Mr. Hiram Paris and family are visiting at Y. R. Paris.

Hampstead.

Aug. 16.—The people of this town were shocked to hear of a very sudden death which occurred in their midst on Wednesday morning, 8th inst., between nine and ten o'clock.

A stranger by the name of Lane, having advertised in the Telegraph for farm employment, was commended by Mrs. J. Stockford, a Hibernian. On Tuesday evening, the 7th inst., he reached the Hampstead wharf by the steamer Star, and by the kindly assistance of George Rathburn, was driven most of the way.

On visiting the lady an arrangement was made, and he began to labor at some light work, to all appearances good health. On the next morning he went to the field to weed out a patch of turnips. It was not long before a neighbor missed him, and a search was instituted.

To their great surprise they found his hands under him, and there was not a mark, but to all appearance had died while at work, and a search was given and a consultation held, after which Mr. McCouch called upon Albert Palmer, coroner, and made a statement of the facts so far as known.

As it was very apparent that there was not any ground for supposing anything other than natural causes, as he had not to any one's knowledge been in the company of any person after leaving the home to begin work, and being quite near and there was not any mark, but to all appearance had died while at work, and a search was given and a consultation held, after which Mr. McCouch called upon Albert Palmer, coroner, and made a statement of the facts so far as known.

WITH MR. PARKIN.

An Interesting Talk by a Former Frederictonian.

He is Writing a History of Canada.

"Faith" Fenton, a writer on the Toronto Empire, travelled recently from Montreal to Toronto in company with George R. Parkin, formerly principal of the Fredericton collegiate school but now prominent on the staff of the London Times, and in a chat with us says some interesting things of our former fellow citizen.

"Mr. Parkin," says the writer, "is a Canadian from New Brunswick, and the majority of our readers remember him as the strong man of the Imperial Federation League, who five years ago delivered so able a series of platform lectures throughout the British empire, upon the subject of Imperial unity."

"There is no doubt that he is one of the leaders of to-day's thought upon national questions, and it is equally certain that he has contributed in no small measure to the increase of Imperial sentiment, that has won its first result in the recent conference at Ottawa. Mr. Parkin is tall, slender and dark—a man in the prime of life, with a somewhat heavy nose and a receding hair of a high degree of nervous thought."

"In the weeks intervening since the Ottawa conference he has been travelling through the lower Provinces, and now he was on his way to the Niagara peninsula, which he wishes to visit thoroughly as possible, in the few days left to him. He was booked to England by the Labrador on Saturday."

"I am writing a history of Canada," he said, "and it has been my aim, in as far as possible, to visit the battle grounds and all historic places. One can write of them so much better if one has the local color."

"I am impressed more and more with Canada's vast possibilities," said Mr. Parkin. "It is such a magnificent country, with resources so boundless. I travelled with the Ontario and Quebec water there, no lakes, while the rivers are few and small."

"Coming fresh from the St. Maurice, with its course of cascade falls, with a vision of the Ottawa, the Saguenay and our thousand blue lakes and bays also before me, I am trying to comprehend what it would be to live in a land where they existed."

"I have journeyed from Vancouver to Halifax three or four times," continued Mr. Parkin, "and I thought I had seen the whole of Canada, yet when the other day I wanted to run over to Cape Breton I found to my surprise that there was yet a whole day's travelling between Halifax and Lunenburg."

"Dear, dear! if Canadians only realized the richness of their heritage."

"But the development has been wonderful in the last quarter century—confederation, the great Canada Pacific railway, the unification of the provinces, the opening up of the great Northwest, and now this latest step of reaching out for broader trade and closer intercolonial relationships. Canada simply does not realize how continued, yet how solidly sure her progress has been."

"Presently he spoke about literature and the field for Canadian fiction. Gilbert Parker—the young Canadian novelist now residing in London, and author of The Chief Factor, Pierre and His People, and other recent successful novels—is a personal friend of Mr. Parkin's."

"If I had Parker's dramatic gift," said Mr. Parkin, "I should take up the wealth of material that lies in Canada's early history and write her historical novel—it could not fail to be also a romance. Look at French Canada as it is today; recall the history of the old regime; remember the Acadians of Nova Scotia; all Canadian history and legend is almost unbroken ground for the novelist."

"Mr. Parkin spoke with pride of the boys whom in his position as college master he had known and educated before their public work began."

"One of the pleasantest things during my present trip," he said, "is the manner in which they have recalled themselves to my memory, and reminded me of the old school days and the things I taught them. Sometimes I am inclined to believe that the direct moulding and influencing of a score of young fellows, who are to make the nation's life tomorrow, is a greater work than either the platform or the pen can give. I often feel disposed to go back to my boys and my college work."

THE AGRICULTURAL BOOM.

Lord Aberdeen is the first Governor General of Canada who has shown a warm interest in the farmers. He recognizes, no doubt, that the men who till the soil are the life blood of and backbone of the country, and he is willing to lend his name and influence to any project that will advance and develop the agricultural interest. Dairying is the moving word with the farmers of Canada today, and the progress it is making is quite astonishing. The farmers have commenced to think for themselves, to read intelligently the science of agriculture, and to see the advantage of education in their calling, and just as they advance in intelligence will their vocation develop and command the respect it merits. It was a happy thought of Prof. Robertson to plan three great agricultural conferences for the Maritime Provinces and to induce such eminent men as Lord Aberdeen and ex-Governor Hoard to attend and address the farmers, and we trust much good fruit will be borne of these gatherings.

In New Brunswick the local government has given the dairy business a big lift by subsidizing factories and engaging practical lecturers to go around the country telling the farmers just what they want to know about butter and cheese making. The Dominion government also has done very much to help the new industry along, and in Prof. Robertson they have a gentleman whose youth, vigor and intelligence are given entirely to his work. The old methods of farming, of butter and cheese making, in fact in all lines of agriculture, are giving way before newer and better ideas, and the time is rapidly approaching when the man who tills a farm will demand a technical as well as a practical education for his work; when indeed the farmer without ideas will not be in it in the race for successful agricultural accomplishment. Before many years agriculture will be a compulsory study in the public schools of Canada; indeed the Manitoba Board of Education has already recommended that it be taught in the institutions under its jurisdiction. And why not? There is no vocation to which a man can apply himself which calls for more intelligence than farming. The soil, the climate, the adaptation of crops when considered in relation to both these conditions, must be understood by the successful agriculturist. Much that is now done by mere guess work will be based on scientific and well understood principles, and the farmer instead of being a drudge will take his place among the educated men who know the fundamental principles of his business and is able to turn his knowledge to practical account. The farmer is being boomed and he is booming himself, and every step in his advancement means additional prosperity to the country in which he labors. The possibilities of the soil in Canada are almost boundless, and while the cities may prosper and the towns swell in importance, the true index of development and prosperity of a country is its agricultural advancement.

GREAT LIBERAL GATHERING.

