POETRY.

The House of Never.

The house of Never is built, they say, Just over the hills of the By-and-By,
Its gates are reached by a devious way, Hidden from all but an eagle's eye.
It winds about and in and out The hills and dales to sever, Once over the hills of the By-and-By And you're lost in the house of Never.

The house of Never is filled with wails, With just in a minute and pretty-soon,
The noise of their wings as they beat the gates.
Come back to earth in the afternoon, When shadows fly across the sky And seek the spots of red To question the hills of the By-and-By As they ask for the house of Never.

The house of Never was built with tears, And lost in the hills of the By-and-By Are a million hopes and a million fears A baby's smiles and a woman's cry.
The winding way seems bright to-day Then darkness falls forever, For over the hills of the By-and-By Sorrow waits in the house of Never.

Three mufflers—date of Cromwell, Jenkins read out—"Silver box

1720—silver pen, mother-of-pearl lining, date 1720—silver pair, modern silver pen, modern—silver snuff-box, date 1802—silver snuff-box, with agate in lid, initials N. L., date 1723—silver figure of Bacchus, antique—silver salts date Charles First—silver shoe buckles —silver plate, date of Cromwell."

"Yes, all right," said Adair—"and the other."

In truth the man's nerves were strung up to such a pitch that he scarcely knew how to get through that part of the task which still remained before him. For every little trifle that lay in the little case brought with it a crowd of bitter memories, bitter because until now they had been so bright. Hope's fancy for gathering a collection of quaint old silver together had been quite a new one, and she had been very judicious in her way of gratifying it.
She had not been unduly keen to fill her little tables, but had picked up a piece here and another there when she had happened to come across them.
And many a pilgrimage had he made with her down unfrequented streets in quest of some quaint toy or small box of the precious metal with which to enrich her small collection.

And the second table was still more fraught with memories, for it was not devoted exclusively to treasures of silver. There was a small ivory figure from Heroulanicum, a marriage medal of Napoleon and Marie-Louise of Austria, and a commemorative medal of Charles the First, the Martyr King, which had in its time been worn round the neck of some faithful cavalier.
There were one or two carved ivory pins which had graced the head of some Roman matron or maid in ancient times, and there were half-a-dozen miniatures which they had picked up in different places, and had meant to have mounted on a velvet shroud when they had gathered a dozen together.
Besides these there were some toys in silver which had been acquired in the Low Countries, some fine Italian cameos without setting, and also various specimens of Indian filigree-work.
To see them all now was, to Adair, like tearing his heart out by the roots.

He turned abruptly away as Jenkins read out the last item.

"Now there's only the jewellery," he said impatiently. "That will do, Jenkins. We shall not want you any more."

"Don't you want the keys, sir?" Jenkins asked.

"The keys—why, what the devil should I do with them?" Adair burst out irritably. "Am I suddenly to find out that I can't trust you, after all these years? What are you talking about now?"

"You mean you've never you have to take it all into the bank—you can leave out enough spoons and forks for two persons' use."

"Very good, sir. Then there is all that old silver in the boudoir—that in the two little glass-topped tables.
There has never been a list of that, except what I have made out this week."

"Very well—it can go with the rest of the silver to the bank," Adair replied.

"Perhaps you will just look over it, sir?" Jenkins asked.

"Very well—very well. Then, Froggart, we'll go upstairs and get that over at once, eh?"

"As you wish," with a gesture of assent.

Adair therefore promptly marched upstairs and went into the lovely fallow and white boudoir which his wife had been used to call "the Nest." It was such a dainty and charming room, and oh! what a pang it cost him to go in and look round it. There were two old Dutch inlaid tables with glass tops and a well lined with deep red velvet, the better to show off the pretty silver trifles which lay within.

Jenkins got to business at once with a stolid air of indifference which he was in reality very far from feeling. He opened the lid of the first case and reading out from the list he had brought with him, he pointed out one bit of silver more valuable than the rest, while Mr. Froggart stood by, silent and vigilant, watching Adair's fast whitening face and wild haggard eyes.

"Three mufflers—date of Crom-
well," Jenkins read out—"Silver box

at once, eh?"

assent.

Adair therefore promptly marched
upstairs and went into the lovely fal-
low and white boudoir which his wife returned the lawyer with mild persistence—"perhaps there is nothing there at all. Come now, my dear sir, you will be better when you have got it over."

But Adair was obstinate. "No, Froggart, I don't want to go in there, though if it's necessary I'll do it. You look round yourself, and then if you think I must come, I will."

