CHAPTER XIII.
"No, I thank you. I was not wanting—Mr. Barnett. I am—so grieved—for you. And—rising, somewhat dizzy—"will you take this?"—holding out her paltry piece of gold with a tinging of self-appropriated guilt. "Yes, you must. Please keep it. And"—she was getting suffocated now with hardly held back tears—"and Mr. Lewis, will you—will you try to forgive—your debtor? He—did—not—go—unpunished!"

She took his hand, misshapen hand in hers for a moment very gently; met the astonished gaze with a look of passionate pleading; then, turning away, passed swiftly from the field tears running down her cheeks, and was lost to sight before the wonder-struck man could acknowledge, far less comprehend, her gift.

And before he had labored painfully home out of the tempest gathering rapidly around, and had recounted his most strange adventure, Sydney was far away from Lutterthorpe, journeying on again—this time to Stillcote-Upton.

CHAPTER XV.
It was market-day in that town, and the nearest approach to commercial activity it contrived to keep out of the octopus-like clutches of the neighboring county center was stirring in its streets that Wednesday midday.

But the tide of traffic and purchasers stopped short of that part which had been the chief entrance to the town in the time of coaching and carriage gentility. Life seemed diverted now to the region of the railway. Grass grew between the paving stones of this wide South Street. Few came up or down except to the very respectable dwellings that flanked its breadth, and its thinly scattered shops might almost have put up their shutters, for all the custom they attracted.

That was the opinion of one who had sat behind the counter of the modest establishment from nine in the morning, without taking as many as ninepence.

Her very anxious face puckered up under an arrangement of small wiry curls, Miss Amelia Ambler watched the passers-by with cat-like interest; arranged her buttons, dusted her cottons, and assorted her attenuated store of "general haberdashery and Berlin wools," bemoaning the while that change of fashion which permitted the larger establishments of High Street to lure away the humble chances of sale.

"They sell buttons at crockery shops, and tapes at the booksellers', nowadays, I declare," she grumbled aloud—if no one came to talk to her she must talk to herself. "It gets worse and worse every year. And now if it isn't coming on to rain! Oh, me! if ever I'd suspected things reaching this pass I'd positively have been a menial servant. I should have earned as much between now and then so, I'll be bound."

And the "then" seemed to draw her attention to an announcement in fine, flourishing capitaled calligraphy, dated many years back, that "Miss Amelia Ambler, having from circumstances resumed her business on South Street, begged a renewal of former kind support," etc., etc.

This document hung prominently by the door, now showed such an accumulated coat of dust that its mistress descended wrathfully from her high stool to brush it clean, murmuring, "What a head that idle Nancy has! I've a good mind not to keep her on. She isn't worth her food."

Now, this cursory mention of food was followed by a distant sensation of hunger in Miss Ambler's own pinched frame. "Half past one," she said, listening to the chimes, as she set straight a tray of brass thimbles a juvenile school-girl had tumbled into disorder, and then departed without finding one to fit. "Will Nancy never learn to be punctual? Why doesn't she bring my dinner?" and opening the door in the rear of the shop, she demanded explanation of some invisible being further back.

"Please, miss," responded a shrill young voice, "I've eat the top of the oaf as was left myself, and the baker he hasn't been yet, so what am I to bring you, miss?"

This was a poser. But it was beneath Miss Ambler's dignity to admit herself nonplussed.

"Oh, it's no consequence, then, Nancy," she cried. "I can take—m—anything I like when Mr. Potts comes round, or I can send you out presently for a beef-pie or three penny worth of ham."

"Yes, miss, to be sure," Nancy the unseen answered; but she gave an internal chuckle of glee at having secured that last top crust and the lodger's dripping for her own clamorous organs. Experience had taught her to mistrust her mistress's magnificent speeches, which mostly ended in smoke.

Even as this one, for Miss Ambler looked dejectedly in her till. There lay the four shillings she put in every morning for show, and took out every night for fear of thieves, and there lay very little else. A very poor prospect did that offer of any such delicacies as beef-pies. She shook her head and mentally rejected the luxurious notion. Mr. Pott's loss would have to content her, and—she should be uncommonly glad when that came.

Some one else in the house was perplexed on the subject of diet just at that time.

In a room over the neglected shop, tidily but poorly furnished, sat Mr. Jacob Cheene, at his very frugal, furnished dinner-table, eyeing the "ornestibles" just placed thereon by the small house-scrub with a rather disapproving expression.

Potatoes of last year's growth plentifully spotted with this spring's sprouting; a fragment of yesterday's rice-pudding; stale bread vis-a-vis-ed by very crusty cheese; these were, evidently not inviting to our old acquaintance, who, somewhat thinner and more stooping than when he went a visiting at St. Clair's, first inspected them disconsolately, and then brightening with a happy flash got up and called down the stairs to the attendant Nancy.

"I am waiting for the cold mutton. Bring it up, please."

"Mutton, sir?" repeated Nancy, bolting from her den at the back into the tiny sitting room where the stairs debouched—"What mutton is it you mean, please sir? There ain't none that I know of."

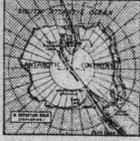

"Not the piece I left yesterday?" questioned Mr. Cheene, mildly.

"There ain't not a scrap, sir, nowhere. Perhaps the cat next door—" "Nancy!" said the voice of the mistress. "Take your apron off and mind the shop till I come back. Shut the door.—Oh, Mr. Cheene," her head appearing at a turn of the stairs, "was

Sir Ernest Shackleton's Route

1,700 miles across the South Pole from sea to sea.

WRITING to the agent entrusted with the purchasing of the stores for the forthcoming Imperial Trans-Antarctic Expedition, Sir Ernest Shackleton uses these words:—

"The question of the concentrated beef supply is most important—it must be Bovril."

Men who trust their lives to their food take no risks, and Sir Ernest Shackleton, planning this expedition with as intimate a knowledge of stores as of ice and snow, has recognised the scientifically proved value of Bovril.

it the little taste of your cold chop you were asking about?"