Hon. Mr. Laurier was at Brantford, Ontario, Monday, and addressed two Liberal meetings, the attendance at each being estimated at five thousand persons. The Liberal leader was given a magnificent reception and his addresses were marked by eloquence and statement of facts, which cannot be confuted by his opponents. At the outset he went back over the past fifty years history of Canada, and spoke of the struggle the Liberals made for responsible government in the colonies. To this great work was due the civil and religious freedom we now enjoy, but with all the good work the Reformers had done in the past, yet had the great task before them of developing the Canadian confederation, until it became one of the grandest nations of the earth. Speaking of the struggle that he spoke one sentiment in Quebec and another in Ontario, Mr. Laurier challenged the Conservatives to produce one word ever uttered by him in his own province that he would not dare to address to an Ontario audience. He warned all to understand that he was a Canadian above everything else.

The Liberals he said, had many things to contend against, but one thing above all others, was the selfishness of the men now in power. One of the reasons why Canada had not progressed as she ought to have progressed, was the extravagance of the government of the day. This extravagance had resulted in an enormous taxation upon the people of this country. In 1883 Sir John Macdonald had predicted that, with confederation, in thirty years, Canada ought to have a population of 9,000,000 people. The small increase that had taken place was owing to the manner in which the people had been ground by taxation. In Mr. Mackenzie's time the departmental expenditure was $400,000 a year; today it was $800,000 a year, or an increase of 100 per cent, while the population had only increased nine per cent. There was no justification for such a state of affairs as that. The great bulk of the increase was a corrupt expenditure. He did not believe it would be very difficult to retrench the public expenditure by two or three millions per annum, or probably even four million dollars a year. Was there any Conservative who would approve of expenditure in connection with the franchise act? The government themselves did not approve of this expenditure. They were ashamed of that franchise act, which this year alone will cost the country some $200,000. If the Liberals were in power they would bestow that measure instantly. The 215 revising officers would lose their official heads, and the $200,000 would be saved to the people.

Mr. Laurier warned his hearers that the government came upon them with an election like a thief in the night, and they ought always to be prepared for any emergency. He had come abroad to review the policy of the Liberal party. The main plank in the platform of the party was a tariff for revenue only. This was the great dividing line between the government and the opposition. The government believed in protection, but the Liberals did not. The Liberals denounced protection as a fraud upon the people, as a robbery of the many in favor of the few. So long as Canada was in the position which she was in to day, it was impossible to talk free trade as practiced in Great Britain. It was impossible to have such freedom of trade as was in Great Britain, because Canada had to raise a revenue. It should be for revenue and not for the development of certain industries. Experience had shown that any pretence of developing certain industries, only developed monopolies and combines.

The policy of the Liberal party was to extend markets everywhere, but above all things, the markets of Great Britain and the United States. With Great Britain, what has Canada to do to develop her trade? Great Britain's market was open to the world. Canada wanted to send products to Great Britain and be able to bring back the products of Great Britain to this country, and lessen the cost of transportation. What Canada wanted with the United States, which was a protective nation, was a reciprocity of trade.

REFUSED TO DRILL.

New Westminster, B. C., has a military sensation. A few days ago, a company of the garrison artillery, was ordered to parade for inspection, and while the men turned out promptly, they refused to drill unless some of the newly appointed officers resigned.

The latter had never worn a uniform up to the date of their appointment, and the list included a major, a captain and two lieutenants. The men, although disobedient, had good reasons for their action. It too often happens that young men are commissioned for the militia service, who have absolutely no knowledge of their duties, and must cut a sorry figure in attempting to command a company of men. It is very often necessary to take a green one for a lieutenant, and the provision is always made that the appointee must properly qualify within a year, or else his commission is revoked, but it is an absurdity to nominate a man to be a major or a captain, who has never drilled a day in his life.

What respect can a company or battalion of soldiers have for the authority which makes such appointments or the men who accept them. With all the military schools in Canada, there is every chance for young men desiring to qualify themselves for the service, to gain the necessary knowledge before donning their uniforms. In the Westminster case, the commanding officer met the refusal of the men to drill, with a promise that he would lay the matter before his superior, and the outcome will be watched with considerable interest by military men.

A very remarkable suffrage bill has been introduced in the English parliament by the celebrated Sir Charles Dilke. The bill proposes that any woman of full age, whether married or single, shall be permitted to vote or to be a candidate in any parliamentary or local election. A woman duly elected, he proposes, shall be allowed to sit in either the House of Lords or the Commons. It provides for universal adult suffrage, but excludes the university students from their present privileges. The bill emanating as it does from such an illustrious man, is attracting much attention in England.

The death of John Macdonald removes one of the oldest business men of Fredericton, a gentleman who in his day was one of our most prominent citizens. No man stood more highly in the public esteem than Mr. Macdonald. Everprising warm hearted, and of high principle, he numbered his friends whenever his acquaintance extended, and his family have the sincere sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

The many friends of C. H. Lugin in this city and province, will be sorry to hear of his trouble in Seattle and hope that when his case is appealed he will receive a more favorable verdict. Mr. Lugin since he became editor of the Seattle Telegraph has made that paper a terror to evil doers, but whether he overstepped the bounds of legitimate criticism in his treatment of the chief of police we have no means of knowing at present.

Bishop Turner of Atlantic, Georgia, the pioneer African bishop, in a lecture at Toronto, the other night, declared that the destiny of the colored race in America to return to Africa and build up a nation that will challenge the admiration of the world.

ST. STEPHEN, Calais and Milltown, are now connected by a fully equipped electric railway, the circuit including several miles, and the border towns are pardonably proud of the enterprise which has brought the great improvement about.

By act of Parliament the first Monday in September is constituted a public holiday and will be known as Labor Day. The St. John laborers are preparing an elaborate celebration for Monday week the first service of the holiday.

FREDERICTON is to have an official visit next month from Hon. J. C. Patterson, Minister of Militia, and it is probable that the civic authorities will meet him, and talk over the proposed purchase of the militia property in this city.

Hon. W. D. Hoard, the eloquent Yankee who spoke at the Agricultural Conference here last week, and also at Truro, Tuesday, says he is amazed at the agricultural possibilities of the Maritime provinces.

The United States government has made an offer of $425,000 in reparation for the destruction of sealers in the Behring sea.

Funerals.

At 20.—The funeral of Mr. John Christie who succumbed recently by taking Paris green took place on the afternoon of the 11th, under the direction of Undertaker Adams. Rev. Mr. Lodge conducted the services. The deceased was thirty-one years of age, and was the daughter of Mr. Walker, gardener, of Marysville. No reason can be assigned for the suicide other than the victim was at the time temporarily insane. She leaves a husband and several children. The sad circumstance have cast a gloom over the community.

Several have finished haying, others are not nearly done. Hay is an extra crop this year.

Blueberries are abundant but raspberries are not so plentiful as usual. Ebenezer Johnston picked a strawberry from his vines this season, which measured five inches in circumference. We think this must be the berry of the season.

Three milk cows belonging to J. H. Wray were recently killed by a train. Mr. Isaac Lawson lost a valuable horse lately; it dropped dead while at work Cause unknown.

TWELVE LIVES LOST.

Two Terrible Drowning Accidents in the Vicinity of St. John.

A Tug Founders and a Yacht Capsizes.

