A Russian officer, who claims to have seen the meeting says it was most pathetic. More than one voice was choked with sobs as it assented to the inevitable. An agreement was soon reached. It was to be "terms of honor," or die fighting.

Thereupon the remnant of the garrison was ordered to concentrate where all the available stores had been collected, prepared to fight to the last unless Gen. Nogi proved generous. Admiral Wiren ordered measures to be taken to destroy the ships. Some of the forts were blown up, and all possible was done while the messenger with the offer of surrender was on his way to Gen. SAID TO BE IMMINENT

Chicago; Ill., Jan. 4.-Baseball magnates are squaring off for the annual meeting of the National Commission, at Cincinnati, on January 9. It has been scheduled as a peace gathering, but from expressions heard during the last few days it is likely to be a pretty lively affair. President Herrmann, of the Cincinnati club will be asked some questions, and it will then be up to him to keep the gathering harmoni-ous. He will be asked why the National League put itself on record against the American on the question of dealing with minors. He must also cast the deciding vote in the Taylor case, which is likely to be one of the most sensational ever brought up in base-

President Johnson, as a member of the commission, will present the case for Charles Comiskey, and then the 'old Roman" will be called on the witmarket by 5 goals to 4, the score at granted that President Pulliam will will vote against such procedure. That will make it a tie. How will Herrmann vote? The opinion of the American League magnates, secretly entertained. s that Herrmann will vote with Pulam, and then look out for lurid fire. Comiskey announced yesterday that e would go on to a finish with it, and that James A. Hart must make good the charges he is alleged to have made to a number of friends that Taylor threw some of the games with White Socks last fall. The whole thing s so delicate that fears are entertained that it may cause a baseball war. Herrmann is the man to avert it, bu

A Certain Cure

I spent twenty years in experimenting before I felt satisfied that I had a certain remedy for this dread disease—a remedy which would not only clean out the poison, but one which would stop its formation. The secret lay in a wonderful chemical I found in Germany. When I found this chemical I knew that I could make a Rheumatic cure that would be practically certain. But even then, before I made

But sometimes the kidneys fail. And sometimes, from some other cause, the blood gets so full of poison that they

City Built on Rubies.

Mogok, a city in the northern Shan states of Burmah, is literally "built upon rubies." The earth in the streets and inclosures is of a crystalline limestone formation, containing numerous veins of gem-bearing gravel. The houses and pagodas represent so many rubies converted into cash. The houses of Mogok are practically the dwelling-places only of ruby miners and merchants and their families. It is said that a king would be ruling at Mandalay today if it had not been for rubies; and Mogok would still have been an obscure village, with a few score inhabitants had there been no rubies in the vicinity, whereas now there are about 40,000 people of every color and hue—the Englishman, American, the Frenchman and German, the Armenian, pure native and Jew. Mogok is so far removed from the ordinary tourist's track that few venture there who are not on business bent, owing to the difficulty of transit in Burmah. Fair promise of gain will tempt men to go anywhere in search of it. Some go to burning South Africa for diamonds, and others to frozen Alaska for gold. Even so men go to Burmah for rubies. For the ruby ranks next to the diamond among precious stones, and holds premiership all its own among the colored gems with which men and women love to bedeck themselves. It is not strange, therefore, that many should search for a stone that is a brother to the amethyst, the sapphire and the topaz, and which not infrequently outranks the diamond in value, being, in fact, the gem of gems of the east. A flawless five-carat ruby will bring twice as much as a diamond of equal weight, while a ten-carat ruby will bring three times as much, and cannot be bought for much less than

ernment Policy and His Own Case.

