Polish Hell for Iron Curtain DJ

By MELYNDA JARRATT
One need only look into the eyes of this man to realize the depth of his conviction to leave Poland. For over five years now - since he first came to North America for a brief visit - Jan Pawul has conducted a tireless but secret campaign to emigrate from what he considers an "oppressive regime" in Communist ruled Poland. For the past two years he has been writing to The Brunswickian as well as to the music industry's trade magazines across North America telling his story for all to hear.

The most recent letter we received from Pawul was apparently smuggled out of the country by a friend and then mailed Priority Post to various points across North America by a contact in New York. Photocopied and stapled together, this eleven page document seems to indicate that he has reached the breaking point in his attempts to emigrate, and that he is willing to risk arrest as well as a possible jail sentence to get out of Poland. The story that follows is written in the faint hope that someone will hear his desperate cry for help.

JAN PAWUL ISN'T A FAMOUS DISSIDENT and neither is he a particularly important person when it comes down to the east-west bargaining table. He is simply an ordinary man with a very interesting and extraordinary tale to tell the West. In the Priority Post letter received last week, he gives a surprisingly frank description of life in Poland, of his hatred for the Communists and the way he feels they are destroying the very fabric of Polish society. Filled with shocking revelations about Communist oppression as well as government condoned violence and crime against its vocal opposition, this story by Pawul lifts the veil on an otherwise impenetrable Iron Curtain country which has been criticized widely throughout the west for its human rights abuses. His comments are by no means an academic analysis of conditions there but they do provide a layman's point of view detailed in honesty and desperation.

By his own definition he is "an outsider" in his own country. "I am an absolutely different Polish man," he explains, and this different character has spelled trouble for he and his wife Barbara. The father of two children, profession certainly doesn't evoke sympathy in upper circles of the Communist party. On the side he runs an import business specializing in Western tapes and records and in a country where Western ideas and music are curtailed it is not surprising that this combination gets him into more trouble than he should be willing to risk.

Indeed, Pawul is taking a monumental risk simply writing these words. He realizes this, and he knows that he may be arrested for telling the truth about Poland. "Someone must write the truth. Why not me?" But, he adds quickly, "I hope that if the Communists arrest me and put me in jail, you will ask questions, write about me and never forget. I can only count on you because my countrymen are too weakened by fear to protest. If there is no answer from me - check it out please. Maybe they have arrested me because of this letter, and this will prove that they violate human rights and freedoms in Poland."

He comments bitterly on his lack of personal freedoms - the freedom of speech and in particular the right to be protected by police whom he believes are in cahoots with Polish criminals. The police tolerate violent crimes against dissidents such as himself with the hope that violent intimidation will shut him up. He says that they can even create false

Included in his last letter, was a compilation of articles written about him world-wide.

Peter 8, and Eva 12, Pawul is afraid for their future because of his ideological differences with the Communist regime.

"Life is hell here," Pawul writes, "Everything is upside-down, normal life is impossible and I have no future in Poland."

His own work as a professional disc-jockey is on the sidelines of the economy - and in a country where everyone is expected to make a contribution through their labours, this

UNB receives increase in funding

By Nujma Yaqzan

As far as universities are concerned--U.N.B. included--the 1988-89 New Brunswick budget is something to be welcomed, because they are to receive a $7.977 million increase in funding during the next year.

As well, Finance Minister Allan Maher has allotted 2.1 million extra dollars for improvements in the student aid program.

The increase in funding should please students since there will now be more dollars accessible for bursary money. According to Maher, this will be advantageous for students with families, as well as those enrolled in costly study programs. It should also help more students who apply for scholarships directly awarded by the universities.

The Maritime Provinces Higher Education Commission initially requested a ten percent increase in existing funds available to it, but is satisfied with the 6.8 percent hike it received. The Commission now has an estimated total of 117,914 dollars to work with. The Department of Advanced Education and Training will receive approximately 79,007 dollars, and the Department of Education is anticipating an estimated 491,978 dollars.

The University of New Brunswick's vice-president of finance, James O'Sullivan, comments that with "this kind of budget, this increase is encouraging."

UNB Student Union president Jane Arnold says she has to "congratulate" the government on its new budget as far as higher education goes.

The new budget has also lowered the minimum level of debt for students to become eligible for rebates on parts of their Canada Student Loans. The level is now fixed at $8000. Many students apply yearly for these loans and this decrease should lower the financial pressure somewhat for them.

Indirectly related to universities, but directly related to students, is the fact that the province plans to invest $5.6 million in its Youth Employment strategy. And after reviewing this strategy in Ottawa, this figure could rise to as much as $13.5 million. Under this program, approximately 10,000 "youths" will be able to receive services like educational upgrading and counselling.

The Department of Labour is planning to spend 19.3 million on work experience programs to include students. With this extra money, the province hopes to provide numerous job opportunities for its students that would not normally be offered. According to a local Canada Employment official, "we should be able to employ every student in this province who wants a job." However, he explains that although there will be enough existing jobs to cover everyone, everyone does not necessarily possess the required credentials to be chosen for a particular type of work, nor would they necessarily be interested in an opportunity that might be presented to them.

The 1988-89 budget has been unveiled and is not likely to change. In a recent article in the Daily Gleaner, it commented, "The province's 1988-89 budget is good for universities, students, and northern New Brunswickers, so-so for nurses and municipalities, but disappointing for the poor." This

Sexual harrasment skirmish continues

By MARK STEVENS

The fog of legal rhetoric that is obscuring the recent skirmish between James Taylor and the Student Union still hasn't lifted.

After Taylor announced that he was considering legal action, S. U. President Jane Arnold still isn't sure what's happening.

Taylor contends that his character was defamed following an ad hoc committee investigation into allegations of sexism at the Brunswickian. He has subsequently directed his lawyers to obtain all the documentation relating to the investigation.

A number of letters have been exchanged between Jane Arnold and Taylor's lawyer, Robert De Witt. But Arnold says that to date, no specific actions have been brought against the student union.

"What action?" she asked. "As far as I can see, nothing has been done yet. Also, the facts are very much in dispute. Everyone seems to have forgotten that Taylor isn't even a student."

Arnold is also upset by an article that appeared in last Friday's Brunswickian. "The news article presented a very biased opinion. It ignored the other side of the argu-statement was made based on comments by representatives of each of the aforementioned groups.

Although some people are not totally satisfied, universities and students around the province have reason to be. The increased ment. Some of its claims were silly; first of all the argument that Mr. Taylor was an employee, and secondly that statement in regards to sexual harrasment."

Arnold is referring to Taylor's claim that he was an employee of the Brunswickian, and also his contention that it is impossible to sexually harras a person that "you have never met or spoken to."

According to a letter written by De Witt to Arnold, council is of the opinion that Mr. Taylor did not have, "by any definition either proper notice of the proceedings or of an opportunity to present a fair and responsible defence... we are unable to conclude that you (Arnold) exercised proper jurisdiction, or procedure, in the arbitrary manner in which the case of Mr. James Taylor was processed.

Failing all of the above, it appears that my client would have no option other than to pursue his legal remedies in the matter since there does appear to be some indication of an implied defamation of his character by the S. U., Ms. Braun and others."

Because no concrete action has been taken, Jane Arnold is not sure what her next move will be. "I'm just going to reply to De Witt's letter, and wait," she said.

funding will not only heighten the availability of bursaries and jobs for students, but will also allow for improvements at the university level in general including libraries and campus buildings.

CARAL Forms

A meeting held Tuesday evening, March 29, 1988, has resulted in the formation of a Fredericton Chapter of the Canadian Abortion Rights Action League, CARAL.

CARAL is a nationally based pro-choice organization lobbying to ensure the freedom of choice in Canada. In Fredericton, this group of concerned women have joined forces with a coalition group called CHOIX-NB-CHOICE, which has affiliates in Moncton and Saint John.

The recent Supreme Court of Canada decision that struck down the old abortion law has created a controversial nation-wide anti-choice movement which CARAL and CHOIX-NB-CHOICE perceive to be a threat to constitutionally guaranteed access to abortion in Canada. These two groups want to ensure that access to safe medical abortions exists for every woman in the country who chooses to have one.

CARAL Fredericton will begin a letter writing campaign immediately to provincially and federally elected officials. This campaign will inform Members of Parliament and Members of the New Brunswick Legislature that the majority of Canadian women will not allow hard earned gains to be taken away from them.

EDITORIAL

Well, here it is! The last issue of the Brunswickan for the '87-'88 year. This special edition as well as containing some usual Bruns stuff has our annual "spoo" inside. The spoo is only meant for a laugh and shouldn't be taken seriously. I hope nobody gets too seriously offended by it. The spoo is a tradition around here and we try to have fun putting it out.

It's only a few more weeks to that carefree season of Summer which most students look forward to with glee. Great huh! Maybe not... For us here at the Bruns thing may not be so great: You see, during the Summer things happen on campus that students never get a say in. For instance, by next September the Director of the SUB, Mr Kim Norris, would like to see the Brunswickan offices cut almost in half. Students won't be involved to any great extent in making this decision to cut the space of a student group in what is supposed to be the student's building, instead they will probably be presented with a "fait accompli" in September.

Mr. Norris wants to cut our space because he doesn't think we take proper care of it. Cutting our space seems to be his way of spanking us. How this would solve the problems Mr Norris is complaining about is something that escapes me. I don't think that they are as serious as he makes them out to be: producing a weekly newspaper, especially when you're doing it with volunteers, is a messy business. Having to do what we do now in less space is only going to make it messier, not to mention cramped. If the problem persists after our space is cut Norris has told me he would do it again next year. I doubt the paper could continue being published every week if a second cut in space occurred. Even this first cut in space will significantly affect the way things run around here: because we will have to schedule around the limited space to publish the Brunswickan itself, we will have to cease to provide some of our other services, posters, programs, pamphlets and student handbooks won't likely be produced at the Bruns if we lose the space. The loss of revenue that this would bring would result in the SU having to subsidize the Bruns more than it does now, a loss of paid work for our student staff to professionals and a drastic increase in the cost that student groups pay for these services.

What is this newly allocated space going to be used for? Mr Norris tells me that he would eventually like to see a "student" laundromat in the space currently occupied by the Brunswickan. After all, according to Mr Norris, most students would rate the Brunswickan a "0 out of 10" and wouldn't care if the Brunswickan were thrown out altogether. I hadn't realised the SU wanted to run a laundromat in the SUB, I'm sure our SU president hadn't either. Perhaps Mr. Norris has his eyes on another paying tenant? Why not renovate the basement to get the extra space? But that would mean moving the rowing machines! "What rowing machines?" You ask. The rowing machines are those that Mr. Norris, coach of the Fredericton Rowing club, keeps down there. They aren't even a SU recognized group. I wonder if they pay rent?

Of course Mr Norris can deny alot of what I've written here, but why would I lie? From what I understand of the University's space allocation policy, space is allocated based on whether or not the area is actually used efficiently. The entire purpose of this editorial is to try to make sure that this is indeed what is taken into consideration when the final decision is made. Using formulae from a recent University space allocation report we came to the conclusion that The Brunswickan should have more space. This same report states:

"although in many cases, existing uses and space assignments may not meet the standards, any reallocation, renovation or provision of new building space shall conform to the University space standards as closely as possible."

I doubt Mr Norris could demonstrate that we don't use our space for what it was intended for when the building was designed: to produce a weekly student paper. I think we've been doing this and doing it well. Stephane Comeau

THE END OF THE YEAR

Another year is over and needless to say it was a bit disappointing. There were high points for the basketball team and hockey team as well as the soccer and field hockey teams.

