War Without a Mediator

(Toronto Globe.)

In the wars that have made modern history strong nations have been in a position to guard against dangerous supremacy. Victors were assured of indemnities and of territorial acquisitions to a reasonable and safe extent. But there was always the possibility of precautionary interference by a powerful combination if any victor attempted to push a conquest to a dangerous length. The Franco-German war of 1871 may serve as an illustration. French resistance was broken and surrender was complete, but it would not have been conducive to the subsequent peace and stability of Europe to tolerate an undue disturbance of the balance of power by an excessive use of Prussia's mastery. Had efforts in that direction created a necessity for effective intervention there were nations ready to respond. Self-interest as well as the deeper considerations of civility and humanity would have furnished sufficient motive.

In this war there is no such ulterior restraint. No combination of nations can restrain the victors. They will have Europe in their hands to deal with as they see fit without check or hindrance. There are no neutral and powerful nations solicitous about preserving the balance of power. From the judgment of the God of Battles there can be no appeal. The national existence of the conquered may be snuffed out. Only the magnanimity of the victors can prevent them taking the ultimate advantage of victory. A new situation confronts the world. No one can predict what the victors will demand, and no nation or union of nations can decide what they will be allowed to take. Political entities set up by long years of heavy sacrifice may be relegated to the closed records of history. The mutability of nations, an academic idea, may be impressed on this passing generation in the decisive clash of armaments. We know that liberty must triumph ultimately—let it triumph now.

Forest Insects in British Columbia

"Forest Insect Conditions in British Columbia" is the title of a new bulletin of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, which is the result of a parliamentary survey undertaken by Mr. J. M. Swaine, M. Sc., Assistant Entomologist for Forest Insects. During the past few years frequent reports of serious forest insect depredations in British Columbia have been received by the Division of Entomology, and in view of the high commercial value of the merchantable timber in the province, an investigation was projected. The present publication has been written with a view to assisting immediately the lumbermen and owners of timber lands in the matter of recognizing the commoner species of injurious beetles, and their injuries, with a view to the adoption of the control measures which are described. This bulletin, No. 17, Second Series, may be secured free by those who are particularly interested in the subject and make application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Summer Holiday

(Issued by the Department of the Public Health, Nova Scotia.)

The prime object of the holiday is, of course, to benefit health. This object is best attained if the holiday be so arranged that the time may be spent pleasantly, with a moderate amount of diversion, amidst congenial surroundings and in a healthful neighborhood. There are few people who are not benefited by a vacation. Even those whose avocation does not require very great expenditure of mental or body energy, find that their health is improved by an occasional change of scene, interests and mode of life.

But the holiday does not always have the effect which is desired. This is often because it is not planned in a rational way. Too active a search for those pleasures which rob one of rest and sleep, and too strenuous an indulgence in the novelties of the Summer resort menu card, are responsible for many of the failures to derive benefit during the vacation period. Quite apart from such follies, however, many an otherwise well planned holiday is terminated badly because of an unfortunate selection of the locality in which it is spent. The term "vacation typhoid," coined because of the frequent appearance of this disease amongst those just completing or recently returned from a holiday trip, indicates but one of the dangers to which the Summer health seeker is exposed. As the infection of typhoid is most commonly conveyed through water, or milk, or the various products of milk (including ice cream), one cannot be too careful about assuring one's self of the purity of these articles of diet.

One of the pleasantest as well as one of the most rational of holidays is that spent in camping, in a locality where fish and game give a special emphasis to the call of the red god. But the camper must not forget his duty which he owes to those whose health may be prejudiced by any carelessness in which he may indulge. Much camping is done on the shores of lakes and streams from which the water supplies of cities and towns are derived. Every care should be taken to prevent the pollution of such waters by any undesirable material.

It is known for instance that, on an average, four per cent of those who have had typhoid fever continue to harbour the germs of that disease, and to discharge such germs for a considerable period. A case is recorded of an epidemic of four hundred cases of typhoid which was traced to the infection of milk by a man who had had the disease forty-seven years previously. During all these years he had been a "carrier" of the infection, and quite probably had been the unwitting cause or infecting many other people. Moreover numerous instances have been reported of typhoid "carriers" who were unaware that they had ever had typhoid. Such persons doubtless had the disease in so mild a form that it was not recognized.

The typhoid germ escapes from the body with the discharges from bowel and bladder. If such discharges are so placed that drainage from them may find its way to a source of water supply, it can be readily seen that a whole community is thus subjected to infection by typhoid. Campers should therefore use every precaution against so disastrous a sequel to their holiday. Every permanent camp should be provided with a suitable chemical closet, which should receive the most conscientious care. Similarly those who go to spend their holidays at farm houses where sanitary conditions are not always of the safest construction, should not only guard carefully against becoming themselves infected, but should be most careful not to leave behind them any infection from which they may at any time have suffered.

No More Falling Hair No More Dandruff

Nearly every one has dandruff, and must reconcile themselves to the idea of becoming completely bald or resort to the use of Newbro's Herpicide. The manufacturers have absolute faith in Herpicide to remove all traces of dandruff. So perfect is this belief that all dealers are instructed to sell the preparation with a "money back" agreement. Such supreme confidence is the best evidence in the world of the merit of Herpicide. They know the result, hence the guarantee. Its protects the purchaser. Used as directed, Newbro's Herpicide eradicates dandruff and prevents the hair from coming out. It stops itching of the scalp, which is so disagreeable. Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Applications may be obtained at good barber shops. Bear River Drug Store, Bear River, Nova Scotia. Special agents.

The Quality of Eggs May be Readily Determined Without Breaking the Shell

Consumers Should Learn the Art of Candling.—The Government is Distributing Candling Appliances Free.

Few consumers appreciate the fact that the quality of an egg can be accurately determined without breaking the shell. The process of candling eggs is not difficult and with the view of encouraging consumers generally in the art and practice of candling, the Poultry Division of the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is distributing gratuitously throughout the country in the same manner as bulletins are distributed, simple convenient cardboard egg candling appliances. These may be obtained upon request to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa.

It is not generally known that an egg appears semi-transparent when held before the light in a darkened room, and that, if carefully rotated, even minor defects may be seen. Pamphlets dealing with this matter have been prepared, and illustrations included showing in detail the characteristic appearance of both good and bad eggs when being candled.

The contents of an egg, when laid, completely fill the shell but as cooling takes place contraction occurs and an air space is formed in the large end. The yolk is only slightly perceptible and readily turns round in the albumen when the egg is rotated.

A stale or shrunken egg may be detected by the size of the air cell. A bad egg is easily recognized through the contents having become dark and opaque. The size of the air cell the consistency of the albumen, the colour and mobility of the yolk and the eggs are the factors most generally recognized as determining quality. The candling of eggs is not a difficult process. It requires but little skill to tell at a glance the difference between good and bad eggs and anyone with practice can learn to differentiate between the various grades of good eggs.

The appliances mentioned above are of two different types, one suitable for use with the kerosene lamp and one suitable for use with the electric light. Neither the small amount of trouble required to secure one of these appliances nor the amount of labor entailed in candling presents any valid reason why the public should be obliged to use or accept bad or incubated eggs. Storekeepers will find it to their advantage to acquire facility in candling and it is recommended that every housewife should provide herself with one of these simple candling appliances, by the diligent use of which she may safeguard her family from many unpleasant occurrences at the breakfast table.

Distribution of Rams and Boars by the Federal Department of Agriculture

As the distribution of pure bred stallions and bulls, 125 and 314 of which respectively have been located in different parts of the Dominion, has now been completed for the current year, it is announced that the Live Stock Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture will undertake a further distribution of pure bred rams and boars during the months of August, September, and October next, to associations of farmers organized in districts in which the services of satisfactory breeding animals in these classes are not readily available. Applications for rams and boars, a large number of which have already been received, should be made at an early date, as it will not be possible to consider those that are not made prior to October 1st. Farmers desiring to secure the services of such stock should arrange to organize an association in their district and forward their application to the Live Stock Commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, from whom application blanks and all information with respect to the conditions under which pure bred sires are distributed, may be obtained. It is understood that all applications shall be reported upon by officers of the Live Stock Branch and that favorable action as regards any application shall be subject to the approval of the Live Stock Commissioner. Letters addressed to the Department do not require postage.

German submarines in the North Sea rushed towards the British cruiser Birmingham. Only the periscopes of the submarine were visible. The Birmingham aimed at the periscopes of one and struck. This compelled it to come to the surface. Another gun ripped off the superstructure and she sank. Other submarines fled.

Meat Prices Will Go Higher

Meat prices will raise above the record figures of recent years, despite the high grain crop; packing house reports asserted to Chicago in July. They say that the present scarcity of cattle and effect of dry weather on grazing lands will more than offset the enormous grain yield. A beef price of 19 cents to the butcher was predicted as an early possibility and it was pointed out by one of the packing-house men, are even now higher than for sometime. Scarcity of grass-fed cattle was referred to as one cause for the present advance. The dry Summer in the West is the chief cause of the present scanty supply on hoof. Another factor is that the demand for meat exceeds the supply.

St. John Harbor Now Strongly Protected

ST. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 7.—Part of St. John harbor, at the mouth of St. John harbor, has been converted into a fortification to guard the approach to this port. Lieut.-Col. B. R. Armstrong and a battery of 47 men and officers, in command of Major Magee, took charge of the island today, and the big 4.7 guns were taken down and entrenched on the island.

The soldiers are camping in the old immigration building, and provisions have been taken down from the city in sufficient quantities to last for some time. It is the intention of the battery to throw up earthworks facing the mouth of the bay and commanding the entrance to the harbor on all sides.

