Look at the Wheat!

There's a deal to know about wheat. If I didn't select the wheat I couldn't guarantee the flour. Cream of the West Flour comes from Cream of the West Wheat. And it certainly does make good bread!

CHAPTER XXVII.

"Well, I must go, I suppose," I said. "I dare say I shan't be long. Nat, you'd better keep within sight of the chapel there, and then I shall easily find you."

"All right—only don't be too long, or I shall freeze!" she answered, and then I turned and followed Virtue's skirts, which were whisking out of sight again by this time.

It was not much that madame wanted, I found—only a list of things which had been forgotten to be made out for one of the men to take to Market Wexford.

I had finished it, and was going off again, when madame stopped me.

"By the way, Ned, Natalie has seen her flowers, has she not?"

"Oh, yes—Virtue brought them in."

She is in luck, I think.

"It is really very provoking!" madame said, not paying any attention to what I thought. "How could Mr. St. George imagine that she could wear crimson with cream and scarlet?"

"Perhaps he forgot," I suggested.

"Then it is very careless of him. I told him expressly the colors of her dress yesterday, knowing that he meant to ride over to Market Wexford for a bouquet. I was sure I made him understand. It was just at the rectory gate, as Roger came up."

"Oh!" I said, thinking that I could guess how St. George's memory had come to play him a trick. "Well, she can't wear them, anyway—she was saying so—or Froude's sister."

"I should not have liked her to wear his," madame said, a little stiffly. "I really wish the man would speak, and take his dismissal. And Ned, how came Doctor Yorke to send her any flowers?"

"Why shouldn't he?"

"Oh, there is no reason why he should not, of course; but it strikes me as being rather presumptuous—that is all! I wish he had not done so."

"Why? They match all right, don't they?" I asked.

"Yes—that is the annoying part of it, and I suppose it can not be helped. They are charmingly arranged, certainly. She means to take them, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes, I think so! She said they were the only ones that would go with her dress," I returned, with hypocritical indifference.

"I wish they had been Mr. St. George's selection instead of Doctor Yorke's; but really he has only his own inattention to blame for it. He is sure to be annoyed."

"Then he must get over it—that's all. I say, mother, I know you like St. George better than Froude, of course, but you don't want Nat to encourage him by carrying his flowers, do you?"

"Why not?" asked madame, calmly.

"I was too much taken aback to answer with my usual gibberish."

"Why, you wouldn't like her whisked back to Jamaica, surely?" I said, blankly.

"Certainly not. If Raby St. George is successful in his suit, it is not his intention to return to Jamaica. He will in that case settle in England—as near the Mount as possible."

"Did he tell you so?"

"Yes, a week or so since. His attachment to her, besides being certainly sincere, is an old one."

"I know that—she told me," I put in, bluntly.

"Exactly. It was his sole motive in visiting England."

"And he might have spared himself that trouble, and stopped away," I said, getting near the door, for I felt that I might chance to say something indiscreet presently. "If St. George has any sense, he must see that Natalie hates him like poison. She will never take him, mother—don't think it! She'd sooner marry Froude of the two, I do believe, if she were forced to take one or the other."

Getting back to the Lady's Walk, my temper a good deal ruffled, I was surprised that I could not see Nat. Perhaps she was in the chapel, doing her best to catch her death of cold by way of preparation for the ball. No—that was empty; and I hesitated, anathematizing the little puss for giving me the slip, and wondering whether she could have run in-doors again. More out of humor, for madame and madame's latest notion had vexed me, I turned down the narrow laurel alley leading to the side-gate, and then saw Nat standing by it. She did not turn round as I advanced, although I did so noisily, and I called out in an injured tone—

"Well, you're a nice young woman to wait for a fellow, I must say!"

But, instead of returning the saucy answer I was expecting, a violent shudder shook her from head to foot, her curly head sunk down upon the clasped hands resting on the top of the gate, and her figure swayed as though she were going to fall. Amazed, I sprang forward and caught the tottering figure.

"Why, Nat, are you going to faint?" I said. "My dear little girl, what is it?"

She shook off my arm the instant it touched her, and, drawing back, stood erect, looking at me. I could not repress a dismayed exclamation, for Nat's face looked as I had never seen it yet. What on earth could have happened to bring that look of dazed horror—it was nothing less—to her eyes?

"What is it?" I repeated, putting my hand on her shoulder. "Has anything been scaring you, or what?"

"Ned," she said, slowly, moving her lips with an effort, "you are a Chavasse—you would not tell a deliberate lie, would you?"

"Of course not!" I returned, promptly, but more puzzled than before. What on earth could she be driving at? "What do you mean?"

"Then you will tell me the truth now!" she questioned, maintaining her steady look.

"Of course I will, if I can. What in the name of wonder do you mean, Ned?"

"You promise?" she said.

"Of course I do!" I returned, impatiently. "But all this is worse than Greek to me. Tell you the truth about what?"

"Tell me what you know of the secret between Roger Yorke and Made-noiselle Valdin!"

I was dumfounded, hopelessly aken aback, and for a moment stared at her blankly. Then, like the idiot I was, I stammered out as stupid an answer as lay in my power.

"Why, how in the world did you come to know anything about that?"

"So it is true?" she said, quietly.

"Who told you?" I blundered, making things worse.

She made a motion with her hand toward the lane, and then pressed it to her forehead, but did not speak for a moment. When she did, it was slowly, with a pause between every word, almost as a child repeating a lesson in a language it did not understand would speak.

"It is true there is a secret between them, that you have seen them meet clandestinely, and that he refused to tell you what the secret is, is that true? That is my question—he, one you promised to answer."

