HE TALKED FOR THIRTEEN HOURS.

How a United States Senator Defeated an Objectionable Measure.

Washington, D. C., March 5.—One of the most notable occurrences in the history of Congressional legislation marked the closing hours of the last session of the Senate of the 56th Congress. Senator Carter, of Montana, signified his retirement from the Senate, after six years of brilliant service by talking for thirteen consecutive hours, although in the aggregate about three hours of that time were devoted to other business. Mr. Carter announced that it was his intention not to permit the River and Harbor Bill to become a law, if his strength should hold out, and at that moment he was in excellent physical condition. With the exception of a brief intermission, while a quorum was being secured, and a recess of half an hour between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, Mr. Carter spoke practically continuously. His speech was floor only after the ceremony of the induction of Vice-President Roosevelt into office had begun.

DECIDE THEY WILL COME TO THE MAPLE CITY.

Dowsley & Co. Have Signed the Contracts With the City—Special Meeting of the Council to be Held.

Last night the firm of Dowsley & Co., steel spring and axle manufacturers, Owen Sound, called up Ald. Cowan, chairman of the Civic Industrial Committee to notify him that their firm had signed the contract for removal to the city, and were making the same. The terms upon which the factory had been secured, the loan of $20,000 for 20 years, $1,000 to be paid back each year, and the exemption of plant from taxes for ten years. The factory guarantees to employ from 40 to 50 hands the year round, and erect buildings 300 feet long by 80 feet. Several prominent citizens are also taking stock in the concern. Immediately upon receipt of the contracts Ald. Cowan will ask for a special meeting of the council to prepare the by-law.

LORD SALISBURY'S STUPID SON OBJECTS

To Recognizing Certain Colonial Marriages and Thereby Makes Trouble.

London, March 5.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain is angry with Premier Salisbury's son, Lord Hugh Cecil, a member of the House of Commons, who blocked a bill which had been warmly approved by Mr. Chamberlain, and which proposed to legalize in England marriages with deceased wives' sisters which had been contracted in the colonies, where such unions are legal. Lord Hugh Cecil is the Parliamentary champion of the extreme High Church party, which has always fiercely opposed attempts to make

LORD WOLSELEY SCORES THE ARMY SYSTEM HARD.

He Declares the Force Will Never be Efficient Under it—Lord Lansdowne Strikes Back.

London, March 5.—The Duke of Bedford, in the House of Lords yesterday, started a discussion of army matters by asking for information on the military administration and the war office. Lord Wolseley arose after the Duke of Bedford had done speaking, and for two or three hours, he attacked the military system of Great Britain in a carefully written speech. It is understood he had long meditated it, and that he had phrased it in consultation with his friends. "My argument," he said, "are not directed against the individuals, but against the military system which I have honestly tried for five years and have found wanting, and which entails many great dangers not realized by the people of this realm."

Lord Wolseley said he had worked with the Marquis of Lansdowne and there had not been a single disagreement in it. His complaint was that the professional commander-in-chief was robbed of his chief usefulness. He had to hand over the command and the entire management of the army to a civilian secretary of state, assisted by subordinates with whom he had no direct responsibility. Everything rested with the secretary of state alone. The commander-in-chief could only bring strongly the wants of the army to the secretary. He had often done so. After that he could do no more. He added:

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED. "Although the various needs are undisputed, not only are no steps taken to meet them, but no one outside of the government is aware that their urgency has been raised. The government has thought it advisable for economic reasons to postpone their provision, but yet it will not take them into its confidence. That such important demands for men and stores have been put forward by experts and refused, I cannot assert too emphatically. It behooves parliament to devise a plan by which strong representations made and still refused should be laid before the nation for it to decide between the experts and the economists. In no other way can we safeguard the empire from great and unknown perils. Many an evening at the end of a day's work I have felt sick at heart when I contemplated the great national risks deliberately accepted by the government which happened to be in office. Why were they so accepted? Because it was not then politically expedient to ask parliament for money."

ARMY SYSTEM NO GOOD. Lord Wolseley outlined the present system, which he said was entirely unsuitable for the army, under which it would never be efficient, and he doubted much if they would ever have a contented army.

When he became the office of commander-in-chief he had been told, it was proposed to introduce regulations greatly altering the position of future commanders-in-chief. When he learned the nature of these changes they were not to his liking, but he had honestly given them five years' trial, and was convinced they would never make an effective army. Up to 1895 he (the commander-in-chief) was responsible to the secretary of state that the army was thoroughly trained for war. Since 1895 the responsibility has been with the under secretary of state

THEY OPEN THE CAMPAIGN.

Messrs. Crossley and Hunter Start in After Chatham's Sinners.

They Address a Large Audience in the Victoria Avenue Methodist Church.

Messrs. Crossley and Hunter held their first week night meeting last evening in the Victoria Ave. Methodist church. The edifice was crowded to the doors and great earnestness and close attention characterized the meeting. The choir assisted at the song service, which was held from 7:30 to 8 o'clock. The clergy of all denominations, present, were invited to the platform besides Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, the Rev. Mr. Locke, the Rev. Dr. Hannon, the Rev. Mr. Walker, and two officers of the Salvation Army. The Rev. Mr. Crossley sang "My Alma Mater," and the Rev. Mr. Hunter read the lesson and explained its teaching.

Rev. Mr. Crossley addressed the large gathering. He took as his subject, Luke, c. 15, v. 10—"Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

"This lesson taught by these words," said Mr. Crossley, "is that those who see us working and know what we are doing honor us. Heaven is so close we can scarcely realize how close. Stephen, dying, saw paradise open before him. When we think of the words of our text, we know that Jesus and the angels are interested in our salvation. There is not one here to-night, unaved, but a jubilation would be caused in heaven by their repentance."

The text teaches us how loving and artfully Jesus can rebuke. Instead of Jesus telling the people of sinners not so bad as they were, he spoke in parables and told them stories of the shepherd who had lost one sheep and finding it brought it joyfully to camp and also the story of the prodigal son.

The text further teaches us to earnestly seek to win others to the side of the Lord. Personally I would rather be on earth than in heaven. I would rather be in Chatham because here I have an opportunity to win sinners to repentance and thus create joy not only in heaven but also on earth.

We all join in an earnest prayer that you may be rectified to God and you are certain of salvation if you repent. As soon as you turn from sin to God you will rejoice.

The meeting closed with a deep and earnest prayer by the Rev. Mr. Hunter.

LITTLE IN THE REPORT.

Criticisms of the C. C. I. Teaching

Are not Severe—What the Now Famous Inspector's Report Referred to.

There were present at yesterday's meeting of the C. C. I. Board, the Chairman, Thomas Sallard, and Trustees Fleming, White, Bell, Battisby and McVean.

The following accounts were passed: Chas. Dingman, $6.15. The Ark, $1.50. T. H. Taylor Co., $1. Wm. Drayler, $53.96. Croelman Bros., $9.75. Trustee Battisby submitted the report of special committee on Inspector Seith's report, which was adopted. The report held it was not necessary to make changes in hall floors, suggested by Inspector, at present, or new gymnasium erected, that the suggested additional time in French and German pronunciation be allotted, that the over-crowding of one room complained of would be abated.

In his report on discipline the Inspector remarks that it is not quite so good in some respects as it might be. The principal had ascertained that this referred to the girls being too noisy in the halls during recess. The suggested engagement of another teacher was not adopted. Dr. Battisby reported for the committee on the Wilson Taylor investigation that his general method was excellent, but there were changes which Mr. Taylor had introduced in regard to the teaching of decimals, and the arithmetical expression of decimals, which the committee thought unnecessary and inexpedient. The report proceeds to eulogize Mr. Taylor's abilities and results attained from his teaching, but noted that his manner of addressing the class and pupils was sometimes unnecessarily harsh and forbidding, which was perhaps due to his over-zeal in the work. The committee recommended that Mr. Taylor be asked to rectify this matter, and with the modification suggested, thought all dissatisfaction would be allayed.