The only AUSA champions were soccer and field hockey. Coach Brown will have his work cut out for himself next year to replace his graduating soccer players and coach Slipp will have the same problem with her field hockey team. I should also mention that the Black Bear wrestling team was second in the AUSA's by one point to Mt. A.

Hockey was disappointing to say the least. We can only hope they are able to improve next year (which should not be too hard). Coach Nickelchok will be back next year to coach the team. This will be his third year, and hopefully everything and everyone will be able to mesh better. At Christmas, Paul Campbell, who is a forward for the Red Devils was in a coma. The doctors said they were hopeful he would come out of it and fortunately he did. He is doing well and coach Nickelchok is expecting to see him next year.

Don Nelson is gone and Wright is in as the basketball coach. He will have his work cut out for him as well, trying to replace Andrew Hayward (Co-athlete of the year).

In September and October, the rowing team was on the move and did well in the competitions in New England. I wish them continued success next year.

UNB was host to this year's Scott Tournament of Hearts (Canadian Ladies Curling Championship) at the AUC. This event was considered to be a good success but it would have been better if they had advertised the event on campus more.

It's a good year for the Express and John LeBlanc. They are second in the Northern Division, 4 points behind Maine. It's up in the air if they have decided to leave but we can only hope they don't. Without them who is going to use the AUC? Maybe the school will turn it into the new Fredericton indoor pool.

Lastly, the dispute over a new team name is still up in the air. I know people at other schools who have one name for all their teams and they wish they could have different names, so it is all relative.

P.S. UNB is also home to the World Junior Curling champions. Good one boys!

One more Belizian assault chopper for you. See ya' next year. Have a good one..

Blood and Thunder

You thought that was sexist

To Whom It May Concern:

I've been reading the Brunswickan religiously ever since I arrived on the scene at UNB, and no matter how hard I try I just can't find anything offensive or sexist in its content. Recently I was required to write an essay defending the idea that a woman's place is in the home and, suddenly, the problem dawned on me - some of you people just don't know what sexist and offensive material is! My essay should set you straight:

"An Investment in Your Future"

- a speech -
Many years ago, in a far simpler place, a phrase existed. It was short and easy to remember; a precedent to guide the ways of all free men. It stood for all that was good in the world. It bound the family unit and effectively averted traumatic events. It was: "a woman's place is in the home."

Gentlemen, I know that it is easy to lose your way in today's twisted society with all of its convoluted ideas. And so we must work all the harder for the amendment of our situation, for it is true, "a woman's place is in the home."

Do not be fooled! Women are not superior to men on any scale. Men are physically, emotionally and intellectually superior to women. Women were not put on earth to expand their minds, but to use their womanly, maternal instincts to serve man in any way that he deems reasonable. The proper female has two functions that are of the utmost priority: to reproduce, and to perform those trivial, simple tasks that are associated with "housework" and child-rearing.

A woman is a tool. Finding and keeping a wife is like buying and owning a "Black'n'Decker Wet'n'Dry Workshop Vacuum Cleaner." The vacuum, like the wife, is an investment. From the outset, a man must draw upon his bank account to fund his courtship with his prospective female. With the vacuum it is easy to choose a model by simply asking people who have owned them if they like them and why. It is similar with the woman (although, unfortunately, women are not all the same, it can still be done. A general rule to follow is that you should never invest heavily in a female until you have observed the basic household skills of its mother. Many unfortunate men buy defective vacuums, as some men acquire defective females (men who are forced to hire maids are the most obvious examples). If your woman cannot handle her work-load, she is ineffective and should be replaced or reprimanded, just as your vacuum should be repaired or replaced if broken.

So, as you can see, a woman's place is still the home. It is the place where she feels most comfortable and can make use of her natural, God-given talents.

But beware, gentlemen. Beware of bra-burning feminist revolutionaries. Beware of that old, worn-out piece of propaganda; "a woman's work is never done." Just think, if it wasn't for men, women wouldn't be able to do the work that they were born to do - they wouldn't have any work to do at all! Beware of women who refer to themselves as "domestic efficiency engineers" for these are the types that will turn on you in the end.

In conclusion, to the bachelors in attendance, please remember - women are on earth to serve you. When choosing one you should ponder each pertinent aspect thoroughly. Women are an investment in your future.

Sick, huh? By the way, I'm not an "everything is love and daisies" kind of guy. I'm aware of the problems in this world and on this campus. One big problem, however, is the overreaction of certain people to trivial things. After reading this vomit (which was inspired by the construction workers who allegedly "ogled" an ex-editor of the Bruns), doesn't the I.C.U. cartoon of the kid saying "hot 'n' lovely university babes" seem tame by comparison?

Love Always,
Brent Dinsmore, BA III
P.S. I speak from experience, I was one of the "ogling construction workers. (Anything for a buck).

P.P.S. I thought that the psycho lounge lizard from Mr. Jones killed the S.M.A.R.T. P.A.C.C. Pig with the chainsaw of death but then the Pig went to Miami! I sense a discrepancy.

Downey loves money

Dear Editor:

This month's issue of UNB Perspectives features a picture of James Downey happily receiving a large cheque. The picture brought to mind a statement which Mr. Downey made in an article in the March 29, 1988 edition of the Daily Cleaner which went as follows: "Nothing so gladdens the heart of a university president as receiving money."

Being a firm believer in the value of a university education, I was puzzled by Mr. Downey's remark. Was he referring to his own top secret salary (said to be more than Premier McKenna makes)? Was he encouraging the candidates for the presidency of the Student Governing Council to follow the example of seeking outside funding for their campaigns (perhaps from Moosehead)? Was he referring to university funds in the amount of $160,000 which could be loaned to individuals to fund their personal legal defence? Should not the university president be more elated if a member of the faculty receives a Nobel Prize for his research? Should not a university president who claims to act in loco parentis try to set a better example for the students - one which makes the university something more than a "YUPPIE training camp"?

Sincerely,
Anthony S. English

Remember refusniks at Passover

Dear Sirs,

Over fourteen million Jews the world over are celebrating Passover this week. It is this holiday more than any other which binds us together as a dispersed nation in a sometimes hostile world. Every Jew is enjoined to look upon the Exodus from Egypt as if he had personally been delivered from slavery. It is a celebration of our freedom. Yet at the same time there are Jews in the Soviet Union who are not free. Passover is a time to remember them as well.

At sundown on Wednesday, April 13 another Jewish holiday begins. It is Yom Hasho'ah, Holocaust Day. For Jews it is a day to reflect upon the unspeakable horror which killed over one third of living Jews. It is a time to memorialize those who have no family left to remember them.

For all people it should be a time of self-examination and reflection. Racism and bigotry of any kind is intolerable, when it turns into genocide it destroys us all. There is a saying that those who forget the past are condemned to repeat it. That is why we must never forget.

Administration cancels courses?

Dear Sir:

I am writing in regards to a recent decision of the faculty of Business Administration. As it currently stands, there are only three marketing courses being offered for the winter term, 1988-89. Of these, two are compulsory and must be taken second and third year respectively. The third course being offered, "Marketing Communication", is an elective, and is available first term only. Those entering third year are presently precluded from taking this though, because of scheduling problems. More serious, however, is the decision to cancel four other marketing electives, as well as eliminating indefinitely, I have been told, a fifth called "Direct Marketing."

The result of these decisions is the equivalent of cancelling all Economics courses as an economics major enters third year. It is simply unfair. UNB students pay the highest tuitions in Canada, and the business faculty is the third largest area of study on campus. The demand for at least one additional marketing course is definitely present, and we deserve every opportunity afforded to those before us in this faculty. UNB has even received an endowment of $800,000 from the federal government towards the creation of a centre for International Marketing, which only proves the potential of this fine faculty. To not take immediate advantage of this support would be a mistake.

My opinion on this matter is not one of the activist or reactionary, but simply as an average student who has the right to at least an average education. I believe I will not receive this if these decisions are not reconsidered.

Yaqzan & NB Press in Conflict

Thank you for publishing my letter on March 18, 1988, about Mr. Malcolm Ross, who is being condemned as a teacher for writing books expressing his thoughts and convictions. I hope that the Brunswickan has not been threatened with legal action, as it had been for publishing one of my letters in November 1984.

The daily newspapers in Fredericton, Saint John and Moncton, refused to publish my above letter addressed to the Premier, Mr. Frank McKenna, possibly because it was critical of him as well as of those of abortion, homosexuality or standardized political differences, with repetitious arguments, our "free press" becomes very queasy about publishing anything which might annoy their patrons or any powerful group in the society. I presume that the Brunswickan as a student paper, is not completely free from the fear of annoying people. The very title "Blood and Thunder" implies that the material under that heading need not be taken too seriously. It is the voice of anger and frustration, not necessarily that of reason and thoughtfulness. However, I must add that this title had been in existence for some years, and it would not be fair to thrust the entire responsibility on the present editorial staff.

No space is available in the Brunswickan for any serious comments, unless one is a Brunswickan staff member. I had suggested a few years ago that the Brunswickan should reserve some space for the "Faculty News & Views," but I received that standard response - no reaction at all. Also, I find it revealing that few faculty members, especially in disciplines like sociology, history, education or psychology have anything to say about problems like that of Mr. Malcolm Ross. Are politicians and the lawyers, the ultimate intellectuals in our society to make judgements in such matters?

Mr. McKenna has not shown the courtesy of answering my letter, nor has anyone else in his behalf. He has not changed his mind, according to the press reports, and claims that New Brunswickers abhor Mr. Ross' views. However, Mr. Ross has expressed appreciation for the moral support in the following words:

"I received a copy of the letter you sent to Premier McKenna supporting my rights to remain in the classroom as a teacher. Thank you so much for your excellent support. Your letter was one of the most

Addiction Ravages UNB Campus

FILE PHOTO - Like it? We did so we printed it here for you to see too. We're not sure what is it though, looks like fireworks. Maybe it's from some war. That would be neat, wouldn't it? Maybe we'll win a prize for having it here, wouldn't that be great?!

By DAVID SEAMENLUK

FREDERICTON, NB - A team of medical researchers have descended upon the University of New Brunswick campus in response to an outbreak of food & drug addiction. Students are claimed to have abused thousands of pounds of this organic substance over the past academic year, and it's apparently advancing to a worsened state of addiction.

"I can't get through my day without it," stated a shakey engineering student. "I just need a fix at least two or three times a day. It really scares me." Other students similarly replied and complained of common addictive characteristics of ripping stomach cramps, over salivating, and of constantly watching the clock as the time of fix comes closer.

University officials are flustered by the outbreak. Dr. Rick Ringley, head medical officer for the university drug control board was unable to offer an explanation for the outbreak. "I can't understand what has happened to them. It completely destroys their eating habits and they gain weight, which is especially wroughtful and distressful for young ladies. We've tried different methods of treatment but nothing works." Dr. Ringley was unable to further comment on the matter as he was called to an emergency at the SUB cafeteria where a student who was unable to obtain a fix had collapse in front of the Sizzler.

Greese Geekie, a nursing professor and a foregoing expert on terminal diseases has seen this sort of disaster before.

"I remember when I was a student, it was marijuana and poppies. Nowadays, it used to be crack or heroin. This new addiction is following a verry similar pattern." She went on to explain that it was a result of a form of brainwashing.