Glencoe, Ont., Jan. 3.-Mr. R. R. Gamey the "Man from Manitoulin," the new man whom Mr. Whitney has slated for the ministry of mines, came to town today and addressed a fair-sized audience in the town hall. As might be expected, his speech was a general arraignment of the Government, which he accused of all sorts and conditions of political crime. He started off with a criticism of the Government's policy for colonizing New Ontario, claiming it was inadequate and unfair to the settler. He also declared the Government should have the nickel ore from New Ontario refined in Canada, and the colonization of the co

It is a curious fact in connection with Mr. Whitney's "nip of Scotch" that many people will reproach him organized for municipal purposes for much less for imbibing in illegal hours than for taking a lone drink. Says our Pecksniffian contemfrom Belleville," adjourned to the Pais- porary in addition: ley House, Napanee, after addressing a meeting in the town hall, at which they no doubt held up the Ross Government to the scorn of temperance people. Mr. Whitney repaired to his own room, but his wassail friends, including that great anti-corruptionist, E. Gus Porter, M. P., lined up at the bar. Because he had his Scotch sent up to his room, instead of joining the convivial company at the bar, Mr. Whitney will be suspected of a certain coldness of temperament, which is a fatal defect in a leader of the people, and will be disgraced in the eyes of that large and bibulous fraternity which regards a lone drink as an unpardonable sin. The motives of a public man are The probability is that Mr. Whitney is an enemy of the treating system, and took the occasion to impress the electorate by the force of his personal example. He ordered his Scotch in prohibited hours merely to insure the fullest publicity. The most radical temperance reformers admit that the treating system is the root of much of the evil that springs from the liquor traffic. Mr. Whitney has declared against prohibition and in favor of the maintenance of the license system. But Mr. Whitney doubtless believes there is room for temperance progress within the limits of the present system, and it office, to legislate against treating, as argument for the garbage bylaw. an installment of reform. This may be the interpretation of his lone drink, and it is only fair that Mr. Whitney should have the benefit of the doubt.

The First Niagara Power.

The formal opening of the Canadian Niagara Power Company's powercontract with the Ontario Government required the company to have 20,000 electrical horse-power ready for sale tunnel capacity for producing 100,000 horse-power. The company has constructed a canal, tunnel and wheelpit capable of producing 110,000 horsepower, and is installing five electrical units of 10,000 horse-power each, two of which were put into successful operation this week. The first delivery of the power on a large scale will be made in the city of Toronto for railway and lighting purposes. The transmission lines are now building and will be in use within a year. St. Petersburg, Jan. 3.-The public seems stunned by the announcement of the fall of Port Arthur, which the Government authorized this morning in the shape of Little had been done to prepare the people, and the impression produced, despite the heroic nature of the defense, amounted almost to stupefaction. What will be the effect of the an-

It is affirmed, although positively denied at the Admiralty, that it has been decided that the Government cannot take any hances with Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron, and that it will be recalled to await the making ready of a third squad-

In view of the situation, Emperor Nicholas, who was reported to be at Minsk, is now on his way to St. Petersburg, where he probably will have an immediate consultation with his advisers immediate consultation with his advisers. But at both the War Office and the Adminalty all talk of the possibility of peace at such a time meets with nothing but expressions of indignation.

In spite of this, diplomatically, the situation is extremely interesting, and in diplomatic circles it is regarded as cerain that Japan has awaited this momen to submit proposals for peace, and that she intends to do so through the United States. Intervention, or even the offer of good offices by the United States without the request of Russia, is not admitted to be possible, and it is known that France will not act in such a capacity. But direct proposals from Japan will be considered.

The general opinion, however, is that coming on the heels of a success

An ordinary peace which might be ruptured in a few years which might be ruptured in a few would not be sufficient. Upon the would not be sufficient. Upon the basis of an equitable alliance Russia possibly could yield."

One of these was addressed to St. Petersso that when out there are about 300 burg, asking what was the prospect miles of gill nets set, even though the of the arrival of the Russian second

London, Jan. 2. — One of the most delightful additions to modern Yuletide literature is the work of an Indian who in early youth changed his pagan religion for the Christian faith. It is the "One Thousand and One Indian Nights," written by Sarath Kumar Ghosh, an author of wonderful imaginative gifrts, who writes English with fine idiomatic accuracy.

