Extension Work in the county and suggested that a committee be appointed to look after the organization of schools in localities now without any. Section IV whole expressing our loyalty to the cause of the Allies in the terrible World War, and pledging our support to bring this war to a victorious conclusion in the interests of Truth, Liberty and Righteousness, condemned the practice of sending cigarettes to our soldier boys, in view of the fact that

FRENCH FARMERS SAVED THE DAY

The saving farmer is a national asset. Canadian progress to-day in all lines attests magnificently to the splendid qualities of thrift that have marked the farmer in all the provinces. The total returns from field crops and animal produce have been only possible because of the disposition to make use in an economical way of all the wonderful gifts of Providence in this good land of ours.

The same was abundantly true after 1870 in France when the frugal, thrifty farmers of that fair land made it possible for the Republic to pay off that hated German war indemnity of two billion francs levied against them. The same spirit of national thrift built up France for the extreme test to-day—a test that is being tried by fire.

Thanks be, French heroism is proving true. The line is holding. The blood of the farmers is flowing equally as well through the veins of France's daughters of the soil and so the national strength bends but does not break. Canada is reaping her harvests of increased returns and money is being made as never before. Our farmers are earning the gratitude of all in their splendid efforts at production. That they will carry into their saving an equal foresight in conserving their surpluses against the future days of darkness and lower prices will be equally praiseworthy. He is well advised who saves his extra dollar until he sees which way the winds of tomorrow will blow. Adversity blows a chill blast where there is no dollar in the savings.

medical research has proved them to have an injurious effect upon the health and morality of boys, and urged that more active steps be taken to pledge our boys in the Sunday School against the use of them.

Rev. J. E. Wilson gave an address on S. S. Evangelism. The number of delegates present at the convention was about 75. Of these 72 enrolled and of these 7 were pastors, 4 county officers, 11 district officers, 16 teachers, 6 Superintendents and 6 Elementary workers.

By denominations of schools represented they were divided as follows: United Baptists 24, Methodists 12, Presbyterians 12, Reformed Baptists 5, Union 5, C. A. McBride, Rec. Sec. pro tem.

U. F. of N. B.

A Department conducted entirely by the members of the United Farmers of New Brunswick, who are free to express their views on any subject, and to report the various activities of branches and generally to put news and views before the public. All communications should be brief and to the point, and sent to the editor of the department: C. Gordon Sharpe, Pembroke, N. B.

What We Stand For

The United Farmers stand for all things that make for good citizenship and not merely an extra dollar. Although we believe that every farmer should stand up and fight like a man to stop some of the leaks in the system between the producer and the consumer, or better still demand that we exchange the slave for some system with less holes in it. We are most thoroughly convinced that the other fellows by being organized have in all too many cases put a raw deal over on the farmer. We have been fleeced most unscrupulously.

We have a big fight here, as the other fellows being first in the field have had placed on the statute books of this country laws which we must have. We have not a clear field but one strewn with obstructions placed by clever hands.

The more we study the situation the more inclined we are to become sour and sullen. But so we will fight our fight in the open. We will not only stand up against every policy that we consider will unjustly oppress any class or people, or in any way mar this fair country of ours, but we will stand shoulder to shoulder with any one, or any class who stand for right and righteousness and permanent progress. We will not only be swift to condemn small muddy partisan measures wherever we find them. But we will be as equally ready to commend any measure which tends to cleanse and aboveboard.

Don't forget that this department belongs to the United Farmers of New Brunswick. We have the privilege of expressing our views here, we have a free hand in conducting this department, and when any restrictions are placed on us, the United Farmers will hear of it. Don't be slow in sending in items or any views you might wish to express, and in return for the generous treatment handed us by this paper, ask your neighbour to subscribe for the Carleton Observer, and if they don't continue to give us a square deal we will drop them in a hurry.

At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association they were anxious to make it known that the middleman was necessary. Suppose a farmer should stand up and say that the "farmer was necessary." What would you do with him?

Following is the list of the branches which have filled out their information cards and returned them to the central office, with the names of President, Secretary and date of meeting. SUFFERING CATS! GIVE THIS MAN THE GOLD MEDAL.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter: wear shoes a size smaller if you like for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cinestant authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called frezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound, but tries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of frezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

GIRLS! LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER

How to make a creamy beauty lotion for a few cents.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin whitener. At about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and in the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this creamy fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands.

Back Home With Abe

By C. B. LEWIS

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In the country, when a young man and a young woman are courting, it is referred to as "settling up together."