The field artillery temporarily converted into garrison artillery, were lodged in a secure place. The place naturally affords protection to the artillery and the soldiers in case of an action, but today the soldiers will throw up an earthwork to make the defence more sturdy.

Enlisting is proceeding rapidly amid scenes of great enthusiasm, and all the local regiments are now approaching war strength.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to place guards along its various wharves and to protect the grain elevators.

German Humanity League Says Kaiser Will be Deposed

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The British Humanity League had received a striking message of fraternal greeting from the Humanity League of Berlin. The message which is dated August 11, reads as follows:

"Dear Comrades: At last the clouds have burst. We cannot at this hour refrain from sending a message of fraternal greeting to you who have foreseen and prepared for the inevitable overthrow of a military despotism too long tolerated by millions of toilers.

"Crushed by its infernal weight, nakedly revealing itself, we see uncurbed a tyrant surrounded by parasites now directing the most devilish and selfish campaign ever waged against humanity.

"With toilers in all lands, we have no quarrel today. We extend our hands in heartiest friendship to every Belgian, French and British democrat.

"We know the internal revolution now proceeding in our midst will depose the despot whose insatiable egotism is drenching Europe with the blood of its workers and wage-earners."

Passenger Service on the Atlantic

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The British Admiralty today gave the assurance that the ocean routes are well patrolled, and a guarantee of the quick resumption of the Atlantic passenger service.

Aug. 17.
Miss Mabel Charlton has been the guest of Mrs. H. H. Forster for a week.
Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Gould, of Rosindale, Mass., are visitors at Mrs. Gould's cousin, Mrs. James Vaner's.
Mrs. Bessie Whitman, who has been in Providence and Lynn for the past five months, returned to her home, Aug. 3rd.
Eighteen dollars was the result of an ice cream sale in the hall on Saturday night to be given to the Hospital ship, for the war.
Mrs. Wm. Moody and two children, of Margarettville, have been visiting at Mrs. Moody's home, Mrs. J. Vaner's, for the past week.
Major Hoffman and family, of Bridgetown, are moving on the property of C. W. Hoffman formerly known as the "Drew Home".
Mrs. A. A. Forster, of Natick, Mass., Miss Grace Woodward, of Granville, and Mrs. W. V. Spurr were recent guests of their aunt, Mrs. Colin Smith.
Quite a number of the older men of this vicinity, enjoyed a trip to Middleton last Friday, returning with a broad smile and one hundred dollars Fenian Raid bounties. Perhaps this will be an incentive for our young soldiers to enlist in the present campaign.

TORBROOK
Aug. 17.
S. W. Barteaux, Jr., has volunteered for active service in the first contingent.
The ladies of this place, are collecting a contribution to Canada's hospital ship.
The Sunday Schools of this district unite for their annual picnic at Margarettville on Wednesday next.
A large number from here have been at Camp Meeting and the Sunday School Workers' Meeting at Berwick.
The army worm has made its appearance in some fields here but not so much damage will result to this year's crops.
A number of men employed at the Cohat Mines are coming home as some of the pits are being closed and at others single men are being laid off.
Crops of all kinds in this district are looking first-class. Providential, for it loc as if the farmer will have to get his food out of his own bin this winter.

OBITUARY
MRS. MARY ANN BANKS.
At West Inglesville, at the home of her son, Mr. Leonard Banks, on Aug. 10, Mrs. Sarah Ann Banks, after a protracted illness of paralysis, fell asleep in Jesus.
For seven years, Mrs. Banks, who was in her 82nd year, had suffered much and her death was not unexpected. Calmly and with the most implicit confidence in the wisdom of God and the sacrificial work of her Redeemer, Mrs. Banks had made all necessary preparations for the inevitable, with sanctified good sense regarding death merely as a part of God's great plan for His saints and so passed into the great beyond in perfect peace.
In her early girlhood days our sister gave her heart to the Saviour and was baptized and welcomed into the Methodist Church.
Her maiden name was Sarah Ann Durling. In the year 1847, she became the wife of George C. Banks, who preceded her five years ago.
She was an active and exemplary Christian. There was always a warm welcome at her fireside for ministers of the Gospel.
She was highly esteemed for her cheery sympathetic spirit and her interest in the welfare of all. She was a most faithful mother and a kind and helpful neighbor. For the comfort and welfare of others she thought more than for herself. Now that she is gone her ministrations will be missed, but we believe she will be remembered by all to whom she had her impress on others who will perpetuate her influence. Thus did she prove during the active part of her life a tower of strength to those around her; and all was done in her quiet unobtrusive way.
But the evil days drew nigh when she was laid aside from all outward activity; and although to one of her practical disposition the trial must have been a sore one, not a murmur was ever heard to escape from her loyal lips. Through these weary years of helplessness she was tenderly and lovingly cared for by her son and his estimable wife, until the call came to higher service in our Father's house of many mansions.
The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Armitage, who spoke very touchingly from the words, "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like His."
After which the remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband, in Fairview Cemetery.
The deceased leaves to mourn their loss three daughters and five sons: Mrs. Benjamin Leonard, of Kingston; Mrs. Annie Cobb, of Alliston; Mrs. Roy Hamilton, of Truro; Edwin, Leonard and John, of West Inglesville; Charles, of Wilmet and Avard, of Kingston.
Much sympathy has gone out most especially to Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Cobb, whose health would not permit them to join the others in their loving ministrations during the last hours.
But while in the lonely hearts that are left there is great longing for the mother who is gone none could wish her back for to her there is only rest and "fulness of joy."

Over Six Millions Ready to Fight For Russia
(Special Cable Despatch to The Globe)
LONDON, Aug. 7.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times says that Ukases published today show that Russia is determined to fight to the bitter end. Practically the whole of her population capable of bearing arms has now been called to the colors. When the present mobilization is completed Russia will have considerably more than 6,000,000 men under arms.
Despatches arriving from all points attest the opening of the Duma tell me the mobilization is proceeding everywhere with remarkable rapidity. The first batch of ploughmen reservists was seen in St. Petersburg yesterday evening, marching gaily, some of them wearing the birchbark shoes and rough attire characteristic of the remote provinces.
The wave of patriotic enthusiasm has brought in so many volunteers that the General Staff has been compelled to issue special rules restricting the admittance of many school-boys who are eager to enter the service.

The Interesting Snail
If you wish to examine a snail, place him on a piece of glass. He is a cold-blooded creature, and contact with a warm hand probably induces him somewhat the same sensation that we should experience if we were placed on top of the sitchen range. The coarseness of the glass will be agreeable to the snail, and he will travel along peacefully by expanding and contracting his broad, sucker-like feet.
His horns, or feelers, are protruded in an inquiring manner; and if a finger be placed in front of him, he will probably walk on until the feelers come in contact with it. Then the feelers are withdrawn and waved about in an effort to see the obstruction more clearly; for each feeler has at its end a small, imperfect, but still discernible eye, that is capable, at least of distinguishing between light and darkness.
A snail's manner of withdrawing his horns is very interesting. He does not pull them back, bodily, into their receptacles, but turns them inside out, just as one sometimes turns the fingers of a tight glove.
The little creature has a sense of smell, and also a fairly well developed ear, which lies close to the roots of his horns.
His breathing apparatus is of the simplest description. On looking carefully at his right side, anyone may see that a distinct hole occasionally appears there, remains open a few moments, and then closes again. This is simply a cavity in a creature's body, into which, at suitable intervals, he allows a certain quantity of air to enter.
When air has thus found its way into his interior, he keeps it there until the oxygen is exhausted by his vital processes. What remains, laden with carbonic acid, is allowed to escape by re-opening the little trap-door, and the receptacle is again filled with pure air.
The snail's mouth is armed with a saw-like tongue, like a long, narrow ribbon, coiled up so that only a part of it comes into use at any one time. Distributed over the surface of this ribbon are tiny teeth, sometimes as many as thirty thousand.
As one set of teeth becomes worn away by leaf-cutting, another portion of ribbon is uncoiled, and the teeth which were before wrapped up at the back of the mouth come forward to take their turn in pressing the food against the horny upper surface of the mouth, and thus cutting it.

The Zeppelin "Viktoria Luise"

(By H. I. Allan in Toronto Globe.)

The small German university town of Marburg is at any time a place of interest for the traveller. Its picturesque situation on the western slope of the valley of the Lahn immediately charms the stranger. Towering high above the town, and commanding a view of the valley north and south, sits the ancient castle where Luther and other reformers held their debates with representatives of Henry VIII. Below, in the town, and beautifully situated in grounds to which one descends by several steps from the street, is the interesting and perfectly preserved Church of Saint Elizabeth, which was built in 1235-33 by Langrave Conrad of Hesse, Grand Master of the Knights of the Teutonic Order, to contain the shrine of his sister-in-law, St. Elizabeth, and to serve as the church of the order. For more than two hundred years pilgrims came from far and near to do honor at this shrine and to see the relics of the beloved saint, which the priests displayed from the gallery to the crowds in the court below. By the order of Philip, the Protestant Landgrave of Hesse, the pilgrimages were stopped in 1539. It was this same Philip, the Generous, who, possibly to atone for the bigotry that scandalized the early reform movement, founded the University of Marburg, which has become one of the most important in Germany, having an annual attendance of over two thousand three hundred students.