The report was adopted. On motion of Messrs. McVean and White a committee, consisting of Trustees Sallard, Battisby and Bell, was appointed to draft resolution of condolence to the family of the late C. J. O'Neill.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia. Within us lives a god, we gleam by his emotion.—Ovid.

But there is not the slightest probability that such a scheme will ever be adopted or even supported by a considerable number of Englishmen. The Daily Mail's editorial is simply an evidence of the growing feeling in England that free trade is a failure. The true policy is not to try to form a European Zollverein, but to adopt a policy of preferential trade within

SILK STRENGTH.

Corticelli sewing silk quality begins in the selection of the "raw" or "cocoon" silk.

Only the cocoons of large, strong worms are selected.

The worms are kept at a moderate temperature and develop slowly but strongly.

That raw silk costs more than the "forced" product of rapidly developed but weakly worms.

But only the best is used in Corticelli sewing silk.

That's why it is the strongest.

FIEND OF THE ARCTIC

TERRIBLE FORM OF MENTAL DERANGEMENT IN THE YUKON.

Capt. R. W. Abner, U. S. Infantry, brings the News-The Official Demon Has Caused Mental Obliviousness in More Than 70 Per Cent. of the Population-The sufferers From Scurvy.

Probably the most tragic state of affairs resulting from the attempted rush of prospectors from Port Valdez, Alaska, into the Yukon Valley in 1898-99 has just been brought to light in the report of Capt. W. R. Abernethy, Second United States Infantry, in charge of building the Trans-Alaskan military trail. He says:

"After an uneventful voyage of six days anchored at Port Valdez, Alaska, on April 21, 1899, about 6 o'clock p. m. The scene that followed the arrival of our vessel at Valdez was one that I shall not soon forget. Crowding aboard the steamer came the argonauts of last season's rush into the Copper River Valley. They now considered themselves full-fledged miners, although many of them had never handled either pick or shovel since their entry into the country. A more motley looking group it would be hard to imagine. Mackinaw suits of all varieties and colors, faded and worn by exposure to the elements and their long journeys over the Valdez glacier from the Copper River Valley.

"They seemed to be sadly demoralized, and from a hurried conversation I had with six or seven of them I learned that they had been led to believe that hundreds were dying of starvation and scurvy beyond the coast range, in the Copper River Valley. Most of those then in the settlement of Valdez had little or no money, but notwithstanding this fact a wholesale orgy was inaugurated that lasted until midnight, the cabin and decks of the steamer giving evidence of the potent influence of the liquor on those who had indulged so freely, and who were now lying around in various attitudes sleeping off the effects. That they had passed a terrible winter was beyond all question of doubt.

"One of the first men from whom I could get an intelligent account of the condition of things was Quartermaster's Agent Chas. Brown, whose salutation to me was, 'My God, captain, it has been clear hell!' I told you that the demon of Montana was not a marker to what I have gone through this winter. It was awful."

"I noticed, in talking to these people that over 70 per cent. of them were more or less mentally deranged. My attention was first directed to this fact by their reference to 'the glacial demon.' One big, raw-boned Swede, in particular, had strangled his son on the glacier—his story being that he had just started from Twelve Mile Camp (a small collection of huts just across the coast range of mountains from Valdez) with his son to go to the coast, in company with some other prospectors. When half way up the summit of the glacier, his son, who was ahead of him hauling a sled, while he was behind pushing, called to him, saying that the demon had attacked him and had his arms around his neck. The father ran to the son's assistance, but, as he described it, his son being very strong, soon drove the demon away, and they passed on their way up toward the summit of Valdez glacier. The weather was very cold and the wind blowing very hard, so that it was traveling very difficult in passing over the ice between the huge crevasses through which it was necessary to pick their way to the summit.

"While in the thickest of these crevasses the demon again appeared. He was said to be a small, heavy-built man and very active. He again sprang on the son's shoulders, this time with such a clasp that, though the father did all he could to release him, the son was finally strangled to death. The old man then put the son on the sled and brought him down to Twelve Mile Camp, where the other prospectors helped him to bury him."

"During the recital of this tale the old man's eyes would blaze, and he would go through all the actions to illustrate just how he fought off this imaginary demon. When I heard this story there were some 10 or 12 other men in the cabin; and at that time it would not have been safe to dispute the theory of the existence of this demon on the glacier, as every man in there firmly believed it to be a reality. I was informed by Mr. Brown that this was a common form of mental derangement incident to those whom a fear of scurvy had driven over the glacier, where so many had perished by freezing to death."

"The condition of these men afflicted with scurvy is described as follows: They were crowded together, from 15 to 20, in log cabins 12 by 15 feet, in the centre of which was a stove. They spread their blankets on the floor at night, and lay down like sardines in a box. Facilities for working there were none. Many of them had frost-bitten faces, hands and feet. Their footwear consisted of tops of rubber boots cut off and manufactured into shoes. Around their feet they had wound strips of gunny sacks in place of socks. Across the cabin were suspended ropes on which were hung various articles of apparel that had become wet in wading through the deep snow. The odor emanating from the clothing of those afflicted with scurvy, gave forth a stench simply poisonous to a man who was well and meaning sure death to one in ill-health."

The London Telegraph has made the startling discovery that we are "on the eve of the greatest triangular duel yet seen in international trade." A triangular duel of any sort would certainly be the greatest ever seen in international trade or anywhere else. It would be equal to a pentagonal quartet.

THE WHIRL OF FASHION.

Masses of beautiful roses are very fashionable decorations for the newest toques and round hats.

Venetian cloth in lovely tints of silver blue, opal, gray fawn, tan, pearly and amethyst shades is made up into elegant dress costumes with trimmings of fur, panne, or guipure, vokes and silk embroideries in applique.

There is a revival of black and white embroidery said to have been in vogue in Italy in the sixteenth century. The arabesque and other designs in black are worked in stitches of great variety on linen batiste and chiffon.

Notwithstanding all the rumors to the contrary, there is no doubt whatever that the diminutive fancy jackets in Eton, grey, milkyblue, green, and other similar styles will be in marked favor for the spring and summer seasons.

The use of velvet and chiffon choux and rosettes gains in favor as the gay winter season advances, and when this mode of decoration is not carried to excess, as so many of our prominent fashions are wont to be, it is a very effective trimming.

Double breasted fronts are characteristic of many of the new French walking jackets made for the coming season. In velvet, cheviot or English serge they are semiloose; in velvet, kersey, covert cloth or kid cloth they are snug and basque-like.

Very elegant kid cloth gowns are made up all representative Parisian tailors and dressmakers. This fabric is the finest Saxony wool in the most beautiful quality of cloth that has ever been produced on any loom in France. The surface of the fabric is as soft, flexible and velvety as that of an undressed kid glove—hence its name.

HIVE AND BEE.

Bees live longer when confined in the hives during the winter.

Spring dwelling is the result usually of bad winter management.

Moist worms are often very destructive to empty combs in hives where the bees have died.

Bees cease breeding almost entirely at the beginning of winter, and it is except if any brood comb is found during that season.

Combine beekeeping with fruit growing, and you can more easily procure two crops from the same land. This double cropping requires no extra fertilizing.

It sometimes happens, even though fall feeding may have been given, that the colony has consumed its stores by midwinter. When this is the case, candy feeding must be resorted to.

