IMPOSTOR OR MISSING HEIR?

HE TURNS UP AFTER THIRTY YEARS AND CLAIMS AN ESTATE.

An Interesting Story Brought Out By a Suit Instituted at Osgoode Hall Yesterday...The Defendants Contend That the Claimant is An Impostor, and Will Fight the Case. An interesting story in real life was brought to light yesterday by a suit insti-tuted at Osgoode Hall by Joseph Miller of Rochester, N.Y., against Mrs. McMann of the township of Ops, Victoria County, and her daughter, Mrs. Sole, of the same place, tor the recovery of a farm. The story told by Miller is substantially as follows: Wm. Robertson was a farmer in the Township of Ops, Victoria, and in 1847 he died leaving three children, a deaf mute son, William, and two daughters, Margaret and Catharine. The farm he resided on was willed to William for his life, and upon his decease was to revert to his sister Margaret. To Catharine he left another farm.

The Birth of the Heir. Shortly after her father's death Margaret went to Rochester, where she married a man named Miller and subsequently gave birth to a child, a boy. Her husband died and she herself followed him to the grave in 1866, when the boy was only about 4 years old. While she was sick, and just previous to her death, her brother William previous to her death, her brother William went to Rochester to see her and also saw the boy. At that time she was not seriously ill and Williams returned to Canada, leaving her and the boy at Rochester. Some time afterwards Williams returned to Rochester but found that his sister was dead, and the child had disappeared.

The First Clue,
In the meantime the child had grown to nanhood, and anxious to learn something about his parentage he returned to Rochester and began a search for his relatives. While engaged in this search he accidentally met a man who was acquainted with his mother's relatives in Canada. From this man he learned of their whereabouts, and came over to Canada to visit them. Although they received him into the house and allowed him to remain for a short time, still they would not altogether recognize him as a relative. They very properly said that he was a total stranger to them, and they had no proof that he was their sister's child.

Miller remained at William's place for a short time, when he returned to the States. Shortly after his departure William Robertson, the deaf mute, died, on Friday Morning.

The inquest in the Williams murder case and deeded it to her daughter, Mrs. Cole. The inquest in the Williams murder case will be resumed at Cooksville to-day, when the case will be given to the jury.

The only startling evidence which will be to Canada to claim the farm, which, if he is The only startling evidence which will be to Canada to claim the farm, which, if he is produced will be the testimony of John and patrick Donohue of Little York, both of whom will swear positively that they saw MacWherrell drive the Williams horse and rig through Little York on Friday, December 15, about noon.