Five yachts started from Reed's Point St. John, Tuesday afternoon, in the second race in the series for the corporation cup. Four boats returned to the starting point, but two of them were almost dismantled. The fifth yacht, the Primrose, sank off Mahogany island and eight out of her crew of twelve were drowned. The men who lost their lives were:

Samuel Hutton, of the Customs, formerly a well known oarsman and member of the famous Paris crew, who was about 50 years of age, and leaves a widow.

Fred Priest, aged 20, a son of Capt. Priest, of the north end, who worked with Geo. E. Holder, the sail maker.

Geo. Heathfield, aged 22, a carriage maker, employed in Crothers, Henderson and Wilson's factory.

Albert Akerly, aged 26, a carpenter, who lived on Adelaide road, and was the main support of a widowed mother.

Henry Bartlett, aged 27, a sailmaker, who leaves a wife and two children, the youngest of whom is only three weeks old.

James Hurley, about 52 years of age, who was a stevedore, and leaves a widow and several children.

Wm. Russell, aged 20, a son of Wm. R. Russell, the King street clothier.

Harry Hoyt, aged 19, whose parents live on Exmouth street. The four men saved were: Howard Holder, Thomas H. Miles, Fred S. Heam, and James McKeever.

When the yachts left the harbor there was a north west wind and the boats flew out before it in great style. The first turning point was the whistling buoy and it was done in the following order: The Primrose, Sunol, Clyde, the Maple Leaf and Grace M. together. Then the wind shifted and came in from the south. But this breeze did not last, and when the Primrose and Sunol were half way on the stretch to Mahogany island it died out. The Maple Leaf, Grace M. and Clyde which kept away off shore, got quite a fresh breeze and they overtook and passed the other two boats. All the contestants then became becalmed.

But away to the westward there were indications of a squall and a shower. The tug Lillie, which had on board the referee, Judge King; the timer, E. H. Fairweather; the measurers of the boat, a Sun representative and a number of ladies and gentlemen, was close in to Mahogany island. The yachts had to go outside of her in order to round the island, which all the contestants were required to do. A number of sail boats and a steam launch were close at hand watching the manoeuvres of the yachts in the absence of wind. But the storm could be seen approaching and the wonder of everyone on the Lillie was that the boats did not prepare for it. First there was then came rain and later on a heavy hail storm. It was a gale, and no boat carrying the sail that the yachts had set was safe in it. They were about a mile off Mahogany island at the time. The squall struck the Maple Leaf (Elijah Ross boat) first carrying away her topmast.

The crew ran up and were taking in the light sails but they did not have time to accomplish this work. A way went the topmast and this was all that saved her from a fate similar to that which the Primrose suffered. The Grace M. got it next but she escaped without any injury. The Primrose was the third boat that the squall struck and she went down. The Sunol had her mainmast split, her topmast carried away and her centre board broke. But for her destructions of her topmast there is no telling what might have occurred for her. The Clyde was as fortunate as the Grace M.

When the squall struck the Primrose she was close hauled. She was knocked down on her beam ends and nothing could be done with her. She filled with water and the twelve men were left struggling in the water. Just as the breeze sprang up, Mr. Hutton gave orders to have all the light sail taken in, but the orders was not obeyed. This was not because of the failure of her crew to respond promptly, but because they were so busy trying to do anything could be done. Every man looked out for himself. Those Miles was down in the cockpit but just as the boat sank Howard Holder pulled him out.

Nothing but the topmast could be seen and for this Jas. McKeever and Bartlett struck out. It disappeared and the two men had to look out for themselves.

McKeever never saw Bartlett again. Hutton when last seen by the survivors had held the tiller. As he was a poor swimmer it is supposed that he went down at once. Akerly could not swim and probably sank at once.

Those on the Lillie fully expected to see the Maple Leaf capsized, but when it was seen that she had come out of the squall all their attention was given to the other boats. If ever a lot of people were excited, it was those on the Lillie. One saw the Sunol go under. Another knew the Clyde was gone and others pressed far for the safety of the Grace M.

It was felt by those who knew the boats, however, that the Primrose was the most unsafe boat in the lot. In fact, when the storm went on, one man said he was afraid she would never weather it, carrying the sail that she had on. A yacht missed by the Lillie's passengers. 'It's the Primrose,' cried Geo. Holder, and away in the direction of the place where she was last seen steamed the Lillie. It was not any easy thing to locate her position exactly and the steamer came very near passing the place where her crew were battling for their lives.

The deck hand was first to see one of the men. He was swimming along towards the tug, and when the crowd called out to him he said, "Never mind me; I'm all right; go on and pick the others up." A life buoy was thrown to him. The man was Howard Holder. The other survivors Heams, McKeever and Miles, called out that they required no assistance. Their great anxiety seemed to be for the people they had left behind them fighting for their lives.

Life Boats Were Thrown out to these men, but they hardly required them, being good swimmers. The men disappeared from sight as the tug neared them, ready to provide them with the means to keep themselves above water till a boat could be launched to pick them up. One man (he was taken to be Hurley) sank almost under the bow of the tug, when a buoy was almost within his reach.

Mr. Heams, although a good swimmer, kept himself up by the use of a bucket.

If floated out from the Primrose, and as soon as he saw it he struck out for it. Emptying the bucket, he thrust it down into the water, and the air in it kept him afloat. When he was picked up he was swimming on his back, with the bucket under it. He says he could have kept another man above water with him with the bucket as an assistant.

When Heams started in the direction of the bucket, he felt a man catch hold of his foot, but who it was he does not know. When the Lillie found she could rescue no one else, she returned to the four men whom she had supplied with life buoys. Holder was pulled in over the side of the steamer. The other three were picked up by Geo. Holder and some of the crew of the Lillie, who were in the boat launched from the tug.

Priest's coat was picked up and Hurley's hat. This is all that was saved except the four survivors.

was about a quarter of a mile from the Primrose when she sank, and the rescued were picked up in less than a half an hour. Of course she could have been landed sooner, but once they were furnished with life buoys the tug went on after any others that might be waiting to be picked up.

The Primrose's survivors having been picked up, the Lillie steamed off to assist any of the other boats which might need assistance. She towed the Sunol in. The other boats sailed in. The body of Hoyt is the only one recovered so far.

A Tug Founders.

At St. Martins head, near St. John, Sunday morning, the tug Maggie M. foundered on the rocks in a thick fog, drowning Capt. Justus Mowry, Capt. John L. Mowry, Herbert Mowry, three brothers of St. John, and Capt. Pitman, of the bark Alert. The tug was to tow the bark Alert from Alma Albert Co. down to her landing berth, and on board a lot of merchandise some of which Capt. Pitman purchased from his vessel and the remainder for various parties at Alma. Three other men on board were saved.

The Accident Occurred

at about ten past eight when the tug struck the ledge. Those on board launched a boat but the heavy sea was running and before the boat was more than fifty feet from the tug it capsized and eight men were struggling in the water, Captain Justus Mowry, of the tug, his brother, Captain Pitman became exhausted, and let go their hold on the boat and sank. Those on the dory and the sailor on the floating barrel while another swam back to the tug and blew the whistle for help. The sound of the whistle, and the cries of men in the water were heard by people on shore. A man named Armstrong and his son rowed a boat through angry surf to rescue the drowning men. It was a tedious task, however, and before they reached the scene, the three Mowrys and Captain Pitman became exhausted, and let go their hold on the boat and sank. Those on the dory and the sailor on the barrel, who was all but gone, were rescued, and the man who swam back to the tug was also saved. The four men who were drowned, resided in St. John, and all leave families.