With that Mr. Froggart was obliged to be contented, so he went on his errand and Adair wandered restlessly up and down the room. It was not a very small one, and was luxuriously fitted with a marble bath in an alcove and many pictures on the walls—nothing of value, but the greater part of those which had adorned his rooms at Oxford, and many photographs which he had become possessed of since those happy and careless days. Among them was one beautiful picture of his wife, Hope. It was only a photograph, but although she had been done in more costly ways several times, in oils for the Academy and in pastels for the Grosvenor, this was the one of all which had always pleased him the best. He stood now looking at it with all his lover's soul in his eyes—"Oh! Hope —Hope—Hope—How could you?" he burst out. But the sweet smiling eyes smiled at him still; there was no change, no answer, it was only a picture, the outer husk of what she, his wife, had once been to him!

"My dear Mr. Adair—" said the lawyer coming in again, but Adair turned to him with blinded eyes and a quivering mouth.

"Froggart," he said—"it's not necessary for you to call me Mister Adair—I was too many years just Dick to you for you to be so formal now; it makes me feel so lonely, so—so much an outcast."

The dry old lawyer melted a little towards him. "It scarcely sounds the thing for a lawyer to be calling his client by a familiar name, but we will drop the prefix. I'll call you Adair in the future."

"That's better," Adair said, trying hard to choke down that weak womanly something in his throat which seemed to get bigger and more inconvenient every minute.

"I think, Adair," Mr. Froggart said, "that you'll be obliged to just glance over the drawers and wardrobes. Mrs.
Adair seems to have taken little or nothing with her—there are all her gowns hanging up and her furs, everything apparently just as she left them."

"What—hasn't she even taken her clothes?" Adair cried.

"Very few, if any," Mr. Froggart replied.

Adair turned away to the window.
"I—I can't think of Hope without all the pretty things she was so fond of, Froggart," he added passionately—"I hope to Heaven she has gone to St.
John—she's not fit to live alone, she never made for it. If—if—her ever ill-uses her, I'll kill him—I swear I will."

"Hush—hush! Such things are best left unsaid," murmured the lawyer soothingly. "Come, let us get our work done and go away. You will look the door of the safe, eh? Why, what's that?" pointing to something on the floor of the capboard.

"It is her dressing bag—I gave it to her the day we were married," Adair answered bitterly. "She has indeed shaken the very dust of my belongings off her feet."

"You could not expect or indeed wish anything else," remarked the lawyer, whose tone at once became dry and business-like in correspondence to the bitterness in Adair's. "Is there anything in it? I mean besides its fittings."

"Oh! I should think not. It can go with the rest of the things," Adair said.

And then he opened it, seeing at a glance that there was nothing within but its legitimate contents excepting an envelope addressed to himself. He hesitated for an instant, but he broke the seal then and took out something wrapped in a bit of cotton-wool and a sheet of soft paper. And when he opened these, there slipped into the palm of his hand the great half-choop of rubber which had been Hope Deering's engagement ring.

CHAPTER VII.

In course of time the degree to dissolve the marriage between Richard Adair and his wife, Hope, was made absolute, and each was as free as air to marry or not as they chose, or to take what path in life they thought most fit.

Mrs. Adair did not appear, but her lawyers intimated that she had neither the desire nor intention to show cause why the decree should not be made absolute; and Adair's heart seemed to turn to water within him as he heard.
He had only returned to England a few days previous to the case being called. He came back full of life and in the best of spirits, if the truth be told as gay as any boy at the mere thought of seeing Hope again if only for a moment in court or chambers and in the fierce light of emity. But when the day came there was no Hope she made neither word nor sign, except in that, through her lawyers, she quietly accepted the verdict.

Against all etiquette, he impetu-sously began to question her lawyer, meeting with a steady and icy refusal to give him any information whatever. Then he set Mr. Froggart the task of finding out something, anything, about her if he could.

Naturally Mr. Froggart was more successful than he had been—but at the same time, he brought him no actual news.

Her lawyers, he told him, did not know her address and had received their instructions immediately after the first hearing. Mrs. Adair they had not seen, and Mr. Froggart was not able to find anyone who had seen her since the day on which the decree nisi was pronounced; so far indeed as Adair was concerned she had apparently passed out of his life on the evening that she bade him good-bye in Jersey Street, she had vanished as completely as if she had been swallowed up by the dark night.