The book is written somewhat in the style of the "Arabian Nights," with this distinction, that the characters are not so exaggerated and the scenes and dialogues more possible of realization. It gives an excellent presentation of life in the various castes in the East Indies, and describes the great social and moral transformation of that vast rebrought weighed materially with n. Cases have been recorded where men have gone to hospitals four times, returning convalescent to the forts. The number of officers killed was proportionately greater than in any battle known in history. This was due to the frequent lethargic condition of the men, who, without food and without sleep, moved only when ordered by their officers. The Russians estimate that the taking of the fortress has cost Japan $100,000,000.

Trust Your Appetite

It Knows What is Best for Your Health.

Your appetite knows what is best for your health That is the theory of modern med icine-the doctrine of common sense. Bread your appetite does not like is bread that is bad for your health. How easily the human system assim-

COUNTY COUNCIL ELECTIONS. The returns of the vote on Monday for members of the Middlesex county council are coming in very slowly, only five municipalities having reported up to today at noon. The vote in none of the divisions was complete, and it is not expected that the full returns will be received until the last day of the THE CAUSE OF THE DELAY.

A reason for the delay in the counting of the ballots at subdivision 11, of ward 1, on Monday night, is furnished by the explanation that the returning officer, instead of sorting the ballots and placing them in piles before counting, insisted upon taking one ballot from the box at a time and counting them in this manner. As a consequence it took over seven hours to find out what was the result of the day's polling at that division. INSTALLED NEW OFFICERS.

"I have been devoted to-to Miss Olivia for months past," he continued. "I'm not good at this kind of thing, and I don't express myself very well; but what I've said is true, I do love her, and I'll do all in my power to make her happy."

Bartley Bradstone was perfectly white and his eyes were fixed on the

As he speke the last word his voice suddenly dropped and grew hoarse and indistinct. So much so that the squire, who had not expected such deep emotion, started and looked up at him. Mr. He cleared his throat, and took up a match to relight his cigar, which had gone out.

The squire stared at the carpet with grave, troubled eyes for a moment. He had expected this; in his heart of hearts he had desired it, and yet-yet now it had come, it seemed to chill him with an indefinable repugnance. "Have you spoken to Olivia, Mr. Bradstone?" he asked, and his voice was rather that of a man speaking of a funeral than a contemplated marri-

Bartley Bradstone colored. "No," he replied. "I have said nothing to Miss Olivia. I thought it my duty to come to you, her father, first; it's the proper thing, isn't it?" "Yes," assented the squire. "Yesusually, thank you-yes, of course, it is the proper thing. Butpaused. "But I ought to tell you at once that in this matter my daughter will be quie uninfluenced by me-I herself completely." "Then, if she says 'Yes' I'm to understand that you will not object?" said Bartley Bradstone. The squire looked up at him with the half-sad, half-reluctant expression

"Why should I object?" he said, as if to himself. "We have known you for a long time, you are a near neighbor, and-I speak, frankly, Bradston you possess the wealth, without which, alas, few marriages can be happy!" for the first time he drew himself up. 'I think I can satisfy you on that point. I think I may say that Olivia will, as my wife, be able to live as comfortably as she has done as your daughter.' The squire winced at the vulgarity and familiarity of the speech, as he nodded assentingly. "It is a consideration that has weight with me," he said. "But I ought to tell you, though, you do not need telling, I am sure, that it will not have a feather's weight with Olivia.' 'Most women like money," said Mr. Bradstone.