"Y-e-s," Mr. Cheene admitted nervously that it was. But it was no consequence, he added, not the very least.

"But truth is truth, and you'd better have it, sir, as I hope you always do, and won't ever have your confidence, Mr. Cheene, misplaced, not in me! So I may as well say"—coming a few steps higher, her sharp old splinter countenance at once defiant and sheepish—"I—I had it with my cup of tea last night. For"—gazing at Mr. Cheene's well-worn boots as though defying them to contradict her—"I said to myself, of course Mr. Cheene will never think of asking for a bite like this any more, and I may as well finish it as let it stand and go bad, which with thunder in the air it's sure to do, and then even a dog will turn its nose up at it."

"Quite right. Oh, very right, Miss Amelia."

"But if I'd expected you to want it for your dinner, Mr. Cheene—if I'd thought inquiries were going to be made for that little bit of fat and crustle, for it was nothing else, why I wouldn't so much as have touched it with the tip end of my fork."

"Pray don't—" "Though, as it happened, I'd nothing handy for my tea, and Nancy has gone home, and I always believed, Mr. Cheene, our understanding when you took my rooms was that I was to have the use of odds and ends. But if you wish that altered, Mr. Cheene"—advancing another step—"if"—with an ominous and unaffected sniff—"you wish me to suffer more!"

"But I don't! My dear soul, I don't indeed!" protested Mr. Cheene, retreating. "I beg your pardon for mentioning that mutton. Of course it would have gone bad. So I'm very much obliged to you, indeed, for not letting it be wasted. And any—"

"Wanted, miss!" cried Nancy from below; "a lady, please." And to Mr. Cheene's extreme relief, Miss Ambler had to rub her nose, adjust her curls and hurry off to her customer; happily relighted in her much-enduring bosom. Sometimes a purchaser has been driven in by rain and bought several shillings' worth of goods while taking shelter. A money boy had jumped out of the kitchen fire that morning; and unless signs were as altered as the rest of these degenerate times, that must bring luck!

Catching sight of no omens for good or ill, but uncommonly relieved at his task of soothing his landlady being cut short, Mr. Cheene returned to his room and addressed himself to his viands with what appetite the episode had left him—which was not much, for, nervous all his life through alteration of any sort upset him doubly now. "If I don't take much dinner, perhaps I shall enjoy my tea more," he said to himself, covering up the nausea-provoking tubers. Then helping himself to a modicum of Cheshire, "I think Miss Amelia may as well toast up the rest of this for herself. She'll like that. It'll make up to her, poor soul, for my going and distressing her as I did, very thoughtlessly—very, indeed! And she can finish this loaf. I don't want much of it. A full meal is a bad thing if you are going to sit still after it all day. And I sha'n't get a walk. I must have a tunc or two instead, then"—leaving his meal with much the same appetite he began—"then I shall forget all about such things as mutton or new potatoes!"

And herewith he unlocked a black case, lifted thence his viola, and had just sounded the first bars of one of Torelli's little gossiping gavottes, when Nancy broke in upon him, with important haste. "Please, sir, can I clear away? There's a lady coming up to see you."

"A lady?"—stopping short, bow suspended.

"Yes, sir, what came into the shop when I was a-mindin' of it, with her parasol soaked. And she want you, sir, not missus."

Now, midsummer was approaching, and Jacob had more than one female visitor of mature years about quarter-days. Here was one a trifle beforehand, no doubt. He laid his viola and bow aside to take a look at his purse, asking.

"Is it Mrs. Goode or Mrs. Tettrell, Nancy?"

"Neither, nor both, sir," was the sharp reply. "This here's a lady, sir, and a young 'un; not a trump and a old 'un! Mrs. Goode, indeed! Ladies behave very different to what she do! Only last time she come, says she to me—"sweeping the table straight at serious speed—"Girl," she says, "if you couldn't keep Mr. Cheene's steps no cleaner than this, I'd—" "Nancy!"

At the voice of the mistress the lively handmaid and her tray retired with rapidity; Miss Ambler ushered in the visitor with "As the lady has not given me her name, Mr. Cheene, I can't say who it is!" And Jacob received the stranger with ceremonious unrecognition that lasted till the door was closed upon them. Then, as she looked at him with a most petitioning smile, and "Oh, surely, Mr. Cheene, you remember me!" he knew who she was, and fell into a tremor of delight over her arrival.

Again and again he shook her hands; and though he ventured on no compliments, his glances of admiring pride told how he delighted in her fair growth. He fetched from the bow-window a high-backed, horse-seated chair for her to occupy, and hunting up a little walnut stool from beneath a pile of music, he set it under her feet, and then leaning on the back of his own chair, an armless face-smile of hers, he gazed long at her with his old pleasure-dimmed eyes.

We have behind us the biggest women's shoe factory in the world—the huge Queen Quality plant at Boston. Its capacity is 5,000,000 pairs a year.

And because this tremendous factory can make fine shoes economically, we offer the best shoe values in town.

A smaller factory simply can't turn out the Queen Quality grade at Queen Quality prices.

Abusing a Courtesy.

By RUTH CAMERON.

To abuse or presume upon a courtesy which has been extended to you by a friend is extremely bad manners, isn't it? Nobody denies a nobody would boast of doing it.

But to abuse a courtesy extended by a business house—that's an absolutely different thing.

At least a great many people seem to think so.

Let me tell you a few samples of this sort of abuse which have recently come under my eye.

The giving of samples to a prospective customer is a business courtesy. It costs the firm a good deal more than most people realize. The manager of a wholesale house which handles expensive tapestry goods told me that their samples to retailers cost them about $10,000 a year. How the cost of samples for a big department store compares with this I do not know, but I am sure it is not small.

Now many people abuse this courtesy by carelessly taking half a dozen samples where one or two would do, but others abuse it in a much worse way. The shop to which I spoke has a retail department which handles many expensive figured tapestries and brocades, selling at from $5 to $10 a yard. In order to show the figures they used to give a sample several inches square. But they aren't doing it nowadays because of the craze for tapestry fancy work. What's the connection you ask? Well they found that a great many women who asked for samples used them in making tapestry bags and other things of that sort.

