have not read, and whose purport I know only "by report," but perbaps the bench of Bishops can recollect something about it, that Saul gave the most convincing proofs of royal wildom before he was made a King, for be was sent to seek bis father's affes, and be could not find them.

• Here, my Lords, we have, moft happily for us, a cafe in point: This precedent ought to be eftablished by act of Parliament; and every King, before he be crowned, should be fent to feek his father's affes, and if he cannot find them, he shall be declared wife enough to be King, according to the true meaning of our excellent constitution. All; therefore, my Lords, that will be neceffary to be done, by the enacting clause that I shall bring in, will be to invest the King before-hand with the quantity of wisdom neceffary for this purpose, left he should happen not to possible it; and this, my Lords, we can do without making use of any of our own.

• We further read, my Lords, in the faid Statutes at Large of the Jews, that Samuel, who certainly was as mad as any Man-of-Rights-Man now a-days, (hear act of titution éedful ; matter,

and

and

redi-

i our

nould

ule,

ded a

But,

onfti-

dy by

icacy,

to a s not,

nftitu-

have

ips to

hat he

Lords,

at the mean-

th this

that ;

might enact .

sie.

(hear him ! hear him !) was highly difpleafed, and even exafperated, at the propofal of the Jews to have a King, and he warned them againft it with all that affurance and impudence of which he was mafter. I have been, my Lords, at the trouble of going all the way to Paternofter-row, to procure an extract from the printed copy. I was told that I fhould meet with it there, or in Amen-corner, for I was then going, my Lords, to rummage for it among the curiofities of the Antiquarian Society.... I will read the extract to your Lordfhips, to fhew how little Samuel knew of the matter.

• The extract, my Lords, is from 1 Samuel, chap. 8. • And Samuel told all the words of the Lord • unto the people, that asked of him a King.

"And he faid, this will be the manner of the King that fhall reign over you: he will take your fons, and appoint them for himfelf, for his chariots, and to be his horfemen; and fome fhall run before his chariots.

"And he will appoint him captains over thoufands, and captains over fifties, and will fet them to ear his ground, and to reap his harveft, and to make his infruments of war, and infruments of his chariots.

" And he will take your daughters to be confec-" tionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

"And he will take your fields, and your vine-" yards, and your olive-yards, even the best of " them, and give them to his fervants.

" And

"And he will take the tenth of your feed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his fervants.

"And he will take your men-fervants, and your maid-fervants, and your goodlieft young men, and your affes, and put them to his work.

" And he will take the tenth of your fheep, and " ye fhall be his fervants.

"And ye shall cry out in that day, because of your King, which ye shall have chosen you; and the Lord will not hear you on that day."

'Now, my Lords, what can we think of this man Samuel ? Is there a word of truth, or any thing like truth, in all that he has faid ? He pretended to be a prophet, or a wife man, but has not the event proved him to be a fool, or an incendiary ? Look around, my Lords, and fee if any thing has happened that he pretended to foretell ? Has not the most profound peace reigned throughout the world ever fince Kings were in fashion ? Are not, for example, the prefent Kings of Europe the most peaceable of mankind, and the Emprefs of Russia the very milk of human kindnefs? It would not be worth having Kings, my Lords, if it were not that they never go to war.

' If we look at home, my Lords, do we not fee the fame things here as are feen every where elfe? Are our young men taken to be horfemen, or foot foldiers, any more than in Germany or in Pruffia, or in Hanover or in Heffe? Are not our failors as fafe at land as at fea? Are they ever dragged from their

And

and

s to

with

was

ole of

re an

that

, for

or it

ty .---

thew

p. 8.

Lord

the

take

for

lome

hou-

hem

and

ients

fec-

ine-

It of

.

their homes, like oxen to the flaughter-houfe, to ferve on board fhips of war? When they return from the perils of a long voyage with the merchandize of diftant countries, does not every man fit down under his own vine and his own fig-tree; in perfect fecurity? Is the tenth of our feed taken by tax-gatherers, or is any part of it given to the King's fervants? In fhort, is not every thing as free from taxes as the light from Heaven!

• Ah! my Lords, do we not fee the bleffed effect of having Kings in every thing we look at? Is not the G. R. or the broad R. ftampt upon every thing? Even the fhoes, the gloves, and the hats that we wear, are enriched with the imprefiion, and all our candles blaze a burnt-offering.

* Befides thefe bleffings, my Lords, that cover us from the fole of the foot to the crown of the head, do we not fee a race of youths growing up to be Kings, who are the very paragons of virtue? There is not one of them, my Lords, but might be trufted with untold gold, as fafely as the other. Are they not "more fober, more intelligent, more fa-" lid, more fleady," and withall, more learned, more wife, more every thing, than any youths we "ever " bad the fortune to fee." Ah! my Lords, they are a bopeful family.

• The bleffed prospect of fucceffion, which the nation has at this moment before its eyes, is a most undeniable proof of the excellence of our constitution, and of the bleffed hereditary fystem; for nothing, my Lords, but a constitution founded on s, oufe, to return merchan man fit fig-tree, red taken iven to ry thing

ed effect at? Is on every the hats ion, and at cover of the wing up virtue? night be e other. more foed, more e " even they are hich the

yes, is a c of our fyftem; founded on

ON THE LATE PROCLAMATION.

on the trueft and pureft wifdom, could admit fuch heaven-born and heaven-taught characters into the government.—Permit me now, my Lords, to recal your attention to the libellous chapter I have juft read about Kings. I mention this, my Lords, becaufe it is my intention to move for a bill to be brought into Parliament to expunge that chapter from the Rible, and that the Lord Chancellor, with the affiftance of the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, and the Duke of Clarence, be requefted to write a chapter in the room of it; and that Mr. Burke do fee that it be truly canonical, and faithfully inferted.'—FINIS.

If the Clerk of the Court of King's Bench should chuse to be the orator of this luminous encomium on the conftitution, I hope he will get it well by heart before he attempt to deliver it, and not to have to apologize to Parliament, as he did in the cafe of Bolingbroke's encomium, for forgetting his leffon; and, with this admonition, I leave him. that and an Loning to a service the bus Having thus informed the Addressers of what paffed at the meeting of Parliament, I return to take up the fubject at the part where I broke off in order to introduce the preceding fpeeches. I was then flating, that the first policy of the Government party was filence, and the next, clamorous contempt; but as people generally choose to read and judge for themfelves, the work ftill went on, and the affectation of contempt, like the filence that preceded it, paffed for nothing. B Thus

Thus foiled in their fecond fcheme, their evil genius, like a will-with-a-wifp, led them to a third; when all at once, as if it had been unfolded to them by a fortune-teller, or Mr. Dundas had difcovered it by fecond fight, this once harmlefs, infignificant book, without undergoing the alteration of a fingle letter, became a most wicked and dangerous Libel. The whole Cabinet, like a ship's crew, became alarmed; all hands were piped upon deck, as if a conspiracy of elements was forming around them, and out came the Proclamation and the Profecution; and Addreffes supplied the place of prayers.

Ye filly fwains, thought I to myfelf, why do you torment yourfelves thus? The RIGHTS OF MAN is a book calmy and rationally written; why then are you to diffurbed? Did you fee how little or how fulpicious fuch conduct makes you appear, even cunning alone, had you no other faculty, would hufh you into prudence. The plans, principles, and arguments, contained in that work, are placed before the eyes of the nation, and of the world, in a fair, open, and manly manner, and nothing more is neceffary than to refute them. Do this, and the whole is done; but if ye cannot, to neither can ye fupprefs the reading, nor convict the Author; for that Law, in the opinion of all good men, would convict itfelf, that thould condemn what cannot be refuted. anna the tens

Having now fhewn the Addreffers the feveral ftages of the bufinefs, prior to their being called upon,

upon, like Cæfar in the Tyber, crying to Caffius, belp, Caffins, or I fink!" I next come to remark on the policy of the Government, in promoting Addreffes 1 on the confequences naturally refulting therefrom; and on the conduct of the perfons concerned.

With refpect to the policy, it evidently carries with it every mark and feature of difguifed fear. And it will hereafter be placed in the hiftory of extraordinary things, that a pamphlet should be produced by an individual, unconnected with any fect or party, and not feeking to make any, and almost a stranger in the land, that should compleatly frighten a whole Government, and that in the midft of its most triumphant fecurity. Such a circumstance cannot fail to prove, that either the pamphlet has irrefiftible powers, or the Government very extraordinary defects, or both. The Nation exhibits no figns of fear at the Rights of Man; why then should the Government, unless the interest of the two are really opposite to each other, and the fecret is beginning to be known? That there are two diffinct classes of men in the nation, those who pay taxes, and those who receive and live upon the taxes, is evident at first fight; and when taxation is carried to excess, it cannot fail to difunite those two, and something of this kind is now beginning to appear.

It is also curious to observe, amidst all the sume and bustle about Proclamations and Address, kept up by a few noify and interested men, how B 2 little

S,

their evil em to a unfolded ndas had harmlefs, he alteracked and e a fhip's bed upon forming tion and e place of

y do you MAN- is then are or how ai, even , would inciples. e placed world, in ng more , and the ther can Author: od men. nn what : feveral ig called upon, little the mais of the nation feem to care about either. They appear to me, by the indifference they fhew, not to believe a word the Proclamation contains, and as to the Addreffes, they travel to London with the filence of a funeral, and having announced their arrival in the Gazette, are depofited with the afhes of their predeceffors, and Mr. Dundas writes their bic jacet.

One of the best effects which the Proclamation, and its echo the Addresses have had, has been that of exciting and fpreading curiofity ; and it requires only a fingle reflection to difcover, that the object of all curiofity is knowledge. When the mais of the nation faw that Placemen, Penlioners, and Borough-mongers, were the perfons that flood forward promote Addreffes, it could not fail to create fufpicions that the public good was not their object; that the character of the books, or writings, to which fuch perfons obfcurely alluded, not daring to mention them, was directly contrary to what they described them to be, and that it was neceffary that every man, for his own fatisfaction, should exercise his proper right, and read and judge for himfelf.

But how will the perfons who have been induced to read the Rights of Man, by the clamour that has been raifed against it, be furprized to find, that, instead of a wicked, inflamatory work, inflead of a licencious and profligate performance, it abounds with principles of government that are uncontrovertible—with arguments which every

reader

reader will feel, are unanfwerable—with plans for the increase of commerce and manufactures—for the extinction of war—for the education of the children of the poor—for the comfortable support of the aged and decayed perfons of both sexs for the relief of the army and navy, and, in short, for the promotion of every thing that can benefit the moral, civil and political condition of Man.

