Sir George Trevelyan's Estimate of the House of Lords.

Lourenzo Marquez at the Mercy of the Keffirs-170 Portuguese Marines Against Thousands of Native Warriors.

Russia's Sick Ruler.

London, Oct. 12.-Medical circles in St. Petersburg believe that a council of the most prominent surgeons in Europe will meet in Corfu soon after the Czar's arrival.

At the Mercy of the Kaffirs. London, Oct. 12 .- A dispatch from Cape Town says Lourenzo Marquez, on Delagoa Bay, is in a complete state of siege and at the mercy of the Kaffirs. Guns have been mounted in the streets and barricades erected. One hundred and Four sacks of coin were secured from the seventy Portuguese marines are on guard. Better Oif Without the Lords.

LONDON, Oct. 12. -Sir George Trevelyan, Secretary for Scotland, addressed the Liberals of Glasgow this evening. He said the last Parliamentary session proved that the country would be better off without the House of Lords. The majority of Peers against popular measures was so overwhelming that there was no prospect of the Liberals carrying out the business until the Upper House should be reformed. The hostility between the two Houses had become open and permanent.

Imperialism illustrated.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 12 .- A dispatch from Vilna, the capital of the Government of that name, says that in Kroshi, in that jurisdiction, 70 persons have been sentenced variously to sentences of from ten years to four months' imprisonment for resisting a detachment of Cossacks in a successful attempt to close the Catholic Church in that place. The court, while carrying out the law, took into consideration the brutality of the Cossacks, and misson, is lying seriously ill at Detroit. recommended to the Czar the justice of commuting the ten-year sentences to one year and pardoning the others.

Jealous of England. Paris, Oct. 12 .- A scheme of monetary reform was expounded by the Marquis De Mores at a meeting held in this city last evening. The Marquis denounced England's exploitation of gold, and declared that it was England's mono-metallic system that had deprived France of capital in the place of which England had flooded France with raw materials which only represented the interest on capital lent. He advocated free coinage and the suppression of the 151 to 1 gold and silver ratio. Adoption of these measures would compel Great Britain to change her currency or pay double for her food supply. The marquis then began a discussion of the situation in Egypt, when the meeting became turbulent and finally broke up, the uproar being so great that the speaker could not be heard. The Czar and the Czarewitch.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 12.-The latest announcement in regard to the Czar's departure for Corfu is that he will be accompanied by the Czarewitch, who will remain a few days with his majesty. The Czarewitch will then go to Darmstadt, and, together with the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Sergius, escort Princess Alix to St. Petersburg. The marriage of the Czarewitch and Princess Alix will probably take place at the beginning of November. During the absence of the Czar a council of regency will be formed, clothed solely with the executive power. It will consist of the Czarewitch and Grand Dukes Michael and Vladimir. An imperial edict announcing the regency will be issued

Wants to Quit.

London, Oct. 12 .- According to a dispatch to the Westminster Gazette from Shanghai it is rumored that the Chinese Government has opened negotiations with Japan for a settlement of the war between them. The rumor also has it that China has offered to acknowledge the independence of Corea and to pay a war indemnity

A dispatch from Tokio says that Corea is being cleared of Chinese. The opportunity has arrived for Japan to undertake a thorough internal reform of the government of that country. In order to carry out this reform the presence of an experienced Minister is necessary, and for this purpose Count Inanye, Japanese Minister of the Interior, has been sent to Corea. The Em. peror has the fullest confidence in Count Inanya, who will proceed at once in the warship Yoshimo to Chemulpo. In Corea he will act as a special advisory ambassa-

[Toronto News.] Hon. J. C. Patterson says there is no truth in the report he is about to resign his seat in the Cabinet for the purpose of accepting the post vacated by Mr. Meredith's retirement. The Minister of Militia might have spared himself the trouble of making the denial. Nobody really thought he was such a fool as to throw up $7,000 a year at Ottawa in order to take the Opposition leadership in Ontario.

Enterprising Pupils. It has been decided by the Literary Society of the Collegiate Institute to what purpose they should put the money that was made at the conversazione held under their auspices last spring. When the expenses were paid the society had to their credit nearly $200, and they have resolved to equip, for the benefit of the institute, reading rooms and a museum. They have ordered all the popular megazines and papers of the day, which will be placed in the rooms to afford the pupils an opportunity of reading the works of all the most popular authors. Two rooms will be fitted up, one for the boys and one for the girls. Besides this the museum containing the collection in natural history and mineralogy will afford an opportunity to the pupils of becoming better acquainted with the natural life. It is expected that both the reading rooms and the museum will be opened next week.

> "Time was," writes a city friend of ours, when a lover of wild flowers and curious grasses found it necessary to tramp into bylanes and canny nocks, often making sac work of not only boots and clothing but carrying away home marks in his own skin as various if not as pretty as the finest of his specimens. All this is now altered. The busy man may gather speci-mens not only of "native" but strangers from a distance, common and uncommon, lovers of damp and bog by our creek, or day creepers on the street crossings. Two years ago I observed a large patch of burr grass (or sand burr) at the northwest corner of Central avenue and Colborne streets, then a comparatively rare plant. It does not ask for very rich soil, so the sand answered for all its requirements and the wind takes its curious-shaped, burrs, rolling in every direction, so that each corner can boast of its burr patch now. Any lady or gentleman doubting my word can easily try for themselves, as the seeds are now on the run. So it is with many other weeds mentioned in Thursday's paper. As fine specimens of chickory with their beautiful blue petals have been found growing within a block of Mr. Dearness' own door as can be found in the country. So with many others. He Caught the Team.

Charles Frohman drives a C. P. R. lorry. Mr. Frohman is a very faithful and careful driver and lets nothing stand between himself and his duty. He has a perfect horror of his team running off, and to stop them when they had stampeded this morning led Mr. Frohman to do a very funny thing. He had pulled up in front of Slater's tailor shop on Richmond street near Dundas and had gone inside on a little business. To be nearer his team in case of emergency, Mr. Frohman left the door open. Another person who remembered that the atmosphere was not as balmy as it was a month or so ago came in behind Mr. Frohman and shut the door. This door, by the way, is set or rather was set, with heavy plate glass reaching from the top to within a few inches of the ground. Mr. Frohman turned around and caught a fleeting glimpse of his team hastening driverless towards King street. He made a bound for the door. There was a crash p.m. on that day. Be sure your names and the next mement Mr. Frohman was on the sidewalk with a shower of heavy glass at his heels. He had gone through the window, but he caught the horses. "I would not have let that toam off for ten windows," said Frohman when he returned. "Once started they would never have been stopped." The crash attracted a big crowd. The glass was worth about $12 and was insured. Frohman escaped without a scratch.

HARD TIMES IN FRANCE.

A Large Number of Laborers Cannot Find Employment,

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 .- That the Americau workingman has not been the only sufferer from hard times is made apparent by a report to the State Department from Stephen H. Ingell, United States commercial agent at Roubadi, France. He says that the figures of the central labor bureau at Paris show that the labor situation throughout France on Aug. 15 last appeared to be that a large number of workmen and laborers were without emdleyment, only a small portion of those who have for some time been in enforced idleness having resumed their occupations. From 645 labor unions, with a membership of 129,235, reporting to the central office, is appeared that 14.4 per cent of the laborers were without work. Of these unions 53 report the situation as worse than last year. In the agricultural districts 67 per cent of the laborers were without employment, and in the wine districts of Cher and Herault this percentage was increased to 75 and 80 per cent respectively, the crisis resulting from the low price of wine. The report gives in detail the percentage

Electric Railway Matters Discussed-Aid for the Prison Home Shelter.

Brigadier Margetts and Adjutant Millar, of the Salvation Army, waited on the finance committee last night in support of their request for aid towards the establishment of the Prison Home Shelter. The visitors went into details and the committee thought well of the scheme. The only thing that they appeared to be doubtful of was the condition of the city relief fund, Ald. J. W. THE HOUSE OF LORDS AN ISSUE. The statement of Sir George Otto Trevelyan, Secretary of State for Scotland in the Rosebery Government, when speaking in Glasgow on Friday night, is most significant, With the full responsibility upon him of a Minister of the Crown, Sir George put the effective reform of the House of Lords in the forefront of needed changes. There can be no doubt that the hostility of a majority of the House of Lords is a constant menace to the passage of legislation demanded by the people, as voiced by the elective chamber, and the time seems to be at hand when hereditary privileges and whims will no longer respected, and the voice of the people, under representative gover n. ment, must be heard at all times. radical reform of the privileged chamber the first great necessity on the legislative programme. What will Premier Rosebery say about it when he speaks in the Scottish commercial metropolis in a few days? He has again and again urged streets were strewn with trees and teletheir Lordships to voluntarily consent to a reform, and he has warned that if they do not consent they may be forced to yield. IS CHINA THRASHED?

It may or may not be true, as reported in the cablegrams, that China has tired of the war with Japan, and is now suing for terms. Past experience, however, leads to the belief that the Chinese have to get pretty soundly thrashed before they acknowledge defeat, and it may be that one of their large cities will be sacked before they own up now. It has been established beyond doubt that they are no match for the progressive Japs. He was at one time president of the Agricultural Mutual Insurance Company, major of the Second Battalion Middlosex Militia, and member of the Canadian Parliament. He sat for Middlesex and Elgin in the Canadian Assembly from 1851 to 1854, and for East Middlesex from 1863 until the union, when he was returned for the same seat, holding it in the Conservative interest till 1872, when he retired, but was returned again in 1874 when he defeated Mr. David Glass by a small majority. THE FIRE LIMITS.

New Regulations Accepted by Number Three Committee-Some Strict Provisions.

The proposed fire limits bylaw compiled by City Engineer Graydon, which has been 'hanging fire" for over a year was presented to No. 3 committee last night. The document occupied 25 pages of type-written matter, and the attention of the aldermen for about three hours. The new bylaw deals very minutely with building in the limits. The majority of the clauses are of very little interest save to builders or intending builders. The entire city will not be affected under the new bylaw, four classes being laid out as follows:

Class A-Beginning at the center line of Dundas and Wellington streets, thence south to York, west to Ridout, north to Fullarten, east to Richmond, north to Dufferin avenue, east to Wellington, and south to the place of beginning.

Class B, first section-Beginning at Welington and York, south to Bathurst, west to Ridout, north to York, east to place of Class D-Beginning at the east side of Adelaide and Dundas, east to Egerton, and north and south from Dundas, a distance of 130 feet.

Among the regulations are these: The engineer to be building inspector. Scaffolds to be eight feet above the side

No pipe to allow water to flow on the Stoves in houses to be nine inches clear

TAILOR-MADE CLOTH AND SERGE GOWNS WILL BE THE FASHION.

The Method of Making Skirts-They Will be More Becoming o Stout Figures-Some Dainty Hats and Theater Bonnets -Materials this Season.

The chief occupation just now of women is shopping. Women hault the shops and stand in groups around th windows admiring the new things in the way of hats and dress goods. Even if woman does not care for shopping in te abstract at this time of the year, she is 1rced into it by the dilapidated condition o her wardrobe. At no season of the yeadoes a new gown give the wearer such afeeling of proud satisfaction with herse and the world at large as in the fall. Summer fabric and light colors seem ounf place, and a gown that is fresh and stylish, plainly made, with a touch of brist color about it, is wonderfully taking.

