A Proposal.
All those owning a horse should be thoroughly posted in the different diseases this noble animal is liable to be attacked with, and the different remedies for the same. A horse that is worth having at all is worth being taken care of. The better the care the better the horse. In order that all interested may become possessed of the above information, we will send to each and every present subscriber of the Monitor who will pay up all arrears and a year in advance a copy of DR. KENDALL'S TREATISE ON THE HORSE AND HIS DISEASES, post free. Every NEW SUBSCRIBER who will send in a subscription for the ensuing year shall receive this book of 90 pages free.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE
The most successful Remedy ever discovered as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Also excellent for human Rheumatism. Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents a bottle. Two year's ago I had an acute case of spavin as ever was raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over his head and got fast and from one of his hind legs he kicked. I employed the best farrier, but they all said he was incurable. He had a very large thornapple, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the thornapple off, and he sold afterwards for $1800 dollars. I have used it for some spavins and wind balls, and it cured them completely and left the leg smooth. It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Washington & Kentucky's drug store in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it, but could not find it. I would like to see you to see that I would send you one. I wish you would, and I will do you all the good I can.
Very respectfully,

Art of Advertising.

Twenty years ago the Art of Advertising in legitimate trade was practically unknown. A few men gained princely fortunes by the liberal advertising of patent medicines, but legitimate trade shunned the newspapers as a medium of reaching out. By and by mercantile David came along with their slings, in shape of newspaper advertising, and they slew the mercantile Goliath in their paths.

Value of Manure.

Henry Stewart, in the Country Gentleman, gives his experience with hen manure as follows:— Every week the droppings are scraped up from the floor, which is of earth, and put into barrels and kept ready. The floor is well dusted then all over with hen dung from the yard outside and thrown in very easily through the window; air-stocked lines is thus dusted over this until it is quite white. The droppings fall upon the lime, and when they are gathered they are scraped up with the lime and the earth, and put into the barrels. The barrels are kept out of doors, but covered to prevent exposure to rain.

For the Ladies.

What May a Young Lady Do?

Our young correspondents ask us strange questions sometimes, occasionally throwing light on the ever vexed question of American etiquette, showing how anxious they are to do right, but also proving how far they are from apprehending what in old world customs has been always considered propriety. In our new country the relations of men and women are necessarily simpler. The whole business of etiquette is of course reduced to each one's sense of propriety, and the standard must be changed as the circumstances demand.

A young lady writes to ask us if she should take a gentleman's hat and coat when he calls. Never. Let him take care of those. Christianity and chivalry, modern and ancient custom, make a man the servant of women. The old form of salutation used by Sir Walter Raleigh and other courtiers was always "Your servant, madam," and it is the prettiest and most admirable way for a man to address a woman in any language.

In a general statement it may be as well to say that a severe etiquette would prevent a young lady from receiving gifts from a young man, except for her father's or brother's. It is not considered proper for him to offer her clothing of any sort, as gowns, bonnets, shawls, or shoes, even if he is engaged to her. She may use her discretion about accepting a camel's hair shawl from a man old enough to be her father, but she should never receive jewelry from any one but a relative, or her fiancé just before marriage. The reason for this is obvious. It has been abused—the privilege which all men desire, that of decking women with finery.

Let a young lady always remember these general principles, that men will like and respect her far better if she is extremely particular about allowing them to pay for her, if she refuses two invitations out of three, if she is dignified and reserved rather than if she is the reverse.

A young lady should not write letters to young men, or send them presents, or take the initiative in any way. A friendly correspondence is very proper if the mother approves, but even then has its dangers.

Let a young lady always remember that she is to the young man an angel to reverence, until she lessens the distance between them and extinguishes respect.

Young ladies often write to us whether it is proper for them to write letters of condolence or congratulation to ladies older than themselves. We should say, Yes. The respect of young girls is always felt gratefully by older ladies. The manners of the present are vastly to be objected to on account of a lack of respect. The rather bitter Mr. Carlyle wrote satirically of the manners of young ladies. He even had his fling at their languor. "Few are able to laugh what can be called laughing, but only sniff and titter from the throat, outward, or at best produce some whiffing, husky coughings as if they were laughing through wool. Of non-sense and non-sense, a young lady must speak too loud or be too hoarse, or she must even tone down her wit, lest she be misunderstood. But she need not be dull, or grumpy, or ill-tempered, or nervous of her manners, particularly to her mother's old friends. She must not talk slang or be in any way masculine; if she is, she loses the battle. A young lady is sometimes called upon to be a hostess, if her mother is dead. Here her liberality becomes greater, but she should always have an aunt or some elderly friend by her side to play chaperon.

