Our esteemed contemporary of Tokio, the Hochi Shimbun, tells us that a number of governors and local prefects have pe-titioned the Government of Japan "for the titioned the Government of Japan "for the adoption of some new basis for morality." We are also informed that the Ministry of Instruction has long felt that "the Western religion, which forms the basis of Western morality, is not suited to the Japanese, and could not be introduced without great danger." Utilitarianism is declared to be "too subtle and profound." Confucianism leads to all kinds of anomalies when confronted with modern science, but the petitioners think it might serve as a useful "anchor," and that a text book of morality based upon it might be prepared for school use.

That is good news, if true, which is cabled from Cairo, to the effect that the Mahdi has released the European prisoners cabled from Cairo, to the enect that the Carlon Mahdi has released the European prisoners who have been held by him and his predecessors since the fall of Khartoum. Few people are ever placed in so hapless a position as that of these twelve or fifteen Europeans, who for a number of years have been at the mercy of fanatical enemies, seemingly out of reach of human aid. Among the prisoners are natives of Engand, Germany, Austria, Italy and Greece, to Government has attempted to negotiate for their release, for there has been every reason to believe that negotiations would be fruitless. Some of the prisoners sent word to Europe that any interference in their behalf would only increase their misery. An expedition to rescue them would certainly have been fatal to them all. Several attempts have been made by private persons and a Catholic mission to bring about the release of the prisoners, but every effort failed, and all that was gained was the information that ransom money would not be accepted, and that even if the Mahdi's successor consented to release the captives his councilors would not permit them to depart. Neufeld, the German, was long kept in chains, and twice was led to the gallows and drawn up, but was cut down before he was badly hurt. The poor fellow finally escaped, but was caught as he was trying to make his way to the sea, led back to Omdurman and hanged in earnest. The Greek merchants have been allowed to wander about in a very forlorn and ragged condition, compelled to any sort of work to get food. The missionaries and four Sisters of Charity were treated a little better, and at last accounts they were earning their living by cooking beans in oil and selling them in the streets. All the prisoners had the choice placed before them of death or espousing the Mahdi's faith. They all chose, ostensibly at least, to become followers of the Prophet.

Brown, a young shoemaker, who was successful in his business, and the outlook for the young couple seemed bright. One week after the marriage Brown became insane, and proceeded to lock his wife up in her bedroom in her mother's house, nail up the windows and lock the doors. From this room the poor woman has never stepped until now. Her mother, terrified by her son-inlaw, was afraid to report him, and so the wretched family lived on. Brown, in the main, was not abusive, and contented himself with keeping his wife locked up. Finally he told her she was fat enough and he would kill her. He sharpened his knife in the presence of the terrified woman, and wher all was ready sent for a pitcher of water to wash up the blood. While he was in the rear yard the girl and her mother burst open the door and fled. The police were informed, but when they visited the house Brown could not be found. the lines holding water like a bucket. The shower on Tuesday morning made the ground very spongy and disagreeable, and as the boys sit around this evening watching the ominous black clouds gathering, all their patriotism has been chilled and the most cheerful and adventurous spirits have been filled with a deep and earnest desire for home, or at least a place of refuge on high ground. A number of men have been set at work trenching, in view of the approaching storm, and it is hoped that some of the water will be carried off.

The citizens realize, no doubt, the unsuitability of the place for a camp, and apparently have set their minds on making all they can out of the boys while they have the chance, and this coupled with the dampness has provoked the soliloquy from various wags that "The soldier's lot is not a happy one"—at least when Stratford is the location. In Defense of Women.

[Illustrated American.] They are as nice and moderate and modest as their mothers and grandmothers, and a great deal better informed; they are willing to accept any drudgery not involving the entire extinction of refinement, and ready to worship their husbands to their hearts' content. And as to extravagance, the charge, even as regards the society girl, is overstretched. Women are not extravagant by nature. On the contrary, they are penurious; they are even mean; they have microscopic eyes.

They are as nice and moderate and modest as a stimulating tonic to the digestive organs.

THE Telegram asserts that all that Toronto has yet received from the deputation that searched the United States in the interests of fire and light is a receipt for traveling expenses. We trust that the London aldermen who are about to go on an electric light investigating trip will make a better record than that, but there are taxpayers who are none too sanguine on the subject.

THOUGH the people of the United States drink a much fess quantity of spirituous liquors than formerly, the consumption of beer seems to have enormously increased in recent years, and that, too, in the face of a prohibitory law in several States. According to the Western Brewer the sales of malt liquors in the United States for the year ended April 30, 1890, were 26,820,953 barrels, an increase of 1,722,188 barrels over the previous year, and of 18,437,233 bar-Arkansas, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina or Vermont. In Kansas only 270 barrels are reported to have been sold, a decrease of 7,000 barrels from last year, and in Iowa 88,266, a decrease of 24,204 from last year. Even in Pennsylvania, with high license restrictions the sale increased the past year 293,271 barrels over 1889. If the liquors sold in one year were equally dis-tributed, every man, woman and child would receive more than a third of a barrel.

FARMERS AWAKENING.