She must have read the answer in my troubled and coloring face, I suppose, for she wrenched her shoulder away, and made a sudden dart to pass me. Whether she was staggering again, or merely caught her foot, I do not know; but she stumbled and nearly fell. I caught her, steadying her against me, and holding both her hands tightly.

"Nat, look here—I don't know what you've heard or what you imagine, but whatever it is and however it is, you're making a fine mistake to take it like this. I never should have told you, of course—I promised Roger that I would not—but still I'm not going to be about it now. It's quite true that here is some sort of a secret between Yorke and that blessed governess, and that I accidentally witnessed an interview between them. That's right enough; and so it is that he wouldn't tell me what it was when I asked him. But, whatever it is, there's no harm in it—I'm certain there isn't! I'd stake my life there isn't!"

George; he must have picked something up!" I said rapidly.

But with the same stubborn face he answered.

"It was not Raby St. George."

"No harm?" She laughed a cruel little scornful laugh. "No harm in a secret which he could conceal from all the world, which is hidden from you, his chief friend, who are pledged to conceal your knowledge of it, and which requires midnight interviews for its keeping? "Nat," I cried, catching her wrist, "do you mean to tell me that you're going to throw over Roger Yorke like this for a wretched tale which has crept about Heaven knows how, and has got to your ears in the same way?"

"A wretched tale which you, his best friend, are forced to admit the truth of!" she retorted. Then, with a sudden change of tone—"Oh, Ned, I did not believe it—I did not! I—I laughed at it, and said I would listen to no such paltry falsehood; and now you tell me that it is all true!"

"Who told you?" I cried hotly. "Who has been poisoning your mind in this way? Nat, you shall tell me, surely as I'm Yorke's friend and would stake my life if there was need, upon the truth of his love for you? Who was it?"

"I shall not tell you."

"No harm?" She laughed a cruel little scornful laugh. "No harm in a secret which he could conceal from all the world, which is hidden from you, his chief friend, who are pledged to conceal your knowledge of it, and which requires midnight interviews for its keeping? I—I have not so much faith, you see: I would not stake my life so very easily, even if that were all."

"All?" I echoed, startled at the last words. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, it doesn't matter!"—with another laugh, and drawing herself away. "You would stake your life that that was false too, no doubt. Never mind. So much between us," he said that night. He was right, wasn't he? I know what it was now, and so that's all."

"Nat," I cried, catching her wrist, "do you mean to tell me that you're going to throw over Roger Yorke like this for a wretched tale which has crept about Heaven knows how, and has got to your ears in the same way?"

"A wretched tale which you, his best friend, are forced to admit the truth of!" she retorted. Then, with a sudden change of tone—"Oh, Ned, I did not believe it—I did not! I—I laughed at it, and said I would listen to no such paltry falsehood; and now you tell me that it is all true!"

"Who told you?" I cried hotly. "Who has been poisoning your mind in this way? Nat, you shall tell me, surely as I'm Yorke's friend and would stake my life if there was need, upon the truth of his love for you? Who was it?"

"I shall not tell you."

"You will not?"

"No," she returned, obstinately, with a swift tightening of her lips. "I will not."

A sudden thought struck me. "Was it mademoiselle herself?"

"No."

"Then it must have been Raby St.

George; he must have picked something up!" I said rapidly.

But with the same stubborn face he answered.

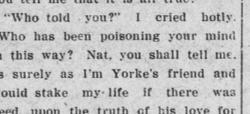

"It was not Raby St. George."

Girls! Girls! Surely Try This! Doubles Beauty of Your Hair

ALL YOU NEED IS A 25-CENT BOTTLE OF "DANDERINE"—HAIR GETS LUSTROUS, FLUFFY AND ABUNDANT AT ONCE.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use of Danderine, when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it; surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Getting Ready For War in The Sky.

Air-Craft Has Entered War Game and Nations of the World are Preparing to Utilize new Forces in Event of Conflict.

Air-craft has entered the old game of war in a manner that makes it as imperative to all phases of modern fighting, as soldiers themselves. Germany, France, England, Italy and America to-day would consider their armies absolutely incomplete and unprepared for war if it were not for the up-to-date aviation corps which they are keeping constantly at work, writes John Walters in Railroadman's Magazine.

No doubt the news that thrills the world whenever some gallant soldier gives his life while trying to perfect the aeronautic tactics of war may seem to some an unholy matter, but a soldier is a soldier.

In the United States little attention has been paid to the air-ship, but the corps operating with aeroplanes is, perhaps, second to none in the world. While aviation has had something of a set-back in private circles, owing to the accidents in which nearly every eminent man engaged in the sport was killed, nothing can now retard its progress, as an adjunct of the army.

Claude Grahame-White, the British aviator, recently made this statement regarding the hydroplane: "France and Germany have quickly jumped to the value of these machines for naval warfare. England, too, is making a series of tests to demonstrate this type of machine. The performance of the machine during recent naval reviews will, without doubt, result in its general adoption by the naval authorities."

England is apparently just awakening to the importance of the war aeroplane. In the past she has merely dabbled with the subject, as she has also with the military dirigible; but the vast progress made by Germany and other European nations in aerial affairs seems to have punctured her lethargy to an appreciable extent.

A programme has now been designed which will eventually give Great Britain approximately 400 military and naval airmen. By the end of the year she will possess, say, sixty properly trained units, which is a very poor showing in comparison with the many hundreds that are already available in France and Germany.