Women and men turn and loc at a stylish tailor-made dress, and the Wmen, ile the arm from the elbow to the wrist BLACK MOIRE BODICE. one and all, immediately think they must favorite and looks well on tall women, also be getting something appropriate for makes the stout woman look double the crisp, cool weather that is now with true width. They are made of cheviot,

Every well-dressed woman has her cloth and serge gowns made at the tailor's. No dressmaker can give them the desired finish that at once stamps them as stylish. There is not very much difference in tailor-made gowns from the spring except that there is a tendency to make them a trifle more elaborate. Of course, the plain skirt will be worn for some time, but there is a new method of making it which is more becoming to stout figures. The front is gored and buttoned up either side not making the hips so prominent as in a plain skirt. A stylish dress for fall wear is made of russet brown serge, with the bodice fastening over on one side, and having two basques outlined with coarse black braid. This is worn over a silk skirt, the whole being very different from the gowns we have een all summer. Melton is to be one of the favorite materials for these tailor-made gowns and the coats will have the velvet collars, the same as men's coats, and the skirts will be trimmed with smoked pearl buttons. The waistcoats will be buttoned up to the neck and will be of plushed leather or kid or scarlet cloth. These are finished round the neck with a tight band beneath which shows the white linen collar. White buckskin makes fine vests, but as this is extremely expensive it is rather rare.

It is somewhat of a relief to find that all dresses are not to be skirts and coats. Braiding is to be used on a great many of the new gowns, so that some of the bodices will be plain, tight fitting. A very pretty design is to have the whole bodice braided.

A very pretty gown that is a little different from the usual skirt and coat style is of dark gray blue camel's hair. The sieeves are made of pink fancy silk, which is again introduced into the bodice as vest, collar and belt. Both of the latter are finished with stylish bows.

One of the most stylish of serge dresses seen lately was a black serge, having a well-cut skirt, with the seams braided a la militaire, the short coat turned back with perfectly straight revers striped with double rows of the braid. This was lined theroughly with black satin, and worn with a white blouse. The effect was most stylish. Shot satins are something new for evening wear, and a beautiful dress had the ekirt of this material, and the bodice of brocade arranged in folds. The neck was trimmed with a frill of lace, and the sleeves were made of the satin reaching to the elbows. Another pretty gown for evening was of black crepon, with a bodice of cerise, which seems to suit everybody. It was eovered with accordion-plaited chiffon, hanging full from neck to waist, falling in a bag from over a ribbon waistband with long ends. There was a folded velvet collar of cerise and huge sleeves.

Black still continues in favor, and some of the handsomest gowns this fall will still be made of it. One dress that is very striking is made of black silk crepon over black silk. White satin ribbons trim the skirt and bodice, and white satin is also the material of which the quaint revers on the sleeves are made. Plaited white chiffon, arranged fichu-like on the collar, falls over the bodice, forming graceful epaulets and jabot combined. A touch of bright pink is introduced at the neck, and again in the shape of bows on the hat, together with bows of black and white chiffon.

Violet is likely to be one of the special colors this autumn. A skirt that was made in this color by one of the best modistes was slightly draped at the side. It was bordered with jet and fur, the bodice having a jet waistband. There was an accompanying cape in black and violet shot velvet, with a double-breasted front and much extra fullness at the back, which could be brought to the front for warmth, and was richly embroidered with jet.

We seem to be coming very slowly to double skirts, for they are not generally liked, and there are indications that there will be other changes in dress. Small waists and broad shoulders will prevail, though the chief ornamentation will not remain on the bodice so much, for more elaborate trimmings of various kinds are finding their way on to skirts. Fur will be seen on dresses early in the autumn. Bodices will be trimmed with it as well as skirts. A handsome dress that can be worn late in the season without a wrap is made of green cloth, with caracal revers and edging round the skirt, which is trimmed in addition with strappings of the cloth arranged in undulating lines. The bodice is further ornamented with jeweled embroidery, which gives a pretty finishing touch to a noticeably ele-

AN ORCHID DESIGN FOR AN UPRIGHT INSTRUMENT.

How It Is Worked-Selecting the Shades-Materials for Piano Covers-Why the Design Illustrated Is One of the Best in

As an upright piano stands most frequently out from the wall, and is placed so that the back is toward the entrance of the room, where it is much seen, it has become necessary to have drapery for the back as well as the top and front. The design of orchids, given in the illustration, shows the back and top for a cover for an upright piano. It may be worked in two sections. The two portions, embroidered as shown, would be very handsome, but a selection of the design may be made and simply the back embroidered, the front and top being left unadorned, making the cover much less expensive.

No flower furnishes a better scope for clever shading than the beautiful orchid, and its varieties are numerous. The special flower from which this design was drawn is particularly attractive. main upper petal was white, the lines a grass green; the two side petals perfectly white and the lines a violet brown; the

The English filo floss furnishes a close shading for work of this character. An easy mode of working flowers is to stretch in the background, and cross with the same shade. If so worked, outline the edge with a darker shade, almost a brown, which will cast a shadow, and give them the appearance of being raised; to finish, simply catch up the edge in a garland-like effect, with a tassel to fasten the top. A combination of blue and pink shades will give an effect thoroughly in keeping with the design. Upon a background of blue mail-cloth the design is exquisite.

As far as possible it is wisest to select materials for piano covers wide enough to avoid seams. This is especially necessary for the cover of a square piano. Fortunately there are a number of fabrics now obtainable which lend themselves particularly well to this special decoration. The Roman or silk sheeting comes in many shades: blue, pink, white, gold, green and terra cotta pink. It is about fifty inches wide, and is extremely soft and pliable. Art satin also comes in many shades. It is nearly as wide as the Roman sheeting. Mail-cloth is a little heavier than the others, but equally beautiful, although a little more difficult to embroider upon, Especially attractive for embroidery purposes are the colored linens, coming, as they do, in the light and darker shades of color. They are not so wide as the abovementioned materials, but will be found particularly suitable for the cover of an upright piano, as they form a beautiful background. China silk is always avail-

Much of the beauty of the tone of a piano is lost by putting heavy ornaments on the top of the case, a reverberating sound being caused by them, as well as an injury to the piano by their weight. Carefully covered with a cloth, embroidered in an artistic manner, upon which may rest the photographs of a few of our famous composers, lightly framed, the piano is sufficiently adorned.

For Fruit With Meats.

Fruits preserved in vinegar are very good with cold meats. The best fruits to preserve in this way are cherries, damsons, grapes, lemons, oranges, peaches and melons. White wine vinegar is the best to use, especially for fruits, but the brown vinegar is the more wholesome. Use enameled or stone kettles and stir with a wooden spoon. Pickled grapes: Take them from the stalks and put them into jars, cover with plenty of white wine vinewhite wine and on top two inches of good sala, the top of the jar with a bladd the cucumt's fresh and good. When necessittle more vinegar, and always iches of oil on the gar. Tie them down and keep in a dry place. For peaches, wipe off the down from sound fruit and stick them with cloves. Put them in jars and cover with hot pickle made with one pound of moist sugar to one quart of white wine vinegar. Set them aside for about twelve days, drain off the vinegar, reboil, skim well and pour it over the peaches again. Tie down securely. For plums, wipe the plums and fill the bottle with them; boil together half a pint of white wine vinegar with one half a pound of sugar, one or two cloves and a bit of cinnamon, and pour it when lukewarm over the fruit; leave till next day, then strain, reboil the vinegar and pour it again over the plums. Any kind of plums may be used. The Complexion. A new idea for keeping the complexion way a fresh sup meal can be obtained without ouble, and as the pot can be there is no diffic nan instant, clear is never to use soap on the face, but to use butter instead. A little of this is rubbed over the face with a soft cloth and then removed by means of a second cloth. It renders the skin beautifully soft and elastic. Buttermilk is an old-fashioned remedy for removing tan and sunburn. In Sardini a favorite cosmetic is citron au lait, or milk of lemons, made by rasping off the peel of a lemon with a nutmeg grater, letting the raspings fall into a pint of new milk, cutting the lemon open and pressing the juice into the milk. After it has stood for a short time the milk will curdle. Then the whole must be strained through fine muslin, and the liquid which runs through is the milk of lemon so much sought after. Home-Made Furniture Polish Excellent furniture polish is made of equal parts of wine, vinegar and olive oil. Put in a large bottle and shake thoroughly every day for a week. It will then be ready for use. It should be applied to the furniture with a soft, woolen cloth and well rubbed in.

Save Them for Jelly. Fruit skins and cores may be used to jelly. Especially round the apple cores is also quince and grape skins.

CATCHING SARDINES.

Days of California,

How the Work Was Done in the Early

The next time the readers of this paper eat sardines it may interest them to remember how they were caught in the old California days. Only Spanish and Indians were in California then, and they were far more interesting to look upon than the present inhabitants of the Gold state. The men of the aristocracy-caballeros-wore jacket and trousers of colored silk over white lace and linen, high boots of soft leather, broad hats covered with silver eagles; the women-donnas-full, flowered gowns, and a strip of silk about the head and shoulders and many jewels. The Indians were a gay striped blanket, their children nothing but a shirt twined about the waist and tied in a knot at the back.

In the autumn, on certain days, all the fine people stood on the beach of the bay of Monterey and watched the Indians catch sardines. The Indians would wade up to their knees in the surf and scoop up the swarming little fish with their nets. But the sardines would sometimes come to the shore in shoals to escape the greed of the larger fish. It was a very fine sight to see the silvery fish rushing through the dark blue water, then leaping over the rocks on the white sand.

In the bay the great whales spouted like geysers or reared so high above the water that the swordfish, seeing his chance, sprang upon and pierced his enemy. Thereupon the whale would drift to the shore and die among the sardines. Hundreds of birds, attracted by the dead fish, would fly down from the pine woods on the hills and add to the liveliness of the scene by their tireless darting and screaming. At night, when the caballeros and the donnas were dancing in the adobe houses and the Indians were asleep, bears and coyotes would come prowling out of the hills and eat what the birds had left .-American Youth.

A QUEER DRUNKARD. The Hercules Beetle of South America

Goes on Regular Sprees. South America can furnish a dreadful example for a temperance lecture, and yet not summon a human being. The Hercules beetle will do as an object lesson.

About six inches long and strong in proportion, it is rightly named. Instead of the ordinary nippers, with which beetles are armed, this one has an immense pair that work up and down like jaws. These have sharp ridges on the inside like rasps. and that indicates their use. They do not fit into each other, but, resembling the pliers of the plumber, are made to fit around something else. The writer does not know what these nippers are meant for, but knows what Hercules does with

He is a natural drunkard, Fgoing on a spree regularly. When he wants something strong he does not seek a bottle nor a saloon, but he climbs a tree. Finding one that produces an intoxicating juice, such as grow in South America, this toper ascends until he reaches a branch that his nippers can grasp; then he seizes hold, holds on, pinches tight, and moves around. The rasp cuts the bark, the juice flows, and Hercules drinks until so full that he can hold no more, and until too drunk to hold on. His feet let go, his nippers relax, and he tumbles to the ground. There he lies helplessly drunk and sleeps off his stupor. When sobered he goes about his business, but signs no pledges, nor does he give indications of repentance, Again thirsty, he climbs another tree and gets drunk once more. Thus his life is spent in business, drinks, drunks and sobering, a natural and persistent drunkard.

Monkey and Goose Contests.

Combats between animals of different species are a source of great amusement among the Javanese. One of the most popular contests is that between monkey and goose. The monkey is tied to one of the goose's legs, by means of a cord, and both animals are set down near the bank of a river, or pond. The goose, standing in dread of the monkey, seeks for safety in the water, and the monkey, afraid of the water, exerts himself to the uttermost not to be drawn into it. As a rule, the goose draws the monkey into the water, and then the cunning simian sits astride the goose, in equestrian fashion. The goose then tries to dive, and the monkey prevents her if he can; and so the fight goes on until the spectators tire, and the animals are released from an uncongenial companion-

Small boys who cannot resist the temptation to make predatory excursions on neighboring apple orchards should be transported to the Sandwich islands where the apples have become wild, and where forests of many acres are found in various parts of the country. They extend from the level of the sea far up the mountain sides. It is said that miles of these apple forests can occasionally be seen. For the Amateur Photographer.