Honey improves with age. The older it is the finer the flavor. Extracted honey is much easier kept than comb, as the latter is liable to get soiled and must be kept in tight cases.

THE ART OF HAPPINESS.

There are minor pleasures whose effect is accumulative and which make up a happy life.

Even in choosing to be miserable we are happy, since there is happiness in every act of choice.

Among women the desire to work is not so common that it should be discouraged.

There is a great deal of difference between a copy and an imitation.

The misery children make for their parents is well known; the misery parents make for their children not so well.

The two great sources of happiness are health of body and strength of mind.

In recipes for happiness goodness must always be the principal ingredient.

When people begin to be critical, they cease to be pleasant.—Sarah Grand in Saturday Evening Post.

THE MOVING WORLD.

German manufacturers have found that by soaking molasses dregs, after the removal of the sugar, a potash is won which is preferred to all other sorts in the soap industry.

Horsehoes which wear unevenly can be repaired by an Australian patent nail, which has a head much larger than the common nail, the four nails nearly covering the worn surface of the shoe and raising it to the right height again.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Aluminium ware is best cleaned by putting it in hot water to which some common washing soda has been added and letting it boil for five or six minutes.

In wiping china dishes do not pile one upon another while still hot. Spread out to cool off, then pack. Piling up while warm is apt to make the glass crack.

In The Summer

Of life a woman may find herself fading and failing. She doesn't understand it. She goes to doctors, who treat her for this or for that, but she gets no better. She grows frail and pale. She can just "drag about the house," but has no pleasure in life.

Many such women have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, and have been restored by Dr. Pierce's treatment to perfect health. There is no more wonderful medicine for women than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Its action upon the womanly organs is at once apparent in the decrease of pain and the increase of strength. It cures female weakness and such diseases as take away the strength and beauty of women.

Sickly women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Before I commenced to use your medicine I was in a bad condition (for eight years) and my doctors treated me," writes Mrs. Bettie Askew, of Garysburg, Northampton Co., N. C. "They, of course, gave me at the time some relief, but it did not last long. I was some days in my bed and some days I dragged about the house. I have used five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and five of the Golden Medical Discovery, and four vials of the 'Pellies.' Now I feel like a new woman, and I want the world to know it."

The action of the "Favorite Prescription" is assisted by the use of "Pleasant Pellets" when the bowels are irregular.

TRAGIC CHRISTMASSES.

World's Greatest Holiday Has Often Been Reddened by Blood.

Christmas, which should be and usually is the merriest day of all the year, has sometimes been reddened by bloodshed and blackened by tragedy.

One of the most barbarous of the persecutions against the Christians was begun by Diocletian on Christmas day, A. D. 303, when a church in Nicomedes, filled with Christians, was ordered by the emperor to be set on fire. Every way of egress was barred, and not a single worshiper escaped the flames.

Yuletide in 1006 was a melancholy time in England, which nevertheless at the time was decorated with the utmost eagerness, for Harold, the last of the Saxons, had fallen before the Norman conqueror, and on Dec. 25 of that year William the Conqueror was crowned in Westminster abbey. The occasion was signalized by the slaughter of a huge crowd of Anglo-Saxons outside of the church through a mistaken idea that they had risen in revolt.

Exactly two years later there was an uprising of the malcontents in the northern counties who hoped to throw off the Norman yoke. William marched in person against the rebels and directed a universal slaughter. His men surprised several garrisons and put them to the sword. Neither age nor sex was spared, and every house in the disaffected region was razed to the ground. It is said that over 100,000 men, women and children perished on Dec. 25, 1008.

It was on Christmas day in the year 1170 that Thomas a Becket, the great English cleric of his day, ascended the cathedral pulpit at Canterbury and preached what may be called his own funeral sermon. The words he made use of so angered Henry II that he let fall those fatal words, "If anybody loved me, he would rid me of this turbulent priest."

Four knights took him at his word, and on Dec. 29 they slew the prelate before the altar of St. Benedict in the northern transept of Canterbury cathedral.

On Dec. 25, 1384, John Wyclif died as he was about to preach his Christmas sermon.

One of the saddest Christmas known in London was that of the year 1663. The great plague had stricken the city, and the people were dying at the rate of 1,000 a day.—London Mail.

WHY YOUTHS GO WRONG.

Police Constable Groves Thinks the Theatre is Largely Responsible.

He Considers Children Under Fourteen Should not be Allowed at Shows Without Guardians.

Editor of The Planet.—The question of neglected children is one in which we can express our thoughts in regard to the advancement and proper bringing up of children. I have often been asked the question—What can be done? For many years, with a practical knowledge and close observation, I have gone to the theatre to see what I can see as to what is being done and my opinion of what should be done. I have come to the conclusion that the theatre is responsible among a certain class of boys as the first step for parents' looking after their children, getting them into the habit of staying out late at night without their parents' consent, and causing wonder as to how they get the money to go to or by what means they get there. This is a very important statement and I want to make it very plain and put it in such a shape that I am prepared to prove by facts that such is the case.

When a cheap theatrical play comes to Chatham, it is not a deplorable fact that we see at our schools many giving out tickets to children, boys and girls, from seven years of age to fifteen. This ticket and five or ten cents will admit them to the theatre. Why should our children be taught at the school the first lesson to attend a play at the Opera House unknown to their parents till they come home, and present a ticket and ask for money? Naturally, a child thinks that if he has a ticket the parent should do their part and pay the money to get the child into the theatre. Parents, perhaps innocently, encourage their children to go to the theatre, and without a thought that they are sowing the seed that will bear fruit and in many cases be the ruin of the child.

Boys are encouraged to play truant by distributing show bills, on the promise of a free pass to the plays. What a deplorable fact that all the boys who have been sent to the reformatory from Chatham are boys that have attended the theatre. I put this question to one boy who was sent to the reformatory. Why do you steal, and get yourself into trouble? And the answer was, he wanted money to go to the theatre and get tobacco. There are three brothers at present in the reformatory, sent from Chatham. Any time that I was at the opera house I would be pretty sure to see them, and all of those boys were under fifteen years of age. These boys cannot afford to pay the money to such places, do you wonder we have criminals? They get elated among older boys and learn to chew tobacco, etc. What can parents do to remedy this evil? These are facts that cannot be disputed.

I am going to suggest the following in my opinion as what should be done. First—That no person should be allowed under sixteen years of age from all theatrical plays and operas, children accompanied by parents not under fourteen years of age. Surely parents that are studying their children's interests would help to pass such a measure. Ask yourselves the following questions: Is it a good beginning to start them so young? I do not make them better scholars? Think of the good you can do by putting a limit on the poor unfortunate boys who are careless about themselves, and whose parents have lost control over them. I am glad to say that it is very seldom you see children in the parquet or first gallery. There are always good concerts and entertainments for children and you can depend upon it some of them will learn soon enough to go to the theatre.

Second—That no person be allowed, under a heavy fine, to engage any child under fourteen years of age to distribute show bills for any theatrical play or opera, or to show, circulate or patent medicine. This will go to a great extent stop truancy. Many boys play truant distributing bills on the promise of a pass to the show. The patent medicine man, who comes with a free advertisement, employing boys to help them with a promise of a few cents, because you are aware if the parents will receive no benefit and expect their children to have been at school.

Third—That all school children be forbidden from selling tickets for concerts or entertainments. I might say in regard to selling tickets, I have noticed it makes children very bold. We had a case in Chatham that might have been a very serious one through selling tickets.

I will leave it open for anyone to suggest any improvement. I will be ready to give any assistance to what I think is the first step in the right direction. This is a work that all parents should be interested in, guarding as much as possible the danger to our boys.