Nevertheless, England is well off for licensed aviators who have passed a rigid examination conducted by trained experts. England has 207, France nearly 700, Germany 124, Russia 99, Italy 72. These men are all civilians, who, in case of a national crisis, can be called upon to man war aeroplanes and air-ships.

Last year an aerial league was started in Great Britain the end of which is to develop both men and machines. The hydroplane plays an important part in the present and future of Great Britain.

In the army estimates for this year Great Britain proposes to expend $1,540,000 for aerial purposes and to purchase 131 aeroplanes. It has organized a flying corps, including soldiers, sailors, and civilians. The military wing is to consist of seven aeroplane squadrons, each containing 12 aeroplanes and a suitable number of officers to fly them.

In 1909 France expended $50,000 for aerial purposes; in 1910, $400,000; in 1911, $1,024,000. She proposes to spend, during the present year, $2,400,000 for aeroplanes and $1,000,000 for dirigibles, which means that by the spring of 1913 she will have 27 aerial squadrons of eight aeroplanes each, with a total of 216 aeroplanes and 344 trained officers.

In 1915 France will have 900 machines and 1600 trained pilots. France is aviation mad. The people, rich and poor, young and old, of all beliefs and factions, are uniting to give France a huge aerial fleet and make it supreme in aerial armament. The public subscriptions to this end reach many millions of francs, and the plans include the equipping of the army with no less than 2,000 aeroplanes for its twenty corps. At present, each corps has a section of artillery, cavalry, and infantry. In the future, it will, in addition, have its own complement of aeroplanes. This means that the entire army will have to be re-organized, but the French are grimly in earnest about the matter.

An additional plan which is being considered by the authorities includes the establishment of aerial patrols of aeroplanes and dirigibles at the frontiers.

The attitude of the French is due to the act of Prince Henry of Prussia, who proposed the construction of a fleet of aeroplanes that should carry loads of 100 pounds over and above the pilot and fuel, and also to the Kaiser offering a prize of 50,000 marks for the best aeroplane motor of German material and design. A second prize of 30,000 marks is offered by the imperial chancellor; a third prize of 20,000 marks by the minister of war, and a fourth prize by the minister of marine.

As a further evidence of the earnestness of the Germans, a proclamation has been posted in banks and business houses throughout the empire announcing that subscriptions are being taken for a national aeroplane fund.

Early last spring fifty aeroplanes of the German type were ordered by the government. The foregoing fact taken into consideration with the advance in the art of manufacturing and navigating dirigibles that has been manifested in Germany, caused a sudden shock of alarm in France. M. Millerand, the new French minister of war, has demanded an appropriation of 23,000,000 francs for military aviation.

Germany's supremacy in the matter of dirigibles is well recognized. She owes this to the efforts of Count von Zeppelin and Major August von Parasol. Germany is not much given to modern publicity, and consequently the outside world knows little of the progress that has been made within its borders.

There are three military aviation schools in Russia, the most important being at Sebastopol. The number of students enrolled who are qualifying for a pilot's certificate is 302, including 102 commissioned officers and 200 non-commissioned and petty officer and privates. The club school has fifty-five aeroplanes of home and foreign construction. Long flights are a daily occurrence when the weather permits, and the naval aviators are credited with thirty-mile flights over the sea.

So far, only Italy has had an opportunity of testing aviation in actual warfare, and that the experiment was more or less of a success is shown by the fact that the government has ordered more dirigibles to be built. It now divides its military air-ship into three classes: First, or piccolo type, having a capacity of 5,000 cubic meters; the second, or N class, having 11,000 cubic meters; while the third, or G class, has a capacity of 40,000 meters.

It is to be noted that the larger of the new dirigibles are to be equipped with two quick-firing guns and two torpedo-tubes for dropping bombs on the enemy.

"Fakes and Frauds"

What a Scientist Says About Spiritualism and Astrology.

"Spiritualism is nine-tenths trickery. Only rarely are its phenomena genuine. The world's greatest frauds, fakers, and impostors have operated largely along psychic lines and in the field of so-called divine healing. Let us hope that some legal means will be devised for putting these psychic shirkers and healing impostors permanently out of business."

It is in these strong terms that one of the greatest professors of physiological therapeutics, William S. Sadler, M.D., denounces in his book, "The Physiology of Faith and Fear," spiritualistic fads and fakes.

He refers, in the first place, to the fact that even in this enlightened twentieth century there are thousands of people who place absolute reliance upon charms for the protection of life and the maintenance of health. The reason, of course, is to be found in the fact that mysticism still pos-esses great power over the average person, and the charlatan is not slow to take advantage of this fact. He becomes an astrologer, a palmist, a clairvoyant, or a fortune-teller, and reaps a very rich harvest from the credulous.

Palmistry 'Frauds.

Referring to astrology, for a moment, and the fact that hundreds of people believe that the movements of the stars have influence on health, Mr. Sadler says that astrology has "absolutely nothing to do with health and disease; and yet there are to be found to-day intelligent men and women who still believe that the march of the heavenly hosts through space is connected with the cause and the cure of disease."

He also alleges that palmistry, "as it is professionally practised, is a fraud from first to last," and he mentions the case of a well-known professional palmist who, some time ago, told him that the only thing she could tell from looking at a person's hand was whether or not he did hard work. She further explained that she made her delineations of character by looking at the face, talking to the person, and from general impressions.

Methods of Clairvoyants.

Similarly clairvoyants and fortune-tellers are denounced as ingenious psychical fakers, and probably there are many people who will agree with Mr. Sadler in his remark that "clairvoyants are those persons who have been seduced to commercialize their natural gift, the gift of discernment, the ability to read human character. Most successful clairvoyants are women who possess a keen sense of discrimination and discernment of character—psychic gifts which are certainly worthy of better employment than in the ways and means commonly followed by professional clairvoyants."