Naturally, I was glad to be able to spend a week-end in this old city. My visit, however, was made more interesting than I had anticipated, for on looking out of my hotel-room window early Sunday morning I was surprised to see great throngs of people in the street. Dressing quickly, I went downstairs, where almost before me I was going to see the Zeppelin. The new "Viktoria Luise" was to come from Frankfurt at 9 o'clock, circle about the castle, descend to a landing-place in the valley and then return. That was the explanation of the large crowds in the street.

After my coffee and rolls I went outside, and as there was still an hour before 9 o'clock, I walked through the crowds, two blocks to the station. From here the people were actually streaming out. Special trains were arriving from all the surrounding district, bringing mostly peasant people attired in their holiday splendor—women with their bulging skirts, close-fitting waists and small expensive bonnets, covering merely the knob of their tightly-dressed hair. Most interesting were the costumes of the thrifty Schwalbians peasants from forty miles north. The men wore breeches, stockings high-heeled, buckled shoes, long navy blue put coats to the knees, and small, hard felt hats. The women's garb consisted of a dark-colored waist, skirt reaching to the knees, white stockings and high-heeled shoes. In marked contrast the dresses of the smaller children came to the ground.

MANY VISITORS.

One can quite believe that the local paper was right when it said the next morning that Marburg never had "so many visitors except, possibly, at the never-to-be-forgotten opening of its 'one-line' street car system." Urging my way through the crowds, I climbed up steep, narrow streets of the older town to the castle hill. All its points of vantage were already taken, for it was almost 9 o'clock. Everyone was looking southward down the valley.

There was a momentary hush during which the drone of the motors could be heard. Soon those in good positions announced that the dirigible was visible with the aid of glasses. The rest of us strained our eyes and shifted our positions, until finally we, too, could see a moving speck, and when we could not see, we contented ourselves with listening to the whirr of the engines. In five minutes she became quite distinct, and in another five she was flying along the valley high over the southern extremity of the town.

Steering sharply to the left and lowering her nose, she headed for the castle, and in a moment was passing gracefully over our heads so close that one could distinctly see the handkerchiefs of the passengers waved in greeting. From the two engine compartments some material like wash dust was being thrown, which, as it dropped, gradually scattered until it became invisible. This we learned was sand which is carried for ballast. As the vessel descends from a higher to a lower altitude, its tremendous surface collects moisture sufficient to considerably increase its weight and thus hasten its descent. Consequently, to maintain equilibrium and regulate the descent, ballast is carried in the form of bags of sand of half a hundredweight each. As the vessel descends sufficient of these bags are burst and thrown overboard to counteract the increased weight of collected moisture. This sand is so fine that, scattering wide as it drops, it is not at all observable on the objects where it finally settles.

THE LANDING.

For some little time the Viktoria Luise continued to lighten her ballast, circled once above the castle hill, and then descended in the direction of her landing-stage in the valley at the north of the town. Hurrying down through the old narrow streets and along the more modern thoroughfares, I elbowed my way amid the throng, until I eventually reached the landing place.

I was rather desirous of seeing the vessel land, for I knew the difficulty, and even danger experienced in anchoring such crafts, especially during a gale. Sometimes they will pass along the ground at the rate of from ten to twenty miles an hour, the grapple trailing on the surface, catching some object with a jerk, then tearing away from it, uprooting a small tree, plowing a furrow in the level earth, until after miles of tearing and jerking it finally makes itself fast in the bank of a stream, and brings the vessel to a dead stop to the discomfort of the passengers. This day, however, only a light breeze was blowing and the vessel had evidently descended with ease, for when I reached the large, open field which served as a landing-stage, she was resting gently on the ground, surrounded by a mass of eager observers. So here I was, gazing upon this huge five hundred-foot craft, the latest of Count Zeppelin's accomplishments. It was thirty years since that popular patriotic engineer travelled three and a half miles in his first dirigible, attaining a maximum speed of eighteen miles an hour. His balloon on that occasion consisted of sixteen gas bags, built in an aluminum frame. His second vessel, which was constructed with much more powerful engines, was wrecked in a gale on its initial trip, in nineteen hundred and five. Next year his third, carrying about nine passengers, sailed around Lake Constance, attaining a speed of thirty-six miles an hour. Subsequent vessels were built which made still more successful flights. In 1908 one flew two hundred and fifty miles in eleven hours, but the greatest attainments as yet had been those of the Viktoria Luise, and her sister ship, the Schwaben, which was burned at Dusseldorf, in June, 1912.

On walking around the Viktoria Luise as she rested on the ground in the Valley of Lahn, one was able to observe some of the distinctive features of the Zeppelin dirigible. On the lower part of the side of the balloon two fan-shaped projections, which have their counterparts on the opposite side, are noticeable. To these are attached the propellers, which are driven from the two engine compartments, constructed only a few feet from the body of the vessel. Zeppelin was the first inventor thus to attach the propellers to the balloon instead of the car, which was suspended some considerable distance below. This scheme necessitated for the balloon a rigid frame, which, though made of aluminum, greatly increased the weight of the vessel and therefore involved a much larger capacity for gas.

In the case of the Viktoria Luise the gas is contained in eighteen gas bags. The rudders are seen at the very rear of the balloon, and are operated thirty feet behind this box the steading wheel, which extends along the whole lower length of the vessel, broadens out to form the passenger compartment. From through the windows, as the dirigible rested on the ground, one could see the twenty or so occupants complacently chatting over their beer and wine.

OFF SHE GOES.

I had only time to saunter leisurely around the airship, noting her general construction and taking one or two snapshots, when word was given that she was about to start. The crowd was not dispersed, but only her strapping was loosed. Keeping herself parallel with the ground and without moving her propellers she ascended perpendicularly about one hundred feet, remained stationary a moment and then started her engines. Gracefully she moved forward, gradually increasing her speed and rising higher into the air. Slowly circling about she sailed back high above the landing ground, on over the castle and town and in a few minutes was again a small speck in the valley away to the south.

It is not to be wondered at that a sense of national pride, almost akin to a feeling of patriotism, arises in the heart of the German citizen as he beholds such successful attempts of his nation's scientists in aerial navigation. Scarcely a section of the country has been unvisited by one or other of the Zeppelins, whereas in the larger towns and cities it is now a commonplace to see them. This summer the "Hansa," one of the three vessels belonging to the passenger company, the "Deutscher Luftschiff Aktien Gesellschaft," made a new record by flight to Vienna and back. To conclude, however, that Zeppelin had mastered the air would be premature, especially in view of the terrible fate of the two naval airships in September and October of last year. Of the total twenty-two vessels which Zeppelin has built, fourteen have been destroyed or dismantled. The fact, moreover, that the remaining eight were built in 1911 and the rest since that date is manifest proof of the indurability of this type of air-craft. During the past year, in spite of accumulated experience, three vessels, which is a greater number than in any previous year, have been wrecked, and that too, as is vivid in the minds of all of us, with the most horrible suffering and loss of life. Nevertheless, in spite of the dangers and of the belief of experts of other nations, that the Zeppelin is too heavy a ship to ever become of commercial value, one cannot but admire the indomitable perseverance and courage of those who are devoting their energies and means in endeavoring to make them perfect.

A Forecast of the St. John Exhibition

Brighter, Bigger and Better than ever, is the slogan of the St. John Exhibition Association in connection with this year's fair, and St. John will no doubt sustain its reputation for holding highly successful shows. Previous shows held in St. John have entertained thousands of people from many parts, but this year, various novel features will be added of a most interesting character, and prospective visitors to the big show can rest assured that they will be delighted with the Exhibition. Mr. H. A. Porter, the General Manager, has already established a reputation as a promoter of high class amusement features, and has arranged for many high class attractions.

The entire Midway has been sold en-bloc, to Henry Meyerhoff Inc. of New York, one of the largest amusement promoters in America and this in itself assures the public of splendid novel attractions direct from the big shows in New York, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Boston, etc. The Midway with its army of "spielers" will furnish fun galore, and visitors to this department of the big show will have many novel ways of amusing themselves.

Among the attractions is the B. H. Patrick Trained Animal Circus, a combination of trained wild and domestic animals, such as bears, ponies, dogs, monkeys, boxing kangaroo and other species. This is one of the strongest attractions ever placed on the Midway of any exhibition.

The Museum of Living Wonders is another strong feature attraction, with all its living and breathing wonders from all parts of the world, including the Human Fish, Fat Girl, Living Half Lady, South African Snake Girl, Monkey Paradise and a number of other novelties that will startle the patrons of the big Exposition.

The Motordrome will perhaps be the most startling sensation of the Midway, for here the dare-devils of the motorcycle will race on the inclined side of a wall at the rate of sixty miles an hour; wherever this attraction has been presented it has startled all beholders, as it is so sensational that it almost takes the breath away.

Billy, one of the world's funniest little men and an entertainer who amuses at all times with his quaint ways and humor is another star attraction; he is the only living Billikin and is always a favorite from the beginning to the end, and will be a real novelty.

Another strong feature of the aggregation is Crazy Town where fun and laughter reign supreme; a trip through this world of fun is a sure cure for the blues and all who pay it a visit will have a hearty laugh from the entrance to the exit. There are many other first class attractions that will be heard from later, among them will be three big riding devices, a $10,000 Parker Jumping Horse Merry-go-Round, a Big Eli Ferris Wheel, one of the largest ever built, over fifty feet high, the Circling Wave which is a fine ride for both old and young.

