My Business.

It is everybody's business. In this old world of ours, To root up all the weeds he finds, And cultivate the flowers.
It is everybody's business. As he walks earth's weary miles, To keep back all the trowns he can, And bring out all the smiles.
It is everybody's business. I'm sure you've always heard, To hold in check the harsh one and To speak the kindly word.
It is everybody's business. It is our old world's need— To keep the head from sinking out, And do the loving deed.
And stand, 'tis everybody's work To be the link and true To the link and true To the link and true.
It means both here and you, Carterhall, N.S.

A Tragic Dilemma.

Billy Haveland swung down the gravelled pathway, whistling blithely. His cup of happiness was full to overflowing, for he was not about to see his lady love after an absence of two long—sternally long—weeks? Turning down one of the sidewalks, he came upon Dennis, the gardener, busily engaged in taining a refractory rosebush up against the garden wall. A few well-placed compliments on the beauty of the flowers and a wondering admiration as to how he kept the garden in such a riot of bloom, served to put Dennis in a sufficiently good humor to allow Billy the privilege of gathering a few of the roses. These he tied together in a charming bouquet, and thus armed he made Dennis a smiling adieu and continued on his way toward the end of the garden, where, in the shadows of the summer-house, he knew Bettina would be waiting for him.
As he neared it, Billy tip-toed softly, in order to surprise the glad light in her eyes when she should see him. He was almost upon it when he became aware of the subdued murmur of voices within, one of which he recognized with an angry start as that of his one-time rival, Jack Trevelan. He stood perfectly still, looking toward the summer-house, and as he listened, Jack's voice became louder and finally ended in a passionate plea for love and forgiveness.
Billy gasped, and held his breath. Then he smiled to himself. Of course Bettina would slowly turn her eyes toward the door, and when she saw him, and point toward the door, and after Jack had crept away, he, Billy, would go in and the would throw his arms around him, and he would do for her.
He peered through the lattice of the leaves, saw Bettina stand up, throw back her head, and then stretch out her arms with a yearning gesture toward Jack, saying, "Yes, forgive me, darling. Take me, I am yours, wholly yours. The other was all a miserable mistake."
Raising his hand in a dazed fashion to his face, Billy turned around, and stumbled back up the path to the room. He could not believe his ears! That Bettina, his Bettina, who had sworn so faithfully to remain true to him but two short weeks before, should be capable of such treachery! His mind seemed paralyzed; only two words kept repeating themselves insistently upon his brain—"wholly yours—wholly yours."
He turned mechanically, and saw his brother seated upon a rustic bench. The latter jumped up with a hearty exclamation of pleasure, but stopped at the sight of the dumb misery depicted on Billy's face.
"Why, what's the matter, old chap?" he gravely asked. And then the boy in Billy came uppermost, and he haltingly blurted out the whole story of what he had seen. When he had ended, Billy raised his eyes to his brother's face, but started back in amazement, for the latter had unmistakably given way to mirth of the most violent sort.
"Oh, oh, Billy—don't say another word, but come—with me!" he gasped, and still choking with laughter, he hurried Billy into the house, where, from a table in the hall, he took up a small pamphlet, turned over

The Canadian Magazine.

There is a commendable variety of matter in the September Canadian Magazine. 'The Mystery of Edward Blake' is the title of an interesting essay on several aspects of this great Reform leader in Ontario. 'The Highways and Byways of Dublin,' with fine illustrations, is a delightful sketch of Ireland's capital, while equally charming is the sketch of the Thames River by Louise Hayter Bitchell. A. J. Clark contributes a valuable sketch of Captain Kennedy, a Canadian who made two attempts to discover the fate of Sir John Roerlin. The short stories are exceedingly good, in particular 'Only an Egg' by Bernard Maddiman, and 'Madeline Boyart,' a translation of a Canadian story from the French of Fancher de St. Maurice. There are as well several reproductions of sketches in charcoal by George Chavignand, and a number of poems of merit.

The September Rod and Gun.

