The Sound of Wedding Bells

— OR —
Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER II.
Low, soft exclamations of delight break from the parted lips; her eager eyes seize on everything, on every patch of color, every quaint costume, every little humor of the crowd—and the crowd is full of humor—and Sir Archie is fully repaid. Every now and then they come to a full stop, every now and again they are hustled and pushed, but he protects her as well as he is able, and to each of his encouraging "Don't be afraid!" she responds with a laugh.

"I am not afraid," she says, with perfect truth; "I like it! This is living; up in the balcony it was not. It was like looking on at a picture, this is becoming part and parcel of it. Is that the Square? The light from these lanterns and the gas is so confusing."

"Yes, that is the Square," he says, and as he looks toward it he hesitates. "There is an awful crowd."

"Never mind," she says. "I am not afraid. You promised to take me to the Square, you know."

He hesitates still. Much wine has been drunk; the fun and humor of the crowd have got—well, pronounced. The Square was no place for a young girl.

"Are you thinking of your hat or your coat?" she says, almost impatiently; "or is it you who are afraid?" and she laughs.

"Come on," he says, "and mind you stick close to me. You will do that, won't you?"

"I will," she says. "I should think your arm must feel like breaking already."

"Come on, then," he says.

It is inch by inch now that they make their way, but they gain the Square at last, and the enlargement of the crowd is explained. At one corner of the Square, mounted on a barrel, is a street-singer, a fellow in the dress of a punchinello, an Italian clown, and he is reciting a comic doggerel to the uproarious delight of the excited crowd. Men and women, in all the costumes under the sun, all jammed together, singing in chorus, waving their lanterns, pitching up their hats and caps as if they were mad. It is a scene only to be admired once in a year, and then only in Rome. The girl stands entranced and fascinated.

"Can it be real?" she murmurs.

"Real!" mutters Sir Archie, upon whose toes a sturdy woodcuter has been dancing industriously for the last five minutes. "We shall find it real when some carriages come along and they have to rush out of the road. Here they come! For Heaven's sake hold tight Miss Dorrmore; there will be a fearful rush!"

His warning comes not a moment too soon. With reckless impetuosity, the carriages, each crammed with merry-makers, turn the corner and make for the crowded mass in the road. Instantly the singing gives place to shouting and good-tempered bad language, and the throng in the road divides into two parts, one pressing back upon the church, the other dashing for the Square.

Dulcie clings tightly and laughs, but she laughs too soon. The same burly woodcuter who had been dancing on Sir Archie's toes pushes up against her with all his ponderous weight, and in doing so he puts his unfortunate foot on the edge of her domino. Incautiously she disengages her arm to pull the skirt more closely round her. At that instant there is a second plunge of the crowd in front, and before she can realize it she is being borne onward, clear away from Sir Archie's protecting side. Before she realizes it, almost before she has time to draw back, she finds herself on the outskirts of the crowd, the center of a noisy throng, who are anathematizing the carriages, and shouting the chorus of the song in one and the same voice.

What shall she do? She looks round, stands on tiptoe, and peers anxiously in the direction of the spot from which she has been swept; but tall as she is she cannot overlook a Roman crowd, and Sir Archie's golden head and second hat are not to be seen.

Of Italian she knows no word; there is nothing for it but to try and force her way toward the hotel or wait until the crowd thins; the first course would take time, the latter!—Her heart sinks for a moment; the vision of Aunt Fermoer wandering wildly through the hotel inquiring for her, uttering moans and threatening innumerable faintings, rises before her. And then for another thing—and this touches her almost as much—she will be too late for the table d'hotel, and she is very hungry. Too late for the table d'hotel! Who knows; it may be hours before this awful crowd thins sufficiently for her to reach the hotel, and she will be too late for the ball which is to be held to-night and for which Aunt Fermoer has been persuaded to purchase tickets. Too late for the ball to which she has been looking forward for days and nights!

In her dismay and woe she utters a little cry of despair, which at once attracts the keen ears of one of the crowd, who turns and addresses her in kind words of comfort. Good man! he is only assuring her that she is quite safe, but Dulcie doesn't understand a word, and the musical language only frightens her. She dares not speak, dares scarcely breathe, and she waits, while the street singer commences another song, and the crowd wait impatiently for the chorus.

It is an awkward position for a young girl to be in, but Dulcie never had much thought of the proprieties, and they do not occur to her now—all her thoughts are of Aunt Fermoer, the table d'hotel, and the ball.

Everybody who has ever waited for a train knows how long the minutes seem. To Dulcie the minutes, while the man on the barrel chants his song, seem months, ages; and, at last, her blood being, as Shakespeare says, "hot in her veins," she grows impatient, and resolves to force her way. She begins by putting her hand timorously on her neighbor, and murmuring "Pardon," which, being something like Italian, he responds to by raising his hat—he is in the costume of a knight cavalier, and wears a hat with a long, sweeping plume—and murmuring in the softest Italian; but he does not move, he only stares. What is it the signora wants? Poor Dulcie cannot explain in words, but she makes a sign, and the knight at once seizes her meaning, and, much to the girl's horror, dashes himself against the crowd.

"Oh, no, no! never mind—thank you very much!" she exclaims. But he has begun the good work, and is enjoying it. With a series of shouts and pushes he clears a way through the crowd, and, a little less nervous now, Dulcie follows him. After all, perhaps, he can clear a way; she will reach home before the table d'hotel, in time to prevent Aunt Fermoer going quite distracted. If he would only be a little less enthusiastic, and refrain from treating the people so roughly. But he doesn't. Having begun the good work, he has taken a liking for it, and literally forces his way by shoves and blows, which the crowd stand for a time good-humoredly enough, but presently begin to resent; and, with a fast-beating heart, Dulcie finds herself hemmed in by a now infuriated mob, who commences to hustle and strike her champion.

This is very bad, but worse follows, for in the press she finds her mask slipping off, and much as she has despised it on the balcony, she values it now. She puts up her hand to hold it, and at the same moment a burly peasant woman treads upon her foot, and shrieking, clings to Dulcie's domino to save herself. The woman weighs at least thirteen stone, and Dulcie, slim and slight, feels herself being dragged to the very foot of the surging mass.

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again."
—Mrs. FRED BEHNKE, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well."
—Mrs. THOS. DWYER, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."
—Miss IRENE FRANKLIN, 1223 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ant woman treads upon her foot, and shrieking, clings to Dulcie's domino to save herself. The woman weighs at least thirteen stone, and Dulcie, slim and slight, feels herself being dragged to the very foot of the surging mass.

It is a very small cry in the midst of such a burly-burly, but, as if it had been the voice of St. Peter's great bell, it meets with an instant response. Half-deafened, half-blinded as she is, she hears a man's voice, sees a man's form standing beside her and the next instant feels a man's arms around her.

Like a drowning man clinging to the proverbial straw she clings to him, and before she knows it she finds herself outside the crowd and leaning against the wall of the church opposite the Square.

Opposite her stands her preserver, her deliverer—what you will. She scarcely looks at him for a moment, her hand goes up to her mask first, then she does look up and starts.

She had expected to see an Italian a figure clad in silk or satin, perhaps a punchinello with a false nose and curled mustache, but instead is a tall thin figure clad in a tweed traveling suit, and wearing that unmistakable British appearance which the English traveler can never divest himself of.

For a moment she looks at him as he stands dusting from his sleeve a plentiful supply of flour—which some one in the crowd has thrown upon him; and in that moment a wild idea of escaping recognition, of passing herself off as an Italian, seizes her. Who knows? this preserver of hers may be one of the people stopping at the hotel, a man who will hasten to make capital of his exploit, and cause her to be the talk of the table d'hotel.

Fortunately for her, she thinks, her mask is still on, her domino still clings about her. She will try it.

So with a little laugh she stands upright, and bending her head in a courteous and graceful sweep, she turns as if to leave him; but at that moment she realizes that she has not come through the battle without leaving spoil behind. The pavement strikes cold and hard to one dainty little foot: she had lost her shoe!

Before she knows it, the English "Oh, dear!" has escaped her lips, and she stands confessed.

He does not start, does not smile or chuckle, he simply looks at her with a grave regard, and utters the common-place question: "What is the matter?"

"I—I have lost my shoe," she says, piteously, forgetting in an instant her attempt at deceiving him.

of grafting skin over a sore or scald is by the Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains a balsam of plants that literally grow on the skin. How much safer, more effective, and cheaper than the old method was by surgery!

Mrs. George Currier, 100 Ave. Guilford, Ontario, writes: "My baby sustained a very severe scald and although he received attention for eight weeks, he was very little better. Finally a doctor told me that skin should be grafted."