"Society today promotes this sort of thing. It promotes skinny, big busted females and muscled, bone-headed males who thrust their various body parts to sell a product. They're animals and that's what the students are starting to do... to associate with an animal. That big toothed, furry beast that promotes it should be shot and stuffed. It looks more like an oversized rat with a squashed tail, but it's sexually appealing. For four to five years they're exposed to it immensely here at UNB, at an age when young adults are confused, don't know what to do... they're very impressionable."

Mr. Geekie finished by stating that her only cure would be to force students onto steroids and alcohol to erase the "need" from their system.

Dr. Dowdey was unable to comment on the issue as he was on his way to negotiate a new deal with McBain's to contract for a steady flow of the drug to satisfy the student outcry for it. "Students' are our main concern," he shouted as he signed a requisition order for the drug to be delivered to the campus cafeterias.

What can be done about this addictive problem of our university youths as their stomachs churn with cramps and saliva stains their texts. A thirst for knowledge has turned into a deadly thirst -- a thirst for french fries. French fry fever, now known as FFI has no known cure.

Poison Gas Leak in City

by V. SMALL

Last week on the University of New Brunswick campus at the Center of Conflict Studies Arafat Hall Chemistry Wing, a poisonous gas leak was detected. Seriously injured were two scientist, three lab assistants and two caged subrats which were being used for experimentation.

The mop-up crew headed by Big Al and even Bigger Brian of UNB's certified waste disposal unit, stated in an interview today "We've been working around the clock cleaning up this mess, but there's one thing we cannot understand. It's why do our mops seem to just dissolve everytime we take a break."

When checking with the Mayor of Fredericton, Mr. Brad Woodhide, he warned that there is no possible chance that this gas leak will have any effect on the community. Woodhide also stated that there was no connection between the gas leak and an incident where five people reportedly collapsed on the downtown streets of Fredericton from Hydrochloric acid in the lungs. This may not seem correct due to the fact that after the interview the Mayor plugged his nose and held his breath as he ran out to his air conditioned car awaiting for him.

This report checked with the chairman of Conflict Studies Mr.??? but he stated that no hazardous materials were being produced in the research wing. Mr. ??? said that they were not working on a new form of "mustard gas" which is a known lethal weapon outlawed by the Geneva Convention, but were actually inventing a new form of "mustard gas" for spreading on hot dogs for our men in the field.

The fallout from the leak was reportedly spread out over a five mile area but from all official reports nothing disastrous should come of the incident.

Do Mayor, Administrator Need Nuclear Weapons?

Do the Mayor and the city administrator need heat-seeking ground to air nuclear missiles?

That's the question council is now pondering when they found out Mayor Brad Woodhide and city administrator John "knobby" Slobson both have rocket launchers on the roofs of their respective pick-up trucks.

"Someone's got to sell me on the idea," said Councillor Rufus O'Dunalot when prodded awake by a zucchini that our photographer had in his lunchbox yesterday.

"I think, we (Fredericton), are small enough to be able to deal with quarrels adequately using a thirty-ought-six or even large rocks," Councillor

O'Dunalot continued. When an attempt was made to contact Mayor Woodhide, reporters were somewhat fuddled by the fact that he insisted on climbing into a small cardboard box that he keeps next to his secretary's rubber plant. "It's the snakes, the snakes!" the Mayor was heard to scream in a stinging falsetta before reporters were ushered out of the office by anxious officials.

Cat Wins

By STEVE LEWDSWELLING

Last week's Student Union election at the University of New Brunswick saw a cat elected President.

With a voter turnout of over 200 percent, the cat, affectionately known as Hitler Kitty is still missing and was unavailable for comment.

Marc Breathwaite, CRO for the election said the high voter turnout was not surprising. "I put a whole bunch of ballots in myself just to make sure those elected had a strong mandate," said Breathwaite.

Out going S.U. President Jain Arnold said "We are not amused. This... this cat is stupid. I mean saying that the students need a stronger voice. Imagine. And after all the kowtowing and kissing up I've done this past year just to make sure Dowdey didn't throw me out. Disgusting."

Darn Lost, leader of the Unick '88 party said "I never said that. You're mistaken." Stephen Marks spokeshuman for Hitler-Kitty commented, "Being president is fun. I mean, I was president of a country for awhile. It's fun. Really."

UNB Team Wins Champions For Second Consecutive Year

MINSH, USSR (AP)

The UNB Team, Canada's entry in the International Floor Mopping Competition, captured top honours for the second year in a row yesterday. The team, consisting of Big Al and Bigger Brian, set a new world record in the mop leaning portion of the competition with an outstanding time of 74.5 hours, beating the previous record of 739 hours set by the Polish team in 1978. (See Story Page 8)

Our World

War Escalates

(CeePee) - The Iran-Iraq war has reached a new low point, after Baghdad was bombed recently with water balloons filled with the urine of Libyan President Khadaffi. Iraq responded by defacating out of the open door of a low flying helicopter onto the palace of the Ayatollah.

Both sides report no deaths were sustained, but Tehran suffered casualties from the low flying stools.

Further actions were expected with the advent of the U.S. supplied hydraulic stool propellor and the USSR supplied anti-stool retaliatory guided poop purveyor.

Condom Shortage in China

PEKING (CEE PEE) - In a press conference yesterday the general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party in a desperate plea asked for all the condoms in the world.

Due to the Chinese new policy on safe sex and population management, they have totally exhausted their supply on condoms.

Within the new Chinese policy, families with only one child shall be allowed special tax benefits.

One event planned for the near future shall be "SexAID" a non-profit event headlining the top acts of today, with all profits going towards birth prevention aids for China.

U.S. Military in Antarctica

WASHINGTON (AP) Frank Carloochie, US Secretary of Defence and well-known member of the Teamsters stated today in Washington that combined Navy, Marine and Air Force manoeuvres shall take place over Antarctica. The secretary's reasons for these manoeuvres were that the Antarctica will be the only place left that has not been bombed after a nuclear war and therefore will be perfect for any type of invasion.

Avalanche Kills Five

ST. MORITZ (VD) Five preschool children were crushed in a freak avalanche yesterday in Austria. The children were playing in the backyard when five tons of snow and ice fell on them from the roof of the house.

In an interview with Hillga Roundfigga, manager of the Hausenfaus Preschool and Weinershnizle Emporium said "Ja vee never got to get snow and ice off roof after yestadaz big snowstorm. Da littlze shits vere told not to play der. Den vith big thum dar history."

After five hours of digging all the bodies were recovered and were slid under the door of the ambulance.

AIDS Plan Scrapped

(NEW YORK, AP) The World Health Organization announced yesterday that it will recommend to the governments of the world that all forms of sexual contact be made illegal under penalty of death in a decisive effort to halt the spread of the AIDS virus.

When questioned on how the human race would procreate itself if this plan was implemented a WHO spokesperson was quoted as saying "Oh! We hadn't thought of that." The plan was scrapped a few hours later but a concerted effort is being made to convince Iran and Iraq that it is still in effect in hopes that eventually they will go away.

IRA Seize Tanker

In a startling press communique yesterday the Irish Republican Army took full responsibility for the highjacking of an Israeli oil tanker. The oil tanker which was stolen Wednesday at 12:30 pm in the Gulf region forced the crew to head towards Costa Rica where the oil shall be ransomed off to the highest bidder. The tanker will then be raffled off at $1000 a ticket with a total of 5000 tickets being sold. The proceeds from the sale and raffle will then be used to buy new weapons.

Muleruney Traded to U.S.

(CP) After a fourteen hour meeting with U.S. foreign minister Shlulz, Prime Minister Muleruney announced yesterday that he was trading the maritime provinces to the U.S. in exchange for a U.S. citizenship, and a job with American hero Awlie North.

The move came as a surprise to Canadian foreign minister Joe Clerk who himself was working on a deal to trade New Brunswick for an NFL franchise in Montreal.

Muleruney was delighted with the deal and announced that he had wanted to be a U.S. citizen all his life. "Oh God, I'm so happy to join what must be the greatest country in the history of the universe. I'll get out of that cold, dead country full of frogs, and move South where hope becomes reality and dreams are fulfilled. Plus, I won't have to work with that fishface Turdner any more."

The maritime premiers were not so happy with the deal. P.E.I. premier Joe Jhiz commented: "I don't mind so much joining the states, but not if Muleruney is going to be there." N.B. premier McKenner was not so charitable: "I hate those goddamn Americans. Christ, we just won all our seats, and now we're not even going to have a parliamentary system any more. I'm just so darn depressed."

On the U.S. side, U.S. president Reggen was ecstatic: "Well... I'm very happy... it's great to get the maritime provinces even though we have to take that fartface Muleruney as well... Is that o.k. Nuncy?"

Many democratic senators were happy as well. Georgia senator M. Peanuthead was overheard to announce that P.E.I. would become his new home, and that he would try to reach his lifelong goal of playing the lead in "Anne of Green Gables."

Further comment is expected from inhabitants of the maritimes in the near future.

LeGastly Excommunicated

By LUCIFER

Pope John Paul George & Ringo III gave his traditional Easter address last Sunday in St. Peter's Square. The Pope's desires to reduce violence in the Holy Land and in Northern Ireland highlighted the speech. It seemed like a very ordinary address at the time. However, an issue evolved during the post-Easter Mass news conference that is of great concern to one UNB student.

While speaking to an unidentified Brunswick reporter, the Pope proclaimed that former CHSR-FM Sports Director Draggin Legastly has been excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church for his direct link with Satan. Apparently Vatican City caught wind of Mr. Legastly's preoccupation with Beelzebub some time last week.

It seems that while University President James Dowdy was vacationing in Italy last week, he came into contact with an old bishop friend of his. While the two were "shooting the st", the bishop, an avid hockey buff himself, inquired how the NHL playoff race was unfolding. One thing led to another and before they knew it, they were winding down their discussion with the UNB Men's hockey team being the topic. To paraphrase Dr. Dowdey's parting words, he said that even though the team stank he was damn proud of his campus media and especially enjoyed listening to "the voice of the Red Devils", one Draggin Legastly.

Seeing the parallels between the Red Devils and the once mighty Red Brigade and especially the former's obvious demonic affiliation, the bishop quickly informed the Pope. The Pope did not hesitate and quickly passed judgement.

Legastly could only be reached over the phone for comment. "What in the HELL is going on?" he wondered aloud.

Draggin, you just put your big foot in your mouth.

Panamanian Embargo May Cripple U.S.

(WASHINGTON, AP)

"If we don't get our cash you don't get your coke!" shouted General Manuel Noriega of Panama as he announced stiff sanctions against the United States before a crowd of at least seven supporters in Panama City yesterday. These sanctions will effectively cut off most of the U.S.'s supply of cocaine and many experts are predicting that repercussions will be swift and may be severe enough to bring the superpower to its knees.

The price of cocaine has doubled overnight in most American cities. Dealers have imposed a rationing system in an attempt to stabilize the situation.

In congress, some delegates are already showing the nervous twitches of withdrawal and are urging the President to take military action to reopen the supply lines.

It has been suggested by top U.S. officials that Noriega is planning to divert the surplus coke to the USSR.

CRIME STARTERS

Promoting crime in your community

At approximately 2:00 am on April 11 1988, the house of Mr. and Mrs. Gym Dowdey at 181 University Avenue will be empty while the couple is on vacation in Botswana.

The crime will not be reported until 3:30 pm on April 9, 1988 by nosy neighbors.

The Dowdeys are a well-to-do couple and own many fine paintings and expensive jewellery, and they often keep large sums of money around the house.

