ST. JOHN, N. B., NOVEMBER 16, 1904.

NARROW VIEWS

Some provincial newspapers are expressing rather narrow views of national affairs since the election. By some it is suggested that the West is going to control Canada hereafter, to the detriment of the East. By some it is hinted that the Dominion will be governed largely by Nova Scotia and that Halifax will profit immensely through Mr. Fielding's great and increasing influence. The development of the West should, and no doubt will, be accompanied by a considerable development of the East, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick included. The Telegraph fought the governor's railway policy from the first, yet it can see no reason why St. John should now suffer more than Halifax because of the outstanding weakness of the railroad policy. St. John business men have never expected that this port should be favored at the expense of Halifax, but they have insisted and will insist that St. John has certain geographical advantages which are valuable to Canada and to its own citizens, and which must ultimately count in its favor. Until the surveys have been completed and a route definitely laid down, many points in connection with the transcontinental matter will be regarded as unsettled. That Portland has certain advantages which is was unnecessary to concede in the general opinion both here and in Portland.

CURIOUS RESULTS

William L. Douglas, Democratic governor-elect of Massachusetts, claims that his election is due to the advocacy of reciprocity. It is to be feared that Mr. Douglas sees things not as they are, but as he wishes to see them. It will not be his business to revise the tariff, but that of Mr. Roosevelt, whom no one has yet accused of yearning for reciprocity. Yet Massachusetts gave Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of 85,000, where it gave Mr. Douglas one of 25,000. On this basis the anti-reciprocity sentiment of the state is more than three times as great as that in favor of reciprocity—Montreal Gazette.

ANOTHER PESSIMIST

"War is the only cure for war," is the view of Sir James Kison, the British minister, who was interviewed in New York the other day and asked for his opinion of the coming peace conference. Sir James is a friend of Mr. Andrew Carnegie, but he says Mr. Carnegie is only dreaming when he professes to see signs of a general abandonment of war as a means of deciding quarrels between nations. Sir James even says the idea has no practical value. In the end, he says, men will fight; brute force is the recognized right when great differences arise between nations. But Sir James, who makes guns and armor, believes deadly weapons may cause the nations to think twice as long about fighting as they formerly did.

THE BLOOM OF GOLDWIN

Goldwin Smith is a brilliant man but a gloomy one. Frankly speaking he is one of the poorest speakers in the Canadian Club. He despised the enlightenment of his fellow citizens, they who heard and they who read may be pardoned if they suspect the professor of dwelling too much on the dark side of the picture. The distinguished lecturer, after prophesying that dire things are going to come to pass within a generation, said he wished he could look in upon twenty years hence and see how we were making out. Mr. Smith expects, naturally enough, that he will die before very long. We hope he will be long spared—but, if he does and things go as far wrong as he suspects they will, it would be small satisfaction to him, and none at all to us, to have him look in and see the wheels go round.

A GREAT LOSS, IF TRUE

Japan is struck in great quarters, but she has lost a man who will be missed in the Russian report of General Baron Kuroki's death is true. There was a rumor, some weeks ago, that the commander of the Army of the Yalu had been wounded during the ten days' battle at Liao Yang, but it has lacked definite confirmation. Now comes a Russian correspondent's story that Kuroki died early in October, from wounds caused by a bursting shell. The Japanese will deny or confirm the story at once, probably. It seems odd that the death of so prominent a soldier should or could have been concealed for so long.

From the beginning of the war Kuroki has been a conspicuous figure. A man of sixty, of a fighting faith, the son of a Pole who had a score to settle with Russia, Kuroki won distinction in Manchuria ten years ago, when Japan whipped China. In March last he led the Japanese army—the first Army—that crossed the Yalu, and won its way through the most arduous struggle to participate in the great struggle about Liao Yang. Kuroki became known as a great flanker. His great march around the Russian left made it necessary for Kuroki to abandon Liao Yang and cross the Taïtse river to avoid having his line of communication cut behind him.

Kuroki may be dead. If he is, Oyama, Oku, Nodzu, Nogi and many others remain. Japan seems to have thrust great responsibilities upon many commanders; and thus far none of them has proved a broken reed.

NORE "FLAG INCIDENTS"

Mr. William Robinson, formerly a subject of King Edward, went through the naturalization mill in Winsted (Conn.), the other day, and so became a citizen of the United States. This argued a good deal in Mr. Robinson, and, a little later when a political parade was passing, he decorated his house with a British flag and a Stars and Stripes. The flags hung side by side, and Robinson, who had paid the highest possible tribute to the United States by foolishly foregoing his allegiance to the King, meant no harm by displaying the bunting. A crowd gathered before the house and demanded that the British flag be removed. Robinson the recreant refused. The crowd became violent, but before an ambulance was needed, one entered by a rear door and threw down the British colors. The crowd cheered. Robinson was saved. Again there was peace in Winsted. Later on some Winsted girls will write a "poem" to him.

WHY DELAY?