"Meanwhile I had seen Zam-Buk and decided to try it. This soothing balm soon stopped the inflammation, and in a few days the skin began to grow. In three weeks' time the skin was quite healed over. I then resorted to surgery, but Zam-Buk is equal to any operation and bruises, as well as the old sores, blood-poisoning, etc. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box, 3 for $1.00.

A Coming Turkish Offensive.

Attempt to Recover Bagdad Next Month.

(By Lovat Fraser, the Distinguished Journalist and Traveller, who Expresses his views with great frankness.)

The Turks will probably try to recover Bagdad next month. They are also massing large numbers of troops to shield Jerusalem, which they regard, oddly enough, as the Third of their Holy Cities.

Their objects are quite clear. On the other hand, the objects of the present British offensive operations in Palestine and in Mesopotamia are anything but clear.

We are fighting the war to beat Germany. We shall never beat Germany on the shores of the Dead Sea or amid the swamps of Mesopotamia.

General Maude's troops entered Bagdad on March 11. The very next day Russia plunged into a chaotic revolution, the Tsardom was overthrown, and it became plain that the campaigns in the Middle East were about to be transformed. On March 26 Sir Charles Dobell delivered the blow at Gaza, in Palestine, which Sir Archibald Murray had planned, and it is putting it very mildly to say that the attack failed.

The advance on Gaza was begun with the object of afterwards taking Beersheba. The British forces ran into a formidable series of entrenched positions on the long dry water-course known as the Wadi Ghuzze, stretching like a crescent from Gaza to Beersheba. There we stand for the present, and all the public are permitted to know is that Sir Edmund Allenby was hurriedly sent from France to take over the command.

The battle of Gaza, coupled with the sorry spectacle of the Russian Armies holding meetings every morning to decide whether they would fight or loaf, ought to have led to a careful review of the whole military position on the Palestine and Mesopotamian fronts. Such a reconsideration became doubly necessary when the great French offensive on the Aisne in April failed to achieve its larger objects, and still more imperative when we perceived that the new Hindenburg line was a reality and not a joke. More than ever, as we may see to-day on the Ypres front, the bulk of the weight of German military strength has been thrown into the west.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

Our military policy has always seemed to lack wide vision. It never appears to be adjusted to the rapidly changing conditions of this unprecedented world-conflict. When an idea is started it is pursued regardless of the fact that the whole situation may have altered in a week. Gallipoli changed the entire problem in Mesopotamia, but Townshend and his comparative handful of men were sent blindly on to the double tragedy of Ctesiphon and beleaguered Kut.

I never met anyone, even in the days before the Russians fancied they had created a new heaven and a new earth, who could tell me precisely what we thought we were doing in Palestine and Mesopotamia at the beginning of the present war. The only explanation of the Palestine advance was that "we had a lot of men in Sinai who might as well be used." To what end?

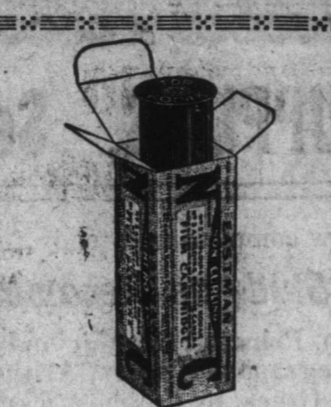

The Turks Collecting Large Forces.

The one sound strategic object was to cut the Bagdad railway north of Aleppo, in Syria. Take a map and see how far the British troops would have to go after they reached Damascus. The advance to Bagdad had a better reason, for it was undertaken to recapture Kut and to restore our prestige in the Middle East; but, though a Turkish army was shattered, the movement was to a great extent a blow in the air. Had the Russians in Armenia been able to continue their conquests, the advance to Bagdad and beyond would have been part of a great strategic movement; but the Russians have struck no powerful blow in Armenia since they entered Erzinjan on June 26, 1916.

If this was the position before the Russian Revolution, what are the facts to-day? The Russians in Armenia are believed to be held fast. The little Russian force which came through Persia and joined hands with our troops in Mesopotamia has been driven back.

Parts of two Turkish corps, the 15th and the 13th, still hover on our front in Mesopotamia; but the Turks have been waiting for the autumn. They are collecting large forces at Aleppo. It is quite true that the total number of Turkish effectives is greatly reduced, but now that the Russians have forsaken the battlefield to dream Utopian dreams the Turks can muster very respectable armies against ourselves. They are said to be bringing back four divisions from Galicia and the Dobruja, and to be drawing upon their reserves in Thrace. Marshal von Falkenhayn has gone to Syria, and he is not to be despised. He may have failed to take Verdun, but he will be a troublesome customer if he appears before Bagdad.

What will be the main direction of the new Turco-German offensive? My own view is that Marshal von Falkenhayn will act on the defensive in Palestine and deliver his principal blow in Mesopotamia. The disappearance of the Russians gives him two lines of advance—by the Tigris and by the Euphrates. It was always foreseen that the Turks would attempt to retake Bagdad, but at first it was thought that they would make their principal advance by the Euphrates, because the Russians might have struck at their communications on the Upper Tigris. Now they can move by both routes.

TOOTON'S,
The Kodak Store, 320 Water Street.

We are strong to-day in Mesopotamia, but not strong enough to remove anxiety. We have a fine commander in General Maude, but our forces are scattered over a wide area, and our outposts are probably 650 miles from the sea by the water route. Railhead on the Bagdad railway is probably at Nisibin, southeast of Diarberq, which means that on the Tigris route the Turks have only about 150 miles to cover by desert road, and less than 100 miles by river, before they reach the present British front.

The Mesopotamian difficulty was not solved by the publication of a now famous report. It still exists, for it will not be easy to hold what we have won. A successful British offensive in Palestine may affect the menace against our forces around Bagdad, but it will not threaten the Turkish communications north of Aleppo. Now, as always in this war, we are holding the Turk too cheaply. He fights with desperate courage on his own soil, and he will go on fighting.

Some people think the Turks will make peace if they are hammered a little more. The Turks will make no peace while the effacement of Russia in the field gives them so tempting a chance. Talaat, the gipsy, the real repository of power to-day, cannot overcome Enver and the Germans unless the Turkish military situation becomes hopeless, and probably he would not seek to do so.

When Russia collapsed, our campaigns in Asia ought to have been instantly governed by the consideration that Germany is our principal enemy, and that if Germany is beaten her subordinate allies will fall with her. Had we been guided from the year 1914 by this elementary principle, the war would have been over long ago. We have frittered away our strength seeking phantom victories in Asia and the Near East and we go on doing it.

The Civilian and the Army.

Contemporary Review: It is strange how determined the average civilian is to see his Army through conqueror deesse glasses, while he reserves his most scorching phrases for the men who are governing the country. How rarely is any military failure in this war attributed to the general or to the troops? A "politician" scapegoat there has to be, and he is soon enough found. What a shock the public would get were it to hear the Army's opinion of the way affairs have sometimes been managed by its own chiefs. And yet even the lamentable failure to attack at Suva on Aug. 7 and 8, 1915, is usually attributed to the end of Mr. Churchill or Mr. Asquith, I am not sure which.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The Methodist Sunday School Picnic is being held to-day at Connell's Farm.

Mr. James Power, R. C. Teacher at Gambo, left yesterday to resume his duties after spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Power, of Cottage Road. James is spoken very highly of by the people of Gambo, something that we always like to hear of our Harbour Grace boys.

Just for once the potato growers of Harbour Grace are ahead of those in St. John's—15c. being the ruling price here for a gallon of potatoes, while they can be bought in the City for 10c. Would that flour was so reasonably cheap.

Mr. G. J. Brocklehurst, of St. John's spent a week or so at his old Carboneur home. He also visited Harbor Grace where his friends were pleased to see him.

Mr. D. Cameron, of the U. T. E. Co.'s office, St. John's, also spent a week at Carboneur. He was accompanied by Mrs. Cameron. Don has many friends here who were pleased to meet him and to welcome him to town.

Another load of lumber arrived to the shipbuilding company to-day.

Berry pickers are busy these days gathering wild berries that are very plentiful this year. It is a pity there is not a market for any surplus gathered, as many dollars could be realized in that way, as it is thousands of gallons will, as usual, be left to spoil owing to no ready market offering.

Some very fine codfish were in the market to-day, and although the demand was great, the fisherman, to his credit be it said, sold his fish at reasonable prices. This is not according to prevailing custom, but the demand or scarcity would not justify him in asking exorbitant prices. Good for you.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Ash, of Carboneur, took a run up to town this afternoon on a short visit.

"Verdun" the Knell of Kaiserism.