The squire winced again. "Yes, most, but not Olivia. She cares nothing for it. She would be as contented in one of the keeper's cots as here at the Grange or The Maplesthat is, so far as money is concerned But all this is premature and useless talk. You have not spoken to her yet. you say. It will be time to-to talk of the financial part of the subject

He paused and suppressed a sigh. 'No, I don't agree with you, sir," said Bartley Bradstone, with an air of respect, but eyeing the grave, sad-faced old man out of the corner of his restless, suspicious eyes. "I like every-thing to be fair and above-board."

squire, almost angrily. "I-I mean straightforward and plain," stammered Bartley Bradstone. "I must tell you what I intend to do if Olivia accepts me and becomes my

The squire rose and leaned his elbow on the mantel-shelf and his head on his hand, and seemed engaged in some mental struggle for a moment; then he raised his head, and looking every inch the true-hearted English gentleman, he

'Wait a moment, if you please, Bradstone. Before you say any more, think—I am sure—it is my duty to be as plain and straightforward—aye, to e your own words, as 'fair and above-board,' as you are. I have to tell you this: You may suppose, and very naturally, that as the daughter of the lord of the manor, a man with a large estate and accupying a prominent place in the county, Olivia will have a dowry suitable to her position.' Bartley Bradstone opened his mouth; but the squire, with a gesture of gentle dignity, motioned him to silence.

"Hear me out. I find it difficult to tell you what I have to tell you. I say that it is only reasonable that you should suppose my daughter would come to you with a marriage portion suited to her rank in life. I am sorry, bitterly sorry, to tell you that Olivia will go to the man she marries with

If the squire had expected his auditor to express astonishment or chagrin, he was agreeably relieved, for Bartley Bradstone merely nodded his head. 'It is a matter of perfect indifference to me, sir," he said, with a shrug of the shoulders. "It is Olivia I want -not money; thank heaven, I have enough-too much, perhaps-of that already. If you give me your consent

"One moment more" said the squire, interrupting him in a low voice. "It is my duty to tell you something more Bradstone. If you are utterly indifferent to the fact that she will have no dowry, you may consider that, as my only child, she will and should inherit this," and he waved his hand, "What if I tell you that she will not even do

Again Bartley Bradstone expressed

neither surprise nor disappointment. "No?" he said. "Well, that is of no Bradstone, having told you this much I may-indeed it is my duty to-to tell you all. You see before you a man who I'm not so sure that that can't be preis a living lie"-his voice broke-"a sham and a counterfeit, the Squire of Hawkwood, who cannot give his only daughter a poor thousand pounds as a wedding present, the lord of the pockets. "I'm not so sure of that And manor every acre of which he is in hourly danger of losing. Bradstone, I am weighed down, sunk to my neck in debt, and the Grange may at any moment be in the bailiff's hands."

In now, sir, let me imitate your candor. You've told me how you stand; I'll tell you my position. I believe—it's difficult to calculate exactly—that I'm ment be in the bailiff's hands."

He did not drop into a chair, or burst into tears, did not even utter a groan, but stood with pale, set face, and steady, unflinching eyes-the aristocrat even in this moment of his deepest humiliation, the humiliation of having to confess his ruin to this parvenu, would-be son-in-law.

Bartley Bradstone looked at him with the grudging admiration of a vulgar mind, for that higher type which it people whenever he appeared in public can never hope even to imitate: how he would have sighed and groaned and groveled if he had had to make such

There is my case," said the squire "There is my case," said the squire after a moment's pause. "And I shall not deem you selfish or unreasonable if after having heard it, you withdraw your proposal, Bradstone."
"But I do not do anything of the sort," said Bartley Bradstone. "I repeat it. It makes no difference to me, sir, not a bit. As to the estate going,

GERMAN-TIMMS. The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Timms, Nissouri, was the scene of a pleasing event on Wednesday last, when their eldest daughter, Bessie, was united in marriage to Mr. Roy V German, of Arkona, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Gilmour of Granton, in the presence of about thirty invited guests. The bride entered the parlor, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Blanche German, of Wellburn. She looked charming in a gown of cream nun's veiling, with silk trimmings, and carried a white prayer book. She was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie, who was dressed is cream hun's veiling, with chiffon trimming, while the groom was ably supported by Mr. James Forfast was served.