Abe Wright and Polly Andrews had "set up" a hundred nights in her father's farmhouse kitchen before they became engaged. The son of a farmer, he was not at all a rustic in love and matrimony as a young man settling in a town. There may not be as much formality between them, but they took upon matrimony more seriously.

There are a score of object lessons daily before their eyes. A farmer, to succeed, must be ever rising early and toiling late. His horses or his oxen get more rest than he does. He can know very little of the comforts and pleasures of life and see to his acres as well.

And if he works long hours his wife will be a partner. Her work must be done on time as well as his. She may live within five miles of a village and yet not enter it once a year. He may be a subscriber to a county paper, and yet she cannot spare the time to read its contents.

The two young folks sat and experienced all this and much more, and yet the instincts and sentiments of humanity brought them together. They would marry, as thousands of others in their situation had done, and hope that their future might work out better.

Miss Polly said "yes" to the proposal of marriage, but the very next day she admitted to her mother that sometimes she thought she was a fool and sometimes she thought she didn't. She had never been ten miles away from home. The only man she had ever come in contact with had been of her class or equals or peddlers. She knew there was a big world outside of hers, but she had never peeped at it. She had a bit of romance about her, and sometimes she longed to see the better men and fair women that she books told her about.

Abe Wright was going to marry and acquire a farm of his own. Therefore, he visited as he went about his work. He had heard that a girl sometimes went back on her pledges, but he was as sure of Polly Andrews as he was of the sun.

One day the girl ran over to Farmer Waldron's on an errand. She found a strange young man there, who was introduced to her as Brian Montgomery. Even if he hadn't been good-looking and had taken away with him, his name would have won her favor.

How did the name of Abe Wright compare with that of Brian Montgomery? The one belonged to the drudger of the soil, the other to a gentleman of the world, who had got filling in his teeth—was more crass in his trousers—who handled paper collars, and socks at ten cents a pair were not for him. Mr. Brian Montgomery, from New York, Chicago and Boston, as he announced, must surely be one of those brave and gallant men she had read and dreamed of.

When Miss Polly had departed for home, Mrs. Waldron said to the cousin: "Now, Brian, you must not set out to turn that girl's head. She is engaged to a steady young farmer, and you mustn't be the cause of a quarrel between them."

"Oh, it will be a mild—a very mild flirtation," he laughed in reply. "How can I put in a month here and not flirt with the only girl for a mile around?" And a day or two later the young man came over to the house of Farmer Andrews and introduced himself and made himself very much at home.

"Do you like him, mother?" some what anxiously queried Polly, after their caller had departed.

"Isn't he what they call fresh?" was asked in reply.

"Why, how can you say that? It is simply that he has self-confidence."

"One would think that he had known us for a year."

"But he was trying to put us at our ease."

"Well, I dunno how Abe will take it."

"But I don't see where he can find any fault? He might talk with a dozen girls and I shouldn't raise a row with him about it."

Abe heard that there was a young man visiting the Waldrons, but he hadn't seen him. Neither had he learned that the said young man was making himself very much at home at the Andrews farmhouse. The mother had said to Polly:

"I don't believe that Abe knows that Mr. Montgomery is hanging around here, and you'd better mention it."

"Why do you call it hanging around?" was demanded.

"Because it looks like it to me. Mrs. Waldron must have told him you were engaged to Abe."

"Mr. Montgomery comes here to help pass the time away. He is an interesting talker, and has traveled all over the world, and I am glad to listen to him. Yes, I suppose he knows that I am engaged, and that will prevent him from talking any nonsense to me."

"But if you don't tell Abe he'll think there is something wrong about it."

"Oh, I've got to be afraid of Abe Wright I'll break the engagement."

Two days later Abe was working in a field along the highway, when a sewing machine agent that he had known for a year or two halted his outfit and came to the fence and said:

"Abe, it's not my play to meddle with what does not concern me, but if you would take a hint from me and not get mad I would give it to you."

"Oh, I won't get mad," was the reply.

"You know how news flies around here in the country?"

"Gosh, yes!"

"Well, I've heard that you and Polly Andrews were engaged."

"Yes, we are."

"And I've heard that a young fellow—a cousin to Waldron—is there a-wise fella?"

"Yes."

"Is he a visiting the Waldrons or the Andrews? It seems that he divides his time between the two houses. Better look out, Abe. The fellow don't look good to me. And with that he drove on and Abe looked after him in a dazed way and whispered:

"He means that the fellow is trying to win Polly away from me. I thought she had been acting rather queer of late. I must look into this thing a bit."