Why, then, fome calm obferver will afk, why is the work profecuted, if thefe be the goodly matters it contains? I will tell thee, friend; it contains alfo a plan for the reduction of Taxes, for leffening the immenfe expences of Government, for abolifthing finecure Places and Penfions; and it propofes applying the redundant taxes, that fhall be faved by thefe reforms, to the purpofes mentioned in the former paragraph, inftended applying them to the fupport of idle and profligate Placemen and Penfioners.

Is it, then, any wonder that Placemen and Penfioners, and the whole train of Court expectants, fhould become the promoters of Addreffes, Proclamations, and Profecutions? or, is it any wonder that Corporations and rotten Boroughs, which are attacked and exposed, both in the First and Second Parts of Rights of Man, as unjust monopolies and public nuifances, should join in the cavalcade ? Yet these are the fources from which Addreffes have fprung. Had not such perfons come forward to oppose the Rights of Man, I should have doubted the efficacy of my own writings: but B 3 those re about lifference lamation travel to d having re depoand Mr. · 11 0 amation, as been nd it rethat the hen the nlioners, at flood t fail to was not oks, or alluded, ontrary t it was faction, ad and 2 11 11 2 een inlamour to find, rk, inince, it hat' are every

reader

۲S,

those opposers have now proved to me, that the blow was well directed, and they have done it justice, by confessing the finart.

The principal deception in this bufinefs of Addreffes has been, that the promoters of them have not come forward in their proper characters. They have affumed to pafs themfelves upon the Public, as a part of the Public bearing a fhare of the burthen of Taxes, and acting for the public good; whereas, they are in general that part of it that adds to the public burthen, by living on the produce of the public taxes. They are to the public what the locufts are to the tree: the burthen would be lefs, and the profperity would be greater, if they were fhaken off.

"I domot come here," faid ONSLOW, at the Surry County meeting, " as Lord Lieutenant and " Cuftos Rotulorum of the county, but I come " here as a plain country gentleman." The fact is, that he came there as what he was, and as no other, and confequently he came as one of the beings I have been defcribing. If it be the character of a gentleman to be fed by the public, as a pauper is by the parifh, Onflow has a fair claim to the title; and the fame defcription will fuit the Duke of Richmond, who led the Addrefs at the Suffex meeting.—He alfo may fet up for a gentleman.

As to the meeting in the next adjoining county, (Kent) it was a fcene of difgrace. About two hundred perfons met, when a fmall part of them drew drew privately away from the reft, and voted an Addrefs: the confequence of which was, that they got together by the ears, and produced a riot in the very act of producing an Addrefs to prevent Riots.

That the Proclamation and the Addresses have failed of their intended effect, may be collected from the filence which the Government party itfelf observes. The number of Addresses has been weekly retailed in the Gazette; but the number of Addreffers has been concealed. Several of the Addreffes have been voted by not more than ten or twelve perfons; and a confiderable number of them by not more than thirty. The whole number of Addresses presented at the time of writing this letter is three hundred and twenty, (rotten Boroughs and Corporations included) and even admitting, on an average, one hundred Addreffers to each Address, the whole number of Addressers would be but thirty-two thousand, and nearly three months have been taken up in procuring this number. That the fuccels of the Proclamation has been lefs than the fuccels of the Work it was intended to discourage, is a matter within my own knowledge; for a greater number of the cheap edition of the First and Second Parts of RIGHTS OF MAN has been fold in the fpace only of one month, than the whole number of Addreffers (admitting them to be thirty-two thousand) have amounted to in three months.

that the done it

of Adim have s. They Public, the burgood; it that the prohe pubburthen greater,

, at the ant and I come The fact I as no of the he chaic, as a r claim fuit the a gencounty.

ot two f them drew

It is a dangerous attempt in any Government to fay to a Nation, " thou fhalt not read." This is now done in Spain, and was formerly done under the old Government of France; but it ferved to procure the downfal of the latter, and is fubverting that of the former; and it will have the fame tendency in all countries; becaufe thought, by fome means or other, is got abroad in the world, and cannot be reftrained, though reading may.

If Rights of Man were a book that deferved the vile defeription which the promoters of the Addrefs have given of it, why did not thefe men prove their charge, and fatisfy the people, by producing it, and reading it publicly? This most certainly ought to have been done, and would alfo have been done, had they believed it would have answered their purpofe. But the fact is, that the book contains truths, which those time-fervers dreaded to hear, and dreaded that the people fhould know; and it is now following up the Addreffes in every part of the nation, and convicting them of falfhoods.

Among the unwarrantable proceedings to which the Proclamation has given rife, the meetings of the Juftices in feveral of the towns and counties ought to be noticed. Those men have affumed to re-act the farce of General Warrants, and to fupprefs, by their own authority, whatever publications they please. This is an attempt at power, equalled only by the conduct of the minor defpors of the most despotic governments in Europe, and yet those Justices affect to call England a Free Country. But even this, perhaps, like the scheme for garrifoning the country, by building military barracks, is necessary to awaken the country to a fense of its Rights, and, as such, it will have a good effect.

Another part of the conduct of fuch Juffices has been, that of threatening to take away the licences from taverns and public-houfes, where the inhabitants of the neighbourhood affociated to read and difcufs the principles of Government, and to inform each other thereon. This, again, is fimiliar to what is doing in Spain and Ruffia; and the reflection which it cannot fail to fuggeft is, that the principles and contiuct of any Government muft be bad, when that Government dreads and ftartles at difcuffion, and feeks fecurity by a prevention of knowledge.

If the Government, or the Conftitution, or by whatever name it be called, be that miracle of perfection which the Proclamation and the Addreffes have trumpeted it forth to be, it ought to have defied difcuffion and inveftigation, inftead of dreading it. Whereas, every attempt it makes, either by Proclamation, Profecution, or Addrefs, to fupprefs inveftigation, is a confeffion that it feels itfelf unable to bear it. It is error only, and not truth, that thrinks from enquiry. All the numerous pamphlets, and all the newspaper failhood and abufe, that have been published against

nment to This is ie under erved to byerting me tenby fome rld, and . 8 7. rved the he Adfe men by prois most uld alfo ld have hat the -fervers people he Advicting which ings of ounties . fumed ind to publi-DOWCF, lespots of againft the "RIGHTS OF MAN," have fallen before it like pointlefs arrows; and, in like manner, would any work have fallen before the Conftitution, had the Conftitution, as it is called, been founded on as good political principles as those on which the RIGHTS OF MAN is written.

L

S.

It is a good Conftitution for courtiers, placemen, penfioners, borough-holders, and the leaders of Parties, and these are the men that have been the active leaders of Addreffes; but it is a bad Conftitution for at least ninety-nine parts of the nation out of an hundred, and this truth is every day making its way.

It is bad, first, because it entails upon the nation the unnecessary expense of supporting three forms and systems of Government at once, namely, the monarchical, the aristocratical, and the democratical.

Secondly, becaufe it is impossible to unite such a different composition by any other means than perpetual corruption; and therefore the corruption so loudly and so universally complained of, is no other than the natural confequence of such an unnatural compound of Governments; and in this consists that excellence which the numerous herd of placemen and pensioners so loudly extol, and which, at the same time, occasions that enormous load of taxes under which the rest of the nation groans.

Among the mais of national delutions calculated to amufe and impose upon the multitude, the standing ftanding one has been, that of flattering them into taxes, by calling the Government, (or as they pleafe to express it, the English Constitution) " the " envy and the admiration of the world." Scarcely an Address has been voted in which fome of the speakers have not uttered this hackneyed nonfensical fallshood.

27

Two Revolutions have taken place, those of America and France; and both of them have rejected the unnatural compounded fystem of the English government. America has declared against all hereditary Government, and established the reprefentative fyftem of Government only. France has entirely rejected the ariftocratical part, and is now difcovering the abfurdity of the monarchical, and is approaching faft to the representative lyftem. On what ground, then, do those men continue a declaration, respecting what they call the envy and admitation of other nations, which the voluntary practice of fuch nations, as have had the opportunity of eftablishing Government, contradicts and falfifies. Will fuch men never confine themfelves to truth? Will they be for ever the deceivers of the people ?

But I will go farther, and fhew, that, were Government now to begin in England, the people could not be brought to eftablish the fame fystem they now fubmit to.

In fpeaking upon this fubject (or on any other) on the pure ground of principle, antiquity and precedent

s, n before r, would ion, had ed on as sich the lacemen, uders of ve been is a bad ts of the is every

e nation ee forms iely, the lemocra-

nite fuch cans than orruption of, is no fuch an ad in this rous herd atol, and enormous he nation

calculattude, the ftanding

cedent ceafe to be authority, and hoary-headed error lofes its effect. The reafonablenefs and propriety of things must be examined abstractedly from custom and usage; and in this point of view, the right which grows into practice to-day is as much a right, and as old in principle and theory, as if it had the customary fanction of a thousand ages. Principles have no connection with time, nor characters with names.

To fay that the Government of this country is composed of King, Lords, and Commons, is the mere phraseology of custom. It is composed of men; and whoever the men be to whom the Government of any country is entrufted, they ought to be the best and wifest that can be found, and if they are not fo, they are not fit for the flation. A man derives no more excellence from the change of a name, or calling him King, or calling him Lord, than I fhould do by changing my name from Thomas to George, or from Paine to Guelph. I should not be a whit the more able to write a book, becaufe my name were altered, neither would any man, now called a King or a Lord, have a whit the more fense than he now has, were he to call himfelf Thomas Paine. in the and the

As to the word "Commons," applied as it is in England, it is a term of degradation and reproach, and ought to be abolifhed. It is a term unknown in free countries.

But to the point.—Let us fuppofe that Government was now to begin in England, and that the plan of Government, offered to the nation for its approbation approbation or rejection, confifted of the following parts : " " we what is a work of a mark

S,

y-headed nefs and

tractedly

of view;

day is as

theory;

thousand

ith time,

ountry is s, is the

npoled of

the Go-

ey ought

d, and if

e station.

rom the

or calling my name

Guelph,

to write

, neither a Lord,

has, were an we

d as it is

and re-

s a term

1.1. Govern-

that the

on for its probation.