We have a work to do. Let us help the week, those that are careless about themselves, and their children. Where are the workers? Call a meeting. Select a committee to draft resolutions so that we can petition for legislation. With best wishes. Yours respectfully, T. GROVES.

DIEU DONNEE MARTIN BURIED.

The funeral of the late Dieu Donnee Martin, who succumbed to pneumonia, took place yesterday morning and was marked by an exceedingly large attendance.

"Dunnie" was respected by all who knew him and he had hosts of friends in Chatham and his old home at Big Point. The pallbearers, all young men from the French settlement, were, Messrs. Martin, Leguillier, Benoit, Emery, Emery and Bochart.

Dieu Donnee was the second son of the late Moses F. Martin, of Dover. When a lad of 10 years, he entered the seminary at St. Therese, Que., where he received an excellent education. Returning, he entered the College of Pharmacy, at Detroit, and at nineteen years of age he graduated.

Since then he was in the employ of Ingram & Co., wholesale druggists of Detroit, J. W. McFarren, of Chatham, and wholesale drug dealers in Helena, Anaconda and Butte, Montana. Besides the mother, five sisters and two brothers survive to mourn the death of one of the finest young men that Kent County has produced.

They are—Mrs. Thos. Winwood, Butte City; Mrs. Comman, Mrs. Page, Mrs. James Rankin, Anaconda, Montana; Mrs. Sheff, Big Point, and Douthett and Jos., of Chatham.

THE POPE'S BIRTHDAY.

His Holiness is Now Ninety-one
Years of Age.

He Complains of the Calumnies Uttered Against the Church.

Rome, March 5.—During the reception upon the occasion of the anniversary of the birth and coronation of the Pope, His Holiness made an address in the course of which he said:—"It is one of God's acts of benevolence that, enfeebled by age and fatigues, we do not succumb amidst the difficulties which still come to place obstacles before the free exercise of action by the church. Impudence, calumny and other iniquitous means are exercised freely against the church, which attempts only the good of humanity." After explaining the situation of civilization, he eulogized those who had acquired importance in the propagation of Christian civilization.
"By such importance Catholic France," said the Pope, "is more than ever rich and justly proud. However, she is actually menaced on this account, by grave dangers. This, indeed, might be a misfortune and a calamity of the interests of religion and the country if the tempest which threatens to disperse such serious efforts and such fine hopes does not turn aside." His Holiness eulogized Catholics in the entire world who are tractable, reverencing the church.
His chief regret was the blindness of certain men, and he asked with bitterness, what would become of future operations if inspired by such principles, which are a bad omen. His Holiness reaffirmed the imprescriptible rights of the Apostolic See, "of which the Pope is not the arbiter but a trustee, or guardian, whose duties are sacred."

HE SAYS IT IS NO SCOW.

E. B. Jones Disputes the Correctness of Andrew Coltart's Assertions.

To The Planet.—Mr. Andrew Col-tart has practically knocked a hole in the bottom of the old scow. But he, as well as the rest of us, is liable to make mistakes. He says Captain Waddell used this old scow forty years ago as a lighter. Singular to relate, the old boat is not a scow, but a properly built vessel, and when afloat must have drawn from six to seven feet of water, as her bottom is sharp moulded and not flat. Henry Dunn, who in his early years followed sailing, remembers distinctly this wreck fifty years ago, and has sailed by it many times. As it happens to have a couple of spikes and a piece of the planking of the boat in question I can speak with authority when I say the spikes were hand-made and quite different from the spikes used forty years ago. The planking plainly showed that it had been burned, and bored in places with an auger; so it would appear the boat was both scuttled and burnt. From a further examination I found the planking was hewed out of small oak trees and not spruce. As to the depth of the channel of the river near Elbert's farm, many people are aware of the fact that three-master vessels have loaded square timber, staves, and wheat at Louisville in days gone by.
Capt. McCorquodale, an old Chathamite, informed me he had taken many loads of wheat from Louisville about forty-five years ago. The position of the wreck shows she was run into the bank at an angle of 45 degrees with the shore line. No sensible man would deliberately obstruct the channel—which happens to be on the side of the river on which the boat lies—by breaking her in the manner described, but would lay her parallel with the bank. Ingram DeMange, eldest son of Squire John DeMange, informed me forty years ago of the many cannon balls and shells he found in his possession at the present time. To my mind, the evidence all points in favor of the old wreck being one of the gunboats abandoned, burnt, and sunk by General Proctor in his unfortunate retreat before the American General Harrison, during the war of 1812-13. Thank you for space.

WHY SO MANY FAIL.

The Reason so Many Catarrh Feme-dies are Unsuccessful.

There are few troubles for which are so many remedies and so called "cures" as for catarrh and it may be added there are few diseases so difficult to really and permanently cure.
Injurious sprays, powders and douches are all applied locally and give temporary relief, often for only a few hours, and it is doubtful if anything like a real cure of catarrh was ever accomplished by the use of local applications.

Catarrh is a constitutional disease, it is in the blood like rheumatism and to cure it requires an internal medicine to act upon the blood, to drive out the catarrhal poison from the system entirely, and anyone can readily see that a saline or powder or inhaler which simply clears off the mucous membrane of the nose and throat can have no effect on the real cause of catarrhal disease.

The remarkable success of the new catarrh remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, is because it drives out of the system through the natural channels the catarrhal poison, the germs of grip, bronchitis and consumption and causes the hawking, spitting, and gagging because the excessive secretion is no longer supplied when the blood is made healthy from the regular use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

The remedy is in the form of large 20 grain lozenges, pleasant and palatable, composed only of wholesome an-tipyretics and so safe to use that little children use them with perfect safety and benefit if the little one is suffering from colds, croup or cough from any cause.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have been on the market scarcely one year, yet they have met with such popularity and success that druggists everywhere in the United States and Canada now have them in stock and report a constantly increasing demand for them.

AT THE THEATRE.

The most prominent musical organization in Michigan to-day is the Hammer Ladies' Mandolin Orchestra, which, under the direction of G. Arthur Depew, has made a wonderful reputation for itself. The organization, which consists of eighteen members, comprises several of the best known soloists in Detroit, and the simple fact of G. Arthur Depew being their director is ample guarantee as to the excellence of the organization.
This organization will next Friday evening present the third number in the Lyceum Course at the Grand, being assisted by the vocal quartet,
Sam. E. Slade, G. Arthur Depew, Miss
Florence M. Wolfenden and Lewis E.
Vicary.

Lewis E. Vicary is one of the elevest entertainers in America, an artist of the highest type. His work is deserving of more than passing notice, being original and far superior to most of the so-called "Dramatic Reading" given to the public. There is a pungent wit, and peculiar personality in all that he does. As an actor, entertainer, singer and dramatist, Mr.
Vicary has won international fame.
His introduction of musical Declamation this season has already proved an artistic triumph.

The Queen and Court Chroniclers, London, England.—Mr. Vicary's comic recitations were unimpaired.
Daily Saratoga.—Mr. Vicary's recitations moved some of his audience to tears, the most profound compliment to tears, the most profound compliment to an artist can receive.

New York Graphic.—Mr. Vicary is something of an extraordinary genius.
He moves you by his intensity, touches
you with his pathos, and convulses you with his humor.
Mr. George Goetzle, in the Detroit
Free Press.—The recital given by Mr.
Lewis Vicary (last) Thursday evening was one of the most interesting professional incidents of the young sensation. Mr. Vicary's method and talents are unique. Those who hear him for the first time will experience surprise at his peculiar originality.

KILLED ON THE RAILWAY TRACK.

Two Young Lads Run Down by an M.
C. R. Express Train.