I think that the blank disappointment of finding her so completely gone. For months past he had looked forward to that day as if everything was bound to come right then; as the days went by he had thought about her more instead of less, he had hungered and longed for her until the future seemed only a desolate and dreary blank, the present an arid and weary waste. Almost beyond the shadow of a doubt, if he had seen her at that time he would have asked her to let the doubts and troubles of the past slide into oblivion and begin life anew together, for he had found that faithful or unfaithful, he could not live without her. Yet when the day came there was no Hope, not one word or sign to show even whether she was alive or dead.

It was then June, the very height of a gay London season. Adair remained in town with a vague idea that he would meet Hope somewhere or other; but instead of meeting Hope he met every day one or other of his old friends, who each and all welcomed him back with effusion to his old haunts, and insisted on feasting him after the true British fashion which tries to heal all wounds with meat and drink.

"Not going out much now," one gracious lady repeated after him. "Oh! but my dear Mr. Adair, why shut yourself up now. You must not let yourself grow misanthropic, it's such shocking form, you know, and so uncomfortable for all your friends. And you will be old before your time."

Adair thought grimly that Mrs. Pon-sonby would never be open to a like charge herself, but before he could speak she had rattled on. "And what is there to be gained by shutting yourself up from all your friends? Positively nothing—nothing. Of course it is painful for you just at first, but everybody sympathizes so truly with you—I'm sure I never was so surprised or so shocked in all my life. I always thought she was so different. Not that I blamed her, mind, at least not altogether. But without doubt Captain St. John is a most insidious person.
All last season we were expecting an engagement to come about between him and my poor niece, Mary Maturin —they met at several country houses in the autumn, and everyone was full of it. Then all this came out, and Mary has never been the same since.
Oh! yes, she is engaged. She is going to be married next month."

"And to whom?" asked Adair, now deeply interested.

"To Lord Cannock. Old? Oh! yes, sixty if he's a day—but rich, you know, very rich and a good position.
And Mary looks thirty."

"But Miss Maturin is not—"
"Thirty? Oh, dear no!" the lady cried—"just twenty-two. Poor child, I shall be glad when the

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 9, 1894.

The Orchardist Again Heard From.

We were quite amused on reading the leading editorial of the last issue of the Kentville Orchardist, published at Wolfville. The editor of that paper thinks the citizens of Wolfville guilty of gross wrongdoing in presuming to hold a civic election. "The very least the town could do to show its recognition of the onerous duties performed by its unsalaried servants," he remarks, "would have been to return them unanimously. Their work is not complete." To many it would be difficult to see the need of a town council or indeed of any representative body if its work were completed. We are not now praising or censuring the work which has been done by our town council. We believe the councillors of the past year one and all were in every respect qualified for the position they held. But to debar the citizens of a town the right of saying whether those men who have represented them shall continue to be their representatives in the future, appears to us, to say the least, somewhat autocratic. The policy of our radical friend would be more reliable, we are inclined to think, by the autonomy of Russia than in democratic Canada.

Town Council.

The regular monthly meeting of the town council convened at the town hall on Tuesday evening. There were present—the mayor, couns. Thomson, Sawyer, C. H. Borden, G. W. Borden, Starr and Davison, and the recorder. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Accounts of the assessors were read and on motion referred back for itemized statement. Communication was read from county clerk with reference to the meeting of committees to adjust proportion of taxation between town and county. Coun. Davison was appointed on committee in place of A. deW. Bane and coun. Sawyer in place of coun. Thomson, who stated that he would be absent and unable to attend. On motion the mayor and three senior councillors were appointed a committee to nominate standing committees for the year. Coun. Thomson was appointed presiding councillor for the year. Jo. E. Christie and James E. Eagles were appointed town constables.

On motion council adjourned to meet Saturday evening, Feb. 10th.

The Mistletoe.

This plant belongs to the order of Loranthaceae. It grows upon trees, especially the more aged ones; its hairy roots inserting themselves into the bark of the tree, and thus gaining the nourishment from which it grows. For this reason it is called a parasite. On this family there are said to be 23 genera and 412 species, distributed chiefly throughout the tropical regions of Asia and America. They are monocious, having staminate or pistillate flowers on the same plant; or dioecious, having staminate and pistillate flowers on separate plants. The leaves are smooth with short petioles; the flowers are small mostly three-parted distillate of corolla (of a yellowish green color). To the ancient Druids, the oak was the most sacred of all the trees, and the mistletoe Loranthus Viscum found upon that tree was an object of religious veneration. This circumstance has given the plant a reputation beyond that enjoyed by any other of the family. Among the Druids the mistletoe was regarded as a cure for disease and an antidote for poison. On the first day of the year, the 6th day of the moon nearest the 10th of March, the solemn ceremony occurred of cutting the mistletoe from the tree. The arch Druid with a golden knife severed the stem, while attendant priests in white robes caught the sacred plant as it fell. Traces of this custom are said still to linger in parts of Britain, as may be seen in the cutting of the mistletoe on Christmas and the special privilege given to young gentlemen as we have been told to kiss the lady found beneath the plant. Bird lime was made from the glutinous berries of the mistletoe. With this viscous substance the branches of the trees were smeared so that birds alighting upon them were easily caught.

