Positions Were Found

For Eighty-Five Returned Soldiers in This District.

During the last month the Soldiers' Aid Commission found positions for eighty-five soldiers in this military district, under satisfactory conditions at a good-living wage. The superintendent of the branch seeks more co-operation from the employers reporting back to the commission about the men they take on their staffs. As an example, it is stated that only thirty-two reports were received of the men placed last month, although forty-five others went to good positions.

From the superintendent's statement, it appears that employers are not so eager as they should be in giving a trial to the returned men who have been given vocational and re-educational courses at the schools conducted in connection with convalescent institutions. Positions of light labor for men who have suffered physical disability are hard to find. Five men sent out to positions during the last month have had to give them up because of their weakened strength.

LEGISLATION ON LAND SETTLEMENT LIKELY.

State Aid for Industrial Training. Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Legislative action is expected to result from the discussions which took place at the conference of Provincial Cabinet Ministers with members of the Dominion Government on the subjects of land settlement and State aid for the development of technical education and industrial training.

The prospect for next summer is regarded with confidence by those men who are in closest touch with the food requirements of the world. They apparently have no doubt that the 1919 conditions will be entirely favorable.

I doubt whether today the dairy production of Europe as a whole is 30 per cent. of the pre-war normal. After the war Europe must restock her diminished herds. She must look to America for a sufficient supply of dairy cattle to restore her normal percentage.

A writer in Farm and Dairy points out that this demand will strengthen the prices of American cattle, and it should follow that until the dairy industry is re-established in Europe the price of Canadian cheese will be maintained, if not at the level of this year, at least on a basis that should continue to be attractively profitable.

The forward march continues in Alsace amid intense manifestation of sympathy. On the preceding days our troops made a solemn entry into Neuf Brisach, Huingue (Huningen) and Markolsheim, where the conditions prescribed as to the delivery of important enemy material were fulfilled."

A TIP

In a letter to the Toronto Globe Mr. J. W. Cliphsham, of Sparrow Lake says: "Regarding the burning of soft coal in domestic furnaces, I was unable to obtain any hard coal last winter, and put in a supply of soft. It soon clogged the furnace completely. I then found that by burning a little wood with it I could use it without trouble, and so continued to burn it all winter. The burning of the wood seems to consume the soot of the coal smoke, and cleaning out the furnace three times in the winter kept it working. A little experience in the stoking taught me to keep the wood at the back of the furnace and the fresh coal at the front, and of course, one has to 'fire up' oftener than with hard coal."

A Cincinnati woman opened a matrimonial agency and married the first man who applied. The concern is closed now.

Lloyd George and Wilson

Written for The Ontario by Chas. M. Bice, Lawyer, Denver, Colorado.

The telegram of congratulations that Colonel House, sent to the British premier is a just recognition and acknowledgment of the great service David Lloyd George has given to the cause of victorious democracy.

It was Lloyd George who took hold of the situation in Great Britain when the British armies in France were appealing vainly for common machine guns and ammunition. Out-gunned and outshelled, the brave soldiers of the empire were holding their positions by sheer pluck and courage while an overwhelming fire they could not answer swept their trenches and slaughtered them.

great service by being the first man in Europe to take up and re-emphasize in robust eloquence the idealism that America brought to the conflict. When the inspiring thoughts of the President came back to us by cable clothed in the vigorous and picturesque language of Mr. George, they had a punch to them that they often lacked in the smooth rhetoric of Wilsonian phrase.

WHAT GERMAN TERMS WOULD HAVE BEEN

London, Nov. 22.—The late Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg-American Steamship Co., in discussing the indicated armistice terms to be given to Germany in a letter to the editor of the National Zeitung of Berlin, shortly before his death, said: "The indicated military, economic and political conditions of the Entente are much more moderate than might have been expected from our situation. We need only think what our terms would have been had we been the victor. We would have demanded the occupation of Paris and London. We would have dictated peace at Buckingham Palace and annexed the entire continent from the Ural mountains to the Bay of Biscay."