Again permitting a customer to take goods home to examine is a business courtesy of which advantage is often taken. A salesman in an eye-holstery shop told me of a woman who bought expensive curtains from him to take home on approval. They were sent back the next day. This was not unusual so he took no notice of the incident until he read that the same woman was being sued by another shop. She had bought some costly rug there the same day and sent them back also. The point was that she was giving a party that night and wanted to dress up her apartment. The man who sold her the rugs found this out in some way and refused to receive them back. He finally sued her and won his case.

Taking the prospective customer to see a house in his automobile is a business courtesy often extended by the real estate agent. A woman who ought to be above such things astonished me by calmly announcing that several times when she felt like having an automobile ride she had gone to a real estate office and feigned interest in some property they had advertised.

Now of course we all know that the business courtesy is not extended for love of the customer, but through hope of landing him. Nevertheless a courtesy is a courtesy and to abuse it is to demean yourself. Furthermore it injures the innocent public, for in the last analysis it is the public which always suffers from such abuses, either by having the courtesy withdrawn or by paying for it in the overhead charges.

Youth Won Out.

And Eugene Tremblay Lost His Crown.

After a clean, stubborn fight, in which they wrestled for an hour and eighteen minutes actual time, Paradis and Tremblay, the old king of the light-weight mat twice and gained the championship of the world. In the first hour, it looked as if Tremblay's experience and strength, notwithstanding the twelve years' difference in age between him and his opponent, might conserve his title for him, for Paradis visibly weakened towards the end of the forty-five minutes, which ended in a fall for Tremblay.

Spent His Strength.

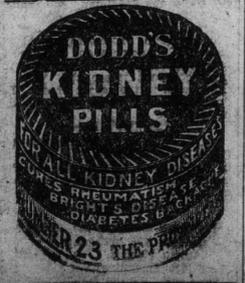

But in his first encounter, the wonderful broad-shouldered, deep-chested favorite seemed to have spent the better part of his strength, while Paradis appeared to gain in power and self-confidence, till he had planked the former's shoulders at least three times on the mat during the next twenty-three minutes. Referee Bourque failing to see it once. That Paradis was nervous in the first encounter was noticeable to everyone, and no other proof of it was needed, than that while he tried to surreptitiously get a toe-hold on his opponent, which was forbidden under the rules, he, a couple of times, grabbed his own toes in his eagerness to make things move.

Marvel of Form.

A remarkable feature of his work, seeming to prove that against all the rules of reason, he became stronger as the bout progressed, was, that while he was unable, apparently through weakness, to get any advantage out of setting Tremblay on his head, or swinging him around in the first set-to, it was by exactly those means that he won the last fall. It was beautiful wrestling from beginning to finish; clean and crisp, and the best seen here this season. So good, in fact, that till towards the end of every go, when it was apparent that a fall was imminent, the crowd, watched in breathless silence, fascinated by the swift and ever-changing holds and movements of the little fellows.

Agonizing Minutes.

The wind-up of the first go, came

Ponce de Leon.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swash."

Ponce de Leon was a Spaniard hung around the court as a boy about 150 years ago, went to war now and then and gradually accumulated a substantial pull.

In those days this was regarded as a greater financial success than running a factory or organizing a trust and Ponce de Leon could probably have snatched off a Dukedom before he died if he had been content to remain around Madrid. But he was adventurous and when Christopher Columbus, a man of not half his education and influence in court, came rolling home from somewhere west and got a disgusting amount of notice for having discovered a continent or two, Ponce de Leon determined to get into the discovering game himself. He, therefore, got busy and with the help of his friends who all recommended him, he got the appointment as governor of Porto Rico, and sailed for America in 1502. In 1510 he became governor of Porto Rico, and introduced the halberd, spear and rest of progress into the Indians with great vigor. He civilized the native island so thoroughly that it did not recover from the operation until 1838.

By the time Ponce de Leon became governor he was a very great man. But he was not satisfied. The gentle Indians could not fight the Spaniards, but they usually got even with them by telling stories about strange rich lands to the west, in which they were as adept as modern land agents. They hinted to de Leon that somewhere beyond Cuba there was a land which had a miraculous fountain that conferred eternal youth on all who bathed in it. This greatly excited Ponce de Leon, who knew that when a Spanish courtier became bald-headed and toothless, he stood no show at all, and he accordingly fitted out an expedition, while the Indians washed their whiplashed backs and smiled contentedly.

Ponce de Leon discovered Florida and wandered all over it. He fought mosquitos, water moccasins, alligators and Indians and bathed religiously in every pool of water which he found. But every morning he felt two years older and when he returned to Porto Rico his subjects took one look at his malaria ruined complexion and wept for joy. He soon became an old man and died from a poisoned arrow in Cuba at the age of sixty-one.

Ponce de Leon was unfortunate in discovering Florida before the Palm Beach Hotels and the orange groves were installed and also in hunting for perpetual youth in that region instead of in the complexion parlors of New York.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Evening Telegram.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor. W. F. LLOYD, Editor.

MONDAY, April 20, 1914.

City Leading the Way.

As days go by we are beginning to hear of the steps being taken in the outports to augment the Marine Disaster Fund. We notice that in the Trinity Enterprise Mr. Jas. D. Lockyer the Secretary Treasurer of the Fund in Trinity West acknowledges the receipt of $405.56 and that Mr. Watson acknowledges the receipt of various sums from societies in Harbor Grace, Port de Grave, Hillview, T. B. and St. Matthew's Church. This morning the Evening Telegram received $25.00 from Clifton Lodge, S. E. F. Pouch, Cove, and $110.00 from Harbor Breton, through Mr. J. J. Rose. According to a letter to hand from Mr. P. A. Buckley, Lynn, Mass., the Newfoundlanders in Boston subscribed $500 at their first meeting and aim at collecting $20,000. Mr. Watson to-day officially acknowledges $55,319.98. There is still much to be done, and St. John's is undoubtedly leading the way in its thorough organization and the success of its collectors.

The Sort That Sailed With Drake.