The lens of The Detinator for March is the great "Spring Announcement Number," and in its artistic display of New Styles and general attractiveness it is superior to any former number of this popular magazine. In addition to the usual entertaining reading there are several new features noticed this month, one being an original and decidedly fascinating Scari Drill that will be immensely popular. Another is the resumption of the articles on the Uses of Crepe and Tissue Papers, with illustrations; and a third is the first of the promised series of papers on Hygienic Living. The Housekeeper is specially considered in Some Dainty Cookery, Hints to Housewives, and the article on Household Renovation which treats of the Repairing and Polishing of the Wood-work of Furniture; while the mother of marriageable daughters will find food for serious thought in the concluding chapter of Child Life. The second instalment of Gesture in Elocution continues the subject in a masterly way. Novel and interesting items for entertainments that are accessible and inexpensive are discussed in A Social Club. Around the Tea-Table is as bright and chatty as usual, and things that ought not to be said is practically and suggestively valuable. There is also Flower Culture for the month, and new and interesting designs in Knitting, Tatting, Netting, Crocheting, etc., etc. This March number is one of the best of the year with which to begin a subscription, which costs One Dollar; Single Copies, 15 cents. Training School for Nurses.

AT MOUNT HOPE HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

Some months ago the Chronicle published an account of the arrangements then being made for the establishment of a nurses' training school at the hospital for the insane, which attracted widespread interest throughout the province. Since then the Chronicle presented to its readers much interesting information respecting the progress of this new school. Full classes were organized in the beginning of October, and active work has since gone steadily on. The pupils are a bright, earnest, enthusiastic lot of young women, who will undoubtedly prove a credit to their school when, after graduation, they go out into private nursing. The course which is being given is of the most practical possible nature. In addition to the "didactic" instruction (which has thus far included the rudiments of anatomy and physiology, the more general points in sick nursing, and the characteristics of the principal forms of mental disease), a regular drill is given in bed making, change of the body and bed linen of patients confined absolutely to bed, and the observation of symptoms. Charts are sent into the wards with each patient, upon which the nurses are required to note the pulse, temperature, and bodily functions, as well as the mental symptoms in the case. If the patient is suffering from any physical disease, an additional chart is used, on which the general symptoms are more fully reported. Since the Christmas vacation further attention is being paid to medical nursing, and practical instruction will be given in the preparation and administration of medicines, stress being laid on the observation of the effects produced by drugs. Surgical nursing is also to receive due attention and a thorough course will be given in the preparation of patients for operation, sterilization and arrangement of instruments, preparation of dressings, splints, bandages, etc., and also in the application of minor surgical appliances and dressings. It is intended that the course at Mount Hope will cover thoroughly all the ground taken up in the best schools connected with general hospitals, and at the same time give special instruction in the nursing of the nervous and insane. The forbearance which characterizes nurses graduated from the schools of institutions for the insane is a trait the possession of which is invaluable in the attendance upon any case of illness. As all the teaching is done by the resident staff of the hospital it is possible for the several teachers to continually draw the attention of their pupils to disease signs, and to illustrate very practically the work discussed in the lectures. This is a fact of very great importance and constitutes one of the strongest features of the Mount Hope school. The good effect of a training in nursing is already manifest at the hospital for the insane, and Dr. St. Clair is much gratified by the success which has attended his venture. An infinitely greater pleasure attaches to the work of a nurse who knows why she does this and that, than to one who acts merely in response to orders, and the nursing of the insane particularly loses much of its irksomeness when it is done with an intelligent understanding of the duties required. The classes at Mount Hope evince keen interest in their duties, and continual evidence is being shown of the benefit accruing both to nurse and to patient.

Kentville News.