(From the New York Herald.)
Many things are being kept from the German people by their Government, but the failure at Verdun and the mighty cost of that failure cannot be kept from them. They remember that celebration of Verdun's capture to which they were summoned many months ago. They recall the elaborate preparation of the All-Highest for a triumphal and heroic march into a fallen stronghold that failed to fall. No amount of official misrepresentation can make them forget the husbands and the sons and the brothers driven to death to "save the face" of the chitinous scion of Kaiserism, whom they are expected to accept as their next divine-right ruler. The glory there is all on the side of the French. They have saved their beloved France. They have killed Germans, but they also have done much for the German people. When Hohenzollernism, done to death, is compelled to release the people of Germany from its grip the world will know that its knell was sounded at Verdun.

OFF CAPE RACE.

A message from Cape Race received in the city yesterday stated, that a three-masted schooner with her foremast carried away could be seen several miles off the land. The vessel in question is no doubt the French brigantine which refused assistance from a banker a few days ago on the edge of the Grand Bank. The crippled ship is evidently making for this port for repairs.

WILL DINE CHAMPIONS—The B.I. S. teams, who won the championship in the Baseball and Football Leagues, will be tendered a dinner, shortly by their friends and supporters in honour of their success. The event will take place at the society's club rooms and arrangements for it are now being made.

FRIDAY, September 7, 1917.

Victory in Sight.

"The British Empire is made up of four nations, but they are to-day one in purpose, one in action, one in sacrifice, and, please God, soon will be one in triumph." Thus said the British Prime Minister in a message cabled to-day. We draw attention, not to the whole sentence, but to its closing phrase. "They soon will be one in triumph." Not "may" or "if"—just a quietly categorical "will." Why this complete confidence in the outcome, and that a speedy one, on the part of one who has never from the start been in the ranks of the extravagant optimists? He has not always spoken like this, but we think a careful examination of his most important public statements would reveal that he has spoken like this during the past three or four months, since the victories of Arras, Messines and the Chemin des Dames. His confidence is echoed in remarkable fashion in more than one high quarter in England. It is quite intelligible. Figures, deductions, logic events—all lead to a conclusion that justifies it, but we can discern in addition a sort of sense that cannot be explained that the end is nearer than cautious reason would persuade us. Over there in England they do not know, of course, that the German line in the west is near breaking point, that Austria is tottering; but somehow they feel it.

The most superficial review of all the factors making for the final decision gives cause for this optimism. Let us allow Germany all the tricks she can make first. She has hopes in one direction alone, Russia. Bad though the outlook there is for the Allies, it can never come to the worst, and the worst alone will profit Germany. That would be complete peace with Russia, liberating some two hundred divisions for service in sustaining her crumbling defences in the west. Short of that she will gain little by her spectacular adventure.

Even the capture or destruction of the Russian fleet would be too late a gain to be of much help to her. Looking west, looking in every other direction, every other department of the many-sided struggle, what does she see? What morsel of comfort, what grain of hope, can she gather from the prospect?

Another big retreat in Flanders—big, where every mile means so much—is foreshadowed in the civilian evacuation of the territory behind the lines. If Thorout, Roulers and Courtrai fall within the immediate compass of the war, Belgium will be a long distance nearer liberation. Right at the other end of the line the French hold again Douaumont, Le Mort Homme and Hill 304 before the mortal Verdun—small places on any map but pronounced by the Germans themselves the pivots of the Western battle-line and clothed with tremendous moral significance. Everywhere the Allies attack, everywhere they advance and though it be by scant yards and miles, always at smaller cost than that borne by the defence. No "decision" will be reached this year and none will be aimed at, but the coming spring will bring with it a hurricane assault which will carry the decision on its wings. Disaster is even more imminent upon Austria where she just holds Cadorna's victory-flushed legions off Trieste and Pola. The remainder of the fighting year and the winter that succeeds it can be trusted to remove what inclination, or rather what motive, Austria may have to continue a hopeless struggle, a struggle which may yet be decided for the Allies inside the lines they are surely, but slowly, breaking asunder.

"Picnics."

Time was when the Opposition that once existed was loud and frequent in its denunciations of the ministerial amusement of taking little vacation trips on pretexts of public missions. "Picnics" its leader liked to call them. Tempora mutantur. The Opposition is no more, and with it have died the denunciations. But the picnics continue, and have of late become a vogue. Our Premier is off again, this time to New York to be accommodated with a trifle of $3,000,000. It is an interesting occupation, this borrowing from Peter to pay

Paul, and we hope with the News that Peter, whose real name is Samuel, will prove as obliging as before. That done, Sir Edward will turn his steps once more towards the Homeland, which he has not seen for three long and trying months. He does not, however, go willingly but after much importuning and on urgent business—no less a matter, in fact, than to procure salt for his salt-starved country. The step is a wise one. A mission of such importance could not safely have been entrusted to lesser hands. Conformably with the precedent, we expect any day to learn that Lloyd George has gone to the Argentine to get meat for England.

The example does not lack imitation—in fact the imitation has anticipated it. Just returned from an extensive tour and study of Canada and her pension system, for which the country is rewarded by an exact copy of it, Mr. McGrath has new greatness thrust upon him and finds himself President of a Food Control Board. Of course, Newfoundland food conditions could not possibly be studied in Newfoundland, and he lost no time in packing up again to study them in Ontario and, we suppose, Milwaukee. The next creation is a Ministry of Militia. A tremendous innovation this, to be approached and handled with delicate care. They have such an office in Canada, and Mr. Bennett is off to make its acquaintance. After three years of war it is only right that we should consult Canada in the management of it. Having discovered that the elephant trappings are altogether too small for the rat, the Government adds still another to them. We now rejoice in a Purchasing Agent. Mr. Goodison is, we feel sure, an excellent choice, but what do we know about giving and filling orders here? He should lose no time in learning all there is to learn about it in Washington, where a similar official is gently accelerating market-prices in an attempt to buy up the resources of a continent. Even then, however, much will remain to be done, and why not do things thoroughly while we are about it? There are still quite a number of ministers in our midst. What are they doing here? Why are they not abroad, travelling, eating, sleeping and studying in the interests of their country? Their dereliction of duty is scandalous. They seem to forget that in this time of national peril (vide Advocate) their proper place is as far from the nation as possible. Nine vacant seats in the House and three of the Executive away is something in extenuation, we will admit, but why should any member of the Government linger away his own and the country's time in idleness here? Let the National Government wake up and betake themselves where duty calls them, or there will be a sudden end of our national patience.

Bowring's New Vessel Arrives.

The brand new three-masted auxiliary schooner Bianca, Capt. Burke, arrived here this morning from Halifax with a load of foodstuffs for her owners, Messrs. Bowring Bros., Ltd. The Bianca was built in Liverpool, N.S., and will be used in the forthcoming trade, for which she is well adapted. The new vessel is strong and staunch in every particular, well proportioned and has a large carrying capacity being said to be able to take 500 tons. She is fitted with a powerful 100 horse power engine and she is a splendid sailer. The Bianca will, no doubt, prove an ideal carrier and will be a great addition to our mercantile marine.

Panic in Austria

OVER VICTORIES OF ITALY AND FRANCE.

Paris, Aug. 27.—Advices from Switzerland present the condition of Austria as bordering on panic. The Italian victories have caused such alarm in Vienna that the Emperor rushed to the front and made radical changes in the high command in an unsuccessful effort to stem the tide. The Austrian press hardly ventures to discuss the military situation, despite the fact that a battle is raging on which the fate of the Empire may depend.

On the heels of the barely crushed revolution in Bohemia comes trouble in Transylvania, said to be due to the refusal of the agricultural interests to accept the official terms for the regulation and sale of their produce. More definite facts are not known, as Transylvania is under martial law, and practically cut off from the rest of the country.

How serious agriculture's attitude throughout the Empire has become may be judged from the fact that the secret economic conference between representatives of Germany and Austria-Hungary, which began on Aug. 7 and was intended to settle mutual food distribution for the winter, had to be abandoned without accomplishing anything, owing, it is stated, to universal opposition of the agrarian interests.

Emperor and Empress are said to have declared repeatedly that they were determined to avoid another winter of war at all costs.

Hitherto there have been two obstacles to Austrian peace: first, their refusal to abandon Trieste and Trente to Italy; secondly, fear—for a friendlier feeling has disappeared—of Germany. Now Italy bids fair to settle the first difficulty once for all. The Austrian army is reeling and if the Italian effort can be maintained sudden Austrian disaster may follow. German prestige has received a well nigh fatal blow at Verdun and loss of the Mort Homme and Hill 304—the position labelled by the Germans themselves as the key pivot of the Western front—could not be hidden and caused an enormous sensation. A prominent Austrian in Berne was heard to remark on receiving the news that the world might come to regard Mort Homme as the beginning of the German debacle. He spoke French, and my informant cites the phrase as "Le Mort Homme est Français mais il se peut bien que l'homme mort soit Allemand"—a cynical pun which is a striking commentary on the present Austro-German relations.