FARMERS AWAKENING.

All history of legislation in the past goes to show that as a rule legislators have thought they knew better what was for the good of farmers than the farmers themselves, but the condition of agriculture is getting so that the farmers are beginning to inquire why it is so, and legislators are growing uneasy over the inquiry. They begin to have a dread of impending doom, and it is quite likely that soon the cry will be heard, "what can we do to be saved" from the wrath of the farmers.—[Germantown Telegraph.

In the locality of Ottawa for example

In the locality of Ottawa for example, there have been not a few indications during the past year or so that the Dominion Government dread an outbreak on the part of the farmers of Canada. When the Western Ontario farmers got together at London and elsewhere and vigorously denounced the grain tester which had been foisted upon them it was not long before the obnoxious arbiter was abolished. The farmers will be heard from again.

SHOPPING AND SHOPPERS.

There has been a good deal of talk recentive about the hours of labor, and in some occupations attempts have been made to reduce the length of the working day. Competition is so keen in various departments of life that it is often difficult for a meronged by the unintentional carelessness of their fellow citizens, many of whom are merchants assistants, to the milliners, dressmakers, tailors and the thousand and one persons who are employed in contributing to the personal appearance or creature comfort of the community at large. How many of the great purchasing public give chases at the counter. People wait till the eleventh hour of the working day, often till the eleventh hour of the week, before they go to the stores. They crowd in, and leave their orders, demanding that those shall be filled, and the goods delivered the same night. They wait till their clothing is worn out before they consult the milliner or the tailor, and they implore that the new garments shall be sent home in an incredibly short space of time. What does all this needless hurry imply? Long hours and overwork for men and women.

Not, let it be remembered, because the average employer believes in that sort of thing, or indeed finds it profitable, but because the great purchasing public are so inconsiderate as to leave their shopping and their reclothing till the last moment, and then take advantage of the intense spirit of competition everywhere prevalent to attain their selfish ends. Now, all this is wrong. It is especially an evil thing for people who can avoid it to shop at a late hour on Saturday night, and thus compel employes in stores in the rear future, we are told by work till the approach of midnight. Yet we have known of shoppers with this habit abnormally developed who wondered why it was that so many of the employes of stores tailed to go to church on Sunday morning.

What is needed in every large city is they are in many large cities, but a little more forethought is certainly desirable, especially on the part of the ladies, who after all are the chief culprits, as they form the overwhelming majority of the purchasing public. Let the good and symthings, the fighting of this bad habit of late shopping, that thus unduly adds to the hours of a hard-working class in the community. Let every Londoner be a Con sumers' League unto himself and unto her-self, and there are hundreds of faithful servants of the public who will welcome the movement as an amelioration from a condition of affairs that should not and need not

WHEN HE WILL PROSPER.

The Forum for May contains a refreshing article by C. Wood Davis, a farmer and writer of repute, under the title "When the farmer will be prosperous." His idea perity lies in a restoration of the balance. and referring especially to the United States he predicts that the time is near at hand when the domestic consumption will absorb nearly all his products. "Assuming" says the writer, "the population to be now 65,000,000, with the area in cereals producing average crops, and current consumption 15 per cent. greater per capita, than in the five years ending in 1874, present supplies are in excess of population as follows: Corn for 5,000,-000 people, wheat for 14,000,000, cattle for 6,000,000, and swine for cattle 11,000,000. Should population continue to increase as heretofore, and production not increase more than seems probable. home requirement will absorb all food products before the end of the century.' A review is given of the area of productio of the principal crops, and it is shown that rels over 1875. No sales are reported in the balancing process between production and consumption is already at work. The been maturing for over six months for join and consumption is already at work. The corn area is approaching its limit, the rate of increase during the past three years being very small; by 1895 the probable area under cultivation will just about supply the demand.

Agreemental set forth in the Appendix of the corn of the co As was recently set forth in the ADVERTISER, the wheat area during the past five years has decreased; it seems to have reached and passed its limit unless in the Canadian Northwest. Within five years the supply of wheat in the United States will not exceed the domestic demand. This will be a most important change.

In regard to the rate of increase of cultivated acres, the writer says: "Upon the assumption that the requirements are now assumption that the requirements are now such as to employ 3.15 acres per capita to produce the cereals, potatoes, hay, tobacco and cotton consumed at home, and the tobacco, cotton and animal products exported, the statistics show that the troubles of the farmer may be attributed to the bringing of too many new acres into cultivation in the fourteen years ending in 1884; and that the process of readjusting the disturbed relations between production and consumption has been in operation several years, as is clear from the rapidly diminishing quantity of new land being employed in the production of staple crops."