When he made his appearance that evening, Polly had a feeling that he had heard things, and intended to "lay the law down to her." This feeling had quickly been another—of defiance—and she was ready for the quarrel.

To her surprise, no quarrel came. Abe was a bit more serious than usual, but he was clear of humor, as he asked:

"Is that young man Montgomery a nice fellow?"

"Very nice," was the reply.

"He has been around the world a good bit, I suppose?"

"He has been everywhere, and it's very interesting to hear him talk of what he has seen."

"Yes, it must be."

"He has been in London and Paris, Abe. He was a captain in a Canadian regiment in the first of the war. He has killed over a dozen Germans. He has helped Lynch a murderer. He was once captured by brigands. He is going to be elected to congress next year."

"Y—y—y," drawled Abe.

"And he can sing and dance and play the piano," continued the foolish girl.

"Yes, and he can play golf and shoot and ride a horseback. And he owns an auto that cost five thousand dollars. And after he is elected to congress we are to live in Washington."

In her excitement and enthusiasm she had said "We." Her chagrin over it was intense for a moment, and then relief came as she saw that Abe hadn't noticed it. Hadn't he, though? But there were no criticisms—no quarreling—the same kindly "Good-night," as Abe left for home.

"There will be an elopement," he said to himself as he walked along.

Half an hour later, as he lay in bed staring at the darkness, he added: "This is there will be an attempted elopement."

Perhaps it was Polly's mother that gave him the date, the hour and the starting point. You must agree that it would be her duty if she knew that there was no school at the district schoolhouse a mile away. It was an excellent meeting place. Abe had been there an hour when Mr. Brian Montgomery drove up with a horse and buggy from the nearest village. He was there half an hour later when Polly Andrews and her bundle appeared.

"Thank heaven!" whispered Mr. Montgomery, as he jumped down and embraced his bride.

"Y—y—y," drawled Abe, as he suddenly appeared and got a secure hold on the man's coat collar.

"What is the meaning of this?"

"It means this—and some more!" answered Abe, as he batted the fellow between the eyes and shook him about until his teeth rattled. "Mr. Montgomery, have you been in Yurp?"

"No."

"Then here's another one for you to try to Polly! Have you been to war?"

"No, but don't hit me!"

"Right on the nose for lying to Polly! Have you killed Germans?"

"Let me go!"

"Another lie to Polly, and this one on the jaw to pay for Eli Goin' to congress next year!"

"No! Not No!"

"Better go, and take this along with you. Now then, have you been captured by brigands?"

"No."

Abe turned the coward around and kicked him three times, and then said to the sobbing girl:

"Take a seat in the buggy, Polly, dear, and I'll drive you back home!"

And all she could reply was: "Abe—oh, Abe!"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Catarrh.
Warm houses and foul air are often the causes of catarrh, and there is only one protection against them, and that is the gods of the fields and the woods. Spend as much of your time as possible out of doors, and that ought always to be two-thirds of it in childhood, and resolutely banish the outdoors indoors at every hour of your working and sleeping day.

GIBRALTAR OF THE PACIFIC.

Under Sam's Steel-Clad Sentinel, the island of Oahu.

Oahu today is the greatest armed military camp under the American flag. It is the steel-clad sentinel of the Pacific, a lone vidette on an everlasting picket, day and night, year in and year out, guarding the approach to the Pacific coast. It is a sentinel that carries a long host for, with its lightning flashes of battleships and cruisers, another Jovellite from Pearl Harbor, designed to be the greatest naval base of the United States for 1915, and with the fringe of steel which is to be placed in redoubts all around the city, it is a sentinel that carries the approach of a hostile fleet from the far east.

It is a steel-clad sentinel, for the island of Oahu, known militarily as the Hawaiian department of the United States army, maintains six military posts, of which four are coast defense fortresses and the other two are garrisons in which every branch of the service is represented.

Oahu is a vast armed camp, and the ground trembles with the tread of infantry, the rumble of artillery and the thud of cavalry hoofs. From 1898, when the first garrison of United States troops was stationed on the island, and with 100 men on duty, the military establishment has grown to 7,000, with 4,000 men yet to be assigned to duty this year. No mainland coast line has so many coast artillery companies massed along the shores as Oahu. No area of the size of Oahu contains so many army posts or so many armed men.—Lehigh.

LIPTON'S NEW SHAMROCK.

The Yacht With Which He Will Again Try to "Lift That Cup."