: Mint

First-That fome one individual should be taken from all the reft of the nation, and to whom all the reft fhould fwear obedience, and never be permitted to fit down in his prefence, and that they should give to him one million sterling a year .- That the nation should never after have power or authority to make laws but with his express confent, and that his fons and his fons' fons, whether wife or foolish, good men or bad, fit or unfit, should have the fame power, and also the fame money annually paid to them for ever. If som och Los such a in Secondly-That there should be two houses of . Legislators to affift in making laws, one of which should, in the first instance, be entirely appointed by the aforefaid perfon, and that their fons and their fons' fons, whether wife or foolifh, good men or bad, fit or unfit, should for ever after be hereditary Thirdly-That the other house should be chosen in the fame manner as the houfe, now called the House of Commons, is chosen, and should be subject to the controul of the two aforefaid hereditary Powers in all things. May all application to the It would be impossible to cram fuch a farago of impolition and abfurdity down the throat of this or any other nation, that were capable of reasoning upon its rights and its interest. They would ask, in the first place, on what ground of right, or on what principle, fuch irrational

rational and prepolterous diffinctions could, or ought to be made; and what pretenfions any man could have, or what fervices he could render, to entitle him to a million a year? They would go farther, and revolt at the idea of configning their children, and their childrens' children, to the domination of perfons hereafter to be born, who might, for any thing they could forefee, turn out to be knaves or fools; and they would finally diffeover, that the project of hereditary Governors and Legiflators was a treasonable usurpation ever the rights of posterity. Not only the calm difference of reafon, and the force of natural affection, but the integrity of manly pride, would impel men to fourn fuch propofals.

From the groffer abfurdities of fuch a fcheme, they would extend their examination to the practical defects—They would foon fee that it would end in tyranny accomplifhed by fraud. That in the operation of it, it would be two to one againft them, because the two parts that were to be made hereditary, would form a common intereft, and flick to each other; and that themfelves and their reprefentatives would become no better than hewers of wood and drawers of water for the other parts of the Government.—Yet call one of those powers King, the other, Lords, and the third, the Commons, and it gives the model of what is called the English Government.—

I have afferted, and have thewn, both in the Ditt and Second Pants of Rights of Man, that

there

uld, or

iny man

ider, to

ould go

og their

the do-

n, who

e, turn

finally

vernors

on over

dictates

n, but

man to · + 9. 7

cheme,

- prac+

would

hat in againft

made

t, and

d their

hewers

arts of

owers

Com-

ed the

n the

there

there is not fuch a thing as an English Constisution, and that the people have yet a Conftitution to form. A Conflication is a thing antecedent to a Government; it is the ast of the people creating a Government and giving it powers, and defining the limits and exercise of the powers jo given. But whenever did the people of England, acting in their original conftituent character, by a delegation elected for that express purpose, declare and fay, " We, the people of this land, do confiitute " and appoint this to be our fystem and form of " Government." The Government has affumed to conftitute itfelf, but it never was conftituted by the people, in whom alone the right of conftituting " - Brother B. M. B. M. M. Marker refides.

I will here recite the preamble to the Federal Conflictution of the United States of America. I have fhewn in the Second Part of Rights of Man, the manner by which the Conflictution was formed and afterwards ratified; and to which I refer the reader.—The preamble is in the following words:

"WE, THE PEOPLE of the United States, "in order to form a more perfect union, effablifh juffice, infure domeftic tranquillity, provide for common defence, promote the general welfare, fecure the bleffings of liberty to ourfelves and our pofterity, DO OR-DAIN AND ESTABISH THIS CONSTITUTION for the United States of America."

+ ido to The . - +

Then

Then follow the feveral articles which appoint the manner in which the feveral component parts of the Government, legislative and executive, shall be elected, and the period of their duration, and the powers they fnall have : alfo, the manner by which future additions, alterations, or amendments, shall be made to the Constitution. Confequently, every improvement that can be made in the fcience of Government, follows in that country as a matter of order. It is only in Governments founded on affumption and falle principles that reasoning upon, and investigating systems and principles of Government, and thewing their feveral. excellencies and defects, are termed libellous and feditious. These terms were made part of the charge brought against Locke, Hampden, and Sydney, and will continue to be brought againft all good men, fo long as bad government shall continue. w not this work doin word reason this The Government of this country has been oftentatiously giving challenges for more than an hundred years paft, upon what it called its own excellence and perfection. Scarcely a King's Speech, or a Parliamentary Speech, has been uttered, in which this glove has not been thrown, till the world has been infulted with their challenges. But it now appears that all this was vapour and vain boafting, or that it was intended to conceal abuses and defects, and hush the people into taxes. I have taken the challenge up, and in behalf of the public have shewn, in a fair, open, and candid manner

RS,

h appoint nent parts tive, shall tion; and nanner by endments, fequently, e in the ountry: as ernments oles, that and prinir feveral. llous and rt of the den, and ht againft ent shall the trans been ofthan an lits own King's en, utterown, till allenges. pour and conceal ito taxes. alf of the did manner,

THE LATE PROCLAMATION. 33

her, both the radical and practical defects of the fystem; when, lo! those champions of the Civil Lift have fied away, and fent the Attorney-General to deny the challenge, by turning the acceptance of it into an attack, and defending their Places and Pensions by a profecution.

I will here drop this part of the fubject, and state a few particulars respecting the profecution now pending, by which the Addreffers will fee that . they have been used as tools to the profecuting party and their dependents. The cafe is an follows : "The original edition of the First and Second Parts of RIGHTS OF MAN, having been expenfively printed (in the modern ftile of printing pamphlets, that they might be bound up with Mr. Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution,) the high price precluded the generality of people from purchasing; and many applications were made to me from various parts of the country to print the work in a cheaper manner. The people of Sheffield requefted leave to print two thousand copies for themfelves, with which request 1 immediately complied. The fame request came to me from Rotherham, from Leicefter, from Chefter, from feveral towns in Scotland; and Mr. James Mackintofh, Author of Vindicia Gailica, brought me a requelt from Warwickfhire, for leave to print ten thousand copies in that country. I had already fent a theap edition to Scotland; and finding the applications increase, I concluded that the best method of complying therewith, would be to print a very numerous numerous edition in London, under my own direction, by which means the work would be more perfect, and the price be reduced lower than it could be by printing fmall editions in the country of only a few thousands each.

The cheap edition of the First Part was begun about the middle of laft April, and from that moment, and not before, I expected a profecution, and the event has proved that I was not miltaken. I had then occasion to write to Mr. Thomas Walker, of Manchefter, and after informing him of my intention of giving up the work for the purpole of general information, I informed him of what I apprehended would be the confequence; that while the work was at a price that precluded an extensive circulation, the Government-party, not able to controvert the plans, arguments, and principles it contained, had chosen to remain filent; but that I expected they would make an attempt to deprive the mais of the nation, and especially the poor, of the right of reading, by the pretence of profecuting either the Author or the Publisher, or both. They chose to begin with. the Publisher. att 1 .

Nearly a month, however, paffed, before I had any information given me of their intentions. I was then at Bromley, in Kent, upon which I came immediately to town, (May 14) and went to Mr. Jordan, the publisher of the original edition. He had that evening been ferved with a fummons, to appear at the Court of King's Bench on the Monday

ls,

own dibe more tr than it country

as begun that moofecution, mistaken. Thomas ning him the purl him of quence ; precluded nt-party, ents, and main fimake an tion, and , by the or or the gin with. 1. re I had tions. I I came t to Mr. on. He nons, to ie Monday following, but for what purpole was not ftated. Supposing it to be on account of the work, I appointed a meeting with him on the next morning, which was accordingly had when I provided an attorney, and took the capence of the defence on myfelf. But finding afterwards that he abfented himfelf from the attorney employed, and had engaged another, and that he had been clofeted with the Solicitors of the Treasury, I left him to follow his own choice, and he chofe to plead Guilty. This he might do if he pleafed; and I make no objection against him for it. I believe that his idea by the word Guilty, was no other than declaring himfelf to be the publisher; without any regard to the merits or demerits of the work ; for were it to be conftrued otherwife, it would amount to the abfurdity of converting a publisher into a Jury, and his confession into a verdict upon the work itfelf. This would be the highest possible refinement upon packing of Juries.

day

ON THE LATE ROCLAN TION. 3

On the 21ft of May, they commenced their profecution against me, as the Author, by leaving a fummons at my lodgings in town, to appear at the Court of King's Bench on the 8th of June following; and on the fame day, (May 21) they iffued alfo their Proclamation. Thus the Court of St. James's, and the Court of King's Bench, were playing into each other's hands at the fame inftant of time, and the farce of Address brought up the rear; and this mode of proceeding is called by the profituted name of Law. Such a thundering ra-C.2 pidity pidity, after a ministerial dormancy of almost eighteen months, can be attributed to no other cause than their having gained information of the forwardness of the cheap Edition, and the dread they felt at the progressive increase of political knowledge.

I was strongly advised by feveral gentlemen, as well those in the practice of the Law, as others, to prefer a bill of indictment against the publisher of the Proclamation, as a publication tending to influence, or rather to dictate the verdict of a Jury on the iffue of a matter then pending; but it appeared to me much better to avail myfelf of the opportunity which fuch a precedent justified me in using, by meeting the Proclamation and the Addreffes on their own ground, and publicly defending the Work which had been thus unwarrantable attacked and traduced .- And confcious as I now am, that the Work entitled RIGHTS OF MAN, fo far from being, as has been malicioufly or erroneoufly reprefented, a falfe, wicked, and feditious Libel, is a work abounding with unanfwerable truths, with principles of the pureft morality and benevolence, and with arguments not to be controverted-Confcious, I fay, of these things, and having no object in view but the happiness of mankind, I have now put the matter to the best proof in my power, by giving to the public a cheap edition of the First and Second Parts of that Work. Let every man read and judge for himfelf, not only of the merits or demerits of the Work, but of the matters therein contained contained, which relate to his own interest and happines.

If, to expose the fraud and imposition of monarchy, and every species of hereditary governmentto leffen the oppression of faxes-to propole plans for the education of helples infancy, and the comfortable support of the aged and distressed - to endeavour to conciliate nations to each other-to extirpate the horrid practice of war-to promote universal peace, civilization, and commerce-and to break the chains of political superstition, and raise degraded man to his proper rank ;-if. these things be libellous, het me live the life of a Libeller, and let the name of LIBELLER be engraven on my tomb.

Of all the weak and ill-judged measures which fear, ignorance, or arrogance, could fuggest, the Proclamation, and the project for Addreffes, are two of the worft. They ferved to advertife the work which the promoters of those measures withed to keep unknown; and in doing this, they offered violence to the judgment of the people, by calling on them to condemn what they forbad them to know, and they put the ftrength of their party to chat hazardous iffue that prudence would have avoided .- The County Meeting for Middlefex was attended by only one hundred and eighteen Addreffers. They, no doubt, expected, that thousands would flock to their flandard, and clamour against the Rights of Man. But the cafe most probably is, that men, in all countries, are not fo blind to their C 3

her caufe the foread they al know-

emen, as others, to publisher. ing to in-Jury on appeared opportuin uling. treffes on ding the attacked am, that far from oully reibel, is a hs, with volence, d-Con-10 object ave how ower, by the First rery man e merits s therein ontained

their Rights and their Intereft, as Goverments be-

Having thus fhewn the extraordinary manner in which the Government-party commenced their attack, I proceed to offer a few observations on the prosecution, and on the mode of trial by Special Jury.