Mauchester, Robertson and Allison, St. John's largest goods stores have notified all their clerks that they have no further use for men who go bicycling on Sunday, and want no employ who does not respect the Lord's Day.

Complaints having reached the ears of General Herbert of bad conduct on the part of some of the soldiers now in camp at Lewis, an enquiry took place, with the result that eight men were found guilty and severely punished.

The teamsters of London, Ontario, had a picnic the other day, the feature of which was a public wedding on the platform. Richard Lucas and Minnie Bloomfield, faced Rev. Mr. Natras, and the bride was kissed by the mayor and several aldermen.

The rapidity with which work has been rushed on the Woodstock bridge during the past week, says the Dispatch, gives promise of the completion of the structure at an early date. The second span is now in place, and it is not unlikely that the crew will be able to make progress at the rate of about one span a week.

A Toronto man has just invented a good novelty in the shape of a pneumatic tire skate. The invention is called the bicycle skate and it stands about ten inches high, having ball bearings, a spring rest for the feet, and ankle supports, each weighing only three and a half pounds. The inventor claims that he can travel on the asphalt pavement at the rate of forty miles an hour.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Social, Personal and General Occurrences of the Week.

CRISP AND TO THE POINT.

Dr. J. Z. and Mrs. Currie are here from Boston. There will be no exhibition in Fredericton this fall. The Salvation Army barracks will be rebuilt this season. Miss McCully, of Duluth, is in the city visiting her friends. Governor Fraser has recovered from his recent indisposition. Dr. Sharp, of Margyville, has returned from his European trip. Miss Galt will conduct the Salvation Army meetings next week. General Booth, head of the Salvation Army, will visit Fredericton Oct. 2nd. John P. Hudson, barrister, of New York, is here visiting his mother and sisters. The freshmen are to have another evening under the pines in Scully's grove, Sept. 3d. Mrs. McKinley, of Picton, is in the city, the guest of her daughter, Mrs. T. G. Loggie. R. G. Leckie, manager of the London-derry, N. S., iron works, was at the Queen Tuesday. Hon. T. R. Jones and Police Magistrate Nichol of St. John, registered at the Queen Tuesday. Nearly 500 persons attended the Methodist Sunday school picnic at Lower Burton, Wednesday. The contract for furnishing coal for the Post Office building has been awarded to Ald. Farrell. Judge VanWart has been appointed judge of divorce and matrimonial causes in New Brunswick. The Kirk picnic is to be held next Thursday at McLean's grove, Nashua, and the usual good time may be expected. W. B. Winslow, of the Bank of Montreal, St. John, has been spending his vacation with his father, E. Byron Winslow. J. D. Fowler attended the Victorian convention at Amherst this week, and was accompanied on his trip by Mrs. Fowler. Anoy Xason's grief and weeping, said at New Maryland was burned Monday. It was insured with F. L. Morrison for $500. Dr. Coulthard was elected vice-president for New Brunswick of the Maritime Medical Society in session at St. John this week. Ald. Duffie has bought a small store at Hibernia, Queens county, and it is understood will remove to that place very soon. He has sold his house on Westmorland street to Edward Moore. John B. Morgan, well known in this city, preached in the Jacksonville and Jacksonville Baptist churches, Sunday, and a call to him from those churches to accept the pastorate is under contemplation. Miss Bridges, the efficient organist of St. Paul's church, who has been pursuing her musical studies at Dresden, Germany, since October last, is now in London, and will sail for home early in September. The Sun says that the summer residence of Hon. A. G. Blair at Bay Shore, St. John, is one of the prettiest cottages in the province. It was finished only a few days ago, and the architect was R. C. John Dunn. Rev. Robert Wadsworth, who conducted the services in St. Paul's church Sunday, will officiate again tomorrow. Rev. Mr. MacDonald, the pastor of the church, is enjoying himself among his friends in Nova Scotia. A flag pole has been erected on the Charlotte street school house through the public spirit and generosity of Mrs. Hunter. The flag for it was recently presented to the school by some lady residents in the vicinity. The Governor General was so much pleased with the Herald's report of last week's demonstration here in his honor, that he telegraphed yesterday from Halifax to this office requesting a dozen more copies of the paper. Miss Lillian Nicholson, of the Moncton school staff, who has been spending her vacation at her home, was accompanied by Miss Margaret Holstead, of Moncton, returned to her duties today, the latter going back with her. Thos. Coward, while at work painting the superstructure of the railway bridge, Wednesday morning fell to the straggle below, a distance of fifteen feet, and was seriously injured. Dr. Seery attended and Coward is recovering. Fr. Beecher, who has given the military authorities so much trouble during the past six months, has again deserted from the St. John's school. He was serving ninety days in prison for desertion when he sailed the week before last. The household effects of Dr. Flinow Alexander were sold at auction on Wednesday. Dr. and Mrs. Alexander, it is stated, will soon remove from this city spending some time with friends at Coburg, Ontario, and eventually settling in British Columbia. Major Leggie, Lt. Hawthorn, Lt. Perkins, Lt. McFarlane, Sgt. Wilson and Pts. Neill, Mack, Risteen and Masie, of the 71st Batt., took part in the provincial rifle matches at Sussex this week, and were successful in fair luck, Risteen, Masie and Perkins doing the best shooting. Governor Fraser is to entertain a number of gentlemen to dinner at Farraline Place next Thursday evening. The company will include the members of the Central Committee which so successfully carried out the vice regal program last week, and representatives of the local press. Judge Steadman has resigned as revising officer for Queens and Sunbury and is succeeded by Havelock Coy, barrister, of St. John. Mr. Coy will, we doubt not, fulfil his duties to the satisfaction of both parties. He has not been known as a political partisan. It is said Daniel Jordan is much disappointed that he did not receive the office. The preliminary examination of Brown, Mount and Doyle, charged with setting on fire the Salvation Army barracks, was concluded at the police court before Col. Marsh Tuesday morning. No evidence was produced against Doyle, who was discharged from custody, but Brown and Mount were committed for trial. Wesley VanWart, Q. C., appeared for Mount. Miss Mary McCarty, formerly of this city, who is travelling in Europe with a party of 150 ladies and gentlemen from Brooklyn, New York, with her associates, was granted a private audience with His Holiness the Pope a few days ago and afterwards attended mass in his private chapel, and visited the beautiful grounds of the Vatican, which were thrown open to the visitors. Miss McCarty writes her friends here that she is enjoying the trip very much, and before returning home will have seen the principal points of interest in Europe. All arrangements have been completed for the good holiday trip of the season, the A. O. H. excursion to Calais on Monday, Sept. 10th. A train of ten first-class passenger cars have been chartered, and will convey this excursion. The Citizens' brass band have been engaged for the occasion. The committee in charge will spare no pains to make this a most enjoyable day's outing. Excursionists can depend upon ample accommodation and the best of order being maintained by the different committees. The fare for the round trip has been placed at the remarkably low sum of $1.50. Tickets can be had from any member of the order.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.