"The clairvoyant's advice cannot be true in the whole. Their claim of ability to predict events, to locate valuable mines, to settle domestic difficulties, to consummate love affairs, as well as to direct business policies, is all mere fraudulent pretensions.orrow of heart and pecuniary disaster have rewarded many an unsuspecting and trusting soul who attempted to follow their advice."

"Fortune-telling and the use of 'ream books are other methods of confusing and confounding the minds of honest people. The whole nefarious scheme of keeping alive superstition is to be deplored. The time has certainly come when intelligent men and women should strike off these ancient fetters of psychic bondage."

IS YOUR COUGH GOING FROM BAD TO WORSE?

If you catch a cold (which very often develops into a cough) every one can tell you how to cure it! If one tried half the things his friends recommended he would be a physical wreck!

Fortunately it isn't necessary to experiment with ginger-tea and such things, get a bottle of Stifford's Phosphate Cough and Cold Cure, take according to directions and you will be relieved in a few hours.

Phosphate is not like most things put up for this purpose. There isn't a particle of Quinine in it. It relieves the inflamed, congested condition of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat, and soon adds the system of the poison that cause colds.

Don't wait until you get that horrible, hacking cough which you are not able to get rid of. No treatment having been found successful up to the present time. Try Phosphate Cough Cure at once.

In dealing with the attempted circulation by Mr. Swift of the vile and unspeakable oath attributed to the Knights of Columbus, that body has done so in a manner that is merciful and yet firm and prompt.

Although no intelligent man could credit the Order with having such an oath, it is, nevertheless, cause for congratulation that the Order has got at the root of the matter and has shown by its action that it will not tolerate such actions.

REPORT.

Of the Benevolent Irish Society for the Year Ending February 17th, 1913.

We congratulate the Society on having reached its 107th anniversary, and beg to present the following account of the work of the year which has just closed.

St. Patrick's Day was honoured in accordance with the usual custom. Assembling at the Hall at 9.15 a.m. on that day, and accompanied by the Catholic Cadet Corps and City Bands the members proceeded thence via N.W. Gower, Hamilton and Patrick Streets to the Deanery, where the customary tribute was paid to the clergy of St. Patrick's, being by way of Water and Cochrane Streets the Society called at Government House, where the respects of the body were tendered to the representative of His Majesty the King by the Vice-President, Mr. J. M. Kent, K.C., who officiated in the absence from the Colony of the President. A very happy response was made by His Excellency, who expressed his pleasure at again meeting the members and who gave voice to his appreciation of the work of the institution, particularly in regard to its connection with the Christian Brothers. Proceeding by way of Military Road to the Cathedral High Mass was attended. His Grace the Archbishop being the celebrant. The panegyric on the Saint of the Day which was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Kitchen, was an oration in line with the best efforts of that eloquent divine, being a discourse which will be long remembered by those present. After Mass the customary visit was paid to His Grace the Archbishop at the Episcopal Library, who, in reply to the congratulations tendered by the Vice-President, made a response that in favour and sentiment was in keeping with the bright hopes that he expressed as regards the outlook for the Home Land. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Roche and Rev. Brother Kennedy also spoke and the members then returned to the Hall. At night, the annual Dramatic Troupe gave an appropriate performance, which was a magnificent success both in its production and in its financial results.

During the early part of the year news was received of the death in Ireland of Rev. Brother Prenderville, who was one of the pioneers of the Order of the Christian Brothers in Newfoundland. Many of the old pupils of the deceased educationalist are members of the Society, and learned with regret of his demise. At the annual meeting a resolution was passed that the Society's records expressive of the Society's high appreciation of his great services in the cause of education, and especially in so well laying the foundation for the future work of the Brothers in this country.

We regret that we also have to note the death during the past term of four members of our own body, namely, Patrick J. Dalton, William T. Hanlon, William R. Firth and Capt. Patrick Dillon. The tragic end of Mr. Firth was especially sad, and because of this as well as because of his active interest in the work of the Society a resolution of condolence to his family was passed at the regular quarterly meeting in November. In all cases the funerals of the deceased were members were attended by your officers as a guard of honour.

Concerning the work of the different departments of the Society, we are pleased to be in a position to say that never in our history was the outlook brighter.

The School Committee during the past year, and with the approval of the body duly given, have installed a new heating system, the most modern obtainable. The work was done under contract by Messrs. Hagen & Co. of Sydney, Cape Breton, and these gentlemen are certainly deserving of praise for the very satisfactory and expeditious manner in which they carried out their agreement. The system is giving the greatest possible satisfaction, and although the expense of installation was considerable we are satisfied from the results thus far that the reduction in our yearly coal consumption will alone more than justify the change.

The work in the schools, it is needless to say, continues to maintain its high standard of excellence. The reports from the Rev. Superior each quarter are always received with pleasure by the members, as they never fail to narrate some new item of interest and to disclose some further sign of progress in the daily life of the schools. The well-filled class rooms, the long waiting list of applicants, the good reputations established by the past pupils, and the ever-increasing demand for boys from the schools by the business community all testify more eloquently than words to the great work being done by the Brothers. Rev. Brother M. C. Ryan has assumed the Superintendency of the Order here during the past year, but the Society was pleased to learn that Rev. Brother Kennedy would still remain with us to continue the work which he has so well done for very many years. We feel sure his valuable experience and wise counsel will be of great assistance to his successor, whose term of office we know will be equally fruitful in results. In this connection we are glad to hear that the erstwhile Superior, Rev. J. E. Ryan, at present in Ireland, has greatly improved in health. May the future allow him to gratify what we believe is his present desire, to return to Newfoundland where he has spent so many of the best years of his life, and to continue the labours both on behalf of the schools and the society for which he was so deservedly noted.

