

TEAS. A LITTLE ESSAY

EVERYONE SHOULD READ. The pernicious practice of giving away presents with a natural death if the persons who make the purchases were but to STOP AND THINK.

Price of the Present must Come Out of the Chest. So be frank. If a present generally is made on any day, the dealer must give out 80 worth of goods for the 20 he receives. THINK IT OVER AND SEE IF IT IS NOT RIGHT.

281 YONGE STREET. And to get the Popular Taste and by way of an Expensive Introduction, I intend to give away

A $500 PIANO. Tickets corresponding numbered will be issued at once, and one of them will be given to every purchaser of FIVE POUNDS, at 60c. per pound, upward, until the 23rd of December.

23RD OF DECEMBER OF THIS YEAR. At this time a drawing will be made in my store by one of the ticket holders, chosen from the majority present; and at the moment the winner will have the instrument taken to his or her home.

Largest Offer Ever Made in the Dominion. It stands as the Crowning Piece to this fearful present giving business. I have introduced you to my gifts from me. I don't believe in them. The fact is

I PLEDGE MY REPUTATION To a better Tea at 50c. per pound than any other Store in Toronto does for 60c.; but with the exception of my Tea, I have no other goods to offer. My Tea is of the quality equal to any Tea sold in my store by any one of the ticket holders, chosen from the majority present; and at the moment the winner will have the instrument taken to his or her home.

THE NEWS FROM IRELAND. OFF FOR ENGLAND.

An Address to the Marquis of Lorne by the Ottawa City Council. OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—His excellency the governor-general was presented with an address this afternoon by Mayor Macintosh on behalf of the corporation, after which he left for Quebec en route to England.

A guard of honor was furnished from the governor-general's foot guards. The city hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The address congratulated his excellency in his warm response to the people, and requested him to convey to the queen and princess of unqualified loyalty to her majesty, and trusted that the Princess Louise would have sufficiently recovered to return to Canada with the marquis.

His excellency made a suitable reply, in which he thanked the mayor and corporation for their kindly remarks and expressed his pleasure in being permitted to return to the Dominion in the spring, owing to impaired health. As for himself he would be among them again before Christmas.

His excellency then announced that he would publish the following in to-day's Chronicle:—"The lieutenant-governor has been refused the Marquis of Lorne, governor-general of Canada, will leave Quebec on a visit to England on Saturday, the 5th day of November. On that occasion the lieutenant-governor will present on his part, as well as on behalf of the inhabitants of the province, an address conveying to the Marquis of Lorne, governor-general, respect and attachment which the people of this province entertain towards his excellency. The lieutenant-governor will also be accompanied by a number of gentlemen, who will be present at the Marquis's departure on Saturday, the 5th day of November, at nine o'clock a.m."

THE FIRE RECORD. STAFFORD, Nov. 4.—At 2 o'clock this morning a fire was discovered in the large mill belonging to W. Mowat and worked by the Stafford Flour Milling Company. The mill and contents were totally consumed. The fire spread to the adjoining block owned by J. M. Fraser and Jno. Gibson. This loss amounted to $20,000 divided as follows: Stafford flour mill company $10,000; insurance $10,000—Western $4,000; London $3,000; Ontario $3,000; and the remainder by the Ontario, London, and Western Insurance Companies.

At the instance of Rev. A. J. Broughall, the Rev. J. D. Cayley, Rev. J. P. Lewis, Rev. John Pearson, Rev. W. S. Rainford, Mr. W. H. Howland and Mr. E. B. Galt, with power to add to their number, met at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening for the purpose of organizing a temperance society in the city of Toronto. In its main features the society is very much the same as that of which Rev. D. J. Macdonnell is president. THE ANGLICAN SYNOD. THE WORK OF REVIVING THE CONSTITUTION FINISHED.

The Executive Committee—Missions on the Mission Board—An Attempt to defeat Mr. Blake's Measure—Temperance—Church Missions. The synod on opening for business yesterday morning resumed the consideration of the report of the Executive Committee on the work of reviving the constitution. In regard to the appointment of the executive committee, two points had not been settled on the previous evening, namely, the number of members of which the committee should be composed, and the number to be nominated by the bishop. Dr. Snelling thought the present number was too small and moved in amendment that there be thirty members—ten to be appointed by the bishop, the remaining twenty elected by the synod—ten to form a quorum. The resolution was seconded by the Hon. Edward Blake and carried. It was then moved by Mr. John Carter and carried that any candidate bishop and the honorary secretary be ex-officio members of the Executive Committee.