Before very long every enlightened citizen will support health resorts for the cure of consumption and enforce precautions against the spread of the disease. The work will not be merely philanthropic; it will be carried on for economic reasons as well, just as in future the more efficient military powers will copy and improve upon Japanese sanitary plans for troops in the field. The wisest nations will be the first to eradicate consumption; the others will follow in time and be terribly punished in the interim for their ignorance and neglect. The subject is of pressing inter-

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Mrs. Olive, secretary of the Tourist Association, is criticized by the Fredericton Gleamer for saying that better steamers and hotels are required for the accommodation of St. John river tourists. The Gleamer defends the Fredericton hotels. Mrs. Olive admitted that Fredericton has some good hotels. Her principal contention is sound enough. The hotel and steamship people do not meet the demands of tourist travel or come anywhere near it, and the mistake is an injury to the province.

The tremendous popular majority for President Roosevelt—thought by the largest in the history of the Republic—brings Mr. W. J. Bryan to the surface of the political pond like a cork. The nomination of Judge Parker was supposed to mark the end of Bryanism; but the vote seems to have an opposite effect.—Toronto News.

Indeed Mr. Bryan is generally hailed as the next candidate of the anti-trust party—whatever it may be called. Under his banner many good men will fight, but with them will be all the dangerous elements in the Republic. Property will be put on its defence.

The helpful manner in which The Telegraph is laboring to get out the facts (in the Library market) must be greatly appreciated by the people.—Globe.

No doubt; no doubt; although the appearance of the Globe office is not so hearty as we had looked for. That there was much delay and that there has been much complaint are facts agreed upon. Now if the Globe has other facts—facts to back up its insinuations, that there is a scandal in the Library business—let the Globe produce them. If there is a hidden job the public should know all about it.

When a few days or weeks hence Japan has possessed herself a second time of Port Arthur, one of the prizes of her victorious arms, but of which she was ignorant, because she is the power, or the combination of powers that will attempt to wrest it from her? And should the attempt be made, what would be the chances of success, when she almost in probable defiance are guarded by the assault, such men as the victors of the Yalu River, of Nanchang Hill, of Liao Yang, of Shinko River—Changchun-tsun Guardian.

Japan did not go to war lightly. It is not probable that she will quit until she is satisfied that the problem of Corea and Manchuria is settled to her satisfaction. Russia may desire interference. Japan is likely to resist it unless the terms are wholly satisfactory to her.

Perhaps Goldwin Smith, like a few other people on both sides of the international boundary, believes the annexation snake is scotched merely, and not killed. If so he is vastly mistaken. Could Mr. Smith be twenty years longer in Canada he might imbibe a little patriotism. Mr. Gladstone, the Globe will notice, made his suggestion about union nearly forty years ago. No one supposes we take it, that he would give us a reply to his question. There never was a suggestion more unpalatable to Canadians.

A civic deputation, including Mayor Ellis and several of the city aldermen, called on the president of the Ottawa Electric Railway today to learn upon what terms the latter would sell out to the city. The head of the company asked time to submit a reply to the city's question. The road is earning a large dividend and the general expectation is that it will ask a very large figure for its plant and franchise, which has yet twenty years to run. If terms are agreed on the question of buying the street railway will be submitted to the voters at the next municipal elections.—Ottawa Journal.

The company may want a long price, but there is no harm in asking. It has been said that St. John might have bought the local street railway's plant and franchise a few years ago for a price which would now be regarded as very reasonable.

A NEW PHASE OF THE WAR

The war report on the front that the world must have news, even on dull days. Hence the newspapers received, on Saturday, Nov. 12—quiet continues everywhere along the front. The weather has become almost like summer. One large village to the south is occupied half by Russians and half by Japanese. Both sides sit in their huts and shout "Get out of here!" "This is our village!" yell the Japanese. "Get out yourselves," answer the Russians. Then follow volleys of abuse. Perhaps so. But it sounds more like a woman's quarrel over possession of a clothesline. And since these gentlemen are not enough to exchange abuse (neither understanding a word the other says) one wonders why they have not come to blows, or bullets, or bayonets. The correspondent probably thought this was better than nothing; and so it is—but not much.

ST. JOHN MARKETS

Review of Conditions in Leading Lines—The Prices.

The most sensational feature in the market this month has been undoubtedly the unprecedented rise in the price of sugar. A further rise of 10 cents per 100 pounds took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Acadia refinery advancing its price for refined sugars that much. This makes a total advance of 45 cents this month in the local market. The dates on which these advances took place were Nov. 1, 10 cents; Nov. 8, 10 cents; Nov. 12, 15 cents and the rise of 10 cents yesterday. The refinery says the advance is due to a combination of reasons, but all signs point to still higher prices.

The flour market remains unchanged but firm. The outlook on Ontario wheat is being very well supplied as it is, and the outlook is not very bright for Christmas. Still it will be a few days before for Christmas when the supplies begin to pour in and the refinery was relieved.

Very little change has taken place in the produce market. The scarcity of turkeys in the Atlantic market has induced some buyers to cross the international boundary to get well supplied as it is, and the outlook is not very bright for Christmas. Still it will be a few days before for Christmas when the supplies begin to pour in and the refinery was relieved.