Boonycastle Dale's 'Every Day Scene with the Indian Trapper' opens the September Rod and Gun in Canada. The Adventures of a German Hunter in America, being a translation from the German by Hon. William Brewster Riddell, L. R. D., etc. relates the experiences of Friedrich Garstaker who visited America in 1837 and went bear hunting in the Ozark mountains. This is 'some bear story'. Duck hunting is given considerable attention in this issue and includes duck shooting on the river Scungog, at Long Point, on the St. Lawrence on the Kootenay district and an amusing Western tale entitled 'Hunting in Sage Brush Like's Duck Pond'. Decoy Shooting by Reginald Goulay is deserving of special mention as is also a well illustrated article on Rearing Wild Ducks in Captivity. Mr. James Dickson, a veteran sportsman, makes some suggestions and criticisms regarding Mr. Kelly Evans' Fish and Game report. 'Pens and Dens' is the subject of the Fox article in this issue.

'What is the secret of success?' asked the Spinx.
'Push,' said the button.
'Take pains,' said the window.
'Never be led,' said the pencil.
'Be up to date,' said the calendar.
'Always keep cool,' said the ice.
'Do business on tick,' said the clock.
'Never lose your head,' said the barrel.
'Do a driving business,' said the hammer.
'Aspire to great things,' said the nutmeg.
'Make light of everything,' said the fire.
'Make much of a small thing,' said the micro-cop.
'Never do anything off-hand,' said the glove.
'Spend much time in reflection,' said the mirror.
'Do the work you are suited for,' said the lice.
'Get a good pull with the ring,' said the door-bell.
'Be sharp in all your dealings,' said the knife.
'Stick to a good thing and stick to it,' said the glue.
'Trust to your stars for success,' said the night.
'Strive to make a good impression,' said the seal.
'Turn all things to your advantage,' said the lathe.
'Make the most of your good points,' said the compass.
'Be always on the lookout for a snap,' said the camera.
'Be ever ready to do a good turn for anyone,' said the crank.
'Never take sides, but be round when wanted,' said the ball.
'Keep a good heart though you be drawn and quartered for it,' said the oak.
She—If you could have only one wish what would it be?
He—It would be that—that—Oh, if I only dared to tell you what it would be.
She—Well, go on! Why do you suppose I brought up the wishing subject?

A Heroine of the War of 1812-14.

Nearly a century ago, in a district which was then a theatre of war, a brave and chivalrous deed was performed by a patriotic Canadian woman which has since been perpetuated in many ways, but more recently by the erection at her graveside of a beautiful monument. The name of Laura Secord will always illumine the pages of Canadian history. Alone she walked nearly 20 miles, by a circuitous, difficult and perilous route, through woods and swamps and over many roads, to warn a British outpost at De Cew's Falls of an intended attack and thereby enabled Lieut. Fitzgibbon, on June 24th, 1813, with fewer than 40 men, to defeat the British army of 1250 men, and a small force of Six Nation and other Indians, under Capt. Wm. Johnson Kerr and Dominique Ducharme to surprise and attack the enemy at Beechwood (or Beaver Dams) and after a short engagement, to secure Col. Roerstein, of the U. S. army and two field pieces. The monument stands with its easy bearing of the sound of Niagara's roar and a short distance from the historic battle-ground of Landy's Lane. Recognized as long in coming to Laura Secord, for it was not until 1853—forty years after her exploit—that there appeared in print an account of her twenty miles' walk on that hot day in June, 1813. Seven years later, in 1860 Edward Prince of Wales (afterwards King Edward VII) during his visit to the Niagara district, heard the story of her heroic deed, and sent her a gift of two pounds.

First Encyclopedia.

The most ancient known attempt at what is called in these days an 'encyclopedia' was Pliny's 'Natural History.' This old work, a very high authority throughout the middle ages, is really a remarkable production and well deserves the fame that for so many ages belonged to it. Pliny, who died in 79 A. D., was not a naturalist, a physician or an artist and did not pretend to be the wisest man of his time, yet such was his interest in knowledge that he devoted the leisure hours of a busy public life to compiling the work, which did a vast amount of good in the world and paved the way for the comprehensive encyclopedias of the present day.

Do you mean that purl with the spots on her face?

Overheard in a Street-Car. There's a lesson right there! It is made from healing, herbal extracts and essences. Always pure, fresh and ready for use. Doesn't lose its power. Keeps indefinitely. Healing, soothing and antiseptic all the time. Try it! 50c. box all druggists and stores.

Pert Paragraphs.