Five hundred and fifty children were suffocated in London last year, more than on the returned men. It is estimated that the development of business in this country will demand the addition of several hundred to our transport and will not exceed or guide, to the Allied lines, with the

The Unvanishing Truth

An obituary notice out of the ordinary appears in the Marquette, Kansas Tribune, which says: "Frank Walters was a unique character. An honest comment on his life is difficult to make in a newspaper. We do not want to say an unkind word about him. He put nothing into his life and got nothing out of it. His hoarded wealth brought him an early grave, and he could take none of it with him. He was honest as he saw honesty, obeyed the laws of the land when it cost him nothing, neighbored with no one; trusted no one; got all he could and kept all he got."

Picton Has Fine Hostelery

Some Recent Improvements in Royal Hotel—Ladies' Lunch Room a Special Feature—Deserves Patronage of Public.

The people of Picton and Prince Edward County are indeed fortunate in their hotel equipment. This fact is very evident in the management of the Royal Hotel as conducted by Mr. George Wellman, the genial proprietor. During recent years many improvements have been made in this fine old hostelery.

Among the recent improvements noted at the Royal is the change which has been made in devoting the men's sitting room to the use of the ladies. This large room just east of the entrance, has been refurnished and decorated, rugs placed on the floor, and otherwise made suitable for the purpose of a ladies' sitting room. A feature which makes this room specially suitable for this purpose is the fact that just adjoining it is a beautiful lunch room finished in white and furnished with marble tables. This lunch and ice cream parlor is entered direct from the ladies' sitting room and has all the conveniences, elegance and refinement of a private dining room.

How to Spell Mulligan in Six Languages

Mulligan is a good old fighting Irish name, although one might be inclined to doubt it, glancing through the stack of mail from overseas addressed to William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus Committee on War Activities, 461 Fourth Avenue, New York. A misive from a French polli who has tasted his first free K. of C. batch of smokes and registers his thanks and an invitation for more, has "Mulligan" (acute accent over the e).

Sir John Lavery to Paint Scene of Hun Surrender

London, Nov. 22.—(British Wireless Service).—The historic scene in Admiral Sir David Beatty's cabin on the Queen Elizabeth when the German delegates arranged for the surrender of the German fleet is to be placed on canvas by Sir John Lavery, of the Royal Academy. Sir John made a special visit to the Grand Fleet at the request of the British Admiralty to make the preliminary sketches for the painting. He was present in the Admiral's cabin during the whole of the conference and painted a finished study of the scene which will serve as a basis for the big canvas which he hopes to complete in the next few months.

There will be fifteen figures in the painting including Admiral Beatty, Vice-Admiral Sir Montague Browning, Rear-Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt and the five German delegates. The painting is completed in time it will be exhibited at the Royal Academy next year.

Quebec is The Cradle of Canadian Literature, Says Dr. O'Hagan, the Well Known Scholar.

It is deeply to be regretted that the English-speaking people of Canada, and especially those of Ontario, know absolutely nothing of what French Canada has contributed to Canadian letters. The Ottawa River is more than a provincial boundary; it is a racial and intellectual boundary as well. Nay, the Ottawa River may be, and is, spanned by a bridge, but who will bridge the division—the ever deepening and ever widening chasm between the two chief races—the English and French of Canada. This can only be done through the cultivation of a deeper sympathy, a broader intelligence, and the dissipation of a much prevailing ignorance as to the real intellectual status of Quebec and its people.

If we here in Ontario would but learn to know the French-Canadian people, all this racial trouble, as Prof. Squair of Toronto University says, "would vanish into thin air." But we must learn to know them more than socially. We should study their institutions, and in order to do this satisfactorily we must study their language. There is one thing certain, that the more you know Quebec the better you like its people. Witness the just attitude which the late Dr. W. H. Drummond, the poet, and Professor Wrong of Toronto University, have held towards the people of Quebec. The "Poet of the Habitant" reached this attitude through sympathy and a long residence among the French-Canadian people. Professor Wrong through broad scholarship and a just appreciation of the worth and virtues of a people.