Shamrock IV, whose keel was recently cast, will be the first yacht ever built in England under the American rule of measurement. With this sea bird Sir Thomas Lipton will make a final effort to win the America's cup. Charles Nicholson, the designer of the Shamrock IV, said today most successfully under the European rules. His yacht, in the fifteen meter class, the Jarrin, the Pamela and the Paula III, are exemplifications of this, but these craft are sometimes called freaks. Nevertheless they win races. Consequently one has to look for a so-called freak in the Shamrock IV.

All the previous Shamrock cup challenges were misadventures. The new yacht will be a seventy-five footer, and when she makes her appearance under canvas next spring she will undoubtedly be regarded with a feeling of wonderment by many seasoned yachtsmen. The Britannia, one of the most successful of English ninety footers, carried a little over 10,000 feet of canvas. Since the Britannia's palmy days something has been known of how to crowd on a craft hence there is much curiosity as to the amount the Shamrock IV will hold. Apart from the design, interest centers in the fact that the Shamrock IV will be sailed by an amateur, N. P. Burton, who has for many years been recognized as one of the cleverest helmsmen in England.—Argonaut.

Speech Following Fashions.
While we are seeking the purity in the writing and speech of the English language, we seem to be going backward with the fashions, said Thomas Nelson Page, "hor. traveler and diplomat," but a inconsistent. Why most the women who wear diaphanous gowns and parade in the strong sunlight insist on a D and dash for a common word that is not a blasphemy and an H and dash to describe a place abundantly described in the Bible, and why must they avoid the expression "baked truth" and call it the "undraped actuality?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Alaska's Tin.
Tin of good quality is regarded as a nuisance in some parts of Alaska, where it is thrown aside by the gold miners. In the richest spots as much as half a pound of tin to the pan is reported, which at the present price of the ore would give the grvels a value, not allowing for costs of mining or transportation, of $18 to $20 a yard, according to assay.

Low Cost of Living.
Prairie chickens have gone up to $2 and quail to 75 cents a dozen, but you can get plenty of buffalo meat at 8 to 5 cents, antelope at 6 to 7 cents and venison at 6 to 8 cents a pound, as well as wild ducks at $1 to $1.50 a dozen and wild geese at 50 to 60 cents a dozen.—"Forty Years Ago Today" in Kansas City Times.

A Bath Without Water.
To have a bath without water is one of the latest novelties. A thick robe is entwined with wires, and when put on a current of electricity is passed through the wires. The wearer of the robe soon finds his body getting warmer until in a little while he perspires as freely as if he were in a Turkish bath.

THE THRIFT OF GENIUS.

A Famous Violinist Who Was Keen on a Trade.

There is a certain famous violinist who frequently visits this country and who among his acquaintances is almost as noted for his parsimony as for his genius. Among this musician's admirers was a young woman who was determined, if possible, to procure some souvenir of the great man. Her opportunity came one rainy day when she chanced to encounter the musician on Broadway. He was provided with an old cotton umbrella, green with age, while the young woman carried a nice new silk one.

She stopped him for a moment, exclaiming:

"Oh, if you would only give me some slight remembrance of yourself—no matter how small!"

The great man surveyed her keenly and then gave a glance at the old cotton umbrella that covered him. This he thrust in her hands, saying:

"Certainly, my dear young lady. I shall be delighted. We will exchange umbrellas."—Lippincott's.

Making Ready For the Encounter.
She spent the entire morning in a beauty parlor. She paid a young woman $1 extra to do up her hair in the most becoming way. She had her lashes and her eyebrows penciled; she had her nails manicured; she reddened her lips and administered a dash of color to her cheeks.

It took her nearly three hours to get dressed. She put on the best clothes she possessed and borrowed a beautiful ring from her sister. When she was ready at last she stood for a long time before her mirror and subjected herself to a critical examination.

One might have supposed that she was about to be presented at court or at least to stand in the receiving line at a White House reception, but it was nothing like that.

She was merely going to meet a woman who had once been engaged to her husband.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Pointed Glow.
The audience was rather tardy in gathering, and the lecturer, who the chairman of the meeting was conversing comfortably on the platform about something and another.

"Well," remarked the speaker, "I am to have an intellectual audience. That was a schoolmaster who just took his place in the third row on the aisle."

"How do you know that?" inquired the chairman.

"Didn't you see him try his hand on the seat of the chair before he sat down?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Water Everywhere.
The man of whom the temperance advocates despaired was visibly exasperated.