For some time now cheese has been advancing in price, the quotations now being 10 to 15 cents a pound. The following are the principal wholesale quotations yesterday:—

GENERAL KUROKI KILLED BY SHELL

Confirmation of the Report is Given—Breast and Abdomen Torn Open in Fight of Oct. 4—Nodsu His Actual Successor, Though Another Holds Honorary Rank.

BARON KUROKI, Japanese General Reported Killed by Russian Shell.

Log from Mukden under today's date, says the reports of the death of General Kuroki are confirmed.

According to his version the splinter of a shell struck General Kuroki, tearing open a portion of his breast and abdomen. He died Oct. 4 at Liao Yang, and his body was sent to Japan.

A rumor is persistently circulated that a kinsman of the Mikado, Sissonnai, literally "little third prince," has been appointed to succeed General Kuroki, but the actual command of the army has been entrusted to General Nodsu, who is reviewing operations.

"The last five weeks," says Danleber, "we have practically not advanced an inch in the whole southern front, even a few yards. On the contrary we at several places have been obliged to retire several yards, but the present lines of defence must be considered permanent in view of the strong fortifications constructed."

Japs Close at Hand.

The Japanese positions at several points are only 800 paces distant from ours, and must be considered to be definitely occupied by the enemy. The latter's fortifications are acknowledged by all competent persons to be skillfully constructed. Their trenches in many places are so cleverly concealed as not to be noticeable until distance away the earth removed being carefully thrown in front of the trenches. The general position causes a great tension on both sides.

Port Arthur, but the absence of reports during the last few days makes it evident that the movement of the other Russian armies will be dependent on the course of events there.

"On Nov. 11 our forces on the right flank attempted to pierce the line of the Japanese, but were met with stubborn resistance and, finding the enemy strongly reinforced, retired."

WOULD REGULATE PRICES OF NECESSITIES

Boston Labor Union Will Petition Legislature to Pass Bill to Prevent Exorbitant Prices.

Boston, Nov. 14—It is time for the state to take a hand and regulate the selling prices of foodstuffs, light and fuel, the Boston building trades council believes, and yesterday went on record as favoring action by the next legislature.

The idea of creating a council was expressed in the following resolution: "In view of the fact that when necessities of life, such as foodstuffs, light and fuel, are needed the most and cannot be well dispensed with, the prices are put to such exorbitant figures that after purchasing the same it leaves the wage-earner no income for anything else it must be on the credit plan from which indebtedness he finds it hard to extricate himself, even in the strictest economy and self-denial; he is therefore requested to create a commission to be appointed by the governor, whose duty it shall be to regulate the selling prices of foodstuffs, light and fuel for the different seasons of the year, the same to be fixed and published by the purchaser and leave an honest profit to the dealer, also that all persons engaged in such trade as dealers in foodstuffs, light and fuel must receive a license or permit from the commission before they can transact any business in the sale of such commodities, and that any person charging in excess of the price of foodstuffs, light and fuel as fixed by the commission shall be under the penalty of losing his or his license to do business in such trade, and be further resolved, that a committee be appointed by this council to draw up a petition to the legislature to pass a bill to regulate the prices of necessities of life, and to petition the legislature to have it or some such similar bill enacted as a rule that they are without much foundation."

GAMING SCANDAL AT LONDON CLUB

Young Man Well Known in Social World Reported to Have Won $70,000 in a Short Time at Hitherto Unsuspected Place.

London, Nov. 15—Much surprise is expressed at the discovery of heavy gambling at a certain very old established London club, where it was thought such a thing was not permitted.

It is understood that a young man well known in the social world won the sum of $70,000 in a very short space of time, which young fellow was said to have lost $20,000 one night's play, while with another man he had just touched and got as to whether he had lost $10,000, when he looked at his watch, and saw, "as they say in sporting circles," that his pocket was empty. Heavy scandals in connection with the cards, but his subject and petition the legislature to have it or some such similar bill enacted as a rule that they are without much foundation.

LOCAL AND PROVINCIAL

Announcement was made in the last number of the Chatham Advance that its publication is for the present discontinued.

The capital stock of the newly incorporated Adams-Burns Co., Ltd., is $175,000 divided into 1,750 shares of $100 each, instead of $15,000 as reported.

F. A. Barbour, the engineer who planned and is supervising the St. John water works extension, has been engaged by the Halifax city council to report on the water service of that city.

Caleb Vanwart, of 126 Adelaide street, who is employed on the tugboat Hero, was struck with paralysis at Fredericton last week. He was taken to the Victoria Hospital in Fredericton. Mrs. Vanwart is now with her husband.

The prospect of an early closing of navigation on the river has caused considerable activity around the wharves and produce stores at Digbytown. Although little early for the winter to freeze over, reports have been coming down river of ice an inch and two inches thick in places, and lumber merchants and tug boat owners have naturally been anxious to bring down as many rafts and scows as possible.

At a meeting of the school trustees the following are the figures submitted by Secretary Manning for the month of October: Enrollment, 7,239; daily average attendance, 6,377, being 87.1 per cent. of the whole. The day was the only school with a low attendance during the month, and as this was owing to the diphtheria scare which was now declared over, it is hoped the figures will soon be normal again.