In the first place, I have written a book ; and if it cannot be refuted, it cannot be condemned. But I do not confider the profecution as particularly levelled against me, but against the general right, or the right of every man, of investigating fystems and principles of Government, and shewing their feveral 'excellencies or defects. If the prefs be free only to flatter Government, as Mr. Burke has done, and to cry up and extol what certain Court fycophants are pleafed to call a " glorious Confti-" tution," and not free to examine into its errors or abuses, or whether a Constitution scally exist or not, fuch freedom is no other than the staf Spain, Turkey, or Ruffia; and a Jury, in this cafe, would not be a Jury to try, but an Inquisition to condemn.

I have afferted, and by fair and open argument maintained, the right of every nation at all times, to eftablish fuch a fystem and form of Government for itself as best accords with its disposition, interest, and happiness; and to change, or alter it, as it fees occasion. Will any Jury deny to the Nation this right? If they do, they are traitors, and their Verdict would be null and void. And nents be-nanner in their at-

ns on the

y Special

k; and if

ed. But

rticularly

eral right,

g fystems

prefs be

Burke has ain Court

is Confti-

its errors

ally exift

Spain,

ife, would

to con-

argument

all times,

vernment

lition, in-

r alter it,

ny to the

c traitore

id. And if they admit the right, the means must be admitted also; for it would be the highest absurdity to fay, that the right existed, but the means did not. The question, then, is, What are the means by which the possession and exercise of this National Right are to be secured? The answer will be, that of maintaining, inviolably, the right of free investigation; for investigation always serves to detect error, and to bring forth truth.

I have, as an individual, given my opinion upon what I believe to be not only the beft, but the true fystem of Government, which is the reprefentative fystem, and I have given reasons for that opinion.

First, Because, in the representative system, no office of very extraordinary power, or extravagant pay, is attached to any individual; and confequently, there is nothing to excite those national contentions and civil wars; with which countries under monarchical governments, are frequently convulsed, and of which the History of England exhibits such numerous instances.

Secondly, Becaufe the reprefentative is a fyftem of Government always in maturity; whereas monarchical government fluctuates through all the ftages, from non-age to dotage. Thirdly, Becaufe the reprefentative fyftem admits of none but men, properly qualified, into the Government, or removes them if they prove to be otherwife. Whereas, in the hereditary fyftem, a nation may be encumbered with a knave or an ideot.

ie ie

ideot, for a whole life-time, and not be benefited by a fucceffor.

Fourthly, Becaule there does not exift a right to eftablifh hereditary government, or in other words, hereditary fucceffors, becaule hereditary government always means a government yet to come, and the cafe always is, that thole who are to live afterwards have always the fame right to eftablifh government for themfelves, as the people had who lived before them ; and, therefore, all laws attempting to eftablifh hereditary government, are founded on affumption and political fiction.

If these positions be truths, and I challenge any man to prove the contrary; if they tend to inftruct and enlighten mankind, and to free them from error, oppression, and political superstition, which are the objects I have in view, in publishing them, that Jury would commit an act of injustice to their country and to me, if not an act of perjury, that should call them falle, wicked, and malicious.

Dragonetti, in his Treatife "on Virtues and Rewards," has a paragraph worthy of being recorded in every country in the world—" The feience, " (fays he,) of the politician, confifts in fixing the " true point of happinefs and freedom. Those " men would deferve the gratitude of ages, who " fhould difcover a mode of government that con-" tained the greateft fum of individual bappinefs " with the least national expense." But if Junics are to be made use of to prohibit enquiry, to fup₃

preß

prefs truth, and to ftop the progress of knowledge, this boafted palladium of liberty becomes the most fuccefsful inftrument of tyranny.

encfited

a right.

in other

reditary

yet to

who are

right to.

: people

all laws

ent, are

the states

nge any.

to in-

e them

erftition,

injustice

of per-

und ma-

Ales on ag

and Re-

ccorded

ting the

Thofe

cs, who

hat con-

appiness

f Jurica

pres

Among the arts practifed at the Bar, and from the Bench, to impose upon the understanding of a Iury, and obtain a Verdict where the confciences of men could not otherwife confent, one of the most fuccefsful has been that of calling truth a libel, and of infinuating, that the words ." falfely, wickedly, " and malicioully," though they are made the formidable and high founding part of the charge, are not matters for confideration with a Jury. For what purpofe, then, are they retained, unlefs it be for that of imposition and wilful defamation? I cannot conceive a greater violation of order, nor a more abominable infult upon morality and upon human understanding, than to fee a man fitting in the judgment feat, affecting, by an antiguated foppery of drefs, to imprefs the audience with awe; then caufing witneffes and Jury to be fworn to truth and justice, himself having officially fworn the fame, then caufing to be read a profecution against a man, charging him with having wickedly and malicionfly written and published a certain falle, wicked, and feditious book; and having gone through all this with a fnew of folemnity, as if he faw the eye of the Almighty darting through the roof of the building like a ray of light, turn, in an inftant, the whole into a farce, and, in order to obtain a verdict that could not otherwife be obtained, tell the Jury that the charge of fallely, wickedly edly, and feditioufly, meant nothing; that truth was out of the queftion; and that whether the perfon accufed fpoke truth or falfhood, or intended virtuoufly or wickedly, was the fame thing; and finally conclude the wretched inquitorial fcene, by flating fome antiquated precedent, equally as abominable as that which is then acting, or giving fome opinion of his own, and fallely calling the one and the other—Law. It was, most probably, to fuch a Judge as this, that the most folemn of all reproofs was given—" The Lord will fmite thee, thou whit-" ened wall."

I now proceed to offer fome remarks on what is called a Special Jury.—As to what is called a Special Verdict, I shall make no other remark upon it, than that it is in reality not a verdict. It is an attempt on the part of the Jury to delegate, or of the Bench to obtain, the exercise of that right which is committed to the Jury only.

With refpect to Special Juries, I shall state such matters as I have been able to collect, for I do not find any uniform opinion concerning the mode of appointing them.

In the first place, this mode of trial is but of modern invention, and the origin of it, as I am told, is as follows:

Formerly, when diffutes arole between Merchants, and were brought before a Court, the cafe was, that the nature of their commerce, and the method of keeping Merchants accounts, not being fufficiently underftood by perfons out of their own

line

line, it became necessary to depart from the common mode of appointing Juries, and to felect fuch perfons for a Jury whofe prattical knowledge would enable them to decide upon the cafe. From this introduction, Special Juries became more general; but fome doubts having arifen as to their legality, " an act was passed in the 3d of Geo. II. to establish them as legal, and also to extend them to all cafes, not only between individuals, but in cafes where the Government itself should be the Prosecutor. This most probably gave rife to the fuspicion fo generally entertained of packing a Jury; because, by this act, when the crown, as it is called, is the Profecutor, the Master of the Crown-office, who holds his office under the Crown, is the perfon who either wholly nominates, or has great power in nominating the Jury, and therefore it has greatly the appearance of the profecuting party felecting a Jury.

The process is as follows:

erion

virtu-

inally

ftat-

nina-

fome

e and

fuch

proofs

whit-

hat is

Spe-

upon

is an

or of right

: fuch

o not

de of

.

ut of

I am

Mer-

cafe

e me-

own

On motion being made in Court, by either the Plaintiff or Defendant, for a Special Jury, the Court grants it or not, at its own diferentian.

If it be granted, the Solicitor of the party that applied for the Special Jury gives notice to the Solicitor of the adverse party, and a day and hour are appointed for them to meet at the office of the Master of the Crown-office. The Master of the Crown-office fends to the Sheriff or his deputy, who attends with the Sheriff's book of Freeholders. From this book, forty-eight names are taken, and a copy

a copy thereof given to each of the parties; and on a future day notice is again given, and the Solicitors meet a fecond time, and each firikes out twelve names. The lift being thus reduced from fortyeight to twenty-four, the first twelve that appear in Court, and answer to their names, is the Special Jury for that cause. The first operation, that of taking the forty- eight names, is called nominating the Jury; and the reducing them to twenty-four is called firiking the Jury.

Having thus flated the general process, I come to particulars, and the first question will be, how are the forty- eight names, out of which the Jury is to be struck, obtained from the Sheriff's book? for herein lies the principal ground of sufficient, with respect to what is understood by packing of Juries.

Either they must be taken by fome rule agreed upon between the parties, or by fome common rule known and eftablished before-hand, or at the difcretion of fome perfon, who, in such a cafe, ought to be perfectly difinterested in the iffue, as well officially as otherwise.

In the cafe of Merchants, and in all cafes between individuals, the Mafter of the office, called the Crown-office, is officially an indifferent perfon, and as fuch may be a proper perfon to act between the parties, and prefent them with a lift of forty-eight names, out of which each party is to ftrike twelve. But the cafe affumes an entire different character when the Government itfelf is the Profecutor. The Mafter of the Crown-office is then an officer holding holding his office under the Profecutor, and ic is therefore no wonder that the fulpicion of packing Juries thould, in fuch cafes, have been to prevalent. This will apply with additional force, when the profecution is commenced against the Author or Publisher of fuch Works as treat of reforms, and of the abolition of superfluous places and offices, sec. because in such cafes every perfour holding an office, subject to that sufficient, becomes interested as a party; and the office, called the Crown-office, may, upon examination, be found to be of this defoription.

I have heard it afferted, that the Master of the Crown office is to open the Sheriff's book as it were per hazard, and take thereout forty-eight following names, to which the word Merchant or 1quire is affixed. The former of thele he certainly proper, when the cafe is between Merchants, and it has reference to the origin of the cuftom, and to nothing elfe. As to the word Efquire, every man is an Efquire who pleafes to call himfelf Efquire; and the fenfible part of mankind are leaving it off. But the matter for enquiry is, whether there be any exifting law to direct the mode by which the forzy-eight names shall be taken, or whether the mode be merely that of cultom which the office has created; or whether the felection of the fortyseight names be wholly at the diferetion and choice of the Master of the Crown-office? One or other of the two latter appears to be the cafe, becaufe the act already mentioned, of the 3d of Geo.

car in pecial hat of nating four is me to ware we y is to c? for with urics. agreed on rule he difought s well etween ed the on, and een the y-eight welve. aracter ecutor. officer nolding

nd on

citors

welve

forty-

Geo. 11. lays down no rule or mode, norrefers to any preceding law—but fays only, that Special Juries thall hereafter be ftruck, " in fuch manner as Spe-" cial Juries have been and are usually ftruck."