A Knowledge of French Essential.

We may put it down at the outset as a certainty that the sine qua non for the study of any country and its people is a knowledge of their language, for without this how can we hope to enter the temple of their daily lives, and measure their intellectual and moral activities? Yet we English-speaking people here in Ontario, totally ignorant of the French language, read down to Quebec, spend a few weeks in midsummer at its resorts, and then, with an alarming assumption and presumption, pass judgment on the French-Canadian with a nonchalance as if God had summoned us to do this as a divine duty. Are we quite sure that what we condemn in them is not of great value, measured by the higher things of Christian civilization?

I have recently been interesting my hours in a study of French-Canadian literature, and would that all our Colleges and Secondary Schools in Ontario had a knowledge of what has been the French-Canadian contribution to Canadian letters. It would surprise many and silence much misrepresentation. Indeed, the cradle of the Canadian race is truly the cradle of Canadian literature. It is worthy of note that the strength of French genius in letters, on the banks of the St. Lawrence, is the strength of French genius in letters in France, modified by the circumstances of its setting and the impulse given to its activities. The work done by Quebec writers will be found most creditable in the departments of history, criticism and poetry, and are not these the very departments which shed most lustre on the literary genius of France?

Let me cite but two names in the department of criticism—that of Abbe Camille Roy, and that of Sir Adolphe Routhier, the author of our Canadian National Anthem, "O Canada!" Abbe Roy's two volumes, Nos Origines Littéraires and Nouvelles Essais sur la Littérature Canadienne, are most valuable critical studies of the development of French-Canadian literature from its very beginnings to the present day, while Judge Routhier's Les Grands Drames presents to us an appreciation of the great dramatists of ancient and modern times, which is marked by a breadth of knowledge, subtle literary insight, and fine critical judgment that easily gives this work a first place among Canadian literary studies. It might be noted, too, that the author's admirable translations into French of the passages which he cites from Shakespeare's plays, are in themselves evidence not only of Judge Routhier's grasp of Shakespeare, but his accurate knowledge of the Shakespearean language. It must be frankly conceded that there is no literary criticism emanating from English-Canadian writers that will at all measure up to the work done by Abbe Camille Roy and Judge Routhier in this department. These two French-Canadian litterateurs are indeed worthy of belonging to a race that in the mere patrie has given us, in the department of literature, a Saint-Benoit, a Taine and a Renan.

When we turn to history we have Francois Xavier Garneau, Abbe Ferland and Benjamin Sulte. Unfortunately, Garneau did not live to complete his history, but if ever a Canadian author had the historical instinct, and the genius for patient research, it was Garneau. He will remain for all time—within limitations, of course—the historian of Canada.

French-Canadian Versatility.

As you gain a knowledge of French Canadian literature you are struck with the wide and faltering scholarship which these French-Canadian scholars possess. Their gift of translation is unique. English-Canadian scholars little dream that they have in Lemay's translation of Longfellow's "Evangeline" a French poem moving within the measure of alexandrines which, according to the words of Longfellow himself, is better than original. Then take Abbe Roy's translation of Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon" and you have another example of the fine and accurate scholarship to be found in Quebec. Among the French-Canadian literary men no one has been more versatile than Benjamin Sulte, who is at once critic, historian and poet. For nearly sixty years Sulte's pen has been adding to the wealth of French-Canadian literature, and he is unquestionably the best authority living today on the history of the French-Canadian people. As a writer of lyrics Sulte is the Béranger of Quebec, his translation of popular songs, such as "The Meeting of the Waters" and "Auld Lang Syne," to say the least, rare and unique.

Founders of Quebec Literary Movement.

The literary movement proper, in Quebec, dates from about the middle of the last century, and its real founders were that ill-starred, but rarely gifted genius, Octave Crémazie, and that noble and cultured scholar, Abbe Casgrain. The latter is universally recognized by his literary compatriots as the pure nourricier—the foster father of French-Canadian literature.