The steamboats all made their trips up river on Saturday, though it was uncertain in some cases they would reach their destinations. Considerable ice was reported below Fredericton and to ensure a clear passage the newly purchased steel steamer of the Star Line, the Pokanoket, was sent up early on Saturday morning ahead of the Victoria, the Champlain joining the procession at Gagetown.

The following buildings were either destroyed by fire or damaged by water in Monday morning's blizz: S. A. Fowler's sawmill, with saws and logs, valued at $1,500; insurance on contents of sawmill $4,000 in the Guardian; W. H. Bell and O. B. Akerman's barn, a total loss, valued at $1,000; insurance $2,000; Mr. Akerman lost one horse and a quantity of harness, valued at $800; Bradford Bell's horse, which was rescued, were in a barn belonging to the Barnett estate. The barn is a total loss. John Drury & Son had on the building $800 in the Aetna and $700 in the Canadian; W. H. Thorne & Co. had $200 on the barn in the Aetna. The total insurance on the property burned is $5,700, and the total loss is estimated at $8,000.

The members of the local government will be here Wednesday evening for a meeting of the commission of the hospital for nervous diseases.

Shares of the Lawton Company, Ltd., woodworking factory offered for sale at Chubb's corner Saturday by Auctioneer Lantam were withdrawn at $20. The par value is $25.

Seven deaths occurred in the city last week. The causes were: Consumption, 2; old age, 1; pneumonia, 1; chronic bronchitis, and congestion of the lungs, one each.

On Saturday evening a considerable sum of money in bills was picked up on the floor of John McMillin's store, Indian-town. The finder handed the bills over to Mr. McMillin, but probably before this the lady who dropped them will have discovered her loss and recovered her property.

Wednesday afternoon in the Congress street Methodist church, Portland (Me.), Miss Grace Amelia Lord, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basiah Lord, was united in marriage to John Edward McKelvey, of Boston. The church was beautifully decorated. Rev. Claude H. Priddy, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The board of fire underwriters at a meeting Monday morning decided to grant to Monneton an extension of time until November 28 to complete their new plans. The main reason for this was that the work had not yet been completed by November 1, but the board felt that that could be done without being done.

The reports from various provincial towns where the underwriters asked certain improvements in the fire protection are in most cases the board's requests are being met.

SATURDAY NIGHT BANK BUSINESS

An Innovation in St. John-- Promises Well, Says the Manager.

A new departure in banking in St. John was inaugurated Saturday night by the Bank of British North America, when their newly established branch at Golden Ball corner was kept open from 8 to 10 o'clock p. m.

Manager Haven, of the St. John agency of the bank, has opened the sub-office, where E. Clinton Brown's drug store formerly was, and said Saturday night that he expected there would be a good business done there. Besides, a bank agency in that section of the city was an innovation, and was in keeping with the trend of trade towards that quarter.

HALIFAX BABY HAS AWFUL DEATH

Lanlan, aged two years and ten months, died at the home of his parents today under particularly sad circumstances. The little fellow, who was very bright for his age, was playing alone about the house Friday when he backed into a bucket of hot water which his mother had just placed on the floor preparatory to scrubbing.

The Eleventh Hour

BY SIR WILLIAM MAGNAY, BART

Author of "The Red Chancellor," "The Fall of a Star," "The Heiress of the Season" etc.

Hascombe rose. "This is right and brave of you, Jack," he said, his face lighting up as the reflected brightness of a good action. "But are you sure?" "Sure? I am sure; that there is a girl who might be a lady, a sensitive, refined girl, forced through my shuffling and sin of omission to go through the ordeal of the parish, and to live in a wretched room which makes me sick to think of. Paul, like a good fellow, go now; don't wait. I would not ask you; it is not cowardice this time, only if I go to the Griseale, will make a scene, and excitement will kill him."

chief advantages is that it can afford to leave itself to be stepped nearer and caught up her hand. "Barbara," he said, "how good you are to me!" As he was raising his hand to his lips she snatched it away, and looking up at her face in disappointment and contrition, his eyes, guided by hers, to the door. It had opened, and Sybil's Caspari stood in the room. Her face except perhaps to Hascombe's accusing fancy, bore no expression of any kind. The greeting between the two girls, who had a slight acquaintance, was pleasant enough to pleasant, Hascombe thought, on Sybil's side; as for Barbara, she was unshakable as for any reason why it should be otherwise. "I must apologize for walking in unceremoniously," Sybil said in a tone of apology, "but I might find him here, and as I am rather in a hurry to get back to the West-end, I ran up quickly."

remonstrated. "Don't fall back to that hideous cynical fallacy. Are the things of this world to make a man show an absolute reckless disregard for the next?" "It is all very well for you to talk like that, Paul, but — he stopped, removed, being certain signs that he had noticed. "I know what you think, Jack," Hascombe said, not suspecting the reason of the other's breaking off. "You look upon me as a man who cannot sympathize with you, who finds it very easy to give you cold-blooded advice, inasmuch as he has never felt as you do. Don't be too sure that if my wife were laid here before you — I mean the life as is known only to myself and my Maker — you might find more reason than you dream of for looking for sympathy from me, sympathizing in the real sense of the word." He paused, and for a few moments both were silent. Then Hascombe went on. "Now, Jack, my dear friend, don't let this turn make you reckless, even if it is worse than I believe it to be. Don't let a trial be a stumbling-block; have patience and trust that all will be well."