We are likewise pleased to learn that Rev. Brother Conway, whose work in this country is so well remembered, particularly in connection with the Holy Cross Schools, at Riverhead, has so profited by his sojourn in his native land that he is quite restored to his former health. He also only eagerly awaits an order to return to his labours here.

The usual quantity of twine was knitted up under the direction of this Committee during the year, and the employment which this work afforded a number of poor people was appreciated.

The Literary and Amusement Committee had a most satisfactory term. The annual performance on St. Patrick's night, already referred to, undertaken by the Dramatic section of that committee, was a splendid success. The financial returns from this source gave an impetus to the work of the committee at the outset which has resulted in a good year. A complete renovating of the club rooms took place during the year, and McGrath Brothers, who did the work, are to be complimented thereon. The Billiard Room also received special attention in the way of equipment, and altogether the club rooms are now second to none in the city. We are pleased to be able to report that this has resulted in the rooms being patronized to a greater extent than for many years. The addition to our roll of membership of twenty names at the last meeting and the total of forty-six during the year show that the prospects in this direction were never more hopeful.

The accounts of the Treasurer show total receipts for the year $9,852.72; expenditure, $9,604.39, leaving a credit balance for the term of $248.33 making with the balance carried forward from last year a total on hand of $917.49.

The financial position of the Society is now on a settled basis. The outstanding bills for repairs, and such work having all been paid, and the installation of the new heating system completing for the present any large demand on our resources, we are now able to look forward to a regular reduction of the society's indebtedness. From ordinary sources alone this will be considerable, but with the prospects which the attendance at the rooms now suggests the removal of our burden should only be the work of a few years. It is with this hope that we urge upon all for renewed interest in the work of the Society.

We cannot close this report without giving expression to our joy at the prospects for long looked for realization of the hopes of the land of our fathers. The passing through the Commons House of the Imperial Parliament recently by such a large majority of the Home Rule Bill was a graceful justification of Ireland's request. May the full accomplishment be not long deferred, and may we members of the oldest national society in Britain's most ancient Colony soon be able to take our part in the rejoicings in honour of the old land becoming "a nation once again."

Thanking the members for their kindly co-operation during the year we remain, on behalf of the officers,

J. D. RYAN, President
W. J. HIGGINS, Secretary

Like Mother Used to Make

I can sing and I can play
I can sew the livelong day
And I always thought that I could first-rate bake
Be it bread, or cake or pie—
I can hear his soft reply—
"It's good, but not like mother used to make."
Now at first it broke my heart,
For to cook is quite an art,
Which I thought I had accomplished—a mistake!
But I don't grieve any more—
Laugh instead of getting 'sore'
When I hear "It's not like mother used to make."
For I think I've won at last—
In the future—not the past,
For I have six boys who sometime wives will take,
Be it bread, or cake, or pie
I can hear the soft reply,
"It's good, but not like mother used to make."

Touting for Wedding Fees.

Facts about Marriage Information Agents.
The marriage industry is still one of the most profitable business in America; according to statistics printed in New York. Quite a substantial sum is made by "marriage runners" and "marriage information agents," the latter peculiar profession owing its existence to laws passed in New Jersey and a few other States forbidding justices of the peace to perform marriages.
The New Jersey J.P.s, in particular, have been very loath to give up their lucrative business, and nearly all of them still keep their "runners" to look for applicants for licenses, directing them to clergymen, and supplying them with witnesses. The New York newspapers contain plenty of advertisements as follows: "Marriages quietly performed, strictly confidential, private," the authors of which are J.P.s, who have no authority to perform the marriage ceremony, but who are willing to pocket fees, which vary according to the wealth and position of the applicants, for making all arrangements and finding a discreet clergyman.
Of course, the law prevents any bogus weddings, and there can be no secrecy about New Jersey ceremonies, for the licensing clerk's records have to be published and the officiating clergyman must make returns within ten days; but that eloping couples find these "marriage information agents" useful is testified to by clergymen who are by no means averse to having their names on the list of a justice of the peace.
One Hoboken minister admits that through the exertions of the justices and their runners he was provided with fifty couples during the month of December, whom he duly married. In twenty-three cases the witness was a man employed by one of the advertising justices, and in nineteen others the witness was the clergyman's housekeeper. An effort is being made to amend the law so as to put down "marriage runners" and other discreditable devices, which have created a regular marriage traffic, and to insist on the identifying witness being really acquainted with the couple whom he accompanies to the license office or whose wedding he attends.

Knights of Columbus Fully Vindicated!

Capt. Swift Having Given Important Information, Proceedings Against Him Were Withdrawn--Evidence Taken in Case

At his office in the Central District Court yesterday afternoon, His Honor Judge Knight presided in the proceedings against Charles A. Swift for criminal libel, contained in a paper purported to be an oath taken by the Knights of Columbus and published and circulated by Swift. Mr. A. B. Morine, K.C., for the Crown, and Mr. F. A. Mews, for the defence, were present. The press representatives were admitted. The following is the charge and sworn evidence:

THE CHARGE.
That he, the said Charles A. Swift, did in the years 1912 and 1913 and within the last six months unlawfully, wickedly and maliciously write and publish and cause and procure to be written and published a certain false, wicked, malicious and defamatory libel in the form of an oath alleged to be taken by all persons becoming members of the Order of the Knights of Columbus containing divers false, scandalous, malicious and defamatory matters and things concerning Charles O'Neill Conroy and other members of the said Order well knowing the said defamatory libel to be false to the great damage, scandal and disgrace of the said Charles O'Neill Conroy and other members of the said Order and the evil consequences of the same and contrary to the Statute in such case made and provided."