One of the troubles of the amateur photographer is that often he does not have a sultable dark room. The table shown in the accompanying illustration, however, possesses all the convenience of the most perfect dark room, combined with compact ness of form, lightness and rigidity. The frame is made of inch square planed strips. Red wood is the most suitable, being light, yet sufficiently strong. The dimensions are optional. Into the top of the table is fixed a PHOTOGRAPHIC DARK tin or zinc pan with ROOM. an outlet to which is attached a small pipe or a piece of rubber hose, which takes waste water to a bucket placed underneath. At the top, outside brackets may be fixed to hold a small tank with a faucet inside, containing water for washing. Inside is a shelf for bottles of chemicals. At the back is a small window, containing a piece of ruby glass, with a shelf outside for a lamp if necessary to use at night. A frame of heavy wire. represented in the engraving by dotted lines, is made at the top, and from the wire covering the top, is suspended some thick, black material long enough to touch the floor. This table has the advantage of being always ready for use. The amateur who cannot neatly do lettering backwards, and who is desirous of having the legend appear on printed views, will find the following method very neat and simple, and one that will not damage the negative: Cut the bottom edge of the paper straight before printing. Then with a pen or fine camel's hair brush charged with any opaque water color. write on the paper the legend numbers, or who is to be written, where it is to appear, and allow it to dry thoroughly before placing on the negative. The color is easily removed with a wet sponge before toning, leaving the legend in white characters on the print. Another vexatious occurrence to th amateur is to find that the prints, which were made with care a week or so previous, when taken out to be toned, are the color of the ancient parchment in those parts that were originally white. If these prints are, just before toning, placed in a bath of one part of agua ammonia to fifty parts of water, and washed in a similar both after toning, with another part of the ammonia added to fifty parts of the fixing solution, the white will be restored to its pristine purity when ready to mount. When any acid has been spilled, destroy ing the color of a fabric, ammonia applied will restore the color, or if on white fabrics wet them thoroughly with ammonia, sprinkle liberally with salt, and place in the sun. When dry all stains will have disappeared from the fabric.

IF ALEXANDER III. DIES

WHAT WILL BE THE EFFECT ON EUROPEAN POLITICS?

It May Be Far Reaching-Speculation As to What Will Follow An Emperor's Demise-Alexander's Home Life and His

Devotion to the Greek Church.

The serious illness of the Emperor of Russia has alarmed the whole of Europe.

It is extremely difficult to get any correct news of the true condition of his imperial majesty as only the most meagre daily bulletins are issued. However, there is no disguising the fact that the czar is very sick indeed. There is any amount of speculation on what effect the emperor's death will have on European politics, and the fluctuations of the money markets can be directly traced to this source. Intimates of the czarowitz express their belief that should he ascend the throne of Russia he would give France the cold shoulder. So

ALEXANDER III., CZAR OF RUSSIA. serious have the French taken this rumor that the fluctuations of rentes are attributed to the impression that the death of the czar will cause a tremendous fall in

Few people know anything definitely about the character of Alexander III. of Russia. Most westerners picture him as a man from whom nobody need expect kindliness or consideration. There is nothing so delightful as having a convenient and universal scapegoat on which can be saddled all the errors and real or imaginary wrongs that may occur, and for which nobody in particular wishes to be responsible. The Emperor and autocrat of all Russians, Alexander III., is a good illustration of such a condition. Whenever there is anything said about this country, and there has been a great deal of late, the autocrat is generally made the chief target for all uncomplimentary things said about Russia, its people, laws, politics, social conditions. It seems wonderful how firm a foothold a preconceived prejudice can obtain in the minds of people simply by almost the superficial impressions received from reading or hearing somewhat highly colored accounts of the "frightful depotism, the cruel persecution, the gross injustice," etc., to which the czar subjects his people. One would imagine this august person stalking around from morning till night with a body guard of fierce Cossacks, flogging dozens of innocent men to death, hanging some more and sending the rest in exile to Siberia, this simply for the sport of the thing or the lack of having something else to do. There is an old Rus-

But how often does one hear a kind expression, an appreciative recognition of anything commendable that occurs there? If things were in such a terrible state generally as they are represented to be: if the emperor were such an oppressor of all that is true and righteous, it would be a practical impossibility to prevent the empire's disintegration, even though it were attempted at the point of the bayonet. The press has never let an opportunity pass, even before his ascension to the throne, without casting slurs on the Czar's character. It has been represented that he is a man of lowest instincts, with no conception of the moral obligations as husband or as emperor; that he is of a morbid and jealous disposition, sometimes refusing to see the empress and his children for weeks, and to crown it all he is accused of being a coward. To anybody who knows his disposition this last assertion is rresistibly comical. Let any unprejudiced person look at Alexander III. more as a private individaal than emperor and the chances are that te will be more than favorably impressed by the scrutiny. One instantly feels that there are few mysteries which he could not penetrate. His manner is marked by great reserve, even austerity, particularly when engaged in official business. On account of giving orders with great rapidity and brusqueness he has been called harsh, put this is more from his impetuous activ-

ty of mind than from any unkindness. The one great distinguishing trait of the Russiam emperor's character is his strong reneration for and his sincere faith in the Greek church. He never fails to be present and to participate in the ancient ceremony of the immersion of the cross in the water of the Neva, which takes place every rear on the day of the Epiphany.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

The Last of the 1809 Group of Great, World-Famous Men.

The year 1809, which gave Gladstone to the world, gave also Oliver Wendell Holmes, Darwin, Lincoln and Edgar Allen Poe. Now Gladstone alone sur-

It was in 1857 that Dr. Holmes flashed upon the public. There are a great many who can remember the delightful surprise which greeted the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," that brilliant series of articles which brought the Atlantic Monthly into immediate vogue. Pefore that the Doctor had given his life both to law and to mediwith occasional dips into poetry. With the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" he became the most popular writer in America. Those papers were unique; they embodied in a new way the authority of Dr. Johnson and the rollicking humor of Father Prout. They were as sweet as Goldsmith, as dainty as Leigh Hunt, and as tender as Washington Irving. There were no chunks of humor to be cut out and pasted away, but a pervasive sparkle and bloom covered the whole series. In those papers there shone out for the first time that perennial gayety of heart and that vital exuberance which were still undimmed in the old age of the Autocrat.

As he himself once said, health and longevity are not matters of diet, but of temperment. Dr. Holmes celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday on Aug. 29 last. He said he was "eighty-five years young that day." Yet he said, too, that day:

"After threescore years and twenty the encroachments of time make themselves felt with rapidly increasing progress. When one can no longer recognize the faces he passes on the street, when he has to watch his steps, when it becomes more and more difficult for him to recall names, he is reminded at every movement that he must spare himself, or nature will not spare him the penalties she exacts for overtaxing his declining powers.

"The twelfth septennial period has always seemed to me as one of the natural boundaries of life. One who has lived to complete his eighty-fourth year has had his full share, even of an old man's allowance. Whatever is granted over that is a prodigal indulgence on the part of nature. One who has reached this term of human life must not be called upon for active service as in the days of his vigor."

A Specimen of His Humor.

One might go on to any extent in giving examples of the genial humor that sparkled through those papers. One or two instances will suffice. Do you recall the delicious distinction he made in blondes? "There are two kinds of poets, just as

A distinguished Frenchman said of Holmes that he had taught the Yankees how to laugh properly, and it was a new experience for these children of the Puritans, who had been howling at Artemus Ward and John Phoenix. One specimen will suffice. Once, when he had been heavily lionized and mobbed by a deputation of rough men from the far West, and some one asked him if he did not enjoy it: "Enjoy it?" he exclaimed. "I felt like the small elephant at the Zoo with a cheap excursion party on his back."

A Departed Custom.

It used to be the custom in the Belgian parliament to supply not only the members but the reporters in the galleries with brandy and water ad libitum. Every member habitually spoke with a glass of brandy and water beside him, and when he had finished it an energetic attendant brought another.

Curious Story of the Dutch-How Nature Frustrated the Design of an Old-Time Monopolist - Tree, Flower and Nut-

Methods of Harvesting. In all historic ages men have dared th perils of the sea and desert in the search for three things-gold, gems and spices. If we desired to be extremely learned we could doubtless formulate an indisputable array of authorities, proving that Hamiltan. the Carthagenian, in his voyage of African circumnavigation, stored the holds of his galleys with all sorts of aromatic products. We might dig out of Herodotus quotations showing how the Lydians, Carians, Phœnicians and Egyptians bartered bags of spices for gold daries and staters. We might even read with the aid of Mar. iette and Champollion, in the hieroglyphics of the rock tombs of Thebes and Pylæ, the receipts A RIPE NUTMEG. for the curing of the citizens of Heliopolis and Karnak in baths of natron, cinnamon, cloves and pepper. We are content, however, to point out the fact that spice and perfumes have always divided honors with gold and jewels.

Leaving to the fanciful Spaniard the search for the Western El Dorado, the more practical Dutchman devoted himself to the accumulation of the riches to be gathered from the clove, cinnamon and nutmeg trees-mines whose treasures are renewed from season to season.

The thrifty Dutch speedily discovered the enormous value of the nutmeg. They found it growing plentifully on all of the Molucean archipelago; but as they had especially established their power over the Banda Group, and as the nut had become instantly a most valuable commodity, they resolved to secure the monopoly of so profitable an article, Your Dutchman does not think quickly; but once he has made up his mind, he is not to be diverted from his aim. The Dutch merchant of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries was a soldier and sailor, as well as a trader. In order to keep the nutmeg supply in his own hands, he headed armed expeditions, to all the adjacent islands, and, after conquering them, made a condition of his treaty of peace that all nutmeg trees should be destroyed, and no more grown. Jan Van Evertsen, a Dutch writer of the seventeenth century, records that on one of these forays the victorious leader compelled the natives, first, to chop down all their nutmeg trees, and next, to pile upon the fallen trunks all of the nuts in the on of the people. "There several piles," says Evertsen, "as large as good-sized houses, and they used ladders for to carry the baskets to be emptied atop. They were veritable small church in Holland of less size than those accumulations of nuts, which were burned to ashes with a most odorous smell,"

But Dutch arms and Dutch greed could not oppose the will of nature. In the Moluccan Archipelago there is a bird which feeds upon the fresh mace, or second envelope of the nutmeg. It is called the "nutmeg pigeon." In order to secure the mace, which clings firmly to the nut, this bird carries away both envelope and nut to its nest; which, as it is a creature of long flight, may be upon an adjacent island, or even upon the distant mainland. Having stripped off the mace, the bird drops the nut, with its fructifying germ, upon the rich soil, where it immediately sprouts, takes root, and, in the course of time, become a fruitful tree. At the present time, though the Banda Group still produces a large proportion of the world's supply, many thousand pounds are annually exported from the East Indies at large and from Hindostan. The nutmeg-tree somewhat resembles our hardy pear, and seldom reaches more than thirty-five or forty feet in height. The flowers are pale yellow, and are very similar in size and shape to lilies of the valley. The leaves are large, averaging six inches in length, dark green, polished on the upper surface; and grayish beneath, As leaves, flowers and fruit are all richly odorous, the atmosphere in the neighborhood of a nutmeg-grove is constantly laden with a delightful and characteristic perfume. So persistent and penetrating is on ships passing twenty miles off the

The outer portion is a thick, fleshy rind, very similar to that which surrounds the hickory-nut. Inside of this is the husk, a sort of rough, thready substance, of a brilliant scarlet when first opened, but soon changing to a yellowish brown as it dries on exposure to the air. This husk is the mace of commerce. When this is stripped off, there is left a hard, thin, dark brown shell, covering the seed, or autmeg proper,

The outer rind splits into two nearly equal parts when the nut is ripe and is seed in addition to the pepper and salt through exter as valueless; but in some gives a delicious flavor.