J. A. Grierson, LL. B., of Weymouth, has been at his home in Kentville during the last week. The B. Y. P. U. of Kentville held a Social last Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. M. G. DeWolfe. About twenty-five people were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Dr. Lavers, of New Ross, was in town on Sunday and Monday. Several of the young men of the town went to Windsor last Tuesday evening to attend a large ball there. Messrs. King and Sangster, barristers, of Windsor, were in Kentville on Tuesday attending Chambers before Judge Chipman. A carnival is advertised for Feb. 15th in the Exhibition rink. The Kentville band has been secured for the occasion. Mr. J. J. Moore is home again after taking a three weeks course at the Murphy Gold Cure Institute at Halifax. He speaks very highly of the Institute and believes that the treatment will effect a permanent cure. The excitement over the civic contest on Tuesday was intense. A large number were present at the Court House all day watching the progress of events. The result was as follows: For Mayor Ryan, 140; Yould, 100. For Councillors: C. F. Rockwell, 171; P. E. Lloyd, 153; C. S. Nixon, 118; Margeson, Chase and Strong were the defeated candidates for councilorship. The adjourned Scott Act trial against R. Poirer came up before W. P. Sheffner on Wednesday. J. J. Ritchie prosecuted and W. E. Roscoe defended, one evidence was examined and a conviction of $30.00 and costs was made.

The Civic Election.

The election for town councillors on Tuesday passed off quietly. The vote polled was a very small one, owing to the large number of citizens who were disfranchised on account of unpaid taxes and water services. However a lively interest was taken and a large amount of quiet work was done. Following is the result of the vote: G. W. Borden 59; G. R. H. Starr 47; J. H. Davison 47; A. A. Pines 46; E. L. Collins 43; A. deW. Bane 42. Are you troubled with dizziness, flatulency, flashings, fulness, general distress? Take K. D. C., the King of Dyspepsia Cure. It is guaranteed to cure you on money refunded.

The Posthumous Poems

OF MRS. W. W. TAYLOR, NEE MISS JENNIE BLACKADDER, DAUGHTER OF MR. W. C. BLACKADDER, OF WOLFVILLE.

WHAT IS FRIENDSHIP?

This is a question which hundreds of persons have asked, which hundreds are asking to-day; and what is the answer? Is it the word of welcome which flows so freely from the lips of all? Is it the kiss with which we greet our friends, or the gentle pressure of the hand at parting? Is it the words of flattery, or the studied looks of admiration? I think not. It is the little deed of kindness, the act of tenderness, the modesty which admits not of intrusion; the cup of cold water and the word of encouragement at the hour of need. Ah! and friendship is more than this; it is the words we speak of others, not to them, which prove our friendship. True friendship is that which begins with our first meeting and ends only with life.

1879.

SISTER MARY, who died November 9th, 1877.

Death has entered our family circle, and taken from our care

One flower which ever was too frail Long to have blossomed here.

'Tis well! No storms of winter Shall chill our darling now, For a wreath of flowers immortal Entwined her Angel brow.

She, embroiled in purple garments, Among that throng shall be; For Christ in tenderest accents said: "Let children come to me!"

Those lips had never learnt to liep One word of guilt or shame, Nor never, while her stay on earth, Had called a father's name.

We'll yield our darling to Thy care, For when in Heaven she'll be, 'Twill prove a golden chain to link Our wandering hearts to Thee.

Sept. 6th, 1878.

TO MY FRIEND.

Some time in the dim dark futare, When all around me path,

When twilight tapers as a mourning, And their sweetest perfume waft,

When you track the rose in silence, And the honey-suckle well, Do you think they'll smell as sweetly As those gathered when a child?

Will not their very fragrance Seem an echo from the past? To bring to mind some hours Which were too bright to last? Though other friends may claim your love, I fain would crave a thought; So here with trembling hand, I write,—"Forget me not."

Mr. Fisher is well known here as an eloquent speaker and a firm advocate of temperance. Those who have had an opportunity of hearing him in the past will hail with pleasure a chance of again listening to him.

The Temperance Society is progressing favorably. Much interest is manifested by the members, who seem thoroughly to appreciate the education they are receiving along this line. At the last meeting, on the evening of Feb. 5th, the study of "The Idyl of the King" was brought to a conclusion. "The Idyl" will next be considered. Mr. Hebbin as director inspires the society with deep interest in the study of poetic art, and the members consider themselves as very fortunate in having secured his leadership.