Lena Station, Mar. 4.—Last night
Louis and Lot McBride, aged 20 and 18 respectively, sons of Alex. Mc-Bride, of Sandusky, living four miles north of the village were struck and killed outright by No. 37 M. C. R. express, while attempting to cross the track ahead of her. They were seen by citizens urging the horse to cross, but on account of the snow thawing off the tracks, the cutter evidently stuck and hindered their progress. The horse was just across the track and the cutter was cut loose from him and smashed to atoms, and the unfortunate victims thrown about ninety feet from the crossing, and death must have been instantaneous, there being no signs of a struggle where they were found lying side by side in the snow. Parties that saw them trying to cross thought they did so in safety. They were not noticed for about half an hour afterwards.

Coroner Ling, of Dundas, was notified, and was immediately on the scene, and after making inquiries, concluded an inquest unnecessary. The bodies were notified once, and the father came to the scene, which was a sorrowful one in the extreme. The bodies were then handed over to the parents, and were taken home to their heartbroken mother and family, who awaited their coming. They leave to mourn their loss father and mother and sister, and a brother, Dr.
J. S. of Sandusky.

A Man With the Most Marvellous Psychological Powers Who has Ever Visited Us.

The peerless Hemstreet, Musician, Mind Reader and Hypnotist, played in the Town Hall here last Saturday night. A very large crowd was present and derived heaps of amusement from the entertainment, if frequent and hearty laughter is any criterion.
With a capable professor of the art in charge there is nothing more entertaining than an exhibition of the mind's power over the body, now dignified by the title of hypnotism.

This Hemstreet is a clever exponent of the hypnotic art could not be gainsaid by those present.
The professor opened the show with a number of very clever tricks in magic. Then he called for a committee for mind reading tests and a number of well known citizens responded, who watched his every movement.
He performed several feats in mind reading which were little short of the miraculous. Then came the hypnotism, and it may be said that here the fun commenced. The mesmerist asked for volunteer subjects and nine went upon the stage. The professor told them they were getting sleepy, and on the instant they dropped to sleep. It must have been a funny dream, for the sleepers were convulsed with laughter. It would be impossible to particularize the many comical acts with which he demonstrated his work during the evening, suffice it to say it was as funny as a dozen comedians. Subjects became popcorn pedlars, side-show talkers, pugilists, acrobats, fond lovers, or any old thing suggested to them, while the hypo-notic state by the professor.

It is safe to say that should the professor ever conclude to play a return date here he would receive a royal welcome.

DE PARALLEL

The longest day has its morning. Its evening the shortest day. The bluest of skies will grow dim. The hot, burning drought will be broken. By showers of gentle rain. And the mists that the showers engender Be dispersed by the sun again.

The warm winds that drift from the south land Will follow the icy blast. That sweeps over meadow and woodland. When the snowflakes fall thick and fast. On the meadows, now brown and barren. The daisies again will nod. And the ripe, golden wheat will be gleaming. Where the snowdrifts lie deep on the sod.

The warmest lane has its turning: The dawn on the darkness waits. Through death's portal, so dark and so lonely. We enter the heavenly gates. Wrong shall by right be supplanted. And justice shall triumph yet. And the flowers of freedom shall burgeon. On the graves of our heroes blood wet.

The hearts that are aching with sorrow Again shall rejoice and be glad. The smiles of contentment and pleasure Illumine the face that is sad. Time heals every wound, 'e'en the keenest. Grief fades like the mist away. And peace floods the spirit once blighted. As the sunlight makes radiant the day.

The patient, oh, love, yet have patience. Endure and be silent awhile! The darkness you walk in will vanish. And on you the bright sun will smile. The night that surrounds you is fleeting. Though the light in the east dawns not yet; Be patient, oh, love, yet a little. Be patient and do not forget!

—E. B. Smith in Minneapolis Journal.

SIX YEARS LOST.

A Woman Who Did Not Know the Strength of Her Love.

"What would we live on, Max?" laughed Sydney Vernon, glancing down at her elegant morning dress, with the pretty slipper peeping from beneath its hem. "It's all very well so to show the practicalities of life, but they are somewhat necessary, for all that, and I have never seen any great evidence of economy on your part, and I am quite sure you have not on mine."

Max Bayard tugged impatiently at his mustache as the girl whom a moment before he had asked to be his wife thus answered him.

He had known her long enough to learn to love her with all the strength of his great heart, to worship her beauty, to follow her constantly with his eyes, knowing but one wish, one hope, that she might be his.

And she fancied, not altogether wrongly, that his love had met some return. Her voice had brightened at his coming. Her eyes had looked at him with a gleam of the watering place, and when her aunt, under whose care she was, if not the young lady herself, looked upon with favor in return.

"I have never had an incentive to economy," Max said in answer. "I have enough to live on and feed my horses, though my tailor's bill does trouble me now and then. I confess, but, Sydney, I will change all that, dear. I can't perhaps give you all the luxuries to which you are accustomed, but you shall not lack for comforts, that I promise you."

"We should be miserable, Max, miserably, both you and I," the girl answered bitterly. "We have not either of us been reared in a school of poverty. I would cry for cake, while you could only give me bread, and you for ale, while I could give you only kisses. Come, be sensible, and let us be good friends."

"Friends? Never!" he exclaimed. "I am starving, and you throw me a stone. Look into my eyes, Sydney, straight and true, and say you do not love me, and I will go away and trouble you no more."

The long lashes drooped low on her cheek. "I cannot quite say that," she answered; "but I will say more. I promised last night to become Mr. Clayton's wife within six months."

Max Bayard's handsome face grew white to the very lips. A look of deadly anger, mingled with something like loathing, crept into it. Sydney shrank from it as from a blow.

"Don't, Max, don't!" she cried. "I couldn't help it. I am very sorry." "You could not help it? You are very sorry?" he repeated very slowly. "Could not help what? Tying with me for your amusement—playing fast and loose with your victim or selling yourself to the highest bidder? Which? You are very sorry for whom? For the man you led on?"

With these words he turned and left her sitting on the sands, and ocean making its low moan at her feet.

"Oh, if it would come on and on and swallow me up!" she wailed in echo. "I love him, I love him! Max, you are right; the man I propose to marry does deserve the pity. But you—oh, my love, you might have spared me your hate! I did it for the best—I did it for the best."

Six years had passed—six years fraught indeed with change.

"If she had been but true to herself and me," Max Bayard had thought when but a few months after the event which had driven him from his native land to find forgetfulness in travel a letter had been put into his hand which had followed him from port to port, announcing that he had fallen heir to a fortune which might have challenged Mr. Clayton's in its magnitude.

"If only she had trusted me," he said bitterly again and again in the lonely hours of the night, despising himself that he could not learn to hate her.

A year afterward he married. His wife was very young and very lovely, but there were depths in his nature that her hand never stirred, and even as she lay with her head pillowed on his breast another haunting face would come between and mid the caressing murmur of her words would sound the echo of the "might have been."

But he loved her very dearly and mourned her very truly when, one short year after their marriage, he laid her away in her grave and took up the burden of life again, with the added responsibility of the tiny infant daughter she had left him.

"Wanted.—A lady to superintend the education of a little girl. Apply between the hours of 4 and 6 at —"

It was in answer to this advertisement and have come, madam, in answer to my advertisement?" he asked cautiously. "No, no," she answered. "There are reasons why it will now be impossible for me to accept the situation offered."

That voice! Had it not too long haunted him to be thus easily forgotten? Would he not know it, even though it sounded above his very grave?

"Sydney! you here?" he exclaimed. "Ah, Mrs. Clayton—pardon me; for the moment I forgot."