Entrance can be gained by entering the unlocked patio door at the rear of the house. There are no security alarms.

The silverware is contained in the third drawer in the cabinet beside the stairs. The safe is located behind the dishwasher: its combination is L-33 R-21 L-16 R-8. Inside the safe is approximately $4,000 in cash and bonds, and $27,000 in gold and silver jewellery.

A red and white tennis racket, signed by Bjorn Borg, serial #1302179526 is kept in the hall closet beneath a pile of blankets.

Escape can be made by taking the keys to the Lincoln town car on the peg beside the garage, and simply driving away.

Any assistance in committing this crime would be much appreciated, and a reward is offered of all you can take.

Heavy Procrastination expected to continue indefinitely

Tonite: Sunset: just before it gets dark bonehead.

Tomorrow: Sunrise: Long before I get up.

Forecast for Freddy Beach and vicinity issued by someone recently outdoors. (Don't you people have anything better to do than worry about the weather? Come on people. Get a life!)

Synopsis: A great big bunch of ugly, off-white, sort of puffy-floaty things are expected to invade systematically from a northerly ridge of low pressure originating from the Soviet Union. This is expected to precipitate in kind of dark spots on the ground. On a side note, Major I. M. Parnoid, Base Commander of C.F.B. Gagetown, claims that puffy-floaty objects associated with this system, are actually cleverly disguised Soviet Attack-Zeppelins armed with the latest chemical warfare weapons in the Soviet arsenal.

"But they can't fool me." Commander Paranoid asserts, "I know where all this acid rain is coming from. It's those damn commies."

Heavy shelling of these targets is expected to continue, as Major Paranoid puts it, "until the free world is safe, once again, from the Communist menace."

On UNB campus, heavy procrastination is expected to continue indefinitely along with intermittent falling bodies and shotgun blasts. The occasional fist will be waved in an easterly direction sometime later tonight.

Outlook: Extended forecast for the rest of eternity and beyond issued by Prof. Tu Flakey (Ph. D., LsD, SoB, M.O.U.S.E.) of the Parapsychology Dept. at UNB.

Gagetown and vicinity: low on respect for people trying to sleep. High in noise pollution. UNB campus low near exam time. High on liquid paper. NB Legislature low on opposition. High not since Hotfeild went.

Reign of Terror Over? Noonan Liberation Front Collapses After Debacle

BY ANNE INGROWN

Despite the outward calm of the tranquil rural community of Noonan, New Brunswick, this country haven is actually the headquarters for a radical activist group, the Noonan Liberation Front. On Tuesday members of the self described "slightly paramilitary group" claimed responsibility for a faulty candy machine at an unnamed downtown location. Further, in an escalation of unabashed brutality, Fredericton pet owners were shocked to discover their cats and dogs wandering around in little plastic party bowler hats.

In an exclusive interview, for the Dairy Creamer reporter Malcolm Talcum was tied and gagged and taken to a secret location to meet Brigadier Jim Jiblets. Brigadier Jiblets resplendent in a coon skin cap and potato sack was a genial host even though quite obviously drunk.

"Yah, we been at this game for some time," slurred Brigadier Jiblet apparently trying to force a beer bottle into his right nostril. Whilst the actual reasons for subversive activity carried out by the group remains hazy, an important point in their manifesto, written in yellow crayola, appears to be secession of the Noonan community towards a coalition with the people of Labrador. Further examination of the hastily written document reveals that the main reason for this strange desire stems from a need to "get some of that there Black Horse beer which is right beautiful." In fact, the beer seems to be an important demand in the NLF document; the brand being mentioned no less than 27 times.

It was earlier this year that Fredericton residents became aware of the political turmoil that surrounds Noonan. Events began with manoeuvres around the downtown area in so-called "Hank-Tanks". These vehicles, which are actually hastily converted early seventies Pontiac Catalinas, can contain as many as fifteen members of the NLF, all of whom are masked by potato sacks with small holes ripped in them.

Cries of "hey there; got any food?" and "hey boy, are you a leg-wrestler?" soon became a common occurrence in an area which is strangely centred around the Riverboom bar at a local hotel. Further exposure was granted to the group last year after a midnight barbecue went disastrously wrong when Mikhail Parentis and Guidal Warring blew each other up at the Fredericton Green playing chicken with canisters of propane. Charges were dropped when local lawyer Tom Devans successfully convinced jurors that the NLF were in fact a community group that were trying to prevent a gopher infestation.

"Yah, sometimes the boys, they get a little excited," drawled Brigadier Jiblets by now having extreme difficulty getting his eyes to resume a non-crossed appearance. "But theys good boys and theys just wants to have a bit 'o fun," he concluded just before falling face first into a bowl of spinach and Kraft Dinner.

Resolute to the last, the NLF are now convinced that demon worship is spreading through the Fredericton boundary communities. Last week police were called to a disturbance by the Restigouche highway only to discover five members of the NLF making eye of the devil signs at a sheep they had cornered in a used furniture lot shouting 'it's a demon!, it's a

But for the NLF, the days may be numbered. At the time of going to press almost three quarters of these steadfast, but admittedly quite stupid, men and women were being held in addresses printed on the back were a boon to police in locating custody for crimes ranging from tampering with turnip hoes to blatant seeding of plastic flamingos in public places. For the residents of Fredericton though, the collapse of the NLF can only represent a return to a much more peaceful community. Indeed, soon people may be able to walk the streets safe in the knowledge that, for now anyway, the reign of terror spear-headed by Noonan Liberation Front has been failed. But will it last?

NB Residents Win Awards

Six New Brunswick residents have been honored at the 54th annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Annual Meeting Organizers in Toronto. Bertha-Bob Hallon and James Wang, employees of the N.B. Department of Neutral Resources were awarded the award for the awarding of awards. The award was presented in recognition of their awarding awards at last years CAAMO annual meeting.

Steve Paperclip, Eunice Abergumby and the Mair twins from Fredericton received the no special reason award.

In congratulating the winners, N.B. premier Frank McKenney said, "Congratulations."

"This annual meeting was obviously a success and plans are underway to hold these annual meetings every three weeks or so," said the organization's organizer.

New Brunswick Children Getting Stupid Report Says

By HAIRY BEANER

In a recent shock report published by the child psychology unit at the University of New Brunswick, parents are learning that there is a dramatic deficiency in the overall intelligence of Fredericton children.

This report comes at a particularly sensitive time; this also being the end of a university year where "look 'n pick" menus have been offered at the college cafeteria. This was due to an inability of freshmen students to read the list of items available and, perhaps more seriously, the difficulty in asking for the things that they want to eat.

"Yup. They're getting stupid earlier every year now," said police officer John Jones in the process of dragging two struggling children away from the bank of Montreal building which they had been trying to eat.

Particularly worrying is the range of exhibits seen recently at the high school science fair, held two weeks ago.

SHOCKED PARENTS - Fredericton mother's reaction to study is Experts are baffled by the phenomenon even though it usually takes them half an hour more to park because of small infants trying to stuff each other down drains.

"A lot of kids are now practically force fed à la foie gras with burgers and pop," postulated Dr. Heimlich Maneaver last week, "I would suggest that food additives, typical of most NB parents. Father, Norbert Stobley (right), was too especially sweeteners such as Aspartame, are particularly to blame."

It is not only the behaviour in this instance," Dr. Maneaver proceeded, "most of those kids have been made so fat by their parents that it is almost impossible to prise them out of telephone kiosks, aquariums and breadbins once about fifteen of them have dumbfounded to reply. "Not my kids" is a common refrain.

Crawled in there. "Used to be, we could expect a relatively high standard" mused Norbert Yelping who organised the event. "This year though our second prize winner was a display entitled "What Happens to Ants When They Get in your Socks" and the first prize winner was "Blunt Objects and Slugs: Can They Live Peacefully?"

Mrs. Dudlee Goes to Store

FREDERICTON - In a surprise move yesterday, Mrs. Abel Dudlee announced that she would go to the store and buy some groceries.

Neighbours seemed shocked by the move, yet took this big step into stride. "I don't see what's so damn exciting" commented neighbour Bill Bradley; "she goes to the store every week - why do you need a reporter to cover this?"

Others expressed dismay: "I thought she was going tomorrow" said Mrs. Birble, "I wanted her to pick me up some toilet paper."

Nuclear Weapons Cloud Woodhide's Singing

Mr. Slobson, city administrator and sometime collector of "small green things that live in ponds" was also unrepentant about the money taken from the city orphan fund to finance his questionable acquisition.

"Look, there's some bloody big moose wandering around at the moment and I'll be damned if these great lumbering (expletive deleted) are going to dent my fender!" When Slobson was told that moose were in fact animals that lived on the ground and were not capable of self-propelled flight, the city administrator retorted that "this was a vicious rumour instigated by those idiots up at the University."

"Besides which Dowdey's got several" came the plaintive squeak from the other side of the way (the mayor's office). This last statement bolsters mutterings that the president of UNB, Dr. Jim Dowdey was believed to have placed several explosive devices under the SRC chamber in early 1986. The charge is thought to be connected to a red telephone that he keeps in a "muppets" lunchbox on his desk next to a signed picture of Donald Trump.

When asked later in the week if the cost of the weapons, some 210,000 dollars Canadian, is justified Mayor Woodhide replied, "I don't know what you are talking about but I use my car phone an awful lot." Mayor Woodhide is nineteen.

Woodhide came into local prominence in 1986 when he won the race for Mayorality against incumbent Herbert Frump. At age 17, Woodhide thus became the youngest mayor in Fredericton history after John Bosnich's failed attempt in 1982. The Mayor, whom his friends affectionately call "Old Blue Eyes," has been known to belt out a chorus or two of "New York, New York" while out of town on official visits.

Recently, while in Fussen West Germany representing Fredericton at the World Curling Championship, the Mayor became the focus of controversy when he refused to step off the stage of a local biergarten after being booed by disbelieving patrons.

"Someone better tell him soon that his voice sounds like a braying donkey," advised one Canadian who witnessed Woodhide's humiliation at the Fussen biergarten. "I hear he's doing this all over the friggen' world. It's embarrassing."

Men in Animal Costumes Strike Hospital

By STEPHEN LLLLWRP

In a continuing series of alarming incidents, residents and patients at the Neverslept Embalmers Hospital were terrorized by men dressed in animal skins yesterday. Doctors and nurses at the hospital say the reign of terror which has lasted fifteen days is beginning to get quite serious.

"At this time we have guards stationed at all points of entry to the children's wards" croaked Dr. Benjamin "Boner" Deadwards looking understandably harrassed, "but somehow they still manage to crawl in, probably through the air vents."

This is not the first time the people of Fredericton have suffered at the hands of grown men in teddy bear and bunny rabbit costumes. Shoppers ran screaming from the Fredericton Maul last weekend as a man dressed in an "Alf" costume went on a rampage during which at least fifteen children were said to have been reduced to tears.

Dr. Arlene Whallop, criminal psychologist at UNB Fredericton, has stepped in to help police who have so far found no evidence to suggest what the cause of this disturbing trend might be. Inquiries appear to be being made quite regularly at several Donut shops in the downtown area however.

"Mmmph grmph grmph," slobbered chief detective Harry "Murphy" Norbetzinski, "bah... mmmrgh grmph murph grmph."

Just why six-foot grown men have adopted this curious lifestyle is a complete mystery to Dr. Whallop who is a fabulous babe in any body's books. "Oh Stephen," she sighed in her office last weekend "please, tie me up again!"