"Even right alongside the bar!" he said. "A gentleman cannot escape annoyance. Yesterday there was a fellow stood at my left elbow and drank a lemonade, and today it was a sailor and the place next to me.—New York Post.

Only Two Classes.
"And so she is married! What class husband did she get?"

"What do you mean?"

Kilbuck Red Cross Society

The Red Cross Society met on Friday at Mrs. Orin Hallett's, Coronation. Plans for raising money to carry on the war work were discussed, and in view of the regulations regarding sugar and other foodstuffs, a supper or ice-cream sale was not considered advisable, so it was decided that every farmer in the locality be requested to donate one barrel of potatoes, or the cash value of one barrel. The potatoes or money can be left with Mrs. Frank Bishop at any time.

We are confident that the farmers will readily respond to this appeal from the Red Cross Society for help in the work of supplying necessary comforts for our brave boys overseas.

The Society plans to send soldiers' Christmas stockings as usual. Anyone who wishes to assist in this work can get a stocking for packing at Bishop's store. These stockings are to be filled, and handed in at the next meeting, which will be held at Mrs. Silas Grant's on Sept. 20.

A man from the west wanted to buy a Carleton county farm. He placed a small ad in The Observer and after it had appeared three times the total number of responses was 22. If you have an item of news that would interest readers of The Observer, bring, send or phone it to the office—before Thursday if possible. Don't use the phone if you can call as items sent by the telephone are very subject to error. Remember we charge 25 cents for notices of meetings other than church services, notices of receptions, cards of thanks, or for announcing any event the purpose of which is to raise money. And for publishing lists of contributions to any cause whatsoever, and any kind of financial report, the regular advertising rates must be paid. But personal items, all the small affairs of village or country, are welcomed. Reports of meetings or any kind of public gatherings in any part of Carleton-Victoria make good reading. Send them along early in the week as possible.

Earning Her $37.83

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Stanley Ashton agreed to give thirty thousand dollars for the work of the ambulance corps by the student body of the college from which he came some years before he had taken his degree, on the condition that the student body would raise a like amount, he little knew what a mystery of unusual activities he was starting within the dormitories of that college.

"I know it's going to be hard for the students," he told the dean of the college when he made the proposal, "but the ambulance corps needs sixty thousand dollars if their work is to be worth while. It's not a million dollars and I guess it is as hard for me to get that thirty thousand dollars together as it will be for each of the students to do his or her share toward raising the difference."

The dean was sitting on the back of an envelope as Stanley Ashton was talking to him.

"Yes," he said, having finished his little sum in division. "There are 738 students enrolled this year—about 400 girls and the rest men. That will mean about $37.83 a student, as I reckon it. In my announcement I shall suggest that each student try to raise that sum. It will give each of their endeavors if each student knows just what is expected of him."

So the announcement was made, and for the weeks that followed each student of the college went around more bent on extracting the sum of $37.83 from his financial endowments—and most of the students of this co-educational institution were not possessed of an overabundant allowance—than on securing passing grades in their classroom work.

Stanley Ashton achieved quite an honor for himself among his friends by announcing that he would give up his Christmas holiday vacation. She had received a check for $20 from home to cover the expenses of her trip and, with her parents' sanction, she renounced this pleasure so that she might thereby save the larger part of her quota. There was $17.83 to be earned. By going without funds supplies herself till she had but $12.75 to be earned. Then she earned 75 cents by selling one pair of old rubbers, two old textbooks, the gold tips from two outworn fountain pens and a last winter's hat. Thirty cents she saved by walking downtown and back on three occasions. There then remained $15.70 to be earned, and there her fund remained.

Her allowance was exhausted and there was nothing to save, and every means of earning money seemed to be in use already by some of the 738.

On a certain gray day, when she had indulged herself to the extent of using 5 cents' cartage to go to collect the pittance that the old clothes dealer was to allow her for her old hat and rubbers, she sat crowded in the surface car—so crowded, in fact, that she could not help but hear the conversation of two well-overcome men beside her.

"But what are you going to do about it?" the younger of the two asked.

"I've done all I could to comply with the request of the department of agriculture. I had all my field cultivated on our summer place, and then I couldn't get men to harvest them. I have had to pay $5 a day for a man to repair the hoed frames, and now I've had the beds planted to green vegetables in an effort to do my bit towards keeping the local market supplied with green goods. I can't get anyone to transplant the seedlings. Did get a man for 30 cents an hour, but unless some one watched him every minute he soldered."