STORM WRECKS NEW HOSPITAL BUILDING (Continued from Page 1) The gale which blew all Sunday night and through the greater part of Monday, was assisted in its work of destruction by a heavy fall of wet snow, which clinging to the wires, by its weight broke the lighter ones in many places, and put such a strain upon the whole line that in many place long stretches of poles and wires lay on the ground, with wires tangled and grounded. The gangs now at work will be reinforced at daylight, and there is an excellent prospect for the resumption of traffic a little after noon of today with Boston, Montreal and all western Canadian and American points. Manager Snyder went over the line to Greenville yesterday taking out a repair crew and augmenting it wherever men could be secured. The Telephone Service. The New Brunswick Telephone Company did not suffer very severely in the city beyond the swinging of the wires, and this trouble did not last very long, and a good city service was maintained. The Woodstock and Carleton lines out of Fredericton in the management of the lines Communication with Shediac, Buctouche and Amherst could be obtained last evening, but not further than Amherst. It is expected that the management of the lines will be all in good order by noon today, as a large crew of men are out on the road looking after what trouble might have been caused. In the city a very little damage was done. The plate glass window of G. L. P. Swetka's grocery store, Paradise Row, was cracked. The steamer St. Croix sailed on time for Boston and Maine ports. The steamer Prince Rupert remained in port as there was a tremendous sea in the bay.

His companion, digging parallel with him on the next row, passed sympathetically. "It'll be all in good order by noon today, as a large crew of men are out on the road looking after what trouble might have been caused. In the city a very little damage was done. FEARFUL ON RIVER

Steamers Had Rough Time-- Waring Had Boat Swept from Deck and Disabled. The men on river boats, when they reached Indiantown Monday reported one of the worst storms Sunday night on the river for years. The Victoria, as she lay at the dock on Sunday night, lost two of her lines and was in danger of going adrift in the gale. The Beatrice Waring, however, suffered the most. She was exposed to the full force of the gale and at times the waves broke her shiver from stem to stern. About 10 o'clock Monday morning while coming down the river the wind was at its height and a boat was torn from its moorings on the hurricane deck and carried away. It was useless to attempt to recover it as it was exposed to the waves, drifted across to the farther shore five miles lower down. To add to the disaster the centre rudder chain broke with the force of the waves, and with some difficulty the Waring was brought down to the Public Landing and moored to the wharf.

Col. D. R. Anthony of the Leavenworth Times Dies in That City

SUSAN ANTHONY'S BROTHER

His Career, Which Was a Stormy One, Earned for Him the Name of "Fighting Dan Anthony"...

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 12.—Colonel D. R. Anthony, the noted editor of the Leavenworth Times, and brother of Miss Susan B. Anthony, the woman suffragist, died in his home here this morning of heart disease, aged eighty years.

Almost from the time he reached manhood, and especially during the many years that he conducted the Leavenworth Times, Col. Anthony's career was a stormy one. His many street encounters, in which, frequently, pistols and knives were used, earned for him the name of "Fighting Dan Anthony."

Born in South Adams (Mass.), on Aug. 22, 1824, Col. Anthony was brought up to follow a merchant's life, as his father had done. After a common school education, he took his place behind the counter of his father's store, but his restless spirit soon tired of the dull life there, and at the age of thirteen he decided to seek his fortune in the west.

With a party, headed by Eli Thayer, who afterward founded the city of Lawrence, young Anthony went to Kansas. During the short time he stayed there he became impressed by the condition of the slaves, and when he returned to his native town a few years later, he was one of the loudest voices lifted against slavery.

After spending three years in his father's store, Anthony, in 1837, again started for the west. He lived in Leavenworth until the outbreak of the civil war, when he was made lieutenant-colonel of the First Kansas Cavalry, afterward known as the Seventh Kansas Volunteers.

In November, 1861, at the battle of the Little Blue, he won a decisive victory over a force of guerrillas four times as strong. While in command of Gen. Mitchell's brigade in Tennessee, Col. Anthony created great commotion by forbidding any soldier or officer to return a fugitive slave.

By his refusal to countermand that order he incurred the displeasure of his superior officer and was arrested. He was returned to active service in six days, however.

At the close of the war Col. Anthony went to Leavenworth and became a factor in politics. He was made postmaster and later was elected mayor. While in office he was again arrested, because of a clash with the military authorities. He was quickly released, however, when the citizens sent a petition to the president.

From 1880 to 1892 Col. Anthony served as president of the Republican state convention. He was also one of the electors of the state who voted for President Grant. In 1872 he was elected mayor of Leavenworth, and served for two years. After that he devoted his energies to the publication of the Leavenworth Times, which he had established before the war, using his columns successfully in an effort to make his son a congressman.

