CHAPTER XXXIII.
OUT OF THE PAST.

A scarlet wave of colour rose and passed over Doris's face, and she shook her head silently.

"Ah! well, miss, you wouldn't have known him for the same person. Perhaps it's the responsibility of this engagement and the marquis's illness.

"He is not here—here at Pescal?" she asked, stopping short suddenly, with a look of alarm.

"Oh, no, miss; or of course he would brought the marquis's message instead of me. Oh, no; it was the marquis's wish that he should come on the Continent quite alone, and Lord Cecil remained—very reluctantly—in England. Of course I should take upon myself to send for him if the marquis got seriously worse. This is the house—villa, as they call it," and he conducted Doris into the miniature palace which his agents had succeeded in renting for the marquis.

Doris waited in the—literally—sable hall, while the valet went upstairs to convey the result of his mission to his master, and she employed the few minutes before his return in composing herself.

She was going, in obedience to his whim, to sit beside the bed of this sick man, who had robbed her of her lover and wrecked all her life, the Marquis of Stoye, at whose request or command Lord Cecil had abandoned her!

"If anyone had told me that I should have done this thing," she mused, in sad wonderment, "with what scorn I should have repelled the suggestion; and yet—I am here. And, what is more wonderful still, I cannot hate him—could not, if I tried. It is because he is so old and ill and helpless and looks so unhappy? Only the wretched can feel for the wretched, they say," and she sighed as she followed the man up the stairs into a carefully shaded room.

The great marquis lay upon a couch wrapped in his velvet dressing-gown, the brightness of which seemed to heighten the effect of his pallid, wasted face, with its piercing eyes shining like brilliants in their hollow, dark-ringed sockets.

He made an effort to rise as she entered, but fell back with an apologetic wave of his emaciated hand.

"You see how helpless I am, my dear!" he said, "worse than when you so generously came to my aid the other day. And so you consent to gratify the sick whim of an old man, and have come to see me!"

Doris drew near and took the hand he extended to her, and as she bent over him a strange, mysterious feeling of pity thrilled through her.

"I am so sorry to see you so weak, my lord," she said, gently; "but you will be better when the weather is cooler."

"Yes, yes," he assented, eagerly. "Oh, yes; I shall get better! It is only a passing weakness! I have been very ill—I told you? Yes, I am very strong. We Stoyes have the constitution and—with a grim smile—"the temper of Old Nick! Yes, I shall get better."

"I have brought you some flowers," said Doris.

The valet came forward with a vase, but the marquis waved him back.

"No," he said. "Give them to me! Give them to me," and he took them from her with a courtly eagerness.

"Ah! beautiful; and you were so gracious as to think of them! They are almost as beautiful as yourself; but not more pure, not more innocent or pure," he added to himself, with a strange, wistful gravity, as his eyes rested on her sweet face, "whose goodness lay open to all men's eyes," as the poet says.

The valet came forward again to arrange the pillows, which had slipped down, and the marquis's face flashed angrily.

"Go, on!" he said, irritably.

The man moved back with unmoved countenance, and Doris leaned forward for you, my lord," she said.

He allowed her to do it, without a word or sign of protest or resentment, and sank back with a sigh.

"Oh, woman, in our hours of ease, Uncertain, coy, and hard to please; When pain and anguish wring the brow, A ministering angel, thou."

"Scott! Walter Scott! I can understand that now—now you are here! Yes, a ministering angel!"

He seemed lost in thought for a moment, then he turned his keen eyes upon her inquiringly.

"You look pale and sad. Have you been in trouble? I have no right to ask, you will say; but curiosity is an old man's privilege, remember, my dear."

"Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upwards," my lord," said Doris, in a low voice.

"Aye," he said, knitting his brows; "Yes. Trouble we make for ourselves; but sorrow must have been unmerited in your case, child. Tell me—" He stopped short and sighed. "I am forgetting," he said. "Why should you tell me? I am not your father—" He stopped again. "Did I tell you that I had a daughter once? She is dead. If she had lived she would have been about your age. I think I wish—" Again he stopped, and the proud lips quivered slightly. "I have neither son nor daughter; only a nephew, who, doubtless, thinks I am an unconscionable time dying; and he is right. It is time that there was a new Marquis of Stoye."

Doris looked down.

"I—I think you do him an injustice, my lord," she said.

He laughed the old cynical laugh.

"If he doesn't, I've no doubt Grace does. Lady Grace Peyton, the girl he is going to marry," he explained, "is a clever girl; too clever for Cecil," and he smiled half-sardoniously. "She will have all the brains, and, perhaps, he will have all the honesty. Yes, I'll say that for him; he may be a fool, but he's no knave. A knave would have been too sharp for us." He put his hand to his brow as if his memory were slipping from him and he was endeavouring to keep a hold upon it: "Did I tell you about him and Lady Grace? I think I told you."

Doris shook her head.

"No, my lord," she replied, almost inaudibly.

"No? I thought—" He paused, and looked round with a helpless sigh. "I have forgotten it now. Spenser Churchill could tell you. It will amuse you." He smiled with childish enjoyment. "I wish I could remember, but I can't. My memory is worse, much worse since my illness," and he sighed again.

"Do not distress yourself, my lord," said Doris. "You shall tell me when you remember it, if you like."

He inclined his head.

"One time, not so long ago, I could remember everything he said, with a forced smile which was infinitely pitiable. 'Not a face or a story but I could carry it in my mind, and now'—he looked at her apologetically—"I have actually forgotten your name, who have been so kind to a feeble old man, my dear."

"Doris Marlowe," said Doris.

He repeated it twice or thrice; then shook his head.

"Yes, a pretty name. I don't think I ever heard it before. My little girl's name was Mary. They wanted to call her Lucy, after her mother; but there has always been a Mary Neville—until now. I told you she died, did I not?"

"Yes, my lord," said Doris, soothingly.

"Y—es," he repeated musingly.

"If she had lived I should have had someone, like yourself, to see me through the last mile of life's race—the last mile. I kept race horses once. I've done and seen everything in my time. Wicked Lord Stoye they called me. But through it all I was never so bad as some—Spenser Churchill, for instance."

"Mr. Spenser Churchill has been very good to me, my lord," said Doris, gently.

The keen, piercing eyes opened up on her with amazement.

"Good to you! Spenser Churchill! Your are jesting, child. He was never good to anyone, man or woman!" He laughed. "Spenser Churchill! Why, it was he who—" He stopped, with a trouble look on his face. "No—I've forgotten—it has slipped me again. It is something Grace was in, too. Clever woman, Grace; too clever for Cecil. But I had my way. Yes, I had my way."

Doris rose.

"I must go now my lord," she said faintly.

"Yes!" he said, wistfully. "Yes, I suppose so. It was very good of you, my dear, to humour an old man's whim. Let me look at you," and he raised himself on his elbow. "You are very pretty. Did I tell you I had a daughter? Yes, yes. I think—it is only a fancy, this—that she would have looked like you. He will be a happy man who wins that beautiful face and gentle heart!"

Doris's face flushed, and her eyes dropped, and his keen ones noted her embarrassment.

"Ah," he said; "there is someone already, is there not?"

"Yes, my lord," said poor Doris in a low voice.

He nodded.

"Yes, yes. Who is he? What is his name? But it's no use telling me; I can't remember, you see. I should like to see him. Will you ask him to come and see me, an old man on the verge of the grave? You can say that though it isn't true. No, I'm worth twenty dead men still," and he raised himself, and glared at the opposite wall with a proud, cold hauteur, which made Doris shrink, for suddenly there flashed upon her mind the night Jeffrey had taken her to Drury Lane, and she had seen the old, stern-looking man in the box; and this was he! She remembered and recognised him now. She rose trembling, and filled with a vague fear.

"Must you go? Thank you for coming time! Remember, tell the fortun-

OTHER TABLETS NOT ASPIRIN AT ALL

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Genuine Aspirin

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, you are not getting Aspirin—Remember this!

Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German interest whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sized "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetacetic-acid-ester of Salicylic-acid.

Belgium's Security Guaranteed.

Bulgaria Will Get Peace Treaty Monday --- Prohibition Passes U. S. Senate --- New Pacific Cable --- British and American Soldiers Will Maintain Order in Fiume.

BELGIUM'S SECURITY GUARANTEED.
LONDON, Sept. 5. The Evening Standard says it learns on the highest authority that Belgium's security in the future is to be guaranteed against German aggression by Great Britain and the United States.

BULGARIAN TREATY COMPLETE.
PARIS, Sept. 5. The peace treaty with Bulgaria was completed by the Allied delegates this afternoon. It will be presented to the Bulgarians on Monday.

PROHIBITION BILL PASSES SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5. The prohibition enforcement bill was passed by the senate to-day with a record vote and virtually in the form it came from the committee the measure now goes to Congress for discussion of amendments inserted in the house bill by the senate.

DEMANDS HANDLING OF PROFITEERS.

OTTAWA, ONT., Sept. 5. Demands for firm handling of the profiteer were again features to-day of the house debates on the address. Mr. Demere's of St. John's Ibeville, thought the problem of the cost of living was of more importance to Canadians than ratification of the peace treaty by the Dominion Parliament. It was high time for the government to take speedy action to avoid further strikes and possible revolution. As ratification of the treaty that according to Demere would result only in Canada binding herself to financial and military participation in any war caused by the dereliction of one of the signatories.

SECOND PACIFIC CABLE.

LONDON, Sept. 5. George G. Ward, vice-president of the Commercial Cable Company who has been in London for the purpose of arranging for the manufacture and laying of a second cable from San Francisco across the Pacific, informed the Associated Press to-day that negotiations had reached a point where a second cable was virtually assured to connect San Francisco by way of Midway Island to the mainland of Japan.

WON'T PURCHASE CHEESE SURPLUS.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 5. The department of Agriculture has received a cable from the British ministry of food which follows: "Food controller has definitely decided not to purchase surplus of this season's exportable surplus of Canadian cheese after twenty thousand tons have been secured." It would appear from this cable that private imports after the 20,000 tons have been secured though not requisitioned or commandeered on arrival as at present will be subject to the importers maximum wholesale selling price of 28 cents per pound.