France, la mère patrie, and land of high ideals in art and literature, has not been unaided of the work of her daughter in the New World. Her "Forty Immortals," representing her collective literary genius of today, have more than once crowned the work of French-Canadian writers. Dr. Frochet's Les Fleurs, Borealis, Chapman's Les Aspirations, and Abbe Casgrain's Un Pèlerinage au pays d'Evangeline, received this recognition from the French Academy. Yet it is the language of Frochet's, Chapman's and Casgrain's that is designated, in ignorance and thoughtlessness, by the people of Ontario as a patois. But enough; we may return to this latter subject in the near future.—Thomas O'Hagan, in "The Statesman."

Gunmen Held up Women in House

Made Them Disgorge Their Money and Their Valuables.

Boldly forcing the door of a house at 80 Elizabeth street, Montreal, shortly after midnight five gunmen, said to be Italians, held the occupants at the point of a revolver while they leisurely commanded them to turn over their money and jewellery. After collecting several hundred dollars in cash and a large quantity of jewellery, the gang made their unwilling hostesses good night and fled away.

According to police officials, a large gang of New York gunmen are now playing their profession in the city, and it is thought that the five desperadoes of last night's adventure are members of the gang.

PRISONERS LOOSED BY HUNS DIE BY ROADSIDE

British Soldiers Specially Chosen for Inhuman Treatment—Terrible Stories

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Pitiable conditions among British prisoners of war who have been liberated by the Germans since the signing of the armistice are described by Reuter's correspondent at French headquarters. Thousands of these men, mostly British, are entering France daily. The correspondent writes:

"I have never seen human beings in such a state of raggedness, hunger and misery. When the camp at Forbach, 33 miles east of Metz, as well as those elsewhere were broken up the prisoners were told to clear out and seek help from their allies. They started to walk the fifty or sixty miles to the allied lines, but were given no food and had no money. They were in shameful rags, the soles dropping off their boots. Some wore clogs and no socks."

"They left the prison camps in droves of hundreds in charge of German officers and soldiers who had deserted. The weather was very cold and many died by the roadside within a few miles from friends. When the survivors entered the French lines French soldiers who were hardened war heroes were horrified to see men in such a plight. It is not doubted that this suffering was intentionally imposed upon the British. Prisoners of other nationalities are agreed that the British were treated worse than the others at all German camps."

A further report of Sir Robert Younger's committee dealing with the treatment of British prisoners in the coal and salt mines of Germany gives harrowing details of brutal treatment by the Germans. This report says:

"From testimony scarcely a month old, it is evident that there is no sign of improvement whatever. In the treatment of prisoners in Germany. This disgrace is open and flagrant, and the only possible inference is that Berlin deliberately approves of it. There is no doubt that work in the mines is inflicted as punishment. Here is an extract from a letter dated May 20th last, from a British private soldier:

"We have had little to eat since we left Mameln. Two of our number have gone to the hospital with broken arms, and the remainder are suffering from cuts on their heads and bruises as the result of floggings they received at the last place. I fell in a faint, unable to work any longer last Saturday, and the man in charge, a civilian, kicked me back into my senses and kept me down in the mine sixteen hours after all my gang had gone up. They all look like dead men. They are worked to death."

The record of daily promiscuous violence might be much further illustrated. To heroes of men who had given evidence concerning the mining camps, kicks, blows and insults became a part of the normal routine. Here is an example from the testimony of a man who had been at one of the Mameln salt mines:

"In January, 1918, I refused to complete my task, as it was a physical impossibility. I was taken out of the mine dressed only in shirt and drawers—it is too hot in the mine to wear anything else—and put for the night in a hut which was not weather proof. In the morning it was half full of snow. The next day I was taken to the mine and again beaten until I had finished my task. I received nothing to eat from the time I went down into the mine on the first morning until two o'clock the next afternoon."