We notice that in an interview with a representative of the London Daily Mail, Dr. Grenfell says:— "The men are very hardy fishermen and very resourceful. They are a fine set of God-fearing men. On the sealing expeditions they travel very lightly clad as the work needs activity and the men become very hot. In consequence if a disaster occurs they are exposed terribly to the rigors of the cold. "A disaster like this will bring with it appalling distress. Many of the fishermen are married, and there are so few industries open to women that the whole family is dependent on the husband. "Shortly after the Titanic disaster I happened to call at Lloyd's, and I noticed that there were eight ships engaged in the Newfoundland trade all posted as missing at one time. This shows the hazards of work in these waters. But the men are the true type of British seamen—many of them are Dorset and Devon men, traditional sailors of the sea, the sort that sailed with Drake and Raleigh."

A meeting to finalize matters of the formation of the Baseball Club of the pupils and ex-pupils of the City Colleges will be held in the Board of Trade Rooms at 8 p.m. Tuesday, 21st April. All are urged to be present as arrangements must be completed at this meeting.

Injunction Granted. On Saturday, Mr. Warren, K.C., issued a writ against the Daily Mail for libel in reference to defamatory remarks as to certain of the wooden sealing steamers of the firm of Bowring Brothers, Ltd. This morning Mr. Warren, K.C., applied for an injunction restraining the Daily Mail from publishing certain correspondence as to Bowring's and Sealing Bill, from making comments which might tend to prejudice the fair trial of the hearing, should Mr. Morine desire to apply for a dissolution of the injunction. Mr. Justice Emerson granted the injunction, and intimated an early day would be granted for the hearing, should Mr. Morine desire to apply for a dissolution of the injunction.

American Intervention In Mexico.

President Huerta, last night positively refused to accede to the demand of President Wilson that Mexico salute the flag of the United States. To-day President Wilson will ask Congress for permission to use armed forces. It is expected that permission will be promptly accorded. Following this permission it is not unlikely that Americans may seize Tampico and Vera Cruz, the two Atlantic ports of Mexico. In all probability this may be followed by an attempt at armed intervention in the dispute between the Federalists and the Constitutionalists. A crisis has been reached and what may follow is difficult to foresee. Both disputants are talking of opposing intervention, each within its own sphere of action. The results of American naval activities will be watched closely.

Looking for a Wife

At Rossleys. The Levene Stock Company will present to-night one of their funniest comedies, "Looking for a Wife." There is only one laugh in this comedy, but that laugh is from start to finish. Felix Martin, the king of Irish comedians, will be there with bells on. He is a big favorite, and all over town one can hear "Look Out Now." When Felix worked in the Span of Life Dramatic Players some years ago in Boston, a fire broke out in the theatre, and only for the great presence of mind of the funny little Irishman, a lot of lives might have been lost. Felix sang and danced and made jokes while all exit doors were opened and the audience went out smiling. Half an hour later there was no theatre. Warren and Molloch and the inmates of Tommy Levene will be seen to good advantage in this comedy, "Looking for a Wife."

Missionary Anniversary.

Good audiences were in attendance at the Missionary Anniversary services at George Street Church yesterday. Rev. H. Godfrey, of Heart's Content, was the speaker at both services. He is a strong mission ad-vocate, and made his hearers feel the power of his great zeal and enthu-siasm. At the evening service the choir sang "The Banner of the Cross," "The Banner of Life-long interest in church work and in missions in particular, so well known. Rev. Dr. Fenwick occupied a seat on the platform, as-sisted the pastor in the opening ex-ercises. The address of the evening by Rev. Mr. Godfrey was rich in content and evidence of God's purpose to mankind. It is incumbent upon us, who are blessed with the satisfying truths of God, as revealed in Jesus Christ, to convey those truths to others. This is an age of great enterprises in every department of life and the open door of opportu-nity invites a forward movement on the part of the Christian church, as never before. That movement is be-ing made, but as yet we are only standing on the threshold and getting a glimpse of the future with its possibilities. The choir repeated some of the Easter music which has been of such delight and profit to the George St. congregation. The solo parts were well taken by Miss Story and Mr. C. R. Steer. Mr. Stanley Green rendered a solo, "Under the Palms," in a very excellent manner.

Sardinian in Port

FIRST ALLAN BOAT FOR SEASON. After a rough, tedious and lengthy trip of 15 days, the R. M. S. Sardinian reached port yesterday afternoon. In the early part of the voyage a suc-cession of hurricanes were encount-ered and since Wednesday last the ship made very slow progress owing to field ice. At night-time the ship was stopped and sometimes was hampered from steaming any in day time owing to fog. She brought 13 packages of mail matter, 912 tons of cargo and the following saloon passengers:— Mrs. F. Dempster, Mr. G. T. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Mars, Mr. J. Pol-lock, Mr. Frank Padley, Mr. J. Pin-cock, Miss Seymour, Mr. Stick, Mrs. W. Taylor, Mr. R. F. Whittington, Mr. E. Hansen, Mr. E. Olesen, Mr. E. J. Eorgensen, Mr. N. Olanesen, and 47 in steerage.

German Measles on Board.

When the ship berthed at Shea & Co's pier intercourse with the shore was not permissible, it having been learned that there was infectious dis-ease on board. Dr. Campbell who was sent for, was brought into the steerage of the ship and shown a lit-tle girl named Alice Duckett, who was coming from England to New-foundland with her parents to reside. The patient contracted the disease in the first part of the voyage and is now practically recovered. Last evening she was removed to the Fever Hos-pital. During the passage, Dr. Pilot, the ship's surgeon, attended to the patient.

Concerts on Shipboard.

While the Sardinian was fog and icebound off this port, concerts were held every night on board, consequ-ently the monotony was broken for the passengers. Passed Seals. On Wednesday last, when the ship was altering her course from the western to the southern track, herds of seals—chiefly bedlamers—were seen on the ice. The passengers wit-nessed the scene which was a pleas-ing one to them.

Whaling Crews Arrive.