The next question discussed was that providing for the appointment of the mission board. The only change made in this clause was to make all stipendiary missionaries, whether rural deacons or eligible for election to the board. MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE. Hon. E. Blake moved, seconded by Dr. Snelling, changes in the mode of selecting the provincial synod delegates, which would make the system similar to that of choosing the executive committee decided on Thursday evening. A vote by orders was called for, with the following result: clerical—yes 32, no 27; lay—yes 25, no 19. There was very little discussion. Synod shortly afterwards adjourned for the day.

SOME SUDDEN MOVES. On resuming the synod proceeded with the constitution, but no discussion took place until clause 27 was reached. It provided that any alteration in the constitution should be confirmed by a majority of two-thirds of both clergy and laity. It was moved in lieu of this that such alterations should be confirmed by a majority of two-thirds of the whole synod. The amendment was carried by a vote of 28 against three or four ayes.

Several members protested earnestly against so vital a change being made in so small a house and those who had voted for the amendment were called to order. It became apparent that with the same idea, so that when the constitution was voted upon as a whole the original clause was reinserted by a unanimous vote. At this juncture the Rev. A. J. Broughall surprised the synod by proposing that they should reconsider the action taken on Thursday night with reference to the election of the executive committee. His proposal was that each delegate should elect his own members instead of one. His proposal was not adopted. The synod adjourned at 8 o'clock. Thursday night was devoted to the consideration of the constitution. A motion was made by Mr. J. D. Cayley, Rev. J. P. Lewis, Rev. John Pearson, Rev. W. S. Rainford, Mr. W. H. Howland and Mr. E. B. Galt, with power to add to their number.

SATURDAY MORNING NOVEMBER 5, 1881. THE CREDIT VALLEY is going to close down its Sunday train.

BRANTFORD CRIES "me too" and wants the Credit Valley extended into that town, in order to get "a direct short line to Toronto without awkward waits, changes and shufflings."

A BROOKLYN JUSTICE has refused the testimony of professional spies in cases of breach of the liquor law. As the Eagle says: "Nothing can be more revolting to a healthy mind than the principle which actuates the liquor spy. For the sake of earning his fee he deliberately tempts the liquor dealer to violate the law and then inform upon him."

THE CONSOLIDATION of the Toronto and Ottawa, the Midland, the Grand Junction and the Toronto and Nipissing, under the management of Mr. Cox, may or may not be a good scheme for the province at large and the local country interested. But there has as yet been no sufficient reasons advanced therefor, and there is some talk of "charter trafficking."

THE MAIL says in reply to remarks about the coming conservative convention that "there will be no general election next spring." It will be noticed that the Mail does not say there will be no general election next summer or fall, or sometime next year. If the organ knows so much as it pretends about the matter why not state definitely whether the present parliament will be permitted to run its full course or not.

WE HAVE GREAT respect for Mr. Alpheus Todd, the scholarly librarian of the federal parliament, but if he is the author of the opinion with which he is credited, viz., that the Canadian parliament may constitutionally discuss independence, but that it would be "unconstitutional" for it to do so, then we beg to differ with him out and out. The Canadian people can discuss anything that their representatives see fit to discuss, and what is more they will.

GO DERICH wants to have direct opposition communication with Toronto. The Grand Trunk has a monopoly at present. Three schemes have been mooted: (1) A line to Wingham where the Toronto, Grey and Bruce would be struck; (2) a line to Brussels, thence over the Great Western to Elora, and then on the Credit Valley to Toronto; (3) a direct line through St. Mary's, Exeter, Zurich and Bayfield to Woodstock where the Credit Valley is reached. If the Grand Trunk gains possession of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce, the first would be useless. The last appears to be the best, both in the interest of Goderich and Toronto.