When a girl looks on marriage through the gauzy film of bridal finery she has a rude shock awaiting her from the stove shiner and scrubbing brush.
And there's a heap of difference between deserving what we want and wanting what we deserve, with the majority of us on the unregenerated side.
Many a man remains a bachelor because the girl who is desirable enough for him to marry is too expensive for him to support.
Danger is a stimulant that brings out the best that is in a man—if it doesn't scare him silly and make him run to keep his feet warm.
An old bachelor is a man who has been considered too colorless to offer any fun to husband hunters.
There are men who go right along and get ahead all the time, but it is necessary to have a head in order to do it.
Money talks, but seldom for publication.
The Husband—I was taken by surprise when you accepted me.
The Wife—You were taken by mistake, John. Don't make any mistake about that.

Barber—Well, my little man, how do you want your hair cut?

Freddy—Just like father's. And don't forget the little round hole at the top where the head comes through.
As a dressing for sores, bruises and burns Chamberlain's Salve is all that can be desired. It is soothing and healing in its effect. It allays the pain of a burn almost instantly. This salve is also a certain cure for chapped hands and diseases of the skin. Price 25 cents. For sale by all dealers.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEPT. 27, 1912.

What Yields.

The New York Post, which is recognized as an authority on commercial questions, has been making estimates as to how much wheat the United States can spare from its 1912 crop. It calculates that the indicated yield of about 700,000,000 bushels will leave a surplus of 200,000,000 bushels, and that this surplus may be largely increased by the final crop returns. This would permit of exports of 100,000,000 bushels, as against something like 75,000,000 in the crop year ending last June, and would leave a surplus for carrying over, on July 1st, 1913, of 100,000,000 bushels. All indications are that the United States is to have an excellent export trade with Europe for some months to come. Canada will scarcely have as much wheat for sale abroad as the United States. Where then is the much-vaunted American market for Canadian wheat?

When we consider the size of Canada, its vast areas, and what an immense population it could hold, the imagination is staggered. And this vast expansion will continue. Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and all around Hudson Bay have lands and natural resources enough for millions of industries and pushing people. And those areas and millions more have yet to be filled. The lands in these new north-western provinces appeal to many; but the fertile lands in Nova Scotia appeal with equal force to many more; so also do the varied pursuits so abundant here. People tire of the dull monotony of the prairie, especially Anglo-Saxons. They want variety. Nova Scotia can give it. It does today. But when this old sea-girt, log-battered province comes into her own, there will be things doing that will amaze the inhabitants. It is up to Nova Scotians to boom their own province.

New Autumn Hats.

Autumn millinery as displayed by Wolfville's popular and up-to-date modistes shows new and most attractive models.

Plain walking hats and close-fitting small hats with brim rolled at sides, and high crowns squared or round are two favorite styles for early wear. The new shapes come in velours, soft felts, satin felts and clip felts. Tri-cornes, bi-cornes and the feury or poke-shape will also be popular styles this season. The trimming is simple, high loops of ribbon and mercury and butterfly wing effects are very prevalent, the wings being placed flat on the crown. Dark hats with touches of vivid coloring in the trimming are much in vogue. The best shades this season are dull blues, taupe, mole gray, antique gold and wine. Black and white, particularly in the large or directorie models, is especially good. These hats come in better plush, have pointed crowns and are most beautifully trimmed in fluffy ostrich mousses.

One of Miss Saxton's smart models is in black plush with pointed crown and trimming of marbled ostrich feathers in burnt orange shading into browns. Another beautiful hat for dressy occasions is a black and white snicche shape with dent on both sides brim. A young girl's hat is in black velvet rolled at outer brim with facing of white marabou and trimming of hand made flower wreath in vivid scarlet. A Paul Poiret turban with tan crown is of black velvet with black plumes at high left side and black and white ornament at right. A round white felt is trimmed daintily with white marabou mount and touches of pink. A black fur plush has an ostrich moussé of shaded, blue at front and bows of black moussé ribbon at back.

Many beautiful directorie models are shown at the W. C. Dexter & Company's rooms. These hats are in black and white, golden brown, black and canary yellow. There are black and gray beavers artistically trimmed and many pretty models in ready-to-wears. A large hat of black velour, rolled at front and trimmed with fluffy white marabou mount is an effective model at J. D. Chambers'. A smart tri-corne model is in black velvet with white moussé top and black ostrich at side. A new grey turban has hand of fur and shellite and black and gray wings at side.