Four Norwegian captains and 36 sailors comprising the crews of the Hump, Cabot, Puma and Lynx, came on the ship and will make ready at once for whaling operations which will open in the different sections of the coast next month.

Sardinian Being Re-placed.

Owing to the growing demands for an improved and up-to-date passen-ger trade, the Sardinian, we under-stand, has been virtually condemned and will not visit here from the Old Country again. To-morrow night she goes to Philadelphia and on her re-turn from that port will leave for the Liverpool port, where she will be transferred to the scrap heap. The Pomeranian will re-place her on this route.

The Ship's Doctor.

Dr. Fred Pilot, son of the late Rev. Canon Pilot, is on the Sardinian. He is stationed as surgeon on the Pre-torian, which is now being renovated at Glasgow. Address to Captain. Yesterday morning, the accompany-ing address was presented: To Captain Mowatt, R.M.S. Sardinian, 199 Gower St.—We the undersigned pas-sengers on the R.M.S. Sardinian from

MAGICAL RESULTS!

The results obtained by modern methods of cleaning and dyeing can only be described as magical. Articles that are soiled, stained and crumpled till apparently past hope, can frequently be restored by the dry cleaning process, to the appearance of new garments, while others that are faded can be dyed fashionable shades, and thus enter on a new lease of life.

Last Days of Pompeii.

AT THE CASINO.
The thrilling dramatization of Lord Balfour Lytton's book The Last Days of Pompeii, will be given at the Casino Theatre this evening. It begins at 8.15 and there will be one performance only each evening, as there are no less than eight full reels. This marvellous picture cost $250,000 to produce and employed 10,000 people. It is the most wonderful production ever attempted. Next week at the Casino will be the undying story of Capt. Scott, of the South Pole fame. This picture will be of special interest in St. John's at this time.

Holy Name Society.

Yesterday the members of the Society assembled for the performance of their monthly devotions. They attended 8 o'clock mass which was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Sheehan, who delivered a brief discourse after he had read the gospel of the day—John xx.
19-31—taking as his text "Peace be to you"; after which he administered Holy Communion. A fairly large number were present at the afternoon meeting at which a lecture was given on "Paschal Time." The Spiritual Director, in a very clear manner explained how the feast was observed in the early times. He dwelt on the Resurrection of Christ and showed how Christianity was based on His Resurrection. Explaining why some words were retained in the liturgy of the church in their original form he quoted several meanings attributed to them by learned theologians. The whole discourse was one of instruction and inspiration and deeply impressed those present. Benediction was then imparted after which the meeting adjourned.

THE GREATER QUESTION.

At this season of the year for Farmers with up-to-date ideas is what are the best means to use to get the best returns from the land.

Fertilizers must be used liberally
if large returns are looked for. There are several good chemical fertilizers which may be recommended, but Sulphate of Ammonia has been proved to give the best returns, and is the most valuable and economical source of Nitrogen for agricultural purposes.

For vegetables, grass, and all leafy crops, about one and a half cwt. per acre is the best quantity to use, and this should be applied when the plant is making its growth, as well as before sowing the seed.

If a liquid manure is preferred, a 1/4 oz. of Sulphate to one gallon of water should be used, and applied
once a week for a month. This quantity should not be exceeded.

It is a good plan to reduce the Sulphate to a fine powder, and mix with four or more times its own bulk, for the purpose of diluting the manure which is very powerful.

For potatoes the following mixture is strongly recommended:—
40 lbs. Superphosphate.
25 lbs. Fine bone meal.
10 lbs. Carbonate of Magnesia.
15 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
21 lbs. SULPHATE OF AMMONIA.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to 48 square yards.

The use of Carbonate of Magnesia
in conjunction with Sulphate of Ammonia, is of great importance in potato culture.

For turnips use the following:—
66 lbs. Superphosphate.
13 lbs. Fine bone meal.
13 lbs. Sulphate of Potash.
20 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to
square yards.

Sulphate of Ammonia of excellent quality is now made by the St. John's Gas Light Company, and may be obtained on very reasonable terms.
Full particulars may be obtained at the Gas Works, or at the Board of Trade Building. Ask for special booklet on the use of Sulphate, it will be found of great value in securing the heaviest crops.

Victim of Disaster Dies at th Hospital.

There passed away at the General Hospital on Saturday last, John Keels, of Bonavita, who was rescued from the s.s. Newfoundland in an extremely weak condition. The deceased when taken to the hospital was suffering terribly from the effects of his exposure, and though his condition seemed hopeless, every possible effort was made to alleviate his sufferings, and if possible save his life.
For some time after entering the institution his sufferings were severe, and latterly he became delirious, and had times of unconsciousness. He could not be operated upon. Death came at 2 p.m. on Saturday. The deceased was but on the threshold of manhood, being only twenty-two years of age, and is survived by a young wife, who was almost constantly by his bedside during the last week of his illness. Capt. Wes. Ken visited him several times, while Rev.
J. Brinton was in daily attendance, ministering to his spiritual wants,
and was at his bedside a short time before the summons came. The remains will be sent to Bonavita for interment. To the sorrowing widow

Kyle Returns to Port.

The s.s. Kyle, Capt. Parsons, returned to port at 8 a.m. yesterday, after spending another week searching in vain for the missing steamer Southern Cross. Since leaving here on Monday last, very bad weather
weather was experienced, and the ship was forced to shelter at Bay Bulls for nearly twenty four hours. Resuming the search after the storm abated, the ship steamed to the edge of the ice where the wreckage was reported by the Bloodhound, and made a thorough search in that vicinity.
On Thursday night the ship sheltered in the ice and on Friday and Saturday continued the search, but without success. No wreckage that could have come from a sealing steamer was seen. The only articles seen were three large logs, which evidently were washed from the deck of some schooner, and some refuse including a biscuit box and several other pieces of wood that apparently came from the land.

night for here.
The s.s. Nascopie and s.s. Adventure goes to North Sydney for coal cargoes to-morrow.
The vessels Galatea, Gaspa and

Why Bad Temper Makes You Ugly.

By a Medical Man Who Specializes in Beauty Culture.