In addition to the amusements to be found on the Midway there will also be a splendid programme of free acts in front of the Grand Stand, the principal of which will be a half hour game of Auto Polo, a game which is creating a lot of interest and excitement south of the line due to the skill, nerve and judgment which it calls forth. It partakes of the nature of ordinary Polo except that the contestants, instead of being mounted on ponies, ride in light automobiles driven by an attendant,—that is each car has a crew of two, one of which attends to the manipulation of the car, the other to the swinging of the mallet and the driving of the polo ball. As in the case of ordinary Polo collisions are numerous and unsets not infrequently, but as the players are garbed in togs not unlike the American foot ball uniform the element of personal danger is greatly minimized although not entirely absent. The game has taken a great hold wherever seen and St. John will have the honor of adding still another feature to the long list which have been introduced to these Provinces by the enterprise of the Exhibition Association.

This splendid feature will be supplemented by a Trained Animal Act and a bounding Hay Wagon Act which was a great sensation last year in the New York Hippodrome and which is declared to be far in advance of the ordinary act of that kind. These features, together with the double fire works programme which has been arranged for will give the patrons what should prove a most satisfying programme. In short the attractions at the St. John Exhibition this year will far surpass the features of many of the larger exhibitions in Canada and all who pay the exhibition a visit will be more than repaid.

From the industrial standpoint, also, this year's show will outclass all previous efforts. All space on the main floor and in the gallery has been taken, and a "waiting list" has been opened in case of withdrawals or forfeitures.

The entries in the Poultry, Live Stock and Agricultural Departments are coming along very satisfactorily and a splendid showing in the above departments is assured. A report from the Secretary of the Women's Work Department is very gratifying to the management, and many new and interesting exhibits will be seen in this department including comprehensive exhibits regarding "Child's Welfare" movements, exhibits of this nature excited a lot of interest last winter in New York, Montreal and other large centres and were strong educational lessons, and incentives to improvements in conditions of city life for children.

The Experimental Farm System of Canada will take a special interest in the Exhibition this year and will be on hand with a splendid exhibit of Agricultural and Horticultural products, which will be placed in the new wing. This will be supplemented by exhibits by the N. B. Department of Agriculture.

The Exhibition will also contain several moving machinery exhibits demonstrating different lines of industry. Special stress has been laid on this department this year and visitors will no doubt see very much to interest them.

The New Brunswick Kennel Club are co-operating with St. John Exhibition Association, and a bench show in the old Drill Hall will form a department of the show. It is expected that upwards of 500 dogs will be in competition.

The exhibit grounds and buildings have received considerable attention. The grounds have been enlarged by incorporating the large tract of land between Sheffield Street and where the old fence was formerly located.

William Taylor, for many years Superintendent of Buildings, has for some weeks had a large crew of men getting the grounds and buildings into shape, and even at this early date they present a very fine appearance. The contract for painting the main building has been let, and this will no doubt add greatly to the general appearance of the surroundings. In addition to the old wooden approach to the main entrance has been torn up, and replaced by a splendid concrete walk.

In conclusion it might be said that St. John Exhibition this year will undoubtedly surpass all previous efforts in merit, etc., and prospective visitors can look forward to the big show with many happy anticipations. The travelling representatives report a very keen interest in the Exhibition this year and with favorable weather conditions, there is likely to be a record attendance.

Fatal industrial accidents in England have increased from 1,260 to 1,309 in the last year, according to a factory inspector's report at London.

The Horrors of War

The Baron De Marbot, a French Officer under the first Napoleon, towards the close of his life published his "Memoirs" in three volumes, which make most fascinating reading. In these volumes there are many deeds of valor recorded, but one is especially impressed by the stories of hardship, cruelty and suffering of which the Baron was a witness, and of which he gives very circumstantial accounts. Referring to some of these during the French Revolution he says, "No colors that history can employ to depict the horrors of which the Terrorists were guilty can bring the picture up to the reality."

Of the siege of Genoa he says, "The troops, privileged beyond the starving multitude received a wretched ration of a quarter of a pound of horse flesh and a quarter of a pound of so called bread." "A horrible compound of damaged flour, sawdust, starch, hairpowder, oatmeal, linseed, rancid nuts, and other nasty substances, to which a little solidity was given by the admixture of a small portion of cocoa." "Of 16,000 French soldiers in the besieged city, 10,000 died from famine and typhus. During the siege a tremendous rain storm came on and the Austrians sought a temporary shelter in neighboring cottages and under trees. The besieged Frenchman observed this, rushed out notwithstanding the rain and taking the Austrians unawares captured 3,000 of their grenadiers, took them into the city, drove them into hulks in the harbor and put them on half rations, i.e., half the wretched allowance granted to the French soldiers to which we have referred. Marbot describes these Austrians, kept there till the close of the siege after fifteen days, as "yelling with rage and hunger; and at last after having eaten their shoes, knapsacks, pouches, and even according to rumor, the bodies of some of their companions they nearly all died of starvation."

Another gruesome account is connected with the burning of the Austrian town of Hollabounn. The wounded Russians had taken refuge in houses where they were soon overtaken by the fire, and many burned alive. Others had crawled into the streets but the fire pursued them there and thousands of these creatures were seen half reduced to ashes and some of them still breathing. The bodies of the horses killed had been roasted like those of the men, and the horrible and sickening odor was observed at the distance of several leagues.

In the famous battle of Austerlitz, Napoleon drove the vanquished Austrians and Russians before him with terrible slaughter. Many soldiers, chiefly Russians, five or six thousands in number fled across a frozen lake. The ice was thick and they might thus have escaped, but Napoleon calling up his artillery ordered them to fire into the ice and it was cracked and broken in many points. The water rising through the cracks covered the foes and in a brief time, thousands of Russians with horses, guns and wagons slowly settled down into the water and most of them were drowned.

At this battle of Austerlitz, the French General, Morland, was killed. Napoleon decided to send the body to France to be buried in a memorial building which he proposed to erect. The surgeons had not the material needed to embalm the body. They therefore put it into a barrel of rum which was sent to Paris. The barrel with its contents was placed in the School of Medicine waiting the erection of the building, but Napoleon lost the Empire, the building was not erected, the barrel broke through decay, the moustaches of the General had grown till they fell below his waist and the body was exhibited at so much a person, until the General's family instituted a lawsuit against the man who was making a curiosity of it, and got it in their possession.

In the battle of Eylau, Baron de Marbot was stunned by a cannon ball which tore the peak of his cap. While in this half stupefied condition, a drunken Russian grenadier made several thrusts at him with his bayonet. One of the thrusts penetrated the thigh of the horse which was an exceptionally vicious animal. The horse sprang at the Russian, and at one mouthful tore off his nose, lips, eyebrows, and all the skin of his face and left him dripping with blood.

Speaking of the battle of Waterloo in which he took part the Baron says "they were manoeuvred like so many pumpkins. The big generals were making bad speeches at Paris; the small ones lost their heads and all went wrong."

These are a few of the many incidents found in these memoirs which illustrate the horrors of war. They can easily be multiplied indefinitely from the history of Napoleon. Indeed every war had its own sad list of cruelties and sufferings. And many of them have accomplished nothing which might not have been secured by peaceful methods.

Francis Parkman writing of the "Seven Years War" remarks that as far as German countries are concerned it resulted in nothing but the exhaustion of combatants. It was estimated that 350,000 soldiers of various nations lost their lives besides hundreds not engaged in battle who died from famine, exposure, disease or violence; and yet with all this waste of life, "not a boundary line had been changed."

We have as yet heard little of the horrors of the present war. But the sad record has begun. Accounts have come of the death of hundreds of babies in the Austrian capital for want of milk. The trains which brought the needed supplies are engaged in carrying troops and armament to the battlefield, and the milk cannot now be supplied. In Berlin, people are starving for want of food and money to buy it, and the harvests are not gathered for the want of harvesters. In some of the Canadian cities women and children are in distress. The fathers have left for the war without leaving their families supplied. The women seek work and cannot secure it. The need and suffering begins. As the witness says, "these are the beginnings of sorrows. Multiply these evils by all the cities, towns and villages in all the countries at war, or about to be at war."

The present war has brought again into prominence the calamities which have followed the Hapsburg dynasty represented by Francis Joseph, of Austria, during the sixty-six years he has occupied the throne. His brother Maximilian, for a brief time Emperor of Mexico was executed, and his wife the beautiful and accomplished Carlotta went insane. In 1889, his only son and heir, Prince Rudolph, died by suicide. His sister-in-law, the Duchess D'Alencon was burned to death in Paris. His wife, the Empress Elizabeth, was stabbed to death by an Italian anarchist. His brother, Archduke John, disappeared, where and how has not been made public. Last in the sad list are the Archduke Ferdinand and his wife murdered by a Serb.

Yesterday, the 18th, Francis Joseph, was 84 years of age. One would have thought him at this advanced age and after this catalogue of troubles to have been differently minded than to have started the war drum in Eastern Europe which has aroused the world.

Much as we dread war, we must acknowledge there is much truth in Kipling's "Tommy."

"It's Tommy this, an' Tommy that,
An' Tommy 'll be behind;
But it's 'Please to walk in front
Sir'!"

When there's trouble in the wind,
For it's Tommy this an' Tommy that,
An' 'Chuck him out the brute'!
But it's 'Saviour of 'is country
When the guns begin to shoot.'"

The Cost of War

Dr. Charles Richet, statistician of the University of Paris, estimates the cost of war between Austria, Serbia, Germany, France, Russia, Italy, and Roumania. He concluded that the daily expense of the actual campaign would be something like $54,000,000. Dr. Richet bases his estimates on the assumption that roughly 20,000,000 men would be called to arms. If such a war lasted only as long as the brief Franco-Prussian conflict of 1870 the outlay on this basis would exceed $5,000,000,000 irrespective of war indemnities.