> Though the flower and fruit are upon the tree together at all seasons, the nut is harvested in July, November and April; in the last-named month both mace and nut are in their utmost perfection. A healthy tree will produce, at a single harvest, about six pounds of nuts and two pounds of mace. The fruit is commonly gathered by hand, by means of small wicker baskets at the end of long, bamboo poles; the outer rind is removed, and the mace carefully separated with a knife. The mace is dried in the sun, or, in the rainy season, by artificial heat; it is flattened between the hands, making what the housewives know as "blades of mace." After it has assumed the proper bronze, or ochre-yellow color, it is dipped in salt water to preserve it, dried again and finally packed in bales and bags for export. The nuts themselves are placed upon small wire nets, or grates, over a mild fire, sufficient to dry, without roasting, them. This is a process requiring care and patience, taking about fifty or sixty days to complete. When the nut rattles in the thin, inner shell, the operation is supposed to be complete. The shell is then knocked off with a wooden mall or mallet. A solution of lime and water, of the thickness of milk, is prepared, and the nuts are dipped into it, the object being to prevent the attacks of beetles and grubs, and also the sprouting of the nut, which spoils its usefulness. The feathery white coating which you observe upon the nutmegs of commerce is due to this lime solution. A nutmeg which lacks this coating may be suspected of being of inferior quality, perhaps the acrid South American variety.

A Lovely Rustic Fire-Screen. One can see at a glance how the frame for this pretty rustic screen is fashioned from natural branches-two straight and two crotched ones-from which all smaller branches and twigs have been cut away, so as to leave but little more than protrudmountains; and I have seen many a with a soft brush and a stiff one, to remove from every crevice in the bark every loose particle of moss and dust. Then, with liquid gold, gild the bark all over; or, if preferred, gild only the bare wood where it is exposed at the ends and where the limbs are cut off, and give a touch of gold to every crack or protuberance; or, if a smoother finish is desired, remove all of the bark and smoothly gild or enamel the whole surface.

The screen, suspended from the upper cross-piece, is a fringed silk rug woven on a hand-loom -as old fashioned carpets are woven. It falls freely from the top, its own weight keeping it in place; but it might be tied to the standards-half way down and at the upper corners-with bows of broad, soft ribbon, or with heavy tassel-tipped cords. Or a smaller rug, without fringe, might be suspended by gilt rings and furnished at the bottom with a row of tassels in mingled shades.

These screens are handsome, and are very useful where there are open fires, both in cold and warm weather, as a shield from the heat in the former, and as a screen for the open emptiness of the grate or fireplace in the latter. Painted, embroidered or appliqued banners of velvet, silk or cloth, or of painted or gilded matting, may be used instead of the rug if desired.

Whitewash.

The following recipe makes much better whitewash than that made of lime and water: For interior work, slake a peck of lime till it is thick and creamy. While it this perfume that it is readily perceived | is hot mix with it a pint of linseed oil and pound of glue, previously dissolved in water. Let the mixture stand several hours before applying it. A little lampblack dissolved in vinegar and mixed with whitewash gives a grayish tint, which may be preferable to pure white; a little umber gives a fawn color, and yellow a cream tint. Very little coloring matter should be used. or the shade will be too dark.

For outside work the oil and glue may be too expensive; in their place use } pound of salt to a peck of lime. It is claimed that salt and glue are the best ingredients to prevent rubbing off. A good whitewash is made of whiting and glue. Mix 8 pounds of whiting with hot water till the compound is like thick cream. Mix with this & pound of glue thoroughly dissolved in water. Before applying this every crack in the wall should be filled with a plaster made of one part of water to one part of silicate of potash, mixed with whiting. -Ohio Farmer.

A Made-Over Dish. Made-over dishes sometime have a spicy flavor which fresh ones miss. Stews are not to be despised, and even hash may be made delicious. A stew which is really palatable may be made by cutting cold meat and potatoes into cubes about an inch square, adding a little cold tomato, and placing the whole on the back of the stove where it can heat slowly for an hour or so. About half an hour before it is to be served it should be moved forward on the stove and allowed to cook briskly. A little parsley or celery

The most serious question which is troubling China to-day in her war with Japan is that of transportation. She has a big population, but it is scattered over a country larger than the whole continent of North America. This vast extent of territory has only one railroad about 200 miles long. This runs through one of the most sparsely settled parts of it, extending from the city of Tien-Tsin to the point where the great Chinese wall juts down into the sea at the head of the Gulf of Pechili. All of the traffic of the rest of the country is carried on in boats, carts and wheelbarrows, and China has no means of transporting large masses of men or trovisions to feed them. The roads are more like ditches cut through the fields than anything else. They are full of ruts, and in the rainy season they are turned into rivers. It is said that there are 4,000 roads in the Empire, but not one is macadamized, and the great highway over which the caravans pass in going to Mongolia is the bed of a rocky mountain torrent, and the brick tea which to the amount of thousands of tons is carried into Russia and Thibet is taken over mountain paths so rough that only men can travel over them. All the information, dispatches and mails, which go to the capital of China have to be carried over dirt roads, and be fore the telegraph lines were put into Peking, important news was sent from all parts of the Empire by messengers with relays of horses. Such a messenger service exists in some parts of China to-day, and it is said that Kub ai Kahn had 300,000 horses which he Kub ai Kahn had 300,000 horses which he used for this purpose and his relay stations ices for all kinds of interior finish and for numbered 10,000. The various fraternal organizations are pretty generally adopting the principles of total abstinence, not so much as a matter of mere sentimentalism as because they find that it pays far better both as regards life insurance and insurance against accidents. The Knights of Pythias are the last that have fallen into line. The Sovereign Lodge, at its last session, decided to order that no member of the order shall be allowed to enter a saloon in uniform.

Large business corporations are becoming more and more convinced that, outside of all mere sentimental considerations it does not pay to have to do with men who are not totalabstainers. A leading New York journal states that the managers of no · less than 65 great American railroads cating liquors nor enter saloons while has convinced them that their property and their business is not so safe in the hands of men who indulge in drinking at all. Temperance is a great economic as well as a great moral reform.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, the now noted New York Presbyterian minister, who has done so much towards unearthing that city, has had a good deal of practical experience during the last few years in fighting for practical reforms. His conclusions, after these years of experience, are that much consideration should be given to the party as well as to the personal candidate in elections. What he has been saying may well be carefully thought over by those wellmeaning Prohibitionists who go in for electing "good men, irrespective of mentary usage in the dispatch of busiby a bad party will be unable to effect any radical reform or administer the government on non-partisan lines." this matter carefully over before casting their votes for other representatives to Parliament,

Social Purity.

This very important subject should receive more attention from Canadian Christian temperance women than it has hitherto. Our sisters in some of the Western States have brought about legislative enactments for the better protection of young girls, which have had a tendency to enforce a purer state of morality in society.

I shall direct your attention principally to the education of children in the things pertaining to social purity.

You will acknowledge, after careful consideration, that in our Christian civilization "there is a double standard of morality, one for man, another for woman." Society tolerates in man what it will not tolerate in woman. Women are cast out and ostracised, both by the church and the home, for what is overlooked and forgiven in man. Is drunkenness in God's eyes worse in woman than in man? Yet if a woman is a drunkard her friends are

The same question may be asked in regard to the use of tobacco. What man would appear in society with a woman who uses strong drink or tobacco? Yet a man may use both, to excess, and society will not frown on

Other leading evils might be enumerated and answered in the same way. Now, I ask you, is this double standard of morality right and just? I am sure you will agree that it is not. The motto of every Christian woman should be, "a pure, clean life for both man and woman," and it should be demanded in every social relation.

How shall we obtain this is the important question? We must first begin at the very root and foundation of all social life, which is the "hometraining." Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Lady Somerset in one of her meetings said: "Woman is the lifegiver and the law-giver, she gives the moral tone to society." Oh, woman, sister mother, it is for you to teach purity of thought and action to the young souls intrusted to your care.

How carefully you will watch the development of your daughter's mind; you will shield her from all associa tions that might even suggest impurity. You take every precaution to have her grow up pure and virtuous. You select the books she reads, you read them with her, you choose her companions and you are her confidential friend. You explain to her the physical laws of life and teach her the importance of following them and the shame and suffering that must follow their disregard. Many good, noble mothers have erred through a feeling of false delicacy, and failed to teach their daughters these things, and have had to suffer as a consequence.

But daughters are not the only souls intrusted to your care and training. You have your sons who should be reared just as carefully as your daughters, even more so, for their temptations are so much greater because of the lax state of morality permitted by society. While the mother plans and exhausts every human device to make the home attractive, so that the daughters may be contented and happy, how much more important it is that she should do so for the sons. Home is the center of every true life; all its associations should be of the purest

Young people must have society, must have amusements, and these must be provided for them. Do not to one of my views the outcome was introduce to them any games that simply amusing. might lead them into temptation. In everything you do take counsel with the Lord Jesus. Invite him into your home as an honored guest, tell him you will not countenance that in which he cannot participate, for any other course would be the ruin of your boy. Keep your boys with you at night. Look well after their associations. They cannot possibly choose as their friends those who tipple, those who puff a cigar, or whose conversation is full of impure suggestions, without being contaminated. Familiarity with not contempt.

It should be impressed upon the minds of boys, from their earliest years and their efforts in that direction were of understanding, that they should go evidently much appreciated. #### Woman and the Methodist Church

(Mrs. Huldah Rockwell, Picton.)

In reading the reports of the General Conference just closed (as all good Methodists have been doing of late), it was the most natural thing in the world that the superintendent of the franchise department should view the doings and sayings of this great legislative body from the standpoint of the so-called "strong-minded" woman. And so, after scanning the first day's proceedings, my thoughts ran after this fashion: How can this conference, composed entirely of men, imagine that they really represent the whole Methodist Church of Canada, the church of Susanna Wesley, and Barbara Hick, with its thousands of intelligent and godly women mem-

If, as we do not for one moment deny, women are intended to move in a different "sphere" from men, how can they be properly represented except by those of their own sex? Or, supposing that they are, as Hon. John Dryden has proven from Scripture, not only different from, but inferior to, their brethren, should not a few at least of these inferior being be sent to conference to legislate for their own class. From either point of view, therefore, it is clear that the great "better half" of the Methodist Church had no voice in its law-making.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society reports its work through the corresponding secretary, who comes in like any other outsider, reads her paper and retires. Instead of such being the case, why should not these Lincoln. ing, but it is a fact, and a lamentable one, that the churches are slow to discover their great weakness in this regard. Contrast their policy with that of the two latest great religious movements of Christendom, viz., the Salvation Army and the Christian Endeavor Societies, and do we not find here a most significant sign of the times in the fact that in both these great organizations women are placed on exactly the same footing as men! And then I fell to wondering what would happen if the women of this church were to go "on strike" for a while and leave the brethren to do the work of the church that the attendance at the prayer meetings would be small, and the class meetings would thin out wonderfully, Sunday school teachers would be at a premium, too, and missionary collec-

Suffrage.

