FROM THE MONTREAL TRANCRIPT. PHRENOLOGY .- No. VI.

"We will analyse the ideas of the part by the reality that's here."

It has been asserted that Phrenclogy is nothing but a system of Materialism, which, if admitted to be true, would degrade the mind to a mere physical machine, and an-nihilate all our giorious hopes of immor-table.

Although modern chemistry has distributed matter into more than hity elements, or simple substances, yet it is evident that the real ultimate principles of matter must consist of a much singler number; and indeed, from the analogical inductions of philosophers of the present day, there are many and strong reasons for supposing that there and strong reasons for supposing that there is but one simple element, or essence, or

It is a fact well worthy of notice, that more than one year since its establishment. This is certainly one of the boldest at tempts at innovation on a large scale that we have ever known, and is, so far, decidedy one of the most successful. Phonotypy nd Phonography together, constitute what s known as "the Language Reform," or the Writing and Spelling Reformation he principle which lies at the bottom this movement ; but apart from its merits, the fact that a family newspaper in the English language, printed in an entirely new system of spelling words, with an a phabet of forty two letters, instead of the twenty six old stagers which have served our forefathers, is liberally sustained, and that its circulation is rapidly increasing, is one of the most striking and singular pho-numena of the nineteenth century. The sheet itself is one of the "curiosities of literature." On Sunday, the 11th instant, the consul-convoked at his house all the French citi-tens in Goatemala, with the view of adoptng some resolutions manifesting to the isional government their adherence to Brench Republic. At this meeting some difference of opinion occurred and a protest-was presented to the consul against he malevolent sentiments which they, the signers supposed the editors of this Gazette expressed toward France, and the govern-ent recently established.

The consul, who was requested to certify to the protest, that it might be printed, thought proper to adopt it as his own, and he first signed it with ninceteen of his fellow citizens, and without any communication. with this government, addressed a note to it on the 14th inst, with the protest en closed, at the same time making the perein tory and extraordinary demands hereafter alluded to. Here we ought to observe that the consul, by adopting and signing the document, confounded his official character with that of his compatriots, and expresses imself warmly against what he thinks to e the political tendency of this government, and he appears to us desirous of suppressng public opinion in the country in

After assuming that every thing mention ed in the protest was strictly true, though many of them might be considered as asser-tions without proofs, and might well be con-sidered as very necessary declamation, the consul declares that he thinks it absolutely cessary to demand that his letter and pro hould be published in the next week's Gazette, both in French and Spanish, withmmunication to any thir