Bridgetown Tennis Players Win Silver Cup.

On Saturday, Aug. 8th, the Misses Louise and Beal Ruggles, Messrs. Wm. Landry and LeMoine Ruggles left with Mr. Frank Ruggles in his auto for Yarmouth, where they attended the Provincial Tennis Tournament. Miss Louise Ruggles and Mr. Landry won first place in the mixed doubles, bringing home silver cups. Mr. Landry and Mr. Frank Ruggles put up a hard fight to obtain first place in the men's doubles, but were finally defeated by Messrs. Rice and Smith, the title holders. Miss Lou Ruggles after a very close match lost to Miss Lydiard in the ladies' singles, while Mr. Landry, after one of the finest exhibitions of tennis during the tournament, lost to Mr. W. Wiswall, the player-off for the championship of the Province. Frank Ruggles was defeated by R. Smith of Sydney in the semi-final rounds. This match presented, at times, tennis of the A. L. A. McLaughlin order.

The Bridgetown players were royally entertained by the Yarmouth Club, and returned home on Sunday, August 16th.

Miss Lou Ruggles leaves to-day for Chester to play in the free-for-all tournament, with Mr. A. Wiswall of partner. Mr. Landry and Frank Ruggles are contemplating to enter the men's doubles at Chester.

A banquet in honor of the delegates will close the convention.

St. John Exhibition

Late advices from the management of the St. John Exhibition are to the effect that everything is proceeding satisfactorily and that the Show will be held from September 5th. to the 12th, as planned. The fact that the Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition has been called off will make St. John Show more than ever the chief attraction of the season. While the conditions occasioned by the war have caused one or two exhibitors to withdraw, owing to the fact that it is impossible for them to get some special goods from Europe, their places have quickly been taken by firms anxious to avail themselves of this opportunity and others still remain on the "waiting list." Word has been received from the amusement men in New York that everything in this department will be carried out according to contract, in fact every department of the Exhibition will be complete and as far as known unaffected materially by the European situation. The various transportation companies will have their cheap rates ready for publication in a day or two, whereof information may be obtained from the Station Agent.

We have been requested to publish the following poem. Author is unknown.

"Marriage is like a flaming candle-light,
Placed in a window on a Summer's night,
Inviting all the insects of the air
To come and sting their pretty wings
lets there;
Those who are out butt heads
against the pane,
Those who are in butt to get out again."

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

A strict guard is now being kept on all the larger bridges of the D. A. R. Division of the C. P. R.

The Provincial Exhibition at Halifax has been cancelled for this year, owing to present war conditions.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. McCormick will be "at home" to their friends on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, Aug. 26 and 27th.

The Scott Act is down and out in Cumberland County. The Nova Scotia Temperance Act has come into operation automatically.

Rev. J. H. Balcom, of Paradise, will preach at Hampton, on Sunday morning, the 23rd inst., and at St. Croix Cove in the afternoon. Silver collections will be taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison Smith, of Margareville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn, to Mr. Robie W. Tufts, of Wolfville. The marriage will take place on September second.

The Monitor has been asked by the "powers that be" to give warning to drivers of automobiles that all lights on their cars must be lighted at a reasonably early hour. Failure to do this may mean a fine.

Our town policeman, Mr. Gill, who served in the South African war with No. 1 Field Ambulance of the Army Medical Corps, Halifax, received notice on Monday to report to headquarters at once.

Mr. Wm. Ruffe has received word that his daughter, Mrs. Alburn Neily, Regina is dangerously ill. Physicians say her case is incurable. The many friends of Mrs. Neily will sympathize deeply with her and the family.

We learn from a number of our correspondents that the Army Worm has made its appearance in several sections of the County. We would call the attention of our readers to a short article regarding this pest in our issue of August 12th, on page 4.

Fenian Raid bounties were paid in this county last week. Mr. Chas. T. Panet, Secty. of the Militia Department, Mr. H. W. White and Mr. E. J. Faren were in Middleton on Friday and Friday evening and Annapolis on Saturday, and distributed the cheques to the "veterans." There were 681 qualified applications from Annapolis County.

The barn of Mr. Harry Miller at Upper Granville was burned to the ground last Friday night at about 10 o'clock, together with about ten tons of hay and a number of farming utensils. Two cows were burned to death, and a third so badly injured that it may not live. There was a small insurance on the building. The origin of the fire is unknown. It is a serious loss to Mr. Miller at this particular season of the year.

Weather permitting the St. James Sunday School picnic will be held to-morrow, (Thursday), at Hampton. The committee will provide transportation for the staff and scholars of the Sunday School, all of whom are asked to meet at the Church at 8 a. m. Other persons are asked to make their own transportation arrangements. If tomorrow be wet the picnic will be held the next fine day following.

Owing to the war the President and Directors of the Canadian Forestry Association have, after the most careful consideration, decided to cancel the arrangements for the Forestry Convention which was to be held in Halifax, Sept. 1st to 4th, 1914, and to postpone the Convention indefinitely. Whatever it is decided to do in the future, due notice will be given thereof to the members and all other concerned.

The Honorable Mr. Justice Graham, Judge Ordinary of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, on the 28th of July ultimo, filed a decision in the suit for divorce brought by Laura G. Williams (formerly Laura G. Ray of Granville in this County) against Herman E. Williams granting a decree absolute. Mr. B. W. Roscoe, of the firm of Roscoe & Roscoe, Barristers of this town, acted as solicitor for the petitioner.

In conversation with Col. McNeil over the telephone this morning, the Monitor is informed that there has been a splendid response to the call for volunteers from the 69th regiment to go with the Canadian contingent to the European war. But owing to the very rigid medical examination only thirty-five have passed including three officers. These men are now under canvas at Middleton and will probably leave to-morrow for Quebec for mobilization.

During the next few days every man, woman and child in Bridgetown, and neighboring villages and districts, will be called upon to contribute to the fund for the "Hospital Ship," which is to be presented by the women of Canada for the use of the wounded in the War. Young ladies will call upon you and will gratefully accept of any contribution large and small. As the money must be sent away on Saturday, everybody is requested to have their contributions in readiness when the collectors come. Every district in Canada is contributing generously. Let Bridgetown do its share and bring credit on its citizens.

The excursion down the river to Digby on Monday last by S.S. Valinda proved quite as enjoyable as promised. The weather was simply ideal for such an outing, and the Bridgetown Band, which was in attendance, added greatly to the enjoyment of the trip. The boat touched at Port Wade and Annapolis going and returning, leaving passengers at both places, some of whom returned to Bridgetown by automobile. The Cemetery Company wish to thank the Band (who gave their services gratuitously) and the many others who helped in making this excursion a success and contributing thereby something in the vicinity of $60 toward the Cemetery Fund.

Remarkable Results of the New Tissue Builder Tonnline Tablets in Many Cases of Run-Down Men and Women.

Prove it Yourself by Buying a Box of Tonnline Tablets Now.

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonnline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think that there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, stimulants, heavy eating, diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of, but without result." Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment, Tonnline Tablets. "I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonnline Tablets, so I decided to try myself. Well, when I looked at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger or more 'nervy' in my life."

Tonnline Tablets are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell-growth, food, increases the number of blood-corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and solid healthy flesh, and rounds out the figure. For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. It is a beauty maker as well as a form builder and nerve strengthener. Tonnline Tablets cost $1 for a 50-days' treatment, at druggists, or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

Nothing seems safe from the fickle fingers of fashion. Now it's the wedding ring that is having the chances rung. Not content with restricting its chance of style to its width heretofore, fashion has decreed that gold is no longer the chief material. Hence the nuptial band of platinum will encircle the third left finger of all fashionable brides of 1914, if the bridegroom knows what's what!

ROYAL KIDDIES.

Their Life Not the Glorious Thing Average Child Imagines.
 "If I were a prince," or "If I were a princess" figures very largely in the day dreaming of children, yet, if the truth were but known, many a little child of royalty would give his entire collection of toys for the chance to spend but one day like the boy or girl who dreams of royal splendors. No royal child enjoys one-tenth the freedom or care-free happiness of the average youngster. It is a difficult life—that of the child of kings—that is often fraught with tears and tribulations.
 Although Queen Mary of England has never allowed her children to be overworked so far as lessons are concerned, she is careful to see that they work hard and that they obey their governess implicitly. Her Majesty has superintended their home training herself. Every morning the children go to her home and read a portion of Scripture that has been selected by the Queen.
 The religious training of Princess Mary has been conducted solely by the royal mother. The princess has a resident governess, by Mr. Hamsell, the Prince of Wales' tutor, supervises the education of all the English royal children. He holds an examination of his illustrious pupils regularly once a month, and a report of their progress is sent to the King and Queen.
 Discipline is maintained in the royal school room on lines quite as strict as in any other. A printed list of rules hangs on the wall, and any violation of these is punished with extra lessons or detention in the school room. The princess and princes have their meals in a room adjoining the class room. Breakfast is at 8:30, lunch at 1 o'clock, tea at 4:30, and a light dinner is served at 7 o'clock. Punctuality is insisted upon on all occasions.
 There is only one English royal prince who is still in his nursery days—Prince John, aged 9. He has always been the demon of the royal nurseries, and many good stories have been told of his pranks. A few months ago he was a great disgrace, for, having gained possession of his sister's paint box, he daubed his face with streaks of color, and entered the dining-room, where the King was entertaining several very distinguished visitors. Few boys born of wealthy parents are so restricted in pocket money as are the English princes. They have practically no money to spend, and have to ask their tutors or governesses for anything they may want.