This act appears to me to have been what is generally understood by a " deep take in." It was fitted to the fpur of the moment in which it was passed, 3d of Geo. II when parties ran high, and it ferved to throw into the hands of Walpole, who was then Minister, the management of Juries in Crown profecutions, by making the nomination of the forty-eight perfons, from whom the Jury was to be ftruck, follow the precedent established by cuftom between individuals, and by this means it flipt into practice with lefs fuspicion. Now, the manner of obtaining Special Juries through the medium of an officer of the Government, fuch for inftance as a Mafter of the Crown-office, may be impartial in the cafe of Merchants, or other individuals, but it becomes highly improper and fufpicious in thes where the Government itself is one of the parties. And it must, upon the whole, appear a strange inconfistency, that a Government should keep one officer to commence profecutions, and another officer to nominate the forty-eight perfons from whom the Jury is to be ftruck, both of whom are officers of the Civil Lift, and yet continue to call this by the pompous name of the gloricus Right of trial by Jury !

In the cafe of the King against Jordan, for publishing RIGHTS OF MAN, the Attorney-General moved for the appointment of a Special Jury, and

the

the Master of the Crown-office nominated the fortyeight perfons himfelf, and took them from fuch part of the Sheriff's book as he pleafed. The triak did not come on, occasioned by Jordan withdrawing his plea; but if it had, it might have afforded an opportunity of discussing the subject of Special Juries ; for though fuch difcuffion might have had no effect in the Court of King's-Bench, it would, in the prefent disposition for enquiry, have had a confiderable effect upon the Country; and in all national reforms, this is the proper point to begin at. Put a Country right, and it will foon put Government right. Among the improper things acted by the Government in the cafe of Special Juries, on their own motion, one has been that of treating the Jury with a dinner, and afterwards giving each Juryman two guineas, if a verdict be found for the profecution, and only one if otherwife; and it has been long observed, that in London and Westminster there are perfons who appear to make a trade of ferving, by being to frequently for upon Special Juries.

Thus much for Special Juries. As to what is called a Common Jury, upon any Government profecution against the Author or Publisher of RIGHTS or MAN, during the time of the prefent Sheriffry, I have one question to offer, which is, whether the prefent Sheriffs of London, having publicly prejudged the cafe, by the part they have taken in procuring an Address from the county of Middlesex, (kowever diminutive and infignificant the number of Addresser exerc.

was was and who es in on of was d by ans it v, the h the ch for ay be ndiviifpicione of ippear hould , and erfons whom nue to Right a # # . r pubicneral

y, and

the

ant

urict

Spe

at is

were, being only one bundred and eighteen) are eligible or proper perfons to be entrufted with the power of returning a Jury to try the iffue of any fuch profecution?

But the whole matter appears, at leaft to me, to be worthy of a more extensive confideration than what relates to any Jury, whether Special or Common; for the cafe is, whether any part of a whole nation, locally felected as a Jury of twelve men always is, be competent to judge and determine for the whole nation, on any matter that relates to fystems and principles of Government, and whether it be not applying the institution of Juries to purposes for which fuch institution was not intended ? For example,

I have afferted, in the Work NOHTS OF MAN, that as every man in the nation pays taxes, fo has every man a right to a fhare in government, and confequently that the people of Manchefter, Birmingham, Sheffield, Leeds, Hallifax, &ce. &cc. have the fame right as those of London. Shall then twelve men, picked out between Temple-bar and Whitechapel, because the book happened to be first published there, decide upon the rights of the inhabitants of those towns, or of any other town or village in the nation ?

Having thus spoken of Juries, I come next to offer a few observations on the matter contained in the information or prosecution.

The work, RIGHTS OF MAN, confifts of Part the Firft, and Part the Second. The Firft Part the profecutor

12

ver

fe":

1 8

to

mole

-18

for

to her

ur-

ed ?

1 81

AN;

has

and

Bir•

ave

then

and

be

the '

own

t: to

d in-

5. 10 2

t the

t the

. .

*

profecutor has thought it most proper to let alone ; and from the Second Part he has felected is few mort paragraphs, making in the whole not quit two pages of the fame printing as in the cheap edition, Thofe paragraphs relate chiefly to certain fects, fuch as the Revolution of 1688, and the coming of George the First, commonly called of the House of Hanover, or the Houle of Brunswick, or some fuch house. The arguments, plans, and principles, contained in the work, the profecutor has not ventured to attack. They are beyond his reach. at The Act which the profecutor appears to reft most upon for the support of the profecution, is the Act intituled, " An Act, declaring the rights and " liberties of the fubject, and fettling the fuccef-" fion of the crown," paffed in the first year of William and Mary, and more commonly known by the name of the " Bill of Rights." Is seit inter I have called this Bill " A Bill of wrongs and of. " infalt." My reafons, and alfo my proofs, are as follows stilling and sall and the land reads on my wife The method and principle which this Bill takes for declaring rights and liberties, are in direct contradiction to rights and liberties ; it is an affumed attempt to take them wholly away from pofterityfor the declaration in the faid Bill is as follows : " The Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and " Commons; do, in the name of all the people, most " humbly and faithfully fubmit themselves, their " beirs, and posterity for over ;" that is, to. William, and D

and Mary his wife, their heirs and succeffors. This is a ftrange way of decharing rights and liberties. But the Parliament who made this declaration in the name, and on the part, of the people, had no authority from them for fo doing—and with refpect to peferity for ever, they had no right or authority whatever in the cafe. It was affumption and ufurpation. I have reafoned very extensively against the principle of this Bill in the first part of Rights of Man; the profecutor has filently admitted that reafoning, and he now commences a profecution on the authority of the Bill, after admitting the reafoning against it.

It is also to be observed, that the declaration in this Bill, abject and irrational as it is, had no other intentional operation than against the family of the Stuarts, and their abettors. The idea did not then exift, that in the fpace of an hundred years, polterity might discover a different and much better fythem of government, and that every fpecies of hereditary government might fall as Popes and Monks had fallen before. This, I fay, was not then thought of, and therefore the application of the Bill, in the prefent cafe, is a new, erroncous, and illegal application, and is the fame as creating a new Bill ex poft fatto. It has ever been the craft of Courtiers, for the purpole of keeping up an expensive and enormous Civil Lift, and a mummery of ufeless and antiquated places and offices at the public expense, to be continually hanging England upon fome individual or other, called King, though the man might not have capacity to be a parish constable. The folly and abfurdity of this is appearing more and more every day , and fill those men continue to act as if no alteration in the public opinion had taken place. They hear each other's nonfenfe, and fuppofe the whole nation talks the fame Gibberifh. Let fuch men cry up the House of Orange; or the House of Brunswick, if they please. They would ery up any other house if it fuited their purpofe, and give as good reasons for it. But what is this house, or that house, or any house to a nation? * For a nation to be free, it is fafficient that fbe " wills it." Her freedom depends wholly upon herfelf, and not on any house, nor on any individual: I afk not in what light this cargo of foreign houfes appears to others, but I will fay in what light it appears to me .- It was like the trees of the foreft faying unto the bramble, come thou and reign over

Thus much for both their houles. I now come to fpeut of two other houses, which are also pur into the information, and those are, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons. Here, I suppole, the Attorney-General intends to prove me guilty of speaking either truth or fallhood; for, according to the modern interpretation of Libels, it does not lignify which, and the only improvement necessary to shew the complete absurdity of such D 2

on im nd no cipect. hority ulure gainft Rights d that ion on e'rea-$ 12.31 tion in o other of the ot then poitebetter of here-Monks ot then of the bus, and cating a 52.41 for the normous and antipence, to be

This

rties,

doctrine, would be, to profecute a man for uttering a most falle and wicked inutb.

I will quote the part I am going to give, from the Office Copy, with the Attorney General's inuendoes, enclosed in parentheses as they ftand in the information, and I hope that civil lift officer will caution the Court not to laugh when he reads them, and also to take care not to laugh himself. The information flates, that Thomas Paine being

The information fraces, that and evil-difposed pera witked, malicious, seditious, and evil-difposed perfon, bath, with force and arms, and most wicked cunfon, bath, with force and arms, and most wicked cunfon, bath, with force and arms, and most wicked cunfon, bath, with force and arms, and most force of for and published a certain faile, scandalous, malicious, and feditious libel, in one part thereof, to the tenor and effect following, that is to fay-

With respect to the two Houses, of which the " English Parliament (meaning the Parliament of a this Kingdom) is composed, they appear to be " effectually influenced into one, and, as a Legil-" lature, to have no temper of its own. The Mi-" nifter, (meaning the Minifter employed by the King of this Realm, in the administration of the Govern-" ment thereof) whoever he, at any time my be, st touches IT, (meaning the tore Houses of Parlina ment of this Kingdom) as with an opium wand, and " IT (mooning the two Houses of Parliament of this "Kingdom) fleeps obedience." As I am not malicious enough to difturb their repose, though it be time they should awake, I leave the two Houses, and the Attorney General, to the enjoyment of their dreams, and proceed to a new fubject. The

The Gentlemen, to whom I shall next addiess myfeif, are those who 'have stilled themselves " Friends " of the people," holding their meeting at the Freemasons' Tavern, London.

1. " m

m en-

in-

20-

em,

The Ke

eing

per-

CHNlous,

of, to

h the

ent of

to be

.cgil-

e Mi-

e King

overn

r be,

arlin

nd, and

of this

h it be

Houles,

nent of

The

One of the principal Members of this Society, is Mr. Grey, who, I believe, is also one of the most independent Members in Parliament. I collect this opinion from what Mr. Burke formerly mentioned to me, rather than from any knowledge of my own. The occasion was as follows:

I was in England at the time the bubble broke forth about Nootka Sound ; and the day after the King's Meffage, as it is called, was fent to Parliament, I wrote a note to Mr. Burke, that upon the condition the French Revolution should not be a fubject (for he was then writing the book I have fince answered) I would call on him the next day, and mention fome matters I was acquainted with, respecting that affair; for it appeared to me extraordinary, that any body of men, calling themfelves Reprefentatives, thould commit themfelves fo precipitately, or, "fleep obedience," as Parliament was then doing, and run a nation into expence, and, perhaps a war, without fo much as enquiring into the cafe, or the subject, of both which I had fome knowledge.