Miss A. S. Biackwell continues her reply to the arguments of Dr. Buckley as presented in the Century against equal suffrage. Dr. Buckley quotes Bishop Vincent, a well-known conservative, on the woman question, and Miss Blackwell proceeds to weigh the bishop's arguments for whatever they may be worth as follows:

Bishop Vincent says that "the instinct of motherhood" is against equal suffrage. It is a grave fact that the Hindoo women have had it drilled into them for ages that for a woman to be educated would be to be unsexed, to forfeit the love of her husband, to lose her womanly influence, etc. Naturally, most of them believe it. American women have had it preached to them for generations by press, pulpit and forum that the same results would follow if they voted; and, naturally many of them believe what they have been taught. It is no more 'womanly instinct" in one case than in the other. If it were "the instinct of Toronto, is now a practicing lawyer of motherhood," we should not find it conspicuously lacking in those mothers who possess, in addition to tenderness and purity, breadth of mind and exceptional intelligence-mothers like Lucretia Mott, Lucy Stone and Mrs. Zeralda G. Many years ago, before imprisonment for debt was abolished in England, the rumor of a projected French invasion threw the country into commotion. The excitement extended to all classes. That he has right views on one great reform will be seen by the following extract: "I believe when women vote we shall have wiser government, cleaner politics, more ballots and fewer bullets. I have not formulated my views as to what reforms woman suffrage would effect, but I fancy good would accrue, not only to women, but to men. When men and women labor together there is compactness, completeness, thoroughness, in the result that is often wanting when the sexes work separately."

There is a kindly glow in it all, and the eruption subsides quickly with a gentle troll of song. I well remember the explosion that followed some reference to education. The table shook under a smiting hand, and these words were shot at me: "We are teaching our young men everything except this: To teach themselves, and to look the Lord Jesus Christ in the face!"

A Striking Address.

One of the most striking events of the year in England is-not a debate in parliament, nor the birth of an heir to the throne, nor some great happening in the world of trade-but an address delivered one evening before an assembly of ladies and gentlemen in the university town of Oxford.

The speaker was Lord Salisbury, lately prime minister, and the leader of one of the two great political parties; his audience was the British Association for the Advancement of Science, of which he was president; his topic was the unsolved problems of science.

Mr. Gladstone lays aside his Blue Book and takes his Homer, or turns to writing a learned treatise on Christian ethics. His great opponent in the political world is chancellor of the University of Oxford, and president of the greatest scientific association of the country.

The lesson is that politics need not draw its votaries from the class of men who can do nothing else to earn a living; as though the public should put up with services which all private employers have rejected.

But the substance of Lord Salisbury's address was vastly important. It was a call to science to remember that it is not omniscience. In this generation science has done so much, has advanced so far into previously unexplored realms, that it was in real danger of losing its head, through arrogance. It was Herod's courtiers who cried, "It is the voice of a God, and not of a man." But science has been setting up itself instead of God.

Lord Salisbury makes a portentous list of matters which baffle scientific men, and of others which are not so clearly proved as they would have us believe. What are chemical elements? Are oxygen and sulphur and gold and chlorine simple bodies or compounds? And what is an atom? Chemistry has learned much about the behavior of matter, but it still knows nothing about the ultimate constitution of matter. The fundamental mystery re-

Where They Found Her.

I am ashamed to say that little Lucy wanted to run away. Why it is that tiny folks of two and three and four I had answered all his questions years old should be so fond of stealing off and giving their friends such frights about them, I'm sure I do not know.

Lucy was only three, but her head was so full of funny notions that if you missed her for a moment you always fancied she had fallen into mischief.

One fine, bright day in October, Mrs. Lockwood, Lucy's mother, went into the garden with a caller to give her a handful of the beautiful marigolds. Lucy was in the back parlor undressing her dolly, Miss Fanny Fling, and putting her in bed, for Fanny had a high fever. Mrs. Lockwood was not gone from the room five minutes, but it was time enough for squawking in the hennery, the captain Lucy to dart away like a hummingbird, and what do you think she did? "I am going to d'ess up and go a-calling," she said. It was her idea of "d'essing up" to put on a breastpin; that was always the first thing. And Hannah, the housemaid, had a pin she greatly admired. It was a very large one, with a picture on it of a yellow house and green trees and red roses. She went into Hannah's room and found the pin, and put it in the neck of her dresss, managing to fasten it so that it did no fall off. Then she ran in great haste to mamma's closet, climbed to the high shelf, and took down the bandbox which held her mamma's last winter's bonnet-a dark green velvet, with a long, green, curling feather. She put this on her little naughty head, and over the bonnet a large blue veil; and then she was ready to go

But by that time mamma was coming back to the house; and Lucy knew she would be saying, "Hannah, have you seen the baby?" So she slipped out by the side door and ran to the stable.

Now, there was a cart in the stable full of empty barrels; and as Lucy heard grandpa's step in the yard she thought she would climb into one of the barrels and hide. She went in head first; alas for mamma's pretty bonnet! And as the blue veil was very large indeed, she drew it over her, covering her little self all up. There she was, that droll snip of a Lucy, at the bottom of a barrel. Who would think of looking for her there? And in two minutes she was fast asleep.

Well, this is not all of it. The barrels had been put in the cart by grandpa, who intended to drive the cart to Uncle Ben's, and Uncle Ben had promised that his boys should fill the barrels with choice apples from the orchard. It was now time for grandpa to start. He came out to the stable, and harnessed the gray horse to the cart, and drove away, and Lucy was having a ride and knew nothing about it. She had not waked even when grandpa threw an empty mealbag right into the barrel where she

"O hum!" said grandpa, talking to himself. O hum! Ten barrels! I sha'n't get home much before night!"

Pretty soon they came to a rough old bridge made of logs, and the cart jolted, and the barrels rattled, and Lucy woke up and began to cry.

"What's that noise?" said grandpa to himself. O, hum! it's a lamb, got strayed away in the field, I suppose." "It's me, it's me," cried Lucy, trying in vain to get out of the high barrel. But grandpa was deaf, and did not know she spoke.

"I think it's likely that's a little calf a-bleating," said grandpa, looking right and left, but not behind him. "O hum! I wonder whose calf has got lost? I can't see anything that looks like a calf."

It was a quiet country road, and they had not met a single soul.

it is! It can talk !" It was perfectly dreadful for Lucy. All the cousins-Fanny and Molly and Charley and Phil-crowded around her, exclaiming "O what a beautiful, beautiful, beautiful doll!"

And they pretended not to believe her when she stamped her foot and screamed "I'se Lu-u-ucy!"

You never can know how sad it was. She thought surely her little heart would break. But she lived through it, and is alive now. And it did her a great deal of good; for, after this, whenever she had a wild wish to "d'ess up and go a-calling," she remembered that ride in the barrel, and how her cousins had taken her for a rubber baby, and how very, very sad it No stone of mine now crumbling can had seemed.

And so Lucy Lockwood turned over a new leaf, and never ran away any more. - Christian at Work.

-Youth's Companion. Captain Carter's Monkey.

Captain Carter, who lives in Washington, D.C., when on land, had a great fancy for fine fowls, and among his collection prized a fine old king gobbler, says Harper's Young People. On his last cruise he brought home a mischievous young monkey, which gave him so much trouble it was a good deal like "an elephant on his hands." One day, hearing a terrible found Jocko with king gobbler under his arm, while he was deliberately pulling out the poor bird's last tail feather. The captain rescued the turkey, and punished the monkey severely, who knew very well why he was chastised. The next day, again hearing a commotion among the feathered tribe, he went to the scene of action, and there sat Jacko with the much persecuted gobbler between his knees, while he was trying to put the teathers back. His intentions of repairing the mischief done were good, but the turkey did did not appreciate them.

amous Decrees and Their Meaning-The Saloon is a Doomed Institution-Why so Many Catholics Have in the Past Been in the Business -The Church Compelled to Set Herself Right.

Archbishop John Ireland, of St. Paul, Minn., in the North American Review

However limited in their immediate pplication, decisions of high courts sually work out far-reaching results. hey set forth the spirit of laws and stitutions and establish a standard of ction which provokes compliance. his is decidedly the fact in the ruling ecclesiastical law, recently handed own by the appellate court of the ostolic delegate, Mgr. Francis tolli, which sustains the edict of the shop of Columbus, excluding liquoralers from office, or even memberip, in Catholic associations.

Some months ago the Rt. Rev. John Watterson, Bishop of Columbus, blished for his diocese the law that existing Catholic society, or branch division thereof, shall be allowed to ve a liquor-dealer or a saloon-keeper its head or among its officers; and at no new Catholic society, or new inch of an old organization, shall be med which would admit even to mbership any person engaged, ether as principal or as agent, in the nufacture or sale of intoxicating uors. A supplementary clause of episcopal edict excludes from the raments of the church saloon-keepiness in an unlawful manner.

From this law an appeal was taken a society of the diocese of Columto the highest Catholic tribunal in United States, that of the apostolic egate, and in due time a decision given sustaining the bishop in all nts. No small share of opposition has in certain quarters been manifested to the decision of Mgr. Satolli, and considerable efforts have been made to distort its meaning and minimize its influence. THE POOR MAN AND THE SALOON. When the poor man, who has his own dreams of independence, seeks to go "into business," one sort of business is within his reach, the saloon. But little capital is needed for the enterprise, and that is willingly loaned to him by the brewer, the distiller, or the ward politician, each of whom will gain in money or votes, a hundredfold for the investment. RELIEF AT LAST.

The Experience of a Londesboro Young Lady.

A Viotim of Severe Pains, Dizziness and Watery Blood-At Times Could Not Go Up a Step-How She Regained Health and Strength.

(From the Clinton New Era.) Miss Kate Longman is a young lady of about 22 years of age, who lives with her mother in the pretty little village of Londesboro, six miles from the town of Clinton. Both are well known and highly esteemed by their many friends, The New Era, having learned that Miss Longman had been a great sufferer and had recently been restored to health by the timely use of a well-known popular remedy, dispatched a representative to get the particulars of the case. In reply to the reporter's inquiries Miss Longman said that if her experience might be the means of helping some other sufferer, she was quite willing that it should be made public. "For a long time," she said, "I was very poorly, was weak, and run down, and at times suffered pains in my back a watery condition, and I was subject to spells of weakness to such an extent that I could not step up a doorstep to save my life. I doctored a great deal for my sickness, but without avail. His time was largely spent in discovering the faults and shortcomings of things animate and inanimate, while Mrs. Small, as it seemed, was equally vigilant in attempting to bring forward something of which she could say, "There! you can't pick any flaws in that!"

Once she thought this happiness would be hers. A certain man in the town inherited large wealth under peculiar circumstances. It was his LUCAS HOUSE (Temperance.) under the law, but when the court awarded it to him he stood up and said that, in view of all the facts in the case, he believed that the property belonged of right to another heir. His action was generally looked upon as a noble one.

Mrs. Small was loud in her expressions of praise.

"Yes, I know," said her husband, 'twas a fine thing. Few men would have done it; and that's why he felt so awkward to stand up there and say what he did. He showed that he felt

IS CHARLES A. DANA, WHO GUIDES THE NEW YORK SUN.

A Man of Gigantic Intellect and Executive Ability-How and When He Works

Journalist-Some of His Characteristics. Than Mr. Dana of the New York Sun there is probably no greater living journalist. For nearly fifty years he has been a member of the fourth estate, and for over twenty-five years he has guided the course of one of America's greatest dailies. Today he is the most prominent figure in the journalistic world on either side of the Atlantic. The position he has gained is due for the most part to his splendid executive ability, but he is also a man of immense intellect-in fact, he is a born journalist and could not help but succeed. No trait is more characteristic of Mr. Dana than his intolerance of anything like humbug about his professional labors

CHARLES A. DANA. or methods, says Edward P. Mitchell, in McClure's Magazine. For almost fifty years he has managed to keep easily ahead of the clock, and to meet, without much personal consciousness of effort, all sorts of new and suddenly developed situations requiring swift decision as between courses of action momentously different. Mr. Dana's own imagination has never decorated with mystic importance this power to dispose rapidly and accurately of any newspaper question that comes up at any hour of the day or night. It has never seemed remarkable to him that he should be able to get out his paper morning after morning without any sense on his part of high pressure or extraordinary intellectual strain. He works hard, and, at the same time, it is quite true that he works easily, for he works with absolute tranquility, undisturbed by that most common and most wearing attendant of mental effort, the mind's constant recognition of its own attitude towards the labor in which it is at the time engaged.