In the Cannibal Isles.

The Solomon Islands are in the Pacific Ocean, a little south of the equator, and are mainly inhabited by Malays and Papuan negroes. On some of the smaller islands the natives are cannibals. The captain of the Sea Queen knew this when he sailed from Queensland, Australia, for Buka after a cargo of copra, but he imagined the natives would be friendly. He was cruelly undeceived. The morning after the vessel's arrival at Buka six boats came alongside and the natives swarmed up on the deck.
 The crew brought out the goods for trading purposes, and everything was apparently on a friendly footing, when suddenly the natives attacked the sailors with knives.
 All the sailors were killed except three. One of these jumped overboard and was drowned; the two survivors were bound hand and foot and carried ashore. The natives then prepared for a cannibal feast, while several of them went back to the ship and found a barrel of liquor.
 In a short time the entire party became stupidly drunk, and the two sailors, after freeing themselves from their bonds, jumped into a small boat and put to sea.
 After floating aimlessly for two days they were picked up by a trading vessel, which carried them to other islands, from which they finally secured passage for Australia.

Put Both Feet In It.

For two or three days on one occasion Speaker Lowther was away from the House of Commons through illness. On one of these days a Liberal walked into a west end club and there met Mr. Gully, the son of the late Speaker. "Ah," said he unthinkingly, "Lowther is the best speaker 'we ever had.'" Too late he realized his faux pas. But more was to come. In an adjoining room he met Mr. Peel. "Oh," he gushed, "I've just said such a stupid thing. I met young Gully, and, forgetting his father, said Lowther was the best Speaker we ever had." Now, Mr. Peel was also the son of a previous Speaker. "I dare say," he replied to the unhappy Liberal, "that if you went outside and walked down the street, you might meet one of the Brands." Mr. Speaker Peel was the successor of Mr. Speaker Brand.—London Citizen.

Dr. Johnson's Resolutions.

Dr. Johnson compiled this list of good resolutions on his 51st birthday, 1759: "Resolved, Deo juvante, to combat notions of obligations; to apply to study; to reclaim imaginations; to consult the resolves on Tetley's coffin; to rise early; to study religion; to go to church; to drink less strong liquors; to keep a journal; to oppose laziness by doing what is to be done to-morrow; rise as early as I can; send for books of history of war; put books in order; scheme of life."

Felicity Restored.

It is recorded that two wolves in the London Zoo were very jealous of each other and frequently quarrelled. One day during an unusually furious dispute the male approached the female angrily as if to bite her, but just as he reached her he stopped as if held back by some invisible force. The female then approached timidly, gently licked his face, and domestic happiness was once more restored.

HAPPY MOTHERHOOD

The happiness of motherhood is too often checked because the mother's strength is not equal to her cares while her unselfish devotion neglects her own health.

It is a duty of husband or friend to see that she gets the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which is not a drug or stimulant but nature's concentrated oil-fool tonic to enrich and enliven the blood, strengthen the nerves and aid the appetite. ## Coming Into His Own

The old prejudice against the farmer's occupation also is disappearing. To-day the man who talks about Rubes and hay-seeds and country pumpkins is regarded by thinking people as an ignoramus. The natural man or woman loves to plant things and see them grow. Stupid prejudices and traditions are all that stand in the way of a powerful movement "back to the land"—a movement which will benefit the crowded city as well as the country.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy 'Fruit-a-tives'. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken 'Fruit-a-tives' for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months."

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases." "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Watching Over Girl Travellers

The lofty, spacious concourse of the railway station was humming with activity that afternoon. Travellers by hundreds and by thousands were passing through it to outgoing trains.

As dusk approached a young girl appeared from among several hundred passengers arriving by an incoming train—a girl apparently masquerading in a large, ill-fitting brown suit, which looked as if it might belong to her mother, but which evidently was new. She seemed to have difficulty in managing the long skirt to which she was unaccustomed.

For a moment she stood in the brilliantly lighted concourse, as if awed by its magnificence, and a little frightened at finding herself alone there in that swirling, hurrying crowd of men and women. Timidly she approached a big man in uniform and plucked up courage enough to say—

"Please direct me to a boarding house near the station, so I can meet my brother, who is coming on this train tomorrow."

The big man gave her a single glance, and then somehow his face softened, for he had long experience with all sorts and conditions of human nature.

"Certainly, lady," he said, "Come along with me and I will fix you up."

He led her across the concourse into a quiet waiting room, where he must have given a signal to somebody, for in a moment came to them a young woman, quietly dressed, who was very kind and on whose coat was fastened a pretty badge of metal bearing these words: "Agent of Travellers' Aid Society."

The tall usher touched his cap. "This child just came in on number 30 and so," he said, mentioning the train by which the girl had arrived.

"Thank you," said the agent. Then she turned to the girl and said smilingly: "Now, my dear, what can I do for you? That's my business, you know, to meet strangers here in the station, and help them in any way I can."

"I want to find a boarding place for the night, please. My brother is coming here by this same train tomorrow and I must meet him."

"Oh, that's easy," said the agent. "I know a very nice place within a few blocks, so we'll just go there and I'll see that you are well cared for."

Together they left the station, the young woman with the decisive air of one who well knew how to take care of herself and any one in her charge and the girl holding fast to the only luggage she carried—a basket, which later was found to contain her own little dress, her apron, some candy and a few trinkets such as only a child would think of buying. She stepped carefully, trying not to trip over her long skirt, as she went along with the young woman up a busy avenue for several blocks, then turning into a quieter street and finally entering a brownstone house, where the young traveler was given a nice room in the care of Travellers' Aid agents.

To the experienced woman in this brownstone house, which was the headquarters of the Travellers' Aid Society, the girl was evidently a runaway from home, and while efforts were made to ascertain her identity tact was used to avoid arousing her suspicion. She said her name was Lucy and that she was going to live in New York. She had come on ahead of her brother, who was to arrive the next day at a certain hour and she was to meet him in the station. The cheap jewelry she wore had been given to her by her folks, she said.

So there she remained over night in the Travellers' Aid headquarters, while her father, hundreds of miles away, was telegraphing the police of half a dozen cities to search for her, while her mother was almost distracted, while relatives and friends were seeking some clue in every possible direction.

At the appointed hour the next day Lucy was taken to the railway station by a Travellers' Aid worker to meet her brother. Seeing the man she expected she felt the worker and went to talk with him. A few moments elapsed. Then, uttering a little cry, she rushed back to the Travellers' Aid representative, her eyes wide open with terror. Throwing herself into the young woman's arms she sobbed:

"Oh, I want my father! I want my father! But will he come so far? Will father come way down here to get me?"

The agent quieted the girl, assured her that her father would come, without doubt, and as quietly as possible took her back to headquarters. On the way Lucy told her she really was and where she came from and gave her father's name. Then the long distance telephone was set to work in headquarters. Only a few minutes elapsed before the father was at the other end of the connecting wire and was informed that Lucy was safe. He would take the next train for New York, he said.

While he was journeying to the city other questions were asked of Lucy and now she was willing to tell all. Without the knowledge of her father or mother she had stealthily read a good many novels. She came to forget that she was still a child of thirteen and, her head filled with trashy stories, imagined she was a grown woman and longed for a romantic love affair of her own.

At this critical juncture of her life she met by chance a young man who easily persuaded her to leave home and travel to New York, where he would meet her and show her the sights of the great city. This man did not dare bring her into the State of New York, for he evidently understood the provisions of criminal law covering such a proceeding, so he sent her on ahead, promising to follow the next day, as he did. Until she saw him in the railway terminal and spoke to him Lucy had no idea what her fate was to be. She was a different girl who went home with her father and she wore her own little dress.

Now that is a true story; one of thousands of instances handled by the Travellers' Aid Society, and its counterpart could be found over and over again in almost any city of the United States and Canada, where the work of protecting strangers, especially young girls and aged women, is carried on.

In addition to aiding travellers on their way the organization investigates the many and questionable inducements that cause parents to leave their homes in answer to advertisements and offers of employments, dangerous addresses and acquaintances. When necessary it assists girls and boys and women coming to the city to find respectable lodging houses, or when they are out of work or in distress otherwise helps them to return to their homes.

In the case of strangers coming to reside in the city the Travellers' Aid endeavors to help them get in communication with Protestant, Jewish or Catholic institutions or leaders, as the case may be, so that they may benefit socially, mentally and religiously, according to individual preference and habit. Furthermore, in the case of a stranger travelling to a city where no friends live the society will ascertain the individual's religious affiliation, if any or her social or intellectual inclination, and notify some well known person in that city, with the result that she will find at least one friend awaiting her arrival, even if she never before saw that friend.

An illustration of the need for this special form of protection is seen in the case of a pretty girl of 17 years, who was coming to this country to live with relatives in Kansas. She came across the ocean alone, and on the steamer met two men who were especially kind to her. The older one asked her to call him uncle, which she did as a matter of fun, and the younger man proposed marriage to her. They were so good to her and so considerate, that she allowed them to keep her money, lest it be stolen on the ship.

All was going happily for her until the ship arrived here, when several keen-eyed men, wearing the uniform of Government officials, sat down at a large table to look at a passenger after another, and asked certain questions before they landed. The young girl bound for Kansas was surprised when her "uncle" was unable to prove his identity, and the inspectors turned her over to the care of Travellers' Aid agents.