In conclusion, he says that, assuming the substantial correctness of the estimates of area by the Department of Agriculture, and that home requirements will be such as to employ 3.15 acres per capita, the answer to the question, "When will the farmer be prosperous?" resolves itself into a calculation as simple as the following: January, 1894, a population of 72,000,000 will require in staple crops an area of chant to curtail the hours of labor, and still | 226,800,000 acres; area now employed in continue solvent, even though he might de- growing such crops, 211,000,000; additions sire to benefit his employes by reducing to be made to such area in four years, their work time. But there is a class in 12,000,000; acreage deficit, January, 1894, the community whose hours are unduly 3,800,000 acres. This deficit should be sufficient to neutralize any possible underestimate of the area now in cultivation. themselves wage-earners. We refer to the merchants assistants, to the milliners, dress-duced shows that before this decade is half spent, all the products of the farm will be required at good prices, that lands will appreciate greatly in value, and that the American farmer will enter upon an era of emfort of the community at large. How many of the great purchasing public give ene thought to the welfare of those who are employed to clothe or feed them by the agency of our great retail tores? Very few, we should think, radging by the way in which they order new clothes or make their purchased or the continuance of which is assured by the exhaustion of the arable areas. Meanwhile, the prosperity of the Canadian farmer can be best assured by the canadian farmer can be recommended by CUTICHA MEDICATED by CUTICHA MEDICATED by COLD FOLKS' PAINS.

FAST TIME ON THE ATLANTIC. Time was when a journey across the Atlantic Ocean was considered a momentous affair. Men and women called upon to take it bade farewell to their iriends for ever, and at the close of a tempestous pas sage by a fast clipper ship, consuming six or seven weeks in sailing from shore to shore, were apt to solemnly assert that the farewells were most appropriate, as they would never again undertake such a trip The era of steam and mechanical appliances has changed all this. In the fast steamships of to-day, people cross and recross the Atlantic in as many days as it formerly took weeks, and once they have got their sea legs on live in as great luxury as is possible at a first-class hotel. Short though the ocean passage is, however, it will yet be shorter, according to the builder of the famous racers "The City of Paris" and "The City of New York." Now the this authority, the time will probably be reduced to five days. The chief factor that may be looked to for producing increased speed is the twin-screw engine, combined with increased power obtained by further development or improvement in the system of forced draft. This means of in this matter of shopping. We are not so bad in London as they are in many large cities. but portion to the weight, which is the principa element of progress in designing to which engineers have to look. The expert now tells us that the superiority of the twinscrew for high speed ships is beyond dispute. In all respects the twin screw is superior to the single screw. Though prior to the trial of "The City of Paris" the impression in many quarters was that the speed of the twin-screw steamers would come down in heavy weather in greater proportion than that of single screws, the result attained by that vessel and by "The City of New York" proves the reverse. This is said to be owing to the fact that in the twin screws the propellers are much better imnersed than in the single screw, and 'racing" is an occurrence almost unknown in the engine-room. A corresponding advantage to travelers from this same cause is the absence of vibration and the conse quent increase of comfort. Still another advantage is the greater immunity from breaklown, as was evidenced in a marked degree lately, when "The City of New York" proke her shaft. A further increase of speed is possible, but, according to the expert whose ideas we have quoted, it would not be prudent to try and reduce the limit below five days, because it is highly questionable whether a ship constructed with hat object in view could be made a financial success. Nevertheless, in the matter of advances in ocean steamship construction, there have been greater marvels within the last few years than a change of the character indicated. It will be interesting to note the description of craft which the Dominion Government is able to obtain for the very liberal mail subsidy which Parliament has authorized it to grant. By-and-bye, when a railway is built in Newfoundland, from its eastern to its western limits, with a ferry prisoner arrested.

Oross-examined—Did not know the chief of police's signature, did not know that prisoner was not what he represented himself to be.

Geo. McPherson, being recalled, corroborated his previous story.

Mr. Love, on behalf of the defense, submitted that the evidence was not strong enough to send the prisoner far trial. There was nothing to show that he was not the person he represented himself to be.

Mr. McKillop replied briefly on behalf of the Crown.

The prisoner was committed for trial, and will be examined at the next Assizes. He takes things very coolly, and does not seem at all disturbed. Foster is a sharp-looking at all disturbed. GLOVE HOUSE KID THE

Commencing on Saturday Morning,

When we place before our customers and the citizens of London the Finest Stock of DRYGOODS, MILLINERY, MANTLES, SILKS and DRESS GOODS shown in this Western Peninsula. The bulk of the stock has been personally selected in the English markets and imported direct by us, amounting to over in value. We have gone through the stock and marked down the prices, and defy any drygoods house in London to equal our prices. Remember everything down to the value of 10 cents has been reduced. To be candid with our customers and friends, we can't afford to carry such a heavy stock, and therefore must get rid of half the will spend $100 on the erection of a new grand stand.

A rare chance of securing wonderful value for the money has been announced by Messrs. Powell, Allen & Brickenden, of the Kid Glove House, Dundas street, in a monster ciearing sale which commenced today. Their stock of drygoods is one of the largest and most complete in the city, the greater part of which was purchased after personal examination by the firm's representatives in the English and foreign markets. Everything over 10 cents in value in their immense stock of drygoods, millinery, mantles, silks or dress goods has been marked down to a point hitherto unknown, and a great rush of purchasers has been the result. That spot cash must accompany all orders for goods at reduced rates makes the firm's great sale a success. Going Off Lively. $12 25. Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, is ear-ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

"I do not ring," he answered, "because, on the whole, I think I had better let you go. I do not wish to be mixed up with you any more. to say to me?"

