THE HAUNTED. A Voice from the "DEAD LETTER" Office.

You laugh-but 'tis no laughing matter ; I'm haunted by the "Phantom Beau"-

('Tis thus we've paganed the creature,)

Dear cousin-I am haunted !-eh.

His real name-but never mind !

But, touth to say, I could not find

He's rather tall -(now for a sketch !

I would not, if I could, expose it;

A being in the world that knows it !

Of course you was aware 1 painted ?-)

Pale, sad, and ghostly -as I hinted ;-

Such boring looks to all who meet him,

(But that's in dreaming only, mind you.)

No converse with the world around him,

A meteor 'mid the stars around him A sort of wond'ring Solitude-

He wears a staff !- I've understood,

Untill'd-unweeded-and unmatched :

"Alone--alone-all, all alone,"

At Far abunt, Chesnut street, the Squire, You're sure to meet him, cousin, very, He's such a walker, you would swear He went by Walker's Dictionary ! 'Tis very odd! he seems to own

And oh such eyes, such looks, I mean,

He wears a "Claret coat !"-and green

Untalk about-ables -oh, hate him! We meet each morning in the street-Fach'eve he dawdles past my window-At night he's sighing at my feet,

Thin furnathin whisher a la Retsch.