Berne has become the centre of Austrian activities. Under the leadership of the veteran diplomat Count Goltchowski, whose pro-Ally and anti Prussian sentiments are no secret, there is assembled a powerful and busy group of Austrian intrigues. Highly placed personages come and go mysteriously, and my informant declares one constantly hears on Austrian lips expressions of incompatibility, if not actual hostility, toward Germany.

The German legation at Berne is hardly less active, and it is possible that Berlin is willing to permit the Austrian manoeuvres as an easy method of testing the Allies' peace pulse. General Swiss opinion judges otherwise, and concludes that Austria is on the verge of trying to negotiate "peace at any price," even should a rupture with Germany be included in the sum total.

Up-to-Date Delicatessen Store for St. John's.

A representative of the Telegram called at the well-known store of Ellis & Co. yesterday afternoon and was kindly received and shown through the premises by the genial manager, Mr. W. A. Ellis. On entering the building we were confronted with a display of kitchen garden produce and fruits of all descriptions, while the general appearance of the store was such as could not fail to attract the attention of the customer. Passing from the general store we entered the new Delicatessen Department, where for a short while we imagined ourselves once more in the heart of a big Canadian city where we had been accustomed to see such sights. On entering the department the customer is struck by the brightness of the place. The white enamel walls, the marble counters, the giant meat, poultry and game brackets that are attached to the walls and the up-to-date refrigerating system with its glass coverings, all open to the inspection of the customer, are something St. John's has never before enjoyed. Delicacies of all descriptions are represented, including cooked meats, minced meats and sausages, the two last of which the customer can have the privilege of seeing made to order if so desired. A big electric grinder and mincer has been installed for that purpose. Mr. James Wallace, of Glasgow, who has had many years' experience in the managing of a delicatessen store in the Old Country, has recently arrived and has been given charge of the new department. Mr. Ellis is to be congratulated on his efforts and we feel sure that a visit to his store will satisfy the needs of the most fastidious patron.

Entertained at Government House Grounds.
Yesterday Government House grounds presented one of the most impressive and prettiest scenes that one would wish to see, when several hundred mothers, wives, sisters, sweethearts, relatives and friends of our brave soldiers and sailors and all members of the Women's Patriotic Association, attended a Garden Party given on their behalf by His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson. Early in the afternoon the gates of the grounds were thrown open to the visitors and up till 7 o'clock groups of ladies could be seen going and coming from the grounds.

Lady Davidson, President of the W. P. A. in Newfoundland, extended a hearty welcome to every worker present, including a number of outport ladies of the W. P. A. who are now visiting the city. The weather was all that could be desired and with tables and tents spread beneath the trees, luncheon and teas were served. The C. C. C. Band and the Regimental drum and bugle band were present and rendered excellent music which was highly appreciated by all. Their Excellencies left nothing undone for the comfort and enjoyment of their guests who appreciate their hospitality.

Ghosts that Haunt Kings.

Stories of the supernatural are interwoven with the histories of most of the Royal Houses of Europe. It is in Central Europe, however, that they are most prevalent, and the reigning powers there look upon the oft-repeated occasions upon which the family apparitions manifest themselves with dread which they make no attempt to conceal.

Though the arrogant Hohenzollerns claim to fear no foe, there is one thing that they do fear, and that is the famous apparition known as "The White Lady of the Hohenzollerns," whose appearance is usually a presage of disaster to one of their race.

The legend connected with this vision is typical of the relentless character of the Hohenzollern family. In the fifteenth century a widowed princess of their race fell in love with a foreign prince and determined to enter the bonds of matrimony once more, and so, being a princess, she took advantage of the privilege of her rank and dispatched a proposal to the man of her choice.

Strangled the Children.

But the proposal was declined with thanks, the prince, doubtless wishing to let the lady down gently, explaining at the same time that there were obstacles in the way.

At once the princess jumped to the conclusion that he referred to her two children, and did not wish to take on the responsibilities of a step-father, so being a Hohenzollern of the determined stop-at-nothing type, she promptly had the children strangled, and informed the prince of her deed, asking if now she could not become his bride.

But the prince was so overcome with horror at her terrible act that the shock of it proved his death-blow. He died cursing her and calling down retribution on her head.

It came very promptly. In her turn, the princess became maddened with remorse for what she had done, and tortured with suffering both mental and physical. A few days later she, too, died an agonizing death and was buried in the vault of her ancestral castle in Berlin.

And whenever one of the family is on the eve of disaster or death, either he or his friends see a vision of the lady clad in white, with a mournful and horror-struck look upon her face.

The present Kaiser saw this vision before his father passed away. Three times he has seen it—just before the war, twice in June, 1914, and once in July of the same year. It remains to be seen how the ominous portents will be fulfilled.

The Lady in Black.

The Royal house of Bavaria look upon the apparition of their family ghost known as "The Black Lady" with superstitious awe, for her appearance usually foretells the death of one of the family.

One night in 1854, when Queen Marie of Saxony, daughter of Max Josef of Bavaria, was sitting in her boudoir with her ladies in attendance, one of the ladies who was reading aloud stopped short suddenly and began staring into space with a terrified look in her eyes. Upon being questioned she said she had seen a tall lady in black standing behind the Queen.

From her description the famous "Black Lady" was recognized. Next day news was brought to Queen Marie that her husband had died during the night.

Ferdinand, King of Bulgaria, is haunted by the ghost of Stambuloff, the Minister whose death he brought about in 1895.

Before the war Ferdinand consulted a fortune-teller, and to test the genuineness of her reading he returned to her the next day in disguise. To his surprise she recognized him at once, and told him that the gentleman who had accompanied him the day before had been to see her half an hour ago and told her to expect the king. "He also told me to tell you that you will meet your end in very much the same way as he did," she said.

From her description the horrified Ferdinand recognized that she had seen the apparition of Stambuloff. He has taken the ghostly warning in earnest, and no monarch in Europe, not even the Kaiser, goes about in such fear of a violent death as Pearson's Weekly.

AT THE POPULAR CRESCENT.

Another of the Black Cat series of Essany Super-features, entitled, "The Hoodoo Story" is on at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day, Richard C. Travers and Gertrude Glover are the principals in to-day's drama. "The Five Franc Piece" is an old French story produced as a two reel diamond special feature, the staging and photography of this great drama is superb, featuring Edith Johnson, the famous Sellig star. "The Rise and Fall of McDo" and "Almost a Wild Man," are two great comedies; don't miss this big week-end variety show to-day.

Hereditary Diseases.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

If you had an ancestor who died of some disease that was considered hereditary and you found yourself showing symptoms of that disease, wouldn't you march to the doctor's office quick?

Or suppose we put it less strongly than that. Suppose he did not die of the disease but only suffered much discomfort, lost a great deal of happiness, became obnoxious to others on account of it. Even in that case you'd rush for a doctor if you found the symptoms cropping out.

It is true that their very sneezes. And yet how calmly people often take it when they find their parents' predominant faults cropping out in them. They are in a position to know just how much unhappiness, perhaps, those faults were responsible for. None better than they. They ought to be ready to pounce on such tendencies in themselves and tear them out if it tore at the very sinews of their being.

Middle age often brings out a strong family look in people who, when young, looked like either father or mother. Likewise it brings out family tendencies—the good and the bad.

You Have A Map—Use It. One should watch oneself. And since one has been well provided with a map of one's temperamental dangers why not use it?

I know a man whose mother was cautious to a degree that made life miserable for herself and for those about her. He knows just how much unhappiness caution gone to seed can

sow. And yet as he approaches middle age he is permitting himself to grow more and more cautious. If anyone says anything about it he says, "I'm only sensible. I'm not like her."

What Habits Shall You Bequeath Your Children?

Fancy ignoring such a danger signal! What are your family faults, the faults that bother you even in your beloved father, and mother? Are you permitting yourself to form these same faulty habits to pass on to your children? Can't you stop yourself and leave your children a heritage even better than your own? These are questions every young to middle aged person should ask himself once in a while.

THE INVENTOR. The inventor is a poor man with a bright idea. If ideas could be exchanged for bar soap or beet sugar or house rent, the living expenses of the average inventor would shrink faster than a cotton flannel night-gown the third trip home from the laundry.

As a rule, the inventor is a poor business man, as his mind will not settle down to anything but inventing. Nothing annoys an inventor more than to be interrupted by the harsh tone of an unpaid grocery bill when he is busily engaged in inventing a corn planter which can be converted into a touring car on Sundays. Many an earnest inventor has had a bright, promising idea knocked out of his head just as he was about to work it into a new kind of incubator, simply because some bloodless, unfeeling creditor refused to allow a book account to outlaw. This is one reason why so many inventors wear a hunted look and re-roofed pants.