He looked at her, a scowl upon his handsome face, and then by way of answer he turned upon his heel.

And so, still holding her hands against her poor broken heart, she went out of the house, out of Boisingham, and out of touch and knowledge of the world. These two were, though she knew it not, once and once only, fated to meet again, in after years, and under circumstances sufficiently tragic, but the story of that meeting does not lie within the scene of this history. To the world of sickness, and sorrow, and sordid unchanging misery and shame, where the lovely face of Sister Agnes moves to and fro like a ray of God's own light, and there those who would know her must go to seek her.

Poor Belle! Poor, shamed, deserted woman! She was an evil doer, and the fatality of love and the rush of her quick blood, and the unbalanced vigor of her mind, which and the unbalanced vigor of her mind.

man! She was an evil deer, and the fatality of love and the rush of her quick blood, and the unbaianced vigor of her mind, which might, had she been more happily placed, have led her to all things that are pure, and true, and of good report, had combined to drag her into shame and misery. But the evil that she did has been paid back to her in full measure, pressed down and running over. Here we expiate them. They are with us day and night, about our path and about our bed, scourging us with the whips of memory, mocking us with empty longing, and the hopelessness of despair. Who can escape the consequence of sin, or even of the misfortunes which lead to sin? Certainly Belle did not, nor did Mr. Quest, nor even that fierce hearted harpy who haunted him to his grave.

And as good-bye to Belle. May she find peace in its season.

COL. QUARITCH EXPRESSES HIS VIEWS.

Meanwhile things had been going very ill get the castle. Edward Cossey's lawyers were carrying out their client's instructions to the letter with a perseverance and ingenuity worthy of a county court solicitor. Day by day they found some new point upon which to harass the wretched Squire. Some share of the first expenses connected with the mortgages had, they said, been the safety starting a specialty. 287 Dundas street.

improperly thrown upon their elient, and they again and again demanded, in language which was almost insolent, the immediate payment of the amount. Then there was three months' interest over due, and this also they pressed and clamored for, till the old gentleman was nearly driven out of his senses, and, as a consequence, drove everybody about the place out of theirs.

At last this state of affairs began to tell At last this state of affairs began to tell upon his constitution, which, strong as he was, could not at his age withstand such constant worry. He grew to look years older, his shoulders acquired a stoop, and his memory began to fail him, especially on matters connected with the mortgages and farm accounts. Ida, too, became pale and ill; she caught a heavy cold, which she could not throw off, and her face acquired a permanently pained and yet listless look.

One day, it was on the 15th of December, things reached a climax. When Ida came down to breakfast she found her father busy poring over some more letters from the lawyer.

poring over some more letters from the lawyer.

"What is it now, father?" she said.

"What is it now," he answered, irritably.

"Why it's another claim for £200, that's what it is. I keep telling them to write to my lawyers, but they won't; at least, they write to me, too. There I can't make head or tail of it. Look here, and he showed her two sides of a big sheet of paper covered with statement of accounts. "Anyhow, I have not got £200, that's clear. I don't know where we're going to find the money too pay the three months' interest. I'm wern out, Ida; I'm worn out, that's the long and short of it. I get so confused with all these figures. I am an old man now, and all these troubles, are too much for me."

me."

"You must not talk like that, father," she answered, not knowing what else to say, for affairs were indeed desperate.

"Yes, yes, it's all very well to talk so,
but factsare stubborn. Our family is ruined, and we must accept it."

"Cannot the money be got anyhow? Is there nothing to be done?" she asked, desperately.

"What is the good of asking me that. "What is the good of asking me that. There is only one thing that can save us, and you know what it is as well as I do. But you are your own mistress. I have no right to put pressure on you. You must please yourself. Meanwhile I think we had better leave this place at once and go live in a cottage somewhere, if we can get enough to support us; if not, we must starve, I suppose. I cannot keep up appearances any longer."

Ida rose, and with a strange, sad light of resolution shining in her eyes came to where her father was sitting and, putting her hands upon his shoulders, looked him in the face.

hands upon his shoulders, looked him the face.

"Father," she said, "do you wish me to marry that man?"

"Wish you to marry him? What do you mean?" he said, not without irritation and avoiding her gaze. "It is no affair of mine. I don't like the man, if that's what you mean. He is acting like—well, like the cur that he is, in putting on the screw as he is doing, but of course that is the way out of it and the only way, and there you are."

out of it and the only way, and there you are."

"Father," she said again, "will you give me ten days, that is, until Christmas day? If nothing happens between this and then, If nothing happens between this and then, If mothing happens between this and then, If will marry Mr. Edward Cossey."

A sudden light of hope shone in his eyes. She saw it, though he tried to hide it by turning his heod away.