Keep your eye on the newspaper and see which of the merchants want your custom and are sufficiently courteous to invite you to call. There is much more in advertising than you think. It is not only to tell of his goods that a man advertises, but to invite the people to read—the thinking, the intelligent—to pay him a visit and judge for themselves as to the quality and price of what he offers for sale. People read the advertisements. Don't make any mistake about that. They are just as much interested in knowing where to buy to advantage as the advertiser is in selling his goods.

We claim of "Elegant Almond Cream" that it is ahead of any "Cream" in the market for the relief and cure of chapped lips and hands, and rough skins, etc. Delightfully perfumed. Try it. Only 25c. Druggists.

We have such an emulsion in bottles holding from 25 to 50 per cent. more than other emulsions and the same price, 50c. Try a bottle next time. Drug Store.

The Prohibition Plebiscite.

Premier Fielding introduced a bill in the house of assembly Wednesday for the taking of a prohibition plebiscite simultaneous with polling for the local general elections. There will be a separate ballot box, with blue ticket bearing the words "yes" and "no." The voter will make a cross opposite either word according as he wishes to vote. The voting will be confined to those whose names are on the electoral lists, and will not include those who might be entitled to vote at municipal elections.

A Grand Concert in College Hall ON THE 12TH OF THIS MONTH.

Herr and Frau Doering and Herr Karl Doering, from the Doering Conservatory of Halifax, will give a concert in College Hall on the evening of Monday, the 12th of this month, in which very fine selections for the piano and cello and vocal solos will be given. Lovers of good music should make it a point to be present. They will have a very pleasant evening.

Conservative Convention.

A convention of the Liberal Conservative party was held at Kentville last Monday at 1 p. m. Over sixty delegates were present, representing every polling district in the county. The two candidates for the local contest were decided on the first ballot, they being B. Webster, M. P. P., of Kentville, and R. M. Rand, of Canning. Mr. Rand was present and in a short but happy speech accepted the nomination. Speeches were also made by C. E. Bill, W. P. Shaffer and S. Baker. Mr. Webster in reply to a telegram accepted the nomination stating that he was glad to have Rand as a colleague. This is considered a very strong team by both parties. Mr. Webster headed the poll list election with a good majority and Mr. Rand is well and favorably known all over the county as a potato and apple speculator and a farmer. His chances as a representative of Kings are considered good.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Edward Randall, of Illinois, and formerly of Annapolis, has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Randall, who is at present residing in Wolfville.

Mr. H. Newcombe, who has been in the States for some time, returned home last week.

We are glad to report that Miss Addie Cogswell, who has been confined to bed for so many months, is now strong enough to walk about the house.

La Grippe again shows signs of raging among us. Several families have been attacked, but we hope it will not prove fatal.

The pulpit of the Christian church will be unoccupied for a short time, as the pastor, E. C. Ford, is preaching in Halifax.

The first of a series of dancing lessons to be given by Miss Glaska, (at the Port) was held on Monday evening, 5th inst. Will the attraction at this class be strong enough to rob Wolfville of some of her bandmen?

Last year a number of valuable dogs, in our village and vicinity, were destroyed by poison. Again this year, some unprincipled person, has by the same means been successful in raising the death not only of our dogs but also the greater number of our cats.

A society of Christian Endeavor has been formed at the Baptist church. There are quite a number of young people in the Port and vicinity. We hope they will work earnestly and, therefore, can but do good to themselves and others.

An Unprecedented Achievement. Messrs R. Hoe & Co. the great printing press builders are very proud of the magnificent press which they have built for the Witness, whose capacities are, putting all things together, the greatest that have ever been combined in one machine.

We have unexpectedly received from them the following note of triumph, which on consideration we think our readers should be allowed to see:— New York, Jan. 13, 1894.

Gentlemen:—We received the other day, through one of our forerunners, a copy of the 32-page paper printed on your press, and certain congratulations upon this achievement—something that has never before been done on a regular issue on any of our presses, we believe, in the country, and of course no other machine ever made.

We have also seen your issue of December 25 and note the kind words spoken of our machinery. In fact, we keep posted on your paper as it appears from time to time, and certainly think your achievements in stereotyping, publishing, etc., and in every way, something to be proud of.

With best regards, we remain, Yours very truly, R. Hoe & Co. Messrs John Duggall & Sons, the Witnesses, Montreal, Que.

Ball at Mt. Pleasant.