THE EVIDENCE.
William Bowden (sworn).—I am a printer. My office is on Duckworth Street. I know Charles A. Swift, the accused. He visited my office on one occasion in the middle of January. He asked me to print a job. He showed me a copy. It purported to be an oath of the Knights of Columbus. I can hardly swear that the contents of the paper then produced to me were the same as the paper now produced, but the tenor of the matter was the same. I told him I could not do it. He then left. He came back again the next day to ask me again to do it. I did not wish to do it. He then left. He did not say what he wanted it for.

Cross-examined by Mr. Mews.—He did not ask me upon his first visit to make up an estimate, nor did he come back the next day to ask me what that estimate would be.
Kenneth Barnes (sworn).—I am a printer. My office is on Water Street. I know Charles A. Swift, the accused, to have been in my office. I think it was in the middle of January. He asked me to print the Knights of Columbus' oath. He said at first he wanted about two thousand copies printed. He made no change in the number. He did not say what he wished to do with them. He showed me the copy of what he wanted printed. He left the copy with me for a couple of days. I read it in the day time. (Here the alleged libelous matter set forth in the charge is produced to the witness.) This is the same wording as that contained in the paper which handed to me by the accused; I have never read it before; I have not read it since. When I found what it was I sent a letter back with the document, refusing to do the work. My refusal was on account of the nature of its contents. I have not seen the accused since until to-day in Court.

The counsel for the accused stated that he did not wish to ask any questions.
William F. Coaker (sworn).—The Advocate Printing Office is under my charge. I know the accused, Charles A. Swift. He visited my office four or five weeks ago. He stated what he was there for. He wanted some printing done. He wanted the Knights of Columbus oath printed which had been circulated around. He did not show it to me. He did not describe it. He asked me to print the Knights of Columbus' oath which had been going around the town. I knew what he referred to. I had seen the oath so-called. We did have some conversation about the oath. I refused to publish it. He stated he wanted Advocate of the Order of the Knights of Columbus. I have listened to the evidence just given by Mr. Conroy. I confirm that evidence in every particular so far as it relates to the Knights of Columbus. The oath administered to me in these proceedings is the first and only oath of any kind whatever I have ever taken in connection with the Knights of Columbus.

Charles A. Swift (sworn).—This alleged oath came into my possession as near as I can recollect about 12th of January. I had heard of it being circulated in the States and Canada, and also in St. John's. I made an attempt to get it printed. I called upon Mr. Bowden, and asked him to print it. I asked the cost per 1,000. I called next day to see if he would give me an estimate. He declined to do it, and it was sent on from Mr. Bowden's office to Mr. Russell, at Bay Roberts. About four or five days after Mr. Russell returned it. Then I saw Mr. Mews and Mr. Coaker, both of whom refused to print it. I think Mr. Russell said in his letter, "try Twilligate Sun." I sent the same copy to Mr. Temple, Twilligate, and wrote him a letter, and asked what he would charge to print 1,000 copies. He called, "send me $7.00 and I will print 1,000." I did not send him the money, because I read Mr. Fenelon's letter exposing the oath to be a fake one, and I immediately dropped all connection with it. I have never had any copies typed, nor copied. I should now like to express my very deep regret to Mr. Conroy and Mr. Fenelon and the whole Council of Knights in St. John's and elsewhere, that I should have been led to believe through false representations that this was the oath of the Knights of Columbus, and I wish to make an apology to all concerned saying I sincerely regret having caused any pain or ill-feeling to the members. I wish this apology to be as complete as possible. I may add that in January last I did not know any of the members of the Knights of Columbus such.

Cross-examined by Morine, K.C.—I could not swear in whose handwriting was the copy I left with Mr. Bowden. I received it from Mr. Henry Blatch, who was given to me to try to get some copies printed. We were jointly talked over, and suggested that some copies should be printed. I did not suggest it. He suggested it to me. He knew I was going to Mr. Bowden. I told him the result. I knew I was going to Mr. Barnes, but not Mr. Coaker. I told him what Mr. Barnes' reply was. I told him about Mr. Russell and Mr. Temple. I told him contents of Temple's telegram. The suggestion came from Mr. Blatch. I was not living with Mr. Blatch, but met him on several occasions. I never saw the oath until he showed it to me. Mr. Coaker said he believed it to be a fake, cooked for political purposes. I believed it at the time. I don't think I made any attempt to get it printed afterwards. Besides the written copy, I had seen some type-written copies, and think there must be thousands of them in circulation in St. John's. I learnt the fountain head from which they came, yesterday. The publication was first in U. S. at Mobile, Sept. 1911, in a periodical called the "Menace," as far as I have been informed.

Mr. Morine, K.C., addressing the Court, said:—This proceeding was taken for the purpose of showing the bogus nature of this alleged oath. If the accused had justified his conduct, or attempted in any way to set up the truth of the alleged oath, the prosecution would be pushed to the greatest possible extent. There was no desire to persecute or even to punish where punishment was deserved. Mr. Swift having explained, and given proper information, the complainant is satisfied that Mr. Swift was a victim, that he had no actual notice, and that he sincerely regrets his part in the circulation of the defamatory matter. This being so, the prosecutor's object has been achieved, and he desires that these proceedings go no further against this particular accused. He will, however, prosecute for any further circulation of this same or similar matter, and reserve his right to prosecute anybody else who has been concerned in the publication complained of. Mr. Morine, therefore, asked that the proceedings be withdrawn against the accused. The proceedings were accordingly withdrawn.