Col. Anthony made many enemies, and numerous stories are told about his encounters. His capture of the confederate flag, attended by the shooting of Satterlee, a Leavenworth editor, is famous throughout Kansas. Later he had a street duel with Major Johnson over an editorial, in which six shots were fired on each side. He had another encounter with an Indian agent, in which pistol shots were exchanged, but was never seriously hurt, until, in 1872, he was shot by another editor. His life was despaired of at the time, but he recovered in three weeks. He had several other encounters, in which pistol shots were fired, the most notable being his fight with ex-Sheriff Bond. Anthony did his best to kill Bond, but was prevented by a friend.

Col. Anthony was married on Jan. 21, 1864, to Annie Osborn.

ALBERT COUNTY FARMERS' MEETINGS

Officers Elected and Instructive Addresses Delivered by Various Agriculturists.

Hopewell Hill, Nov. 12.—The annual meeting of the Albert Agricultural Society, No. 58, was held this evening, and the following officers elected: W. T. Wright, president; C. C. West, secretary; treasurer, Fred Smith, depository, Ora Milton, auditor; Geo. M. Russell, Geo. H. Peck, R. Chesley Smith, Luther Archibald, Albert Newcomb, W. B. Keiver, A. S. Milton, Byron Peck and Job Stiles, directors.

On Friday evening a largely attended meeting of the Hillsboro and Hopewell Farmers' Institute was held in the I. O. G. T. here. The speakers of the evening were Major Sheppard, of Queenstown (Ont.), and F. E. Sharp, of Kings county. R. Chesley Smith occupied the chair.

Mr. Sheppard dealt with the cultivation of the soil, a question which he claimed was of great importance. Prosperity depends on the farmer, and hard times invariably follow poor crops. Although the cultivator of the soil was necessarily confined on in a different manner in different localities according to the nature of the soil, still the same general principles prevail. Much land was cropped to death and could only be brought back to a proper state of fertility by high class farming. Of course the mineral ingredients of the soil are not exhausted, but the humus, the decayed vegetable matter so necessary for plant growth, is so nearly exhausted as to render the soil practically barren.

In endeavoring to reclaim worn out soil the speaker claimed it was a mistake to plow deep and bring up the cold, raw soil. The idea should be to get vegetation on the soil, and the land should be plowed in the latter part of August, or first of September, the furrow being so shallow as to simply turn the surface of the soil. This should be ridged up in the fall, and harrowed thoroughly in the spring.

The speaker advocated a regular rotation of crops—some three to five years rotation. On his own farm he practiced the four years' rotation, which had proved very satisfactory. The first year after breaking up the pasture land, in the manner described, a hoe crop was planted, this being followed by grain, clover and pasture, the clover roots being finally plowed under. Many poor farms had been brought into good condition without the use of manure. It should be the aim of the farmer to conserve heat and moisture, which could be done by a continual cultivating of the surface.

This process had the effect of preventing the escape of the natural moisture of the soil by destroying the capillary attraction at the surface, and also turned the heated soil under, allowing the new surface to heat.

Mr. Sharp spoke very entertainingly on the subject of poultry raising. This industry had the double purpose of producing eggs and the raising and fattening of chickens for the market.

In order that the hens might lay in the winter season, when prices were up, the natural summer conditions should be reproduced as far as possible. The roosting portion of the pen should be warm. A good plan of feeding was to give the hens in the morning soaked up raw vegetables of any kind; at noon a warm mash of oats, ground fine, with skimmed milk, to which a little buckwheat meal could be profitably added, and in the afternoon a handful of grain for each hen, sowed on the floor of the pen, among the straw and litter. The hens should also have plenty of pure water.

In fattening chickens for market, coops should be used of one, two or three compartments, and the chickens fed for twenty-one to twenty-nine days. It was remarkable how much they would increase in weight in that time. Good chickens should weigh from eight to eleven pounds per pair. Desirable breeds were Plymouth Rock, White Wyandotte and Buff Orpington.

Mr. Sharp thought that considerable credit should be given the department of agriculture for the interest taken in the matter of poultry raising.

A number of questions by those present were asked, and the meeting closed with the national anthem.

SALISBURY SCHOOL HOUSE BURNED DOWN

Slight Blaze in the Building the Day Before, Thought to Have Ought Again—Insurance $2,000.

Moncton, Nov. 11.—(Special)—The school house at Salisbury was destroyed by fire early this morning.

Yesterday afternoon fire was discovered between the boards on the floor but it was supposed to be put out. It is thought a smoldering spark started the fire, which burned the building.

Three departments were in the building, which was known as examination hall. The insurance is $2,000.

Inspector O'Brien went to Salisbury today to make arrangements for another school.

Drowned Her Babe in a Well.

Halifax, Nov. 11.—(Special)—Mrs. Corbal, wife of Thomas F. Corbal, who resides on Oxford avenue, drowned her six months old child in a well near her home and attempted drowning herself this evening.

Mrs. Corbal, whose mind is unbalanced, entered a neighbor's home soon after committing the deed with her clothes dripping with water and informed those in the house what she had done. The neighbors were horrified at her statement and on investigating found the body of the little victim.

The medical examiner was notified but owing to the woman's condition no action was taken to arrest her.