A young lady may do any annual labor without losing caste. She may be a good cook, a fine housewife, a career of a painter, a sculptor, an author, a breadwinner, a writer, a physician, and she will be eligible, if her manners are good, to the best society anywhere. But if she outrages the laws of good-breeding in the place where she is, she cannot expect to take her place in society. Should she be seen at Newport, driving two gentlemen in her pony-phæton, or should she and another young woman take a gentleman between them and drive down Bellevue Avenue, she would be tabooed. It would not be a wicked set, but it would not look well; it would not be congenial. If she dresses loudly, with peculiar taste and a suspicious complexion, she must take the consequences. She must be careful if she is unknown to attempt to follow the fancies of well-known fashionable women. What will be forgiven to Mrs. Well known. Upright will never be forgiven to Miss Society in this respect is very unjust—the world is always unjust—but that is a part of the truth of etiquette which is to be remembered, it is founded on the accidental conditions of society, having for its background, however, the eternal principles of kindness, politeness, and the greatest good of society. But its laws do not include poetic justice; that is reserved for the possible Utopia which we have not yet reached.

A young lady who is very prominent in society should not make herself too common; she should not appear in too many charades, private theatricals, tableaux, etc. She should think of the "violet by the mossy stone." She must also at a watering place remember that every set of her who is not all friendly, and she must, ere she allows herself to be too much of a belle, remember to be a little envious tongue.

To clean Black Cloth: Dissolve one ounce of carbonate of ammonia in one quart of water. With this liquid rub the cloth, using a piece of flannel or block cloth for the purpose. After the application of this solution, clean the cloth well with clean water; dry it, and brush the cloth from time to time in the direction of the fibre.

Says a French critic: "I like a girl before she becomes womanish, and when she does get girlish."

When the dog gets after the boy in the melon patch, and there are no trees handy, he sings: "Oh, for the garden wall."

Praying Against Time. Talking against time is common in Congress, but praying against time is the device of a clever Brooklyn child, who will know how to get his rights when the comes in sight of them.

The fire burned low in the Franklin town, the cat was asleep on the rug, and not a mouse stirred behind the wainscot as the mother wrote by a shaded lamp with a noiseless pen. All the house put on slippers of velvet when little Rose went to bed, and she and her enemies, and she fought him to the last eyelash. Her voice came from the bed-room now with no sound of carriage in it. It was better to be at prayer than to be asleep, and of course no one could reprove her for praying.

"O Lord," said she make me good, and let me go in the omnibus to see Aunt Margie and all the aunts and nieces and mothers. Make me so well that I can go in the omnibus; please do. Bless grandpa and grandmas, Aunt Kate and Aunt Sophia."

Another pause, a little longer than the first, and the unconquered began again.

"I long for apples. I long for milk. I long for pie. I long to be good. I wish I had not that cold. I long for some water. I long for some wine. I long for some brown bread. I long for some molasses. I long for some white bread. I long to be a woman. I thank Thee that it did not rain or snow. Give me a clean shirt. Let me be good when papa is here, for it grieves me to see him naughty, and he buys me things—playthings. I have prayed that I should go to sleep. That makes three prayers."

"A jaw, a long-drawn breath, and then silence presently, as though the last prayer was answered, and sleep reigned."

As some lady visitors were going through a penitentiary under the escort of a superintendent, they came to a room in which three women were sewing. "Dear me," one of the women whispered, "what vicious looking creatures? Pray what are they here for?" "Because they have no other home; this is our sitting-room, and they are my wife and two daughters," loudly announced a superintendent.

"I know a victim of tobacco," said a lecturer, "who has'n't tasted food for over thirty years." "How do you know he hasn't?" asked an auditor. "—Because tobacco killed him in 1850," was the reply.

"Did you know," said a cunning Gentle to a Jew, "that they hang Jews and Jackasses together in Portland?" "Indeed," replied Solomon, "den it I shan't tell you and I shan't dare."