The event of the season took place at Mt. Pleasant on Tuesday night when a fashionable dance was given by one of the society hosts of that district. About twenty couples accepted invitations and made a very pretty array in the dance room which had been tastefully decorated for the occasion with spruce boughs and hemlock twigs. The ball opened at 8 o'clock with "My Queen Waltz," which was excellently rendered by Mr. John Kelly, one of Horton's renowned violinists, and at 2.30 a m. "God Save the Queen" announced the hour of parting. A sumptuous supper was served at 12 o'clock. Below is a partial list of the fair ones and their costumes:— Miss Shaw—Nile Green trimmed with Old Gold. Miss Wallace—Cream Tulle en train. Mrs. H. Brown—Navy Serge with Pink Bodice. Mrs. Porter—Black Lace and Cream Chiffon. Mrs. Aikens—Jabac Silk with Yellow. Miss Lightfoot—Black Lace over Cream Silk. Miss Ogilvie—Blue Silk with Yellow Ribbon. Mrs. B. Faulkner—Pink Silk and point lace. Mrs. Gupill—Black Lace on train.

Money Herodotus says that Croesus was the first sovereign to make coins of gold. In 1560 the first English shilling was minted. It bore the king's image. The United States mint was established in 1792 and at once began operations. The first English laws against counterfeiting were issued in 1186 by Henry I. In the early years of this century there were 33 tons of silver to one of gold in circulation. Paper money was first issued by the notorious John Law. His issues exceeded £120,000. Vermont and Connecticut coined copper in 1785. New Jersey and Massachusetts did the same in 1786. In 1629 the first large copper coins were minted in England, putting an end to private leaden tokens. Judas sold his master for 30 pieces of silver—that is, 30 Roman pennies—about 241/2%. One Roman penny was a good day's wages for an agricultural laborer. In 1684 Charles II. minted tin and tried to make it pass current. After his abdication James II. minted gun metal and pewter and endeavored to make purchases with the coins. The Norman English coined silver pence with a cross deeply cut into the coin, in order that it might be easily broken into halfpence and farthings when small change was needed. France, Belgium, Greece, Italy and Switzerland constitute the "Latin Union." The coins are alike in weight and fineness, differing only in name. The same system has been partly adopted by Spain, Serbia, Bulgaria and Roumania. The seignorage or deduction made from the bullion to cover expenses and pay the sovereign his royalty has varied in different countries and at different times. Henry III. charged sixpence in the pound; Henry VIII. 50 shillings every pound of gold coined. The Farm. You must believe in yourself and then make the market believe in you. Make a name for yourself. Toot your own horn. Farming will bear more abuse, endure more slanders, stand up under more business and outlast more neglect than any other kind of business. We are getting used to the handling of lanterns and other lights in barns and out-houses, and to fire, stove and flues in the house, by their every day use, but it will nevertheless pay the head of the house to look over them once in a while that he take no extra risks of loss of disaster. The farm that does not support a flock of poultry is not managed to the best purpose. On the contrary, the farm on which too much poultry is kept will be the least to the extent that it is overburdened, for where poultry is crowded into a house it ceases to be profitable. There are many things that should be carefully observed in the education of horses that are entirely omitted. Too much dependence is placed in the bit, lines, strength of the harness, the use of the whip and the ability of the driver to control the horse by sheer brute force. Hence there are so many fatal accidents. The merchant makes an "inventory" of his goods at least once or twice a year. Why should not the farmer do the same, and sell off his culls. The merchant gets rid of unsalable articles by offering them at a low figure, replacing them with goods that are in demand. The farmer can do the same, and he will find that it will pay, for he will then be improving every year. An Aged Lady. Mrs. Ecolstone's Suffering from Kidney Disease Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills—A medicine that produces Good Results for Both Old and Young. St. Catharines, Feb. 5.—Mrs. F. E. Ecolstone, aged 65, a well-known resident of this city, has for some time been afflicted with kidney disease, the symptoms of which were severe pains in the small of her back. She is now perfectly cured. This happy result is due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the famous and infallible remedy for all kidney diseases. Mrs. Ecolstone says the pains have never returned since her recovery, and her happiness over her restoration is indescribable. These pills are manufactured by Dr. L. A. Smith & Co., Toronto, and are sold by all dealers, or will be mailed on receipt of price; fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. The tramp had been so well treated that he was becoming a trifle careless. Can you give me some meat I've asked, with a loaf of bread under his arm at the back door. What kind of meat I enquired the cook willing to please. Oh, any kind meat, I ain't particular in the morning. Very well, just step around the corner of the kitchen there and meet the dog, and she laughed such a coarse, cruel laugh that the tramp hastened out of the gate quite crestfallen. Tutor—When did Christopher Columbus discover America? Pupil (readily)—In 1492, sir. Tutor (testily)—What stupidity! Don't you know it was in 1492. Pupil—Excuse me sir. I thought you meant the last time he discovered America. May—Oh! that must be machinery hell! Hear the clanking! Harry—You're mistaken. That's the woman's building. The board of lady managers is in executive session. Jumpers! is getting to be a horridly profane man, isn't he? Yes, poor fellow, he bought a patent foot-saving device last fall.