The rather naked little room in The Sun building in which Mr. Dana has sat almost daily for twenty-five years is a surprise to many persons who see it for the first time. In the middle of the small room a desk table of black walnut; a shabby little round table at the window, where Mr. Dana sits when the day is dark; one leather-covered chair, which does duty at either post, and two wooden chairs, both rickety, for visitors on errands of business or ceremony; on the desk a revolving case with a few dozen books of reference; an ink-pot and pen, not much used, except in correcting manuscript or proofs, for Mr. Dana talks off to a stenographer his editorial articles and his correspondence; a big pair of shears and two or three extra pairs of spectacles-these few articles constitute practically the whole objective equipment of the editor of

Mr. Dana's theories of journalism! Well, he scarcely ever stopped to consider them himself. He has always been much more concerned about the practical question of making for to-morrow morning a paper which its purchasers will be sure to read. Mr. Dana has lectured more than once on journalism, and his audiences and the readers of his published remarks have been delighted with his presentation of the subject; but his experience is too ripe and his wisdom far too alert to attempt a code of specific directions for the making of a great newspaper. What Mr. Dana himself writes in the Sun or elsewhere has that indefinable piquant quality of style which holds your interest and makes you read on without conscious effort, instead of laboring on, with admiration—the flavor that is in Charles Reade, but not in George Meredith or George Eliot; in field strawberries, but not in California peaches.

In judging or using the prose or poetry of others the great editor is hospitable to almost any respectable style or method, no matter how different from his own, as long as the writer has something to say. His tastes are very catholic. He can tolerate either a style approaching barrenness in its simplicity or rhetoric that is florid and ornate in extreme, providing it conveys ideas that are not rubbish. He is continually reaching out for fresh vigor, unconventional modes, originality of thought and phrase. If all Mr. Dana's staff of writers should happen to be cast in one mould, or should gradually assimilate themselves to a single type, so that there was monotony of expression in his paper, he would become uneasy. The first thing that would probably occur to him to do would be to send out for a blacksmith, or had six. The same is true of the engines, perhaps the second mate of a tramp steamship, to write for the Sun in the interests of virility and variety. If he had good ideas, all right; Mr. Dana himself would attend to the syntax. Imagination is a quality for which he has the highest respect, but it must go with sincerity. Dullness he cannot stand. He is as impatient of wishy-washy writing as of cant. He pities a fool, and can be kind to him, but he hates a sham; and this hatred, seated in the profoundest depths of his nature, is the key to much that has puzzled some observers of Mr. Dana's proa fessional career. In all his relations with his subordinates and assistants in every department he is a model chief. He is true to his helpers, reasonable in his requirements, constant in a good opinion once formed. His eyes are on every part of the Apaper every day, and they are not less sharp for points of defect than for points of excellence, but his tongue is ten times quicker to praise than to blame. Generous and prompt recognition of good service of any sort, or of honest, although only part-hally successful, effort, is habitual with him. His condemnation can also be partieularly emphatic, if there is occasion for emphasis, but faults provoke him to humorous commiserations, rather than anger

BOATS OVERLAND.

Capt, Eads' Scheme Revived in a Ship Railway Project.

Everything about canals and ship railways is interesting to Canada just now, and so the project, which has just been revived, to build a ship railway through The Dalles, Oregon, the great gorge of the Columbia rivers, is timely. The United States has granted $150,000 to defray the engineer's -A Glimpse of the Daily Life of a Great preliminary expenses.

The suggestion of a railway for the transportation of seagoing vessels over land did not come from the officers of the U.S. War Department; it was made first by James B. Eads, the famous engineer, who came forward about twelve years ago with a plan for a ship railway across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, Mexico. Captain Eads' scheme was then regarded as visionary, and, although he laid it before the Congress of that country, that body failed to take action. Now, however, that the creator of the idea has been dead five years, its Congress has recognized the value of his suggestion.

The physical features of the country at The Dalles will compel the moderation of Captain Eads' Tehuantepec plans to some extent, but on the whole they will be generally carried out. The point that Eads made, which was laughed at twelve years ago, is that ships are strong enough to stand a trip on a well-ballasted and level railroad without undue strains. In proof of this Captain Eads prepared plans for the Tehuantepec ship railway, which contemplated two ordinary ship railways, such as are used for hauling out vessels for purposes of repair. One of these was at either end of the line and the connection between was a straight and nearly level railroad with as many tracks as the size and weight of the vessels to be carried required. He contemplated at the eastern terminus of his road a basin into which a great car could be run upon submerged tracks. The vessel to be transported was then to be floated over the bar, her keel placed exactly over a specially prepared rest for it, "bilge blocks" to support her on the sides pushed under her. and firm lashings made. Then two enormous double-ended locomotives, twice as large as any now in use, would pull the car gradually up the inclined bottom of the basin, which was to have an ascent of but one foot in a hundred. Once out on dry land it would be a comparatively simple operation to haul the car and its load over the railroad to the basin at the other end of the line, and there reverse the operation just described.

The great stumbling block in the way of the whole plan has generally been thought by engineers to be the difficulty of obtaining an arrangement of braces and supports on the car, which, while sustaining the vessel rigidly on all sides, would still themselves respond to the necessary twisting of the car as it passed over the roadbed. Captain Eads was met with this objection, and he insisted that it was not well founded, as a ship is built sufficiently strong to withstand greater strains than she could possibly receive in being slowly and carefully carried over a smooth rail-road bed. The U.S. War Department engineers have to some extent held to their original opinion, at least to the length of devising a new kind of car to support the and complicated set of springs, which will be so arranged that they will fit the form of the vessel at every point below the water line, much as the water itself does. This device, the engineers think, will take the place of the inward pressure of the water, which very largely aids in neutralizing the outward pressure of the cargo against the sides of the ship. As the Columbia River at The Dalles will only float vessels of 14 feet draught, and that at high water, the experiment of building a ship railway there will not be as conclusive a test as at some point where ocean-going ships of from 20 to 26 feet draught and corresponding tonnage could be carried. Still, a ship of 4000 tons can be readily built on a the worst known for years. It is doubt-14-foot draught, and many are already plying on the Columbia River of two and three thousand.

The Dalles, or, as they are known, the Great Dalles, of the Columbia river, are really a great series of rapids, caused by the contraction of the river to a width of

A VESSEL IN TRANSPORTATION.

200 feet between walls of rock seventy feet The nature of the land and its rocky character make a canal and locks impossible except at fabulous expense, and also seem to offer a great obstacle to a ship railway. It seems at first impossible to overcome the difficulty presented by the wall of rock 70 feet high, which prevented a railroad being built to the water's edge, The army engineers have, however, determined to obviate this trouble by building at either end of the ship railway an enormous lift, or elevator, which, by hydraulic power, will raise and lower the car with the loaded vessel. The railroad proper will be about fourteen miles long and will follow a course through the rugged country of The Dalles which will be nearly straight, it being deemed advisable to avoid curves of over two degrees. Captain Eads' plans regarding tracks are likely to be closely adhered to, save that not more than five will be needed whereas the Tehuantepec road was to have which will haul the ships and cars. Designs for them have not yet been made, but it is apparent that to do the best work they will have to be specially constructed.

Russian Finances.

It is rather difficult to form a correct opinion on the financial condition of an autocratically governed empire like that of Russia, where little reliance can be placed in the official publications. It must be acknowledged that the government hither to has rigidly observed its obligations to ward its foreign creditors, yet English capitalists have sold nearly all their property invested in Russian securities, and this for the simple reason that the finances of a country which goes on borrowing annually, even in times of profound peace, deserve no confidence. The Germans have followed, and France, having bought most of these bonds, is now the foremost creditor of Russia, the sum total of her securities in French hands being estimated at no less than 5 milliards of francs.

Happiness Galore, Although Many Pipes Were Broken in Pursuit.

"Mamms! oh, Mamma! See what Phillip Jay brought, see it is a piece of cardboard with a real pipe tied to it-what pretty blue ribbon. Read it, Mamma, quick!"

As soon as mamma could explain to the breathless little girl that it was an invitation to play soap-bubbles with her little friend Lenore Jay, that afternoon, she danced off to show her treasure and tell her next door neighbor about it, She found he had an invitation, too. Both children could scarcely wait for the time to pass until it was at the hour for meeting at Lenore's.

Mrs. Jay had provided plenty of pipes, and a bowl of soapsuds on the hardwood floor of the dining room, and there they merrily and safely amused themselves and Lona, the baby, all the long, bright afternoon. A little before 5 o'clock, Mamma, Jay and Phillip came in with cookies and lemonade. Later, as the little guests wandered homeward looking for flowers and ripe berries in the hedges and gathering the sweet wild roses, they agreed that it was the nicest party they were ever at, for as they said, "soapsuds doesn't hurt calico and gingham. It didn't matter if the pipes did break, and it was so much fun seeing who could make the biggest bubble." How much happiness there can be at a soapbubble party is vividly depicted in the accompanying illustration. - American Agri-

Two Interesting Babies,

This seems to be the year of interesting babies. There is that one, as you know, the little Prince Edward, born to the Duke and Duchess of York, making the fourth in the direct line of succession to the throne, the first and only baby in English history who was ever born while three of his predecessors were still living.

And now there's another baby almost as interesting, the little daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Peary, born way up in Greenland, further north than any white child ever dreamed of being born before

The relief party which went out to find Lieut. Peary found him safe and sound, and the baby quite a year old. The little one comes back with his mother, while It will be fitted with an elaborate | Lieut. Peary stays another year to complete his work.

Lieut. Peary, by the way, has not been much more fortunate than the rest of the Arctic explorers this year. Mr. Wellman, you remember, lost all his boats and equipments before he came home. Dr. Cook lost his ship, the Miranda, and all the trophies his party had taken. Other explorers have lost their lives, for the Arctic regions this winter have been harder to explore than ever. The floating ice has been tremendous, filling even the seas that are sometimes open. Lieut. Peary says that the storms and the cold have been the chance at ful whether any white man ever encountered any to equal them.

Even the dogs were frozen under the snow during the storm when the Lieutenant and his men were making an exploration. Some of the dogs were frozen to death, and others were frozen so fast to the ice that the men had to chop them loose. The wind blew at the rate of 48 miles an hour, and the thermometer fell to 60 degrees below zero. This was when the party had encamped on an ice cap 5,. 000 feet above the sea. Still there are people who love an Arctic expedition better than anything else in the world.—Lillie Hamilton French in New York World.

GRANARY WEEVILS.

An Interesting Letter From Mr. Fletcher, Dominion Entomologist. James Fletcher, Dominion entomologist, plant were sown this season, by beekeepwrites in regard to this pest: ers in this country, and their experience "A good deal of consternation was felt lately at the World's Columbian exposition, at Chicago, when it became known that all the exposed grain, including the ornaments and decorations in the different courts of the Agricultural building, was infested by injurious insects. An order was issued by the superintendent of the agricultural department forbidding the distribution of any grain from those courts, even when brought in from outside for that express purpose. Being in Chicago at the time, I made a careful examination of the agricultural exhibits and found that the injury in the Canadian section was due almost entirely to two insects, the common rice weevil, Calandra orvzæ (Fig. 8, where the insect is shown natural size, and nine, where it is shown enlarged) and the 'fly weevil,' better known as the Angoumois grain moth, Gelechia cerealella, a small moth at first sight, closely resembling the too wellknown carpet moth. With the rice weevil were also found a few specimens of any danger of introducing into Canada any new pests which would afterwards give trouble either in the field or in the granary. In my opinion, Canadian farm ers need have no anxiety on this score; for both of the pests have already from time to time been imported from the south with various kinds of grain, but have failed to propagate and become established. This is due to the fact that they are tropical insects, which, although they are very injurious in the southern states, cannot exist for any length of time in our climate.