The Stacksville Football Club has written to the Trinity team here, asking for a game on Thanksgiving day. It may be arranged.

Arthur Frauley, of St. George, is at the Duffin.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Wm. Lowrey, South Bay.

Twelve years of most happy married life were brought to an abrupt termination early Friday morning by the sudden and unexpected death of Jessie C., beloved wife of William Lowrey, of South Bay, St. John county. The deceased had been feeling more or less unable to attend to her usual household duties during the past few weeks, but as she suffered neither pain nor ache she always expected the little trouble to get better of itself.

Wednesday Mrs. Lowrey was very weak. Thursday evening the doctor found her better than on the previous two days. Early Friday morning she awoke her husband as was her usual custom. She talked with him and told him that she felt a great deal better than on the two previous days.

Mr. Lowrey left for down stairs, where he prepared some breakfast for himself and wife. Before going to his wife's room he found her lying on the floor in a cheerful spirit only a few minutes before, now lying on her back, cold in death.

Before her marriage Mrs. Lowrey successfully taught school for seven years at her early home, Bass River, Kent county, where she was Miss Jessie C. Macdonald, one of Kent county's thrifty farmers.

Mrs. Lowrey left neither children nor blood relatives. Both her parents are dead.

Amos Smith. Shediac, N. B., Nov. 10.—The death occurred on Sunday morning last, at home on the Dorchester road, of Amos Smith, one of the oldest settlers of that part of the county. Mr. Smith, who had attained the age of eighty years, was highly respected by all who knew him. He had been in failing health since early spring.

Deceased leaves a widow, five sons and two grandsons. The funeral took place on Wednesday at the Baptist burying ground, Shediac Cape.

Mrs. Joseph Hogg. Mrs. Joseph Hogg, who died in Winnipeg on Nov. 8, had been ill some time, but her death was unexpected. She was the wife of Rev. Joseph Hogg, who, as well as several children, survives. Rev. Mr. Hogg was formerly stationed in the Presbyterian church, Moncton.

Edmund J. Goldie. The death of Edmund Joseph Goldie, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Goldie, of Carleton, Thursday was the result of an accident. The little fellow, who was playing about the kitchen floor, got in the way and a quantity of hot water was spilled over him, burning the child's back badly. The cause of the accident was the steam boiler, which had become so hot that it emitted a sufficiency of steam to cause death, but they brought on other troubles.

George R. Davis. George R. Davis, of the Davis Specialty Company, Toronto, died suddenly at his residence here Thursday night. Heart failure was the cause of death. Mr. Davis was well known in St. John and friends throughout the maritime provinces were grief-stricken by his death. Twenty and more years ago he lived in Amherst, and from there came to St. John. For a long time he was engaged in the piano business, or three years ago he went to Upper Canada. A daughter of Mr. Davis is the wife of George Briggs, commercial man, and is now living in Toronto with her husband.

Clarence Chisholm. Truro, N. S., Nov. 14.—(Special)—A telegram announces the death in the North-west of Clarence Chisholm, son of William Chisholm, of Highland Village. Young Chisholm was in poor health and went west on the harvest excursion thinking the trip would do him good. The body will be brought home for interment.

Miss Mary A. Stanton. One of St. John's oldest residents died Sunday night at the residence of Mrs. T. W. Seeds, 345 Duke street, in the person of Miss Mary A. Stanton, aged eighty-eight years. Miss Stanton was the only surviving member of the family of the late Benjamin Stanton who it is stated was the first male child born in St. John after the arrival of the Loyalists.

Mrs. J. R. Jago. Mrs. J. R. Jago, widow of Colonel Jago, died here Monday. Colonel Jago came here from England in the sixties as a subaltern in the field division of the Royal Artillery. Subsequently he received an appointment in the Canadian militia as captain and then as assistant adjutant for New Brunswick. Later he received his colonelcy and returned to England in 1875.

His wife, who is a daughter of the late A. Mills, a son survives, Jarold D. Jago, ex-warden of Fredericton, and now residing near the capital.

George Ade on Literature. George Ade was talking in Boston about literature. He had decided tastes. The modern writers whom the most admired were W. W. Jacobs, Guy de Maupassant, H. G. Wells and Pierre Loti. The name of a certain well-known but little read novelist came up, and Mr. Ade said: "As is good, but I can't stand his affectations. Almost effeminate are the little curly-ones and the pink-ribbon-like ornaments that he pins on his sentences. 'He is big,' Mr. Ade's companion said. 'He grows bigger every year.' 'How about his sales?' 'Well, they are dropping off.' 'I see,' said Mr. Ade. 'You reckon bigness as you do that of a ditchman you take away from it the bigger becomes.'

EYE-WITNESS ON FIRING LINE DESCRIBES BATTLE

Viewed from the north this mountain stood out dark against a blood red patch of sky, and its triple summits were incessantly crowned by a semicircle of bursting shells. The Korean tower on the central peak was hit every ten or twenty minutes, but I felt sure that there could be nobody inside, as before General Staenberg had left he had ordered the telephone and telegraph wires to be removed to another place.