Sir Richard Cartwright Dead.

Kenyon, Sept. 24.—Sir Richard Cartwright is dead. He died in the General Hospital shortly after eleven o'clock this morning. He took a bad turn during the night and although he rallied, during the early hours of the morning he began to sink steadily and passed away very suddenly. A consultation of doctors at 10 o'clock decided that the good Knight could not survive the day. Lady Cartwright and members of the family were at the death bed. His funeral will be private.

Bishop Warrall in Cornwallis.

The Show Window.

Those who have been reading the Liberal newspapers and organs of news and information, must be highly elevated, politically, to learn that the present leader of the Liberal party in Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has been delivering addresses in the outskirts of Quebec and in Northern Ontario. The show window of the Liberal party is being dressed up by Sir Wilfrid, out of the remnants in stock, and although the conglomeration of incongruities is hardly completed, general outlines are beginning to appear.

The central decoration appears to be a strong appeal to the provincial particularism of Quebec. Into the title of any province is likely to come a testing of the Dominion government by its relations with purely provincial interests and ideas. A government which favored one province at the expense of the others would probably be supported more strongly there than in the others, and a government flagrantly unjust to any province would most certainly arouse hostility there. But the real measure of a national government is its conduct of affairs which are not those of Quebec or Manitoba or British Columbia, but those of the country as a whole—viz. Canada. A member of parliament represents his constituents in local matters and his views of Canadian policy in everything else. The avenue of their approach to the Dominion is through the government and parliament of the province. Every statesman or representative who appears to make the interests of a province paramount over the interests of the state as a whole, is playing with edged tools, and is hindering not helping the true national development of the country.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier plumes himself on having been a force in opposition to this disintegrative tendency, but from his conduct out of office he would seem rather to have been retained in power by the compelling spirit of Canadian nationality than to have risen to any just and adequate conception of it in his own mind. His argument to the people of Quebec has been that by conciliation he was able to do more for their provincialism than by insistence, and he never seems to question the right and the properties of the presence of such provincialism in the federal arena. He is willing to juggle with the sectional jealousies and differences which it is the mission of true Canadianism to obliterate.

Sir Wilfrid, in addition to his appeal to Quebec and the French race of Ontario, reiterates his adherence to the policy of reciprocity. He says his government found a market for Canada's produce in the United States, a most curious statement, really an inversion. If he had said Canada's rejection of reciprocity was responsible for those who now govern Canada, he would have been nearer the truth. Opposition to reciprocity rests upon three proved grounds, first that the monetary advantage of the American market, for our surplus products is illusory, second that it is illusory because the United States could not consume the surplus of Canada, having a surplus themselves, and that whenever the United States needs any of our agricultural products it will take steps to get them without any action on our part, and thirdly, that through reciprocity we should have abandoned our fiscal independence and have become an appendage of and tied hand and foot to the United States. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier wishes to fight his battle of Waterloo over again it will have to be done. But it would be well to let some green grass grow upon the trampled and mired field.

After Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his lieutenant, Hon. Rodolph Lemieux, raised the banner of 'Down with the Trusts,' a most excellent rallying cry, but in the Liberal party of somewhat recent origin. It would never do to admit that the people of Canada put the Liberal government out of power, as its leaders say the trusts destroyed them, a wicked crime indeed on the part of creatures they had themselves brought into being, tended and fostered with the most loving care. There is not a trust, monopoly or predatory corporation doing business in Canada to-day which has not the private ear of the Liberal government, not one for whose special interests it was not ready to prostitute the principle of protection if so desired, not one which appealed in vain for special legislation. Little wonder that the Liberal leaders have been released by the trusts to orate against them, when they know exactly how to reduce those leaders to silence and inactivity when in office. Their talk they hope will deceive the people, they know it will not agitate the trusts. What odds and end fragments and tatters may yet be added to the display of bankrupt stock it remains for the future to disclose, but so far, it is a singular unwholesome mixture of shabby and undesirable articles. Sir Wilfrid, and his late Postmaster General, and Minister of Railways that was, Hon. Sir. Graham, are all no doubt very pleasant and agreeable gentlemen whose political successes are of the past.