A FORWARD REVOLUTION. Somebody has said that revolutions never go backwards, but this is a mistake. They have in fact a determined trick of going backwards, and are very apt to do it unless well watched. Instance the revolution of Cromwell's time, which so quickly went backwards, to the everlasting disgrace of England both at home and abroad. In the protector's time the flag of England was respected on every sea. Soon afterwards the court of London was regarded as an establishment pensioned by France. Staunton "reformer" as Oliver was, he would most unquestionably have been called a "jingo" for his foreign policy had he been ruling in England to-day. The French revolution, too, went backwards with a vengeance, as witness the white cockade after Waterloo, the huge faros and deception of the "citizen king," and the murderous fire of cannon and musketry with which two or three generals, themselves in desperate circumstances, made their puppet Louis Napoleon for a time the ruler of France. The revolution has taken a forward turn in France since then, but let it not be forgotten that revolutions can and do go backwards sometimes. It is the interest of privileged classes that they should go backwards; and whatever great steps may be gained, it is still true that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. To come nearer home, after responsible government had been conceded to Canada by such eminent British authorities as Grey, and Russell, and Durham, it was still resisted by Canadian Tories, who tried their little best to put the revolution back. And now, in this very year 1881, in our own time, comes an attempt to make our latest revolution go backwards, and to shake off Canada's national policy. The old sayings to the necessity of eternal vigilance still holds good.

After ever so much outpouring of friendly speeches, the fact remains that Canada's national policy is an offence to both England and the United States. We have no business to manufacture for ourselves, it is thought, all we have to do is to export timber, fish and farm produce, and get our "store goods" from Yorkshire, Lancashire, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. What we don't get from Old England we should get from New England, it being made to appear that over the border everything is cheap to an astonishing degree.

The American tariff is nearly double the Canadian one, but still, the States is a cheap country to live in, else why the outcry about our being prevented by the N.P. from buying cheap American goods? The particular kinds of cheap cottons and cheap sugars, with the prospect of which we are tantalized, are to come, certainly not over one-fourth from free trade England, but three-fourths from the highly protected United States. Shut down every Canadian cotton factory to-day, and the custom lost would go, not to Lancashire, but to the States—seven-eighths of it, at least. That was most indubitably the way it was going, till the N.P. turned up to stop the process. In old England, again, the Canadian N.P. is certainly received with jealousy and distrust. Some very influential people "at home" are dead set after some scheme or other for bringing to naught this outrageous attempt on Canada's part to declare her commercial independence. In their view such a thing is monstrous; what is the use of having colonies if they so far forget their subordinate position as to think of manufacturing for themselves? The thing, it appears, has just started in Canada and Australia; now let it be put a stop to before it spreads farther. Examine all schemes yet proposed of imperial federation, and you will find this plank in every platform—that British goods are to be admitted free into Canada. That constitutes a dictatorial authority, Blackwood's Magazine, has "hardly ever" an unkind word for the colonies, and is in a general way our sincere friend. Yet at present old "Magor" has nothing better to propose for us than that we should abolish all duties as between ourselves and the mother country.

"Complete and absolute free trade between the mother country and the daughter country" is, according to Blackwood's, what we ought to look forward to. They might as well tell us at once to look forward to the ruin and decay of Canada as something desirable. This imperial federation idea is at the bottom of an attempt to make Canada's great economical revolution go backwards, to snatch from us what we have so recently gained—our commercial independence. The thing should not be encouraged or even winked at for a moment. It is the patriotic duty of the Canadian people to make it understood at once, in the clearest manner, that the Dominion's commercial independence, only the other day achieved, is not going to be surrendered for any consideration. The fable of the dog and the shadow is not to be repeated in our case; no glittering bauble of representation in the imperial parliament, or any such bit of gilt ginger-bread, shall tempt us to give up the solid reality of commercial independence which we now enjoy.

We are not here defending the incidence of the particular taxes of the N.P., but we are asserting that the declaration of our commercial independence involved in the adoption of the N.P. is not one likely to be surrendered by Canadians.

GATHERING LEAVES IN THE PARK

A Romantic Reporter Attempts an Idyl Autumnal-Bo Interview Two Young Ladies—They Were Intense.

A reporter was told yesterday afternoon to go to the Queen's park and take notes of what he saw there, and especially if he could write anything about "girls gathering leaves," to do so. These were the words of the editor.

The reporter entered the park from the northern gate. The first person he met was a little girl loitering some thirty yards in rear of her nurse. She had a little carriage into which she was gathering leaves. "Well, my little woman," said the reporter, "you have a nice, pretty cape on—who gave it to you?"

For no ostensible reason the little woman hung her head and began to sob. The nurse looked around and the reporter angled off to where he saw an athlete in running gear.

He approached the athlete, who was youthful and shy-looking.

"Well, sir," queried the reporter, "what are you doing in the park to-day?"

The athlete began to excuse himself and said he didn't know but everyone had a right to be in the park. He was only practicing to run a half-mile race.

"Oh, that's all right. Are you a professional?"

"No," said the athlete, "I go to the university."

"In what year?"

"The first."