Then she threw back her veil. Six years had made little change. It was the same beautiful face, but grown very pale, and the lovely mouth quivered as she spoke.

"Believe me, I would not have intruded myself upon you had I dreamed it was you who had inserted the advertisement. I had not even heard of your marriage."

"My wife is dead," he answered. "But stay," as she arose to go. "Tell me how it happens that you are in necessity. Is Mr. Clayton dead?"

She shuddered. "You mistake," she said. "I did not marry Mr. Clayton. I am Sydney Vernon still."

"You did not marry him?" "No. It is a woman's privilege, you know, to change her mind, but my aunt was very angry and at her death she left me nothing. Your advertisement attracted me. I thought I might learn to love a little girl."

"And you will not learn to love my little motherless child?" he asked. "Accept this position, I beg of you, Miss Vernon. It is only that you should see she is not left to the mercy of nurses and that she has some refining care."

So it was at last decided, and Sydney found the old emptiness of life fled since her heart and hands were full.

She rarely saw the master of the house. One day when she had entered on some errand into his study she had seen hanging over his desk the fair, pictured face of Mabel's mother.

"For hours she sat beside me, changing the cooling bandages upon his brow and fanning his fevered cheeks."

Mabel had come softly in for her good night kiss; then he had fallen asleep, and she had feared to stir, as she might waken him.

"Sydney, why did you not marry Mr. Clayton?" Had he really spoken or was it her own thought which formed the question? No, he was awake now, his eyes resting upon her.

"You have no right to ask me," she said imperiously. "Let the dead past bury its dead."

"No right perhaps—that I admit, but answer me all the same. For the sake of all these starving years let me know the truth."

"Because I did not love him," she answered; then—"because I found myself weaker than I knew."

"Oh, Sydney, if we had known—if we had known the life happiness of the other reason? Was it because you loved me?"

In his voice there thrilled the truth. In that moment she knew herself emptier of his heart than all these years, and gliding from her chair until she fell back on her knees by his side, with her beautiful head close pressed against his heart, while his kisses rained upon her hair, she whispered:

"Because I shall love you while life lasts."

A month later there was a quiet wedding, when, after six years' cruel waiting, Sydney made the life happiness of the man to whom she gave herself, a royal gift, but they always said, with a sigh of deep regret, that in both their lives they had lost—six years—Spare Moments.

Power of Rank.

One day at the Kremlin in Moscow Miss Hapgood, an American lady, was favored with an amusing manifestation of the all pervading influence in Russian life of official rank.

While looking at objects of interest she noticed a large, handsomely bound book flanked by pen and ink on a side table. As she opened the book an attendant, passing upon her hair, she whispered:

"Don't touch that," he said peremptorily. "Why not? If you do not wish people to look at this collection of ancient documents—I at least, I am sure it is what it is—should look it up or label it. Hands off!" retorted the annoyed lady.

"It isn't ancient documents, and you are not to touch it," he said, taking the book out of her hands. "It is strictly reserved for the signatures of distinguished visitors—crowned heads, royal princes, ambassadors and the like."

Then it does not interest me in the least, and if you would label it to that effect no one would care to disturb it," answered the American woman.

Soon after she was joined by one of the powerful officials. "It is strictly reserved for the signatures of distinguished visitors—crowned heads, royal princes, ambassadors and the like."

She refused, he entreated and at last fairly dragged her to the table and stood guard over her while she wrote her name. —Youth's Companion.

THE COST OF JOY.

THE WHIRL OF FASHION.

Gowns made entirely of panne velvet are among the winter fancies.
Winter turbans are wide, as a rule, the trim rolling up some inches away from the crown.

It is quite a fad of the winter to have turbans or English walking hats made of velvet, with fur trimmings to match the costume or redingote.

The beautiful crepes de chine in cream, ivory or pearl white or any of the lovely evening tints are greatly favored among combinations of cloth and corduroy are seen upon a number of the latest Parisian models, designed for walking, traveling and skating costumes.

Velvet costumes made by French ateliers with regular tailor finished skirts are the smartest and most elegant gowns that have appeared this season.

New hats for bridesmaids' wear are formed of white chiffon and ermine fur, with a bunch of shaded roses and a soft white aigret set at one side toward the front of the hat.

So many Russian blouses of baby lamb have been made to wear with skirts of cloth the furriers declare that the tailors and dressmakers have already nearly exhausted their winter supply of the uncut pelts.

Lace as a garniture is still greatly favored, but more in the form of beautiful hair yokes at the edge of the low necked bodice or as oddly arranged appliques and insertions, jacket fronts, flat caps, and revers rather than in full jabots, canopies or gathered ruffles.

Among other elegant creations of French dressmakers are long coats in empire style, formed of the leading shades of finest kid finished cloth, lined with white or very delicate mauve, blue or old rose satin, with standing and cape collars of panne, edged variously with sable ermine, otter, mink or chinchilla fur.

BRITON AND BOER.

General Buller can point to the present conditions in South Africa to corroborate his declaration that he had a hard time down there.—Indianapolis News.

Every once in awhile something happens which causes one to wonder why emotional persons do not pass resolutions sympathizing with the British rather than the Boers.—Chicago Record.

In revolt on the part of the Cape Dutch at the present time would be a more serious matter to England than if it had occurred a year ago. Have Kitchener's methods brought on this danger?—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

In distance and direction it is as if De Wet had moved from Buffalo to the Shenandoah valley, in Virginia, and was now headed for Harrisburg after escaping his foes on the Potomac at Harper's Ferry.—Philadelphia Press.

Lord Salisbury says the war in South Africa must continue until the Boers are whipped. Mr. Kruger says it must continue until his people get their rights. Both sides being willing, there is no apparent reason why the light should not go on.

THE KIDNAPERS.

Had the Cudahy kidnaping been shown on the stage people would have declared that it was too unreal to be believed.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The kidnaping of young Cudahy should be captured at all costs, not because he was the son of a millionaire, but in order to prevent the future kidnaping of any child, rich or poor.—Pittsburgh Press.

Unfortunately Nebraska has no statute against kidnaping, and the law against child stealing applies only to children under 10 years of age. That would not fit this case, as young Cudahy was 16 years old.

The kidnaping of young Cudahy is a matter which calls attention to an exceedingly serious condition of affairs. For some reason or another criminals have become emboldened, and crime of late is distinguished by personal and shocking brutality.

THE JEWEL CASKET.

The pearl rope rides on the very topmost wave in the monde elegant. Where once it measured inches it now threatens to become yards.

A watch of new style appears to be coming in. Not only is the case perfectly flat on both sides, but the edge is also flat, the whole having the form of a thin section of a cylinder.

A new and taking style of collar consists of three to five plain gold chains held in a bar at either end, while close to the lower edge of each chain are attached at short intervals pendants of garnets, turquoise or pearls.

Scarabs are bigger, more ubiquitous and more popular than ever. They are now introduced into belt buckles, brooches, pendants, rings and fobs and are cut in diamonds, opals and their respective matrices, chrysoprase, coral, agate, jade, amethyst, etc., and, instead of all, chalcidony.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Humboldt describes an oak tree which he saw in France which was 90 feet in circumference at the base and was estimated to be 2,000 years old.

The potato, hitherto grown as a tuber under ground, is now being produced like fruit from the stem of the plant. The flavor of these potatoes is excellent.

A few years ago there was on a farm near Stuart, Va., an apple tree which produced at one bearing 130 bushels. It shaded at meridian 90 feet of ground in diameter.

KITCHEN HELPS.