Margaret liked the man sitting with her, and she was more satisfied to have him to contract the work. Then it didn't matter if the men did soldier.

"But if there aren't any men to do the work, what am I to do?"

Margaret had only a vague idea of what a hoed frame like, but some how she had a sudden vision. She sat quietly beside the young man in the warm overcoat and allowed herself to be carried beyond the street where she would have got off to return to the dormitory. For several miles more she rode, until in a dreary country lane on the outskirts of the city the man signalled for the car to stop. He alighted, and Margaret alighted, too. He turned to walk up the lane, and Margaret, with face averted, followed him at a distance. He went into the front door of a rambling, spacious and well-kept country house, and after standing in the dampness in the lane for ten minutes, Margaret rang the doorbell.

It wasn't very easy but it had to be done. She asked to be permitted to do the transplanting, and named as her minimum price—$15.70. The man, who had seated her in front of a cheery wood fire and stood beside her, smiling as she made her proposition, held out against the price. He said it wasn't worth it, and that he could ill afford to pay fancy prices. But Margaret was obstinate, and finally the bargain was struck. Margaret stipulated that she should be allowed to do the work when she chose. She realized that most of it would have to be done after lecture hours, and perhaps by the light of a lantern.

By the aid of one of the men students in horticulture, Margaret gained a smattering knowledge of how the hoed seedlings should be transplanted. She secured a lantern for her night work and, wearing under her new coat a pair of working overalls, which she borrowed from the same student, she started out for her task. It was not easy, but she persevered, even when her hands were bruised and scratched.

The second afternoon of her work Margaret determined to continue there until noon, and accordingly took with her a package of sandwiches put up by the dormitory cook, at the direction of the kind-hearted house mother. Margaret was sitting in her overalls, eating the sandwiches by the light of her lantern in the workshed for which her employer had given her the key, when the employer himself appeared at the door. At first his expression was one of surprise, but it was so good-natured that finally Margaret laughed herself and offered him a piece of her last sandwich. He watched her work and did not utter a word, but when she came out, he was obviously angry with her, he excused her for being late, and he worked with her, always under her direction, and assuming no knowledge of the work himself.

"You are a robber," he told her, as he worked by her side. "It was a hold-up game for you to get so much; but it was you or no one, so I had to give in. By the way," he said, asking a question that had been bothering him since the first time he saw her, "is it unusual to find a young woman so in need of funds? Pardon my rudeness," he hastened to add. "If you didn't seem to enjoy the work so much I should be sorry that I had let you do it. There must be other more congenial, more remunerative sorts of work."

Margaret did not answer his question nor satisfy his curiosity, and although they became well acquainted, in a measure, during the fortnight that followed, never again did the man inquire more into Margaret's identity. They did not even discover each other's names, for acquaintances in the usual acceptance of the word has very little to do with the acquaintance of a deeper attachment. On the last night of Margaret's work, when she had transplanted the last seedling head of lettuce and the last lot of endive, it seemed the most natural thing in the world for the man to tell her that he loved her, and for Margaret, standing there in her clumsy, baggy overalls, her hands loaded with the warm, brown earth, to look quite frankly into his eyes and to tell him that she loved him, too.

"And now," he said, "tell me why you are here. Why did you stop me, and wherefore? Why did you stop me, and wherefore? Why did you stop me, and wherefore? Why did you stop me, and wherefore?"

"Why did you hold out?" she rejoined. "You were dreadfully stingy."

"A man has to be, when he is plodding $30,000 and he isn't a millionaire."

"Stanley Ashton!" she guessed.

"Why, I somehow imagined you were baldheaded and sixty, with a beard and a diamond stud, and cranky boots. That's the sort of man I thought you were. Then we have been really working for the same thing. How little my $37.83 looks compared to your $30,000, especially when I've held you up for $15.70."

"You aren't the plucky little girl who gave up her Christmas holidays for the fund?" Stanley told me about that. It was far sadder than anything I've done."

And then, in spite of the muddy hands, Stanley Ashton folded the little garden into his arms—those strong arms, that had some other work against them in the car two weeks before, as arms it would be very nice to be folded into.

Tempting the Stark. It is customary in China, when the number of children—daughters preponderating—begins to exceed the family income, to name the latest comer "Stark," which means "World Outing." Acting upon this superstition, the Lees, a native Christian couple, presented their seventh child for baptism.

"What is her name?" inquired the missionary pastor.

"Enough," announced both parents in fervent union.

"That will never do!" the pastor frowned. "Think of a more fitting name!" But Mr. and Mrs. Lee were smitten with stage fright and could think of nothing.