Postmaster Hilyard and his family were sleeping soundly in their home at the foot of Queen street at 1.30 o'clock this morning, when a noise in the yard awakened them, and aroused suspicions that all was not as it should be. An attentive listening soon convinced the Postmaster that some person or persons were attempting to pull up one of the dining room windows with no friendly intent, and hastily jumping out of bed, he seized his trusty revolver, loaded ready for action. When he got a view of the yard below, he saw two men there, evidently attempting to burglarize his house. He fired two shots at them, and the intruders beat a rapid retreat, one making over the bank towards the river, and the other scaling the fence and crossing Parliament Square as fast as his legs could carry him. The Postmaster discharged three shots at the latter, but in the excitement of the moment, his aim was bad and none of the shots took effect. However, the men were evidently very much surprised and alarmed at the expectedly warm reception they got. They evidently didn't know the Postmaster was loaded for bear, or knowing it, they believed he was one of the Fredericton riflemen recently returned from Sussex, and that under the circumstances there was no danger.

The night policeman report having showed a couple of suspicious characters until 1 o'clock this morning, but the riflemen came on then and the officers taking shelter, lost the scent. It quite probable however, that the men who disturbed Mr. Hilyard's slumbers were the same, and that they may be apprehended. In the meantime the Postmaster is receiving congratulations on his prompt and effective disposition of the burglars, and no doubt is very happy with himself that he had not the aim and precision of a Hawthorn or a Mack, otherwise, blood might have stained his back yard and Parliament square.

Recent Deaths.

Two old people, Mrs. Owen Sharkey and John McDonald have died during the last week. Mrs. Sharkey was ill only a week and her sudden death was a great shock to her friends. She was a native of Ireland and came to New Brunswick when a young girl. She was seventy years old and leaves a husband and a family of four daughters and one son, J. T. Sharkey, of this city. The funeral took place Monday forenoon; services at St. Dunstan's church. Mr. McDonald had been in feeble health for a long time and his death was not unexpected. Deceased was for many years one of the leading business men of Fredericton and was most highly respected in all the relations of life. He was a native of Donegal, Ireland, and came to New Brunswick in 1850 when only seventeen years of age. He was in his life a P. P., a member of the school board, and sitting magistrate for Fredericton. He leaves a widow and three daughters, the eldest of whom is the wife of Thos. A. Sharkey, of this city. The funeral took place at 10 a. m. Wednesday and was very largely attended. Beside the immediate friends of the family, the following gentlemen walked in the procession as mourners: Hon. A. F. Randolph H. B. Rainsford Geo. C. Hunt Alex. Calder F. B. Coleman Jas. Tennant E. B. Winslow T. B. Winslow Simon Nealis D. Lucy J. Henry Phair F. L. Morrison Nelson Campbell Hon. R. J. Ritchie Hon. T. R. Jones. The floral tributes filled a barouche and included: Cross—Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Fraser Sheaf of Wheat—Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Oshman Cross—F. L. Morrison Cross—Miss Millett, St. John Willow—Mrs. and Mrs. Bebbington Cross—Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Winslow Cross—Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Allen Cross—Mr. and Mrs. D. Lucy Cross—Mrs. Miller Wealth—Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Winslow Bonquet—Mrs. Foley Parker Bonquet—Mrs. W. H. Dunbar Bonquet—Mrs. McGoldrick. The funeral services were conducted at St. Dunstan's church by Rev. Fathers O'Leary, of Kingsclear, and Savage, of Fredericton.

A Church for Sale.

A Boiestown correspondent writes: Sir: It is publicly known that the Rev. Edward Bell wants to sell the little Methodist church on Parker's Ridge. If not sold at private sale it will be sold at public auction on the 27th day of present month. Here is a great bargain for some party—a Methodist church in good repair and for only twenty dollars. The purchaser may use it for a pigpen, or a rum shanty, or a den for thieves, or any thing else providing always that he pays the twenty dollars down. Mr. A. Smith built the church and presented it to the Methodist congregation, together with the plot of ground on which he seated the walls and roof. It is a fine stand, thinking that it would remain there, as it was duly dedicated to the Lord for ever, but his confidence was misplaced, as the almighty dollar was considered first and the spiritual view of the matter take a second place.

A Pleasant Picnic Promised.

The Manguerville and Sheffield Annual picnic at Lower Jemseg next Wednesday, the 29th inst., and have engaged the steamer Aberdeen for the trip. The boat will leave this city at 7 a. m., calling at the usual stopping places en route, and the Citizens' committee will accompany the party. The caterer will be George Edgar, and an excellent programme of sports, with suitable prizes will be provided. The fare will be from Fredericton, 50 cts.; Manguerville and Oromocto, 45 cts.; Sheffield, 40 cts. and Upper Gasquetown, 35 cts. The committee in charge of the picnic is composed of Geo. F. Barker, M. O. Sewell, C. A. Harrison, H. H. Bridges, P. K. Barker and J. P. Jewett. Those who attend may anticipate a pleasant time.

A Heavy Sentence.

The Vancouver World says that C. H. Lagrin, formerly of Fredericton, now editor of the Telegraph at Seattle, Washington Territory, has been convicted of criminally libelling Bolton Rogers, chief of the police, and sentenced by Judge Glasgow to pay a fine of $500 and be imprisoned three months in the county jail. Mr. Lagrin made no reply but it is reported that he subsequently told his counsel with grim humor that it was a pity that the judge had not power to sentence him to death. A notice of appeal was given and the bond, fixed at $500 by Judge Glasgow, was signed by John Collins, proprietor of the Telegraph, and contractor John Farke.

York S. S. Convention.

The annual convention of the York County Sunday school association was opened in the Methodist church at Marysville on Thursday evening, Aug. 10th. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Lodge, conducted the opening prayer and shared heartily in all the sessions.

President J. W. Spurden, in his opening address, expressed some earnest thoughts about the Bible as a standard of character and the association's important work of teaching it.

Mr. Lucas expounded the advantage of the parish association work and gave a normal lesson on the Sunday school.

The prayer service of Friday morning was led by Rev. J. T. Parsons. In the absence of the President, Mr. Lucas took the chair.

After an earnest consideration of the work of the county, the statistical report was read by Mrs. Dr. Sharp, the secretary. Mr. Lucas said this was the most complete report of Sunday school work which York ever had. Not a school was overlooked.

Questions were asked as to methods of collecting statistics, and Mr. Lucas clearly explained the manner and the principles on which they are based.

The afternoon meeting was yet more largely attended. The credential committee made their first report, which showed a wide representation. In the absence of two gentlemen who were to have spoken on the Four Gospels Mr. Lucas took that subject, using a blackboard and giving much information to teachers.

The nominating committee reported and the following officers were elected: Martin Lemont, Pres.; J. W. Spurden, Vice-Pres.; Mrs. Dr. Sharp, Sec. and Treas.; also Vice-Presidents for each parish.