MUST RETURN SHIP.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 5. The Belgian Government has sent a note to Holland threatening to place an embargo on Dutch shipping unless Holland returns a German ship which left Belgium after the armistice was signed. The vessel was discovered later in the Rhine and returned to the German owners by the Dutch.

KING GEORGE WILL UNVEIL STATUE.

MONTREAL, QUE., Sept. 5. By touching a button at Balmoral Castle which is electrically connected by cable with Montreal, King George to-morrow afternoon will unveil the statue of the late Sir George Etienne Carter on Fletcher's Field.

DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5. The fifth anniversary of the first battle of the Marne and the 162nd of the birth of Lafayette will be celebrated here to-morrow with appropriate ceremonies at which Ambassador Jusserand of France will be the guest of honor. At the morning exercises speakers will include Mr. M. T. Herrick of Ohio who was American ambassador to France when Marshall Joffre hurled back the German armies and saved Paris.

WILL MAINTAIN ORDER.

PARIS, Sept. 5. It is understood that the commission of Allied Generals sent to Fiume to investigate disturbances there in which French soldiers were killed has made recommendations to Peace Conference which include maintenance of public order in Fiume by British and American police force.

C. L. B. Topics.

Thursday night Avalon Battalion paraded at 8 p.m. under the command of Lieut.-Col. Goodridge and acting Adjutant, Captain Avalon Goodridge, with Company Officers, Lieut. Rev. Fletcher F. Miles, A. T. Lewis, Reeves (ambulance corps); Capt. H. Outerbridge (recruits), Paymaster Ash, Quartermaster Williams and Bandmaster Morris, the Battalion Chaplain, Rev. Jacob Brinton, the latter arriving with a visitor, the Rev. Mr. Law, both of whom arrived two late for the opening ceremonies, unfortunately. The Companies A and F and recruits were put through battalion drill under their officers. The educational officer, Lieut. Emerson, was on leave. His department had an increase of 8 scholars last night, showing the lads have a keen desire for more education, as the older the boys grow the more they feel the need of more education. The ambulance class which is in charge of Lieut. Reeves did not meet and the class is being newly organized now. Camp is over and winter work will soon have to be arranged for.

The Lieut.-Colonel Commanding had an application from Rev. H. Kirby during the week at Lamaline to organize a C.L.B. Company there, and as there is every prospect of a large detachment being arranged for the Colonel telegraphed his consent to organize at once, and the Quartermaster is sending the necessary information re forms, etc. We notice in the monthly C.L.B. magazine issued in London for June, there is quite a lengthy article on Newfoundland Brigade news written by Q. and in the July issue there appears the photographs of the late Lieut. Norman Outerbridge, Lieut. W. Ryall, Corporal Herbert H. Outerbridge (of the 7th London Brigade) and Corporal Eric Moore, former members of the C.L.B. and of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment. July copy also has a reference to the resignation of former Lieut.-Col. R. G. Rendell, C.B.E., with a full copy of the resolution passed by the officers' mess of Avalon Battalion when the late Colonel resigned.

Thursday night the armoury had the pleasure of a visit from Sergt. Norman White, a member of the C.L.B. some fifteen years, but now one of the members of a Canadian regiment; Sergt. White enlisting in Vancouver, B.C. Sergt. White was pleased to see old faces and the Brigade still maintaining its high standard of efficiency and expressed himself freely on the benefit of the C.L.B. training he got in his early days which secured him rapid promotion in the Canadian forces. Next week Capt. Raley, M.C., who has accepted duty will report and become Adjutant of the Battalion in St. John's. Next Thursday night the prizes won by the lads on sports' day at camp will be distributed by Lieut.-Col. Goodridge and all lads who have won prizes must report at 8 p.m. sharp, including the lads of G. Company Bishop Field College. Thursday night the following promotions: — Col. Sergt. Dowdell in the Canadian forces. Next week Capt. Raley, M.C., who has accepted duty will report and become Adjutant of the Battalion in St. John's. Next Thursday night the prizes won by the lads on sports' day at camp will be distributed by Lieut.-Col. Forty Years in the Public Service—the Evening Telegram.

The Fag-End Opposition
SOUND THE GOOD OLD BUGLE, BOYS.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—It is really amusing to watch the efforts of our friends of the Opposition in their endeavors to galvanize into movement the body of their party which is in a state of suspended animation. The professional gentlemen who are working overtime on the body, infusing gallons and gallons of ink into the arteries, are now nearly exhausted, but to keep up the spirits of their sympathizers, they pronounce through their press that the days of the present administration are numbered and that Mr. Squires and his mercenaries will sweep the country. Our friends should not be so rash in their prophecies or pronouncements. They should remember the words of Artemus Ward, "Never prophecy unless you are sure the thing will turn out." Seriously, there is no cohesion in the fragments of the several discontented political cabals, which at present convene and hold meetings at irregular periods. The Opposition lacks organization, experience, patriotism, and the people's common sense will operate against political incapacity. Newfoundlanders of to-day cannot be fooled and cajoled by flimsy catch-cries and blatant demagogues, because they are well aware that national greatness depends more on the mentality rather than the sentimentality of our people.

The most laughable part of the programme in the opera bouff, staged by the opposition, is the title of the drama put forward, viz., the "Reformed" Liberal Party. What an insult to the Old Liberal Party which so often marched to victory under the great chieftains Sir William Whiteway, Sir Robert Bond, R. J. Kent, Sir Joseph Little, Honourable A. W. Harvey and the other patriotic gentlemen, who for so many years, successfully guided the destiny of Newfoundland in its uninterrupted march of Progress. And now a coterie of political cobblers have arrogated to themselves the title of defenders of liberalism. Was there ever such an exhibition of presumption and impudence? The Great Liberal Party are not dead in this country. They watch events as closely and as keenly to-day as they did in the days when they marched forward under the banner of Progress, led by their patriotic chiefs whose memory they cherish to-day. But they are not going to join the ranks of political tyros who are endeavoring to seize the reins of power for their own aggrandisement, and by their bungling and incapacity, cause ruin and misery to our country and our people. Ah, no! The so-called Opposition must exhibit a better display of intelligence and capability, men of more stamina, patriotism and experience than we have before us to-day, before the Old Liberals and their descendants will agree even to attend one of their meetings, much less march under their banner, the name of which has been stolen, when they style it the "Reformed" Liberal Party. The Liberals have sized up the two parties, the Government under the leadership of Sir Michael Cashin, and the political mercenaries under Mr. Squires to-day and somebody else to-morrow, and they would be recreant to their duty if they did not support the big-hearted liberal Cashin in preference to the small-minded, ambitious and inexperienced Squires. So Liberals—

Sound the grand old bugle boys, we'll sing another song—
Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—
Sing it as we used to sing it, fifty thousand strong,
When we went marching to Victory.
TERRA NOVA.

Mining Activities.

At Little Bay mining activities continue, though during July they were somewhat hampered through the shortage of coal. A tunnel is being driven from the Right towards the old mine. They have gone about two-thirds of the way, and we understand expect to reach the old workings before next spring. After which new shafts will be sunk.
At Gill Pond large bodies of ore have been located, of a very satisfactory quality, and prospects are bright for the future of that property. A road is to be built to the bottom of Hall's Bay, a distance of fourteen miles. The mine is located just half way between Hall's Bay and Millertown Junction.
Capt. D. McGuish, who had been visiting his home in Cape Breton, returned a few days ago and is again vigorously conducting coal mining operations at Howley. Coal of a first grade quality is being taken from the workings there, and the A. N. D. Co. are sparing no effort to ascertain the quantity of black diamonds available in that locality.
We learn that an option has been taken on an iron property on this coast, and prospecting operations are now in progress.—Western Star.

The Work Horse Parade.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Mr. Editor,—A word about the Work Horse Parade organised by the Society for Protection of Animals. God bless those who defend the helpless. The moving spirit in this parade as in that of 1914, was Mrs. Goeling, the Lady of our Mayor. She was the dea in machina, and the Colony has to thank her for many like good works. Other Directors of the Society such as Messrs. Baxter, Macpherson, and Williams, gave yeoman service. It should be remembered that the Society's object is solely to benefit the work horses, and, incidentally, to show the drivers that it is their friends so long as they treat their animals well. The public, no less than those who conducted this very successful parade, owe cordial thanks to their Excellencies who put the grounds of Government House at the disposal of the Society for the purpose of the parade.
Yours truly,
ONE WHO KNOWS.

At the Majestic.
Majestic patrons were delighted with last evening's show. George Beban, impersonating the Italian in "One More American," was just splendid and drew down the house in spontaneous admiration and applause. Beban is a wonderful actor and carries his part with a skill very rarely seen on the screen. This is his first appearance in this country but all who saw him last evening are unanimous in hoping that it will not be his last. Many parts of "One More American" were most pathetic and more than one in the hall saw them with wet eyes. The scenes wherein the Italian-American is being separated from his pretty young wife and child by the ward political boss, are a masterpiece of art and cannot but impress the beholder. Altogether the picture is one of the best, if not the best—to be screened in Newfoundland. Two other pictures were also shown last night—a cartoon and a comedy. Both were high-class ones. The same show will be repeated again this evening, when all who attend are assured a splendid show.

AND THE BOYS WEREN'T WHOLLY TO BLAME.

RUTH CAMERON

Did you read in your newspaper a few weeks ago the story of how two young boys of 18 or 19 tried to slide down the cog railway on Mount Washington on a plank, and were killed?

Doubtless you did, and were shocked and horrified like the rest of the reading public at the perfectly needless waste of young life—the absolutely unnecessary anguish for mothers' and fathers' and sisters' and brothers' hearts.

Yet if the boys had succeeded in this daredevil stunt, what would you, what would their friends have said? Ten Would Probably Have Encouraged By Admiration.

You and they would probably have laughed indulgently and said, "The young daredevils! What won't these youngsters do?" In fact, many of their friends would probably have gone beyond the indulgent to the admiring. And perhaps some enterprising moving picture house would have gotten them to do it again for film purposes.