Some time ago I had a bad attack of Quinsy which laid me up for two weeks and cost a lot of money.

Finding the lump again forming in my throat, I bathed freely with MINARD'S LINIMENT, and saturating a cloth with the liniment left it on all night. Next morning the swelling was gone and I attributed the warding off of an attack of Quinsy to the free use of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Ice Moving Off.
The heavy slob ice which packed Port aux Basques and most of the S. W. Coast for several days got a "cant" off the shore last evening when the wind which had been blowing steadily from the S. E. took a northerly direction and blew stiffly. As a result the Solway was able to leave Port aux Basque at 5.30 p.m. yesterday and it is thought should make a good run down to Placentia.

AT LEACH'S BROOK.—For several days past now the water at Leach's Brook has given no trouble and the river is kept clear of ice. A foreman with a number of section hands are still camped in that section to be prepared for any emergency.

Secretary Knox informed the Cabinet to-day that notwithstanding the fierce fighting, no infraction of the rules of civilized warfare, or of the principles of international law had occurred in Mexico City to warrant interference. The responsiveness both of Madero and Diaz to the suggestions of Ambassador Wilson, Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, had been so complete and satisfactory as to justify the officials in their opinion that strict neutrality should be observed. Apparently the U.S. policy has met with the approval of the European Powers. During last week Knox has talked with several ambassadors, and in no instance has a disposition to criticize the administration been manifested.

Change Island Notes.

The St. Margaret's Ladies' Association held their usual tea and Sale of Work in the S.U.F. Hall, on January 2nd. Quite a crowd was in evidence, and the articles went like "hot cakes." At the end of the evening the Association was $104 the richer. Well done, Ladies!

Mr. Arthur Earle spent his Christmas holidays at home. All his friends were glad to see him, and he returned to Twilligate by the Prospero on January the 8th.

Miss Thistle, the teacher for Main Tickle, arrived by Clyde, January 13th. We wish her every success. The Sunday School teachers gave a Social in the S.U.F. Hall on Monday, the 27th inst. A very enjoyable evening was spent, and the proceeds go to buy a Lectern for St. Margaret's Church.

On Wednesday, the V.L.U. celebrated their anniversary. They attended Divine Service at St. Margaret's Church, where Rev. W. K. Picher preached a very inspiring sermon, taking his text from 1st Samuel, 2nd Chap. 15th and 19th verses. After the parade, they went to the S.U.F. Hall, where they enjoyed a sumptuous tea, and for the remainder of the evening indulged in hearty games. The following evening the lads gave a dance in their own hall.

The S.U.F. paraded on Monday, Feb. 3rd, and listened to a very able address from Rev. W. K. Picher, who took for his text 1st St. Peter, 2nd Chap. 17th verse: "Honor all men, Love the Brotherhood, Fear God, Honor the King." On returning to their Hall they did justice to the good things provided for them by the ladies. From 8.30 until 11 o'clock a concert was given there, by some of the members, under the auspices of the Chief Officer, Bro. Thos. Elliott, assisted by Misses M. Waterman and Sadie Foley, with Miss L. M. Earle as accompanist. The Chairman was the Worthy Master, Wm. H. Earle, and he in his remarks, explained the short time the Society had to prepare a good entertainment. Notwithstanding Bro. Earle's cautions, the concert was one of the best ever held here and was appreciated by all. Much credit is due Bro. Elliott and his talented assistants, who gave the audience such a treat. At 11.30 dancing began and merry feet kept time to the music for hours.

Pneumonia is very prevalent here, and Dr. Leslie is a very busy man. He has little or no rest day or night, having such a large practice to attend to. The Doctor is a hustler, and is "making good." He is very popular here.

Miss Deslie Roberts has been ill for the past month. Dr. Leslie is attending her, and we hope she will soon be on the road to recovery.

Rev. W. K. Picher left on Ash Wednesday for Gander Bay.

All "galities" have been suspended for the Lenten season; the L.O.A. will have their annual parade, dance and entertainment at Easter.

Miss Elsie Hawkins began her duties as Junior Assistant in the High School, last week. Success to the young novice.

Politics is very quiet here. Evidently the voters are keeping their powder dry until November next. Some people will get a surprise when the ballots are counted.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURE DYPHTHERIA.

Happy, Laughing Child Shortly.

If Cross, Feverish, Bilious and Sick Give Delicious "Syrup of Figs."

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative physic should always be the first treatment given.

If your child isn't feeling well; resting nicely; eating regularly and acting naturally it is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are filled with foul, constipated waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or your little one has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, tongue coated; give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a few hours all the clogged up waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious taste.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little figure to-day will save a sick child to-morrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

Song of Hope.

There is a pill for every ache, a salve for every sore, so let's rejoice and never make a rumpus any more. There is a poultice for each head, for every pain some dope; until the doctors say he's dead, no man should give up hope. I knew a man once on a time, who had no store of cash; he said this world was but a crash, and all its glories trash; and so he got a neighbor's axe, and by the old horse trough, with sundry strong and willful whacks he chopped his headpiece off. Next week a lawyer printed ads announcing that this knave had fallen heir to heaps of scads, but he was in his grave. The darkest hour, as Homer said, is just before the dawn; there's often comfort just ahead, when all the hope seems gone. There is a sirup for each cough, a lance for every boil, so never think to shuffle off some yards of mortal coil. Misfortune hits us now and then, but if we bravely grin, she'll go pursuing weaker men, and push their faces in. There is a cure for every wart, a plaster for each corn, so let us like the colts cavort, and laugh our fears to scorn.