Recently, disturbing evidence has come to light with regard to a connection involving members of the university administration. These latest allegations were made after reports were made of suspicious behaviour on the part of several high ranking officials that were seen hanging around costume shops and trying on false noses.

In the mean time, Dr. Dead-wards can only hope that this menace will soon become only a bitter memory. "You have to realise that these incidents can leave deep psychological scars on the infant psyche" Dr. Deadwards sobbed in closing, clutching a small stuffed animal. Suggestions that these latest assaults are actually a covert recruitment drive by UNB are unfounded at this time.

K-Wold on Bridge

The art of faking out an experienced player

By Tatiana K-wold

We start a series on underhanded tactics by telling you exactly how to keep beginning players out of your game. I have known protectionist players who simply will not allow anyone who was not born with a deck in their hands to play with them. This does not always work, because the more persistent beginner keeps it up. If you follow my favourite method, you can sufficiently demoralize them, and they will give up bridge altogether.

Begin the Slaughter

You are East, the beginning player is your partner, West. This tactic only works if you are the partner, it cannot be implemented by the opposite partnership. However, some cooperation is needed from them.

The dealer is North, so you open. Of course, you know it takes 13 points to open. For this, make sure you have nothing bigger than a four-card suit and no more than ten points. Open 2 of your second-worst suit, preferable something with two points or less. South bids a pass. Hopefully, your partner will offer you another suit that you can set him up in. If, by chance, he is buoyed by confidence in your bid, and he returns your suit, you are not toast yet. North bids a pass, and you offer your worst suit in 4. South passes and your partner will give you his second-best suit in 5. North passes, so put your partner in 6 of his suit.

The opposition has been cooperating by passing, and now they give you full support by doubling your partner's bid. Stupid as he would be, he redoubles.

The opposition should have a Monopoly on points. You have none, and beginners either do not know how to count, or do not know the point value of a bid. He is foolish enough to think he might win. In reality, he will be lucky to get a trick.

So, the beginner is left to play out the hand. He sees your cards, or lack thereof, and immediately panics. This will throw him off. Combined with his inability to play tactically, this nervousness, your absence of real cards and the power of the other players, he will screw this hand, royally.

Keep in mind, this is the first hand. Continue this throughout the game, throwing in some obscure conventions he will not know what to do with, and luckily, he will run off crying and never play again. Do not worry about your score, the end result will be worth it. You will be rid of one jerk-faced dweeb who is bent on F---ing up a perfectly good game by pretending to know how to play.

Tomorrow, the next article in the series, "How to Cheat by Hiding Aces in Your Beer and Bridge Mixture."

Doctor Juice Blunders

Dear Dr. Blunders:

Is it true you can catch Herpes from having sex? My friend thinks he might have it. He has been walking kind of funny lately. Everyone has warned us not to sit on public toilet seats, not to share a glass or a joint at parties, and not to lend our lipstick to anyone with a cold sore. We've been very careful, but my friend says he's developed a peculiar rash that Preparation H won't seem to cure. I'm worried because I had sex with him just last week! What will I tell my wife?! Could I have herpes too?

Ticky and Bitchy

Dear I & B:

Scratch 'n' sniff - time will tell!

Dear Dr. Blunders:

I'm very embarrassed to be writing to you but you're my only hope. My husband and I used to have a fantastic sex life but now things have changed. He used to love me for my femininity, but lately he's been acting weird. First, he asked me to cut off my long hair and shave my head. I did. He bought me a weight set and persuaded me to work out. I now bench press 250 lbs. He bought me a bottle of Aqua Velva, saying her preferred the scent over my regular Passion. I like it too, but now I'm not so sure if it's for me. I must admit, the anchor tattoo he put on my arm is a real fashion statement, but here's the real problem. He's been giving me vitamin shots for my health, but they make my voice funny and my Neet just doesn't seem to do the job anymore. He's also been suggesting new positions for our love-making, and they're unlike I've ever heard of. I'm eager for variety, but his ideas aren't even listed in The Joy of Sex! Should I consent to his suggestions? I love him but something tells me this just isn't right.

Bridled Passion

Dear Bridled:

Get a divorce and find a new wife!

Dear Dr. Blunders:

Please help me! No matter what I say all the people around me agree! The pressure is too much for me to handle: I feel like I'm making all the decisions. What if I do something stupid? Would anyone tell me? This is a serious problem for me, please reply quickly.

Frank M.

Dear Frank:

I agree, you do have a serious problem.

Dear Readers: Do you have a problem? If so, I can help. Please write me in care of this newspaper, and I will make your life a little bit brighter.

My Favorite Room.....

By AGNATE NINGAM

It wasn't hard for Myrtle Freedom to respond when she was asked what her favorite room was -- "it has to be the one room that provides me with solitude and comfort, away from my eight children, househusband, ex-husband, and my mother-in-law."

From just viewing this magnificent room with its fine porcelain tiles, the thick wooden door, and the exquisite mirror, I could believe her. Mrs. Freedom's favorite room is her very favorite sitting room in which she has calculated how her day will be spent and what she must complete the following day. She, also, at times has even worked out her meal plan for the week while enjoying a cigarette and bourbon after a long-day at her office. The room is her Bathroom.

It is here that she first conceived the idea of starting up a business that has grown into a fastly flourishing one which caters to the needs of every family by supplying toilet paper and designer floral ornaments for tubs. It was here that she first entered labour for her first child and it was here that she conceived her last one while enjoying an amorous evening with her second husband in the tub.

Many women have preferred their living rooms and kitchens for that "oh, so cozy ambience" that comes from the sunlight streaming through their opaque windows and turning the room into a golden glow of a soft autumn evening while the cool, crisp autumn winds whistle softly through the eaves, but not Mrs. Freedom.

"My room," said Mrs. Freedom, "is what I always dreamed it would be. It provides me with the very necessary basics and allows me to relieve myself of the everyday duties." She was raised in a family of twenty-two children, fifteen cats and ten dogs, that all shared the same outhouse on the outskirts of their homelot in the backhills of Southern New Brunswick. Now, with a flourishing enterprise at the tips of her fingers that is wiping the profits, she afforded herself the luxury she once vowed as a little girl she would one day have. Her own bathroom that she shares only with those who are truly close to her - her husband and children; all animals are kept outside (occasionally that means her husband as well).

She first began designing her room in the 1970's when she started working as a counter person for a McDognuts. Her paychecks went towards supporting her current family and whatever else was left was put into her beaverbank for her room. She travelled through every Zellers, K-Mart, and Woolco until she had enough royal purple tiles to complete her room. In the years that followed she obtained the antique washtub and basin from one of her husband's ex-lovers and the mirror was handed down from her childhood outhouse to her own personal room. She has devoted timelessly to the development of her ideas in the creative patterns that adorns her tub and sink - the permanent toothpaste stains, the golden copper stain of the faucets, the rich brown molding of her toilet, and the fur-lined drain of her tub.

After a tour of her room with a description of how she has toiled to produce such a comforting, homey effect she sat upon her throne and proceeded to tell me how often she had retreated here to work out her problems, to think of her future as she flushed, and to wonder how she had ever achieved such success in a woman-eat-woman world of toiletry design.

"I often would sit here and just listen. To the creaks and groans. I don't know if I'm getting older or if the plumbing's going again. But, I would just sit here, listen, and think about what it means to be a woman, a mother, just another person in this cesspool of a world. I often wondered if I was appreciated, if I would be missed if I just up and got sucked down the drain. And then, the children would bang on the door with their baseball bats crying for me and my husband would complain that if he didn't see me that instant he would just go crazy without me, and I knew then that yes, no matter how special my room is, I was special to them; this room is something I MUST share with my loved ones because they need me as much as I need it."

She smiled then as she considered this thought and how happy she seemed. To a woman who had everything every woman desired - a home filled with people yelling for her, a full-time job as mother, designer of toilet paper, and entrepreneur, a voyageur into a new art - it just wasn't enough. She needed to design that special room to relieve her of her anguish, her sorrow, her anger, and her bladder. Above her toilet hangs her university degree, her special commemorations of volunteer work, her award for Mother of the Year, her award for Business Woman of the Decade, and her children's eight birth certificates but the one that means the most to her is wrapped in soft tissue of floral design - her personalized toilet tissue that symbolizes no matter how much bull is thrown at her she can wipe it away and still smile.

As the fluorescent light flickered and tap dripped, I realized what a truly unique woman she was and what this room symbolized for her. Mrs. Freedom's bathroom is, indeed, Mrs. Freedom's pad of comfort.

Coffee Grounds Magic

Helda Grumbleburg from Blue Mountain has been creative all her life. A well known sculptress on the Canadian art circuit, Helda has carved a niche for herself in an industry in which it is difficult to become, and remain unique.

Helda is an artist with a difference. "It all began when I won a coffee perculator at the Blue Mountain Bingo back in '79," she relates, "I noticed the beautiful colours of the coffee grounds - their texture and consistency really caught my artistic eye. I couldn't bear to throw them out." Yes, while other artists are content to dabble in ceramics and clay, Helda uses coffee grounds.

Every pot of coffee means a new inspiration for this innovative person. She gathers the grounds daily and collects them in a cardboard box which she acquired at the Blue Mountain Foodland grocery store. "Decaffeinated seems to work best for larger sculptures," she says confidently. "The grounds mold easier." As for smaller creations, the young woman notes that "the finer the grounds, the more realistic the art."

In a few short months, Helda should be finished an exhaustive project she undertook to commemorate 1988 as the 50th anniversary of the Blue Mountain Bird Watching Association. "It's a 20 foot high Speckled Starling - feathers and all." She's sculpting it completely out of coffee grounds.

For this tremendous task, Helda has chosen Maxwell House decaffeinated coffee. The feathers are what takes the longest, all 15,000 of them. "I can do 10 an hour - it's become second nature to me," says the housewife and mother of two. "How fast I work really depends on my twins Shnitzel and Streudel. If they are active then I don't have much time to work on my art. But if I do one or two hundred (feathers) a week, then I'll meet my deadline easily."

Watching her mold the brown grounds into feathers makes it apparent that Helda Grumbleburg truly does love her work. Does the smell bother her? "Not really," she replies; "you get used to it. My husband Berger affectionately calls me 'his little coffee bean'. He has

Sexual Beauty Aid
Aids Multi-Beauty Problems

By HEATHER HORSEMENUIR

Dr. P. N. Wiper of Los Angeles, California who has been conducting extensive research in the area of nutrition, has made a fascinating discovery resulting in the birth of a new product.

Accompanied by her associates Grabbals and Yelle, she discovered that the male sperm has a high nutritional value. She has proven that four cups of semen from a young, healthy male can constitute a person's daily requirements for protein intake and act as facial mask for tightening up skin. "It's the rejuvenating drug of the century," she stated "it can do miracles for wrinkles and instantly puts a smile on your face as you seen the immediate results." It was, also, proven that the components of the semen, apart from the sperm, contain lubricating particles which act as a bowel stimulant producing a laxative effect.

"Can you imagine what a relief this will be for older people who will still be able to get it, without paying an extreme amount for the service?" she said. "We've already had hundreds of calls requesting as much as we can supply."

As a result of this amazing discovery the semen was crystallized into a water-soluble form and dubbed "Wheatsperm". Many elderly people have inquired as to when it will hit the market. Dr. Wiper's reply was "as soon as we can get enough young male volunteers who have lots of energy and oysters, because the supply must meet the demand."