He is obliged to sell it for $65 in order to appease the appetite of a patent attorney in Washington.

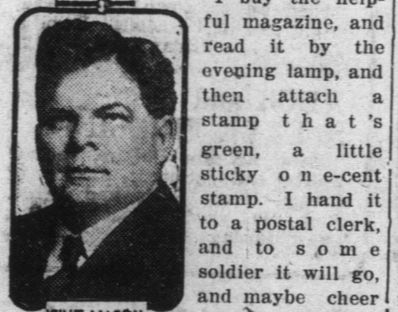

Just as soon as the inventor discovers some device which no other inventor has thought of, he is obliged to sell it for a patent attorney in Washington. Many a man has invented a harmless home remedy, guaranteed to cure everything from congestion of the liver to a boil on the back of the neck, only to see the fruits of his labor enjoyed by some turnip-necked capitalist who couldn't invent a fly-swatter if he had a working model in front of him. Some of our noblest implements of husbandry, such as the side-delivery hay rake and the graceful fertilizer spreader, were invented by men who never had enough money to thwart the annual poll tax. This teaches us that justice is getting to be about as scarce in this country as the turtle in a mock-turtle soup.

The inventor is one of the most fearless men we have. He is not afraid of hunger, or cold, or ridicule, or darned stockings. The only fear he has is that he will infringe upon somebody else. The inventor never knows whether he is infringing until he has handed the price of a sixty-six-foot lot on Main Street to the patent attorney, who discovers that he has an infringement record of 99 out of a possible 100. After the infringements have been removed, the attorney writes for more money and threatens to discover some new ones unless check is sent by return mail.

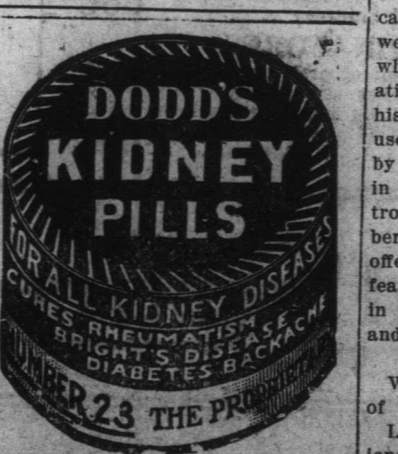

The inventor is often sneered at, but were it not for him we would be about as far advanced as the Kinky-haired Hotentot. Therefore, we should be kind to the inventor and loan him money from time to time.

ONE LITTLE HELP.

I buy the helpful magazine, and read it by the evening lamp, and then attach a stamp that is green, a little sticky on a e-cent stamp. I hand it to a postal clerk, and to a soldier it will go, and maybe cheer the hours that irk, and lighten him to face the foe.

And thus, in divers little ways, we all can help the soldier lads, who'll spend their ardent, toilsome days far, far from home, in foreign grades. "Here is a magazine from home," a soldier cries, and wipes a tear; "some fellow with a thoughtful dome, in God's own country, sent it here." My aunt, whenever she has a chance, does Red Cross sewing with a bunch of kindly dames who used to prance to bridge whist game, pink tea or lunch. The hands that used to flash the cards now ply the needle and to, and peel off linen, yards and yards, which is a goodly thing to do. We all can help, if we'll but try, if not in large ways, then in small, and comfort soldier boys who sigh where surgeons walk the whitewashed hall.

Three Extinguished Firebrands.

(New York Sun.)

That is an interesting story that at a Potsdam conference just prior to the outbreak of war the Kaiser was desirous of accepting Sir Edward Grey's offer of mediation, but was dissuaded when "Moltke, Falkenhayn and Tirpitz threw their swords on the table and offered their resignations."

It is made doubly interesting by the later fate of the three firebrands who demanded war, got it and disgraced with it. No one of them is now in the office he occupied at the time they delivered their message to their emperor.

Moltke went down with the failure of the Paris drive. As chief of staff he was held by the emperor responsible for that fatal disaster which cost Germany the war. The laurels his uncle won in 1871 withered on his brow and he died in obscurity and disgrace.

Falkenhayn succeeded him as chief of staff, but fell because of disasters in Galicia for which the Kaiser, whom he had once coerced, held him responsible. Driven from his high estate he spent long months in obscure retirement. Only within the last few weeks has been restored to a very subordinate command.

And Von Tirpitz. He clung long to the control of the navy, but the demand for greater frugality than even he had dreamed of finally cast him out of the post his own efforts had made, what it is to-day.

Did the Kaiser when he required or accepted the resignations of these war lords think of that dramatic scene in the Potsdam palace when, with swords clattering on the table top, they forced him into a war which has ruined the German nation, cost them their positions, power and prestige, and may yet cost William II, the imperial throne that the genius of Bismarck set up for him?

German Collapse Next Summer.

New York Tribune: Now the German man is making a desperate effort to influence both the Allies and the public of the world. He is endeavouring to establish the idea that his line cannot be broken and that incidental retreats do not affect his main strength. He is steadily assigning objectives for his enemies which were not the objectives of their commanders, and he habitually alleges successes when the enemy fail to reach their objectives but his. He tries to make the world believe his line is impregnable because he knows that he will next year lack the men to man it and that it will collapse if there is a campaign of 1918. He hopes that the weak-hearted, the faint-hearted, those whose horror of war is their dominating emotion, will be so impressed by his defence this year that they will use their influence to compel a peace by negotiation this winter. If he fails in this he knows that, with American troops added to Anglo-French numbers, even if Russia fails to take the offensive, he will face a military defeat and an absolute military decision in the West some time between May and September of next year.

A COMMONSENSE ACT.
OTTAWA, To-day.
The War Time Election Act introduced in the Commons gives votes to the wives, mothers and sisters of soldiers who have gone overseas; no vote for men of enemy alien extraction who came to Canada since 1902; no vote for those who are exempt from military service or who seek exemption. The Bill affects only an election in time of war, or during mobilization, and goes out of existence entirely when such is over. The Solicitor-General in introducing the measure said: "It is proposed that by a measure of women enfranchisement added strength shall be given to the voice of the soldiers of Canada. Those of their nearest kin at home may be presumed to be the most likely to re-echo the sentiments of their sons overseas, and by this Bill the nearest female relatives of the men of our expeditionary forces who have left the shores of Canada are given the right to vote. The wife or widow, the mother, the daughter and the sisters of overseas soldiers are by this Bill enfranchised. Power is given the enumerators to add to the lists on polling day the name of any voter who swears that his name has been wrongfully omitted from the list, and who satisfies the enumerator that there should be no omission. Conscientious objectors are banned," the Solicitor-General said. "As to the conscientious objectors, it is not considered right that those who refuse on conscientious grounds to bear arms should be enabled in the midst of a war either to compel others to fight for them or to deny to those who do battle the right to reinforcements." The Bill will be taken up to-day.

MORE GERMAN BRUTALITY.
Grand Headquarters of the French Army in France, Sept. 6.—The Verdun was again bombarded by German aviators for six and a half hours last night. Nineteen persons were killed and twenty-six wounded. The huts attacked contained only severely wounded men unable to move from their cots. The hostile airplanes flew over the hospital every twenty minutes from 8.30 o'clock in the evening until three o'clock in the morning.

GERMANS MAY PLAN WITHDRAWAL.
NEW YORK, To-day.
The New York Herald publishes a despatch from London saying that numerous large conflagrations are said to have been seen recently near the German lines, particularly in the Lille sector, and it is believed that these fires indicate that the Germans may be planning another winter withdrawal to a new line, as they did after the Battle of the Somme. It is also reported thousands of the French population in the same section of German occupied territory are being sent back within the French lines via Switzerland, presumably to conserve food supplies and reduce the population to a minimum in the areas where heavy fighting may take place. London supposes, however, that this shifting of civilians may be but another indication of the Germans' intention to retire.

OPTIMISTIC ON SUB. WARFARE.
LONDON, To-day.
In conversation with a representative of Reuters, a high British naval authority, speaking of the submarine menace, said: It must be remembered that Germany was staking everything on the U-boat warfare, therefore signs of its intensification were not surprising. There are indications, he said, of larger submarines, approximately of a cruiser type, being turned out. However, Germany has no prospect of success within the time she is likely to have at her disposal, for with Germany there must be a time limit.

In combatting the submarine, he said, we are being greatly and increasingly helped by the United States and Japan. As regards offensive measures and anti-submarine work, naturally precise features could not be given but the outlook is hopeful. He added: "We are proceeding at full speed in our offensive steps and in the near future there is every prospect of our being able to neutralize the shipping losses."