What's in a Name.

By RUTH CAMERON.

What's in a name?

You have doubtless heard that question a great many times, and it has doubtless meant to you just what it is intended to mean—that there is little or nothing in a name.

As a matter of fact, there is everything in a name.

Especially in this day and generation, which is, above all things, the day of advertising, the day when names are made to stand for something.

A few months ago the manufacturer of a certain toilet product sold the copyrighted name of that product to another firm, and for the name he received $10,000. Doesn't that sound as though there was something in a name?

Nor was that a high price. On the contrary. The names of standard articles which have been widely advertised are frequently valued as high as $25,000 or $50,000, and sometimes run into six figures.

Nor is this strange. Think how much names mean to us in our buying. "I want the Such-and-such brand of stockings," you say to the clerk at the stocking counter. And if he inquires you that they are not in stock at present, and offers you something which is just as good, and cheaper, you refuse it. Rather than take any other brand you will hunt for these elsewhere. Why? Because the name Such-and-such Brand has been made to mean a thoroughly honest and desirable article to you.

I read of a bargain sale the other day in which kitchen ware was marked down extremely low. Did I question the value of the articles sold at such remarkably low prices? Not a moment, for they were advertised to be of a certain make, and when I found that name stamped upon them I bought all I could afford. Why? Because I felt thoroughly safeguarded by that desirable name.

As you probably know, there are certain shops in Paris whose names have come to stand so distinctively for style and beauty, that people who have the good fortune to buy a garment from such a shop, will rip the label out of it when the garment has been worn out and sew it into a new gown in order to keep the prestige of that name.

There's everything in a name; there's dependability and honesty and reputation, or there's the opposite of these things.

Now, what's in your name—yours and mine?

For undoubtedly our names mean something definite to those who know us just as surely as these trade names do. Our names are our trade marks. Our words and acts advertise them. Our lives prove their worth or lack of it.

Now what does your name stand for?

When someone repeats something that you have said, do the listeners give it the respect because your name stands behind it? Or do they treat it lightly for the same reason?

When the wisdom of some act of yours is being questioned, does the weight of your name incline the balance in your favour?

Surely "what's in a name" is a most important question, when that name is yours.

Ruth Cameron

The soprano is a female songbird who has had her voice cultivated at heavy expense and keeps it in repair by exercising it in front of people who are too polite to back out. Some sopranos have no sense of humor, and insist upon singing their entire repertory for the benefit of guests who would prefer to try something else.

The soprano voice is a hardy piece of mechanism which will work well in any climate under the fourteen-hour law. It is usually encountered in a law state, when it is aimed at the international pitch with the mouth wide open and the eyebrows elevated to the second landing. The untrained soprano voice is not affected by anything except the cohesive guinny.

When a quartet is being sung the soprano stands at the extreme right, well to the front, so that she may show her voice down the line and present the rest of the quartet from winding up in a different key. Sometimes a quartet will start in strict tune with the organ and finish several oct below the pitch, whereupon the soprano will be reproached bitterly by the music committee and advised to invest in an ear trumpet.

Every soprano voice has a range of three octaves, including a costly high which can be taken out whenever it is needed and hurled at the heads of the congregation with deadly effect. This offensive practice usually occurs at the close of the offertory, and causes the trustees to examine the blustering immediately after the service.

The American soprano never gets anywhere until she takes her voice to Europe and has it brushed and recalcitrated at the rate of $8 per half hour by some high-strung specialist who retails all that is left of the old Italian method, and who sends her home with a letter of recommendation and a head register with a fuzzi in it four inches deep. Many a fine domestic voice, which was getting long-well in this country and pleasing all with whom it came in contact, has been ruined by being shipped abroad and operated upon by some foreign teacher whose prize pupil couldn't sing the scale without the aid of a step-ladder.

Rabbit Hunters Burnt Out.

Lost Rabbits, Clothes and Grub—Return Home in Stocking Feet.

Messrs. Loveridge (3), H. Barrett and C. Facey, who were rabbit hunting on the shore between Loon Bay and Birch Bay, at Ship Cove, had the camp they were staying in burnt over their heads on Saturday morning last, losing 2-3 of their rabbits, most of their clothes, boots and grub. They had an open fire place in the camp and some of them were keeping the fire in when just before daylight the camp took fire on the roof outside. They rushed out to attempt to put it out, but were unable to check the spread of flames, and could not re-enter the camp. Messrs. Facey and Barrett lost their boots and overcoats, while the latter had a spare "Sunday-go-to-meeting" suit of clothes burnt, as well as his shaving gear, looking glass, tooth powder, etc.

Fortunately their guns were outside, and they had dogs, so the bootless ones were enabled to ride home, reaching here wet through about 9 p. m. Saturday. Some 20 rabbits were rescued from the flames and these were brought home.

Of food only a part of a sweet loaf was saved and this had to provide sufficient for five persons till a dwelling was reached.

The camp in which they were staying was a studded tent which was roofed with boughs which had become blasted and the fire spread so rapidly that there was little time for anything.

After the fire the unfortunates made their way to Comfort Cove, hatless, bootless and cuffless, and a pretty pickle they presented. Mr. Eveleigh kindly assisted them to procure boots, caps and mitts and fitted them out to get home.

The young men can all now rise and sing the last verse of "We won't go there any more."—Twillingate Sun.