Dr. Wiper and her associates have enjoyed doing the research and to ensure high quality wheatsperm Dr. Wiper insists on testing every specimen before letting it leave the warehouse. She claims she owes it to her children to do the best job she can!

Wheatsperm will be available sometime in June so watch carefully at your local grocers and brothels for your first bottle. Consequently, Dr. Wiper is accepting applications from any males, age 16 to 25 with no physical ailments.

Tea Time Tizzie

By TOULOUSIA TOOTS

The tea time tizzie took place at our Ladies of Saint Moody Blues Lounge on Wednesday evening at 8:00 p.m. Such topics as crochet, an afghan party, a statistical analysis of voter participation, and structural designs of a new satellite were discussed. Abigail Mudwinger motioned that the formal meeting adjourn to an in-camera session and the Kodaks were pulled out for a slide show of a Montreal trip to a strip show. Louise Lanskie motioned that we move onto more pressing topics at the end of the slide show and the topic turned to that of alcohol awareness. All agreed that they were fully aware of the effects of alcohol in society and a committee was struck to investigate the effects of intoxication; the committee suffered minor lacerations and one concussion resulted in Mary Deepe being hospitalized for the evening.

Husband Abuse was the next topic of conversation and ideas were put forth of how to abuse a husband while still maintaining a societal image for the sake of the family. All notions were confidential and held as such.

Refreshments were served at 9:30 and a thank-you note was signed for the local brewery supplying such. Ava Guzzie motioned to adjourn to the Cozmo and participate in the local scene to observe the radical behaviour of youths today and to experiment on the sexual behavior of young men towards older women. All agreed and taxi bus was called.

Ten Sure Ways To Get Rid of Your Plants

By Venus Flysnatch

Are your plants shiny green, vibrant, healthful, and you're sick of looking at them? It bothers you that no matter how little you water them, they still stay alive? Do you constantly place them on the top of the heater or in an open window in January in hopes that they'll die before you notice and take pity? Sounds like you have a plant problem. Well, you're in luck because you're talking to the Doctor of the black thumb. Here are ten sure ways to get rid of your plants:

1. Accidentally knock it off your window sill one morning while chasing the cat off the ledge (you don't have to tell anyone you threw the plant at the cat in hope of knocking the animal that keeps you up at night to its death; or you could throw the cat at the plant just to make it more realistic).

2. Throw a dinner party (to celebrate the plant's demise). When your friends exclaim how your plant looks like it's been losing its leaves, avoid the question and urge them to have more of that "nice, leafy green salad" you especially prepared for them.

3. Tie it to the tail of your neighbour's dog, throw it a bone, and express your disgust at your neighbour's children for doing such an awful thing to their dog and to your plant. Ask them to pay for the plant.

4. Accidentally blow it away when you're cleaning your rifle to go hunting.

5. Pick a fight with your girl/boyfriend and throw it against the wall or at him/her. Use it as an excuse to express your dismay at having a fight and that you're so sad that you ruined your favourite plant.

6. Wash it with milk and water to clean its leaves to a shiny green - then place it in the microwave to dry for a few minutes.

7. Feed it some high vitamin supplements in order to make it grow. Too bad, it turned out to be some drug your ancient aunt left behind for her heart problem.

8. Give it to your favourite enemy as a making-up gift and to say your sorry. Sorry that he's/she's such a sucker for accepting something you wanted to get rid of anyway.

9. Make sure you water it daily - so what if Al Cool looks just like water.

10. Take it back to the cemetery where you stole it from.

How To Be A Total Person

By JENDERR UNOWN

Today, persons must be more than just person. They must be persons in their working careers and persons after hours. They must conform to the norms of persons and appear as much of a bitch/bastard as possible in order not to be taken advantage of; they must curse twice as loudly as other persons in order to make themselves heard above other person's childish chatter; they must exert their independence over their lives and pack their own lunches and do their own wash; they must obtain twice as much education to be equal to other persons and to prove themselves as their equal by appearing subordinate to them; they must conform to the person's norms and act in a degrading manner; they must be a seductor/seductress of the human mammal at times and a thorn in their sides at others; they must be mother, father, physician, plumber, etc., while still maintaining the total person's physique, attractiveness, and charismatic characteristics.

Who the hell wants to be a total person if it means this much trouble? If this is what it means to be a total person, I'll never live up to it. Nor do I want to.

Why can't I walk around in my underwear, in my suburban living room with the drapes open, slurp a beer before the television set and make crude remarks about the anatomy of another person (because my father/mother taught me better). Why can't I take advantage of someone else's toils and claim that I deserve it (because I know what it means to do the toiling). Why can't I be allowed to partake more fully in the raising of my children as I see fit and not as society demands (because they're supposed to grow up to be total persons). Why can't I be as promiscuous as others without receiving criticism for my actions (because I believe in caring about others, my reputation, that of my children, and in the prevention of social diseases). Why can't I have someone to clean my clothes, fix the car, clean the bathroom, do my cooking, hand me a beer and accept my cursing when I do something stupid (because I believe in appreciating what others do for you and acknowledging my own faults even when it may appear as a weakness).

Does it mean that much to me to be something that I really don't believe in?

Then why do I want someone to hold me and tell me that it's all right when things go disastrously wrong? Why do I need to know that I'm loved? Why do I appreciate those little things that the not-so-totalperson does when I know it takes an extreme effort on that person's part to do them? Why do I crave a companionship when I know living alone without another total person would be so much easier? Why do I yearn to have my heart broken and to find a new, inspiring love?

Possibly because I'm human, and not just an individually/collectively total person been so patient with me - very supportive." Berger Grumbleburg drinks up to 80 cups of coffee per day just to keep his wife supplied with the grounds she so desperately needs. "He has even taken on a job as a night watchman," she says. "He figured that since he was awake anyway he might as well get paid for it."

Once the coffee grounds are molded into the shape that Helda desires, a thin film of wax is applied with a brush to the sculpture. But how do the grounds stick together? "Easy," she explains. "Before the coffee is perked, I add a small amount of Elmer's to the grounds. It adds a unique flavor to the coffee, and serves its purpose as well." Once the entire sculpture is completed, Helda sprays on a coat of shellac which adds a beautiful sheen to the finished product. "The last part is such a highlight for me. Once the shellac dries, it's like - Eureka!" says Helda, who still gets a thrill from it even after 9 years.

Helda confesses that the Speckled Starling will be her final coffee ground sculpture, however. "It's time to explore new horizons," she says with a grin. "The coffee perculator will be packed away, and Berger can quit his night job." Her career as an artist is far from over though, she is quick to inform us. Any ideas for a new project? "Well," she says, wiping the coffee out of her hair, "I've always had an interest in dust balls, and heaven knows there are enough of them around here." For Helda Grumbleburg, nouveau artiste, the possibilities are endless.

Catch of the Day

What with all the Red Tide and tuna fish scares we've been experiencing lately in the maritimes, it's wise to stay away from seafood altogether. Who knows what kind of toxin is lurking out there in the ocean blue - just waiting for an innocent lobster or shrimp to catch?

Our government "experts" may continue to smile and tell us everything is safe, but we see right through them. We haven't noticed Frank McKenner on any Highliner commercials now, have we? Since this hypocrisy must come to an end, we've decided from this moment on to focus on a bigger, better catch of the day.

Meet William, this week's Catch of the Day. William, or Will, as he is affectionately called by his many fun friends, is 6 feet tall, intelligent, athletic and oh so heterosexual! With dreamy blue eyes and soft brown hair, Will would be perfect for curling up next to the fire with. More importantly, Will is a chiropractor ($$$$$$!), whose favorite motto is: "Porche - There's no substitute."

A true Virgo, Will abhors untidiness. At the end of a long day, he likes nothing better than to run you a hot bath, while he does all the housework (his specialty is scrubbing floors). Will is also an excellent chef, specializing in Polynesian and French cuisine. He will insist on cooking every meal, and of course cleaning up afterward!

Although romantic and sensitive (he cried at ET), let us assure you that Will is indeed masculine. He plays poker and drinks beer, plays football, and even fixes cars! Will loves to collect butterflies, after which he always goes to Lou's for a good workout.

Where can you meet this catch of the day? He can be found at the local market on Saturday mornings buying fresh vegetables, or at the friendly neighborhood Social Club in the afternoons. That is, when he's not busy with his private practise.

If you see this Catch of the Day, be sure and throw your line. Chances are, he'll bite!

UNB Red Devils Trounce York for Victory

By DAFFID ITCHY

The UNB Red Devils won the CIAU National Hockey Championships last weekend with a 7-1 victory over the York University Yeomen, at the Varsity Arena in Toronto. UNB advanced to the final by beating the McGill Neomen 5-0. UNB's first goal was at 2:15 of the first period by Raneto Mirano from Hugh Hopelessdar. UNB would never look back in this game. Shots on net were 41-23 for UNB.

York's only goal came on a slap shot from the high slot. Goalie Darn Lost was unable to handle the hard low shot, for moments earlier he had broken his stick.

The most valuable player of the tournament was center Raneto Mirano for UNB. His hat trick and one assist was a definite factor for UNB's win.

THE FANS

About 2000 UNB fans showed up to the championship game out of the 15,000 total fans in Toronto including President Dowdey. President Dowdey arrived the day before with other administrators of the school. When asked to comment on the team, he said "I think the team has done a great job this year in increasing school spirit."

COACH'S COMMENT

This victory was the first time that UNB had won the CIAU and the second time they had won the AUSA. Coach Nick Rickelchalk commented "it is hard to draw good players from Central Canada to come East to play, but we did a good job this year." When asked if he was expecting to do so well this year, he said "I thought we had a lot of good players and that we would do well but nothing like this, but by Christmas I had a feeling we would go all the way." UNB will be losing a lot of key players this year, but Coach Nick Rickelchalk feels he will still have a good team for next year. "We will have Darn Lost back in nets and Hugh Hopelessdar, Mark Bonger, Ian Cheerup and Jim Ratherwell back for next year, and with some good rookies we will be close to as strong as this year's team."

This tops off the most impressive hockey season ever for any CIAU hockey team. UNB finished the year with a record of 40-0-0 with a G.F.A. of 6.31 and a G.A.A. of 1.33 the best averages in the CIAU.

TEAM HONORS

The Devils achieved honors in all positions and in the All Canadian MVP's the top scorer in the CIAU was Raneto Mirano who won MVP CIAU. Hugh Hopelessdar won most sportmen like player CIAU. The rookie of the year went to Mike Snowski for his achievement in breaking the CIAU rookie scoring record. Finally, Coach Nick Rickelchalk won coach of the year for his incredible ability in taking this average team to such incredible heights.

The All-Canadian first team all-starts were all UNB players: Raneto Mirano (C), Hugh Hopelessdar (LW), Mark Bonger (RW), Jim Laymen (D), Ian Cheerup (D), Darn Lost (G). The All-Canadian second team had three more UNB players: Jim Ratherwell (LW), Mike Mightyhell (RW), Robby Woody (D). The other three players were: John Johnson (C, McGill), Jim Johnson (D, U of Calgary), Jack Johnson (G, York).

RUMOURS

Rumors have it that there are going to be a number of UNB players taken in this year's NHL June draft in Toronto. Reliable sources in Vancouver say that they are interested in signing star center Raneto Mirano from UNB. Other top choices are Hugh Hopelessdar, Mike Snowski, Mark Bonger, and Darn Lost.