There was a third boy who refused to try this wild stunt. He walked down. He is alive to-day and everyone commends him for his common sense in realizing that the plank would not hold to the rails. But if, by some miracle, the others had survived at the bottom alive, would people have admired him? No, they would probably have thought he lacked proper spirit and "pep."

There is unquestionably something brilliant about the dare-devil trait in human nature, something dazzling—but also something flashy and mercenary.

The World Does Rightful Homage To These.

To brave death to save another's life or to demonstrate some scientific truth or to add to the knowledge of the world, is very splendid. The world does homage to those who can think lightly of their own lives for a high purpose. But to risk death (or mutilation) and all the unhappiness that it would bring others, for no higher purpose than to show how "brave" and smart you are—surely there is nothing fine, but everything that is cheap, childish and unbalanced about that.

I call a boy who refused to take that slide which his judgment showed him was a foolhardy thing to do, the bravest of the three.

The Foolhardy Swimmer is Both Silly and Selfish.

Furthermore, such risks, foolish risks, often involve others—as, for instance, in the case of a foolhardy swimmer who goes beyond his strength and then either receives assistance from those who risk their lives (and perhaps lose them) to save his, or leaves the bystanders under an imputation (unfair, I think) of cowardice.

I think the public attitude towards foolhardiness when it is successful, is altogether too lenient. If we could make these boys feel that they were doing something cheap and silly and childish when they gamble their mothers' and fathers' happiness—the debt they owe their parents for their upbringing, as well as their own lives—for the sake of a moment's excitement, I think we would help stop that sort of thing.

True, one does not want youths (or men or women of any age, for that matter) to stamp out the spark of adventure. But one does want them to use some judgment and some sense of values in selecting the adventure.

Rod and Gun.

A splendid series of photos of Canadian Nature Life are now running in Rod and Gun in Canada. The first of these shows a male loon and appears in the September issue which is now on sale at the news dealers.

"Our Old Elusive Friend, The Black Duck" is the title of Bonnycastle Dale's splendid article that appears in this issue. Other valuable stories and articles are entitled: "Three Men and Three Women," by M. Parkinson. "The Making of a Shooter," by Edward T. Martin; "The Buck Bass," by Archie P. McKishine, the well-known Canadian writer. Dr. William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park is the author of a thought compelling article on Conservation dealing particularly with the rational utilization of game. The Departments of the magazine dealing with the various outdoor activities of rod and gun are up to their usual high standard. A splendid picture of Joe Jennings of Toronto winner of second place at the Chicago International Tournament appears in the Trap Department. Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly at Woodstock, Ont., by W. J. Taylor, Ltd.

THE TREES.

The trees have music of their own, a soft and soothing monotone, that lulls a man to rest; I have a volume to peruse, but, under them, I snore a snore, my chin upon my breast. To sit beneath a swaying birch is much like being in a church; your drowsy eyelids close; and to the realms of dreams you lie, until an active, loathsome fly camps down upon your nose. How often I have lain awake until I saw the morning break, and slumber would not come; and I would sadly leave the hay, to face another toilsome day, all punk and things of dread, I toss around upon my bed, and find no comfort there; but when I sit beneath a tree, the sweet restorer comes to me, its coattails in the air. The trees have voices sad and sweet, their world-old music they repeat, a solemn, sylvan choir; the same old song they used to sing when Earth was but a half-baked thing, and mortals worshipped fire. They croon their mournful lullaby while men are born, grow up and die, they sigh with every breeze; and when I quit this vale of tears I hope to sleep a million years beneath the nodding trees.

A Giant Spider.

What would you think of a great black spider, so large that when his great hairy legs are stretched out he covers a place as large as your hand? "Tarantula" is the name of this ugly, interesting spider. The female tarantula digs a round hole in the hard ground with her long black fangs. Then she spins a soft round sac to cover her eggs. If we try to take the sac from her home she will run up and sieve it, pulling with all her strength. Then when the little tarantulas hatch, the hole will be swarming with the little black spiders, tiny copies of their great fierce mother.

Every night when you are safe in your bed these spider mothers go out to hunt for supper. What do you suppose they find to eat? A spider mother will walk around until she finds a fine, fat juicy bug. Then she holds him securely with her strong black fangs and carries him home. Mother tarantula prefers to eat at home; we can find the shells of the bugs she has eaten about the mouth of her home.

Both the mother and the father tarantula are very, very poisonous, but if we let them alone they will not harm us. We are not apt to get bitten, because when we are wide awake in the daytime these mother tarantulas are fast asleep in their snug homes in the earth, and these homes are in the South-land.

When mother tarantula is at home she spins a nice soft web across the mouth of her home. I suppose this means in tarantula language, "Keep out!"

A Consistent Record.

Lord Salisbury's famous remark that Great Britain backed the wrong horse in the Crimea at once suggests itself in connection with the reports that Koloahak's army is in bad straits and that the whole movement threatens to collapse. One thing is to be said in praise of the allied policy toward Russia. It has been consistent. No diplomatic mistake that could have been made has been overlooked and no diplomatic blunder has been omitted. From the beginning of the Russian revolution the Allies have managed to work against themselves with an effectiveness that is almost superhuman, and if Koloahak now proves to be a broken reed the record of well-meaning failure will remain unmarred.—N. A Tribute to Newfoundland.

We take the following from the Western Star, and although the writer is unknown to us, we consider the article of sufficient importance to give it a leading position in our issue of today. Newfoundland has had so many hard knocks in times past, that it is indeed a pleasure for us to give space to such a tribute from an outsider:

A visitor to Newfoundland cannot fail to be struck by the intense love of country in the breast of every true Newfoundlander. And the people of this ancient colony have, indeed, a motherland worthy of their pride and their love. This country stands at the dawn of a great era of progress and development. The prospect of valuable mineral wealth stored in the soil, to which the richness of the sea, are all coming true. You have not merely iron ore but coal and oil which promise fortunes, and in your forests is pulp wood enough to supply the world with paper.

In a population which has a genius for handling ships and for fisheries of every sort, it is not to be wondered at that a stranger finds rare powers of determination and bold initiative. Just as the soldiers of Newfoundland in France have published these qualities to the world on land, the men whom the Colony has given to the Royal Navy have spread abroad the skill and the courage of the best sailors in the world.

There is, perhaps, no country in which a man's vote means more; that is to say, the mind of the elector is remarkably independent. He is not going to be cajoled or coerced by anything but his own satisfied reason. He has no love of a monopoly, and he will find in time—if not immediately—a way of bringing the profiteer to justice. As schools improve and travel increases and newspapers spread enlightenment and the ministry of your devoted and hard-working pastors bears rich fruit, it will go still harder with men who are now making all they can out of their fellows.

The thinking of the Old World and the New by airplane for the first time via Newfoundland, is merely a symptom of what is shortly to come, when Newfoundland will be in what is virtually an immediate contact with Canada and the United States. The airplanes and the dirigibles promise to Newfoundland in future days a tourist traffic of enormous dimensions, which will be a source of vast wealth to a country that abundantly deserves to prosper.

Presentation at Re-Establishment School

Yesterday at the Re-establishment School, a very pleasing break occurred in the daily routine, when the pupils of their respective classes presented two of the retiring teachers, Mr. Greenland and Mr. Hearn, with a neat address, accompanied by a valuable present, as a mark of affection and esteem in which they are held by the pupils, as well as an appreciation of the good work they have performed. Sergt. Thomas Ricketts, V. C., made the presentation. The teachers, although taken completely by surprise, expressed in a few well chosen words their thanks and appreciation of the gift, which, they assured the pupils, they would cherish for years to come. Mr. Greenland and Mr. Hearn, both returned soldiers, are leaving at an early date to pursue their chosen professions in the United States of America. We wish them every success.

Football Notes.

The Football League has decided to close the season's programme with a big series of games next week, which will take the form of a competition on the knock-out system, between all the teams of the League Cup. The games for this have been arranged as follows: Saints vs. Collegians. The opening match will take place on Monday evening next, at 6.15 sharp; the second game on Tuesday. On the afternoon of the whole holiday on Wednesday, it is proposed to have a double header. The first game will be the one which was deferred from the opening of the season, namely the match between the city team and one from the regiment.

Paper Town Wins Ball Game.

GRAND FALLS, Sept. 5, 1919. Special to The Evening Telegram. The Grand Falls Fans turned out in masses this afternoon to witness the fourth game of the Inter-town series. The St. John's team went down to defeat by a score of 8 runs to 5. The game opened with Carew occupying the mound for the City team. He pitched fairly good ball but received very little support from his teammates, repeated errors by Hiltz and Munn, allowing four runs in the first inning. Hall replaced Carew in the second inning but errors from the same positions allowed two more runs to score. Callahan replaced Munn in the third. The City team started a batting rally in the third inning, which netted them four runs before being retired. Darby Pitcher was taken out of the box after this inning and Foran finished the game for the Paper City. Braine's running catch in the fifth inning, with bases full, was the outstanding feature of the game. Should Grand Falls win to-morrow morning they will be the cup-winners for this year.

Tourists Tour Country.

Enthusiastic in Praise—Bowring Park and Topsail Scenery Best Ever Seen. A party of tourists, now here on the Rosalind, was taken to Bowring Park yesterday by the big Park motor bus. They enjoyed the scenery there and declared that it excelled that of Halifax and other nearby resorts. This morning the party motored to Topsail in the same bus and enjoyed the scenery there. The Bay was in a pretty fair condition, but even at that the members of the party said that it was the best they had ever seen. Some of them took photographs. This party will no doubt take away a good impression of Newfoundland with them. They are the Newfoundland strike force while the weather was fair. Every other time there was either fog or rain. Cinderella of the Empire? surely!

Prospero's Passengers.

S.S. Prospero arrived in port at 12.30 to-day, bringing the following first-class passengers:—Messrs. Wright (3), Rev. Give MANHATTAN BAKING POWDER a trial.

McMurdo's Store News.