It is impossible to say how many prisoners' lives were sacrificed, for until more evidence is given by men who have been set free, the exact conditions must remain in obscurity.

FRENCH WOMEN TURN DEAF EAR TO ENEMY

Refuse to Intercede for Mitigation of Well-Deserved Armistice Terms

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The National Council of French Women has declined to intercede with the French government to mitigate the terms of the German armistice. In reply to a message published in the press from German women to Madame Jules Sigfried, president of the council, the council yesterday unanimously adopted this resolution:

"No, we will not intercede with our Government to mitigate the conditions of the armistice, which are only too justified by the manner in which Germany has waged war. In the course of these tragic years German women, believing victory was certain, remained silent at the crimes of their government, their army, and their navy. At the congress at The Hague, to which we refused to go, the president of the National Council of German Women was invited to protest against the violation of Belgium and against the torpedoing of the Lusitania. She wrote in reply: 'We are at one with our people. The men' who took the responsibility for Germany's decisions are as dear to us as those who are shedding their blood for us on the battle-field.'"

To our indignant protest against the deportation of women and young girls, and when we showed that history might possibly bring a reversal of fortune, there was no response."

BRITISH GOVERNMENT URGES IMPORTANCE OF DAIRY BUTTER

Most Significant Warning of War Against Food Deficiency Diseases Emphasizes Necessity of Alternating Creamery Product with Margarine as Public-Health Measure - Influenza Epidemic Bears Hard on Facts

An exclusive diet of oleomargarine and white bread will kill any animal including the human animal, within three months.

An exclusive diet of dairy butter and white bread will prolong life beyond a three months' period, but just how far beyond is not known.

An exclusive diet of oleomargarine and whole wheat bread will sustain life for a long time without serious modifications of any of the functions of the body.

An exclusive diet of dairy butter and whole wheat bread will maintain health and strength for years.

This is the reason that where bread and butter are all that they ought to be the balance of the diet in times of hardship and restriction is of little moment. Honest bread and honest butter are essential to life.

It would be wise to alternate the home purchases of oleomargarine with dairy butter. Where 2 pounds of oleomargarine are consumed each week in the home, one pound should be replaced by butter.

The difference in price paid by the British government for pure dairy butter classified as 'creamery extras' at 43 1/2 a pound wholesale, and the price now paid in the United States for the same grade, 61 cents a pound wholesale, constitutes a problem the solution of which rests with the food administration.

The need of government action to stabilize the butter market in the United States was urged at a conference held the last week of September 1918, by Food Administrator Hoover with fifty representatives of the dairy interests, and members of the Agricultural Advisory Board.

It was the unanimous opinion of the meeting, the reports of which were made public Oct. 1, that the present prices of dairy butter not only bear hard upon the consumer, but are not in the best interests of the butter producer, as they tend to diminish consumption and to permanently stimulate the increased consumption of margarine at about half the price.

Food Administration Acts. It was agreed that these conditions would sooner or later produce a collapse in butter prices to a point possibly below the cost of production.

With the approval of Food Administrator Hoover a committee was appointed consisting of Professor Clyde L. King of Pennsylvania, Charles Brand of Urbana, Ohio; I. Ingersoll of Elyria, Ohio; ex-Governor Warner of Michigan, G. R. Rice of Wisconsin, Frank Kingsley of Iowa, W. F. Shilling of Minnesota, and Robert Scoville of Connecticut.

The function of this committee was to co-operate with the other advisory committees of the Food Administration to consider the situation further, in order to determine what action is necessary to stabilize it.

It is not the business of this committee to consider the public health. The wisdom of the people alone will have to be their guide, but the epidemic now scourging the United States should inspire them to head the fundamentals outlined in this article, as recognized by the British government. Our own government could do no better or more timely thing than to issue warning to all the people to heed the significance of these facts.

This Dominion All Ready Now to Demobilize

PLAN TO BE PUT INTO OPERATION WHEN TROOPS CAN BE WITHDRAWN About 20,000 a Month to be Sent Back to Canada in Units of 500

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—The military side of demobilization of Canada's army overseas has been completed and is ready to be put into operation as soon as peace is declared and the higher command of the Allies consents to the withdrawal of troops.