"Oh, yes," he answered, "as you wish; settle it one way or the other on Christmas day, and then we can go out with the New Year. You see, your brother James is dead, and I have no one left to advise me now, and I suppose that I am getting old. At any rate, things seem to be too much for me. Settle it as you like. Settle it as you like," and he got up, leaving his breakfast half swallowed, and went off to moon aimlessly about the park.

ant recollection of Mr. George C. Mille, the preacher-actor, whose clever dramatic impersonations were given a few seasons ago at the Grand Opera House. According to a New York dispatch he was for a while fairly successful from a financial point of view, but as soon as the novelty had worn off audiences that were purely nominal in size greeted him wherever he went, and a year or so ggo he returned to New York city in a condition which is described in professional parlance as "broke." He succeeded, however, in finding a backer for a tour in Australia, and for a while the most flattering reports of his success were waited across the waters. Then for a long while nothing was heard of him. Within the last few daws, however, advices have been received from Melbourne to the effect that he had been declared insolvent, that he had broken his parole to appear in court, and had skipped to New Zealand, and that a warrant for his arrest had been issued. The case is set for a hearing June 26, and, as the English law bears with great severity on those adjudged guilty of contempt of court, it may go hard with him.

Mr. J. Marshall Williams, London's favorite basso, delighted the audience with several solos, and was recalled again and again. He responded with great good humor, and the assembly had a genuine treat. The duet by Miss Smythe and Mr. Williams also came in for an encore. The ever-popular condon Harmony Club was present, and the audience were satisfied with nothing less than a repetition of every selection they rendered. A feature of the evening was a short but interesting address by Hon. David Mills, which was highly appreciated. A pleasant evening was concluded by singing "God Save the Queen," the Harmony Club leading.

Tenders Accepted by the Hospital Trust.

The regular meeting of the Hospital Trust was held at the Hospital yesterday afternoon, the following being present: Chairman Lewis, Trustees Complin, Purdom and Gilmour, Mayor Taylor, Dr. Balfour and Secretary Graydon. The communication from the City Council requesting an estimate of expenses was referred to the Medical Superintendent to have it prepared and forwarded. The official report the immates of the hospital was presented by Dr. Balfour. It showed the number of patients admitted since June 6, to be 20. Of this number 10 were males, 8 females and 2 small children. The number discharged during the same period was 16—6 males, 8 females and 2 children. The number of patients at present is 54—29 males, 22 females and 3 children. The application of Dr. Mitchell for appointment on the hospital staff was fixed. The position was given to Dr. McCallum, who had a priority of claim and the Secretary was instructed to notify him of his appointment.

The following tenders were received and

BE CONTENT.

Be content with such things as ye have. Some people have better things, others have worse. You, perhaps, cannot have the better, and you have no desire for the worse; then be content with what you have. You may have had better things in the past; you may have had better things in nave. You may have had better things in the past; you may have worse things in the future; be thankful for the present, and be content. If your lot is a hard one, you may improve it, but not by murmuring, fretting, or repining. Just here to-day learn the lesson of contentment, and wait on God for brighter days, for richer fruits, for purer joys.

on God for brighter days, for richer fruits, for purer joys.

No blessing comes to the murmuring, complaining, discontented heart. When once this evil demon of discontent has entered into the soul nothing is right. Even the "angel" food" was not good enough for the murmuring Israelites, and "the corn of heaven" could not satisfy those whose souls were filled with the discontent of earth. But when once the heart has found its rest in God, and all its murmurings are hushed in sweet submission to his will, there is peace in believing and joy in the Holy Ghost and a hallowed confidence in the kind providence of him who dence in the kind providence of him who hath done all things well.—[The Christian.

STANLEY AND HIS BIBLE.

The day following the great meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in Exeter Hall, a conference of prominent supporters and workers was held at the Bible House, Queen Victoria atreet, with a view to the improvement of organization and methods of operation. One Out of Thousands of Cures Eff by the Use of Harriet Eubba Ayer's Recamier Prepara-tions and Remedies.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., May 17, 1889. Mrs. HARRIET HUBBARD AYER:

MY DEAR MADAM, -- I have been afflicted with what the physicians called "Acne Roseacea" for twelve years, and have tried almost everything and have been treated by several physicians, but without more than temporary benefit.

Finally I was pronounced incurable, and had become almost entirely discouraged.

had become almost entirely discouraged, when I made up my mind to make a trial of your remedies, and the result has been most gratifying, as I now believe that I am cured of my trouble, not having had a return of it in at least two months. I feel that I can safely say to anyone suffering from any skin disease, that the RECAMER PREPARATIONS will cure them if they will give them a fair trial, as I consider my cure as almost miraculous.

You are at liberty to refer any one to me ial, freely given by one who was cured by the "Recamier Preparations" of a most troublesome skin affection. I remain, Sincerely yours, H. E. Powers.

What The Recamier Preparations Are and Why They Are To Be Used. and Why They Are To Be Used.

Recamier Cream, which is first of these world-famous preparations, is unade from the recipe used by Julie Recamier. It is not a cosmetic, but an emollient to be applied at night just before retiring, and to be removed in the morning by bathing freely. It will remove tan and sunburn, pimples, red spots or blotches, and make your face and hands as smooth, as white, and as soft as an infant's. and as soft as an infant's.

One of our learned and most highly esteemed contemporaries informs its readers than an excellent way to judge of an egg is to place it in water and observe whether it floats, in which events it is bad. This is not only an excellent but a very old and well-known method. A very much surer way, however, is to break the egg and smell of it. You can not then make a mistake.