WANTED, MILLIONS OF WIVES

Numerous Openings. But It Would Seem Only for Those Possessing Abundant Good Qualities.

Wanted, by men in every state, county, city and village in America, a wife. Wanted, by millions of bachelors in the United States, a wife who can live on her husband's income and not complain; who can save a penny and not be ashamed.

Wanted, a wife whose aim in life is not dress, automobiles, card parties, dances, society; who will not neglect her husband; who loves a home.

Wanted, a wife who knows how to cook, to sew, to direct a household; who can make a home.

Wanted, a wife who wants children. Wanted, a wife who can teach her children to pray.

Wanted, a wife who knows a baseball score and a batting average; who is not bored when her husband talks business; who will not laugh at a husband's ambitions.

Wanted, a wife who will not be a dressed-up doll or a household drudge; who will not limit her life to the four walls of the house; who knows the need of self-improvement, self-enlargement; who can continue to grow; who loves progress, refinement, culture.

Wanted, a wife who will not look on marriage as a career.

Wanted, a wife who loves the stimulus of victory; who will not be blighted with one defeat; who is willing to pay the price of success.

Wanted, a wife who can share adversity and not lose her love, who can share prosperity and not be jealous.

Wanted, a wife who does not nag, who can be a companion, an inspiration; whose love can lighten the saddest hours of failure; who can keep her faith even though all men fail to doubt.

Wanted, a wife who can love, love on through the years—his prosperity, his hardship, his adversity, in sorrow.

A woman who can meet these wants will find millions of men in America ready to go down on their knees and thank God for the privilege of giving her a home and making her happy—Milwaukee Journal.

Ship Dogs Are Sea Heroes. Many dogs have received decorations during the war—not from the government, of course, but from soldiers and sailors, according to a London dispatch in the European edition of the New York Herald.

A naval officer just returned from the Mediterranean tells an interesting story of one pet on his ship. The dog, a young one, was named "Puppy," which it seems, in naval estimate, is a pretty humble title. However, the dog conducted himself like a gentleman and a scholar, the officer declares, and was in due time decorated with the insignia of A. B. Dog.

He misbehaved on various occasions and failed to do his part in one or two brushes with submarines, so he was punished with whippings, so he was punished on the quarterdeck and solemnly reminded to "puppy." Ever since the story goes, he has been striving to retrieve himself, but thus far he has not recovered his rank.

It is said that the dogs on the ships which fought at Jutland—and there were many of them—have all been decorated by their shipmates. The animals during the battle, it is asserted, played the part of real heroes without a cowardly hair upon one of them.

Stam Adopts New Flag. Stam's white elephant flag is to be abandoned for the red, white and blue colors of democracy. Commenting on this, the Christian Science Monitor says:

"In spite of the fine feeling of enthusiasm for the allied cause which it shows, one can not but be sorry that Stam should have decided to discard his own splendidly original flag, showing a white elephant on a red field, for a tricolor resembling that of the great empires of the world. Stam sees in the red, white and blue flag the colors of the world, and he is a real patriot. It is quite interesting to find that red, white and blue as a matter of fact figure in the national flags of Britain, France, the United States, Russia, Serbia, Cuba, Panama, Costa Rica, Paraguay and Liberia. And now Stam must add that the white elephant is doomed."

Rushed Army Contingents. Nearly $300 a soldier, or a total of $187,000,000 was the cost of the 16 army contingents built last summer and fall to house 600,000 men. The original estimate of the cost was $125,000,000. This huge construction job was carried forward with a speed that is considered remarkable. By the end of last May, when congress was still debating the project, the engineering corps was fully organized for work. Within three months from that time contingents capable of housing 800,000 men were completed, while by December 6 there were accommodations for the entire 600,000 men.

Place to Sit Down. Patience—You look tired, dear. Patience—I suppose so. I went out for a skate today and I couldn't find any place to sit down.

"Why, do you mean to say there wasn't any ice?"

Good In All Things. "I've found one way to get some pleasure out of the strike," said a philosopher.

"Tell us," yelled the crowd.

"I'm spending all the car fares I save for cigars."

CURING SKIN TROUBLES

So many people, both men and women, suffer from skin troubles, such as eczema, blotches, pimples and irritation that a word of advice is necessary. It is a great mistake for such sufferers and those with bad complexions to smear themselves with greasy ointments. Often they could not do anything worse, for the grease clogs the pores of the troubled skin and their condition actually becomes worse.