AND SHE WILL AVENGE.
LONDON, To-day.
There was a sad funeral procession yesterday of the ninety-eight naval victims of Monday night's air raid. The cortege was two miles long. The Warrant Officers' wreath carried the inscription: "Rest in Peace, England will Avenge."

LATEST!

CONDITIONS IN POLAND.

LONDON, To-day.
The recent announcement of the resignation of the Polish State Council made it obvious that the situation in Poland was not favourable to Austro-German occupation. From admissions in German newspapers and from other material available the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian shows it to be much worse than it appears on the surface.

THE SITUATION IN RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
Though in the opinion of various military authorities, Petrograd is in no immediate danger on account of the fall of Riga, developments, nevertheless, are being prepared against the possibility of an unexpected descent by the Germans. Although there are no signs of panic, there are elements in the population, particularly members of the wealthy class, who are leaving or attempting to leave in large numbers according to the newspapers. The present Russian front represents the arc of a circle from the mouth of the river south-eastwards about forty miles from Riga. Drinsk, according to reports, is still holding out.

"What of the Night?"

The following is from a late Boston paper:
In these late August days, 102 years ago, Napoleon was starting on the way to St. Helena. It is a good time to think of that. Patrick Henry was not wholly right in declaring that the future is to be judged only by the past; for the future has new factors at work. None the less the past holds its own in new times, as ancient headlands grimly shoulder out seas lashed to fury in a windy night.

Napoleon was amazingly the counterpart what the German Kaiser now is in Europe. Napoleon's aims, his methods, his personality were essentially the same. His field of action was the same. The chief difference is this, that he reached a point in his valid invincibility far and away beyond all that the Kaiser has achieved. Does the Pope now seem too regardful of the Kaiser's cause in his recent peace proposals? The chief spiritual father of Europe actually journeyed to Paris 113 years ago, to crown Napoleon—who seized the symbol from the pontifical hands and crowned himself. Does the Kaiser still hold areas of Europe conquered? In the mid-summer of 110 years ago Napoleon was supreme in Europe by his victories, the Peace of Tilsit being proof. Does the foundering of Russia now trouble men's minds? Russia then laid down her arms; her Emperor met the war-wizard on a pavilioned raft in the River Niemen, kissed and embraced him, with both armies huzzing, and hobbled with him for days like a man bewitched. Napoleon left with Russia's promise to win England for him or else shut her ports to British ships. Even Prussia was party to this orgy. The Peace of Tilsit ended all appearance of opposition to Napoleon on the continent. Only England held out against the victorious little megalomaniac—England, then as now the land of what Emerson has crammed into the line, "Slowly, Britain's secular night." Yet Napoleon was on his way to St. Helena in August, 102 years ago.

What of the present dark night of history? England is holding firm against the Kaiser as she did against his prototype. But she is not alone now—is not waiting for one power and another to join her in the grapple as she did then. France is gloriously with her. Italy is fighting with her valiantly. America, vast and slow-moving and all-crushing like a glacier is with her. London went wild with joy the other day while America's soldiers and now endeared flag were saluted at the palace gate by England's King. Russia? Calamitous as her course now is once again, Russia has by no means begun to play into the Kaiser's hands as she did into Napoleon's. But even then her Emperor soon awoke from his folly. Russia by her barbaric stolidity became the scene of the first crack of doom for Napoleon—the doom which came to its final crash at Waterloo. Her huge mass yields now and then, like quicksands that once engulfed and are likely to do the same again.

Will the Kaiser be overwhelmed? Napoleon was, though he far surpassed Wilhelm's achievements. Will it take so long to do it now as then? The array against him is immeasurably greater than that which was finally mustered against Napoleon and thereupon speedily crushed him.

This ought surely to speed the undoing of the Kaiser now. "Watchman, what of the night?" is sounding in countless hearts. In view of numerous signs, watchmen of keen vision in many quarters are saying, "The morning cometh."

Druggist Convicted of Breach of Prohibition Act.

Appropriated Liquor to His Own Purposes.
In the action taken recently against Mr. Martin Gladney for a breach of the Prohibition Act, Judge Morris to-day handed down the following judgment:
IN THE MAGISTRATE'S COURT.
Head Constable Peet Versus Martin Gladney.
This is an action taken against the Defendant for a breach of Section 32 of the Prohibition Plebiscite Act 1915 and also Section 4 of the Act, Geo. V., Cap. 9, 1916.
The Defendant, who is a licensed Druggist, obtained a quantity of liquor from the Controller to dispense or sell at his Drug Store situate on Central Street, as provided for under the Act.
In giving his evidence, the Defendant, on cross-examination by Mr. Dunfield, Counsel for the Prosecution, stated:
"I bought one gallon of Rum on Thursday, the 23rd of August. I dispensed five or six liquor prescriptions on the 24th. On the 25th one 'only for 24 ozs., which is one bottle of Rum. On the 24th and 25th I had 'some liquor on my premises. I had 'about a half gallon. When I went 'to the house on the Cove Road, I 'stayed there about five or six hours, 'and stayed at another friend's house 'about two hours. I filled five prescriptions on Friday for 24 ozs. each, 'which is 120 ozs. On Saturday, the '25th, I dispensed 24 ozs. That is an 'amount of 144 ozs. A gallon contains 128 ozs. I did not dispense any 'since and I have none in stock now. 'I took the balance on the drive on 'Friday night. I drank part of it and 'the cabman drank part of it."
It is contended by Mr. Gibbs, K.C., Counsel for the Defendant, that the liquor, having been purchased from the Controller by the Defendant, became his property, and he had a right to appropriate it, or any portion of it, to his own use without a prescription from a medical doctor.
Section 25 of the Act under consideration, gives the Controller the right to grant a license to any duly qualified druggist, who is proprietor of a drug store, for the sale in such drug store, of intoxicating liquor for medicinal purposes, to any person presenting a prescription therefor, signed by a qualified medical practitioner.

Section 28 requires every licensed druggist to keep a record book of all prescriptions for intoxicating liquors filled by him, giving the date of the prescription, the character and amount of liquor supplied, date of the filling of the prescription, name and address of the person for whom the liquor was prescribed, name and address of the person to whom the intoxicating liquor was delivered, and the name and address of the Medical practitioner issuing the prescription.
Section 32 makes it an offence for a licensed druggist to dispense or sell intoxicating liquor to any person, except as provided for under the Act. The druggist has the right to obtain liquor from the Controller to dispense or sell for medicinal purposes under a doctor's prescription only. It cannot be seriously contended that the Legislature intended the druggist to have the right to dispense this liquor to himself and his friends either by the glass, bottle or gallon whenever he felt inclined to do so.
I hold therefore, that the defendant, by his own admission, has committed a breach of Section 32 of the Prohibition Act, and I convict him accordingly and impose a fine of Fifty dollars ($50.00) or one month's imprisonment.

Dated at St. John's this 7th day of September, 1917.
Mr. Brian Dunfield, B.L., Counsel for the Prosecution.
Mr. Gibbs, K.C., for the Defendant. (Sgd.) F. J. MORRIS.

Lady Barrington Dies Suddenly.

Death came suddenly at an early hour this morning to one of Cape Breton's most distinguished women, Lady Matilda Barrington, Barrington Park, Sydney Mines. The end was entirely unexpected and friends were greatly shocked this morning when it was learned that Lady Barrington had passed away. The esteemed lady had been in her usual good health yesterday and had not complained of feeling ill when she retired last evening. However she was suddenly seized this morning and died shortly after 2 o'clock. Lady Barrington was predeceased by her husband, Sir Yorke Ainslie Walker Barrington, some years and has been a resident of Cape Breton for many years. A native of Windsor, N.S., Lady Barrington held the esteem and respect of a host of friends in this province who will learn with deep regret of her sudden death. Two sons, Sir Yorke Barrington, and John Edmund Fitzroy Barrington, both of Sydney Mines, and five daughters, Sibilla of Halifax, Harriet of Quebec, Maelda at home, Mrs. W. L. Chirgwin and Bey Barrington of Sydney survive. Two grandchildren, Mary and Yorke Barrington, of Sydney, also survive, while one sister, Mrs. S. J. Mahon, resides at Toronto. A number of nephews residing in Canada and England also survive, upwards of twenty fighting in France with the British and Canadian armies. Lady Barrington's death has removed from Sydney Mines one of the most highly respected residents of that place. The deceased's father was of Irish parentage and her mother was a native of Devonshire, England. A prominent member of the Anglican church at Sydney Mines and a woman beloved by all with whom she came in contact her passing away will be a distinct loss to Sydney Mines. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Interment will be at the Park Cemetery.—Sydney Daily Post, Sept. 1st. (Lady Barrington was an aunt of Mrs. George Hutchings, of this city.)