A very interesting discussion on the subject of "Bible Wines" was held at the last regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. Much important and interesting information was brought to bear upon the subject, from which the following is selected for publication: At the present time there is a powerful party who claim that the use of fermented or intoxicating liquors is permitted, and even sanctioned by the Bible. The party is headed by a few eminent scholars and clergymen, who are chiefly supported by a promiscuous throng of rich rum-sellers, respectable moderate drinkers and gutter-drunkards. The Bible has been quoted to sustain polygamy, slavery and other evil institutions, as well as intemperance. Rightly understood, it supports none of these. If it can be proven that the Bible favors the use of intoxicating drinks in any degree, then there is placed in the hands of the infidel a powerful weapon with which to attack the authenticity and sacredness of the Scriptures. Inspiration, true science and sound common sense always agree. Science says most distinctly and unequivocally—al fermented drinks contain alcohol; alcohol is a poison, under all circumstances and in all doses. This decision of science is sustained by reason, for common sense teaches that any substance possessing the properties of alcohol can be nothing else than poisonous. If it is true that the Bible teaches that alcohol in the form of wine or otherwise is good and harmless, when it is made to appear that inspiration is less wise than reason and science, that man, the creature, has outstripped the Creator in knowledge. Such a conclusion is too absurd for belief by one who has a modicum of faith in inspiration. Its manifest falsity would seem to be sufficient to fully expose the weakness of those who would make the Bible responsible for intemperance. The utter worthlessness of all arguments in favor of the use of alcoholic drinks founded on the Bible, becomes still more apparent by a careful examination of the character of the wines mentioned in the Bible, and a consideration in detail of the texts which are claimed to be favorable to the use of alcoholic liquors. It is undoubtedly true that intoxicating wines are mentioned in the Bible and it is equally true that a kind of wine is recognized and often mentioned which is not intoxicating. Wine is the juice of the grape. If it contains no alcohol it is not intoxicating. That the ancients were acquainted with several modes of preventing fermentation is clearly shown by a reference to history. Alcohol can be made from any juice that contains sugar. The ancients made intoxicating drinks from millet, beans, palm juice, pears and other fruit besides grapes. In the English version of the Scriptures the distinctions made in the original are often obscured or wholly lost. In the Hebrew different kinds of wine are indicated by different words which are rendered in the English by the same word wine. The principal words thus employed are yayin, shekar, and tirosh. Yayin, according to biblical critics, refers to the juice of the grape in any form, sweet or sour, fermented or unfermented, just as we apply the term "cider" to the expressed juice of the apple whether fermented or otherwise. Shekar was the term applied to any sweet juice derived from any other source besides the grape. Like yayin, it included the fermented as well as the unfermented condition of the juice. Tirosh was applied to the ripe fruit of the vine before fermentation has begun. It is often translated "new wine." The Greek "oinos" corresponds exactly with the Hebrew "yayin." Extracts from J. H. Kellogg, M. D., in his "Home Hand-Book of Hygiene and Medicine." More matter on this subject is reserved for next week's issue. Coughs and Colds.—At this season when coughs are so prevalent, an effective remedy, and one easily obtained, is Perry David's "Fruit-Kidney." It is a new nostrum, rendered by unknown agents, but has stood the test of over fifty years; and those who use the article, internally or externally, will connect with it grateful recollections of its worthy inventor. Build Up. When the system is run down, a person becomes an easy prey to consumption or rheumatism. The Grocer Dyspepsia Cure Co. GENTLEMEN.—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headache most all my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse until during the past seven or eight years I have not been able to take a drink of cold water or milk, as they would produce severe pain and sometimes vomiting. I have been subject to severe pain in the chest, with distress, which have been more frequent during the past three or four years. My month was furnished in the morning, accompanied with bad breath. My case was nearly hopeless. During this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical profession, but without producing any improvement. In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it until now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dry pills are all gone and my month is as sweet as a baby's. In short, my complaint has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspepsia can be cured by its use. (Signed) W. H. ROGERS, Late Inspector of Fisheries for Nova Scotia.