To cleanse a frying pan pour in a little vinegar, heat it over the fire, and all odors will be removed.
If a saucepan after having milk boiled in it is filled with cold water and a small piece of soda and allowed to boil up the pan will clean quite easily.
Don't thrust dishes that have contained eggs, milk, fish or potato into hot water or turn hot water on them. Why? Because the hot water cooks any of them upon the dish, making it harder to wash off. Rinse off with cold water first.

A WIDESPREAD TROUBLE IN SPRING TIME.

Paine's Celery Compound

The Only Remedy That Cures and Saves Life.

One of the most prevalent and fatal of troubles at this season is Kidney disease. It comes on as silently as a cat steals upon its prey, and too often wrecks life before the victims are fully aware of their danger.

Do not disregard the early symptoms of Kidney disease, such as white and backache, constipation, indigestion, with headache and a constant call to make water which has abundant sediment of a bloody color.

The prompt and honest use of Paine's Celery Compound will quickly banish every symptom of disordered kidneys. The great medicine has cured and given a new life to thousands in the past; it will do the same good work for all sufferers to-day.

Mr. M. Maher, Hairdresser, St. John's Nfld., says: "I suffered terribly for two years from Kidney trouble and dyspepsia. I was completely run down and could not eat or sleep. One of the ablest city doctors tended me, but no good results followed his work. Happily a friend advised me to use Paine's Celery Compound. I procured a bottle and the first dose relieved me. I have used eight bottles, and now sleep well, appetite is good, and I am as strong as ever before. I recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all."

A THEATRICAL COUP.
"The other day I saw 'Ten Nights in a Barroom' on a Kansas stage."
"Was it good?"
"Good! Every lady in the audience received as a souvenir a little solid silver hatchet."

A HELPLESS CHILD.

A weak and puny child is badly handicapped in the battle of life. It is isolated from the healthy elements of its little fellow-beings. It cannot partake either of their play or their sturdy work and progress in the world; its whole life is embittered by incapacity and weakness.

Any woman who expects to become a mother ought to know what Dr. Pierce's Sarsaparilla will do for her. It is a powerful blood purifier and safety during her time of trial, and also to secure her in her questing a fair measure of health and strength to the prospective little one.

WARNING.

Don't brag of achievement though wide of mark. For loss of success is just tied to a string.
Messrs. C. C. Richards & Co.,

Gentlemen.—In January last, Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT ON HIM freely to deaden the pain, and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

SAVING A DUVAL.

Maud—Add would you believe it! I actually threw myself at my feet! I was a most worshipful you right down to the ground.

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?
If they are weak and you feel nervous and "lustered," can't sleep, and rise in the morning weary, refreshed, your blood is poor. Strong nerves depend upon rich, nourishing blood, and Sarsaparilla makes the nerves strong by enriching and vitalizing the blood. It gives sweet, refreshing sleep and completely cures nervous troubles. Begin taking it to-day.

Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills.
Rank and riches are chains of gold, still chains.—Ruffini.

Speechless and Paralyzed.—"I had valvular disease of the heart," writes Mrs. J. S. Goodie, of Truro, N.S. "I suffered terribly and was often speechless and partially paralyzed. One dose of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gave me relief, and before long I was able to go about. To-day I am a well woman."

Nothing more completely baffles one who is full of trick and duplicity than straightforward and simple integrity in another.—Cotton.

SORE THROAT
and hoarseness with their attendant dangers may be speedily averted and remedied by the use of Neveline. Excellent to gargle with—ten times better than mustard plaster and more convenient for the outsider, and speedily allays inflammation. Nervousness because it is five times stronger than other remedies—penetrates the tissues instantly, soothes the pain, and cures simply because it's what it is made for. Druggists sell it.

He that will make a good use of part of his life must allow a large part of it to recreation.—Locke.

DEADLY LA GRIPPE
Numbers its victims by thousands, leaves a deadly trail of disease and weakness behind it. You can avert all danger from the deadly malady; you can prevent the disease if you will breathe Catarrhazone. The germ cannot develop where it is used; that is prevention. You can check and destroy its ravages by Catarrhazone by simply breathing it. That is cure. Sold in two sizes, 25c and $1.00, by all druggists, or by mail prepaid on receipt of price. N. C. Posen & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn.

HAPPINESS.

I followed Happiness to make her mine, Pat lovingly took and swinging by vine. She fled; I chased, o'er standing hill and dale, O'er fields and meadows, in the purpling vale. Pursued rapidly o'er the dashing stream, I scaled the dizzy cliffs where eagles scream; I traversed swiftly every land and sea, But always Happiness eluded me.

Exhausted, fainting, I pursued no more, But sank to rest upon a barren shore. One came and asked for food and one for alms; I placed the bread and gold in happy palms. One came for sympathy and one for rest; When, lo, sweet Happiness, with form divine, Stood by me whispering softly, "I am thine."—H. Wade Burleigh in Monthly South Dakota.

QUEER FACTS ABOUT COLORS.

Why the Sea is Blue in Some Spots and Green in Others.
Did you ever notice that there is no blue food? We eat things green and red, yellow and violet—fish or plants in all the colors of the rainbow except blue. Many deadly poisons are blue in color, such as bluestone or the deadly nightshade flower. The color stands in our skin for everything miserable and depressing. But this is only one of a thousand queer facts about colors.

Heat a bar of iron, and the particles of the metal are set in motion, vibrating violently one against another. Presumably the surrounding ether is set in motion in large, slow waves, rolling through the air like the waves of the sea until they break upon our skin and give us the sensation of heat. As the iron gets hotter other waves are set in motion in immense numbers, traveling at more than lightning speed, and these break upon the eye, giving the sensation of red light.

The red-hot iron, getting still more heated, throws out other sets of waves still smaller and more rapid—orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, violet—all the colors of the rainbow. The eye cannot tell one from another. The whole bundle of rays mixed up gives us an impression of white.

That is the glow from the "white hot" iron, and such is the sun's light. Sunlight is a bundle of rays of light—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet, all mixed together. The mixture of all colors is white light; the absence of all colors is utter darkness.

Now, pass a ray of sunlight through a drop of water, and the colored rays are split up and thrown in different directions. The bright shining through many drops of falling rain after a shower is all split up into colors, and the result is the gorgeous rainbow. The scattered spray of a sea wave, or a waterfall or a fountain make little rainbows, caused in the same way.

Each kind of light has its own special uses. The red rays of light make the trees grow and ripen. Monks, if you cut off the red rays plants will grow with golden brown leaves instead of green.

The sea is blue because the water reflects the blue rays of light, but shallow seas are green because the sun's light is mixed with the yellow reflections from sand and stones at the bottom. Green is a mixture of blue and yellow. In this green light of shallow water all sea-weeds grow, and for want of the red rays they have golden and tawny leaves. Green and red seaweeds are the exception, and blue seaweeds are as rare as blue leaves. At any rate, land plants grown under green glass ought to turn golden brown, like seaweeds. They do. Experiment has shown that under green glass plants grow nearly as well as under clear sunlight.

Under red glass nearly all plants grow four times as quickly as under white light, grow to four times their usual height and throw out a fine display of green leaves. This is clear proof that the red rays of sunlight cause the green leaves to grow. This discovery will be of immense help to gardeners who want to force their plants and to farmers trying to induce early crops of vegetables.

Blue glass has a directly opposite effect. Plants will neither grow nor die. They languish, but they remain alive. The blue makes them sleep. The effect is exactly that of moonlight and starlight when all plants take their natural rest.

Forth and Back.
It struck us forcibly the other day when one of our great scholars spoke of a man as pacing "forth and back." How many times have we heard of "pacing" back and forth?

"Though you may contend that this is an unnecessarily small point, yet it is a fact that most people, when starting out to cover a short space, a number of times do not make their first turn backward like a crab.