Mrs. W. G. Clark taught a primary class. It was a profitable exercise and crowded the session. Mr. Lucas made some reference to the primary union proposed to be formed under Dr. Hurlbut at the provincial convention, Dec. 16-18th.

The evening session had a very large congregation. President Lemont made a brief address on Sunday school work as a paying investment of time and money. He called on Mr. Lucas, who spoke on the work in York County, and said some excellent things to the teachers.

He was followed by Rev. Dr. Brecken, who in felicitous style spoke of some of the needs of a S. S. teacher; and Rev. Dr. McLeod gave a forcible address on the splendid opportunities opening to a modern S. S. teacher.

Offerings were taken up and the York County convention was brought to a close.

Letters of Thanks.

Mayor Beckwith has received the following letters of thanks which are self explanatory: On Board S. S. David Watson, St. John River, Aug. 17, 1894.

Dear Mr. Mayor—On leaving Fredericton I cannot help wishing to express to you my appreciation felt by Lady Aberdeen and myself regarding our agreeable visit to your city. We shall certainly remember with great pleasure the extremely cordial manifestations of loyalty and also of personal kindness which were displayed by the citizens. The arrangements of the program, including particularly those of Thursday night, seemed to be excellent, and the spectacle must have afforded much pleasure to those who witnessed it.

With the assurance of good wishes, I remain yours very faithfully, A. B. REED.

St. John, 18th Aug., 1894. Dear Mr. Beckwith—In closing the Agricultural Conference on Thursday, I omitted to express publicly my hearty thanks to the members of the Citizens' Committee for doing so much to make the occasion a pleasant and successful one. I beg of you, as chairman of the committee, to assure the members that I am grateful for all their efforts and that I appreciate highly the assistance which they gave. All who took part in the conference are under an obligation of kindly remembrance and thanks to those who did much of the exacting work of preparation and that with the assurance of my personal thanks, I remain, Sir, your truly, J. N. Grant, one of our most prominent farmers, has just completed a large acre of corn and English horse-beans. Your correspondent on measuring Mr. Grant's corn, found many stalks 11 feet high. We believe it will compare favorably with any in the country.

Your correspondent had the pleasure last Saturday evening, of visiting the Southampton Dairy Association's meeting. The subject under discussion, was "the benefits of co-operative dairying." The question was ably presented by the President, Mr. Brooks, and L. W. Miller, J. A. Grant, J. M. Akery, Secretary Tompkins and B. N. Akery each debated it from several stand-points. It seems that the farmers of this district are dropping the scales from their eyes. I was struck with the difference between now and ten years ago. Then it was the exception to hear a man discuss agriculture. Now, to see these farmers come to the association and deal with the question of dairying, proves to me that they are becoming more thoroughly acquainted with their business. I would like to see these agricultural revivals extend to Queensbury, in fact, all over our county.

POETRY.

MY MENDING BASKET.

It is made of the stoutest of willow; It is deep and spacious and wide, Yet the golf stream that flows through its borders, Seems always to stand at flood-tide!

And the garments lie heaped on each other; I look at them often and sigh, Shall I ever be able to grapple With a pile that has grown two feet high?

There's a top layer, always of stockings; These arrive and depart every day, And the things that are playing "button button," Also leave without any delay.

But ah, underneath there are straits, Buried deep as the earth's escarp; Things put there the first of the autumn, Still there when the trees have grown green.

There are things to be ripped and made over; There are things that gave out in their prime; There are intricate tasks all awaiting One magical hour of "spare time."

Will it come? Shall I ever possess it? I start with fresh hope every day, Like a will-o'-the-wisp it allures me; Like a will-o'-the-wisp, fades away.

For the basket has never been empty, During all of the burdened career, But once, for a few fleeting moments, When the baby upset it last year. —Bessie Chandler, in Harper's Bazaar.

CHAPTER III.

"You know dear,"—rightly interpreting her silence; "you yourself were saying scarcely a week ago, that Nora and Gwen may not have a governess."

"But not a stranger, Lennox; nor one so young as you describe this Miss Curtis to be. Besides," hesitatingly, "I so much desired a thorough lady."

"So this Miss Curtis seems, both in appearance and speech. If you could only see her, and hear her mournful description of the family's altered circumstances since her father's death, I think you would not hesitate to help her at any rate."

"I don't doubt Miss Curtis' need, nor our desire to repay the sacrifice which proved your salvation, Lennox; I only demur over the form the payment has to take—money. An offer of the lodge which Peckham's death has vacated, seems to me a much more satisfactory arrangement, inasmuch as it includes the whole of the family. Besides, my orphaned niece, pretty Muriel Coates, can teach Gwen and Nora for awhile. She is an independent little body, and may prove awkward about accepting a yearly allowance for dress, to which she has rightly no claim; whilst if we constitute her their governess—we only want mild teaching at present, she will fancy she has earned it; and she is just the sort of soft, lovable girl, firm, yet gentle and amiable, that I should like for an example to the children. She comes next week, you know. Suppose, Lennox,—laying her hand coaxingly on her husband's sleeve, and looking with loving eyes into his—"that I write to Mrs. Curtis and offer them the lodge. Baynam and wife will be disappointed, but our debt to them is not as great as to the Curtises."

Mr. Seville could not tell why he failed to join in his wife's enthusiasm over this scheme. Perhaps he had hoped to do more for a family, the head of which had, in a sense, died in his stead; but whatever he felt, he betrayed no objection to the suggestion.

So the letter was written; just the one that gladdened the heart of Mrs. Curtis to receive. Edna was furious, and unkindly, in the postscript Mrs. Seville, by some unfortunate afterthought, put—"or you much prefer it, your youngest daughter could perhaps come and teach my children." That sentence settled the whole affair. It offered the very chance Edna had been working and longing for. She had successfully poured the idea into Mr. Seville's brain; she had decanted on it favorably from every point of view; so it was likely that, when she had all worked round as she desired, she was merely going to let it be negated by a mother and sister whom she could work round her fingers? Not at all.

But she had harder work to gain her way than she had ever supposed. Like Mrs. Curtis really was desirous of changing the London suburbs for the quiet of a country life, the dust of town for the green fields and arching trees of her childhood; and had not Patty's entreaties been united to Edna's—Patty, who still clung to the hope that Jim Hare might return to the shelter of his first fancy, and who dared not leave his neighborhood lest she lost her every chance, the probability is that Edna would never have gone to Seville Towers, and this over-trous history would never have been chronicled. But with her two children, and their inclinations pulling against her, Mrs. Curtis had at last to give way, and the letter was penned, thanking Mrs. Seville for her kindness and saying that of the two offers, the family preferred to accept the second, namely, the one that gave Edna the chance of becoming governess. Salary was delicately alluded to, but through a fear of giving a loophole of escape, the younger Miss Curtis dictated that the settlement of money could be left to the discretion of the Sevilles.

Not that she had any notion of accepting a small salary. She was about as fit to be a queen of society as she was to be a governess; but that mattered but little to her. If she could but force an entrance into Seville Towers, her poor services should be liberally paid. What was lacking, she was fully resolved, to help herself to—self-depreciation was not one of Edna's failings.