With one of these women she went down to the pier, where the younger man claimed her as his affianced wife, said he wished to marry her the next day, and meantime would take her to dinner. The Travellers' Aid agent had her attention temporarily attracted by several other girls who wanted advice, and when she looked around the girl had disappeared. Some one told her that two or three hotel runners had been heard to say:

"Whatever you do, get that girl! Instantly the Travellers' Aid worker ran to a telephone booth, notified quarters of the society, and asked for assistance. It was sent immediately, almost every agent in the building being rushed to the steamship pier to obtain a description of the missing girl. Then the agents spread out fanlike through that section of the city. Within sixty minutes the girl had been found and taken to headquarters.

Later she was put on a train for the West. As far as was necessary, the circumstances were explained to the conductor in the letter of instructions handed him, so that special care would be taken to prevent harm from reaching her. Word was telegraphed to Chicago, where the girl was met by agents of the Chicago organization, and through a chain of conductors and agents, at point after point, where she changed cars, this inexperienced girl finally reached her relatives in Kansas, who had received from New York by telegraph a description of the two men and of the peril she had escaped while being pursued by them.

In a large number of cases help is given simply because of misfortune. On one of the hottest days of last Summer a young man and his wife and two small children, exhausted, dirty, footsore, went to the headquarters of the society, then in East Forty-eight street. The father was carrying a very heavy suit case and one of the little children wearily trudged beside him, while the tired mother walked near by, loaded down with a smaller suit case and her baby.

When they got in the cool quiet office they sank into chairs and cried from sheer exhaustion. They lived away out in Michigan and had come east on a long planned vacation. All went well until they had started homeward, but while going from one railway station to another in New York their money and railway tickets had been lost or stolen. They knew nobody in the city; they did not have a nickel for carfare and they appealed to a policeman for advice. This was when they arrived at the Liberty street ferry and discovered their plight.

The policeman advised them to go to the Travellers' Aid Society and the little family set out in the broiling sun for a tramp of five miles long in mid-summer. Travellers' Aid agents took them to a home where they could stay temporarily and communicated with their friends out in Michigan, who at once sent on money to pay for transporting the four back home.

The policeman in this case made a mistake. He should have notified the officials in the ferry house, who would have telephoned headquarters, with the result that an agent would at once have been sent down town with sufficient funds to take the tired and hopeless little family up town by street car.

This work of protecting incoming travellers in New York was started in 1885. The idea is said to have originated with two old gentlemen, members of the Society of Friends, William Collins and Edward Prior. They had read in newspapers of the traps and snares set for ignorant, inexperienced girls who came to this city and decided that something must be done to offset the danger. In order to get the work under way they offered to pay the salary of a city missionary, whose sole work would be to meet and look after young girls coming into New York.

The work was then placed under the direction of the New York Bible and Fruit Mission, and Miss Etta Clark, a young woman with special adaptability, was chosen to do the actual work of meeting the girls. At about this time other cities began to engage in the work, here and abroad, London, Stockholm and Christiania doing it through the Young Women's Christian Association and its branches. By 1888 it had become well established in New York. Eventually Miss Dodge, who had become interested in the work, had her Travellers' Aid committee organized into the present Travellers' Aid Society.—New York "Sun."

CAN'T LOSE HAIR

Twenty Years From Today a Bald-headed Man Will Be an Unusual Sight.

One of the most prominent druggists of America made a statement a few weeks ago which has caused a great deal of discussion among scientists in the medical press. He said: "If the new hair grower, Mildredina Hair Remedy, increases its sales as it has during the past year, it will be used by nearly every man, woman and child in America within eight years."

"When Mildredina Hair Remedy is used almost universally, dandruff will disappear and with its departure baldness, itching scalp, splitting hair and all scalp diseases will follow and twenty years from now a bald head will be a rarity."

There is only one way to cure dandruff, and that is to kill the germs. There is only one hair preparation that will kill the germs and that is Mildredina Hair Remedy. This unusual hair restorer with its record of thousands of cures will grow on any head where there is any life left; it will cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching of the scalp in three weeks or money back.

CURIOUS HUNTING CUSTOM.

Courts of Southern India Go at It in a Ceremonious Way.

There is a curious hunting custom among the Courts of Southern India. When a hunt is arranged among the villagers they usually meet early in the morning at a prearranged spot where their dogs are lined out for a Court custom, they all sit down at a white, having rested, they proceed to discuss and decide which part of the surrounding jungle they are to beat. This being decided, the hunters station themselves at points of vantage and the beaters endeavor to drive the game, if any, towards them.

If before the hunt commences, any of the dogs lie down and rub their backs against the ground, it is considered a good omen and the hunters are sure of a "kill" in the jungle they are about to beat.

On the conclusion of a successful hunt all the animals shot are brought together, beside a stream if possible, and up none of the hair being removed. First of all the head and thigh and a strip of meat from the best part is cut from each animal, these being the reward of those who shot the animals. Strips of flesh about a cubit long are cut out for those who first touched the animal after it was shot. Then the number of men and dogs are counted, and the remaining portion is cut up into small pieces as there are men and dogs, bitches among the dogs getting no share.

After this is done the distribution takes place. The "shooters" get their share first, then the "touchers," then the other hunters, and lastly the owners. A speech is made praising the successful shots and wishing them better luck next time. Those who were not lucky and did not fire when the game passed them (they still use the old muzzle-loaders) are censured, and now comes the curious part of the proceedings. Those unfortunate who fired but missed are made to stand in the centre of a circle of thorns and are flogged on their backs until they bleed. Though most of these men are independent, well-to-do farmers they submit to this torture because "it is the custom."

Pearls of Price. There has lately been exhibited at a court jeweler in Bond street, London, a striking collection of pearls. One magnificent rope is valued at no less than $300,000, while for a single pearl-shaped drop, perfectly symmetrical, $70,000 is asked. But probably the most exquisite article in the collection is a single pearl of great size of extraordinary hue, the matching and gradation being superb. The cost of this article is $170,000.

But the owners warn a would-be buyer that if one of the stones goes, the rest will be impossible to replace it with an exact duplicate. Black and pink pearls also found a place in the exhibition; whilst a pair of button-shaped earrings valued at $40,000.

One of the representatives of the firm gives a word of advice upon the preservation and treatment of pearls. Upon no account, he said, should pearls be worn in the presence of dark perfume or other dark particles for lengthy periods, since such treatment soon causes them to lose their "life" and become dull.

If their fair owners find that for some reason or other they cannot wear their pearls, they should have them stored in a box of wax, underneath their dress, next to the skin. Constant contact with the human skin gives to the stones light, lustre, gloss and sheen. The best possible way to keep pearls in a perfect state of preservation, as well as to prolong their life, is to wear them always, both by night and by day.

Porcelain Ships. Liners of porcelain steamed by petrol may one day oust the drum-driven vessels of the world. The porcelain ship is the plan of W. Hales Turner, of Gravesend, a famous master potter. His scheme is that, apart from the sides and frame work, ships should be built of porcelain. After 40 years' labor and an expenditure of about $500,000 it has been discovered how to manufacture plate porcelain at $35 a ton in any size up to 15 by 10 feet.

Mr. Turner points out the advantages of the new material as regards cheapness, cleanliness and permanence. It is cheaper than any of its rivals, it harbors no vermin, it can be cleaned by washing, the decorations can be supplied at a low cost, and it will never need repainting. Such a ship could be "washed up" like a china cup.

Porcelain is practically everlasting. Tiles at Nankin 4,000 years old are as good as new.

Their First Meeting. Mr. Harry Furniss tells a funny story of a high legal dignitary, who, when Solicitor-General, had to appear before Queen Victoria to receive the honor of knighthood.

"What am I to do?" he asked nervously of the official at the door. "Kneel, kneel!"

Suiting the action to the word, he immediately fell on his knees, and, like the funny man at a child's tea party, propelled himself along the floor on his knees. Her late Majesty was overcome by laughter, all the more as when she retreated "the little man followed."

LAWLESS ALBANIA.

Blood Feud is a Recognized Usage in Balkan State.

The pluck of Prince William of Wied, who has been chosen by the Powers as the first sovereign of Albania, and who is now endeavoring to settle down at Durazzo, the capital, has aroused the admiration of Europe. No man was ever faced with a more stupendous task, for the Albanians have never known a King, and the most part the prince will and his subjects half-civilized mountaineers, frank to a friend, vindictive to an enemy, and every man a law unto himself.

The Albanians live in a perpetual state of anarchy. Even the peasant in the fields bristles with weapons, for he loves warfare and brigandage far better than cattle-rearing or agriculture—hence the poor cultivation of the soil.

He is always on guard against his enemies, and constantly seeking the blood of those who have done him an injury.

In all parts of Albania the vendetta or blood feud is an established usage, and a man would be disgraced in the eyes of his friends and relatives if he did not kill an enemy who had injured him or any of those belonging to him. Delay in vengeance is held dishonorable. The man who will let years pass without killing his enemy becomes himself an outcast. Furthermore, till he has taken vengeance he cannot marry, or if he is married he may give neither his sons nor his daughters in marriage.

The first custom is prominent, Prince William is to stamp out these blood feuds and endeavor to carry some semblance of law into the mountains. It is, however, an almost impossible task, for the duty of revenge is a sacred tradition handed down to successive generations in the family, village, and the tribe. The consequence is that neighbors, villages, and even the several quarters of the same town are constantly at war with one another.

A single case of homicide often leads to a series of similar crimes or to protracted warfare between neighboring families and communities. A murderer, as a rule, taken refuge in the mountains from the avenger of blood, or remain for years shut up in his house. The latter is, in many cases, like a fortress, the only windows of which are loopholes for rifles; and in these houses families sometimes of a hundred people leave not their houses for years, and food has to be brought into them by their friends. Others again have taken to flight after killing an enemy, and unable to sleep in their homes or to till their fields, exist by brigandage, the latter being regarded as quite a legitimate form of livelihood.