Mothers

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vege table preparation; its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiets pain, cures diarrhoa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend. 25 doses, 35 cents.

LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 22.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xii, 22-31-Commit Verses 27, 28-Golden Text, Luke xii. 30-Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns. Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]
22. "And He said unto His disciples, There-

22. And He said unto His disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on R.V.) The previous verse, which is the last verse of the last lesson, contrasts treasure in this world for one's self, and treasure with God, which is enduring. Men who live only for this world will aturally seek treasure here: but disciples of naturally seek treasure here; but disciples of Christ who are no longer of this world should seek to have their treasure where they beseek to have their treasure where they belong. His disciples may have thought, as He told of the man building larger barns in which to store his corn, well, we shall not be troubled that way; but the question with us is, now that we have left all to follow Him, what about the necessaries of life, our food and rainent which we actually need. If these were their thoughts He read them, and met them with the command, "Take no thought," or "Be not anxious," ween for these thipes

He called their attention to birds generally; but here He selects one kind, and that an unclean bird, classed among those which God had said were to be an abomination to Israel (Lev. xt, 18, 15). This is the only place where the word is used in the New Testament. In Job xxxviif, 41; Ps. cxlvii, 9, God is said to provide for the raven its food and heart the cry of its young. And in I Kings xvii, 4-6, It is this unclean bird which brings Elijah his food anorning and evening. There is surely to the control of the recommendation of the recommendati

"age" as in the margin? To add a foot and a half to one's height would certainly be a great matter; and as the next verse indicates that what is here referred to is some small matter, it must be that the meaning is "who by anxious thought can add even a half step to the length of his life?" Who can with all his care prolong his life a single moment un less God so wills it? Or if it should possibly signify increased importance in the eyes of others in this world, such as might come from great stature, even then we must remember that what is here referred to is some small that "Promotion cometh neither from the proceedings. east, nor from the west, nor from the south:

27. "Consider the lilies, how they grow."
Now He directs us to the flowers painted by His own hand, growing so quietly, so noiselessly, so beautifully, and He assures us that these excel in glory all the raiment of the wealthy Solomon. However rich and fine and costly might be the garments of Solomon, they were all put on, they were not his personal glory, but only such as any one could obtain with the same money. The beauty of the lilies could not be bought with money, it was not put on, it was from within.

beauty of the lilies could not be bought with money, it was not put on, it was from within, the glory of each flower was a part of itself. 28. "If then God so clothe the grass * * * how much more will be clothe you, O ye of little faith?" If such beauty is bestowed on flowers which fade in an hour, surely He will not fail to provide suitable clothing for bodies which he will one day make just like Christ's clarious bedy.

which he will one day make just like Christ's glorious body.

29. "And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind." The margin says "Live not in careful suspense." If it was not possible for every child of God to banish forever every anxious thought concerning food and raiment, our Saviour would not so insist on it, And when He so insists on it, how dishonoring to God all such anxiety must be.

30. "Your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things." Here is the ground of our quietness and confidence: we have a Father in Heaven, and He knoweth. The nations of the world who have no Father in Heaven, all people who are of their father the cry of its young. And in I Kings xvii, 4-6, it is this unclean bird which brings Elijah his food morning and evening. There is surely something very special in this command to consider the ravens. Are we not reminded that He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust; and maketh the wrath of man to praise Him (Matt, v, 45; [xrvi, 10). If God cares for and can make use of even the abominable raven, surely He will not fall to supply the need-of those who have been made whiter than snow by the precious blood of His dear Son.

"Of how much more value are ye than the birds!" The sparrows, two of which are sold "Of how much more value are ye than the birds!" The sparrows, two of which are sold for a farthing, or five for two farthings (Matt. x, 29; Luke xii, 6) are cared for by Him; how much more will He care for those who are bought with such a price.

25. "And which of you by being anxious can add a cubit unto his stature;" (R. V.) Or "ago" as in the margin! To add a foot and a half to one's height would certainly be a limited to one's height would call for a boy the register on the clerk's desk would point to the number of the room in which the suicide had occurred and from which the corpse had been removed only a few hours before. 20. "If, then, ye are not able to do that which is least, why are ye anxious concerning the rest?" The little child resting in a mother's love, entirely dependent on a mother's care for food and raiment and comfort, not knowing enough to have an anxious thought, not thinking of growth or attainment of any kind, is a picture of the unconcern and rest which every child of God should have concerning all things temporal. It is hard for a strong man to realize it, but even the strongest physically is as dependent upon God for everything as the little child upon its mother. Look up; leave all to God; be trustful and obedient, and "rejoice in the Lord alway."