When I faw Mr. Burke, and mentioned the circumftances to him, he particularly fpoke of Mr. Grey, as the fitteft Member to bring fuch matters forward; for, faid Mr. Burke, "1 am not the pro-D 3 " per

" per perfon to do it, as I am in a treaty with Mr. " Pitt about Mr. Haftings's trial." I hope the Attorney General will allow, that Mr. Burke was then fleeping bis obedience.—But to return to the Society—

I cannot bring myself to believe, that the general motive of this Society is any thing more than that by which every former parliamentary opposition has been governed, and by which the prefent is fufficiently known. Failing in their purfuit of power and place within doors, they have now (and that not in a very mannerly manner) endeavoured to policis themselves of that ground out of doors, which, had it not been made wothers, would not er appear to me to have been made by them. have watched, with more cutting than candour, the progress of a certain publication, and when they faw it had excited a fpirit of enquiry, and was ray pidly fpreading, they stepped forward to profit by the opportunity, and Mr. Fox then called it a Libel, In faying this, he libelled himfelf. Politicians of this caft, fuch, I mean, as those who trim between parties, and lye by for events, are to be found in every country, and it never yet happened that they did not do more harm than good. They embarrais businels, fritter it to nothing, perplex the people, and the event to themfelves generally is, that they go just far enough to make enomies of the few, without going far enough to make friends of the many.

Whoever

Whoever will read the declarations of this Society, of the 25th of April, and 5th of May, will find a ftudied referve upon all the points that are real abufes. They fpeak not once of the extravagance of Government, of the abominable lift of unneceffary and finecure places and penfions, of the enormity of the Civil Lift, of the excess of taxes, nor of any one matter that fubftantially affects the nation; and from fome convertation that has paffed in that Society, it does not appear to me that it is any part of their plan, to carry this clafs of reforms into practice. No Oppofition Party ever did, when it gained poffeffion.

F.,

1-

125

he

rsl

hat

ion

ent

of

and

OTS,

not

e to

our,

they.

5 FÅ÷

t by ibel.

ns of

ween

nd in

they

nbar-

the lly is,

of the

nds of

hocyce

1

In making these free observations, I mean not to enter into contention with this Society, their incivility towards me is what I should expect from place-hunting reformers. They are welcome, however, to the ground they have advanced upon; and I with that every individual among them may act in the fame upright, uninfluenced, and public spirited manner that I have done. Whatever reforms may be obtained, and by whatever theans, they will be for the benefit of others, and not of me. I have no other interest in the cause than the interest of my heart. The part I have acted has been wholly that of a volunteer, unconnected with party s and when I quit, it shall be as honourably as I hegan.

I confider the reform of Parliament, by an application to Parliament, as proposed by the Suciety, D 4 to be a worn-out hackneyed fubject, about which the nation is tired, and the parties are deceiving each other. It is not a fubject that is cognizable before Parliament, becaufe no Government has a right to alter itfelf, either in whole or in part. The right, and the exercise of that right, appertains to the nation only, and the proper means is by a national convention, elected for the purpofe, by all the people. By this, the will of the nation, whether to reform or not, or what the reform fhall be, or how far it fhall extend, will be known, and it cannot be known by any other means. Partial addreffes, or feparate affociations, are not teftimonies of the general will.

56

It is, however, certain that the opinions of men, with refpect to fyftems and principles of government, are changing faft in all countries. The alteration in England, within the fpace of little more than a year, is far greater than could then have been believed, and it is daily and hourly increasing. It moves along the country with the filence of thought. The enormous expence of Government has provoked men to think, by making them fash, and the Preclamation has ferved to increase jealoufy and difguft. To prevent, therefore, those commotions which too often and too fuddenly arife from fuffocated difcontents, it is beft that the peneral WILL finould have the full and free opportunity of being publicly aftertained and known.

Elsent Red Winds to Day . 195

Lind Could in

Wretched

which

iving

zable

has a part.

pper-

ans is

rpose,

ation.

hall.

, and

artial

tefti-

men,

-RISYC

he al-

more

have

aling.

nice of

oment

n feel

aloufy

mmo-

t from

eneral

runity

retched

Wretched as the flate of reprefentation is in England, it is every day becoming worfe, becaufe the unrepresented parts of the nation are increasing in population and property, and the reprefented parts are decreating. It is, therefore, no illgrounded estimation to fay, that as not one perfon in feven is represented, at least fourteen millions of taxes, out of the feventeen millions, are paid by the unreprefented part; for although copyholds and leafcholds are afferfied to the land-tax, the holders are unrepresented. Should then a general demur take place as to the obligation of paying taxes, on the ground of not being represented, it is not the Representatives of rotten Boroughs, nor Special Juries, that can decide the queftion. This is one of the possible cases that ought to be foreseen, in order to prevent the inconveniencies that might arife to numerous individuals, by provoking it.

I confets I have no idea of petitioning for rights. Whatever the rights of people are, they have a right to them, and none have a right either to withhold them, or to grant them. Government ought to be established on such principles of justice as to exclude the occasion of all such applications, for wherever they appear they are virtually accufations.

I wifh that Mr. Grey, fince he has embarked in the bufinefs, would take the whole of it into confideration. He will then fee that the right of reforming the ftate of the Reprefentation does not refide refide in Parliament; and that the only motion he could confiftently make, would be, that Parliament should recommend the election of a convention by all the people, because all pay taxes. But whether Parliament recommended it or not, the right of the nation would neither be leffened nor increased thereby.

As to Petitions from the unreprefented part, they ought not to be looked for. As well might it he expected that Manchefter, Sheffield, &c., fhould petition the rotten Boroughs, as that they fhould petition the Reprefentatives of those Boroughs. Those two towns alone pay far more taxes than all the rotten Boroughs put together, and it is fearcely to be expected they fhould pay their court either to the Boroughs, or the Boroughmongers.

It ought also to be observed, that what is called Parliament, is composed of two houses that have always declared against the right of each other to interfere in any matter that related to the circumstances of either, particularly that of election. A reform, therefore, in the representation cannot, on the ground they have individually taken, become the subject of an act of Parliament, because such the Commons on their part have protested; but must, as well on the ground of formality, as on that of right, proceed from a National Convention.

William in Mith Les with will be to a programme

Let Mr. Grey, or any other man, fit down and endeavour to put his thoughts together, for the purpose of drawing up an application to Parliament for a reform of Parliament, and he will foon convince himfelf of the folly of the attempt, He will find that he cannot get on; that he cannot make his thoughts join, fo as to produce any effect ; for whatever formality of words he may ufe, they will unavoidably include two ideas directly opposed to each other; the one in fetting forth the reafons, the other in praying for the relief, and the two, when placed together, would fland thus :- " The " Representation in Parliament is fo very corrupt, " that we can no longer confide in it, - and, there-" fore, confiding in the justice and wi/dom of Parlia-" ment, we pray," &c. &c.

The heavy manner in which every former propofed application to Parliament has dragged, fufficiently fnews, that though the nation might not exactly fee the awkwardness of the measure, it could not clearly fee its way by that mean. To this also may be added another remark, which is, that the worfe Parliament is, the lefs will be the inclination to petition it. This indifference, viewed as it ought to be, is one of the ftrongest centures the public can express. It is as if they were to fave "Ye are not worth reforming."

Let any man examine the Court-Kalendar of Placemen in both Houses, and the manner in which the Civil Lift operates, and he will be at 10

tion he liament tion by whether ight of screafed

d part,

1 might

4

Id, &c. at they ofe Boar more ogether, uld pay proughis called that have other to circumtion. A mot, on, become fe fuch a

aft which

ed; but

s on that ntion.

no lois to account for this indifference and want of confidence on one fide, nor of the oppolition to reforms on the other.

Befides the numerous lift of paid perfons exhibited in the Court-Kalendar, which fo indecently ftares the nation in the face, there is an unknown number of masked Pensioners, which renders Parliament still more suspected.

Who would have fuppofed that Mr. Burke, holding forth as he formerly did against fecret in-ence, and corrupt majorities, fhould become a concealed Penfioner? I will now ftate the cafe, not for the little purpose of exposing Mr. Burke, but to shew the inconfistency of any application to a body of men, more than half of whom, as far as the nation can at present know, may be in the fame cafe with himself.

Towards the end of Lord North's administration, Mr. Burke brought a bill into Parliament, generally known by the name of Mr. Burke's Reform Bill; in which, among other things, it is enacted, "That no penfion, exceeding the fam " of three hundred pounds a year, fhall be granted " to any one perfon, and that the whole amount " of the penfions granted in one year fhall not " exceed fix hundred pounds; a lift of which, " together with the names of the performs to whom " the fame are granted, fhall be laid before Par-" liament in twenty days after the beginning of " each feffion, until the whole penfion lift fhall be nd want fition to ns exhidecently unknown ders Parr. Burke, fecret inbecome a the cafe, ir. Burke, ication to

, as far as be in the administraarliament, [r. Burke's

Ir. Burke's hings, it is g the fum be granted ole amount or fhall not of which, its to whom before Pareginning of hift fhall be

" reduced

ON THE LATE PROCLAMATION. 61

" reduced to nincty thousand pounds." A provisory clause is afterwards added, "That it shall be lawful for the First Commissioner of the Treasury, to return into the Exchequer, any pension or annuity, without a name, on his making oath that fuch pension or annuity is not directly or indirectly for the benefit, use, or behoof, of any Member of the House of Commons."

"But foon after that Administration ended, and the party Mr. Burke acted with came into power, it appears, from the circumstances I am going to relate, that Mr. Burke became himfelf a Penfioner in difguife; in a fimiliar manner, as if a penfion had been granted in the name of John Nokes, to be privately paid to and enjoyed by Tom Stiles. The name of Edmund Burke does not appear in the original transaction : but after the pension was obtained, Mr. Burke wanted to make the most of it at once, by felling or mortgaging it ; and the gentleman, in whole name the penfion flands, applied to one of the public offices for that purpofe. This unfortunately brought forth the name of Edmund Burke, is the real Pensioner of 1,5001. per annum. When men trumpet forth what they call the bleffings of the Conflicution, it ought to be known To Barrow what fort of bleffings they allude to.