Mrs. Seville was greatly taken back when she received Mrs. Curtis' epistle, but it arrived at a favorable time, just after pretty Muriel Coates had gone to reside at Seville Towers. Muriel was so ready to jump up for anyone, so adaptable to circumstances, and always so cheery and bright, that instead of detracting from the home happiness, she seemed rather to add to it. If Muriel did not prove a nuisance, why should the forlorn Miss Curtis, whom Mr. Seville felt so bound to aid, and who was both young and pretty? Still, Mrs. Seville marvelled at the advantage that had been taken of her suggestion.

"Dear Totie" (he called her both Lotie and Totie) "a drowning man does not hesitate to catch at a straw, and I suspect things are almost at this desperate pass with the Curtises."

"Then why not have come to the lodge, dearest Lennox? All the family would have been so glad to see you."

"Ah! just so I cannot reply, unless Miss Edna is much superior to the rest of the family; I fancy she must be. The other two never came near; so perhaps they can scrape on as long as she is provided for."

"But Muriel! Othello's occupation is gone."

"Most certainly that it should be. Your niece could hardly be expected to take a post that, make the best of it, is but mental. Muriel can drive out with you when the children are at lessons, help to entertain callers, write letters, and be a help in a hundred varied ways."

Mrs. Seville gave in at last, but she only gave in unwillingly; her word, not her conviction, was changed. Who can account for prevision, presentiment, or whatever we call the superstitious feeling that pervades our very being at certain epochs of our lives? We feel that such and such a step will be disastrous, we know not why; we are weighed down, as if with a burden, and the very thought, Sometimes the after consequences prove that the warning ought to have been heeded. If we had only acted as our inward monitor advised, how far different would circumstances have unfolded for our good. It was such a prevision as this that weighed down Mrs. Seville. Why it should be so, she could scarcely tell. She supposed it to be caused by a natural distinction to only a stranger to be as one of the family, yet she had always known that such an event was sooner or later imminent, unless she parted with her daughters for school or taught them herself—two very improbable alternatives.

She actually once got out her writing desk, and even began a letter to Miss Edna Curtis, withdrawing her request for that young person's services in her house. Several notes were torn up. It was not easy to draw back after offering a maintenance, but she thought it ought to be done.

"Lennox must offer these Curtises money, sufficient to start them in business; it is all that can be expected," she said, aloud.

"However desirous one may be to repay them, no sensible person can expect me to take a governess, without reference or position, into my family."

"Dear Aunt Totie, what are you looking so grave about?" asked a short fat-like girl, in soft, clinging robes of Puritanical gray, as she went and threw her arms round Mrs. Seville's neck. "You might really be making your will, your face has such a stern expression on it; I am quite frightened."

"You look so Muriel," laughed Mrs. Seville, as her niece pretended to shiver. "Seriously though, I am in a perplexity, far worse than any will-making could be to me, because I have no money to bequeath. All that my grandmother left me, is settled on my children after me, without assent or dissent of mine, indismissibly, as you know."

"What the deuce am I to do?" asked Mrs. Seville periodically.

"Rayner and I will walk," proffered Mr. Thompson, as he looked admiringly at Edna's pretty, tear-stained face. "It is only a matter of a couple of miles or so."

"Not to be thought of. Here Brown, hand up the lady and her box, and I'll drive."

Thompson and Rayner, as they took their places at the back, nudged each other, as much as to say, "Seville's friend, whoever she was, was uncommonly pretty, and the best of it was that she had seen Seville's sudden face, they would not have thought that he was at all pleased at the position. He scarcely opened his mouth during the homeward drive. Edna had the whole of the conversation, which she kept up perpetually, despite his monosyllabic replies."

"Tired, Lennox darling," exclaimed his fond wife, rushing out to meet him. But she drew back in slight embarrassment when she saw the dog cart full.

"Miss Curtis has come," whispered her husband, before he introduced Mr. Rayner.

"But I was not expecting you, at present, Miss Curtis," said Mrs. Seville in dignified surprise. "In fact, I told you that, owing to a proposed visit to the seaside—"

"Oh please don't scold me," burst in Edna, in childish impulsiveness, "I can return again if you wish it. Only I was miserable at home, and so anxious to become acquainted with you, that I risked it."

"And now my son is gone to a school near London, Alice is in bed, and the two girls are out to sea."

"Miss Curtis will dine with us, Totie. Come see after us all. I am as tired as I can well be, and as hungry as a hunter."

"Knowing that her husband hated food, Mrs. Seville soon had everyone in their respective rooms. Then after embracing her husband and kissing him, undoing his boots and putting on his warmed slippers, she went herself to see after Edna's comfort.

"I scarcely think, Lennox dear, that Miss Curtis will care for dining with us," she remarked as she was leaving the room.

"Then send her meal upstairs," he said.

"I suppose we shall have to keep her in her proper position. A girl of her—"

"Fiddle position! I should say, if we have a girl here in gratitude, that we ought to make her one of ourselves. I don't like her coming as she has done; but there, she's almost obliged to expect. We must be kind to her."

Which addendum was scarcely requisite to Mrs. Seville. Whatever she felt as to the policy of having a governess—especially under the circumstances that had brought Miss Curtis—Mrs. Seville was bound to be kind to her. But that her previous objections to engaging any lady for the office of instructress to her children on the plea of repaying a debt, in utter ignorance to her capabilities, were dispensed and intended a hundred-fold by Edna's bold course of arrival, was a fact. Yet in her consideration for sparing her husband's feelings, she would not dwell on it. She saw he was sufficiently ruffled by himself. There was no man living, who liked this to be done right, more than did Mr. Seville.

"May I come in, Miss Curtis?" Mrs. Seville asked, at that young lady's door. After a perceptible pause, the answer came—"Yes."

Edna was standing before the glass, engaged in inserting a pretty chemise into her dress, the sides of which she had dexterously fastened back; and even at that moment Mrs. Seville was struck by the vivid beauty of the rose-leaf tinted cheeks and the very blue eyes.

penation for a heavy debt," she said smilingly, "to make a girl governess; if—"

"She preferred that way," interrupted Mr. Seville, impatiently, as if he wished the matter to drop. "Of course it won't be sufficient. I shall send her mother a substantial cheque."

CHAPTER IV.

THE station at Weycombe was always in a bustle when the trains due were expected. Not that there was the least reason, for it was the exception rather than the rule when it dropped any passengers. Mr. Seville, when in health, always availed himself of the train. His offices were at Surbiton, four miles off, the nearest train went at nine, and he slipped out of it by the 6.10 in the evening, but as he hurried away to his trap, rarely if ever speaking to a porter, it could scarcely be for his arrival the bustle was assumed.

One evening, when illness and labours were over in early flower, the train stopped as usual. Mr. Seville, now in much better health, got out of a first-class carriage, and the door of the compartment was opening to admit a lady. If it had not been his custom to hurry, the sight of meeting a probable neighbor would have hurried him. Mr. Seville did not care for ladies' society, save and except his wife's, and he hastened by without looking up. His peculiarity this way was known in the district, and his lack of geniality did not tell in his favor.