When center Raneto Mirano was asked how he felt about being drafted he said, "I have only been approached on a casual basis to date and June is a long ways away... I do not know if I want to play in the NHL. I'm just going to wait and see." Raneto Mirano is graduating this year with honors in physics.

LOONEY BALL

There is actually a book out on the C.F.L. called The Grey Cup Tradition. I'm surprised it's not called Looney-Ball in Beaverland. Nothing like playing a professional sport in snow and cold temperatures with strange rules.

With the demise of this League inevitable, collectors must be excited. Also, NFL owners are excited about these guys becoming professional bench warmers on their clubs.

For those serious CFL fans the book is going for the low, low price of $119.50 plus a small $3000 handling charge. Pittance for a real fan. Of course, this is tax deductible.

It's a good thing the book is being distributed by non-profit organizations. They don't have to worry about such things as profits.

Clowns Invade

On April 7 tall black men in funny outfits will invade the City of Dead Elms. The last time these clown princes of basketball invaded Fredsville was 1984.

This time these tall black men will be playing alongside tall black women. You though you saw strange things last time. Imagine what will happen with women on the team. This may not be decent enough for those over 18. Have fun kiddies!

please tell me because no one else does!

Playoffs! The real reason for the existence of the NHL regular season. I mean, who really cares if the Flames were the best in the league. All that's worth is 200 g's and an extra home game in each series they play (which will be only two as they lose in six to God). So, without further ado the sports department of The Dairy Greener is proud to present the official (for what that's worth) IYKWIM NHL Playoff Predictions:

ADAMS DIVISION

Montreal vs. Hartford: Montreal is six but the opposition will injure three hab regulars. The losing team will receive prosecution immunity and a quasi-victory parade.

Boston vs. Buffalo: Boston in five - the B's are back!

Montreal vs. Boston: Boston in seven (it'll really be Boston in four but we don't want to appear to be biased, do we?) Beantown will explode in an eruption of joy as they celebrate the five injuries suffered by the Canadiens along with the series victory. Robinson will retire and Claude Lemieux will undergo an emergency amputation - at the neck! (there will not be any noticeable impact on his conventional ability - he still speak in monosyllabic grunts).

PATRICK DIVISION

NY Islanders vs. NJ Devils: Devils in five. Burke will stand on his head while the Isles will bemoan the lack of some hack named Bossy.

Washies vs. Philly: Flyers in six. Dave Brown and Ron Hex-tall will make Gustafsson and Pivonka long for home.

Phil vs. NJ Devils: Sean or no Sean. Ron is da best bar nonel (besides I want to see him against Andy in the semis)

Boston vs. Flyers: rematch of 73-74 Boston wins in 6 - don't ask me how - I just know it (but I'm really impartial)

SMYTHE DIVISION

Calgary vs. La Angelos: (drumroll please!) Here it comes: THE UPSET - CALGARY IS OUT IN 6!! Yes folks 6. Gone. Kaput. Kiss the #1 ranking goodbye. Get out the golf clubs and the baseball gloves (heh, heh, heh) Too bad, so sad.

Edmonton vs. Winne-da-Pooh: Tiger in six but seriously folks do you really expect Dale Hawerchuk to hold the Oilys back by his lonesome. Hah and double hah!

Edmonton vs. Ladeedah: Gretzky has to get married on the day of the seventh game and his newly wed wife will want to celebrate the honeymoon during the intermissions. Unfortunately. LA in 7.

Last by certainly the least...

THE NORRIS DIVISION

I'm only doing this column cause I was threatened by da boss (he's a Leaf fan or his wife is or something like that - give them your sympathy).
 Detroit vs. TO: TO in 7
 St. L vs. Chi: Chi in 6
 TO vs. Chi: TO in 7

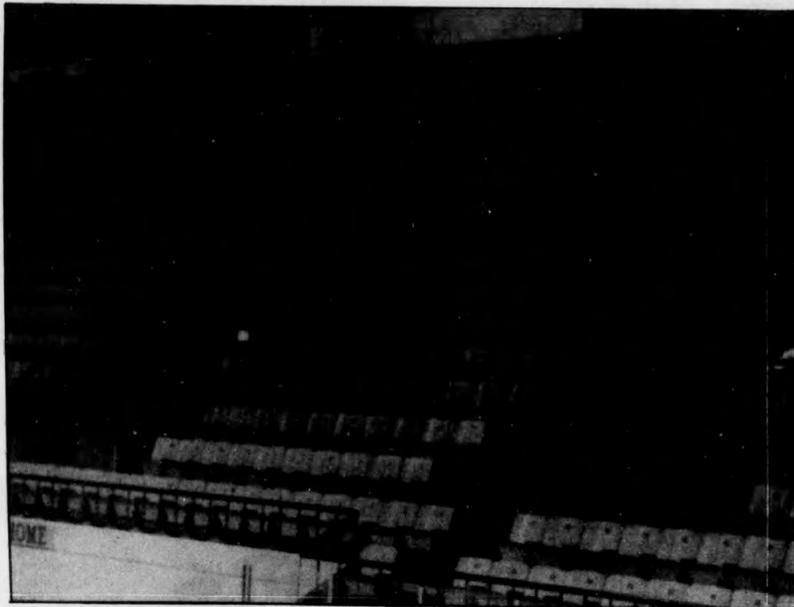

There are you f---g happy?

La boring vs. La Laffs: Tie. 31/2 - 31/2 decided by a coin flip. Pal Hal was a 2 headed quarter and gets his team into the finals. TO explodes in an orgy of joy. Ontario prepares for a baby boom 9 months hence.

Boston vs. TO: Boston in 3. They won't even bother with the 4th game. Glorious victory. The celebration will be held in Montreal so as to better rub their noses in it. (heh heh heh)

MOPPED UP

The victory in the mop leaning portion of the competition was essential for Canada to win the gold. Entering this last half of the competition, the Canadian team was tied with the Russian team for first place, both teams had mopped 12.2166 square miles in the allocated time during the speed mopping runs held earlier this week.

The Competition was held at Minsh in the USSR this year and organizers estimate that over 500,000 spectators attended the event. This number far exceeded the attendance at last year's competition held in Churchill, Manhattan. The popularity of Domestic Sports in the USSR is unparalleled anywhere in the world.

Near the end of the competition, it looked like this year would be free from the controversy that has wounded it in previous years. But this was not to be, the same Soviet coach that had accused Big Al and Bigger Brian of using highly illegal graphite-core mop handles last year challenged their amateur status this year. The Soviet coach claimed that the Canadian team should be disqualified because of the jobs they hold at the UNB Student Union Building. Al countered this by saying "that isn't work anyway," and cut the debate off by pulling out CSIS photos of members of the Russian team mopping up Red Square.

The gold medals were presented last night in an elaborate ceremony that was televised live in Rwanda and selected parts of Minto, NB.

Thus, Big Al and Bigger Brian are kings of the Mopping world for yet another year. Canada and UNB should be proud!

UNB ASTROTURF

Unlike former major league pitcher Tug McGraw, who once said, "If I can't smoke it, I won't play on it," UNB tyrant of athletics, James Bond has decided to bring astroturf to the Fredericton campus of UNB, more specifically Buchanan Field. The purpose of the move is two fold. The most apparent reason is that it will give teams like the Red Sticks a chance to practice on artificial turf so that they can't use field conditions as an excuse when they lose in the nationals. As well, it's still up in the air whether the new field is the director's way of saying that the UNB Red Bombers, the old football team, are back. One thing is certain though, and that is that FHS Footballer will stay the Hell off the field!

 Another move that is supposed to put UNB on the "athletic" map, the UNB rowing team, will be participating in the Thames River Boat Race next year. It seems that Oxford University is no longer enjoying the worthless competition provided by the highly literate, but unathletic wimps from Cambridge. The UNB crew, coached by Kim "Sylvester" Neurosis, is financially strapped like all other teams on this campus. As a result, the team is faced with the grim prospect of rowing, yep rowing, across the Atlantic next year just to get to England. Bond is presently negotiating a contract with the Brits that will see them come to North America next year and race on the St. John River.

WHO IS HERB?

By BILL RUNT

After reading UNB's student paper called The Brunswickan, I became curious of the identification of one sports writer named Herb. Each week he has a column called Herb's NHL Puck-Ups with a picture supposedly of him. The picture never actually shows his face.

Out of curiosity I began to investigate. Sports editor Alan Robichaud would not disclose his identification when I politely asked him over the phone. A subsequent trip to the Brunswickan office revealed nothing.

I then resorted to examining pictures in the Brunswickan of him. I was able to conclude that he is clean-shaven and likes wearing tacky shirts. I figured a walk through the university would reveal his identity. After all, not many people wear tacky shirts. Wrong! University students like dressing weird. Frustrated, I went back to the Brunswickan trying to reveal information. Their former co-sports editor Pete Thompson was sympathetic to my plight. He revealed that Herb had grown a beard during winter.

I replied: "great, just the clue I'm looking for." Now, I was looking for somebody who wears tacky shirts with a beard. That really narrowed things down.

Unfortunately I got this information about a week ago and I had a feeling Thompson was leading me astray.

At a moment like this all I could do was drink. Thus, on March 31 I hit the taverns. The hope being alcoholic students would reveal valuable data. I was right! A little bird told me Herb would be playing softball at the field by the UNB heating plant on Good Friday. I was overjoyed. I would finally meet Herb! I went to the field and examined the players. No beards!

Another setback, how upsetting. Fortunately, there was a guy wearing a Les Hull T-shirt. Then I knew, I had finally found Herb. Only Herb would wear a T-shirt for a politician who's political career is dead.

One can't hide from the press in Fredericton forever.

GOLD TIDDLY-WINKS

Seoul City, Korea (AP)

Yesterday, in Seoul Korea, Twon Kohwon, Chairman of the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul said at a press conference that the Olympic Organization Committee has adopted a proposal to make Tiddly-Winks a demonstration sport for this year's Summer Olympics.

The Ministry of Fitness and Amateur Sport announced that a national tournament will be held in Toronto, in June, to pick the Canadian team. The team will consist of two men and two women. The categories are men's singles, women's singles, and mixed tag team.

lucid explanations of the situation that I have read. Your arguments were compelling, and pointed out the consequences of the conditioning that has led to this 'mob mentality.'

It is so encouraging to receive such a letter, and I hope to make it widely read. Its call for fair play should strike a responsive chord in all those who value freedom and justice."

If Mr. Ross's books cannot be banned and he cannot be legally convicted for any wrongdoing, it seems preposterous to me that a school board should reprimand, supposedly an excellent teacher, for writing books in his spare time, because some people claim these to be hate literature, and have used media to create hysteria.

Where are the stalwarts of intellectual and academic freedom from AUNBT, CAUT as well as from the Teachers Association? Should they not speak up?

Sincerely,

Call For Nominations RE: Michael R. Cochrane Award

The Michael R. Cochrane Award Medal is donated by the Student Representative Council. This medal is awarded annually at Convocation to a student maintaining a satisfactory academic standing enrolled in their final year on the Fredericton Campus. The Medal is awarded on the basis of contributions to improving human and community relations.

evidence and lock him up if he speaks out against the Communists. Much worse, they can kill him, he warns, and then say it was done by "unknown bandits."

"But we all know of course, that it was done by people who depend on the police for their own freedom." They too, he says, are victims of oppression, because they have to do the police's bidding or go to jail themselves. They do their crimes against the vocal opposition in secret and with the blessings of the Polish police.