When these are pimples or eruptions, or an irritation or itching rash, a soothing boracic solution may help to allay the irritation, but of course that does not cure the trouble. Skin complaints come from an impure condition of the blood and will persist until the blood is thoroughly purified. It is well known that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have effected the best results in many forms of skin disorders and blemishes. This is due to the fact that these pills make new, rich blood, and that this new blood attacks the impurities that give rise to skin troubles and disperses them; so that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure skin disorders from within the system—the only sure way.

It should be added that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a beneficial effect upon the general health. They increase the appetite and energy and cure disease that arise from impure blood.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little life is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

No Chance for the Germs

Disease germs cannot live in hot, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to well.

WIFE AS MANAGER

Something for Which Too Few Hubbies Give Her Credit.

But Really, When You Look at the Matter Closely, the Proper Conduct of a Home Requires Some Thought.

Many a business man goes home in the evening, removes his coat, sinks into an easy chair and breathes a deep sigh of relief. When asked why his brow is furrowed he responds that he has had a terrible day. Perhaps he had letters to dictate. He had to confer with his associates and he had to talk to some customers. He spent an hour or more at lunch and he quit about five o'clock. He had a busy day, and when home is reached he feels that he is entitled to some rest and quiet.

Such a man rarely thinks of his wife as a manager, remarks the Indianapolis News. He does not recall that she may have been up before him. He forgets that she planned the breakfast—and, in many instances, cooked it as well. After breakfast is finished there are dishes to be washed and the kitchen must be put to rights. Perhaps that is a general cleaning day for the whole house; and there always is dust to be chased as well as dirt to be swept out or taken up in the new-fangled cleaner.

The beds have to be made and a score of other household duties need attention. If there are children they demand this, that and the other. If there is a little baby in the house it must be bathed and put to sleep for its morning nap. Then there is a noon meal to get, as well as various other little things constantly coming up. The afternoon will be spent in many ways. A great many women spend it in work. They order groceries and they order meat. They buy the household supplies, and the good housekeeper keeps an accurate account of her expenditures. Toward evening she has to plan the dinner and when the children come home she must look after them. Later she has the job of putting them to bed. Meanwhile she has had time, very likely, to read a magazine, to knit a little for some soldier or to play the piano. She may have found time to go shopping or to make a few calls. She makes no particular complaint about the routine she has gone through because she does it every day.

Thousands of women show more executive ability in running their own homes than their husbands show in running their business. Yet there are many husbands who do not give their wives credit for having any business sense. Some of them who say that women belong in the home never realize what a home is. One of these executive experts would be at a loss in a great many cases if he undertook the job of running his own house for a period of 24 hours.

Saved Shipmate's Life.

Few reports of heroism made to the navy department are more remarkable than that concerning James Marico, ship cook, first class, who will probably receive a gold life-saving medal. In addition to the letter of commendation sent him by the secretary of the navy, in the midst of a terrific gale Chief Quartermaster Eddier H. Robertson, U. S. N., was washed overboard from the U. S. S. Smith, while attempting to clear a jam in the steering gear. Exhausted by the cold and rough sea, Robertson could no longer help himself, when Marico, lying a line to the water, jumped into the water. Catching the quartermaster, he clung to the half-drowned man until the two were hauled aboard. Not only was the act of Marico's one of great heroism, but the test of his courage was shown in the chance he took with such a rough sea. The gale at the time was one of the worst in years and the ship was rolling at fifty-five degrees. This young hero enlisted in the navy in April, 1914, at Philadelphia.

Pile up the Surplus

To win this war every ounce of the strength of each of the allied nations must be put forth to meet the organized, trained and disciplined efficiency of the Central Powers—that gigantic, ruthless force which is the result of fifty years of planning and preparation.

And every ounce of every allied nation's strength is in the hands and brains and hearts of the individuals of each nation, because they are free peoples.

Now the individuals of each nation must live as well as fight, therefore a proportion of the effort and material of each nation must be diverted from war purposes to living necessities.

So the less each individual takes for himself or herself for personal use the more effort will there be left for fighting and winning the war.

Every cent you spend represents that much effort because somebody must do something for you in order to earn that cent—somebody's effort must be given to you instead of to the war.

Therefore the less you spend—the less of somebody's effort you take for your individual use—the more will you leave in the national surplus for war effort.

The war can be won only by the surplus strength of the allied nations. The money each individual saves represents that surplus strength.

So the truly loyal Canadian will use less, spend less, and save more, to help to win the war.