SATURDAY, Sept. 6, 1919. Many people who suffer from headaches of the nervous and neurologic type find the best relief from the use of some quick evaporating application like that de cologne applied to the head or temples. Taylor's Headache Cologne is specially designed to fit such cases, and if applied and inhaled this preparation will often give almost instant relief. We recommend this Cologne to sufferers from headache and neuralgia. Price 50c. a bottle.

Newfoundland Girl Flies Over London.

Miss Ethel Darby, of this city, who is one of the party of 84 young ladies now on a tour through Europe as the guests of the Halifax Herald, enjoys the honor of being the first Newfoundland girl to fly over London, and possibly, the first to fly at all. The party of six enjoyed the thrill a couple of days ago.

Cleanliness, Quality, Service

The number TWO looks big to us this month.

It stands for our second anniversary and it represents two big years of hard work and exceptional success.

Of course we are happy. There is no greater joy than the joy of work well done—nothing surpasses the inner satisfaction which follows actual accomplishment.

Happiness and gratitude go hand in hand. We thank all our friends for their patronage and friendship.

At top of this ad. we have spread three words which we might call the "Big Three" of Johnson Success. They are Cleanliness, Quality and Service, and our friends can count upon us to keep these ideals always in mind so that each new anniversary will show continued progress toward our chosen ideal of "Good Service to the Buying Public."

We're off to make the third year a record breaker for ourselves and for you.

Like all good business men we want to exceed past achievements, and we intend to do it by using the good old-fashioned plan of giving better service to the Buying Public.

That has always been our idea. To keep on doing things better and better day after day. It is on that basis we are building our business and it's a plan that benefits everybody concerned including all those who do business with us.

So here's the slogan for our third year:

"Biggest Business Through Better Service."

PIETERMARITZBURG, Sept. 5. (Reuters.)—It had been intended to banquet General Hertzog and his party on the evening of their return to South Africa, but at the last moment, owing to anxiety in certain quarters, the arrangements were changed and the banquet was held, instead, in the afternoon. The change was not known generally, and Hertzog and the other guests entered without incident, but some inkling of the event must have leaked out, for during the afternoon crowds of workmen and others gathered to watch the Nationalist leaders leave the hall. When they did they were pelted with rotten eggs. Hertzog himself did not appear, having left the building quietly beforehand. The crowd discharged squibs and sang the National Anthem but eventually dispersed. A proposed Nationalist meeting on the market square is now not likely to be held, in view of the feeling among the workers.

ENTENTE NOTE TO ROUMANIA. The note of the Supreme Council which Sir George R. Clark, of the British Foreign Office is carrying to Bucharest, contains cordial language according to "Petit Parisien" to-day. It says that the communication recalls to the Roumanian cabinet engagements that it had entered into and urges the necessity of their being kept. It is said by the Journal that the clerk is taking with him radiograms which the Roumanian delegation is reported to have sent from Paris to the Roumanian Government within the last two weeks, but none of which reached their destination. As to the new Allied note, the Journal says that it declares that the peace conference considers Roumania as a faithful friend and expresses the wish that the Government may not detach itself from the body. The Allies request an explanation on various points, and ask that Roumania evacuate Hungary speedily and meanwhile cease requisitioning supplies while putting material already at the Allies' disposal for the purpose of making just division of it amongst various nations with claims against Hungary. The note is said to end by asking Roumania to co-operate with the Allies in re-establishing order in Hungary.

A Tribute to Late Andrew McDonald.

The letter we publish below was recently received in the city by a gentleman, who, knowing the friendly relations that existed between our late Prime Minister, Lord Morris and the late Mr. McDonald, sent him a cable notifying him of his death:—

12, Maresfield Gardens, Hampstead, London, N.W. 3, 15th July, 1919. My dear Friend:—It was most thoughtful of you to send me a cable of the death of my dear old friend, Andrew McDonald. As I read your message memories of nearly forty years crowded upon me. It is now over thirty-five years since I made the acquaintance of our old friend; his death removes the last landmark from Kilbride of that generation of fine old patriots who fearlessly performed what they conceived to be their duty.

From my first offering for the constituency of St. John's West, Kilbride was one of my strongholds. In the election of 1885 I stood alone on the Opposition ticket, and had strong popular opponents and Church and State arrayed against me, but I had loyal true friends whom neither pulpit nor press could sway in their pledged determination of support. I led the poll, I think, by something like six hundred and fifty votes. The Kilbride booth established a record which in no subsequent election was attained. There were eighty-nine votes polled and eighty-nine voters marked their ballots for me. In those days, of course, it was open voting. I had sixty-nine plumpers, and the rest in split votes. That was my first encounter with Kilbride and in the thirty-five years that have since intervened I always secured at least nine-tenths of the votes, and my colleagues associated more closely with Kilbride than with any other part of the District, and I shall burn the fathers of the village with Kilbride in the memory of mine. On my first Kilbride Committee, Redmond Aylward, Andrew McDonald, James Doyle, John Finlay, Denis Moran and William Sinnott served, the last name being my first Chairman. These became not only friends, but I did all their professional work for them, they settled their affairs and followed them to the grave.

In later years the sons followed in their fathers' footsteps, the younger men such as Edward Walsh, Stephen Brennan, Mike Murphy and Pat Brian did yeoman service for me and my colleagues. The subject of your cable was a remarkable man in more ways than one, gifted with unusual intelligence and an intellect seemed in no way impaired as age when I first knew him, and notwithstanding this, he was Chairman at my last election at Kilbride and his intellect seemed in no way impaired. He made a speech, which, in point of structure and matter, could not easily be excelled. I will remember on my first election we could not obtain the use of the school room, indeed, we received a point blank refusal. The powers that be were all in favor of the other side. Then it was that these old veterans showed their mettle. They harnessed their horses, went to town and brought home large ships' sails, and erected an improvised hall, which was packed at the meeting, with voters from Kilbride and the whole countryside.

I have said Mr. McDonald was no ordinary man. In '89 our political battle was fought between the Liberal party and the party led by Sir Robert Thorburn. As usual, Mr. McDonald was doing great service for the Liberal cause, and brought the war into the enemy's camp by going down and addressing a meeting from his milk cart in Cliff's Cove, almost within hearing of Sir Robert Thorburn whose office was nearby. I was holding a meeting that evening at Broad Cove, and when I returned I learned of my friend having been incarcerated for obstructing the public highway, having refused the police to abandon his project. I communicated with General Fawcett, and he promptly liberated our hero. I went to the police station, and with an immense crowd, we led forth the triumphant Hampden to receive the plaudits of the crowd, and escorted him to his home. But now the Heaper has paid His visit, he has polled his last vote, and fought his last battle, his tollown hands rest forever on his fearless breast.

"The breezy call of incense breathing morn, The cock's shrill clarion, No more shall rouse him from his lowly bed, For him no more the blazing hearth Or busy housewife ply her evening care, No children run to 'tis their sire's return, Or climb his knees, the ev'ning kist to share, Or did the harvest to his sickle yield, His rattle of the stubborn blebs has broke, How jocund did he drive his team afield, How hallow'd the woods beneath his sturdy stroke."

He was indeed my ideal "chillag Hampden" that with dauntless breast the little tyrant of his fields withstood." He required only the opportunity, and he would easily command the "appliance of listening senators," but Destiny placed him in the more retiring walks of life, where—

"Far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife, His sober wishes never learned to stray, Along the cool, sequestered vale of life, He kept the noiseless tenor of his way."

He was blessed with a long life, passing the span allowed by the Psalmist, and lived to see his children and grandchildren grow up and settle around him, whilst at the same time increasing his store of acres and flocks and herds, and must have died a comparatively well-to-do man. He had more than outlived his generation. He was the last leaf on the tree.

"The mossy marbles rest On the lips that he had pressed In their bloom, And the names he loved to hear, Had been carved for many a year, On the tomb."

After I went to live at Beaconfield in 1890, now nearly thirty years ago,

I rarely came into town on Sundays, and usually went to Mass, on Wednesdays, and on the Sundays at Kilbride. I have often walked back from church with my old friend, and rambled over his farm with him, and was most fond of the point of crops and cultivation. It was beautifully situated in a hollow of the lovely Kilbride Valley, and surely, if the spirits of the happy dead are permitted to see their abodes in this world, he must sometimes look across from his last resting place in the little cemetery at Kilbride, and feast his eyes on that lovely landscape which, whether in the purple shades of evening or gilded by the earliest light of the morning sun, is not excelled in beauty by any of the lovely spots on the earth that has been my privilege to see, either along the historic Rhine, or in the old land from which he himself came, and which he so dearly loved.

Very few appreciated my old friends great mental powers. To most people he was only an old farmer, who went into town the last seventy years with his milk, but to me, who spent many hours in his company, in his home, where I grew up, he was a man, and one of his family, I learned to recognize in him a man of great powers of observation, a poet of Nature, a philosopher constantly seeking the cause of God's wonders spread abundantly around him. The ripening fields, the crops he annually garnered into his barn, were not to him mere articles of commerce. They were proofs of a great living Engineer who has his hand ever on the work of the world, the waterless weed on his farm had its appropriate value and place, and if not so generally regarded, it is because we lack the understanding of his use, his needs and the cold North Easter, which kept the growth back, or the drought which led to the short crops, or the insect pests which killed the young of the young plants. None of these called forth a murmur; he took everything as it came, and blessed the great Giver of all.

No more will these great drawbacks to the husbandman trouble him. He has gathered his last harvest, looked for the last time at the gleaming shadows of the harvest moon. When the Spring returns, and ploughing and seeding is again with us he will no longer follow the plough, or sow the seed, but the dew on his grave will ripen the wild grass and flowers he loved so well, and which spoke so eloquently to his mind, as he rose to God. The loving herbs will return as of yore in the evening, his children will reap the crops that he sowed. All those things will form no more a toil. I am sorry I could not have been by the couch of my old friend, to have grasped his hand for the last time, but I am sure his weary eyes must have feasted in his last vision, and been gladdened by seeing some of our happy Kilbride celebrations, and heard the cheers of his plough, as he rose from his chair, took off his coat, and girded himself for the fray. I again thank you for your thoughtfulness in remembering to me in this matter, and will be grateful if you will see that the enclosed letter is handed to the members of Mr. McDonald's family. Yours faithfully,

(Signed) MORRIS.