As to the Civil Lift, of a million a year, it is not to be supposed that any one man can eat, drink, or conforme the whole upon himself. The case is, that above half this sum is annually apportioned among Courtiers,

Courtiers, and Court Members, of both Houfes, in places and offices, altogether infignificant and perfectly ufelefs, as to every purpole of civil, rational, and manly government. For inftance,

Of what use in the science and system of Government is what is called a Lord Chamberlain, a Master and a Mistress of the Robes, a Master of she Horse, a Master of the Hawks, and an hundred other such things. Laws derive no additional force, nor additional excellence, from such mummery. In the disbursements of the Civil List for the year 1786 (which may be seen in Sir John Sinclair's History of the Revenue) are sour separate charges for this mummery office of Chamberlain.

fir.	- £. 38,778 17 -
• 2d	- 3,000
3d	24,069 19 -
4th	10,000 18 3

75,849 14 3

befides f.1,119 charged for Alms.

From this tample, the reft may be gueffed at. As to the Mafter of the Hawks, (there are no hawks kept, and if there were, it is no reafon the people should pay the expence of feeding them, many of whom are put to it to get bread for their children) his falary is 1,3721. 105.

And befiles a lift of items of this kind, sufficient to fill a quire of paper, the Pension lifts alone are 107,4042. 135. 4 d. which is a greater fum than all is, ioufes, in and perrationaly Governn, a Maer of she hundred nal force, mery. Sinclair's te charges

ns. gueffed af, e no hawks the people is many of ir children)

d, fufficient s alone are r fum than all

ON THE LATE PROCLAMATION.

all the expences of the federal Government in America amount to.

Among the items, there are two I had no expectation of finding, and which, in this day of enquiry after Civil Lift influence, ought to be exposed. The one is an annual payment of one thousand feven hundred pounds to the Differting Ministers in England, and eight hundred pounds to thole of Ireland,

This is the fact; and the diffribution as I am informed, is as follows: The whole futn of £.1,700 is paid to one perfon, a Diffenting Minister in London, who divides it among eight others, and those eight among such others as they please. The Laybody of the Diffenters, and many of their principal Ministers, have long confidered it as diffionourable, and have endeavoured to prevent it, but still it continues to be fecretly paid; and as the world has fometimes feen very fulfome Address from parts of that body, it may naturally be supposed that the receivers, like Bissons and other Court-Clergy, are not idle in promoting them. How the money is diffributed in Ireland, I know not.

To recount all the fecret hiltory of the Civil Life is not the intention of this publication. It is fufficient, in this place, to expose its general character, and the mais of influence it keeps alive. It will neceffarily become one of the objects of reform, and therefore enough is faid to fhew that, under its operation, no application to Parliament can be expected to fucceed, nor can confistently be made.

Such

Such reforms will not be promoted by the Party that is in coffeffion of those places, nor by the Oppolition who are waiting for them ; and as to a mere reform in the flate of the Reprefentation, under the idea that another Parliament, differently elected to the prefent; but fill a component third part of the fame fystem, and subject to the controul of the other two parts, will abolish those abuses, is alsogether delusion; because it is not only impracticable on the ground of formality, but is unwifely exposing another fet of men to the fame corruptions that have tainted the prefent.

Were all the objects that require a reform accomplifhable by a mere reform in the flate of the Reprefentation, the perfons who compose the prefent Parliament might, with rather more propriety be asked to abolish all the abuses themselves, than be applied to as the mere inftruments of doing it by a future Parliament. If the virtue be wanting to abolish the abuse, it is also wanting to act as the means, and the nation mult, of necessity, proceed by some other plan.

Having thus endeavoured to fnew what the abject condition of Parliament is, and the impropriety of going a fecond time over the fame ground that has before mifcarried, I come to the remaining part of the fubject.

There ought to be, in the conftitution of every country, a mode of referring back, on any extraordinary occasion; to the fovereign and original conft tuent

Party

e Op-

a mere

ler the

etcd to

e other ogether

able on

poling

at have

orm ac-

of the

the pre-

ropriety

es, than

loing it

wanting

A as the

proceed

the ab-

ropricty

und that

maining

of every

nal con-

ft ment

fituent power, which is the nation itfelf. The right of altering any part of a Government cannot, as already obferved, refide in the Government, or that Government might make itfelf what it pleafed. It ought also to be taken for granted, that though a nation may feel inconveniencies, either in the excels of taxation, or in the mode of expenditure, or in any thing elfe, it may not at first be fufficiently affured in what part of its government the defect lies, or where the evil originates. It may be fuppofed to be in one part, and on enquiry be found to be in another, or parely in all. This obfeurity is naturally interwoven with what are called mixed Government as a state of the sta

Bet however, the reform to be accomplished whatever it may, it can only follow in confequence of first obtaining a full knowledge of all the caufes that have rendered fuch | reform neceffary, and every thing thore of this is guels-work or frieolous cunning. In this cafe, it cannot be supposed that any application to Parliament can bring forward this knowledge. That body is itfelf the fuppofed caufe, or one of the fuppofed caules, of the abufes in queftion; and cannot be expected; and ought not to be afked; to give evidence against itfelf. "The enquiry, therefore, which is of necessity the first step in the bulinefs, cannot be entrufted to Parliament, but must be undertaken by a distinct body of men, feparated from every sufpicion of corruption or in-Auence.

Inftead;

66

HEAR IT

Inftead, then, of referring to rotten Boroughs and abfurd Corporations for Addresses, or hawking them about the country to be figned by a few dependant inants, the real and effectual mode would be to come at once to the point, and to afcertain the fenfe of the nation by electing a National Convention. By this method, as already observed, the general will, whether to reform or not, or what the reform thall be, or how far it thall extend, will be known, and it cannot be known by any other means. Such a body, empowered and supported by the nation, will have authority to demand information upon all matters neceffary to be enquired into; and no Minister, nor any other perfon, will dere to refuse is. It will then be feen whether feventeen millions of taxes are necessary, and for what purposes they are expended. ... The concealed Penfioners will then be obliged to unmaile, and the fource of influence and corruption, if any fuch there be, will be laid open to the nation, not for the purnofe of neverige, but of redrefs. To astrant you gan and By taking this public and national ground, all objections sgainft partial Addreffes on one fide, or minate affociations on the other, will be done away. THE NATION WILL DECREE ITS OWN REFORMS ; and the clamour about Party and Faction, or Ins or Outs, will become ridiculous. a serguises that he The plan and organization of a Convention is eafyoin practice. and 京を許い

In the first place, the number of inhabitants in every county can be fufficiently enough frown, from the number of houses affested to the House and Window-light tax in each county. This will give the rule for apportioning the number of Members to be elected to the National Convention in each of the counties. or measured to react

If the total number of inhabitants in England be feven millions, and the total number of Members to be elected to the Convention be one thousand, she number of Members to be elected in a county containing one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants will be twenty-one, and in like proportion for any other county. fearing to original immore As the election of a Convention mult, in order to afcertain the general fenfe of the nation, go on. grounds different from that of Parliamentary elections, the mode that best promises this end will have no difficulties to combat with from abfurd cutions and pretended rights. The right of every man will be the fame, whether he lives in a city a town, or a village. The cuftom of attaching Rights to place, or in other words to manimize matter, instead of to the perfer, independently of place, is too abfurd to make any part of a rational argument. WAs every man in the nation of the age of twentyone years pays takes, sither out of she property lie polfelles, or out of the product of his labour, which is property to him ; and is amenable in his own perfon to every law of the land ; fo has every one the E 2 fame ughs and hawking few dede would ascertain nal Conrved, the or what tend, will any other fupported emand ine enquired erfon, will hether fcd for what ealed Penand the fuch there or the pur-- William Mars ground, all ne fide, or done away. REFORMS ; tion, or Ins Antine Martine Fall . avention is 「「「「「「「「」」 245 7

In

fame equal right to vote, and no one part of a nation, nor any individual, has a right to diffute the right of another. The man who fhould do this ought to forfeit the exercise of his even right, for a term of years. This would render the punifiment confiftent with the crime. It of brain and of the When a qualification to vote is regulated by years, it is placed on the firmest possible ground, because the qualification is fuch as nothing but dying before the time can take away and the equality of Rights, as a principle, is recognized in the act of regulating the exercife. But when Rights are placed upon, or made dependant upon property, they are on the most precarious of all tenures. Riches make shemfelves wings, and fy away," and the rights fly with them ; and thus they bea come loftreo the man when they would be of molt values the mode that belt promites this chouse It is from a frange mixeure of cyranny and cowandice, that exclusions have been set up and continued. The boldnefs to do wrong at first, ichanges afterwards into cowardly craft, and at left into fear: The Reprelematives in England appear now so aft as if they were afraid to do right; even in part, left it should awaken the nation to a fenfe of all the wrongs it has endured. This cafe ferves to thew that the fame conduct that belt conflictnes the fafery of an andividual, namely, a ftrict adherence to print ciple, conftitutes alfo the fafety of a Government and that without it fafery is but an empty namel é pres.

When the ich plunder the poor of his rights, it. becomes an example to the poor to plunder the rich of his property; for the rights of the one are as much property to him as wealth is property to the other, and the little all is as dear as the much. It is only by fetting out on just principles that men are trained to be just to each other; and it will always be found, that when the rich protect the rights of the poor, the poor will protect the property of the rich. But the gaurantee, to be effectual, must be parliamentarily reciprocal. Exclusions are not only unjuit, but they frequently operate as injurioufly to the party who monopolizes, as to those who are excluded. When men feck to exclude others from participating in the exercise of any right, they should, at least, be affured that thay can effectually perform the whole of the buliness they undertake; for unless they do this, themfelves will be lofers by the monopoly. This has been the cafe with respect to the monopolized right of Election. The monopolizing party has not been able to keep the Parliamentary Reprefentation, to whom the power of taxation was entrusted, in the state it ought to have been, and have thereby multiplied taxes upon themselves equally with those who were excluded. A great deal has been, and will continue to be faid, about difqualifications, arifing from the commiffion of offences ; but were this fubject urged to its full extent, it would difqualify a great number of the present Electors, together with their Representatives :

E 3

a nate the arthis for a hment Istante I ted by ground, but dy + io equad in the Rights on protenures. y away," they bea c of molt idans, the nd cowanand coritis t, lichanges ting feat: agw to act n part, left of all che to thew es the fafery nac to print Government mpry namel When tatives i for, of all offences, none are more deftruetive to the morals of Society than Bribery and Corruption. It is, therefore, civility so fuch perfons to pais this fubject over, and to give them a fair opportunity of recovering, or rather of creating character.

Every thing, in the prefent mode of electioncering in England, is the reverse of what it ought to be, and the vulgarity that attends elections is no other than the natural confequence of inverting the order of the fystem.