It is said by many people that whilst the art and science of surgery advances by leaps and bounds, the sister science of medicine moves onwards very slowly. This shows lack of knowledge. It must be admitted that surgery has made marvellous progress of late years. Things thought impossible a score, even a dozen years ago are of everyday occurrence now.

An incised wound of the heart had been stitched up, a ruptured bladder sutured, a portion of the brain cut away, a stomach removed, the large intestine excised, a piece of diseased bone sawn off and a piece of sound bone grafted in its place, and all the patients recovered. But the physicians have not been idle. The researches in embryology, tracing the origin of tissues and the gradual building-up of the more complicated organs, have thrown much-needed light on the most vital phenomena of life. Inquiries into the molecular changes of nerve cells, the chemistry of the human body, the activities of certain bacteria, the internal secretions of the glandular system, to name only a few, have greatly increased the power of the physician to conserve health and to fight disease.

Result of Nerve Storms.
Especially have important discoveries been made concerning certain organs the functions of which were very imperfectly understood, such as the thyroid gland situated in front of the windpipe, close by what is known as Adam's apple; the pituitary body found at the base of the brain, the functions of which were a sealed book to the doctors of a generation ago; the spleen, lying close by the left end of the stomach; the suprarenal capsules covering the upper ends of the kidneys; the pancreas, and some organs belonging to the lymphatic system.

Any interference with the functions of these bodies is attended by disastrous results. They are strangely sensitive to emotion, such as anger, jealousy, worry, and anxiety, and the man or woman who gives way to these or any one of them, in excess runs very grave danger of serious consequences. Sometimes one body is affected, sometimes another, according to the idiosyncrasy of the individual. Should the thyroid body feel the confined influence of nerve storm or storms the elimination of a certain secretion known as thyroïdin is stopped, and a peculiar disease known as myxedema, in which the cellular tissues of the body become puffy and swollen, is within the bounds of probability. Goitre, known as Derbyshire neck, is also a frequent complication, or a persistent and distressing nervous disorder--which at times ends in imbecility--may ensue.

Worry Causes Disease.
The pituitary body has an influence on the development of bone, and any disturbance of its functions may lead to a disease known as acromegaly, in which the bones of the face and hands assume uncouth proportions. It has also been said to induce kidney and bowel trouble of a serious kind.

It is well known to all how great emotion, such as anger or anxiety, will cause excessive dryness of the tongue and mouth by preventing the secretion of fluid from the salivary glands, and how worry will take away the appetite stopping the flow of the gastric juice, and at times causing severe congestion of the liver. The functions of the kidneys, too, are seriously embarrassed by any undue nerve storm. In fact, there is not a gland of the body, not an organ, that is not affected in a greater or lesser degree.

To show more clearly the importance of certain of the glands above alluded to, it may be well if mention is made of a new method of treatment by what are known as hormones. The word is applied to certain secretions produced in the cells of various organs and conveyed by the blood to other parts of the body, which they stimulate into action. Of this treatment Dr. Leonard Williams writes: "To-day and to-morrow and the day after are foredoomed to the physiologist, the physician, and the therapist. Their hour has come through the agency of the internal secretory glands, which already unfold before the astonished view of the seeing eye a land of promise besides which the vast territories conquered by Lister and Pasteur are destined to pale into honourable insignificance." Thyroid and adrenal extract have been used for some time. Just lately pituitary extract has been given in obstetric cases with conspicuous advantage, and pancreatic tissue in diabetes with truly wonderful results; and other examples could be mentioned.

CELEBRATED Norwegian Jigger!
Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a mimow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jigging they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

WASHINGTON, April 19.
Huerta has retracted his counter proposition for a simultaneous salute. President Wilson informed him that the United States stands on its original demand and he must accept immediately. The plan for the seizure of Tampico, and Vera Cruz will be carried out without waiting for Admiral Badger to reach Mexican waters. The plan includes the seizure of the railway from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, as far as the trestle about 20 miles west of Vera Cruz.
White Wilson's message was thus flashing out instructions to set all forces already in Mexican waters in readiness to enforce the U.S. terms White House officials announce that unless Huerta saluted the flag in accordance with Wilson's demands, as soon after receipt of his message today, as was possible, action would be taken without any further exchanges.

WASHINGTON, April 19.
At 6 p.m. Sunday no word had been received here of Huerta's intention to yield to Wilson's demand. It was then 4:30 p.m. in Mexico City, and he still had an hour and a half to reply.

Schooner Reports Oil

Members of the crew of Capt. Carroll's schooner which arrived here from Placentia yesterday, say that while coming to port yesterday morning, the surface of the water appeared to be covered with seal oil,
from Trepassey Bay to Cape Ballard, which was thought from its appearance to have come from the bottom.
While many to whom the story was told expressed the opinion that the Southern Cross sank in this vicinity,
others seem to think that the oil seen
was pumped from the Sagona and Po-gota on their way to port, and as the schooner came practically in the wake of these ships. Still the mysteries of the sea are unfathomable, and the Southern Cross may have weathered Cape Pine and met her fate in Trepassey Bay.

Seventy-Five Years In The Dark.

The death has just taken place at Stockholm of Miss Christina Witlund,
an eccentric and wealthy woman.
Seventy-five years ago, Miss Witlund,
then a handsome young girl of eight-teen, was engaged to be married to a dashing officer of the Royal Guards, and everything was ready for the wedding, when the bridegroom suddenly broke off the engagement, and eventually married another.
Miss Witlund, it is said, nearly lost her reason from the effects of the shock, and when she finally recovered made a solemn vow never to look upon treacherous man again.
Her parents being dead, she had sole control of her own affairs, and she shut herself up in the house, where she remained for the whole of her life without ever going out. For seventy-five years she saw no other human beings than her servant girls.
Living as one dead in the midst of the bustle of modern civilization, she had never seen trains, steamships, tramway cars, taxicabs, airships, or aeroplanes. Even daylight was strictly tabooed in her house, all the blinds being carefully drawn.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessing Fuestle

The Morning After

Marian lay awake for hours, unable to sleep, after the supper in the Pempillar room with Bert. Cruched under the covers of her bed, she seemed to be lying at the bottom of a world-wide void. Already the few wonderful hours in which she had stood on the hill-tops of hope seemed a life-time ago. Again, life stretched ahead of her in grays and blacks.