Show Ex-Kaiser Weak and Vain.

Admiral Foss, in a New Book on the German Collapse, Tells of Wilhelm's Freaks.

(By Julian Grande in N. Y. Times.)

Admiral Foss, in his book "Revelations Concerning Our Collapse," devotes a long chapter to the fallen German Emperor. He is very anxious to explain that he is not kicking a man who is down, because in 1902 he held and has since expressed, both verbally and in writing, views about the ex-Kaiser precisely similar to those which he now sets forth. In many respects Admiral Foss merely confirms the opinion already formed by most impartial persons about William II—that he is an abnormal and very mixed character, quick in the uptake, and fascinating when he chooses so to be, but morbidly vain, very superficial and very ungrateful, with an inordinate idea of his own importance, and convinced that he is capable of a great deal of which he is wholly and constitutionally incapable. Always highly nervous, not to say neurotic, so much so, indeed, that more and more persons competent to judge consider him as having long been not quite in his right mind, he has suffered greatly during the latter part of the war from convulsive attacks.

After reading Admiral Foss's chapter on William II—a chapter which it must be admitted is not embittered—it is impossible not to reflect that pomp, publicity and ceremony were as his very life blood to the ex-Kaiser, and that no one could less easily endure the quiet life of a private person, whether at Amerongen or elsewhere. He has not, according to the Admiral, perseverance and diligence enough to master any study, not to speak of so delicate a matter as statecraft. He has always been profoundly interested in something for a time, but only for a short time; then he must needs fly off to something else. Such a man could hardly console himself by absorption in any subject.

Failed at Critical Moments.

As Admiral Foss reminds us, the ex-Kaiser went through life thumping his fist, often metaphorically but sometimes literally, on the table, and saying, "I will have this" or "I must have that," or "This, that or the other must be done." Yet when the time came for taking prompt, firm decisions, he was invariably found wanting—a deficiency which the ex-Admiral primarily attributes to William II's lack of nerves. Moreover he could not bear the thought of others doing things and getting the credit therefor, and could not believe that any technician or expert might know more about something than he did himself.

For instance, Admiral Foss relates that when the German Admiralty Office asked for plans to be submitted for the construction of a battleship, the ex-Emperor immediately wanted to send in his design. A technical expert was deputed to help him, who very unfortunately had not been engaged in practical work for some time past, and consequently was "rusty." Thus when the ex-Kaiser's plan for the battleship was examined, it was found that, had the vessel ever been constructed and launched, she would immediately have toppled over. Again, two learned experts were one day summoned to the ex-Emperor to advise him about some important work in progress. He received them charmingly, but what was their astonishment when he delivered them a lecture lasting two hours, and then they had to leave without being able to get a word in edgewise. In a word in ex-Emperor, as they were leaving, one looked at the other and said aghast: "We might have saved ourselves this expedition."

Admiral Foss, however, is far too much distressed by the straits to which Germany has been reduced, largely (as he thinks) owing to the obstinacy and self-sufficiency of her ruler, to have any inclination to laugh or to see the humorous as well as the serious side of William II's escapades and tactless speeches. The old Admiral quotes a long series of his former imperial master's sayings, beginning with 1859 and continuing until far on into the war, and it is only when these speeches and sayings are read thus, one after the other, year after year, steadily progressing in foolishness, that their arrogance, provocation, we might almost say craziness, is fully brought to light. They were, of course, largely destined to irritate Britannia, who, however, sat quietly by, looking on smiling, and only once made a remark. This was when Wilhelm II sent a telegram to the Czar of Russia, in which "the Admiral of the Atlantic" sent his best wishes to "the Admiral of the Pacific." Britain, then gently but officially reminded the ex-Kaiser that not he but Lord Fisher was Admiral of the Atlantic.

Admiral Foss says he remembers that, after a long series of these fulminating discourses, a French-Swiss observed: "Your Emperor is threatening the whole world." I believe this French-Swiss was none other than a well known and charming old Genevese professor, still alive, and much absorbed since the war in Red Cross work.

Attitude Toward Americans.

The ex-Kaiser is also accused by Admiral Foss of having run after American and other money kings, and of having shown scant courtesy to a certain American Ambassador to Berlin, who, not being very well off, had to live simply, and could not make a great display.

Again, the Admiral tells us that when Prince Henry visited the United States and was received very courteously, not, however, as the brother of the German Emperor, but as the grandson of Queen Victoria, the ex-Kaiser did not perceive this distinction with a difference, and took all the attentions for himself. Similarly, when the late Colonel Roosevelt visited Germany the ex-Kaiser was very anxious to do him reverence, and even named a battleship after his daughter; but he did not see that Colonel Roosevelt took his measure, as was proved by his anti-German attitude during the war.

Admiral Foss does not hesitate to accuse the ex-Kaiser of continually interfering with the plans of the German General Staff, at any rate during the first year or two of the war, and this because he feared that a victory might be won with which he could not and would not be credited. The German people and their representatives, he admits, however, were mainly responsible for the ex-Kaiser and his follies, much more than the German Constitution with its insufficient restrictions on the power of the monarch. The German people and their representatives, until almost the very last, applauded their Kaiser's actions, and made him constantly mistake his folly for wisdom. After a time, therefore, he could never be brought to believe that he was not infallible or that he was often very unwise.

When matters in Germany were becoming very serious, we are told, and becoming so largely owing to William II's ill-judged interference, the then King of Bavaria took upon himself to make representations to his fellow-sovereign of Prussia, and an extremely lively conversation resulted, apparently in the presence of a considerable number of courtiers and other witnesses. It ended by the Bavarian monarch exclaiming: "You'll have to answer to history for that," leaving the room and banging the door behind him. As matters did not improve, a number of anxious, patriotic Germans waited upon the ex-King of Bavaria in Munich, and their spokesman told him plainly that no improvement could be expected unless his Bavarian Majesty would thump on the table with his fist and shout: "This damned dirty business must stop!" to which the old King answered, smiling: "But, I've done that already." At present ex-King Ludwig is ending his days in German Switzerland, his mind quite unbinged owing to all that he has gone through.

Admiral Foss assures us that the ex-German Emperor was the incarnation of most of the chief faults of the German nation. He was a weak man, indeed; the only strong thing about him was his language. It would have gone better with him had he remembered the famous saying: "It is not the anointing oil which makes Kings. Kings make themselves, or else they remain scoundrels, the most evil of all brewers of strife."

Record Novels.

Nowadays the short novel is in vogue as well as the short story. Occasionally a novel runs to 100,000 words, and sometimes a little over, but 80,000 is about the limit as a rule.

Martin Chuzzlewit and Dombey and Son probably run to 400,000 words.

The longest novel in the English language is Richardson's Clarissa Harlowe, published in 1749. It was originally issued in eight volumes. It runs to over 800,000 words!

But even this is far surpassed by Mlle. de Scudery's famous novel of the seventeenth century, La Grand Cyrus. This ran to ten volumes, and was translated into English and appeared in five folios of 500 pages each. Yet it was read widely.

Then there was La Capreneche, who wrote Cleopatra. This novel, which found hosts of readers, actually ran into twenty-three volumes.

Benefits From Prohibition.

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island—The city has become a much better and cleaner one since July 1, according to Maj. H. M. Taylor, head of the Salvation Army here. He declared that the city has enjoyed the most remarkable two months, since prohibition went into effect, since he has been in charge of the Providence work. One of the effects noticed, he said, is that men stick to their jobs longer than was the case before July 1.

The Great Powers Still Rapacious.

During the late war, and especially during the hardest and most doubtful phases of it, there was a great deal of talk about destroying militarism forever and banishing artillery and U-boats from off the face of the planet. This was to be the last war the world would ever see, and if Germany and German militarism were only crushed, then the world would enter upon a new era; the sword would be hammered out into the plough-share and the cannon converted into a steam-thresher! The millennium of peace would be immediately ushered in, and all the nations would at once proceed to disarmament. But now that the war is over, what do we see? The Allied Powers are out to grab all they can for themselves. Each one has to have its slice of the enemy's colonies and they are ready, as in the case of Plume, to abuse and fight one another for its possession. There is absolutely no talk now of destroying militarism. Military power being now in the right hands, is regarded as a good thing, and nobody thinks of disarming. In fact huge armies must be maintained to keep the enemy down and to enforce the decrees of the League of Nations. Meanwhile men of vision are dismayed at the prospect of what a future lies before humanity. Dr. Charles Gore, Anglican Bishop of Oxford, writing in the Christian Commonwealth of London, says:

"Certainly the situation is one when all who really are for the maintenance of peace, for the principle of unification, have looked in vain for a better spirit than that of the old national individualism. A great many of us knew that it was idle to talk as men did talk in the war, as if the spirit of aggressiveness was limited to Germany. We had read the secret treaties, and we knew what they meant. The secret treaties have not been disclosed, but they are still effective. I ask you, cast your eye over the nations, where do you see a spirit larger than the old selfish spirit claiming as much as you can get? Out of the spirit of claiming as much as you can get there can arise nothing except the universal scramble.

"Or, once again, it seemed to me when Germany had been thoroughly defeated, then was the moment to prove to Germany that it would be humanely treated; that it would be given a fair place for recovery. In the nature of things we did not ask for public repudiations; they would have been untrustworthy, indeed; what we trusted was that Germany would be forced by the logic of events to realize, as indeed she must realize now, that she had been grossly, utterly, lamentably misled.

"What was wanted was surely a witness that if she behaved herself she should be allowed to re-enter the comity of nations uncrushed. You know what has happened. It is hard to resist the impression, however you distribute the blame, that the League of Nations is in the greatest peril of becoming an organization to keep Germany permanently crushed. That is what is felt, and the signs are at present not visible of a disarmament of any nation except Germany."

It would appear from this that the conversion of the Allied nations to the policy of permanent peace and disarmament was not a sincere or a lasting conversion. It is simply another case of:

When the devil was sick the devil a saint would be.
But when the devil got well, the devil a saint was he!

Fads and Fashions.