"Blue Bird" Chinaware

Chinaware plays an important part in every household. To-day, good china is very expensive to purchase owing to high freights and war risk insurance, apart from the increased cost of raw material. Cups and Saucers, Plates, etc., are continually being broken in every home, and they must be replaced—but why buy them? The Imperial Tobacco Co.'s Premium Store has on display in the Window some very attractive "Blue Bird" China and any quantity from one Cup and Saucer upwards can be obtained free of cost. A few tags or coupons and the chinaware is yours. Drop in the Premium Store when you are down town and let us tell you more about it.

MOTHER OF SIXTEEN CHILDREN.
Mrs. Elizabeth Blanchard, one of the oldest residents of Bay of Islands, died at her home, The Farms, on Aug. 27. At the time of her death Mrs. Blanchard was 80 years and 7 months of age. Deceased was a native of Bay of Islands, having been born at Frenchman's Cove a year before the late Queen Victoria ascended the Throne; she therefore lived in the reign of four sovereigns. She was a daughter of the late Richard Wheeler. Mrs. Blanchard raised a family of sixteen children, six of whom survive. Her husband predeceased her by about 26 years. Funeral took place from the chapel at Meadows on Wednesday last, and the remains were interred at the Farms cemetery.—Western Star, Sept. 5.

Death of Mr. Thomas Boland.

Mr. Thomas Boland, a highly respected citizen died on Wednesday morning, at the good old age of 77. Though Mr. Boland had been ill about a year, he was confined to his bed only about two weeks previous to his death. Mr. Boland was a native of St. John's and came to Bay of Islands over half a century ago. He was a friend to all and enemy to none, and always of a most cheerful disposition. He is survived by a wife, four daughters and five sons. The funeral took place Friday morning from the Church of the Sacred Heart where Requiem High Mass was sung by Very Rev. Dean O'Rourke.—Western Star, Sept. 5.

Rod and Gun.

September Rod and Gun is out and shows the usual list of good things for sportsmen readers and lovers of the out of doors. This issue is a good one to put in the late summer vacationist's knap-sack. Such stories as "The Hide Builders," Bonnycastle Dale; "Two Weeks Without a Car," T. N. Hewitt; "Duck Hunting on the Small Sloughs," George Belton; "A Cruise in the Sloop Katharine," Austen Saunders; "The Time, The Place, the Game," Archie McKishnie; and "Fishing in Little Streams," Reginald Gourlay, make the vacationist glad he went and the stay-at-home man sorry he can't go and maybe determined to get away into the north woods when the hunting season comes on. Among the special departments, that devoted to dog men's interests, The Kennel, contains this month a full report of the recent Regina Dog Show. Rod and Gun is published by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

The official report from the British headquarters in France to-night says: On Wednesday there was great activity in the air. The enemy on several occasions interrupted the work of our artillery machines, and attacked our airplanes employed in long distance bombing raids. A few bombs were dropped behind our lines by hostile machines during the night, but little damage was done. During the day our machines dropped eight bombs on railway sidings near Ghent, five on large sheds at Hauage, 34 on billets around Douai, 35 on airbases northeast of Cambrai, and 61 on various other targets. During the night 70 bombs were dropped by our airplanes on airbases near Courtra, eight on an aerodrome east of Lille, 28 on other targets. In air fighting yesterday five enemy machines were brought down and five driven down out of control. Three of ours are missing. Heavy rains fell during the night and again this morning. As a result of successful minor operations undertaken early this morning, our line posts were advanced slightly southwest of Lens. Later in the morning the enemy attacked our new line, but was repulsed. Enemy casualties were considerable, and a few prisoners were taken. The enemy twice attempted to raid our trenches this morning east of Armentieres. The first attempt was beaten off by rifle and machine gun fire. The enemy then subjected our positions to further intense bombardment and again attacked. On this occasion his troops succeeded in entering our trenches but at once were driven out with the bayonet. One of our men is missing. This morning attacks were carried out by us against a line of hostile points north of Frezenberg. Some progress was made after sharp fighting in the course of which a hostile counter attack delivered at midday was dispersed with heavy enemy losses. We captured 23 prisoners. Armentieres was heavily shelled by the enemy all day. The casualties caused by hostile air raids Tuesday night include 85 German prisoners, of whom 37 were killed and 48 wounded by bombs dropped from enemy airplanes.

FIGHTING FOR SAN GABRIELLE.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

The Italian troops fighting stubbornly for Monte San Gabriele on the Isonzo front, have several times captured the summit, only to be thrown back again, according to a telegram from the Austrian headquarters, says the Central News Agency correspondent. The Italians are continuing their attack upon the mountain.

THE KAISER VISITS BRUSSELS.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

It is related by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co., that when Emperor William visited Brussels last week on his way to the Flanders front the population refused to comply with the request of the authorities to display flags. Instead they remained indoors and drew their window blinds on which they inscribed "Closed for national mourning." The streets were deserted except for soldiers and police.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPELLED.

PARIS, Sept. 6.

Two German attacks on the Aisne front last night were repelled by the French. Heavy artillery fighting is taking place on the Champagne and Verdun fronts.

GERMAN FLEET PREPARING.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

It is reported from Helsingfors, Finland, that a German fleet has been observed at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Copenhagen. It is supposed, adds the despatch, that the fleet is preparing for an attack on Reval and Kronstadt, the Russian naval bases.

BRITISH RECRUITING IN U.S.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.

Brigadier General White, head of the British recruiting mission in the United States, declared on his return to New York to-day from a tour of the country, that the war feeling is deepening every day from east to west. During the trip recruiting offices were opened in most of the important cities from coast to coast. In the west we found no opposition to the war, General White said. Indeed we found plenty of enthusiasm. Some employers did not like the idea of the possibility of losing some of their men, but we impressed upon them that unskilled or semi-skilled labor could be done by women. In England we had 200,000 women workers when the war started. Now we have 400,000. British recruits are being obtained now at the rate of 100 a day throughout the country, General White said.

LOYD GEORGE TALKS.

BIRKENHEAD, Eng., Sept. 6.

Germany has not yet felt the final strain of the war, said Premier Lloyd George, speaking at the Royal National Bistodford here to-day. When she did she would feel the binding value of real freedom. If Russia had enjoyed more freedom in peace time, declared the Premier, she would have been more united for war, for unity of action was not a suppressor of freedom, but its highest expression. Speaking of the affection of the Dominions for the Mother Country, the Premier said, this would continue to grow and become deeper and more compelling as the years rolled by. This was the great day of the empire, he said. What would have happened to the liberty of nations if it had not been for the British Empire. When the war is over humanity will know how much human liberty owes to the fact that the British Empire is no sham, but a reality. Great Empires are necessary for protection and security and for strength, but small nations are necessary for concentration and intensive effort. The British Empire is made up of four nations, but they to-day are one in purpose, one in action, one in sacrifice and please God soon will be one in triumph.

JOFFE REVISITS THE SCENE OF HIS TRIUMPH.

PERECHAMP, EN-OISE, FRANCE, Sept. 6.

General Joffre to-day reviewed the scene of his triumph three years ago, when he turned back the Germans at the Marne. Escorted by other heroes of the Battle of the Marne, he travelled to the now historic grounds. From the heights near Perekamp En Oise, to Moudouard, he reviewed the scene of valor of the French troops, of which this was the third anniversary. The party was composed of President

Poincare, Generals Foch, Petain, Gouraud, Fayolle and others, Premier Ribot, Minister of War and Marine, and other men connected with the state and army life. The only speeches were those delivered by President Poincare, Premier Ribot and General Foch. It was distinctly Joffre's day, with General Foch coming in for second honors from the country. The population lined all the grounds and village streets and cheered themselves hoarse for the victors of the Marne. The rain which fell for a part of the time during the visit, failed to lessen the success of the trip or drown the enthusiasm of the speakers who extolled the far-reaching aspect of the war. General Foch, as military leader, explained how the victory was achieved.

REPLY OF CENTRAL POWERS.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

The reply of the Central Powers to Pope Benedict's peace note will be despatched in two or three days, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam to-day. Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, has arrived at Berlin, and is engaged in discussions over the reply. The Polish question is also to be discussed during his visit.

POLAND.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Sept. 6.

According to information received here from Vienna the Central Powers have decided to carry out the partition of Poland as she needs to recapture her strategic frontier, amounting to one-tenth of the territory, and Austria will annex the remaining nine tenths, Emperor Charles will promulgate a decree uniting Russian Poland with Galicia, proclaiming the whole territory to be the United Kingdom of Poland with himself as King.

INQUIRY REGARDING PLOT.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 6.