Suddenly, one of Bert's sentences leaped at her out of her chamber's gloom. "She's a divorced woman," he had told her, in explaining his inability to marry the woman he loved. Who was she? For the first time, the question flew into her mind. "Could it have been she whom he meant?"

It was possible—strongly probable—and the more she thought of it, the more certain she became. He had given her no reason to suppose that he meant another. Everything that had preceded seemed to bear out her conclusion—his manner, his words, everything.

Could it be, she wondered, that he had come to her as he did for the sole purpose of hurrying this harsh fact into her face? The speculation revolved around and around in her mind. Had he guessed how much she had always cared for him, and taken this opportunity to punish her thus for the manner in which she had married? The belief took root, and bitter resentment for what he had done took possession of her. She hated him for his cruelty, and wept herself to sleep in sheer and utter despair.

When she awoke in the morning, the events of the past evening came back to her, a grim procession of unwelcome visitors. The prospect of marrying again, this time to a man she genuinely loved, followed by the soft Bert had given her, left her almost sick, and when she rose, she was aware of a raging headache.

"Come here, shoes, old comrades," she said as she began to dress, "you've got your work cut out for you today. We're going job-hunting, and we've got to find something. Unless we work, we can't eat. Heavens," she moaned, "if there were only something that I knew how to do! How do women ever accomplish anything anyway? If I only had some sort of talent! If I had only learned something at school that amounted to anything!"

Such is the complaint of thousands of divorced women. Marriage is a serious venture, but divorce is a thousand-fold more serious. The problem of earning a living, especially a comfortable living, is a fretful one for a woman who has been trained for marriage and that alone. Clamoring at the doors of occupations that are open to women are multitudes, their wits and efficiency sharpened by dire need, willing to endure much for little return.

Whither was she to turn?

Marian was not yet hardened to rebuff, to adversity. Hitherto she had always done the easiest thing, when choice was imperative. Her often reiterated threat to go to work, at time of domestic conflict, had never been accompanied by serious thought on the matter. Now she had to act. Her remaining funds were terribly low. Whither was she to turn?

The Newfoundland Disaster Enquiry Before Judge Knight.

SATURDAY MORNING.

RICHARD MCCARTHY (sworn) examined by Hutchings K.C.—I belong to Carbonear, was in the Newfoundland this spring. We left the ship March 31st, about 7 a.m. It was fine with sky overcast, sun red-eastward. Before we got aboard it was snowing a little. Some of our men went back before this. I was on the pan with them. There was no snow worth while. I thought all were going back, but as they did not I went on with the crowd. Capt. A. Kean told us to come aboard and have dinner. Our ship lay S.E. from the Stephano then. When we got on board a voice from the bridge said, "Never mind gazing down there; hurry up and get a mug-up or you'll do without it"; don't know whose voice it was. I had hard bread and tea. We were then ordered out on the ice. It was snowing, and I did not think we would leave here. Capt. Kean told us to get out, cross her head, and go to S.W., to follow their carriages, and we would come across 1,400 seals, kill them and go aboard our own ship. When on the ice, George Tuff, from the deck, I think, sang out, "Captain, I think we are going to have weather"; he replied, "No, George, the glass don't show for it." The wind was blowing dead on her port bow. We crossed her bow to the port side and went S.W. to the seals. Some men stopped and killed a few seals. I went on with the rest 100 yards or more. We saw about 200 seals. It was then too dirty to do anything, and we wondered if the Stephano was coming for us. Tuff gave Tom Dawson the course S.E., and we started for our own ship. We picked up the path we came on over in the morning and followed it off and on until 5 p.m. About four o'clock I heard a steamer's whistle to windward, and I said, "Boys, that's our whistle." I heard a man say, "Tuff was with him. Tuff came up about 5 and said, 'Boys, why don't some of you stay with him? He's a stranger to me.'" Tuff then told us to make ready for a night on the ice. Our master watch was with us on Dawson's pan, but left us and went over with the second hand. There were 50 or 60 on our pan that night. About 10 o'clock the first man, Thomas Jordan, died. Shortly after the wind veered north and it began to freeze. At daylight 14 or 15 men were dead. I left the pan with others and went to Tuff. My bunk mate, Albert Kelloway, died soon after. I heard Tuff say, "Tis old Kean's fault." Six or seven of us went to Tuff's room about an hour or so afterwards, about noon it cleared up. Two young men named Jordan with us died at this time. John Hiscock saw a steamer and cheered us up. We started towards her with Joseph Hiscock who afterwards died. I went on a pan with some men, and asked for a volunteer to board the ship; no one volunteered. Soon after George Tuff came along and was going to try and board her, and I went with him. He said you may give out. I said I can go as well as the next man. We only went a short distance and turned back, as Arthur Moulard had gone. We returned to the pan, and getting in a pinnacle Tuff waved a flag. Went on a pan where John and Joseph Hiscock were. Joseph was dead. John was beside him. I gave him a few shakes and he got up. We with Henry Kelloway tried to take his body to the other dead men, but could not. We saw our own ship to leeward. Tuff went towards her and we followed him. Shortly before dark we came up with a man, who had given out. I saw another ship which I thought was the Stephano, moving about in the ice, but she turned away from us. We lost sight of our own ship also. Saw no lights on our ship that night. Could see lights on two other ships in another direction. We got under a pinnacle and stayed about an hour, then shifted to another place which was worse. It was blowing and freezing very hard. None of our crowd died that night. At daylight it was fine and we saw our own ship and three others. Our own was nearest, so we started for her. On our way we passed Bangay, Jones and Squires who seemed to have given out. We met men from our ship with refreshments, after which we went on board. On board I went aft to the cabin. John Hiscock said to the captain, "If you had kept your whistle blowing and your father hadn't put us over, this wouldn't have happened." The captain said, "When I saw you going aboard I thought you were on a city." Capt. Wes. Kean states he did everything he could for the men. All he did for me was to give me a drink of brandy. When I was in the cabin some of the men were sitting down eating; no one asked me to have anything. I went down in the hold when a couple of men got my clothes off. The third engineer, Mr. Leary, brought me something to eat. I was in bed then. That was the coldest time I was, and only a small fire in the stove. When I went in the cabin, Mr. Leary took off my cap, which was frozen. I slept three or four hours, then got up and went to the after galley, and asked the cook if there was any chance for a feed; he gave me a pan of soup which I drank, and got some more to eat from chaps in the hold which they had cooked for themselves. John Hiscock took me in the messroom with him, where he slept, and the cook looked after us. Capt. A. Kean states that he carried us two miles nearer our own ship. I don't see how that could be, when he took us S.W. and our ship lay S.E.