To the west hovered a huge black bank of clouds, which prosaged a thunderstorm, and against this inky background the lightning played almost continually. Yet there was no thunder, but the thunder came later.

The approaching storm brought on night prematurely, but the sunlight, which was dimly visible through the red flare from two villages near Liao-Yang, which the Russians had set on fire, some say because Klunghuzars were discovered there, yet there was no thunder, but the thunder came later.

Gen. Kuropatkin Watches Night Attack. Halfway between Liao-Yang and Shushan, but a little to the west, is a group of trees, under which General Kuropatkin, mounted on a white horse, and surrounded by his staff and his bodyguard of Amursky Cossacks, halted while the Japanese reserves advanced against the Japanese, who were threatening their right flank.

Meanwhile, the roar of the artillery had redoubled in loudness. With the darkness closing in, the batteries seemed to see that it was their last chance for the day, and in consequence they thundered more for the next hour so than they had done since five that morning and during all the previous day. And when they had reached a pitch of loudness that seemed impossible to be exceeded, some big, angry battery would suddenly and unexpectedly give vent to a series of terrific shrieks that seemed calculated to split the mountains from summit to base.

It was as if this big battery had been listening for a long time with extreme impatience to the miserable attempts of its smaller brethren to make a noise, and that, unable to contain itself, it had at length broken silence in shrieks that seemed to say: "Call that noise, do you? Just give me two minutes and you'll get some idea of what noise is."

And then hell is let loose, and people are deafened for miles around, and all the window-frames rattle in Liao-Yang, and cattle run mad, and the Chinese dig holes for themselves in the ground, and babies are taken to the woods as far off as Minko. When the enormous pounding is over, white-faced men breathe once more, and their first breath is an ejaculatory prayer—"O, God! don't let me die!"

A battery is generally considered to be an inanimate thing; but no one who has listened to the shrieks of wrath coming in attempt of a battery on the other side of a trench, amid the rushing sound, which explains, irritable whine, a complaint you hear in the voice of an angry dog, or a series of whistles which are accustomed to the uproar and regarding it as a matter of course and a thing which has passed into the established phenomena of battle! Some big guns raise the drooping song with a series of vast, terrific notes, which reverberate like the blowing of cyclones, and in the distance an enormous coffin in the empty house of a giant.

Then, again, there is a slight lull, and you can hear the rattling of the Russian Maxim, and can distinguish between the Japanese rifle with its choke-toe, ta-too, and the Russian rifle, with its tr-r-r-r.

Good luck one realizes also that there are many rifle balls whistling over his head all the time, but that the louder whistling of shells had prevented him from hearing them. He smiles in a sickly kind of way as he reflects on the circumstance, and thinks of the little boy in Colombo, who told a battery that there was no danger to be apprehended from pike in a certain part of the river owing to the fact that the pike had been all eaten up by the crocodiles.

From the pagoda some of the military attaches watched the struggle, and as darkness came on and Shushan looked like a crown of shrapnel like Mong Shui. At its crown of shrapnel the intensity of anxiety which was felt in the city became almost unbearable.

The result of the Japanese attack at the trench at Showshwan or the mountains northeast of Showshwan, though in both places their lines were pushed forward and strengthened. Then came the Russians counter attack, which certainly succeeded in repelling the Japanese.

The Russians advanced on one long line first and ready to use the bayonet, if the Japanese had allowed them, but the Japanese did not wait to be bayoneted. They fired and ready to use the bayonet, if the Japanese had allowed them, but the Japanese did not wait to be bayoneted.

"Why is not that a victory?" I asked. "Why is not that a victory?" I asked. "Why is not that a victory?" I asked.

As if disinterested by the appearance of the artillery of Kuropatkin and Oyama, and this rival, the artillery now gradually ceased, the last flashes of the shrapnel bursting in the darkness above Shushan, as if to emphasize the importance of this key to the Russian position. A diminished rifle fire afterward continued at intervals, but at last there was silence.

At this moment the silence of the night was suddenly torn by a volley of musketry, followed instantly by another and another. The Japanese were attacking again, and the attack they began then—

It was 10 o'clock by my watch—lasted practically all night. It was good that I did not come in contact with the enemy.

$200,000 BOSTON FIRE LAST NIGHT

Boston, Nov. 11.—The large building known as the Harcourt studios, running from Irvington to Harcourt streets, and occupied by the Harcourt-Votey Company, George H. Walker, publisher and lithographer, the Blanchard Machine Company, the Pennsylvania Metal Co., was completely destroyed by fire tonight, causing a loss of fully $200,000. Many of the artists' shops in the building, and several of the crews were asleep when the fire broke out, and were rescued by means of ladders by the firemen. So far as known all escaped without injury.

Tom—"Hello, Dick! You don't look a bit happy."

Dick—"And good reason for it. I had my boots shined an hour ago, and I've been walking the streets ever since without seeing a single woman I know. So my nickle was just squandered."

Hyman's Majority May Disappear. London, Ont., Nov. 11.—(Special)—The recent London city election today resulted in Hon. C. S. Hyman's majority being 22, one less than reported by the returning officer. A few cases are reserved but are not likely to affect the final result.