Mr. Fielding is not of the show window artist variety, and yet it would appear somewhat strange that when Sir Wilfrid goes forth again to boost reciprocity, he does not take Mr. Fielding along as a part of the troupe. Mr. Fielding, in all the past, has been a very loyal and devoted Liberal. He may be found in each of the provinces, who if we are to believe what we hear, are 'unwept, unhonored and unsung,' by the bulk of the party who followed them so freely when their stars were in the heavens. Sir Wilfrid, himself, judging by his recent speeches, has become a childish vain old politician.

Acadia University.

We are pleased to hear that Prof. Victor L. O. Chittick, who was graduated from Acadia in 1905, has been appointed to the Chair of English Language and Literature, recently vacated by Prof. Pattison. Prof. Chittick, since being graduated from Acadia, has pursued post graduate work at Harvard and Columbia Universities, and has been teaching in one of the State Universities of the American west for some time. As a student here Prof. Chittick was popular, and was exceptionally brilliant in his chosen specialty of English Language and Literature. The place made vacant by Prof. Pattison would, of course, be hard to fill, but we are entirely confident that the new professor is the right man for this department.

The Boy Scouts.

The First Wolfville Troop desire to express their appreciation of the kindness of Miss Robinson, who on Friday evening treated them to ice cream.

On Friday evening next, at 7 p. m. sharp there will be practice for the camp fire songs at the club rooms. At 7:30 the Fox Patrol will meet for single stick ice races and physical drill. The Wolf Patrol will meet at headquarters at 4 p. m. Saturday for a rehearsal of their play.

To Use Concrete for King Edward Road.

A portion of the King Edward Highway is to be built of concrete, the contract for its construction having been let on Sept. 17th, by the Honorable J. E. Carson, Minister of Agriculture and Highways of the Province of Quebec. The King Edward Highway is the Canadian section of the International Highway connecting Montreal with several large cities of the United States. Ultimately it is expected that this road will continue as far south as Miami, Florida.

It was the original intention that the entire highway should be built of macadam, but the Honorable Minister, who has under his jurisdiction the Canadian branch of the work, has become interested in concrete roadways and has decided upon this important undertaking as a good plan to try it out. Governments and municipalities are gradually coming to recognize the necessity of a more permanent form of roadway construction. That concrete is the material which best fulfills all the requirements of a permanent roadway is a fact that will ultimately obtain world-wide recognition.

Patrons are respectfully requested to place their orders early so there may be no disappointing disappointments when the busy season begins.

The Halifax Exhibition.

The Halifax Exhibition this year was a good one in every department. The cattle classes, both the dairy classes and the beef cattle classes were well filled and many exceedingly good animals shown. The horses, too, had specimens which it would be hard to beat in any part of Canada. In some of the poultry classes the birds particularly were scarce, and entries were only few, and the young hardly up to the standard, but considering the season the poultry show was all right. The exhibits in the Mines Building was one of the most complete ever shown. The Fisheries exhibit, too, was exceedingly interesting. The Art exhibit showed many paintings of merit and interest, while the displays shown of the splendid work in penmanship, writing, drawing and handicrafts made by the several departments of the Halifax Schools was an eye opener. The main building was also interesting as usual, while the midway had a very creditable lot of side shows of all kinds, most of them good and all of them interesting studies in human nature. The horse racing fields were doubtless the greatest ever gotten to, together in Nova Scotia, and were every day witnessed by big crowds of people. Then the performances before the stands in the evening was certainly the best we have seen anywhere. Rich and every number on the program was a gem, everything class and the very best of its kind possible. The night performance could not be excelled, while the display of fireworks drew involuntary expressions of delight. The management of the exhibition this year are certainly to be congratulated in giving good value in every department.

Champion Cow in Nova Scotia Belongs to New Minas.

Mr. A. N. Griffin, proprietor of 'Willow Glen' farm, New Minas, brought home with him, from the Exhibition at Halifax, the 'Champion Certificate' for cows under three years of age. He had, on exhibition, a roan, short horn heifer, register No. 95937, which took first prize in her class, and, later, when the first prize of all classes was judged, the championship was awarded to her. She is said to be a beauty. Mr. Griffin also took first prize for a shorthorn bull calf, and first prize for three cows by one sire. Mr. Griffin is one of the most enterprising farmers and stockraisers in Kings county, and this prize, won in open competition with the whole province, is a new feather for Kings county's cap.—Western Chronicle.