To Mr. News—I don't know why George Tuff was sent out in charge of the men; did not know he was leading until we got on the Stephano. So far as I know Tuff had no compass. It was about an hour after leaving the Stephano that we left for our own ship. I thought Tuff had arranged for us to stay on the Stephano. We would not go against Tuff, he was our leader. I heard Capt. Kean say, "Hurry up and get on the ice. I want to get back to my men." When we got on the ice it was blowing and snowing. The men were falling in the water as they travelled along on Tuesday afternoon, and I think the Stephano could have got through the ice to us if she had tried.

If the Stephano had inquired of the other ships on Tuesday as to where we were or whether we had got on board our ship, they would probably have been on the lookout for us. I think Capt. Kean should have reported to the other ships. If Capt. Wes. Kean thought we were on the ice he should have blown his whistle all night.

The hearing was adjourned at 12.30 till this morning at 10 o'clock.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have constipation, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent box of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sickening, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent boxes contain enough Pape's Diapepsin to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

Untimely Guests.

It's hard to wear a saintly smile when one's nerves exclaim together, "We've just dropped in to talk a while about the crops and weather." The earnest man gets down to brads, sells goods or scribbles sonnets, to earn the dollars of our days, and keep his wife in bonnets; he has no time to fool away, he needs each precious second; if man would win at dallying half, each moment must be reckoned. And so the toiler, anxious-eyed, must labor at his fences, if he would keep his wife supplied with coin for bridge expenses. And when his troubles are so thick that he could fairly blubber, the bores come in, Hank, Tom and Dick, and sit and talk and rubber. There ought to be a law, methinks, for those who thrash the weather, compelling all such idle ginks to go and dally together. It isn't fair that busy folks must evermore be bothered, by dippy jays with dippy jokes and gags they've lately fathered. Protect the man who to his work with righteous fervour passes, and boil the fiddler and the shirk in sulphur and molasses.

Sympathy.

Editor Evening Telegram, St. John's.
Dear Sir,—I am directed by the Trinity Benefit Club to send you for publication the enclosed Resolution of Sympathy in connection with the recent Disaster.
The donation referred to has been handed to the Secretary of a local committee, which was started here yesterday, at the request of Magistrate Lilly, to take steps to make a general collection through this part of the district.
Yours truly,
O. J. MORRIS,
Treas. Trinity Ben. Club,

TRINITY BENEFIT CLUB.
WHEREAS—By the Disaster to the crew of the s.s. Newfoundland at the icefields, and the evident loss of the s.s. Southern Cross with all on board this country has suffered a severe loss, and the number left to mourn the loss of loved ones must be large;
AND WHEREAS—The community represented by this Club though thankful that it has not been affected by these disasters, are yet mindful of disasters in the past when this locality was called upon to suffer terribly notably the loss of the s.s. Lion, the Trinity Bay Disaster, and the more recent Effie M. Disaster;

AND WHEREAS—On such occasions Disaster Funds have been helped by the generous donations of the country at large.
BE IT RESOLVED—That the sincere sympathy of this Club be extended to the bereaved ones in the great loss they have sustained, and that the sum of $25.00 be voted from the funds of this Club towards the Disaster Fund.

CONCEPTION BAY BRITISH SOCIETY.
Resolutions of sympathy passed at a special meeting of the Conception Bay British Society, on Wednesday, April 15th, 1914:
WHEREAS—Our Society feels keenly the fearful disaster that has happened to the crew of the s.s. Newfoundland, when 77 of her men were caught out in the blizzard and met their death, and in fearing another disaster to the s.s. Southern Cross and her crew of 173 men;
AND WHEREAS, in times of such appalling disasters we must bow to the Will of God, and breathe a prayer for all who are left to mourn;
BE IT RESOLVED that the Conception Bay British Society place on record its heartfelt sympathy for widows, orphans, and all others who are left to mourn, and its earnest prayer that the Almighty will watch over them and protect them;
BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the sum of $100 be donated to the General Disaster Fund;

CONCEPTION BAY BRITISH SOCIETY.
Resolutions of sympathy passed at a special meeting of the Conception Bay British Society, on Wednesday, April 15th, 1914:
WHEREAS—Our Society feels keenly the fearful disaster that has happened to the crew of the s.s. Newfoundland, when 77 of her men were caught out in the blizzard and met their death, and in fearing another disaster to the s.s. Southern Cross and her crew of 173 men;
AND WHEREAS, in times of such appalling disasters we must bow to the Will of God, and breathe a prayer for all who are left to mourn;
BE IT RESOLVED that the Conception Bay British Society place on record its heartfelt sympathy for widows, orphans, and all others who are left to mourn, and its earnest prayer that the Almighty will watch over them and protect them;
BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the sum of $100 be donated to the General Disaster Fund;
AND FURTHER that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Press for publication.

The 'Leader' Grafonola!

The "Leader" is a veritable triumph of the "Columbia" Company's. It is a beautiful instrument and possesses all the charm of the Grafonola at its very best.

It has full, rich, mellow tones that can be subdued at will, so as to make it suitable for a small room, or again can be made to produce a magnificent volume of sound that just as easily fills a large hall. The "Leader"—which well merits its name—forms a handsome addition to any drawing-room. Come and hear some grand opera records on it.