"Halloo, Seville, old boy! You ought to be a gentleman, emerging from a third-class carriage almost at the extreme end of the train. Glad to see you. Wait till I get my luggage out of this confounded rump box, and I'll introduce Rayner."

A much smaller gentleman, but equally dark as himself, followed.

"Your wife's niece and I are acquaintances," Mr. Rayner said.

"Oh, of course," said Mr. Seville hurriedly. "Muriel is partly engaged to be married. Come along Thompson, bring Muriel's friend—"

As he spoke, a voice broke in: "Mr. Seville, please stop; I am out of breath through running after you. How am I to get to Seville Towers? Is the carriage for me—"

"Miss Cur—tis, you here!" exclaimed Mr. Seville in unfeigned and not over-pleased surprise. "Does my wife expect you? She never told me, if so."

"They had walked out of the station, and a man in livery, with dog-cart, was holding a restless horse."

"Mrs. Seville has not written for two days," declared Edna, bursting into artificial tears; "and my mother quarrelled—oh—oh—oh—how long—plung me; said I was such an expense. At last worn out, I resolved to come and see—"

"Here portie," called Mr. Seville, "a cab 'Tull," turning to Edna, "will convey you and your luggage to Seville Towers."

"I—I have scarcely any; only a small trunk," said Edna with a becoming blush.

"There's no keb here, sir," said the porter; "none nearer'n Mobb's 'Wandering Jew.'"

"What the deuce am I to do?" asked Mr. Seville periodically.

"Rayner and I will walk," proffered Mr. Thompson, as he looked admiringly at Edna's pretty, tear-stained face. "It is only a matter of a couple of miles or so."

"Not to be thought of. Here Brown, hand up the lady and her box, and I'll drive."

Thompson and Rayner, as they took their places at the back, nudged each other, as much as to say, "Seville's friend, whoever she was, was uncommonly pretty, and the best of it was that she had seen Seville's sudden face, they would not have thought that he was at all pleased at the position. He scarcely opened his mouth during the homeward drive. Edna had the whole of the conversation, which she kept up perpetually, despite his monosyllabic replies."

"Tired, Lennox darling," exclaimed his fond wife, rushing out to meet him. But she drew back in slight embarrassment when she saw the dog cart full.

"Miss Curtis has come," whispered her husband, before he introduced Mr. Rayner.

"But I was not expecting you, at present, Miss Curtis," said Mrs. Seville in dignified surprise. "In fact, I told you that, owing to a proposed visit to the seaside—"

"Oh please don't scold me," burst in Edna, in childish impulsiveness, "I can return again if you wish it. Only I was miserable at home, and so anxious to become acquainted with you, that I risked it."

"And now my son is gone to a school near London, Alice is in bed, and the two girls are out to sea."

"Miss Curtis will dine with us, Totie. Come see after us all. I am as tired as I can well be, and as hungry as a hunter."

"Knowing that her husband hated food, Mrs. Seville soon had everyone in their respective rooms. Then after embracing her husband and kissing him, undoing his boots and putting on his warmed slippers, she went herself to see after Edna's comfort.

"I scarcely think, Lennox dear, that Miss Curtis will care for dining with us," she remarked as she was leaving the room.

"Then send her meal upstairs," he said.

"I suppose we shall have to keep her in her proper position. A girl of her—"

Realized in Six Hours—Distressing Kidney and Bladder Diseases relieved in six hours by the "Great South American Kidney Cure." This new remedy is a great surprise and delight on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. For sale by W. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

HOT.

The eye of a little Washington Miss was attracted by the sparkle of the dew at early morning.

Minna, she exclaimed, it's hotter'n I thought it was.

What do you mean? Look here. The grass is all covered with perspiration.

A BOON TO HORSEMEN.—One bottle of English Sperm Lintment completely relieved a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal of hores of hard, soft or caloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, swellings, stifles and sprains.

GROUNDS ROAM, Farmer Markham, Ont. Sold by W. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

A little fellow was taken into his mother's chamber to see for the first time a baby brother. The three-year-old looked the infant over with a calmly critical regard, and then, turning to the maid who had accompanied him, he said, very decidedly, "Jane, you keep that in the kitchen."

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.—South American Rheumatic Cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It cures at once the cause, and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. For sale by W. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

MAKING SCORES EVEN.

And what's your reason for increasing the servant's wages, pray? her friend asked.

Because my husband complained that my dress and millinery bills equalled the household expenses, and I want to show him they do not.

PLAIN LIVING AND HIGH THINKING The two together. But high living should not be associated with high thinking. It utterly deranges the system and makes mental labor of any kind an effort. It leads to dyspepsia which however may be completely cured, as it has been in hundreds of cases, by a systematic course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills. They are sold by all druggists.

WHAT EMBOLEDENED HIM.

She (tenderly)—Tell me, dearest, what emboldened you to propose? How did you guess that I loved you, darling?

He—To be frank with you, love, your papa intimated that if I didn't mean business after coming to see you for two years, I had better clear out and give some other fellow a chance.

HEART DISEASE RELIEVED IN 30 MINUTES.—All cases of organic or sympathetic heart disease relieved in 30 minutes and quickly cured, by Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. One dose convinces. Sold by W. H. Carten and Alonzo Staples.

OVERHEARD.

Little's afraid of growin' fat, said dear little Tommy, who was being exhibited before company.

How do you know that? asked one of the guests.

Because, replied Tommy, confidently, I might as well see what Mr. Makewell was on the piazza I heard her say: 'I'm afraid I'm heavy, ain't I?'

GET THE BEST.

The public are too intelligent to purchase a worthless article a second time, on the contrary they want the best! "Oh please don't scold me," burst in Edna, in childish impulsiveness, "I can return again if you wish it. Only I was miserable at home, and so anxious to become acquainted with you, that I risked it."

Regular Habits, careful diet and a course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic for a few weeks will give you a new lease of life.

Why don't you try to paddle your own canoe, growled Brown as Jones struck him for ten. "I can't, said Jones, but I am trying to float a loan."

Cramps in the Stomach are instantly relieved by taking twenty or thirty drops of Dr. Manning's German remedy in warm sweetened water. Sold by all druggists.

Quite Necessary.—Why, Dottie, I thought you were going to be married? So I was and the banns were put up and everything, but we did not get any presents we've put it off till times are better.

Mutual Friend.—It really is shocking, dear the way in which you and your husband quarrel and carry on. I wonder you don't separate from him. Injured Wife.—What! go away and leave him alone to do just as he likes? Not me!

THE AMERICAN

$8 DOLLAR $8

Typewriter.

THIS is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price, for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a Typewriter built for and capable of real work. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity, that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes Capitals, small letters, figures and marks, 71 in all. Writes just like a $100 machine. No shift keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct. Prints on flat surface. Writing always in sight. Corrections and insertions easily made. Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches.

Easy to understand, learned in five minutes. Weighs only four pounds, most portable. Compact, takes up but little room. Built solid and simple, can't get out of order. Capital and lower-case keyboard alike, easily mastered. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work. Takes good letter press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address, on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine and are glad to answer all enquiries for further information.