Now He directs us to the flowers painted by "Again the bell rang and for the third

I must go to work head foremost when I get home." Home he goes, but gets no further. In February, 1849, he is in Brighton. "A sea fog today, but yester-day inexpressibly delicious. My mind running like a high sea on names—not satisfied yet, though." On Feb. 23 he had found a title of some sort, to wit, "Mag's Diversions, Being the Personal History of Mr. Thomas Mag the Younger of Blunderstone House.' came a series of variations in the exposi-tory part of the title, Blunderstone House after a time becoming Copperfield house. Then came "The Personal History of Mr. David Copperfield the Younger and His Aunt Margaret." On Feb. 24 he sent Forster a list of six names, which may be found set out at length—at great length—in the Life. Forster and Dickens' children finally determined his choice among the six, and the title once settled, all in plain sailing. He went through this elabs orate process with most of his titles. There were a dozen tenative titles for "Bleak House," most of them leading off with "Tom-All-Alone's," and 14 for "Hard Times." It was the same with "A Tale of Two Cities."-Macmillan's Magazine.

ARTISTICALLY FOLDED NAPKINS.

Studies in Damask Have Taken the Place of Fancy Work.

You can't guess what new handiwork society is playing with!

Needlework is out of date, painting and spatter-work have lost their charm, and knitting never was a fashionable waste of time. The cheapness at which the apparatus for amateur photography can be procured has "commonized" that art; poker work is not generally admir-ed, and aside from the hard work and

The snowy napery is sent upstairs in the silver basket to Madsent upstairs in the silver basket to Madame and Madameiselle, who proceed to transform the cedar-cented linen into Mikado fan, fleur de lis cardinal's test hat, poissoniere, Neapolitan buckles, amaranth, orchids, nautilus or pole de Barbiere. These are popular forms and then there there is a more difficult series including a pagoda. Cinderella's slipper the oxford, Cambridge and Carlton tower historical crosses, the iris, swan and were their thoughts He read them, and met them with the command, "Take no thought," or "Be not anxious," even for these things. Obedience to this command would take out of many lives about three-fourths of all their trouble. Then in Phil. iv. 6, is the command to be anxious about nothing, which will certainly cover the other fourth, so that there is no permission for a single anxious thought in the life of a Christian.

28, "The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment." When He, after fasting forty days, was tempted to turn stones into bread, His reply was, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word this proceeds the out of the mouth of God" (Matt. iv. 4). And again when weary, hungry, and thirsty, He sat on Jacob's well and the diciples brought Him food He said "I have meat to eat that ye know not of."

24. "Consider the ravens; * * God feedeth thera," In the sermon on the mount He called their attention to birds generally; but here He selects one kind, and that an unclean hird classes are averaged.

One of the most elegant and distinguished toliets yet seem was worn recently by a handsome French marquise at a literary solve held in the house where M, de Lesseps formerly lived, which is built in Moorish style, painted with arabesques and rich Oriental tintings. Just where the soft light from the colored glass ceilings drifted down in crimson spiendor the beautiful womans tood against a bright-hude Eastern curtain in a long, plain, black velvet dress, simple draped, severely fashioned, without an atom of decoration, or a single frill; but the round, low bodice was bordered with a riviere of jewels, and opened over a plastron set thick with marguieries in gleaming diamonds, and on her head blazed the marquise coronet of magnificent demonds. It goes without saying that the monds. It goes without saying that the dress had not a duplicate in the room.

Reversible hats are quite the latest and most curious invention. They are so manimost curious invention. They are so manipulated that the wearer can put them on any way she chooses. The reversible bonnet has no strings, of course, and is formed of a twist of velvet ending in a loop, with a plume or flower rising from a nest of lace frills. When this plume is removed and the loop of velvet stands in front, the bonnet is a hat suitable for street wear. With the decoration added, the whole thing turned about and feathers and flowers udding from the back, tion added, the whole thing turned about and feathers and flowers nodding from the back, it makes a dressy little bonnet suitable for afternoon or evening wear. This is the most hopeful symptom we have yet seen of consideration in the heart of the milliner. As bonnets increase in price as they decrease in size it becomes almost philanthropical to devise this scheme for making one bonnet serve a double purpose. a double purpose.

WHAT IT COSTS THE AVERAGE MAN TO SET UP HOUSE.

The Furnishings of a Home Gauged-Hints and Experience on the All Important Financial Question by a Newly Married Man-Interesting to Both Sexes.

I have been married one year, and have been keeping house during that

The problem of finance is always a difficult one to solve in the mind of the is-to-be married man, and likewise to the man who is married this problem is uppermost, at least for the first and second

To gauge the furnishing of a home satisfactorily by one's income and savings, and to determine how well one may live and still keep his head above water, and even to lay by something, is no easy thing to do, and my first year's experience with the financial part of married life may be of interest, and perhaps of material value, to those young men who have it in mind to take unto themselves wives. When I first met the lady who is now my wife it was in the spring of 1888, and I had about $100 saved. I was then earning $2.75 per day, which had been increased to $3 per day.

From that date until my marriage, in the summer of 1889, I saved enough from my salary to amount to about $500, which again, I concluded would be sufficient to marry with and furnish a home.