"We all remember the case of the Polish priest Popieluszek," Pawul recalls. Popieluszek, a popular but vocal critic of the Communists in Poland, was spirited away by these same unknown bandits and later found murdered. After an international outcry it was discovered that Polish policemen had been the perpetrators. This mention of Jan Pawul relaxes at home with family - from left to right, Peter 8, Eva 12, and Barbara 33. In his most recent letter Pawul describes conditions in Poland and fears that Communists there will try to silence him by throwing him in jail. He fears for his wife and family if this happens and asks that we never forget his plea for help.

POLISH DISSIDENT FEARS COMMUNISTS

Popieluszek shows just how scared Jan Pawul is. "I am afraid...I don't know what will happen to me if they find out about my opinions and contacts in the West."

Although he is afraid, Pawul is willing to take the risk of having his story published in the West. His determination to get his story on the front pages of newspapers across the nation has not faded even though the literally thousands of letters he has written over the past five years have remained unanswered.

But he remains convinced that what he is doing is right- and he hopes that someone will be listening when he does need help.

If you can help Jan Pawul and his family to emigrate from Poland, please contact him at the following address: Jan Pawul, 41-709 Ruda Slaska 9, Skr-2 POLAND

Graduating Class 1988

By KEVIN FOURNIER
Grad Class President 1988

It's finally going to happen. That seemingly ever elusive degree that we have all been struggling to obtain is now visible on the horizon. However, besides scholastic matters, there are a number of issues that should be addressed by the potential graduate before this realization.

Home Economics Society

By CAROL SHARPE
President 87-88
The U.N.B. Home Economics Society has had a busy year.

To start the year, to meet the frosh, we had a corn boil. After that, we concentrated on fundraising. A few of our projects included the selling of cookbooks, and catering to various functions in Marshall d'avray Hall. Our big event of the year was the A.C.H.E.S. (Association of Canadian Home Economics Students) Conference which U.N.B. hosted. The conference consisted of many interesting speakers, mexican night, and a sleigh ride at Kings Landing to name a few.

To finish the year we have had a coffee evening with a color analyst and a brunch at the Wandlyn. It has been a busy, exciting, and fun year for the U.N.B. Home Economics society.

not on the list then contact the Registrar's office immediately. Caps and gowns for graduation can be picked up at the Aitken Centre's back entrance on Wednesday, May 25 or early Thursday. The cost is approximately $10 with a $10 deposit fee.

Graduation rehearsal is 9:00 am Thursday, May 26. Students are expected to meet on the Aitken Centre concourse. The Encaenia seating order will be determined at this point in time. When students meet again at 1:30 behind the SUB, they should assume this order. Students will then proceed to the Aitken Centre for the conferring of degrees. Graduates unable to attend the procession may have their degrees mailed to them.

Photographs will be taken at the ceremonies by Chapel Studios. Proofs will be made available to the student and photographs may subsequently be purchased. Yearbook photographs should be handed in to the Yearbook office in the SUB by the end of April. Students should check with their photographer concerning this issue.

A quick reiteration of Grad Class Events is as follows:

Tuesday, May 26 - Ooze Cruise, leaving the SUB at 6 pm Wednesday. - Wine and Cheese Reception at the SUB cafeteria, 7 pm. Parents are encouraged to attend to meet your friends and professors. AIESEC (pronounced EYE-sec) is once again in the Bruns

You already know AIESEC is a group of students in Business, Economics and Computer Science. We have over 45,000 members in 67 countries at over 500 universities.

Here at UNB we're in our 5th year and we keep getting bigger and better. The following is a point form list of our accomplishments this year:

INCREASED AWARENESS in the community

- our Board of Advisors was expanded to include more business people offering their experience

- spoke at a Rotary Club luncheon.

- spoke at a Kiwanis luncheon

- approached the Fredericton Chamber of Commerce about becoming a member.

- held a business luncheon at the Fredericton Motor Inn

- raised money to pay for our affiliation fees, and communication bills

- career days

- cookie sales

- 50/50 draw

- dream auction

- represented UNB at regional, national, and international levels

- fall regional, Oct. (Truro, NS) 16 delegates

- national congress, Jan. (Edmonton, AB) 7 delegates

- spring regional, Mar. (Saint John, NB) 10 delegates

- international congress, Feb. (Boston, USA) 1 representative

INTERNATIONAL EXPERIENCE

- 4 students were matched to Germany, Switzerland, Italy

- 3 students will arrive from Holland, Mexico, and Germany

- international twins with Stuttgart, W. Germany and Budapest, Hungary.

- international studytour/exchange is being planned between AIESEC-UNB and AIESEC-CFA (Hungary)

- three to five more jobs were raised 2 weeks ago (pending final confirmation) so we can exchange more students.

COMMUNICATIONS

We at AIESEC-UNB have access to some of the most advanced communication systems in the world. These include: electronic mail through NETNORTH/BITNET, telex, telephone, fax, and mail.

The achievements made this year are remarkable when you consider that this was all done by university students who have studies and social lives as well. We'd like to take this time to thank the University and the Student Union for their support this past year. We hope our office problems will soon be resolved, next year looks even better...

Bahai Campus Club

The Bahai Campus Club has had a successful year. Our first venture was during orientation. We set up a Peace Banner with the theme "World Peace: Let it be this generation". We collected 300 names from students and Fredericton area residents. The banner was placed in 3 locations: the UNB SUB, St. Thomas University and Kings Place. This Peace Banner then had a long journey to the United Nations.

Health Sciences

The members of the Health Sciences Society have enjoyed another year of field trips, fund raising, volunteering, and social events. 1987 started out with a burst of new members - most of whom are interested in pursuing careers in the health care field. Following the annual address by the Dean of Science, Dr. Unger, and our Faculty Advisor, Professor Dilworth, we began the fundraising for our trip to Dalhousie University. This included the showing of the infamous Rocky Horror Picture Show. (We still have your T-shirts).

The tour of the School of Medicine at Dal was interesting and informative, although some enthusiasm waned when we saw the cadavers.

At our first meeting of 1988, Dr. El-Gabalawy spoke about the clinical aspects of AIDS - stressing the actions being taken by the health care workers at the D.E.C.H. This meeting was followed by the New Year's Form where wine and cheese and dancing filled the evening. Following, were lectures on Respiratory Therapy and Dental Surgery which gave our members new insight into the scope of these fields.

Elections have since been held, and we are all awaiting the inauguration of the new executive at the year end party on April 12.

The club members met on Monday nights to plan events and have discussions on topics important to the Bahai's and the unity of mankind. The discussions centered around talks on "World Unity" given by Bonnie Ellis, Serials supervisor at the UNB Harriet Irving Library, "Harmony of Science and Religion," by Ala Alizadeh, a construction engineer at Nuclear Power in Fredericton, and Professor Sheelagh Brown, at UNB, explained some of the writings of the Bahai Faith.

Bahais being a friendly sort of people, couldn't let the year go by without some parties and dancing. We had two dance parties; one at Christmas and another on the march Break. Both were alcohol and drug free.

This week we placed a display on the Bahai social and Economic Development Projects on the second floor of the Harriet Irving Library. It contains photos and statistics about the projects the Bahai communities are doing throughout the world. Some such projects are schools, clinics, agriculture schools and radio stations.

We hope to have as much fun and excitement next year. So come out and join us in our celebrations or participate in our discussions.

Good luck on your exams and thanks for your support with our functions.

Office Studies Group

The OSG is an independent organization formed by the students of the Bachelor of Office Management in 1986-87.

Its goals are to establish and maintain a link with the business community in order to bridge the gap that exists between classroom and real-life situations; to provide an avenue of fellowship for students in the BOM program; and to create an awareness of the BOM degree program as a viable professional body available to meet the needs of the modern day office.

A major accomplishment of initiative to help further the interest in the group and its program was for the Group to hold a Scholarship Workday in which students entered local offices for a day of employment at a rate of $100 per day or for a monetary contribution to set up a scholarship program for BOM students.

BOM students of the Group have been interviewed by CBC concerning their unique program, and the scholarship fundraising was covered by a local newspaper.

The Group is, and has been involved with offering PSI (Professional Secretaries International) exams for professional qualifications internationally.

A successful sale of BOM sweatshirts and t-shirts has increased their economic independence from the Student Union and has allowed for social gatherings, the grad banquet, and the BOM-BOWL to take place.

The group wishes to provide a structure in which students in the various stages of the four-year degree program can establish helpful contacts with upperclass persons and can seek assistance in matters of their individually planned course loads.

As it is only our second-year of existence, they plan to increase the awareness of the Group within the local university and business community by engaging in such activities as the scholarship drive, by observing and preparing reports on various aspects of the automated office, and inviting professionals from the public and private sector to share their experiences with us.

Malaysian Students

The Malaysian Students Society (MSS) was organized in 1978. Since then it has been a very active society on campus. This year, despite the decrease in membership, MSS was able to organize activities the same as last year. A few of our members were sent to Halifax to participate in the Atlantic Winter Games last term. Although it was a small team, they were able to bring back a couple of medals.

The biggest event for MSS is that every year we try to cook different kinds of food and try to put on a good program. By having Malaysian Cultural Nite we hoped we could show our culture and traditions to the Fredericton Community. MSS was also involved in the International Nite 1988, organized by the Board of International Students. We contributed an event, the Candle Dance, and two dishes for the dinner. The night was an "artistic success" (quoted from the MC, Kwame Dawes), and MSS was very proud to be part of the event.

We have a good relationship with the Student Union and hope this will continue with the new Student Council. To Jane Arnold, SRC members and staff of the Student Union Office, thanks for being there to answer the many questions we had.

Biology

The year kicked off with the annual Wine and Cheese party, where students and faculty had a great time getting acquainted on an informal basis (with the help of complimentary wine). The Whale Watch (held off Deer Island) was a whale of a good time, unfortunately, only pink elephants were seen! This was followed by the Science Silver Bullet where a mixture of science societies took off from the Social Club. Congratulations to those that survived the bus ride, the popcorn fights, the cheap draft and all the free prizes! However, this proved to only be a warm up for the Christmas Pub shared with the ever enthusiastic Forestry Association.

On the intellectual side of the scale, guest speakers from North Carolina, Ontario, Nova Scotia, and new Brunswick provided stimulating lectures on a variety of topics. As well, students were sponsored to attend the annual Atlantic Universities Undergraduate Biology Conference (AUUBC) held in Truro, N.S. At this conference, Honor students presented their research. Prizes were awarded for the best presentations.

The year was wrapped up with the election of the new executive, the Worst Lecturer Competition, and the Biology Dinner Dance. Congratulations to those who won academic awards and especially to those who helped make this year a fantastic success!

Engineers Undergraduate Society

This year Engineering Week was held during the last week of October. Highlights of the week included "The Smoker" which went to Moncton. The annual "Engineering Nite at The Arms," the Coaster Derby and the Coaster Derby Pub. This year the comedians Bowser and Blue performed at the pub.

In January, three members of the executive attended the 20th Conference for the Canadian Congress of Engineering Students. This year the Conference was held in Quebec City. February held this year's "Engineering Weekend". The events started on Thursday night and finished Saturday. Events included a Head Hall Open House, the Atlantic Engineering Hockey Tournament, a broomball tournament at The Arms and many trips to the Social Club.

The most important occurrence of all this year was the creation of a somewhat bimonthly Engineering news letter titled the "ERTW" - Engineers Rule the World. This news letter was received quite well or was efficient in conveying information and humor to engineering students.