"The granary weevils are small brown beetles, a little more than one-eighth of an inch in length, which lay their eggs in making bee feed without any of them holes which they bore by means of a proving very satisfactory. If the syrup is slender beak in the dry grain. When too thin it will sour and if too thick it will young grabs hatch, they complete their granulate. The principal trouble I had growth and turn to beetles again inside with it was that it would get so hard in the grain where the egg was laid. this time they have eaten the interior of the ker-The beetles then emerge and continue the work of destruction. When grain is kept in store for a long time, this injury may be considerable in hot climates; years ago we commenced the cold-water but in Canada the cold of our winters stops their development and destroys the beetles. "The 'fly weevil' has never developed in Canada even to the same extent as the true weevils, although occasional instances of its occurrences have been brought to my notice. In the southern states, where it is very abundant, the moths fly from the granaries and lay their eggs upon the ripe grain in the fields; the eggs of young caterpillars are thus carried back again into the granary, and frequently are the cause of much loss. This never takes place in Canada

"Remedy: Should grain at any time be found to be infested by these insects, often repeated experiment has shown that the insects can be easily and cheaply destroyed by treating it with bisulphide or earbon, in the same way that peas are now regularly treated to free them from the pea weevil."

With plenty of windows and doors below and this opening over the manger, and good bedding used freely, the air of the stable is always sweet and wholesome. For laying stable floors only Portland cement should be used, but as a barrel of it will make nearly 100 square feet of floor for a cow stable, and good Portland cement can now be bought at $3 per barrel, the cost of the material is actually less than that of plank and joist, for with suitable joist and a two-inch floor it will require nearly 400 feet of lumber for 100 square feet of floor, and this would cost me $2 a hundred manger, manure ditch, cellar and bedding room and a walk two feet wide back of the part of cement to six parts of good gravel, or finely broken stone four parts and coarse sand two parts, will answer. This is thoroughly mixed dry, then slightly wet by sprinkling with a watering pot, and shoroughly mixed until every pebble is coated with the cement, and then rammed solid. The finishing coat is mixed, two parts of sand to one of cement, thoroughly tempered and poured on quite thin and level, and then left to harden. Little skill is required to put down a cement floor, as any one can, with a level and straightedge, get it level, and it does not need to be troweled smooth, as horses and cattle would be less likely to slip on it if left rough. We lay in sections four or five feet wide by staking 2x4 or 2x6 edges and level it with a light straight edge.

LESSON III, FOURTH QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 21.

Text of the Lesson, Mark i, 21-34-Memory Verses, 27, 28-Golden Text, Mark i, 22 - Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

21. "And they went into Capernaum, and straightway on the Sabbath day He entered into the synagogue and taught. This lesson probably comes in order after the call of the four from mending their nets, etc., rather than after the call from the draft of fishes, but let us see Jesus, and the order of events may not matter so much. Capernaum signifies the village of Nahum, the comforter, and the true Comforter has come to His own city (Math. ix, 1). It was His custom to be in the synagogue on the Sabbath (Luke iv, 16), and we may be sure it was His custom never to be late.

22. "And they were astonished at His doctrine, for He taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes." He always preached the word and in the words which the Father gave Him to say (John xii, 49; xiv, 10). His words were the assertions of absolute confidence in God and in the Scriptures. He said, "We speak that we do know" (John iii, 11). We also, if sent by God, may speak boldly the message which He gives us (Ex. iv, 12; Jer. i, 7, 8; Acts iv, 31).

23. "And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit, and he cried out." Evil spirits still go to church and Sunday school in the bodies of men and women and boys and girls, but not without the consent of those in whom they go. Anger, wrath, malice, worldliness, deceit, hypocrisy, are surely evil spirits. In fact, all that is not holy and true must be evil.

24. "Saying: Let us alone. What have we to do with Thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God." Let us alone is still the cry. We will go to church and contribute to the cause if you will only let us alone about the theater and the ball, social customs, Sunday newspapers and Sunday driving, receiving Jesus, preparing to meet Him and such like. But it is no use; we must all have to do with Jesus. He will destroy the works of the devil (I John iii, 8), and if those works include any of us then we from the air, will have little difficulty in shall have to hear Math. xxv, 41.

25. "And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace and come out of him. He spoke to the spirit who was controlling the man. He hates sin, but loves the sinner. Let us also see to this and act likewise. Sin must be destroyed, and if the correctly, the bees gather a rich harvest sinner persists in clinging to his sin he, too, must perish, but the Lord wishes to save the sinner and blot out his sins (II what serious drawback to growing it in

Pet. iii, 9). 26. "And when the unclean spirit had torn him and cried with a loud voice he came out of him." He cast out the spirits with His word (Math. viii, 16). Where the word of a king is there is power (Eccl. vili, 4), and Jesus gave His disciples powwould only believe His word, "All power upon getting Paine's Celery Compound; me." is given unto Me in Heaven and on earth, and, lo, I am with you all the days, even unto the consummation of the age! the cells that even a robber bee could not (Math. xxviii, 18-20,) eat it. A beekeeper who has had twenty

27. "And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying: What thing is this? What new doctrine is this?" The obedience of the demons to His word surprised them, and well it might, for whoever heard of evil spirits controlled by a word which men resist? Let His word be now received in all simplicity and meekness, and no evil spirit of fault finding, fretting, slander or evil speaking can abide in that person. Then will some have to say,"What new doctrine is this?"

28. "And immediately His fame spread abroad throughout all the region roundabout Galilee." If the preaching in any church today should cure even the major ity of its members of the evil spirits which seem to possess so many, what a name Jesus would get in that community! Why not with all our hearts determine that by His grace we will seek in every way to magnify that honorable name which is called upon us (Jas. ii, 7, R. V., margin).

29. "Azd forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew with James and John." Happy men to take Jesus home from church with them. How many get all they want of Him while in church, more than enough to do them a Him home from church with them, they could not go out driving in the afternoon, nor go visiting, nor read novels.

of a fever, and anon they tell Him of her." Perhaps a poor day for Simon to bring company (four men) home to dinner-his wife might think so, with her mother sick in bed-but we will hope she was one of those blessed women whom some of us know, who are always glad to exercise hospitality, who live to minister.

is specially the gospel of service, and Jesus this, "He took her by the hand." Note also the words straightway, anon, immediately, forthwith, all the same word in the Greek-see R. V.-used over 40 times in this gospel and only about 80 times in the whole New Testament.

82, 83. "And at even when the sun did leaden ones everywhere, sick in body and in soul, and this Jesus is today the very same Jesus (Heb. xiii, 8), waiting to give rest of soul and quietness of mind to every weary heart, and when He giveth quietness who then can make trouble? (Job xxxiv, 29.) 84. "And He healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils, and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew Him." The margin says that He suffered them not to say that they knew Him. The testimony of the evil spirit in Acts xvi, 17, sounds well. What could be better? Yet it was not tolerated. God requires no help from the devil. When will His peords see this and stop seeking help for the Lord's work from those who are not His children, and therefore must

A RAINY DAY GAME. Egg football is said to be a capital cure for boredom on a rainy day, and beside it golf is utter foolishuess. The game was introduced by a lively Boston girl into house parties about Lenox and Stock bridge. It is played on a large dining table and with a hen's egg blown empty of its contents. Those playing divide themselves into two groups of elevens. With pennies goals are stalked out on the bare boards and the egg is placed between the goals. Then the idea of the players is to blow the egg through their opponents' goals. No one is permitted to touch the egg or table with his or her hands. It is entirely a matter of lungpower. #### HOW TEACHERS TEACH.

Instructive Half-Yearly Meeting of the E. M. T. A.

Use of the Slated Globe, Relaxation, Studies Made Interesting and Other Topics Touched.

The half-yearly meeting of the East Middlesex Teachers' Association opened this merning in the county council hall at 10 a.m., Mr. J. W. Plewes, president, in the chair. The Rev. Ira Smith opened the meeting with devotional exercises. The secretary, Miss. C. A. Jeffrey, submitted the report of the minutes of the May meeting, and read a communication from Secretary Young, of the Provincial Association, asking copies of the resolutions of general interest adopted by the meeting.

Inspector Dearness distributed to those who wished them sets of the high school entrance, public school leaving, commercial

Mr. George Bloomfield, Byron, tock up the use of the slated globe and his method of teaching geography from it. He illustrated, using colored chalk on the black slated surface, how many of the elementary problems in a mathematical geography, such as latitude and longitude, zones, ecliptic, etc., can be made clear to second, third and fourth class pupils. A cord attached to a point representing the center of the sun, was made to describe planes so that the phenomena of the seasons were iliustrated and made very simple.

Mr. Bloomfield answered several questions, and Mr. Liddicoatt opened the dis cussion. The black globe is not used in many schools yet, but after the address and discussion today its use will likely be much more general in the county.

Ninety-three teachers answered the forenoon roll call.

AFTERNOON SESSION. At the opening of the afternoon session the attendance was so large that the association adjourned to the Court House.

Miss Flora McCall, of S. S. No. 10, Westminster, gave a very interesting address entitled "Relaxation." A great aid in making school-room machinery run smoothly is frequent relaxation, taking but little time while it stimulates brain action. A minute or two spent in a calisthenic exercise, a brisk motion song, a quick march around the room, or in any other drill that changes the course of thought enables pupils to return to lessons with refreshed vigor, and both teacher and pupils are thereby disposed to look at difficulties from a brighter point of view. Besides the physical benefits from properly-conducted calisthenic exercises, the prompt and quiet obedience to signals and words begets desirable habits of general application. On a dark rainy day, when yawning and fidgeting are likely to be the rule, we start up the song, "We are happy while in school tho 'tis a rainy day," then clap, clap, clap together, etc. Before we get through the song we are really happy and ready to work again cheerfully. For special days we have special exercises and decorations. York to Queenstown in 5 days, 9 hours and For example, on Thanksgiving, the chilleaves, ferns and flowers. Miss McColl pro ribbon, pressed ceeded to show how the indoor recesses of rainy and inclement days may be turned to good account, and dwelt on the importance of the teachers taking a sympathetic interest in all the plays and games of the pupils. She dictated a series of twenty calisthenic exercises to the teachers, and illustrated them by the help of a number of her pupils. The exercises, action, songs and simultaneous recitations of these pupils were exceedingly well rendered, and received the well deserved thanks of the association. Miss Aggie Davidson, of Crumlin, followed with a profitable address, describing how she makes the study of physiology and hygiene interesting to her pupils. Starting with Herbert Spencer's co-ordination of studies she made a strong plea for the earnest teaching of the subject in all the public school classes. She showed by a large variety of examples how it may be taught experimentally, and dwelt on the opportunities that the teacher has to impress most useful lessons bearing on the healthful carriage of the body, ventilation, diet, olothing and cleanliness. She gives physical exercises, not so much for growth as to correct false positions and wrong habits. She gave a model lesson on the "teeth," which was said by some of the teachers to be as fine a sample of teaching as they had ever heard, and concluded by illustrating how abstinence from alcohol and tobacco might be incidentally inculcated. Mr. R. M. Graham, principal of the model school, complimented Miss Davidson on her address, and referred to the fact that teachers are required to teach this and one or two other subjects without getting a training in them at the high schools. He made some pleasing and interesting references to his connection with the association some years ago. Mr. Dearness, from experience gained in reading examination papers on physiology and hygiene, strongly advised the teachers to take up fewer points and to teach these thoroughly; if possible, by the experimental and observation method, illustrated by Miss Davidson.

WINDSOR'S BOOM.