To furnish my home, which is a tene ment of five rooms, at a rental of $15 per month, cost as follows:

Kitchen—Table, $2.25; three chairs $1.35; 17 yards oilcloth, $4.25; No. 7 range, $20; one half ton of coal, $3.50; groceries necessary to start with, including a barrel of flour, which lasted 10 months, $10; other furniture, not including ching were which was received as a ing china ware, which was received as a wedding present by the bride, $31; re-frigerator, $14. The above includes a small oil stove, a most useful article, making the total for furnishing the kitchen, $86.35.

Chamber—Twenty-eight yards wool carpet at 52½ cents, $14.70; one pair por-tieres, $7.95; two shades, $1.80; cherry set, $27; mattress, pillows, springs, and comforters, all the best, $13.50; total, $64.95.

Spare chamber-Sixteen and one-half yards tapestry carpet at 65 cents, $10.72; one pair lace curtains, $3.08; one shade, 90 cents; one antique ash set, $38; mattress, pillows, comforters, springs, all the best. $13.50; total, $66.20.

Sitting-room—Twenty-seven yards tapestry carpet at 77 cents. $20.79; one pair portieres, $8.45; two shades $1.80; tapestry lounge, $9; bronze mirror, $9; extension table $9; sheet-iron stove, $18; four chairs, $8; making a total of $83.04.

Parlor—Thirty-five yards tapestry at $1, $35; three pairs lace curtains, $10.98; mantel mirror, $10.50; centre table, $6; plush set, $80; three shades, $2.40; making a total of $121.58. In the above furnishings all the cur

DO NOT RIDE ASTRIDE.

Twelve Lady Bicyclists in Indianapo and More in Training. "That girl's a-riding a-straddle!"

'Naw she ain't.' "I tell you she is, too!"

"She ain't, neither!"
A lady bicyclist sails gracefully through an obscure quarter of the city and a crowd of barefooted, gaping Hoosier youths, who don't mind being heard, engage in a hot ontroversy as to her position on the machine.

A young lady rider tells an Indiana-polis News reporter that she innocently set up disputes of this kind among whole treets full of boys in unfrequented parts of the town, and once on looking back she saw in a distance two youngster umbling in the dust and using their fists in emphatic support of their sides of the

The American youth is irrepressible and as he is really innocent at heart one can afford to pass over his remarks with a smile. But when grown people get it into their heads that a lady bicyclist rides astride—well, to the young ladies, who, for the love of wheeling, are bravely bearing the brunt of curiosity and comment, and making an endeavor to show their sisters who walk that 'cycling is not only delightful, but in every sense proper this idea that they sit astride is simply disheartening.

There are some ladies (one hears of them in long dispatches now and then) who have attained a strength of mind which supports them in riding horseback astride. Such a thing may be admirable but the lady bicyclers of Indianapolis are willing to confess that they have not at tained those heights; in fact, there would be no lady bicyclers in Indianapolis if it were necessary to ride astride. sition of a lady on a two-wheeled "1 chine" is substantially the same as that of a person on a tricycle, except that the seat is narrower, she sits as she would on a piano stool. Although to a careless observer a lady's bicycle looks very much like a man's "safety," it is by no means the same. The frame connecting the rear and front wheels, instead of being straight, is curved downward so as to give ample room for the skirts to fall in the ordinary position. Divided skirts are absolutely unnecessary.

ARTIFICIAL ICE TESTED.

Some Users Say the Home-Made Freezing Article Needs a Little Salt.

A Philadelphia butcher named Zoll has been testing the freezing qualities of artificial ice. In the course of his experiments Mr. Zoll found that artificial ice raised the temperature of his refrigerator, and that the ice cakes froze to gether and were milky. Edson Bros., Philadelphia game dealers in speaking of the matter, say:

"It is possible to produce by artificial ice as low a temperature as four degrees above zero. We have demonstrated and accomplished that in a general business way for over a year. The milky ice does not melt quite as quickly as clear ice, but all that is necessary to produce as low a temperature as the clear is to have a little more ice surface or to use a little salt. Ice can be made as clear by artificial as by natural means. The cause of the milkiness of the ice complained of by Mr. Zoll is too rapid freezing. By using the proper amount of time the manufactured ice can be made as clear as French plate glass. ice as low a temperature as four degree been reduced $96.25, in which case the total cost would have been $555.87.

Then I find, by experience that my wife and I can live well on $5 per week, and then, after paying house rent and allowing an average amount for clothing and the necessary gradual additions to household goods and after paying a certain reasonable amount for literature, amusements, church matters, etc., I can lay by about $5 per week.

Hence my conclusion is that a man may get married on a salary of $18 per week, if he has $550 or $600 saved to furnish his home as well as I furnished mine, and get married, provided he saved $1000.

Why save so much? I will tell you. On a salary of $12, nothing could be saved to meet extraordinary expenses that are naturally liable to be met with. For instance, you are liable to have an addition to your family, and if so, it will cost you at least $50, and how can this expense be met, if nothing has been saved, unless there is a balance in the bank?

The first years of married life are oftentimes, financially, the hardest, for there are so many small articles to buy that to save much for times of need is almost impossible, hence the importance of having a reserved fund with which to meet these expenses, or else meet them withs good salary.

The old-fashioned knocker is being restored to its former prestige. Ultrafashionables are having them placed upon their big front doors.