Invariably do they take a few steps forward, and then, turning, retrace them. Hence they go forth and back, and forth and back and so on until their emotion of exercising is over.

And "if a thing's so," to use one of Kipling's falling reasonings, "why not say so?"

Stop a moment to think of it, and you'll agree that it is ridiculous to start a thing backward and about as easy as to start climbing a tree from the top. Novelists with restless heroes are especially requested to take notice.

Deplorably Cultured.
"Dar is such a thing as beln too smart," said Miss Maud Brown.
"Who's too smart?" inquired Mr. Erasmus Pinkley.
"Miss Jim Colliflower. He's done studied botany. An when I tole him 'I spected de bunch o' greens over my maid was what de white folks calls 'kisslees' he jes' looked at it an said 'twarn' no sech thing.'"—Washington Star.

Keep Cool.
You probably get up on your high horse too easily. The next time you think you have a grievance stop and think it over carefully, and be as fair as possible with the other fellow. It may seem impossible to you that you are not always right, but if you are an average person you are probably wrong half the time.—Atchison Globe.

After the Defalcation.
"I understand," said the reporter, "that the defaulter's method was very simple."
"Very?" said the bank official with a sigh. "He just took the money!"—Puck.

WISDOM OF THE HEN.

Something More Than Mere Sitting Required to Hatch Out the Little Chicks.

A fresh egg has the yolk perfectly balanced in the middle of the white. Unless it remains thus balanced the chances are decidedly against its hatching. Brooding hens understand that. When filling the nest, a hen turns over all the eggs in it before she quits it after laying a new one. She knows, too, that in hot weather the sun will addle her eggs, so she chooses a shady nest-spot. But in winter a nest is often made where the fullest sunshine streams into it. Brooding is throughout full of quaint surprises. Eggs will hatch if kept at blood heat—98 degrees. But they hatch more certainly and turn out stronger chicks if the temperature is kept continuously after the first week at from 102½ to 103 degrees. Just how it is done nobody knows, but mother hens some way continue to raise the normal heat of their bodies to the requisite pitch. Further, they strip the whole breast of feathers, so the eggs may have the benefit of full heat. Twice a day they turn over every egg the nest, and cling to it separately up underneath their beaks, making little soft, half fretful clucking noises the while.

Hens are most uncalculating egg dealers. All eggs in sight will be drawn into the nest, though the stolen eggs may crowd out those legitimately there. Still, in a way, hens take stock of what they brood. With few eggs they sit prim, with trimly folded wings. With too many they sprawl all over the nest, wings loose enough to let light between the feathers, and frequently turn themselves about reaching for uncovered eggs, and drawing them underneath the breast.

A hen of average size cannot profitably cover more than 15 eggs. In cold weather 13 is a better limit. Although in midsummer the same hen might brood and hatch 20. Left to themselves the unchecked instinct of egg-stealing with hens is apt to result in a nest full of spoiled eggs, with maybe one or two feeble chicks.

Twenty-four hours of brooding makes hardly a perceptible change in an egg. Sometimes in warm weather, there is the least reddish tinge beside the whitish clove which the germ lies. After 36 hours the clove shows a well defined drop of very red blood. In two days the blood drop has spread to veins and arteries. At the end of ten days the head is fairly well formed, though the trunk is still rudimentary. In two weeks the chick is recognizable as a chick, and if the shell envelope is broken will quiver all through and feebly move the head. It has, however, no vestige of the feet. The coat it will wear a little later. The coat forms rather rapidly.

The period of incubation for a chicken is 21 days, and for two days before leaving the shell the young fowl is practically perfect. Yet it would not live were the shell forcibly removed. It spends the last two days gathering vital force to make its own way out into the world. It is snug within the shell, the head turned to the right, in a position as brings the beak full against the shell.

The beak is armed with a tiny detachable piece of horn, flint-hard, set upon the still tip of the beak. At full hatching time the chick presses this triangle against the brittle shell, and breaks a triangular hole in it, possibly a quarter inch across. An hour later the chick has turned itself slightly, presses the beak against a new spot and makes a fresh break. As more air comes in the little creature grows stronger. It writes still more strongly in its prison, turning all ways from left to right. In two hours or ten it breaks the shell in a wet and weary sprawl.

Egg production varies enormously. A hen's capacity is about 400 eggs, divided pretty equally through the first three years of her existence.

Death of a Peculiar Character.

A peculiar old man has died at Vienna in his seventy-third year, says The London Express. He died with the reputation of being the most manly man on record.

From his twenty-seventh year he kept accurate account of all he bought, and what he paid for it. In the twenty-seven years of his convivial life he consumed 28,786 glasses of beer.

He gave up drinking in his forty-fourth year, but he continued to smoke constantly, even during his last sickness, raising the number of his cigars to 628,713, or an average of 13,667 a year. Of the whole number some 43,500 were given to him; he bought the rest for £2,500, or about a penny each.

Swallows as Despatch Carriers. This question of employing swallows instead of pigeons to carry despatches is being considered in France. The aptitude of the swallow for the work is by many held to be even greater than that of the pigeon. They fly to a greater height, and are therefore less exposed to being shot, and they travel faster, making good nearly 80 miles an hour, where a pigeon would only get over 50. It is also claimed that they are more faithful, intelligent, and have not, on long journeys, to stop to feed, as the pigeon has.

Order Garden Seeds Now.

Garden seeds should be ordered now, in order to avoid delay in the spring, as seedsmen find it difficult to fill orders promptly after the winter is past. The catalogues contain a great many varieties that could be culled out, but they also contain the latest and newest improved. It is well to try the improved, but where one has a variety that has been tested and found adapted to the soil, it should be retained until the new varieties have been tested on a small scale.

The social evening of the A.O.U.W. drew out, despite the many attractions last Friday night, an overflowing lodge room, when one of the most sensible fraternal events of the winter took place. With Past Master Scullard in the chair, a No. 1 program, assisted by Bro. E. Jordan's gramophone, with every one present and the excellent committee of arrangements, doing their best to make the evening a pleasant one, the meeting was a success. We Rest
Our Right

To leadership in the Clothing business on great values and low prices to the people. We are in it to do our best in clothing for all classes of wearers.

Every way that points to better quality and less price to you we use.
Look to us for greater and better things all the time.

Some dealers who buy their stock from wholesalers will try to make you believe they sell better and cheaper than manufacturers. Don't believe it. It is an impossibility to pay wholesalers 25 per cent. profit and then retail at the same price manufacturers do. Our customers are intelligent enough to know that we can and do do better for them, and that is the reason why our business has gone on increasing season after season, through good times and bad.

It is manufacturing that does it.

It is selling for cash and one price that does it.

It is guaranteeing everything as represented that does it.

It is refunding the money for anything you don't like that does it.

Just now our overcoats and all things belonging to winter are selling at big reductions from regular prices.

THEY MOBBED
THE EX-MONK.

He had to Use a Revolver to Protect Himself.

London, March 5.—An infuriated mob at Shanklin, Isle of Wight, yesterday stormed the platform from which the ex-monk, Victor Ruthven, was delivering an anti-Catholic lecture. Ruthven drew a revolver and kept the stormers at bay for a while, but finally turned and fled. During his flight a bullet was discharged, which traversed the neck and issued from the cheek of one of his pursuers. Ruthven was arrested in the midst of the crowd, and alone in the middle of the crowd, and did not fire until he was forced to do so in self defence. The mob bombarded him with chairs and all kinds of missiles, and there were yells of " Lynch him!" It is hoped that the victim of the shooting will recover. Ruthven's friends think he showed considerable forbearance in only shooting once under such circumstances.