American capital is pouring into Windsor, which is fast assuming the role of a first-class enterprising town. The new and striking changes which are evident in the movement over there are due in part to the dash and enthusiasm of R. O. Kinney, one of the most successful real estate dealers of Detroit. Mr. Kinney saw the possibilities which awaited a bustler in Windsor, and he started big operations which have met with marvelous success. Some leading capitalists have been interested in the deals and already large tracts of land have been secured practically in the heart of Windsor, and these are now undergoing general marketable change.

The subdivision is just one and a half miles from the Detroit city hall and can be reached quickly. Millionaire McLeod's Will. TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Chancellor Boyd yesterday gave judgment in the case of the W. C. McLeod estate. Mr. McCarthy, Q.C., for Wm. C. McLeod, a son of the deceased, moved for an order removing a petition for letters of administration from the Surrogate Court of the county of Oxford to the High Court. The estate in question amounts to $700,000. The deceased was a resident of Woodstock and died intestate. The petition for letters of administration was presented by the widow and the trusts corporation of Ontario. The present application contended that difficult questions of law arose upon the petition, especially in view of joint administration being sought by the person entitled to a grant and her nominee, and in view of certain allegations made by the applicant as to the conduct of the widow in relation to certain insurance policies. The applicant also contended hat the case should be removed because the judge of the Surrogate Court of Oxford is a shareholder in the trusts corporation, and therefore disqualified to adjudicate upon their petition for probate. Moss, Q.C., for the widow and the trusts corporation, opposed the application. W. Cassels, Q.C., Guthrie, Q.C., W. Davidson and W. M. Douglas, for the other next of kin, supported the application. After a lengthy argument the Chancellor suggested that the necessity for the removal of the case to the High Court might be obviated if the parties agreed that administration of part of the estate should be granted to the widow or her nomines, and of the remainder to the next of kin or their nominee. "Well, I think the men are wrong," acknowledged the pawnbroker, smoothing down his white linen apron. "And foolish too."

Mrs. Gass nodded several times, a significant look on her pleasant face. She wore a top-knot of white feathers, and they bowed majestically with the movement.
"Maybe they'll live to see it, too. They will, unless their senses come back to 'empretty quickly. Look here, Ducket; what I was about to say is this — don't be too free to take their traps in.' Ducket's face assumed a mournful cast, but Mrs. Gass was looking at him, evidently waiting for an answer.

"I don't see my way clear to refusing things when they are brought to me, Mrs. Gass. ma'am. The women 'ould only go off to Whitborough and pledge 'em there." "Then they should go - for me."

"Yes, ma'am," rejoined the man, not knowing what else to say. "I'm not particul" squeamish. Ducket: trade's trade; and a pawnbroker must live as well as other people. I don't say but what the money he lends does sometimes a world of good to them that has no other elp to turn to - and, maybe, through no fault of their own, poor things. But when it comes to dismantling homes by the score, and leaving families as destitute as ever they were when they came into this blessed world, that's different. And I wouldn't like to have it on my conscience, Ducket, though I was ten pawnbrokers."

last words, leaving Ducket to digest them. In passing North Iniet, she saw a group of the disaffected collected together, and turned out of her way to speak to them. Mrs. Gass was quite at home, so to say, with than a lady of better birth and breeding could ever have been. She found fault with them, and commented on their failings as familiarly as though she had been one of themselves. Of the whole body of workpeople, not more than three or four had consistently raised their voices against the strike. These few would willingly have gone to work again, and thought it a terrible hardship that they could not do so; but of course the refusal of the majority to re turn practically closed the gates to all. Richard North could not keep his business going with only half-a-dozen pairs of hands in it. "Well," began Mrs. Gass, "what's the time o' day with you men?" The men parted at the address, and touched their caps. The "time o' day" meant, as they knew, anything but the literal question. "How much longer do you intend to lead the lives of gentlefo k?"

"It's what we was a talking on, ma'am — how much longer Richard North II keep the gates closed again'us," returned one whose name was Webb, speaking boldly but re-

"Don't you put the saddle on the wrong horse, Webb; I told you that the other day. Mr. Richard North didn't close the gates again' you; you closed 'em again' yourselves by walking out. He'd open them to you tomorrow, and be glad to do it."

"Yes, ma'am, but on the old terms," debated the man, looking obstinately at Mrs.

Gass. "What have you to say again' the old terms!" demanded that lady of the men collectively. "Haven't they kept you and your families in comfort for years and years? Where was your grumblings then? I heard

"But things is changed," said Webb.
"Not a bit of it," retorted Mrs. Gass. "It's you men that have changed; not the things. I'll put a question to you, Well—to all of you—and it won't do you any harm to answer it. If these Trade Union men had never come amongst you with their persussions and doctrines, should you, or should you not, have been at your work now in content and peace? Be honest, Webb, and reply.

"I suppose so," confessed Webb.
"You know so," corrected Mrs. Gass.
"It is as Mr. Richard said the other day to me - the men are led away by a chimera, which means a false fancy, Webb; a sham. There's the place"—pointing in the direction of the works—"and there's your work, waiting for you to do it. Mr. Richard will give you the same wages that he has always given; you say you won't go to work unless he gives more; which he can't afford to do. And there it rests: you, and him, and the business, all at a standstill."

"And likely to be at a standstill, ma'am," returned Webb, but always respectfully.
"Very well; let's take it at that," said Mrs. Gass, with equanimity. "Let's take it that it lasts, this state of things. What's to come of it?"

Webb, an intelligent man and superior workman, looked out straight before him thoughtfully, as if searching a solution to the question. Mrs. Gass, finding he did not answer, resumed.

"If the Trade's Unions can find you per m anently in food and drink, and clothes and firing, well and good. Let 'em do it; there'd be no more to say. But if they can't?" "They undertake to keep us as long as the masters hold out." "And the money — where's it had from?"

"Subscribed. All the working bodies throughout the United Kingdom subscribe to the Trades' Unions, ma'am."

"I heard," said Mrs. Gass, "that you were not getting quite as liberal a keep from the Trades' Unions as they gave you to begin

"That's true," interrupted one named Foster, who very much resented the shortening of supplies.

Mrs. Gass gave a toss of her lace parasol. that — that your wives had begun to spout their spare crockery," said she. "What'll just feel how nice and soft my hands you do when the allowance grows less and are.

less till it comes to nothing, and all your things is at the pawnshop?

One or two of them laughed slightly. Not at her figures of speech — the homely language was their own — but at the improbability of the picture she called up. It was a state of affairs impossible to arise, they answered, whilst they had the Trades'

Unions at their backs.
"Isn't it," said Mrs. Gass. "Those that live longest 'll see most. There's strikes agate all over the country. You know that, my men."
Of course the men knew it. But for the general example set by others, they might never have struck themselves.

"Very good," said Mrs. Gass. "Now look here. You can see out before you just as well as I can, men; your senses are as sharp as mine. When nearly the whole country goes on the strike, where are the subscripions to come from for the Trades' Unions! Don't it stand to common reason that there'll be nobody to pay 'em? Who'll keep

It was the very thing wanted - that all the country should go on strike; for then the masters must give in, was the reply. And then the men stood their ground and looked

Mrs. Gass shook her head; the feathers waved. She supposed it must be as Richard North had said - the men in their prejudice really could not foresee what might be looming in the future.

"It seems no good my talking," she resumed; "I've said it before. If you don't come to repent, my name's not Mary Gass. I'm far from wishing it; goodness knows; and I shall be heartily sorry for your wives and hildren when the misery comes upon 'em. Not for you; because you are bringing it deliberate on yourselves."

"We don't doubt your good wishes for us stand in the shoes of a master, and naturally look on from the masters' point of view. Your interests lie that way, ours this, and they're dead opposed to each

"Well, now, I'll just say something," cried Mrs. Gass. "As far as my own interest is concerned, I don't care one jot whether the works go on again, or whether they stand still for ever. I've as much money as will last me my time. If every pound locked up in the works is lost, it'll make no sort of difference to me, or my home, or my comforts — and you ought to know this yourselves. I shall have as much to leave behind me, too, as I care to leave. But, if you come to talking of interests, I tell you whose I do think of, more than I do of my own — and that's yours and Mr. Richard North's. I am as easy on the matter, on my own score, as a body can be; but I'm not so on yours or his." It was spoken with simple earnestness. Infact Mrs. Gass was incapable of deceit or sophistry - and the men knew it. But they thought that, in spite of her honesty, she could only be prejudiced against the work-Mrs. Gass quitted the shop with the men; and consequently her words had no st words, leaving Ducket to digest them. more weight with them than the idle wind. The After Effects of La Grippe Developed Into Inflammation of the Lungs and Chronic Bronchitis-After Four Years of Suffering Health Is Almost Miraculously Restored.

(From LeMonde, Montreal.) Mrs. Sarah Cloutier, who resides at No. 405 Montealm street, Montreal, has passed through an experience which is worthy of a widespread publication for the benefit it may prove to others. Up to four years age, Mrs. Cloutier's health had been good, but at that time she was attacked by that dread scourge, la grippe. Every fall since, notwithstanding all her care to avoid it, she has been afflicted with inflammation of the lungs, which would bring her to the very verge of death. This was followed by bronchia for the rest of the year. Her bronchial tubes were affected to such an extent that it was with difficulty she coul breathe, and a draught of outside air would make her cough in the most distressing manner. "There was," said Mrs. Cloutier to the reporter, "a constant rattling sound in my throat, and in the state I was in, death would have been a relief. I could not attend to my affairs nor to my house, and had it not been for my niece, on whom I relied, I cannot say what would have become of me. I had read frequently of the cures effected by Dr. Wil liams' Pink Pills, and I fek that they must contain the truth, for if they were unfounded none would dare to give the names and addresses of the persons said to be cured in the public manner in which they were given in the newspapers. I decided to try Pink Pilis, and none but those who were acquainted with my former condition can understand the good I have derived from their use, which I continued until I telt that I was completely cured. As a proof that I am cured I may tell you that on the first occasion of my going out after my recovery I walked for two miles on a

up-hill road without feeling the least fatigue or the least part for breath, and since that time I have enjoyed the best of health. Last tall I was afraid that the inflammation of the lungs to which I had been subject at that period of former years might return, but I had not the least symptom of it, and never felt better in my life. You can imagine the gratitude I feel for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I recommend them to all who will heed my advice, and I do not think it possible for me to ssy too much in favor of this wonderful remedy, the use of which in other cases as well as

THE CITY ELECTION. Last night at a meeting of the executive committee of the London Liberal Association it was resolved to call a general meeting of the Liberals of the city, to be held in the Liberal rooms, Oddfellows' Hall, on Thursday evening next. At that meeting a candidate will be selected to take the scat vacated in the Legislature by the resignation of Mr. W. R. Meredith. This prompt action is to be commended. As yet no one knows when the election will be brough on, but it is very proper that no unnecessary time should be lost.

Miss White's Works of Art. Those who take an interest in what goes on in the artistic world both at home and abroad may be interested to learn that there is at present in this city a lady artist from England of recognized talent and experience, Miss Flora White, who comes to this country with the best of introductions from Sir Frederie Leighton, president of the Royal Academy, and other eminent artists. An English child, sent to France, at an early age to be educated, Miss White's latent artistic possibilities were fostered from the beginning by being constantly thrown in contact with much that is gifted and renowned both in the studios of France and of England. In the beginning of her career the young English girl found warm and influential friends in such men as Alma Tadema, Carl Rosa, Sir active interest and kindly criticism en-

Among the many orders Miss White has received was a Government order from the President of Madras, India, for a portrait of the Queen for the museum which was specially altered to receive it. This picture which is a full length life-size of her Majesty has been considered a most happy likeness, and gave much satisfaction when it arrived in India. Her Excellency the Countess of Aberdeen became a purchaser of a picture and has since given Miss White an order for further work. But as this lady's visit to Canada was primarily for the sake of her health she has up to the present time been resting and recuperating.