Inquiry regarding the counter-revolutionary plot recently brought to light is being energetically pursued, says an official statement issued to-day. Large sums of money intended for the furtherance of the plot have been traced not only to Petrograd but also to Moscow, Kiev, Odessa, even to Siberia. Arrests of persons charged with being implicated in the plot and searches for incriminating documents continue to be made.

"Someone Asleep"

SAY AMERICAN TROOPS.

On the Line of Communications of the American Army in France, Aug. 21.—The army behind America's fighting army needs men and supplies. It is tackling the stupendous job of supplying the fighting forces with scanty doses of labor and materials.

Throughout a trip along the "line of communications" concluded to-day the most frequent action encountered from army men was: "Some one is asleep at home." The army needs masses of labor—especially carpenters and joiners and vast supplies of all descriptions. Now is the time to send them, when the transport of troops is not occupying the bulk of the tonnage.

After six months, the rear organization of the Army is a mere framework.

The United Press correspondent has lived for a month with the American troops in the training camps. The fighting men are physically and mentally almost ready to fight. But a tour of hundreds of miles of the American bases gives the striking impression that the rear organizations are far behind their combatant brothers. For instance, a certain base battery is of makeshift appearance. It shows a couple of rows of field ovens.

The bakers until a few days ago lived in tents.

The flour supply looks big to the casual observer, but the towering flour sacks dwindle into mole hills in comparison with the amount every army officer knows must be constantly forthcoming: A hard-working reserve captain showed me over his food magazine—from which he is constantly drawing. The building is only fair-sized, and yet it is less than half-filled.

French female labor is doing steady work for this American army in the rear. Trundling crates of canned food and supplies, because of the shortage of American military labor.

The American medical base is apparently the only one which has benefited to the fullest possibility since the war. They have sufficient supplies and forces to cope with extraordinary casualties and illnesses for three months. However, shortage and cramping even here is causing the shortage of a big portion of valuable medical supplies in unvalued and un-floored sheds.

I found the aviator centre grimly amusing to leisurely German prisoners thereabouts. Scores of patriotic, alert young Americans are training at French air schools, hoping to obtain repatriation and join the American forces when they attain proficiency in the air.

Thoughts Upon the Times.

(By PATRIOT.)

House a few years ago, Mr. Coaker, in the Advocate, bitterly attacked the late administration for overlooking the fishermen and those who had helped to build up the country. He had his opportunity to prove his sincerity a week or two ago when the Business Profits Tax was before the Government. Let us see what he helped to do to them. Four new Councilors were appointed. They were Hons. S. K. Bell, a wealthy hotel proprietor; Alex. W. Mews, a young man recently made Editor of the Advocate; Tasker K. Cook, Vice Consul to Norway, and F. MacNamara, a Commission Merchant, all belonging to St. John's. Such practical fishermen as Capt. John Lewis, A. Kean, Geo. A. Buffett and William Hollett were entirely overlooked. These men, as well as the Winsors of Westleyville, have done more to build up the country in one year than the new Councilors have done all their lives. This is one of the many proofs of the insincerity of the men who make up the present Coalition Government.

The scarcity of fishery salt in the outports still continues to be a source of worry to the fishermen and all those interested in our staple industry. Thousands of quintals of fish have been lost to the fishermen by the Districts of St. Barbe, Twillingate, Fogo and Bonavista on account of there being no salt available. If the cargoes expected here shortly arrive somewhat. A delay of a few days will be serious for the northern fishermen.

The public will anxiously look forward to the report of the Board of Food Control enquiry into the recent advance in the prices of butterine, hard bread and biscuits. The advance on butterine alone means an additional cost to the people of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year.

We learn by yesterday's Advocate that the Premier left for London via New York by yesterday's express. "At New York he will arrange the million dollar loan authorized by the Legislature at its last session." This will mean eight million dollars borrowed during 1916-17. Could not this loan be floated in Newfoundland? We have the money lying in the banks at three per cent. Why does not the Government make an effort to induce our people to invest in the War Loan and thus keep the interest (which at five per cent. means one hundred and fifty thousand dollars) in the country. If our people were given the same rate of interest and security as is given the foreigners they would willingly invest their money.

The Advocate also announces that our new Minister of Militia, Hon. J. R. Bennett has gone to Ottawa to learn how to perform the duties of his office. A little while ago, Hon. P. T. McGrath was appointed Chairman of the Food Control Board and he too had to go to Canada to learn how to do his work, and presumably he is still there attending school. It will be quite in order for Mr. J. R. Goodison to take a trip to Canada for a similar purpose when he assumes his duties as Purchasing Agent for the Government. "How long, O Lord, how long" will an overburdened people stand this graballism masquerading in the name of a "National Government!"

Tea Prices

AGAIN ADVANCING!

Shipments just to hand of
Our Celebrated
MOUNT VIEW TEA

Cost us 5c. per lb. over previous shipments. We have a limited quantity left from previous shipments which we shall retail till cleaned up at and the price will then be 60c. lb.

This Tea is well worth 60c. lb. but the early buyer can save 5c. per lb. We trust that our customers will appreciate the fact that we have advised them ahead when tea prices were advancing and have protected them as far as possible. The tremendous freight rates are responsible for the rises in the price of teas. To-day the freight and insurance on a pound of tea from Ceylon is 16 cents per pound. This compares with about 8c. in normal times.

We have cheaper teas in stock than our "Mount View," but the higher grade teas are the most economical and "Mount View" Tea is becoming a great favourite and we would like you to try it.

Patriotic Football.

Notwithstanding that both teams were made up largely of substitutes, the St. Andrew's and Stars played a snappy and exciting game last evening before a fair gathering of spectators. The Saints, who had the best of the game throughout and should have won easily, scored early in the game and just before half time the Stars equalized. The result at the close was a tie, one goal each; but for the splendid exhibition given by the Star goal keeper, they would have suffered a bad defeat. The last game for the season will be played early next week between the C. E. I. and B. I. S.

Municipal Council.

The weekly session of the Municipal Board was held yesterday afternoon. M. O'Reilly was awarded contract for plumbing. It was ordered that in future all such contracts must be completed inside one month, otherwise the contractor will be penalized $2 a day for any delay over the specified time. The Council accepted gravel from the contractor of the new S. A. Citadel. Permission was asked by J. R. Johnson to build porch to house on Brans Road. Refused. Application of Mr. Brian Dunfield for position of City Solicitor was ordered to be filed. Permission was given W. H. Renne to build addition to house on Water St. opposite Knowling's West End Store. The Engineer was ordered to give street line to E. A. Soper, on Pennywell Road. Councillor Mullaly asked that Council purchase hay from local farmers. Request cannot be acceded to unless farmers reduce their price, which is $6 per ton more than the price of the imported article. A resolution respecting motor car lights was submitted by Mayor Gosling. Referred to Colonial Secretary. After reports of Council officials for the week were read, the meeting closed.

Thimbles in War.

English Woman's Inspiration That Turned Out Happily. One day an English woman who must understand her own sex very well had a beautiful, thrilling inspiration. Perhaps in her strenuous sewing for the soldiers she had discarded a punctured silver thimble for one of brass or composition. Perhaps she just stumbled upon a battered forgotten thimble which had served another generation of nimble fingers. At any rate, she decided that probably every home in her town could boast a thimble in or out of service. Now, if all these silver thimbles were gathered up, sent to a silversmith, melted and refined, they would come forth from the process—money! Money with which to buy ambulances and equip hospitals.

She began by collecting thimbles from friends and neighbours. Thimbles came rolling in from every direction. The richest and the humblest sent them. Then there were women, hundreds of them, who had no silver thimbles—and were sorry for it. They wrote, asking whether they might send other bits of silver or gold—an old silver spoon or two, a napkin ring, a cuff link, a watch charm—old-fashioned, even bent or broken, but wrought from the precious metal. The answer to such queries was always the same: "Nothing too large, nothing too small." The heaps of discarded thimbles and trinkets grew. The Mint melted them and then returned them, ingots of silver or gold. In a year "The Silver Thimble Fund" was able to dispense the following splendid charities: Seven motor ambulances. Five more hospital boats for Mesopotamia. One disinfectant. Two thousand pounds sterling to Navy Employment Agency for Disabled Sailors. Two thousand two hundred and fifty pounds sterling to the Star and Garter Fund. Ten thousand pounds sterling for disabled soldiers and sailors. Two hundred and twenty-two pounds sterling in small grants to hospitals and supply bureaus. Fifteen thousand pounds sterling, or $75,000, had been raised by gifts from those who thought they had nothing worth selling.—Woman's Home Companion.

AWARDED MASTERS' CERTIFICATE.—Two well known seamen, Albert Edgecombe and David Robertson, who have been in charge of ships employed in the foreign trade have been awarded master's certificates of competency. We congratulate the young captains.