Turkish trouser effects are promised for a few hours and evening gowns.

Stockings are very sheer, and are usually not of black, but in some neutral shade.

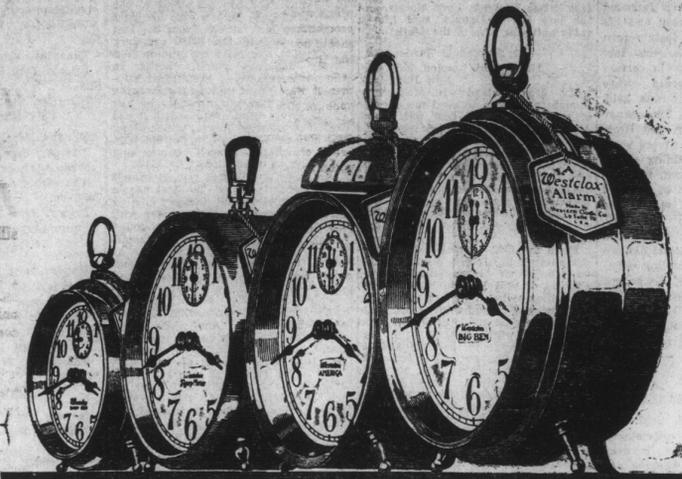

The severe neckline of dark material against the neck is usually disappearing.

Narrow lingerie collars of batiste and lace outline the necks of many new frocks.

Very often a waist of taffeta accompanies a skirt of voile.

The tunic blouse is far more artistic than the ordinary waist, and velvet will be used for it.

IT'S the way you start your day that counts. A leisurely, untroubled get-away in the morning usually means a day of many things well-done.

That's what a good alarm clock does for you. Millions of men thank their Westclox alarms for smoother-running, more resultful days. They get off to business feeling right.

That's because each Westclox does its job right. It's built so it will. All Westclox have the same construction that won Big Ben's success.

Wheels turn on needle-fine pivots of polished steel. Friction is lessened. The clock runs easier; lasts longer. Westclox, on the dial and tag, means that kind of a clock.

To the adventurous young woman of the present day Miss Elizabeth Barrett must indeed appear a poor-spirited creature. Let us up their own case against her.

Afraid of Men.

She was, at the time when she contemplated her great adventure, child, but a woman of forty— or thereabouts. She was a woman independent means—£400 or £500 year— she was far too unwise ever to know the exact figure of income. She was a learned woman, learned enough to translate phrases of the "Agamemnon" perceive, as clearly as Mr. G. Murray himself, the difference between Euripides and the other dramatists. She was clever as well as learned—clever enough to be a valued contributor to the Athenaeum. And with all that, she was afraid of men; afraid of strange men of principle; afraid of papa, who wanted to keep her like a canary in a cage, when one comes to think of it, seem rather absurd. And yet, the situation occurred, it was normal, though it occurred only a little more than seventy years ago.

Invalidism.

It occurred, that is to say, in the early Victorian Age, which, though seems almost as remote as the Age of Pericles. It was the age, among other things, of the feminine malade; of Miss Elizabeth Barrett; and Miss Elizabeth Barrett was a shining example of that malade. No doubt she was delicate; but certainly was nothing serious matter with her. The medical which she needed were fresh air, exercise, freedom, and congenial society. Instead of that, she was garded by herself and her family a permanent invalid. When she went out of doors she wore the soles and insularian appliances respirator; and she spent most of her time on the sofa, in a drawing room, complaining of headache and being herself with valvolite and being her fevered brow with a kerchief soaked in eau-de-Cologne.

Afraid of Men.

She was, at the time when she contemplated her great adventure, no child, but a woman of forty—there were her thirties. She was a woman of independent means—£400 or £500 a year—she was far too unworriedly ever to know the exact figure of her income. She was clever as well as learned—clever enough to be a valued contributor to the Athenaeum. And with all that, she was afraid of men: afraid of strange men on the principle of omne ignotum pro horridum; afraid of papa, who wanted to keep her like a canary in a cage. It does, when one comes to think of it, seem rather absurd. And yet, when the situation occurred, it was almost normal, though it occurred only a little more than seventy years ago.

Invalidism.

It occurred, that is to say, in the early Victorian Age, which, to us, seems almost as remote as the Stone Age. It was the age, among other things, of the feminine malade imaginaire; and Miss Elizabeth Barrett was a shining example of that type. No doubt she was delicate; but there certainly was nothing serious the matter with her. The medicines which she needed were fresh air, exercise, freedom, and congenial society. Instead of that, she was regarded by herself and her family as a permanent invalid. When she went out of doors she wore that obsolete and insanitary appliance, a respirator; and she spent most of her time on the sofa, in a darkened room, complaining of headache, dabbling herself with sal volatile and dabbling her fevered brow with a handkerchief soaked in eau-de-Cologne.

Victorian Age must have been an age of leisure! Moreover, even when the invitation was finally sent, it was hedged about with so many precautionary hints that Browning wondered whether he was suspected of predatory designs on the umbrellas in the hat-stand, and ended with a postscript which opened the door to still further procrastination: "If on Tuesday you should not be well, pray do not come!" But Browning's health was robust. He came, and saw, and conquered; and then it was his turn to feel that perhaps he had been too tamerous. He actually wrote to say that, if his society was disturbing to Miss Barrett's peace of mind, he would, of course, withdraw before irreparable harm was done. It was a silly thing to do; but it did, at least, by wounding Miss Barrett's vanity, sting her into respect. She returned Browning's letter to him, with the suggestion that he should reconsider it. He not only reconsidered it, but burnt it, cursing himself for a conceited ape; and then, at last, relations were gradually established on a sound basis.

"That Man."

Yet not so far, on a very dignified basis. Mr. Barrett used to refer darkly to Browning as "that man;" and Browning had to slink in and out of the house like a servant's "follower" in a place in which no followers are allowed. When, the ice being now really broken, he began to talk of marriage, he discovered that the obstacles were formidable, and was told that they were insuperable. Miss Barrett reported to him a conversation which she had had on the subject with her sister Arabella, who was in her confidence.

"If a Prince of Eldorado should come, with a pedigree of lineal descent from signory in one hand and a ticket of good behaviour from the nearest Independent chapel in the other—"

"Why, even then," said my sister Arabella, "it would not do."

And Miss Barrett further warned him what would be the consequences if her father ever found out that he was anything more than a literary conferee with whom she investigated the precise meaning of the more obscure passages in the Æschylean choruses—

We should be able to meet never again in this room, nor to have intercourse by letter through the ordinary channel. I mean that letters of yours addressed to me here would infallibly be stopped and destroyed—if not opened.

Things were actually as bad as that; Miss Barrett was actually as scared as that. Her father not only had no right of jurisdiction over her—it was not even in his power to bring pecuniary pressure to bear. She was, as has been said, forty, and had an income of her own on which she could comfortably have set up a separate establishment. Browning was socially eligible, and could not be suspected of fortune-hunting, as he had a sufficient allowance from his father. Yet she had not the courage to assert herself. It had been a struggle for her to deceive her father, but she absolutely dared not defy him.

The Elopement.

So they decided to elope, and they eloped. It was at once a justifiable and an unnecessary elopement; but Miss Barrett's heart trembled to the very last. She screwed her courage to the sticking point with sal volatile; and she collapsed on to a sofa and called for more sal volatile after her flight had been successfully accomplished. She nearly gave herself up for lost when the barking of the lap dog in her muff threatened to betray her; but she did get off—carrying a portion of her trousseau in that very early-Victorian receptacle, a carpet-bag; and there was, towards the end, at least one gesture which demonstrated that she was still more afraid of being left than of being taken. Her father had announced his intention of transporting his entire family to the country while his house in Wimpole Street was in the hands of the decorators; and that danger moved Miss Barrett to suggest to Browning that their enterprise might advantageously be speeded up:—

If we are taken away on Monday . . . what then? . . . It seems quite too soon and too sudden for us to set out on our Italian expedition now—and perhaps even we could not compass—Well—but you must think for both of us. . . I will do what you wish—understand.

Across the Channel.

He did not understand. The situation was one in which he might even have quoted (though he did not) the old saying about a nod and a wink and a blind horse. Left to himself, he would probably have missed the train, for in his excitement he had read the time-table wrongly; but Miss Barrett happily retained sufficient presence of mind to point out his error to him. So the train was caught and the Channel crossed; and their friend, Mrs. Jamieson, wrote from Paris: "I know not how the two poet heads and poet hearts will get on through this prosaic world." But they got on, much better than Mrs. Jamieson expected—much better than the majority of more precipitate lovers who really defy the conventions, instead of only pretending to do so—much better, for instance, than Geo. Sand and Alfred de Musset, passed through a silken mesh

IMAGINE a spider's web which only the shining dew makes clear—then imagine a silkworm's thread as fine.

Imagine a 'mesh' formed by thousands of such gossamer-like threads contained within a single square inch. Conceive this weave to be so fine, so fine that only dust of flower-bloom, or powder as microscopic, could sift through it.

Through so incredibly minute a filter Colgate's Talc is passed. By what other means could come its delicate, breath-like quality—its airiness lighter than thistle-down, lighter than gossamer?

To the tender, sun-sensitive or wind-whipped skin what can be more gratefully cooling, what be gentler or more fragrant than Colgate's Talc?

What talc, while adding its charm to the complexion, merges with it as does Colgate's Talc?

So fine, so very fine it is.

The GUARANTEE that covers the PAINT at every SURFACE

HERE are plenty of reasons why you should use B-H Paint—but the one outstanding reason is told in the B-H Guarantee.

This is not like ordinary guarantees—it is a very definite and far-reaching one. It is a "hard and fast" commitment on the part of the well-known manufacturers of this product; by it they bind themselves to the use of a pure white lead and pure zinc in correct proportions.

It is these important basic ingredients that give to B-H Paint its remarkable covering capacity. These ingredients in proper proportion—when mixed with pure refined linseed oil and turpentine—ensure that your house will be properly painted with a smaller quantity of B-H Paint than you would have to use if you contented yourself with a paint of lesser quality. Do not, then, permit your desire to be economical to lead you on the "false economy trail" of cheap paints. That way lies extravagance. Only by using a high-quality paint, such as the B-H guarantee ensures, can you be certain of real economy which comes from the use of a paint that covers well and lasts wonderfully.

