Last Monday afternoon and evening the province was visited by a very heavy thunder storm but it did not amount to much in this town. About 8 o'clock the sky became over cast and about 8.30 it commenced to rain. This was followed by several heavy peals of thunder and very sharp lightning. About 9.30 the rain came down in torrents after which the sky became clearer.

Story of Evangeline

The lecture given in Music Hall last Monday evening by Rev. A. T. Kempton on "Evangeline" for the benefit of the small pox sufferers was fairly well attended but we were a little surprised in not seeing more. The lecturer was introduced by Mayor Yould.

The lecture was illustrated by over a hundred views which were highly colored, every one being plain so that they could all be recognized. These were taken at Grand Pre', the scene of the expulsion of the Acadians, last summer and have been highly commented upon by critics in the New England States. When these were shown one could hear some one say there is so and so, but when the middle and pathetic part was reached, the feeling that we were looking at pictures of our townspeople died away.

The lecture throughout was very ine-

At Hantsport

An enthusiastic meeting was beld in T. Morgan's tonsorial rooms last Friday to make arrangements for Hantsport's Dominion day celebration.

F. Pentz was chosen chairman and Judson Newcomb secretary. After a discussion of wars and means at some length, a committee, composed of Messrs Cyrus Mitchner, F. A. Coffill, H. Cohoon and E. L. Gertridge, was appointed to canvass the town for contributions for prizes for races and other events to be given. On account of the shortness of time for preparations it was proposed to hire a first-class outside dramatic company to give an entertainment during the evening of July 1st. No doubt every thing will go swimmingly, every body is pushing the good work, along and the grand success of Hantsport's celebration will be repeated if not excelled.

HANTSPORT TO CHEVERIE

The writer started on the steamer Avon from Hantsport wharf Friday morning, striking the other side of river at Card's beach, from which place I went awheel to Cheverie. On the way up river a porposse was seen, but he didn't come to the top so Captain Terfry could get a shot.

Capt. Liswell and Capt. Mann keep a good line of the statement of the shortness of time to two the total contributions for prizes for races and other events to be given.

Messra. Smith operates one of Cheverie's plaster quarries. They also own a valuable deposit of plaster in a hill about three miles from the shore, which would pay well if opened up, the specimens showing a superior grade of plaster.

Capt. Rodman Prat and son run a large business here. They have a fine general store and are largely interested in shipbuilding, employing a number of men. A fine three masted schooner, the Theta, was recently launched and another will be put on the stocks right away. The Theta is being loaded with plaster from John D. Burgess' quarry, near by, Capt. "Try her," said the general druly.

"You have three millions and odd—new and strangely eloquent reasons for convincing her of your worth."

"She is not that sort at all, Sir Charles."

"Then Eve wasn't her ancestor. I've known her from a child. She's pretty enough, I'll admit, but, by the living jingo, I'd rather you married her than I. By George, she'll be a headful! At any rate, she will give you plenty to do. Miss Frida will set the money moving, and you too. So much the better, perhaps."

"Honestly. Sir Charles, I hardly know. I am still too much bewildered and taken aback by what happened. Will you advise me, sir?"

"It's not so easy, my lad. It depends so much upon yourself—upon your principles, your tastes and predilections. Of course you will marry, and I've a shrewd notion which way your fancy lies. I know her well—Frida Fairholme, that little minx. Miss Frida will lead you a fine dance."