In the first place, the Candidate feeks the Elector, instead of the Elector feeking for a Reprefentative; and the Electors are advertized as being in the interest of the Candidate, inftead of the Candidate being in the interest of the Electors. The Candidate pays the Elector for his vote, inftead of the Nation paying the Representative for his time and attendance on public bufinefs. The complaint for an undue election is brought by the Candidate, as if he, and not the Electors, were the party sggrieved ; and he takes on himfelf, at any period of the election, to break it up, by declining, as if the election was in his right, and not in theirs. The compact that was entered into at the laft Weftminster election between two of the Candidates (Mr. Fox and Lord Hood) was an indecent violation of the principles of election. The Candidates affumed, in their own perfons, the rights of the Electors ; for it was only in the body of the Electons tors, and not at all in the Candidates, that the right of making any fuch compact or compromife could exift: But the principle of Election and Reprefentation is for compleatly done away, in every fage thereof, that inconfistency has no longer the power of furpriling.

Neither from elections thus conducted, nor from rotten Borough Addreffers, nor from Countymeetings, promoted by Placemen and Penfioners, can the fenfe of the nation be known. It is ftill corruption appealing to itfelf. But a Convention of a thousand perfons, fairly elected, would bring every matter to a decided iffue.

As to County-meetings, it is only perfons of leifure, or those who live near to the place of meeting, that can attend, and the number on fuch occasions is but like a drop in the bucket compared with the whole. The only confistent fervice which fuch meetings could render, would be that of apportioning the county into convenient diffricts, and when this is done, each diffrict might, according to its number of inhabitants, elect its quota of County Members to the National Convention; and the vote of each Elector might be taken in the parifh where he refided, either by ballot or by voice, as he should chufe to give it.

A National Convention thus formed would bring regether the fenfe and opinions of every part of the nation, fairly taken. The feience of Government, and the intereft of the Public, and of the feveral E 4 parts

t deftruci and Corch perfons hem a fair f creating t a "otphe ate lectioncerit ought to tions is no verting the have the of stat s the Elec-Reprefentaas being in f the Candictors. The e, inftead of for his time he complaint e Candidate, he party sg-

any period of

ing, as if the

cirs. Sappier : A

o at the laft

he Candidates

decent viola-

he Candidates

rights of the y of the Elec-

parts thereof, would then undergo an ample and rational difcuffion, freed from the language of parliamentary difguife. But in all deliberations of this kind, though men have a right to reafon with, and endeavour to convince each other, upon any matter that refpects their common good, yet, in point of practice, the majority of opinions, when known, forms a rule for the whole, and to this rule every good citizen practically conforms.

k

Mr. Burke, as if he knew, (for every concealed Penfioner has the opportunity of knowing) that the abufes acted under the prefent fyftem, are two flagrant to be palliated, and that the majority of opinions, whenever fuch abufes fhould be made public, would be for a general and effectual reform, has endeavoured to preclude the event, by flurdily denying the right of a majority of a nation to act as a whole. Let us befrow a thought upon this cafe.

When any matter is proposed as a subject for confultation, it necessarily implies fome mode of decision. Common confent, arising from absolute necessity, has placed this in a majority of opinions; because without it there can be no decision, and confequently no order. It is, perhaps, the only case in which mankind, however various in their ideas upon other matters, can confistently be unanimous; because it is a mode of decision derived from the primary primary original right of every individual concerned; that right being first individually excercised in giving an opinion, and whether that opinion shall arrange with the minority or the majority, is a subfequent accidental thing that neither increases nor diminiss the individual original right itself. Prior to any debate, enquiry or vessignion, it is not supposed to be known on which side the majority of opinions, will fall, and therefore whils this mode of decision fecures to every one the right of giving an opinion, it admits to every one an equal chance in the ultimate event.

おお神

Among the matters that will prefent themfelves to the confideration of a National Convention; there is one, wholly of a domeftic nature, but, fo marveloufly loaded with confusion, as to appear, at first fight, almost impossible to be reformed. I mean the condition of what is called Law. But, if we examine into the caufe from whence this confusion, now fo much the fubject of univerfal complaint, is produced, not only the remedy will immediately prefent itielf, but with it, the means of preventing the like cafe hereafter. In the first place, the confusion has generated itfelf from the abfurdity of every Parliament affuming to be eternal in power, and the laws partake in a fimiliar manner of this affumption. They have no period of legal or natural expiration; and, however abfurd in principle, or inconfistent in practice many of them have become, they still are, if not especially 11219

RS, ample and ge of parand Stat ough men our to conat refpects actice, the is a rule for itizen pracint with str. 5 concealed ig) that the are two flaprity of opimade pubual reform, , by fturdily ation to act it upon this at the sales and fubject for ne mode of rom abfolute of opinions; lecifion, and the only cafe

in their ideas

unanimous'

ed from the

talli primert

kŗ

cially repealed, confidered as making a part of the general mais. By this means the body of what is called Law, is foread over a space of feveral bundred years, comprehending laws obfolete, laws repugnant, laws ridiculous, and every other kind of laws forgotten or remembered; and what renders, the cafe ftill worfe is, that the confusion multiplies with the progress of time.

To bring this misshapen monster into form, and to prevent its lapsing again into a wilderness flate, only two things, and those very simple, are nea ceffary.

The first is, to review the whole mass of laws, and to bring forward such only as are worth retaining, and let all the reft drop; and to give to the laws so brought forward a new era commencing from the time of such reform.

Secondly, that at the expiration of every twentyone years; (or any other flated period) a like review fhall again be taken, and the laws found proper to be retained, be again carried forward, commencing with that date, and the ufclefs laws dropt and difcontinued. By this means there can be no obfolese laws, and fearcely fuch a thing as laws flanding in direct or equivocal contradiction to each other, and

* In the time of Henry the Fourth, a law was paffed, making it felony " to multiply gold or filver, or to make use of the " craft or multiplication," and this law remained two hundred and eighty-fix years upon the flature books. It was then repealed as being ridicrious and injurious.

every

every perfor will know the period of time to which he is to look back for all the laws in being. It is worth remarking, that whilft every other branch of feience is brought within fome commodious fuffern, and the fludy of it fimplified by eafy methods, the laws take the contrary courfe, and bac come every year more complicated, entangled, confufed, and obfcure. Among the paragraphs which the Attorney General has taken from the Rights of Man, and put into his information, one is, that were I have faid, " that " with refpect to regular law, there is fearcely fueld."

As I do not know whether the Attorney-General means to fhew this expression to be libellous, because it is TRUE, or because it is FALSE, I shall make no other reply to him in this place than by remarking, that if almanack-makers had not been more judicious than law-makers, the study of almanacks would by this time have become as abstruct as the study of law, and we should hear of a library of almanacks as we now do of statutes; but by the simple operation of letting the obsolete matter drops and carrying forward that only which is proper to be retained, all that is necessary to be known, is found within the space of a year, and laws also admit of being kept within fome given period.

I shall here close this letter, to far as it respects the Addresser, the Proclamation, and the Profecution; and shall offer a few observations to the Society

1 2 1

eral bunlaws, rekind of t renders, multiplies I in trailer a form, and nefs fate, are nein it is in flaws, and retaining, the laws fo g from the earstand where ery twenty. like review d proper 19 ommencing and difoonno obfolete standing in

ert of the

f what is

as paffed, makmake ufe of the ed two hundred It was then re-

h other, and

every

Society filling itfelf "THE FRIENDS OF THE

That the science of government is beginning to be better understood than in former times, and that the age of fiction and political superstition, and of eraft and mystery is passing away, are matters which the experience of every day proves to be true, as well in England as in other countries.

As therefore it is impossible to calculate the filent progress of opinion, and also impossible to govern a nation after it has changed its habits of thinking, by the craft or policy that it was governed by before, the only true method to prevent popular difcontents and commotions is, to throw, by every fair and rational argument, all the light upon the subject that can possibly be thrown; and, at the fame time, to open the means of collecting the general sense of the nation; and this cannot, as already observed, be done by any plan so effectually as a National Convention. Here individual opinion will quict itself by having a centre to reft upon.

The fociety already mentioned, (which is made up of men of various deferiptions, but chiefly of those called Poxites,) appears to me, either to have taken wrong grounds from want of judgment, or to have acted with cunning referve. It is now amufing the people with a new phrafe, namely, that of " a tempe-"" rate and moderate reform," the interpretation of which is, a continuance of the abu/es as long as poffible, If we cannot hold all let us hold fome.

Are the public afraid that their taxes should be leffened too much ? Are they afraid that finecure places and penfions fhould be abolifhed too falt? Are the poor afraid that their condition should be rendered too comfortable? Is the worn-out mechanic, or the aged and decayed tradefman, frightened at the prospect of receiving ten pounds a year out of the furplus taxes ? Is the foldier frightened at the thoughts of his difcharge, and three shillings per week during life? Is the failor afraid that prefs-warrants will be abolifhed? The Society miftakes the fears of borough-mongers, placemen, and penfioners, for the fears of the people; and the temperate and moderate Reform it talks of, is calculated to fuit the condition of the former.

Those words, " temperate and moderate," are words either of political cowardice, or of cunning, or feduction.—A thing, moderately good, is not fo good as it ought to be. Moderation in temper is always a virtue; but moderation in principle is a species of vice. But who is to be the judge of what is a temperate and moderate Reform? The Society is the representative of nobody; neither can the unrepresented part of the nation commit this power to those in Parliament, in whose election they had no choice; and, therefore, even upon the ground the Society has taken, recours must be had to a National Convention.

The

RS,O

OF THE · ... 155 ginning to s, and that ion, and of tters which rue, as well 1) m Small te the filent to govern a of thinking, rned by bepopular difby every fair on the subject e fame time. neral fenfe of observed, be National Conill quiet itself ich is made up

L'a

N

hiefly of those to have taken ent, or to have sw amufing the at of " a tempenterpretation of is long as possible; Who

The objection which Mr. For made to Mr. Grey's proposed Motion for a Parliamentary Reform was, that it contained no plan.—It certainly did nor. But the plan very eafily prefents itfelf, and whilft it is fair for all parties, it prevents the dangers that might otherwife arife from private or popular difsontent. THOMAS PAINE.

and an an and a second of the second of the

The work "transfere call dod the state word times of political convertes to obtain the state of the state of the state of the state is read as it aught to be, it is a state is the state of the state of the state of the state is the second state and moderate for state The state is second state and moderate for state The state is the second state of the instance of the state is the second state of the instance of the state is the second state of the instance of the state is the second state of the instance of the state is the second state of the instance of the state is the second state of the instance of the pole to the second state of the instance of the pole to the second state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state of the state of the instance of the state of the state