Where Living Men Use Genuine Saga Language.
Special Interview With Vilhjalmur Stefansson.

One of the Most Famous of Modern Arctic Explorers.

Iceland has Linotypes. If newspapers had reached the simple perfection of vers libre, this simple remark would be the whole story. Something more, however, seems to be required, and therefore as a train, so to speak to the majesty of the plain announcement, we add that Iceland's Linotypes are not operated by Polar Bears or the Aurora Borealis, but by operators who "put it over" all other composing rooms in the world so far as classic purity of composition is concerned. If a New York or Chicago or San Francisco operator were setting his Linotype matter in the Saxon of King Alfred, or compositors of France, Italy and Spain were Linotyping pure Gothic, they would be doing something to vie with those Icelandic men. They are Linotyping in pure saga language, and why this is so is explained in the following interview with Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the famous Arctic explorer and ethnologist.

What Vilhjalmur Stefansson Says.

There are no elementary schools in Iceland. There hardly are what we should call high schools. It would follow, apparently, that the percentage of illiteracy is immense. The exact contrary is the fact. In this lonely seacoast place just under the Arctic Circle there is absolutely no illiteracy at all. There never has been any. Even the Dark Ages did not eclipse Iceland as completely as they eclipsed the rest of Europe.

There has been so sustained a preservation of knowledge that to-day there is no farm, however lonely, that does not possess inmates competent to educate the children. Some worker always is competent to act as tutor, and every Icelandic father and mother is competent as a matter of course.

Books on Every Farm.

Not a single farm lacks books. Nearly every farm has books in more than one language, and most Icelandic households have books in at least three—Icelandic, of course; Danish (which is not Icelandic); and books in English or German, or both.

This Iceland's youth not only is thoroughly well equipped to enter the College of Iceland or colleges of the outer world, but the love for literature which has flourished for a thousand years gives the people of the little country a rich and unique possession. They own to-day the beautiful wild Sagas in their original purity. Of all the land on earth, Iceland is the one, and the only one, that has preserved its original language.

Literature Stabilizes Language.

It is literature alone that stabilizes a language. Literature fled from Europe during the Dark Ages, but never has there been a time in Iceland when it lacked men and women with the knowledge, the passion and the power to teach the Sagas in unmarred purity and truth. These Sagas were, and they are, the unending springs on which folk-education has fed. When the Icelandic viking ships were feared on every coast, the best joy of the rovers still was to sit amid Icelandic households and hear the Skalds sing the song that gradually became the Sagas of succeeding generations. To-day their peaceable descendants love best to work the year's yield of wool in the long winter nights while chosen ones read or recite to the gathering.

So stabilized, the Icelandic language is as pure to-day as it was a thousand years ago. In that long period, all the languages of Europe have suffered many and violent changes. Gothic has vanished. Latin has become a dead language. Saxon and kindred tongues have passed from England, Norman remains only as a ghost, and even Chaucer's English is hidden within a new edifice of speech. The speech and literary language of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark changed almost beyond recognition under the deadly stupor of the Dark Ages. Only Iceland has kept its heritage.

Business in Saga Words.

Iceland's children of 1919 learn their lessons in the speech of the Vikings. Iceland's business men talk business in words identical with the tremendous chants of the Gunnar and Grettir sagas. Iceland's newspapers tell to-day's news in a language that the European world has forgotten when Columbus sailed westward.

Because of this tradition of learning, Iceland's small population has produced distinguished men quite out of proportion to its numbers. One of the first physicians to win the Nobel Prize was selected from this community of less than 80,000 people. He was Vilhelm Finzen, famous among other achievements for his development of the Finzen light treatment for lupus, one of the world's destructive skin-diseases. The sculptor Bertel Thorvaldsen (or Albert Thorvaldsen, as his father called him) was an Icelandic.

(Editor's Note.) Mr. Stefansson, Canadian-born, but of Icelandic blood, has twice conducted important researches in Iceland, after which he turned to the American Arctic. In the winter 1906-7 he lived with the Eskimos at the mouth of the Mackenzie River. From 1908 to 1912 he journeyed many thousand miles, depending on his rifle for subsistence; and it was in the course of this long adventuring that he found hitherto unknown Eskimos who never had seen a white man, and lived like the people of the Stone Age. In 1913 he sailed from Victoria, B. C., in command of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, and among other extraordinary feats, he crossed the Arctic Ocean on moving ice with only two companions, going from Alaska to Banks Island. In the following year he penetrated still farther north with three companions and explored a big area west of Prince Patrick Island, discovering new land north of it.

First American Colonizers.

In his book, "My Life with the Eskimos," Mr. Stefansson calls attention to the fact that Icelanders had colonized Greenland 800 years before Columbus discovered the West Indian frontier of America, and that it was a Norseman, sailing to visit his father to Greenland, who discovered the American mainland in the year 1000.

By the time of Columbus, Icelandic communication with Greenland had become scanty. Finally it ceased and a mystery that has not yet been solved closed in upon the Icelandic colonies. When William Davis practically rediscovered Greenland after its 800 years of isolation, he found no Europeans surviving.

No record ever was found that gave even a hint of their possible fate, until Stefansson found the men whom the world has christened the "Blond Eskimos." Since that discovery, however, if not scientists, are entitled to hold the romantic hope that they may prove to be descendants of the lost Icelanders thus found by a son of Iceland.

No guessing need be done about the Icelanders who remained in Iceland. Many a great nation might envy this isolated group its excellence of national records. A quarter century before English Elizabeth ascended the throne, Iceland had a printing office. A Bible, and a very elaborate one, was printed in Iceland in 1584, four years before the Spanish Armada set sail. It seems crudely modern to mention Linotypes in connection with such gaudy antiquity. Most apologetically, we mention that the first one was installed in 1914.—From the Mergenthaler Lines O' Type News.

Newspaper and Camera Men Are Much Pleased.

Before leaving the city, last evening, the visiting newspaper men expressed themselves as delighted with the treatment that they had received at the hands of the provincial and civic authorities, as well as the hospitality that had been extended to them by individuals. Newspapermen of international reputation, who were here, to "cover" the prince's visit, stated that they had never in all their experience met with such wholehearted hospitality. A special train was provided by the department of state for the correspondents and camera men and this train will remain with them until Quebec is reached, when further detailed arrangements will be made. J. C. Berrie was a busy man, yesterday, in charge of the convoy of motor cars, provided by the provincial government, which either preceded or followed the prince to every point visited and which carried some thirty or forty writers and camera men.

The "movie" men were very much pleased with their day's work. They snapped or rather "moved" the prince from all angles and every function of importance so that St. John will really, as was predicted, be on the map of the world as never before. The "still" photographers were not so happy as the absence of an naturally made their pictures less sharp, but they were satisfied that they had been afforded every facility.—St. John, N.B. paper.

Insert a knob on a tin pieplate to be used as a cover for the kettle when boiling vegetables. This allows more room than a flat cover.

Bind the ends of comforts with strips of washable material about six inches wide. This will keep them clean, and the strips can be changed.

London, July 30th, 1919.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly publish as attached copy of a letter written by Mr. Coaker, with a request for its publication, in regard to the case of Lt.-Col. Franklin.

Yours truly,

MORRIS.

Dear Mr. Coaker,—

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of June 30th, in reply to my letter to you of June 12th, covering copy of my letter addressed to Lieut.-Colonel Franklin of May 12th, and his reply to me of May 20th, in which he categorically denies the charges made by you in your Diary, published in the Evening Advocate, of April 4th. In my letter I asked you to publish this correspondence, and to give it the same publicity as you gave to the published charge against me. You reply, in that letter without fuller explanation do as desired, as you had been informed of harsh treatment by Governor Davidson towards Lieut.-Colonel Franklin and that you consider Governor Davidson would not have recognized Lieut.-Colonel Franklin as the head of the Regiment, or have replaced him without consulting me. You surely must have seen by a perusal of my letter to Lt.-Col. Franklin and his reply that there are no grounds whatever for your continuing to believe that there ever was, in any way, any justification for this charge. You say "you were informed of harsh treatment." Now, it is up to you, I think, to give the name of your informant.

In my letter to Lt.-Col. Franklin, which you will have before you, you will notice I say that whatever decision was arrived at in his case relative to the commanding of the Newfoundland Regiment in Europe "was done only after consultation with, and by the unanimous decision of, the Committee of the Patriotic Association." That the Newfoundland Government "had nothing to do with the appointment of officers or the granting of commissions, that this was all done by the Committee of the Patriotic Association in charge of this particular branch of regimental work, that Lt.-Col. Franklin's name or his appointment or the circumstances which led to his ceasing connection with the Newfoundland Regiment never once came before the Newfoundland Government," and that the first intimation I had of his ceasing to act with the Newfoundland troops was when I read it in the Press.

You go on to say "you have for four years blamed me for harsh treatment of Lt.-Col. Franklin and if your information is incorrect, you require a fuller explanation to convince you that I and Governor Davidson did not act harshly with Lt.-Col. Franklin." Here let me draw your attention to why you fell into this error of blaming me, you jumped at conclusions without making any enquiry. It was an extraordinary coincidence, if this severe treatment was meted out to Lt.-Col. Franklin in 1914, that you should have allowed four years to transpire without making any reference to it; at least, you never made any complaint to me although I was with you in the public sessions of the Legislature of 1915-16.

Correspondence

BETWEEN LORD MORRIS AND
MR. W. F. COAKER.

London, July 30th, 1919.
Dear Sir.—Will you kindly publish attached copy of a letter written Mr. Coaker, with a request for its publication, in regard to the case of Lt.-Col. Franklin.

Yours truly,
MORRIS.