The question of precedence for the returning Canadian troops has been fully gone into by the special Canadian Committee on Demobilization, which has been working in England and Canada since 1917.

First, battalions on active service should be the first to be demobilized, but it has been pointed out that all these old battalions have received new drafts, and the proportion of service in, say, the First Division is little different from that in the Fourth Division.

Through an erroneous report sent out from Brockville it was said that the work of raising the steam Keystorm would not be resumed.

Millionaire Interned Pittsburg Resident is Said To Be Agent of Germany.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 21.—Charles F. Banning, supposed American citizen, millionaire club man and alleged German agent, was taken yesterday to Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., for internment. He was arrested on an order from President Wilson while he was consulting with his attorney about his defence of the charge of violating the Espionage Act, for which he was arrested six weeks ago.

Federal officers maintain that Banning, though naturalized, revoked his American citizenship when he returned to Berlin to live in 1903.

It is said he will be deported after peace has been arranged with Germany, and his large holdings, both real estate and stock, will be seized and sold by A. Mitchell Palmer, custodian of alien property in the United States.

Banning is reported to be several times a millionaire, who expected to return to Germany to live after the war, and for this reason, it is said, he desired Germany to win, and so expressed himself at various times in the presence of fellow club members.

British Seamen's Grim Ledger May Upset Any Trickery With Huns

(By Charles Edward Russell)

"When the war is over we will do this, that and the other." So say many eminent minds in the statesman and big business way...

On the morning after the Boche brutes had sunk the hospital ship Llandover Castle the secretary of the British Merchant Seamen's League entered his office...

"Two hundred and thirty-four in one year, one month and six days," said the secretary. "Add two months for the hospital in one year, three months and six days. And five years, eight months makes six years, one month and six days."

Part of the commercial world looks forward to a restoration of trade with Germany and wonders how much Germany will want of raw materials and other things that can be sold at a profit...

Every time the German pirates sink a ship and lives are lost the fact goes down in that book, and a certain fixed number of months or days is added to period in which, after the war, British sailors will refuse absolutely to sail on ships that trade with Germany...

murder of Captain Fryart. German crowds have jeered merrily at British sailors beaten and almost incredibly mistreated in German streets. But it looks as if a time were at hand when Germany will wish she could get away from the relentless record of all these things.

In Reply to Bill's Peace Offer

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

My dear Bill: I have your letter of recent date, which was forwarded to me by your friend. You suggest that we get together, bury the hatchet, smoke the pipe of peace...

I am getting along, Bill. I am over a hundred years old now. There was a time when I dreaded that any one should think ill of me. It made me unhappy. But I have learned that nothing adds to a man's reputation among decent people like the hate of a whole folk.

I don't misinterpret me. I don't hate you. Only I want you to hate me. Keep it up. My most soothing thought as I lapse into slumber is that you are gnashing your teeth, whetting your snickersnee, and planning to get me.

So don't worry about our little differences. There is no use trying to patch things up. After all, it is not so much what you have done that offends me, it is what you are, and that will not be cured until your grateful people hang you to a lamp-post somewhere in Berlin.

For I don't like your face. And I don't like the way your moustaches are put on. I don't like your uniforms and I don't like lots of your little ways. This being the case, why should I subject my nervous system to the strain of trying to act friendly?

General Mangin is Severely Injured by Spirited Steed

Paris, Nov. 22—Gen. Mangin was injured by being thrown under his horse while reviewing a brigade of French troops on Monday...

The general's horse, a thoroughbred, and unused to noise, was frightened by a band of trumpets. The animal reared and fell on its rider. Gen. Mangin was unconscious when picked up, having been injured about the head and legs.

The intransigent says the officer after being taken to a hospital, remained in a state of coma for twelve hours, but it is now stated that he is making excellent progress and that no after-effects are feared.