Sometimes a truce, either temporary or permanent, is arranged by the intervention of the clergy, and occasionally a general truce is proclaimed. Between conflicting parties the restoration of peace is celebrated with elaborate ceremonies.

In some districts, however, there is a fixed price for blood, and a feud may be avoided if the homicide pays, by way of compensation to the relatives of his victim, sums ranging from $50 to $100, according to the district. Once a debt has been thus acquitted amicable relations are restored.

Curiously enough, although the Albanians are so lawless, they do not make war on women. In fact a woman may traverse a hostile district without fear or injury, and is often employed as an intermediary in the settlement of a feud.

Peculiarity of Snow.

The water which will allow our burning thirst to be quenched when cooled into snow, so that it is stated by explorers of the Arctic regions that the natives "prefer" enduring the utmost extremity of heat rather than attempt to relieve it by eating snow.

Yet if the snow be melted it becomes drinkable water. Nevertheless, although if melted before entering the mouth it assumes a thirst like other water, when melted in the mouth it has the opposite effect. To render this paradox more striking we have only to remember that ice, which melts more slowly in the mouth, is very efficient in allaying thirst.

The Diving Bell.

The celebrated philosopher Aristotle speaks of a diving bell which was put over the head of the diver, but there is no proof of the use of the bell in ancient times. John Jaesner, who lived in the early part of the sixteenth century, makes the earliest mention of the practical use of the diving bell in Europe. In all probability the first real practical use of the diving bell was in the attempt at rescuing the treasure of the Spanish armada off the English coast, 1590 and on.

Fashion.

There exists a strict relation between class of power and the exclusive and polished circles. The last are always filled or filled from the first. Fashion, though in a strange way, represents all many virtue. It is virtue gone to seed, a kind of posthumous honor, a hall of the past. Great men are not commonly in its halls. They are absent in the fields; they are working, not triumphing. Fashion is made up of their children.—Emerson.

One Point Gained.

"Has that girl next door to you still got her parlor melodeon?" "No," she explained it for a corner. "I'm glad to say."

"But, gracious, if she plays the cornet, that's worse, isn't it?" "Not at all. It's only half as bad. She can't sing while she's playing the cornet."

Happiness.

A happiness that is quite undisturbed becomes tiresome; we must have ups and downs.—Moliere.

What Counts

It isn't the brains a man has in his head
Or the skill that he has in his hands,
It isn't the books he has studied or read,
Or his fortune in money or land,
That makes a man likable, lovable here,
For many a miser is smart:
It's not what a brother can do we hold dear,
But just what he is in his heart.

It isn't the wonderful heights he has scaled,
It isn't the medals he wears,
It isn't the fact that by many he's hailed
With applause for the deeds that he dares,
That makes a man welcome wherever he goes,
A leader, unarmoured and bare;
For the thing men revere isn't glory that shows,
But the glory that's hid in the heart.

The Two Little Boys

(By Grace G. Crowell.)

The good little boy and the bad little boy
Both live in the house with me;
But it is quite strange—I can look and look,
Yet only one boy I see—
Just one little boy with sparkling eyes,
And the funniest pudgy nose,
All brimful of life from the top of his head
To the tips of ten stubby toes.

And yet there are two of him, I am sure,
For one is a bad little boy,
And I am so sorry that he lives here
To bother me good little boy;
Yes, poster and bother the good little boy;
Till he sometimes drives him away;
And the bad little boy is alone with me
For the rest of the long, long day.

And I asked him to go for the good little boy,
And bring him again to me;
But I take him up and hold him close
While I talk to him lovingly;
And while I am talking he sometimes laughs,
But often far he cries—
And I see that the good little boy is back
As I look in the bad boy's eyes.—
Lutheran Observer.

Practical Health Hint.

Strengthen the Lungs.
The first essential in the avoidance of tuberculosis of the lungs or consumption is to keep the lungs strong, so that if the germs are breathed they can do no harm. One of the most important things in keeping the lungs strong is to keep the chest wide open so that the lungs can be properly used. If the body is drooped or stoops, or if the shoulders are allowed to drag forward round shoulders, or if the head is carried forward instead of well back over the shoulders, the chest must be flattened, the breathing must be shallow, and the lungs, not being freely used, become weak. It is in this type of chest that tuberculosis usually begins. The consumptive is usually narrow chested, with drooped shoulders and with the head craned forward.

Lighting the Big Canal.

There Will Be No Difficulty in Locating the Panama Canal.
The lighting of the Panama canal will be an interesting feature of the great enterprise. The canal will be lighted throughout by automatic unattended lights, each having a distinct characteristic. At the entrances and through Gatun lake a double row of about sixty automatic acetylene lighted buoys will mark the channel. The channel will be defined further by powerful rapid flashing range lights, one set at either end of each successive tangent, thus permitting vessels going in either direction to take their range off the bow.

The center lines of each range are set far enough apart to enable the largest vessels to pass each other in comfort. Through Culebra cut, or wherever the proximity of the banks permits, beacons will be used instead of buoys. The sides of the canal channel will be marked by gas buoys about every mile, with intermediate spot buoys. Each gas buoy will consist of a cylindrical, floating, steel body, surmounted by a steel frame which supports a light and lens at a height of fifteen feet above water level.—Christian Science Monitor.

Accuracy in Golf.

Methods Adopted by Ouimet in Acquiring His Stroke.
For my own part I never have tried to achieve distinction as a long hitter. To be successful in open competition a golfer necessarily must be able to hold his own fairly well in the matter of distance. But I have found it possible to do this to a reasonable degree by trying to cultivate a smooth stroke and timing it well.

Being of good height, almost six feet, and having a moderately full swing, my club gets a good sweep in its course toward the ball, so that the point I strive for is to have the club head moving at its maximum of speed at the moment of impact with the ball.

I know I could get greater distance than I do ordinarily, for now and then I do try to hit as hard and as far as I can, with additional yards resulting.

These efforts, however, are made when there is nothing at stake and are merely a bit of experimenting. To make such extra efforts the rule rather than the exception would be the old story of sacrificing accuracy for distance. The minute a golfer begins doing that in competition he is "lost" or such is my belief.—Francis Ouimet in St. Nicholas.

Try this Thirsty Flour

A very thirsty flour. Absorbs a lot of water. Because it contains so much gluten. Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten. And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries. So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see. In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water. So you get more loaves than usual without using more flour. You use less. Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it? Less trips to your dealer. That's how FIVE ROSES saves money. Actually saves YOU money. Use this economical flour.

Killing the Natives

Ravages of Liquor in South Africa.

A correspondent of the "Cape Times" contributes some appalling figures relative to the growth of alcoholism among the colored people of the colony. In 1911 in Cape Town including Green and Sea Point) one in every fourteen colored adults was convicted of drunkenness. At Wynberg, one in every twenty-three colored males, and one in every sixty females were convicted. At Pearl the proportion was one in nineteen; at Stellenbosch one in twenty-four, and at Worcester one in twenty-three. At the Licensed Victuallers' Conference held in Durban recently, Mr. McCallum, the Secretary of the Association, reported that there were about 1,250 licenses in the Cape, and that if they were deprived of the right of serving the colored man it would mean ruin to two-thirds of the licenses. The fact that the legalized sale to colored people means the "ruination" of those races did not, of course, trouble him in the least.

The protest of this precious secretary, however, in itself shows that there is a movement on foot to protect the colored people from the curse of intoxicating liquor. The reform is long over-due. The colored people themselves demand it. It will be remembered how King Khama and two other chiefs visited England some years ago with an urgent request that liquor and liquor traders should be kept out of their country. The white man's whiskey has done more even than the white man's rifle toward the destruction of native peoples. In the United States and in Canada sale to the Indians is prohibited and in such places as Oklahoma where the Indians have been allowed to vote on the question they have voted almost solidly for Prohibition. It is to be hoped—even if it means the "ruination" of the liquor trade—that reformers in the Cape will carry the day that the sale to the colored people will be forbidden, and that missionary effort will be delivered from one of its greatest handicaps and civilization saved from a deep and damning disgrace.

Moderate Drinking

Dr. G. Von Bunge, Professor of Physiology in the University of Basle, Switzerland, says truly:—

"Every drunkard was once a moderate drinker and everyone who leads others by his example to moderate drinking leads some of them to immoderate drinking. He sets a stone rolling which it is out of his power to stop. It is not the drunkard who has to bear the reproach of seducing others. The seducers are the moderate drinkers, and as long as the seduction continues, immoderate drinking with its consequences, disease, insanity and crime will continue. Anyone who is not aware of this does not know the history of the battle against drunkenness."

"The chief cause of drinking is the tendency to imitate. The first class of beer does not taste any better than the first cigar. Men drink because others drink. When once they have formed the habit there is no lack of excuses for repeated drinks."

"From the first glass to insanity, crime, despair, suicide, there are a thousand stages of misery. Only those who sink to the lowest levels are taken account of by statistics. We must not forget also that all of these miseries spoil the happiness of others. How much family happiness is lost, how many tears of innocent fellow sufferers, how much deep ranking pain of which no intimation is to be found in statistics."

"What shall we say of the man who thinks to himself: 'Let millions of my fellowmen every year languish in hospitals and asylums; let millions plunge themselves and their families into ruin, so long as I get my glass of beer?'"