Dear Mr. Coaker,—
I have to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of June 30th, and in reply to my letter to you of June 12th, covering copy of my letter addressed to Lieut.-Colonel Franklin of May 20th, in which he categorically denies the charges made by you in your Diary, published in the Evening Advocate, of April 4th. In my letter
I asked you to publish this correspondence, and to give it the same prominence as you gave to the publication of charges against me. You reply, in your letter under consideration, "that you cannot without fuller explanation do as desired, as you had been informed of harsh treatment by Governor Davidson towards Lieut.-Colonel Franklin and that you consider Governor Davidson would not have resented to recognize Lt.-Col. Franklin as the head of the Regiment, or have replaced him without consulting me."
You surely must have seen by a perusal of my letter to Lt.-Col. Franklin and his reply that there are no grounds whatever for your continuing to believe that there ever was, at any time, any justification for this charge. You say "you were informed of harsh treatment." Now, it is to you, I think, to give the name of your informant.

In my letter to Lt.-Col. Franklin, which you will have before you, you will notice I say that whatever decision was arrived at in his case relative to the commanding of the Newfoundland Regiment in Europe "was made only after consultation with, and by the unanimous decision of the Committee of the Patriotic Association." That the Newfoundland Government "had nothing to do with the appointment of officers or the granting of commissions, that this was all done by the Committee of the Patriotic Association in charge of this particular branch of regimental work, that Lt.-Col. Franklin's name or his appointment or the circumstances which led to his ceasing connection with the Newfoundland Regiment never once came before the Newfoundland Government," and that the first intimation I had of his ceasing to act with the Newfoundland troops was when I read it in the Press.

You go on to say "you have for four years blamed me for harsh treatment of Lt.-Col. Franklin and if your information is incorrect, you require a fuller explanation to convince you that I and Governor Davidson did not act harshly with Lt.-Col.
Franklin." Here let me draw your attention to why you fell into this error of blaming me, you jumped at conclusions without making any enquiry. It was an extraordinary coincidence, if this severe treatment was inflicted on Lt.-Col. Franklin in 1914, that you should have allowed four years to transpire without making any reference to it; at least, you never made any complaint to me although I was with you in the public sessions of the Legislature of 1915-

16-17, and you were a representative of the whole of these years, and the owner and controller of a daily newspaper.

You further say that "Lt.-Colonel Franklin did not mention my name or that of Governor Davidson speaking to you, but he did speak of how he was treated by being ousted from leading the Regiment, and the manner in which the Newfoundland authorities had dealt with him." This,
I have no doubt, is quite true as Lt.-Col. Franklin could not have mentioned my name in this connection. But let me draw your attention to the charge you have made and published. You say "you gathered from Colonel Franklin from close questioning, the harsh, un-reasonable, if not ungrateful manner in which he had been treated by Governor Davidson and the Newfoundland Government under Sir E. P. Morris, and that he (Franklin) encountered the enmity of Governor Davidson, and eventually that of Sir E. P. Morris.
The long and short of it was they had made up their minds that Major Franklin was not to remain with the Regiment, but they lacked the courage to so inform him, first or last."

I think you will agree with me that it is not putting it too high when I say that any person reading your diary containing this charge could come to no other conclusion than that Lt.-Col. Franklin under your questioning, had made these charges against me. Happily, however, he has denied it; he could not have done anything else. He well knew I had nothing whatever to do with the matter and that the Government of which I was a member had never once in any way dealt with his case. Indeed, in his letter to me in answer to your charge he specifically says: "It was not necessary for you to write denying the trend of Mr. Coaker's remarks as regards yourself." That ought to have been sufficient for you. When Lt.-Col. Franklin wrote that, he had before him the charge you had made against me. He goes on to say further "the newspaper article was a surprise. If for a moment I had thought you had allowed any personal enmity towards me to influence you whilst Prime Minister I should certainly have thrashed the matter
out with you the first time I saw you.
In my talk with Mr. Coaker I said nothing but what I have told you often. Mr. Coaker allowed his great heart and sympathy to run away with him, and carried off a wrong impression of our talk." You then go on to say that you take this matter seriously, and "that as I have taken up a position of innocence nothing would give you more pleasure than to be convinced that I had nothing to do with Lt.-Col. Franklin's being ousted from command of the Regiment." You seem to have an idea that it is quite permissible for you to make a charge and then call on me to dis-prove it. This is a complete reversion of the principle that everyone is held to be innocent until proven guilty. If this were not so no one would be safe. A verdict of 25,000 has just been obtained here in London by a public man against the Daily Mail for a far less offensive libel than the one you have published against me. If you were defending this libel you would only be allowed to set up one defence, namely, that the words complained of were true in substance and in fact. You could not have tendered one iota of evidence in support of this plea. I have denied its truth; Lt.-Col. Franklin has denied it, and the records of the Government and the Patriotic Association, to which you, as a member of the Legislature and the Government have had access for the last five years abundantly proved it. If, however, you are still anxious to establish your bona fides and clear me in the eyes of those of your readers who have read your charge and have not seen my answer or defence, which you refuse to publish, you have only to cable Lt.-Col. Franklin and ask him if there is any foundation for the charge you have made against me in whole or in part, made in your diary of April 4th, 1919. He has a copy of your diary in his possession and he will reply that there is not the slightest foundation. He will give you no other reply.

I am sorry you have elected to refuse publication in your paper of my denial. It is not British. I hope you may revise your decision and publish the correspondence previously sent you, as well as this letter.

Yours very faithfully,
MORRIS.
W. F. Coaker, Esq., M.H.A.

The Market.

The market continues steady and there is a fair amount of local enquiry. The stocks are moderate and the quantity to come in from the fishermen will not be extensive as the yield of oils from the livers this year has not been as good as last year.

The price of oil in St. John's is $2.50 per tun or equal to one dollar per gallon.

The demand from foreign markets is very limited and we think our fishermen would do well to let go their holdings at this price.

Animal oils such as tallow and greases, has again weakened on the New York market and this is a sure indication of poor demand from the tanners.

COD LIVER OIL.

There is no change in the market and not likely to be now that we have passed through July and August when the principal buying of Medicinal Cod Liver Oil is made by the Druggists and Chemists throughout England and America.

Refiners have been shipping their oil in freely as none of them want to carry over stocks like last year.

None of our merchants wish to have a barrel of this oil at the end of the year as they will be right up against Norway competition on an extensive scale.

We hear of very few buyers on this market and if any one of the large handlers dropped out there would be a sudden collapse of prices.
The local price is $2 to $2.10.

CANNED CODFISH.

Now that Mr. Templeton is able to supply an unlimited quantity of tins by machinery, the canning of fresh codfish is likely to become an important industry in the future. There is a fine demand for this product in Western Canada and the two or three plants engaged in the industry in Newfoundland this season will have no difficulty in marketing at profitable rates.

LOBSTERS.

The price of lobsters on the West Coast has declined to $34 per case of 48 one-pound tins, now that the fever of keen competition amongst the buyers is over. Most of the pack at Bonnie Bay, Bay of Islands and St.
George's has been exported direct to Halifax, Messrs. Farquhar & Co. being the largest buyers. The St.
John's price is $35 to $34 but very few cases so far, have come this way.

MOLASSES.

The molasses market keeps steady and it is realized by the trade that there will be no scarcity. This week a sale of 200 puncheons was made from the ship's side at 92 cents per gallon, cash down. This is exceptional. Most cash sales are being made at 93c. for 100 puncheon lots and 94c. for lots of ten to fifty, and 95c. for the single puncheon, 97c. for tierces, and 99c. to $1.00 for barrels.
The imports to date amount to 8,844 puncheons as compared with 9,811
puncheons this time last year.

PORK AND BEEF.

Prices are beginning to come down
in various parts of the United States.
A drop of $1.00 per 100 lbs. in price of live hogs has occurred in Chicago owing to several reasons, principally to public opinion on the high cost of living.

The buyers of Eastern States virtually withdrew from the market.
Beef Cattle was also neglected by the Packers and speculators heavily hit.

Livestock men all say that the Export business is greatly depressed
by the low rate of Bank Exchange.
The expectation of heavy receipts on Western markets has caused great weakness. Local prices are as follows:

Ham Butt—$22.00 to $24.00 per brl.
Fat Back—$20.50 to $23.00 per brl.
Boneless Beef—$38.50 to $39.00 p. brl.
Family Beef—$45.00 and up.

Belief by the farmers of the United States that the Government is in-earnest in its drive against high prices was given the Drovers in Chicago last week when 15,000 head

FLOUR.

The U.S. Rosalind brought in a large shipment of all white flour yesterday from New York and Halifax. The wholesale price of this quality is $14.25 to $14.50 per barrel.
There is a considerable stock of Standard still on hand by some deal-up to $12.75 and $12.80 per barrel. The imports to date amount to 108,729 barrels.

SUGAR.

The shortage of sugar was relieved yesterday by the arrival of the Lake be obtained from New York later as well so that local needs may be met satisfactorily. Later shipments will ligation imposed on importers of furnishing shippers with New York funds at the higher premium of exchange. The present price here is $14.50 per 100 lbs.

OATS AND FEEDS.

Oats have advanced in price this week 8 to 10 cents per sack on account of increased freight rates.
This applies to Western Canada, via Montreal. As to P.E.I. oats it will be impossible to get any till October.
The local price is now $5.40 to $5.50 per sack. The present prices are likely to continue for the next month or so. Feeds of all kinds have advanced considerably. Prices in the local market are now much lower than the cost of new importations.

HAY AND POTATOES.

Freight for imported baled hay is now difficult to obtain at Montreal.
Owners of steamship lines are unwilling to handle hay when they can get other freight as hay does not pay so well. The local price is $50 to $55 per ton. People laying in stocks for cattle would do well to buy now as we feel confident that prices will be no lower this season. Local farmers are asking $3.00 per barrel for new potatoes. Imported potatoes are lower than this, which shows that our farmers are quite capable of profiting themselves when they get the chance.

GROCERS' PROFTEERING.

Judging from the prices charged by the retail shops dealing in groceries as compared with the wholesale prices it is the former who are profiting. It is high time for the authorities to institute an enquiry in the interest of the public.—Trade

كتاب متنوع للاسائيه New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us.
They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise
—unwise for two reasons.
First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory.
Try it and be convinced.