"You are not a resident of the city, I presume?"

"No; I just came from Hamilton two weeks ago. (Pause.) Do you know where I can get a cheap boarding-house—one near the park here—about two and a half or three dollars a week?"

Exit the reporter, raising his hat and bowing respectfully, much to the awe of the athlete.

The reporter then walked among trees and scattered the fallen leaves with his stick, and anon he sent an acorn buzzing through the air, according to the unerring rules of an art he had learned when young, in the woods of sunny Perth.

The next individuals who happened to be in the reporter's path were two young ladies. They were in the very act of gathering leaves. The dresses they wore were identically the same, a sort of an autumn costume with a small cape, and the reporter conjectured they must be sisters. Nearing them, however, he observed that one was a brunette, with sparkling eyes and small features, while the other was of a larger frame and frank, open countenance and large blue eyes, like those of ox-eyed Juno.

There could be no blood relationship between them. The blonde carried a purse, holding it by means of a gold chain.

There they were in the very act of gathering leaves, and the lighting an audacious proposition presented itself to the reporter: Would he interview them?

Hardened to the task by many an audacious interview in the past, and carried away by the impulse of the moment, the poor reporter soon found himself facing two countenances that he alternately feared and adored.

"Ladies, excuse me," at length he said, with emotion, "I am a reporter."

She with the dark eyes at once assumed an attitude, and seizing her friend by the hand and fleeing backwards, sang her surprise in operatic strains: "A reporter—horror!"

"Heavens," cried the reporter, shaking in his boots. For this unexpected volley of song had completely confounded him. Did they take him for Frederic the Pirate?

Both girls then laughed out, and the scree felt disgustingly cheap. He knew not what to say or do.

At length he spoke. "Are you devotees of the most recent school of the intense?"

The presence of the reporter was apparently unheeded. "Look, Julia," said one of the fair duo, "look at the beautiful old gold tinge on this dear little leaf."

The tinge was indeed beautiful as the young lady held the leaflet, up in her lovely hand so that it caught the mellow rays of the setting sun.

"It's the leaf of a beach tree," chimed in the reporter with smiles. (Was he not audacious?)

They both laughed again, for the leaf, they protested, was a maple leaf.

"Why, I thought you reporters knew everything. Jais, he can't distinguish from another this dear little leaf, this emblem of our country. Isn't it horrid to think?"

And the young lady kissed the leaflet intensely.

The reporter who, you might say, had been born in the woods, could have sworn by all the rural deities in the neighborhood that it was a beach leaf, but he was too much unnerved to pursue his opinion further, and by his silence he gave assent to the fraud.

The reporter braced up. "I hope you will excuse me, ladies, but as I said before I am a reporter, and as such I hope you will be kind enough to answer me a few questions in regard to the gathering of autumn leaves, a subject of which I am totally ignorant."

"Did your sister ever gather leaves," the girl with the open countenance asked, enquiringly?

"You will understand, ladies, that reporters never have sisters, or if an odd one does, have a sister or a great many of them, they all reside in the country, where it is the reporter himself generally first sees the light of day. They leave the plough and come citywards with a note book in hand, prepared to cut their way through every thing till the highest pinnacle of fame is climbed. They live in rooms above stores, all alone, and take their meals from free lunch counters or wherever they happen to be."

"Dear me, how romantic!"

Again imagine the surprise of the reporter as he saw and heard the brunette burst out in song:

Dear wandering one,
Thou hast surely strayed.
He glanced round to see if any one was in the neighborhood. It was consulting to find no one within a radius of 300 yards of where they were.

"To tell the truth," said the reporter, "I am delighted at this reception. But pray tell me what you do with the leaves when you have gathered them."

"Julia, do you know where I intend to place this dear little leaf? I'm going to have it depend from the right shoulder of my little bust of Falles. Won't the goddess look charming?"

The reporter was proceeding to question the young ladies further, when he heard the laughter and chattering of a number of girls ascending a hill that was close by.

Presently, when they came in view, the brunette exclaimed, "Go, sir, if you please; if Miss — finds us here. Please go."

The reporter perceived that the senior girls of some ladies school were out gathering leaves, and that the two he had been talking with formed part of the bevy.

He took leave as gracefully as he knew how, and hadn't advanced more than a few steps when the amiable countenance of an elderly dame was noticeable at a short distance, looking forward with a keen eye.

It was under these circumstances that the reporter took his leave and walked slowly towards the fountain, and then he proceeded down the avenue.
